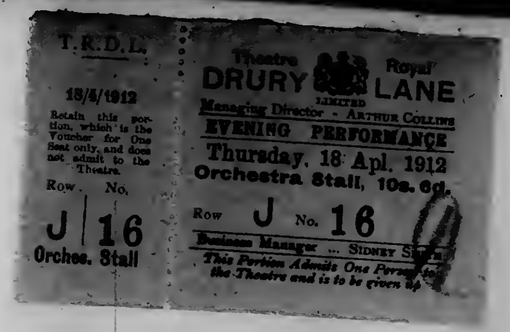
The "Apple of Eden," or the forbidden fruit, is unconsciously plucked by Julian Hanbury, a young Englishman, who, with his mother, Lady Hanbury, and his fiancée, Winifred Cresson, is staying at Ragusa. He falls under the fascination of a mysterious queenly lady, who is also sojourning in this "dream city of the Adriatic." The "queenliness" in this case is natural, for the lady is no other than Margaret, the "well-beloved" Queen of Slavonia, who has fled from her kingdom to escape the slights cast upon her by her husband, King Ferdinand. Though she is his wife only in name, and his Court has become the resort of his profligate men and women companions, King Ferdinand resents her flight, fearing it will further alienate his people from him, and, in company with his cousin and Prime Minister, Prince Nicola, and his commander-in-chief, General Pavlos, he comes to Ragusa to compel her to return to Slavonia.

This the Queen refuses to do, and she receives support in her refusal from General Pavlos, who is deeply attached to her, and would rather see Julian, of whose infatuation he has heard from Winifred, on the throne of Slavonia beside the Queen than Ferdinand, "the ever-hated one." Winifred has not been blind to her lover's feeling for Queen Margaret, but views it with equanimity, as she has already transferred her own affections to Julian's friend, Robert Bertram, a youth of her own age and tastes. Though the Queen is practically kept a prisoner in her hotel by the King, a meeting is arranged for her by General Pavlos, her guard, with Julian, to whom she is still only the "mysterious lady"; but in the midst of their passionate love scene the King is heard demanding admittance at the door. As discovery would mean eternal separation, the lovers make their escape together, aided by Julian's motor-car, which is in readiness outside.



After a few weeks spent by the runaways in a little cottage in the mountains, Julian receives an invitation from his mother to bring his bride home to her. He is still unaware of the identity of his companion; but Prince Nicola, who has tracked them to their retreat, reveals the truth, adding the falsehood that Margaret has fled from a loving husband and people merely to gratify her own desires. Julian's respect for the marriage vow is unbounded, and, in spite of the Queen's pleading, he casts her off, and bids her return to her duty.

When the Queen returns, the country is in the midst of a revolution, and she is kept prisoner in a pine forest by the bandit chief, Vassili, whose followers surround the capital, and who is in secret league with Prince Nicola, and by him is kept informed of the plans of General Pavlos, the latter's troops, in consequence, being continually defeated. Julian's mother, meanwhile, has joined him in the mountain cottage, and has nursed him to health again from the fever in which she found him, protected by the guard which Margaret has secretly sent for his safety. He receives a letter from General Pavlos saying that the Queen is in danger, and succeeds in finding her in the rebels' headquarters, where Prince Nicola has also come to treacherously confer with Vassili. An exciting duel takes place between them, in which Nicola is disarmed by Julian. General Pavlos suspects treachery, and therefore pushes forward by several hours the attack on the rebel camp, of which Nicola had come to inform the bandits, with the result that the insurgents are scattered and the Prince is placed under arrest.

Returned to the capital, Prince Nicola proclaims himself Regent during the insanity of the King—which he has been mainly instrumental in bringing about. His Majesty, who is quite mad, assumes the hat and coat of Julian, hoping that if he looks like the Englishman, the Queen will love him, and is shot dead in mistake for Julian, who is left free to wed the Queen.

3724

BEN-HUR

Dramatised by WM. YOUNG

Vocal and Instrumental Music Composed for the production by EDGAR STILLMAN KELLEY.

Director, JOSEPH BROOKS.

Under the Stage Direction of HERBERT GRESHAM.

	Characters in the Prelude:
BALTHAZAR	the Egyptian	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
CASPAR	the Greek	Mr. CHARLES J. O'BRIEN
MELCHIOR	the Hindoo	Mr. WILLIAM MARKHAM
	Characters in the Drama:
BEN-HUR	Judah, the Son of Ithamar	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
SIMONIDES	Steward to the House of Hur	Mr. CHARLES ROCK
ILDERIM	a Sheik	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
MESSALA	a Young Roman Noble	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
BALTHAZAR	the Egyptian	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
ARRIUS	the Tribune	Mr. ALFRED BUCKLAW
MALLUCH	Attendant of Simonides	Mr. FRANK TENNANT
HORTATOR	Captain of Galley	Mr. EDWARD ARUNDELL
KHALED	Servant of Ilderim	Mr. ROBERT BROWNLOW
SANBALLAT	Merchant Friend of Simonides	Mr. FRANK COLLINS
DRUSUS, CECILIUS	Young Romans	Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD, Mr. STUART MUSGROVE
METELLUS, CENTURION	Roman Officers	Mr. PHILIP DESBOROUGH, Mr. CHARLES HINTON
OFFICER OF THE GALLEY		Mr. JAMES BAXTER
IRAS	Daughter of Balthazar	Miss ETHEL WARWICK
MOTHER OF BEN-HUR		Miss KATE RORKE
ESTHER	Daughter of Simonides	Miss JESSIE WINTER
AMRAH	Nurse to the Family of Hur	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY
TIRZAH	Sister of Hur	Miss MAXINE HINTON

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PRELUDE

CURTAIN SYMBOLIC OF ROME AND JERUSALEM THE DESERT

MEETING OF THE THREE WISE MEN

ACT I.

Scene THE HOUSETOP OF THE PALACE OF HUR, JERUSALEM

THE POWER OF ROME

ACT II.

Scene 1. 'TWEEN DECKS OF THE ROMAN GALLEY, 'ASTRÆA' Scene 2. THE OPEN SEA

ACT III.

Scene 1. Apartments in the House of Simonides, in Antioch
Scene 2. Temple of Apollo
Scene 3. The Grove of Daphne

THE FOUNTAIN OF CASTALIA

THE REVELS OF DAPHNE

ACT IV.

Scene 1. Interior of the Tent of Ilderim
Scene 2. Orchard of Palms

ACT V.

Scene 1. EXTERIOR AND ENTRANCE OF THE CIRCUS AT ANTIOCH Scene 2. THE RACE
Scene 3. THE ARENA

ACT VI.

Scene 1. APARTMENT IN THE PALACE OF HUR, JERUSALEM
Scene 2. THE VALE OF HINNOM Scene 3. MOUNT OLIVET

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, APRIL 16, 1912.

"BEN-HUR."

GREAT PRODUCTION AT DRURY LANE.

The revival by Mr. Arthur Collins at Drury Lane Theatre of Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger's "Ben-Hur" on Thursday evening is intended to provide a much more beautiful and elaborate mounting of that drama than was given on the previous occasion at Drury Lane Theatre ten years ago.

To bring the scenery, costumes, and properties from the steamer to Waterloo Station two special goods trains had to be chartered. The number of people engaged for the working—out of sight of the audience—of the scenery and the lights, etc., on the stage totals 250. The statistics of this production are all on a large scale. There is an operatic chorus of over a hundred, an orchestra of nearly the same. Principals and auxiliaries number nearly 300, and the running expenses are upwards of £3,000 a week.

"Ben-Hur" was the first play witnessed by King Edward after his accession, and for that visit Mr. Arthur Collins set a precedent by erecting for the occasion a temporary royal box in the middle of the pit.

"On one of the two visits which King George—then Prince of Wales—paid to Drury Lane," said Mr. Collins yesterday, "he went behind the scenes to see the working of some of the great mechanical effects. The stage hands very quickly recognised him and showed signs of being about to give him a cheer of welcome, but the Prince, smiling, put his finger on his lips and pointed to the large printed notice bearing the word 'Silence.' It was very effectively done.

"This new production of the Biblical drama has cost us a great deal of labour and expense, but I think it is worth it. We had to take off the play ten years ago when it was playing to a large profit, and now we are out to produce a better effect. Even in the chariot race we do more. On the last occasion there were three chariots in the contest: this time we will have five, each one drawn by four galloping horses."

3724

Quite an enjoyable evening can be spent just now at the Garrick, where Mr. Arthur Bourchier is appearing as the sympathetic hero of a pleasant little comedy. Any expectations of "riskiness" which may have been formed on the strength of the title are doomed to disappointment. The improprieties of Peter Everest, the owner of the yacht "The Nut," on board of which the first and second acts of the piece take place, are of the past. He has sown his wild oats and married; but his marriage has proved a mistake. Mrs. Everest has shown a liking for fast society, and, when Peter has refused to aid and abet her in frequenting it, she has gone her own way, leaving him to go his. So Peter exercises hospitality on board his boat, and dreams of being useful to his fellows as a Member of Parliament.

A young sentimentalist and self-deceiving humbug called Charles Stancombe is one of Peter's many friends; and this youth is planning the seduction—"marriage in the sight of heaven," he calls it—of a little governess whom he has nicknamed "Periwinkle." She is an impulsive, rather foolish, but wholly amiable youngster, sick of governessing and athirst for excitement, enjoyment, and adventure. Charles takes her on board his yacht—which, like "The Nut," is lying off Cowes—but is surprised by a visit from his father, on whom his income depends. In a desperate hurry he transports Periwinkle to "The Nut," and asks Peter to let her stay the night there.

Peter, who is dead against the seduction scheme, consents; and he and his faithful valet, Parkinson, put Periwinkle up and make her very comfortable. She comes down to breakfast in the saloon next morning, radiant with health and vivacity; and she and Peter become great friends. Periwinkle, with her bursts of "temper" and her fidgety frankness, is an interesting little personage, and she is almost persuaded by Peter to give up the elopement idea altogether. But who should board the yacht at this point but Mrs. Everest, who has been looking out for a long time for such a chance of "catching" Peter, and getting divorced from him on the grounds of infidelity. Thenceforward the play is a comical triumph of circumstantial evidence over truth. In vain does Peter tell it; Mrs. Everest doesn't want to believe him, and his friends Captain Mitchener and Mrs. Mitchener find it difficult to do so. It is very funny to witness the well-meaning efforts to get Peter out of his scrape by lying, when all he wants is strict veracity. Charles's statements are set down to a generous desire to screen his married friend, and Periwinkle's protests are received as quite what might have been expected. The comedy is increased when Charles's father, a portentous old Member of Parliament who holds Peter's political future in his hands, arrives to hear the case and gives judgment dead against Peter, and strongly in favour of Charles. With such odds against him, it is impossible for Peter to continue to assert his innocence, so he is left under the imputation of guilt. But alterations have been taking place in the Periwinkle's affections, which she has secretly transferred to Peter; and when Charles, determined to prove the truth of his self-accusations, opens in public a locket which Periwinkle wears on a chain round her neck, and is believed by Charles to contain his own portrait, he simply displays a picture of Peter. Weary of contending with fate, the latter lets things go by the board, and resolves to join Periwinkle vid the Divorce Court.

"Improper Peter," at the Garrick Theatre, will henceforth be called "Proper Peter."

THE PLAYHOUSE

Thursday

2/5/1912

Orch. Stall

E 18

This to be retained

84

To-night, Thursday, May 2nd, 1912, at 9 o'clock,

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present, for the First Time, a New Comedy, in Three Acts, called

LOVE AND WHAT THEN?

By B. MACDONALD HASTINGS

BISHOP OF MUNBRIDGE	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
Rev. WILLIAM RUMSEY (his Secretary)	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
Lieut. FRANK ETTRIDGE, R.E.	Mr. ERIC MATURIN
IAN LINDSAY	Mr. LAWRENCE ANDERSON
JACK GARTH	Mr. JAMES DALE
Rev. JOHN BURDEN (Vicar of Bellden, Kent)	Mr. GAYER MACKAY
BERYL BURDEN (his Wife)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
Mrs. BURDEN, Sen. (his Mother)	Miss FRANCES IVOR
SHEILA MORRIS	Miss FAITH CELLI
OLIVE MORRIS	Miss DULCIE GREATWICH
PARLOURMAID	Miss VIOLET GIBBS

ACT I. The Drawing-room of the Vicarage, Bellden, Kent. Morning ... ... BRUCE SMITH
ACT II. The Pergola in the Garden ... ... Evening of the same day ... ...
ACT III. Same as Act I. ... ... Night of the same day ... ...

Miss MARGERY MAUDE's Costumes by PAQUIN, Ltd. Miss FRANCES IVOR's Costumes by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
The Cane Chairs in Act II. by the DRYAD CANE FURNITURE Co., Leicester.
Furniture in Acts I. and III. kindly supplied by Messrs. HORSFIELD BROS., 19, Orchard Street, W.

Preceded, at 8.30, by a Comedy, in One Act, entitled

BEFORE BREAKFAST

By K. G. SOWERBY

Mrs. GRAY (a Housekeeper)	Miss EUGENIE VERNIE
SNEE (a Butler)	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
JINNY (a Kitchen Maid)	Miss VERA COBURN
GEORGE LINTON	Mr. LAWRENCE ANDERSON

Scene—The Library at 109, Belgrave Square. BRUCE SMITH
Time—The present.

When it was announced that in the new production at the Playhouse Mr. Cyril Maude was assigned the part of a bishop, it was quite easy to imagine that he would be a kind, genial soul, and altogether a different personage from the solemn, sedate dignity of the Church that one usually associates with the office. Mr. Maude has more than fulfilled our expectation. The Bishop of Munbridge, however, does not make his appearance until the end of the first act of this amusing play; and the Rev. John Burden is a much more typical member of the cloth than his Bishop, so that it is not in the least surprising that he raises a strong objection to his wife appearing at a Pierrot entertainment in a short red skirt with stockings of the same colour. But Beryl Burden, though she is a wife and a mother, is only twenty, and she cannot be brought to see that it is hardly the thing for a lady in her position to make a public appearance in the dress of a ballet girl. Hence a disagreeable scene between the vicar and his wife, which is only interrupted by the cry of the baby upstairs. The Bishop of Munbridge generally "brings fine weather with him," but on this occasion his arrival is followed by a thunderstorm, which is certainly suggestive of the domestic one which had just previously raged in the vicarage drawing-room.

The scene of the second act is the pretty garden of the vicarage. The lady has had her own way, and has appeared in an entertainment given in connection with the local flower show, at which the Bishop gave away the prizes, wearing the startling skirt and the red stockings. The vicar is naturally fearful that his lordship will be shocked; on the contrary, the Bishop expresses his approval of the dress. After this one is scarcely astonished when his lordship takes part with his attractive hostess in an impromptu play-acting scene, from which he has to make a rather undignified retreat. The wearing of the abbreviated skirt is not, unhappily, Beryl's worst offence. She permits a good-looking young officer in the Royal Engineers to make love to her and to kiss her passionately in the vicarage garden. Moreover, she promises to meet him at eleven o'clock the same night, when he leaves for Chatham.

In the last act the Bishop discusses the vicar's domestic affairs with him and his mother, Mrs. Burden, but nothing practical comes of it. His lordship falls fast asleep on the couch in the drawing-room, and Beryl, the revolting wife, flits through the apartment to keep her appointment with the handsome young soldier. The Bishop's secretary, a young curate, having caught a glimpse of someone on the stairs, wakes the sleeping dignitary and informs him that there are burglars in the house; but, looking into the grounds, they witness the meeting of Beryl and her lover. The lady quickly returns, however, and is severely taken to task by the Bishop. She promises that nothing of the kind shall happen again, and that she will in future endeavour to please her husband. She succeeds in inducing the Bishop not to inform the vicar of her escapade. They are interrupted by the cry of the baby, and Beryl hides behind the curtains as her husband enters carrying the infant in his arms. The Bishop is left in charge of the child while the Rev. John goes in search of his missing wife, and the very awkward situation is saved by Beryl rushing upstairs with her infant and calling to her husband from the nursery. The Bishop decides to transfer the vicar to another living, and is informed by his secretary that the only vacancy is at Chatham—where the good-looking lieutenant is stationed!

The principal piece was preceded by a comedy in one act, by Miss . G. Sowerby, entitled

"BEFORE BREAKFAST."

Mrs. Gray ..... Miss Eugenie Vernie
Snare ..... Mr. John Harwood
Jinny ..... Miss Vera Coburn
George Linton ..... Mr. Lawrence Anderson

The plot of this neatly written little piece turns upon the Socialist craze. George Linton, the son of one of the upper ten, as a consistent supporter of Socialism and equality, is on the verge of marrying a shining star of the variety stage, when, entering the library at his father's residence in Belgrave-square one morning before breakfast, he overhears the housekeeper and the butler discussing his approaching marriage, which has been announced in a sarcastic newspaper paragraph. Left alone with Jinny, the kitchenmaid, who has temporarily taken the place of the parloormaid, indisposed, the young man learns that she is the sister of his intended bride, and that her father is a greengrocer living in the Camden-road, whereas his "Cissie" has told him that she is the daughter of a clergyman, and necessity had compelled her to take to the stage for a living. In the end George is completely disillusioned, and departs for foreign lands.

"THE NEW SIN" REVIVED.

Play, in Three Acts, by B. Macdonald Hastings, put into the evening bill at the Criterion on Monday, May 6.

Hilary Cutts .....Mr. C. M. Hallard
Maximilian Cutts .....Mr. O. P. Heggie
Jim Benziger .....Mr. Malcolm Cherry
Will Grain, M.P. .....Mr. Guy Rathbone
David Llewellyn Davids ....Mr. A. G. Poulton
Stewart Campbell .....Mr. H. Lane Bayliff
Peel .....Mr. Arthur Bowyer

A play of great strength and originality is "The New Sin," which was put into the evening bill at the Criterion. It grips and holds us by its tense situations, its moments of deep pathos, its fateful tragedy, and its brilliant dialogue. We have already given the plot of the play in full on its production at the Royalty on Feb. 20, and it is therefore only necessary now to chronicle its enthusiastic reception on the opening night of Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie's season at the Criterion.

"THE DOUBLE GAME."

Play, in Three Acts, by Maurice Baring, Produced at the Kingsway Theatre on Tuesday, May 7, by Victor Kolenda from the State Theatre, Moscow, and Harold Chapin.

"THE DOUBLE GAME."

A Play in Three Acts by Maurice Baring.

The Play produced by Victor Kolenda from the State Theatre, Moscow and Harold Chapin.

Bloum, Ivan Borísovitch (a schoolmaster).	Arnold Lucy
Bloum, Elizavéta Iványovna (his wife.)	Mrs. A. B. Tapping
Rakint, Borís Nikoláevitch	Claude King
Romodin, Dimítri Vasílevitch (boarders at the Blooms')	Harcourt Williams
Bernóva, Mária Andrévna	Ernita Lascelles
Count Peter Zoúrov	C. H. Hewetson
Philípov, Alexéi Ivánovitch (a military doctor).	Mark Hannam
Dimítriev, Fédor Petróvitch (a doctor).	Fewlass Llewellyn
Neilsen, Sergeí Andréyitch (An ex-civil engineer).	S. Creagh Henry
Harold Jameson	Lionel Pape
Okóunova, Sófia Dimítrevna (wife of a civil servant).	Mary Mackenzie
Ponóv, Alexander Alexándrovitch	Michael Sherbrooke
Kólia	Len Bethel
Sasha	Mildred Surrey

Mr. Michael Sherbrooke appears by courtesy of Mr. Arthur Chudleigh.

The Action takes place at Moscow, in the apartment of Ivan Borisovitch Bloum, between 10 p.m. of Friday and 10 a.m. of Saturday, in January, 1907.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Proprietress.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

Box Office Open Daily from 10 to 10.

Tel: 4032 Gerrard.

Manager - - A. E. Drinkwater.

Stage Manager - Harold Chapin Box Office Manager - Reginald Wynne

Box Office Assistant - Otho Stanton

The cheerful Russian play has yet to be written, and Mr. Maurice Baring is the man to do it. His stagecraft has improved greatly since the production of his two plays—"The Grey Stocking" (Royalty, 1908), and "The Green Elephant" (Comedy, 1911), and his latest effort, "The Double Game," produced at the Kingsway on Tuesday afternoon, is a distinct advance on either of those mentioned. The subject is Russian, and therefore a profound melancholy dominates the piece, which, however, has observation, knowledge, and power. There is a chastened reserve, too, in the treatment of situations of tragic import that throb with passion. To quote a melodramatic advertisement, it is a "play of great heart interest." Mr. Baring is always well served by the simplicity of his methods. He presents a picture of upper middle-class life in Russia, the surface of which is only slightly disturbed by revolutionary rumblings, and conviction enters the mind of the absolute truth to life of every detail.

The action takes place in a boarding-house in Moscow, the three persons mostly concerned with the plot being Boris Nikolaevitch Rakint, Dimitri Romodin, and Maria Andrevna Bernova. The first and last are members of a Terriorist society, and lovers. Dimitri Romodin also adores Maria Andrevna, and his constant watchfulness over her and his distrust of Boris Rakint annoy and distress her. Romodin shrewdly suspects Rakint to be a police spy, and his suspicions prove to be correct. In the second act, which is timed at midnight, Maria Andrevna, in an interview with Rakint, tells him that she has been chosen to throw the bomb that is to kill the chief of police on his way to the Cathedral on the morrow. Rakint implores her to give up the whole thing, to go away from Russia, and he will join her later. The most beautiful passage in the play is Maria Andrevna's description of her impressions of the funeral of a patriot, who was followed to the grave by thousands of sympathisers, chanting a funeral hymn, the cadences of which rose and fell like the sighing of the south wind. In the third act Count Peter Zourov, the uncle of Maria Andrevna, comes to take his niece away. The plot against the life of the chief of police has been discovered, and those concerned with it are mostly under arrest. Romodin fiercely denounces Rakint for his treachery, and Maria Andrevna hears the lover for whom she would have laid down her life admit that he has betrayed her and her companions. Telling her uncle that she will get ready to depart with him, she retires to her bedroom and shoots herself.

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

On TUESDAY, MAY 7th, 1912, at 8.15,

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

THE FIVE FRANKFORTERS

A Comedy in Three Acts

By BASIL HOOD.

Adapted from the German of CARL RÖSSLER.

Frau Naomi		Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Michael ..		Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Joseph ..	Her Sons	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Samuel ...		Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Ernest ...		Mr. CLARENCE BLAKISTON
David (Her Grandson) ...		Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Rose ...	Her Servants	Miss CARLOTTA ADDISON
Lizzie ...		Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Rachel (Samuel's Daughter)		Miss GLADYS GUY
		(By kind permission of GEORGE EDWARDES, Esq.
Boel (A Jeweller)		Mr. CECIL ROSE
Gustavus (Reigning Duke of Taunus)		Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Prince Christopher Maurice (His Uncle)		Mr. WALTER KINGSFORD
The Prince of Klausthal-Agordo ...		Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Count Fehrenberg		Mr. RUDGE HARDING
Baron Seulberg		Mr. W. ABINGDON
Herr Von Yssel		Mr. RALPH HUTTON
A Canon		Mr. WALTER CROSS
A Servant		Mr. FRANK MELVILLE
The Princess of Klausthal-Agordo ...		Miss CHRISTINE FERRIS
Princess Evelyn		Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR
Madame de St. Georges		Miss DANIE RAYNE

Period of the Play, 1822.

Act I.	A Room in Frau Naomi's House, Frankfort
Act II.	The Castle Grounds of the Duke Gustavus
Act III.	A Room in Frau Naomi's House

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. NORMAN McKINNELL.

The Scenery, Costumes and Properties by BARUCH & Co., London, New York, Vienna, Berlin. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill. Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Loreley"	Paul Lincke
SUITE	... ...	P. Lacome
a. REVERIE	"The Rose's Honeymoon"	Bratton
b. VALSE	"La Belle au Bois Dormant"	Tchaikowsky

Musical Director ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. A. MAYNARD

Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. E. F. SAXON

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 8 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees open at 2; Commence at 8.15; Matinees at 2.30.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"Nothing is impossible to us," say the Five Frankforters, "if we stand together." The great Five—four brothers and a nephew—are Jewish bankers of world-wide repute, each head of a branch at one of the European capitals, London, Paris, Vienna, Naples, and the chief at their birthplace, Frankfort, where the old mother Frau Naomi still dwells in their old home in the Jews' Alley, "a rather lonely old woman sometimes, living with her memories," but, in spite of her age, holding the honoured place of head of the family, whose advice is still sought and respected. Samuel, the Viennese, has called a gathering, and the other four, Michael, Joseph, Ernest, and "little David" meet him under the family roof. They ask Samuel for an explanation. He tells them first that for services rendered, for "a title always costs either blood or money," the Emperur has deigned to ennoble them and each bears the title of "Baron." But Samuel's ambition is not satisfied yet. He informs his family that Gustavus, the reigning Duke of Tannus, has requested a loan of twelve million francs, which he proposes that they shall make him, as it is their custom to "lend money to kings who are respectable and reliable." The other four question the Duke's reliability, but Samuel has his own game to play, not a game of chance, but of calculation. If Duke Gustavus cannot give them security for the money they will make conditions —with the loan goes the hand of Samuel's pretty daughter Rachel, elegant and gracious as a little princess. The scheme does not meet with undivided approval, the old granny refuses her sanction, and "little David" is in open revolt; he "refuses to be party to a bargain so shameful to them both." His protest is put aside. Gustavus, says Samuel, is an amiable, charming young man; Rachel's happiness with him is assured. The brothers make their proposal to the Duke at his own castle, where they have been invited to luncheon, in defiance of all previous precedent, and where the Duke "treats them as equals most of the time and only leaves off when he forgets." Their proposition he treats at first with frank ridicule, and takes no pains to prevent his guests from seeing his obvious amusement; but he finds Samuel very much in earnest —no Rachel, no loan—and the Duke is forced to consider the matter seriously. He must have the money, Rachel is beautiful and charming and has already taken his fancy; so the next morning he calls at Frau Naomi's house to make formal request for the hand of the pretty Jewess. Samuel is jubilant, but he and his prospective son-in-law have reckoned without Rachel. She refuses to be disposed of in so summary a fashion, and tells her father plainly that "fathers should not deal in daughters as a speculation." Samuel is annoyed. "In this family children obey their parents," he thunders. "They obey me," retorts the old mother. "People who belong to different worlds are better kept apart." The Duke departs. Samuel is nonplussed, but is pacified on learning that the man of his daughter's choice is "little David."

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain

WHITNEY THEATRE.

to Mr. F. C. Whitney — Whitney Theatre —

Sole Proprietor ... ... Mr. F. C. WHITNEY

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8th, at 8 p.m.

THE JEW OF PRAGUE

A Romantic Drama in Four Acts and Seven Scenes

By ALFRED WILSON-BARRETT.

CAST:

Count Max Von Riesler	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Saponi	Mr. EDWARD O'NEILL
Smutts	Mr. OSCAR ADYE
Abraham Baruch	Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS
Gardener	Mr. WINDHAM GUISE
Baron Otto Lenbach	Mr. G. MAYOR-COOKE
Shadrach	Mr. C. LIONEL BROCKNOR
Kienka	Mr. R. YOUNG
A Waiter	Mr. W. G. MANNING
Counsel for the Defence	Mr. KENNETH HARE
Counsel for the Prosecution	Mr. G. MAYOR-COOKE
Counsel	Mr. H. MARSHALL
Prince Lichtenburg	Mr. ARTHUR HIDARE
Prison Warder	Mr. W. CUTLER
Frederic	Mr. GORDON BAILEY
Lieutenant Carl Harden	Mr. TREVELYAN PHILIPS
President, Criminal Court	Mr. WINDHAM GUISE
Servant	Mr. STUART MARSHALL
Vassa	Miss ADELA WEEKES
A Novice	Miss PHYLLIS BIRKETT
A Gipsy Girl	Miss LILIAN CAMPBELL
Lona	Miss MAY VAUDREY
Baroness Hasen	Miss NINA BENTLEY
Katinka	Miss JANE WELLS
Anita	Miss HELEN HAMILTON
Countess Czerwenka	Miss FRANCES SINCLAIR
AND
Countess Sophie Vyneck	Miss VIVA BIRKETT

Ladies, Nuns, Officers, etc.

Mesdames Joan Adair, Nellie Allen, Connie Bethel, May Boothroy, Elsie Fraser, May Duchesney, Ivy Dymonde, Gwladys Faunce, A. Furrell, Irene Hentschel, Muriel Mason, Violet Wood, etc.

Messrs. Pelix Aylmer, Gordon Carr, W. Crnss, F. Evans, W. Mackay, G. Ronald, S. Aubrey Howard, etc

93

ACT I.		The Jew's House
ACT II.	Scene 1	Street Scene. The Carnival
	Scene 2	The Convent Garden
ACT III.		Max's House
ACT IV.	Scene 1	The Prison Cell
	Scene 2	Corridor of the Court
	Scene 3	The Court

The Play produced by MR. G. W. HODGSON.

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY at 2.30. P.M.

The Serenade in the Carnival Scene sung by Mr. G. W. HODGSON.

Miss Viva Birkett's dress in Act I. and Ladies' dresses in Act III. by Mrs. CALEB PORTER. Wigs and Costumes by C. H. FOX, LTD., Wellington Street, W.C. Scenery by LEOLYN HART Co. CRAMER Grand Pianoforte and MASON & HAMLIN Organ used at this Theatre. The Cigarettes used on the stage are supplied solely by Messrs. ABDULLA & Co., LTD., 168 New Bond Street. Lighting effects by PHILIP SHERIDAN.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. CECIL GOODALL, will play the following Selection of Music:

1.	OVERTURE ... ... "Mirella"	Gounod
2.	SUITE ... ... "Merchant of Venice"	Rosse
3.	SUITE DE BALLET	Goodall
4.	"HUMORESSE"	Dvorak
5.	VALSE ... ... "Kismet"	Ch. Victor Chalot
6.	VALSE ... ... "Jeu d'Esprit"	Goodall

Business Manager	Mr. HORACE WYNDHAM
Acting Manager	Mr. HARRY W. DEVONSHIRE
Stage Director	Mr. G. W. HODGSON
Stage Manager	Mr. JAMES CHERRY
Musical Director	Mr. CECIL GOODALL
Treasurer and Secretary for the Whitney Theatre	Mr. LACEY DOWNES

PRICES—Boxes, £3 3s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. G. F. WILLIAMS) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

The Management reserves the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or by other unavoidable causes.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain:—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all entrance and exit doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

This new play, by Mr. Alfred Wilson-Barrett, a son of the late well-known actor-dramatist, was produced at the Theatre Royal, Colchester, on April 29. Mr. Wilson-Barrett has already achieved considerable success as the author of some clever detective novels. The most serious fault in the play is that the action is not brisk enough, and there is at times a redundancy of talk; but the first and last acts contain powerfully dramatic scenes, which evoked loud applause on Wednesday evening.

The story opens in promising fashion. The Jew, Abraham Baruch, is convinced that his days are numbered; he is suffering from a serious form of heart disease. Amongst those whose ruin he has helped to bring about is Count Max Von Riesler, who has won the unenviable reputation of being the greatest rake and spendthrift in Prague. Baruch cherishes a curious liking for the young man, and has a will prepared by his solicitor, Smutts, bequeathing all his money to Max. Scarcely has he signed the document and dismissed the solicitor, when the Count makes his appearance. He has for some time now given up his dissipated ways, and, having saved money, has resolved to pay off the debts he owes the Jew. The cause of his reform is that he has fallen in love with a charming girl, the Countess Sophie Vyneck. The Jew hands over for cash a number of financial notes, but there is one that he refuses to part with. It is evidence that the Count has committed forgery while in a half-drunken state, and, hard pushed for ready money, he signed the name of a friend of his. He demands the return of this note, but the Jew obstinately refuses to grant his wish. The Count, infuriated, seizes the Jew, and there is a brief struggle. Then Baruch gasps painfully, falls on a table, and then on to the floor, dead. The scene is witnessed by Smutts and the Countess Sophie, who are horrified at the tragedy. Dr. Saponi, a disreputable medical man, is called in, and he, after examining the body, states that the cause of death is heart disease, though there are finger-marks on the dead man's throat.

The Countess Sophie refuses to marry Max, and enters a nunnery. The Count, driven to despair and haunted always by the horrible vision of the dead Jew, returns to his old bad ways. In a street brawl he wounds Dr. Saponi, who is in the pay of Smutts. Vassa, the lawyer's young daughter, is in love with Max; but he treats her so unkindly that she commits suicide. Eventually the Count makes public confession that he murdered Baruch and is apprehended. Smutts bribes Saponi to swear that the Jew was strangled, but the sight of the Countess Sophie in the witness-box causes him to retract his false evidence, she having come to his assistance when he was badly wounded by the Count's sword. The prisoner is set free, and the Countess, one may safely assume, will not return to her convent.

* * *

Popular prices have been introduced at the Whitney Theatre, where Mr. Wilson-Barrett's stirring melodrama, "The Jew of Prague," seems to have settled down to a successful run.

* * * Referee 28/5/12

92

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1912.

"THE JEW OF PRAGUE."

MR. A. WILSON-BARRETT'S DRAMA.

Life was a downright sad affair for Count Max, the military hero of Mr. Alfred Wilson-Barrett's romantic four-act drama, "The Jew of Prague," produced for the first time in London at the Whitney Theatre last evening.

Count Max had been the "gay spark" of the capital of Bohemia until he fell in love with the beautiful young Countess Sophie. He admitted—after his reformation—that he had revelled, and gambled, and loved pretty women—hundreds of them. But he was still little more than a mere soldier boy when love came to chasten and counsel him to pay his debts. It was, however, a bad day for Max when he paid Abraham Baruch the remnant of the vast sum he had borrowed, for he quarrelled with that moneylender, and as it was melodrama, the old man died of excitement, and Max believed himself to be his murderer.

This was a depressing start for a young hero engaged to be married, and Max took the sad business very much to heart. The countess, of course, begged him to confess the crime. Max hesitated. He re-created his taste for sparkling wines, and, under the influence of a blackmailer, made merry in what looked like the casino garden of a Continental watering-place in the off-season. He still wore his uniform. Everywhere Max went a uniform went with him, but eventually he found himself in the dock on a charge of murder, and as his life-story had to end happily he was acquitted, and walked out of court with his countess—to be a free man until his wedding day.

That is the story—less a few details and small crimes—of "The Jew of Prague." As a play it makes no serious claims on one's attention. Judged by the standards of melodrama, there is no quarrel with the story. Such things are not expected to be wholly convincing; but a little human humour could well have been found a place in Mr. Wilson-Barrett's drama, and it certainly would have been welcomed last night.

J. W.

LESSEE AND MANAGER
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

The Shaftesbury Theatre

SATURDAY, MAY 11th, 1912, and EVERY EVENING, at 8 p.m.

A Comedy with Music, in Three Acts, entitled

PRINCESS CAPRICE

Adapted from "Der Liebe Augustin" by
RUDOLPH BERNAUER and ERNST WELISCH
The English Version by ALEX. M. THOMPSON
Lyrics by
A. SCOTT CRAVEN, HARRY BESWICK and PERCY GREENBANK
MUSIC by LEO FALL

Jasomir	(Steward to Princess Helen)	Mr. COURTICE POUNDS
Nicola	(Prince of Micholics)	Mr. FRED LESLIE
Augustin Hofer	(A Music Master)	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Gjuro	(Prime Minister of Thessalia)	Mr. GEORGE HESTOR
Colonel Burko, Captain Mirko, Ensign Pips	Officers of the Thessalian Army	Mr. CHARLES CHAMIER, Mr. FRANK WYATT, Jun., Mr. NELSON KEYS
Sigilloff	(A Head Bailiff)	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
Mathaeus	(Lay Brother of the Convent)	Mr. ALFRED CLARK
Pasperdu	(Banker)	Mr. CAMPBELL BISHOP
Conrad, Rudolph, Dimitrieff, Ulrich, Bursoff, Vladimir	Of The Diplomatic Corps	Mr. LOUIS VICTOR, Mr. ARTHUR W. ASHDOWNE, Mr. VICTOR TOLLEMACHE, Mr. IVAN LESLIE, Mr. BORIS BELLEW, Mr. ARTHUR STROUD
	AND
Bogumil	(The Regent of Thessalia)	Mr. GEORGE GRAVES
Princess Clementine	(Sister of Prince Nicola)	Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE
Gretchen, Ursula, Lisbeth, Margarita, Cecile	Servant Maids at the Palace	Miss HOPE CHARTERIS, Miss MAY ETHERIDGE, Miss OLIVE WADE, Miss MARGARET SWALLOW, Miss CISSIE DEBENHAM
Countess Brach, Countess Crach, Countess Grosse	Ladies of the Court	Miss MURIEL VARNA, Miss DORIS VINSON, Miss KATHLEEN HAYES
Anna	(Daughter of Jasomir)	Miss MARIE BLANCHE
	AND
Princess Helen	(Niece of the Regent)	Miss CLARA EVELYN

DANCE IN THE THIRD ACT by Mr. HARRY RAY

THE ORCHESTRA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. ARTHUR WOOD

THE COMPOSER WILL CONDUCT TO-NIGHT

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

Act I. A Room in the Palace of Thessalia
Painted by R. McCLEERY.

Act II. The Throne Room in the Palace
Designed by CONRAD TRITSCHLER. Painted by R. McCLEERY.

Act III. A Monastery, formerly the Home of the Princes of Thessalia
Designed and Painted by CONRAD TRITSCHLER.

The Play Produced by ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Dances Arranged by ESPINOSA

Ladies' Court Dresses and Modern Costumes by MARTIAL, ARMAND & CIE. LTD., Place Vendome, Paris, and 125, New Bond Street, W.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street, W.

Uniforms designed by HERBERT NORRIS.
Made by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden. also by MORRIS ANGEL, Shaftesbury Avenue.

Maids' Costumes in Act I. and Peasants' Dresses in Act III. designed by Mr. NORRIS and made by Mrs. WOOLCOTT

Boots and Shoes by A. L. GAMBA, Dean Street, W.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Matinee every Wednesday at 2

To ensure the high quality of the Refreshments supplied, the Saloons are under the sole control of the Management of the Theatre.

OPERA GLASSES (by Negretti & Zambra) are on hire, and may be obtained from any of the Attendants at a charge of SIXPENCE for each performance

GENERAL MANAGER .. .. EADE MONTEFIORE
Assistant Manager Mr. WILLIAM BLOORE | Asst. Stage Manager Mr. VERE MATTHEWS
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. WALTER L. RIGNOLD

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.—2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

997

"PRINCESS CAPRICE."

DR. FALL'S VIENNESE COMEDY WITH MUSIC.

Jasomir .....Mr. Courtice Pounds.
Nicola .....Mr. Fred Leslie.
Augustin Hofer .....Mr. Harry Welchman.
Gjuro .....Mr. George Hestor.
Bogumil .....Mr. George Graves.
Princess Clementine .....Miss Cicely Courtneidge.
Anna .....Miss Marie Blanche.
Princess Helen .....Miss Clara Evelyn.

Three people concerned in the production of the new Viennese musical play, "Princess Caprice," at the Shaftesbury Theatre on Saturday evening scored conspicuous successes. They were Mr. Leo Fall, the composer; Mr. George Graves, the comedian; and Mr. Conrad Tritschler, the designer and painter of the charming old monastery courtyard that formed the background to the third act of this musical romance.

"Princess Caprice" is a musical romance with a story laid within the limits well defined by many previous musical plays. Seeking princely titles for its leading characters and costumes of colour for its crowds, it keeps fairly close to an imaginary country which is, in reality, not far from the banks of the Danube. Thessalia is the name of the new musical comedy principality. It has the most comical Regent imaginable—a Regent with an intimate knowledge of the English racecourse and the "lads of the village," who find their way there from London. Thessalia also possessed a capricious princess and her maid, a wandering minstrel, and a bailiff.

Everything looked flourishing there. The inhabitants were beautifully dressed. The Court receptions were brilliant, and had that bailiff not appeared no one would have suspected bankruptcy. As Mr. Graves, however, would have said, "Carey-street was on the mat," and to secure her uncle, the Regent, a pension the capricious Princess Helen agreed to marry the rich Prince Nicola of Micholics. It broke her heart to think of this matrimonial alliance, for she loved the wandering minstrel, and the minstrel loved her—not the maid Anna, to whom he was affianced. Strangely enough the Regent one day discovered that Helen and Anna had got mixed by a nurse when they were children, and that Anna was really the princess. So Helen was free to marry the minstrel, and end the oft-told story dearly loved by those to whom a romance is the breath of life.

CHARMING MUSIC.

The worst part of this oft-told story was that it took so long to tell. For, in spite of Mr. Fall's charming music, "Princess Caprice" seemed very long. There was too much talk and too little action. Even the music, charming as it was, was too abundant, and a dozen numbers might with advantage be cut out. One wondered if the dancing had been forgotten until, near the end of the second act, Miss Cicely Courtneidge, with a tripping number, at last brought in some animation. It was welcome after those scenes in which Mr. Graves had nothing to do, and as a consequence Miss Courtneidge had, of all the ladies, the most effective and grateful part in the piece. "Princess Caprice," when the company "hustles" it, will be an enormously improved entertainment.

On the score of singing this play is well provided for. Miss Clara Evelyn sings with great charm, Mr. Harry Welchman is very good Mr. Courtice Pounds does the little he has to do so effectively that it is impossible to help regretting that he has not much more to do. The chorus on Saturday sang particularly well. In point of numbers it is not very large, but it looks well.

The reception given the players, the composer, and Mr. Courtneidge after the final curtain was of the very friendliest description.

J. W.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, MAY 13, 1912.

A good many cooks, English and Continental, have had a finger in the making of the latest musical plat du jour set before London playgoers on Saturday night at the Shaftesbury Theatre. It is adapted from "Der Liebe Augustin" by Messrs. Rudolph Bernauer and Ernst Welisch, the English version being by Mr. Alex. M. Thompson, the lyrics by Messrs. A. Scott Craven, Harry Beswick, and Percy Greenbank, and the music by Herr Leo Fall. The play, described as "a comedy with music," has neither the sparkling irresponsibility of musical comedy or the more enduring charms of light opera, though the music is tuneful, the lyrics well-turned, and the mounting and dresses of the most gorgeous description. The story is simple. The Princess Helen, nicknamed "Princess Caprice" on account of her many whims and fancies, is the niece of an impecunious uncle, the Regent of Thessalia, who, in order to rid himself of an embarrassing number of debts, proposes to marry her to a rich but unprepossessing Prince of a neighbouring State. Helen, who is in love with her music master, Augustin Hofer, a handsome young man with a brown velvet coat, and a beautiful tenor voice, loathes the alliance, but agrees to sacrifice herself for the sake of her impoverished country. The Princess has a maid, Anna, betrothed to the young musician, who attracts the wandering eye of the unpleasant Prince, who decides that after his marriage she shall play La Vallière to his Louis XIV. Helen gets wind of the situation, and makes it an excuse to break off the match. She declares her intention of retiring into a convent; but at the eleventh hour it is discovered by the time-honoured device of "a mole under the left arm" that Anna is the Princess, and Helen is her foster sister, the daughter of Jasomir, her house steward.

GEORGE GRAVES

PRINCESS CAPRICE :: SHAFTESBURY ::

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietor - - SIR JOSEPH BEECHAM
General Manager - ALBERT ARCHDEACON

(Who holds the Licence of the Lord Chamberlain).

A FARCICAL COMEDY

In Three Acts, entitled:

Looking for Trouble

By

HÉLÈNE GINGOLD and LAURENCE COWEN

Ladies' Dresses designed and executed by SNELL & POWER.
Ladies' Hats by Madame HODGES.
Gentlemen's Costumes by J. B. & F. WELLS.
Wigs by GUSTAVE.
Furniture kindly lent by Messrs. WARING & GILLOW, Ltd.
Pianos by J. B. CRAMER & CO.
Stage Floral Decorations by WM. WHITELEY, Ltd.

Musical Director ... ... EMIL KREUZ

Assistant Manager ... ... DONALD BAYLIS
Stage Manager ... ... ARTHUR WHITE

PRICES:—Boxes, 4, 3, 2, 1½ Guineas; Stalls, 10/6; Balcony Stalls, 7/6, 6/-; Balcony, 5/-; Upper Circle, 4/-; Pit (unreserved), 2/6; Gallery (unreserved) 1/-.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof curtain to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept clear from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

By HÉLÈNE GINGOLD and LAURENCE COWEN

CAST:

Kate Bellingham (Mr. Porches' Daughter) - EVA MOORE

Mrs. Porches (Wife of Pierpoint Porches) - JOY CHATWYN

Helen Porches (Niece of Mr. Porches) - GERALDINE LE SAGE

Pierpoint Porches - - - - SAM WALSH

Captain Frank Porches (of the Gordon Highlanders Mr. Porches' Son) VINCENT CLIVE

Charles Bracebridge (Mr. Porches' Friend) - THOMAS HOLDING

Bethel Petch (Captain Porches' Friend) - MURRAY MOORE

Crawling (Butler) - - - - HARRY DANBY

Inspector Gotham (of the Metropolitan Police) - J. M. EAST

No. 18420 (of the Metropolitan Cab Ranks) - CHARLES A. WHITE

AND

Angus Macpherson (Captain Porches' Orderly) NEIL KENYON

Scene - PIERPOINT PORCHES' TOWN HOUSE

Time - THE PRESENT

101

Aldwych
THEATRE
13/5/1912

Orch. Stall
D 7
To be retained.

"Looking for Trouble," which was originally produced at the Brighton West Pier Theatre on July 4, 1910, is a farcical comedy rather of the old-fashioned order, but amusing nevertheless, and redeemed from the commonplace by the remarkable rendering given to an individual character. Mr. Pierpoint Porches is a highly respectable stockbroker, who wants to marry his niece, Sylvia, to Mr. Charles Bracebridge, the son of an old friend. But Mr. Porches' own son and heir, Captain Porches, is in love with the young lady, and, disguised with wig, whiskers, and moustache, he masquerades as his own father, deceives his mother and others of his family, and gives the paternal consent to his own wedding. But the Captain has become involved in a card scandal, and is "wanted" by the police; so he has to make his escape. His sister, Mrs. Bellingham, and his servant, Angus Macpherson, combine to get him out of his difficulties. On Charles arriving to be presented to Sylvia, Angus is disguised—this is a comedy of disguises!—as Sylvia, and by his amorous advances disgusts Bracebridge, who is glad to get out of the supposed maiden's society. Then Angus meets old Porches, and introduces himself as Janet Macpherson, Angus' wife. Various complications follow, until at last old Porches fancies that he is in a house full of lunatics. He and Bracebridge are, after incidents which need not be described in detail, arrested and taken to the police station, but are bailed out by a friend of the Captain. However, eventually Charles Bracebridge and Kate Bellingham find that they are in sympathy, and Captain Porches pairs off with Sylvia.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1912.

"GLASTONBURY."

HISTORICAL PLAY IN LONDON.

Richard Whiting (Abbot of Glastonbury) ..... Rev. W. T. Saward
The Prior ..... Rev. E. J. S. Tewiotdale
Brother Christopher ... Rev. Dr. W. Houston Collisson
Solo Cantor ..... Rev. Roscow Shedden
Thurifer ..... Rev. T. P. Stevens
Brother Ambrose ..... Rev. E. Deacon
Mayor of Glastonbury .... Mr. Alderman Basil Hope
Sir John Redfyrne ..... Mr. K. Gammell
Brother Francis ..... Mr. Percy Croft
Lord Russell ..... Mr. Harry Dudley
Cuthbert (a Foundling) ..... Miss Eileen Holmes
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Court ..... Mr. Deacon
Peasant ..... Mr. G. Vesey
Usher ..... Mr. Davies
Juggler ..... Mr. F. Gillions
Master Layton (King's Commissioner) ..... Mr. Brendon Stewert
A Tale Teller ..... Miss Ruby Bower
Madge O'Lackland ..... Miss Janet Barrow
Peasant ..... Miss Queenie Lightfoot

There is a mixture of reverence and very simple innocence in the historical play by the Rev. William T. Saward called "Glastonbury," presented at a matinée in the Court Theatre, London, yesterday. The period of the play is 1539, and the events treated are the seizure by Henry VIII.'s commissioners of Glastonbury Monastery, and the arrest, trial, and conviction of Richard Whiting, the Abbot.

The very evident interest that the company, known as the Bedford Players, take in their performance of this play, and the conviction with which the reverend author acts the part of the Abbot, disarm to a very considerable extent a desire to criticise either the play or the acting. But in those simple scenes of rural life, in the interpretation of provincial character—just the very things that such a company would be expected to excel in—there is only a hopeless attempt to imitate stage characters, no real attempt to imitate real people. That is where the performance of Mr. Saward's play fails. On the other hand, some of the parts—the Abbot, for instance—and those others, familiar figures of the costume drama, are played very well indeed. One might take from the programme the names of Mr. K. Gammell, Mr. Deacon, and Mr. Brendon Stewart and compare the acting of these gentlemen more than favourably with what is to be witnessed in London melodrama theatres.

One very curious feature of yesterday's performance of "Glastonbury" was the inclusion in the cast of no fewer than six clergymen. These reverend gentlemen played the parts of the most prominent members of the Benedictine community. They sang the appropriate church music, walked in procession behind an uplifted cross, and gave a representation of a simple religious function, doing so with a zeal and reverence that was not, apparently, assumed. What they had to do was at least done earnestly.

The example might well have had some effect on the hopeless attempt to act made by the representatives of the villagers. It had none that was to be seen yesterday. In the fulness of time it may bear fruit.

J. W.

NEW THEATRE

St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Proprietors - - - - SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and MISS MARY MOORE.

On THURSDAY, MAY 16, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30

Matinee every Wednesday at 2.30. First Matinee, Wednesday next, 22nd inst.

Will be presented an Original Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"Mrs. DANE'S DEFENCE"

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Sir Daniel (Mr. Justice) Carteret ..	(his original part) ..	SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM
Lionel Carteret (his adopted son) ..	.. ..	.. Mr. CHARLES KENYON
Canon Bonsey	.. ..	.. .. Mr. ERIC LEWIS
Mr. Bulsom-Porter	.. ..	.. Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Mr. James Risby	.. ..	.. Mr. GERALD AMES
Fendick (a private Enquiry Agent) ..	.. ..	.. Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Adams (Butler to Lady Eastney) ..	.. ..	Mr. THOMAS PAUNCEFORTE
Wilson (Butler to Sir Daniel)	.. ..	.. Mr. ARTHUR HARE
Mrs. Dane	(her original part) ..	.. Miss LENA ASHWELL
Mrs. Bulsom-Porter	(her original part) ..	.. Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Janet Colquhoun	.. ..	.. Miss ATHENE SEYLER
	AND
Lady Eastney	(her original part) ..	.. Miss MARY MOORE

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. .. .. Scene—Drawing Room at Lady Eastney's. Night.
ACT II. .. .. Scene—The same on Saturday afternoon nearly three weeks later.
ACT III. .. .. Scene—The Study at Sir Daniel's on the following Wednesday afternoon
ACT IV. .. .. Scene—The same on the following Saturday evening.

The action takes place at Sunningwater, about twenty-five miles from London.

TIME—THE PRESENT.

There will be an interval of 10 minutes between Acts I. and II.; 12 minutes between Acts II. and III., and 10 minutes between Acts III. and IV.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"The Magic Flute"	Mozart
Before Act II.—Slavonic Dances, Nos. 3 and 8	.. ..	Dvorak
Before Act III.—Barcarolle ..	.. ..	Tchaikowsky
Violin Solo ..	"Berceuse Melancolique"	Fevan
	MR. ALBERT CAZABON.
Before Act IV.—OVERTURE	"Admiral Guinea"	Albert Cazabon

The Scenes designed and entirely furnished by Fryer's, Ltd., 6, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square.
Miss Mary Moore's dresses by Worth, Paris. Miss Lena Ashwell's by Handley & Seymour. Miss Marie Illington's by Jay's.
Miss Athene Seyler's by Lavallière. Hats by Maison Lewis. Piano supplied by Cramer. Floral Decorations by A. & L. Uhlmann.

Box Office (Mr. G. Mills) open from 10 till 10. Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.30.

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Musical Director .. .. Mr. ALBERT CAZABON
General Manager .. .. Mr A. F. HENDERSON

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1912.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

It is now within a few months of being twelve years since Sir Charles Wyndham first presented Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's four-act play, "Mrs. Dane's Defence" at Wyndham's Theatre. Last evening it was revived, under the joint management of himself and Miss Mary Moore, at the New Theatre.

The memory of first impressions caused some disappointment on renewal of acquaintance with this play last night. Scenes that impressed one strongly twelve years ago did not appear quite so strong now.

The once great scene—Mrs. Dane's cross-examination by Sir Daniel and her confession—produced but a shadow of the old effect. The fault was not Miss Ashwell's; she played the part of the hunted woman with all the force that brought her into the front rank of actresses in this play, twelve years ago. Yet there it was—the play did not produce the old impression.

The piece was well mounted, but the acting was not entirely above criticism. Four members of the original company, namely—Sir Charles Wyndham, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Marie Illington, and Miss Lena Ashwell, were in their old parts.

J. W—

105

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOONS,
May 17th, 21st, 24th, 28th, 31st, and June 4th, 1912, at 3,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

PETER'S CHANCE

A Play in Three Acts by

EDITH LYTTELTON.

Father Bentley	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
The Rev. Percy Blythe	Mr. REGINALD MALCOLM
Peter Grieve	Mr. OWEN NARES
Joe Price	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Meatie	Mr. ARTHUR BOWYER
Bodger	Mr. STEWART DAWSON
Billy Boy	Mr. ROBERT LAWLOR
A Tramp	Mr. WILFRED SHINE
Kitty Roman	Miss FLORENCE LLOYD
Mrs. Jenks	Miss MARY RELPH
Susie Troak	Miss CONSTANCE LITTLE
Mrs. Chase	Miss ROSE YULE
Bert	Miss MOLLY SHIELLS
Betsy	Miss ESTELLE GILL

The action takes place in the Common Room at St. Stephen's Mission House, Stepney Produced under the Direction of CHARLES LA TROBE.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1912.

"PETER'S CHANCE."

MRS. LYTTELTON'S NEW PLAY.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie presented at the Royalty Theatre yesterday afternoon for a series of six matinées a new play in three acts by Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton.

"Peter's Chance" is not exhilarating: it is not even mildly cheerful. The play that suggests a purpose is seldom made particularly attractive, and those who contend that the best way to interest people is to amuse them will find little else to laugh at here than a very real curate and a very human, if depraved, tramp. There were not a few in yesterday's audience who found relief in the mild curate and the tramp with a rooted objection to baths.

Mr. Wilfrid Shine's performance as the tramp was one of the best little bits of the afternoon, and offered a curious contrast to some of the samples of Cockney as it was "spoke" in the mission house at Stepney, where the young thief Peter was given a chance to redeem his character. Mrs. Lyttelton gives, no doubt, a faithful picture of the mission house, its good pastor, Father Bentley, and its poor, if honest, reclaimed humanity. Peter's entrance into that little community came on the appeal of a woman, who asked the priest to hide her sweetheart from the police until the noise of a robbery in which he had had a hand should blow over, and there Peter mended his ways, made himself useful, and became religious, only to die on the chapel steps when attempting to save the altar plate from the armed thieves who were his one-time companions.

It was all very sad at times, and necessarily depressing, but such qualities are generally to be found in the things that the best of good people recommend for our good.

J. W.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

8th London Shakespeare Festival, 1912.

MONDAY EVENING MAY 20, TO WED. MAY 22. MATINEE WED. MAY 22.	The Merchant of Venice.	Herbert Tree, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Basil Gill, Leon M. Lion, A. E. George, Ross Shore, Hubert Carter, E. Ion Swinley, Henry Morrell, Walter R. Creighton, Philip Merivale, Otho Stuart, Laura Cowie, Alice Crawford.
THURSDAY, EVENING, MAY 23, TO SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 25.	Twelfth Night.	Herbert Tree, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Basil Gill, Hubert Carter, A. E. George, Dennis Neilson-Terry, Philip Merivale, E. Ion Swinley Walter R. Creighton, Maidie Hope, Alice Crawford.
SATURDAY, MAY 25. MATINEE.	Othello.	Herbert Tree, Laurence Irving, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Ross Shore, Hubert Carter, A. E. George, E. Ion Swinley, Henry Morrell, Philip Merivale, Ernest Thesiger, A. E. Dight, Laura Cowie, Alice Crawford.
MONDAY EVENING, MAY 27, TO THURSDAY, MAY 30, MATINEE, WED., MAY 29.	King Henry VIII.	Herbert Tree, Arthur Bourchier, Violet Vanbrugh, Basil Gill, Hubert Carter, A. E. George, Henry Morrell, Philip Merivale, Ross Shore, Walter R. Creighton, Laura Cowie.
FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 31, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 1.	Twelfth Night.	Herbert Tree, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Basil Gill, Hubert Carter, A. E. George, Dennis Neilson-Terry, Philip Merivale, E. Ion Swinley, Walter R. Creighton, Maidie Hope, Alice Crawford.
SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 1.	Othello.	Herbert Tree, Laurence Irving, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Ross Shore, Hubert Carter, A. E. George, E. Ion Swinley, Henry Morrell, Philip Merivale, Ernest Thesiger, A. E. Dight, Laura Cowie, Alice Crawford.
MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 3.	Julius Cæsar.	Herbert Tree, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Basil Gill, Lyn Harding, A. E. George, Hubert Carter, Ross Shore, Philip Merivale, Henry Morrell, E. Ion Swinley, Ethelwyn Arthur-Jones.
SPECIAL PERFORMANCE MATINEE, TUESDAY, JUNE 4.	Iphigenia in Tauris.	Lillah McCarthy. Godfrey Tearle, W. Bridges Adams, C. H. Hewelson. Jules Shaw, P. A. Gawthorn, Ernita Lascelles, Penelope Wheeler.
TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 4 TO WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 5. MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5.	Julius Cæsar.	Herbert Tree, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Basil Gill, Lyn Harding, A. E. George, Hubert Carter, Ross Shore, Philip Merivale, Henry Morrell, E. Ion Swinley, Ethelwyn Arthur-Jones.
THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 6, TO SATURDAY JUNE 8., MATINEE SATURDAY, JUNE 8.	The Merry Wives of Windsor.	Herbert Tree, Lady Tree, Basil Gill, Lyn Harding, A. E. George, Henry Morrell, Hubert Carter, E. Ion Swinley, Philip Merivale, Alice Crawford, Laura Cowie, E. M. Robson.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"THE SPANISH LOVERS."

Play in Three Acts, adapted from Fernando de Rojas' "La Celestina" by Edward Garnett, Produced at the Little Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, May 22.

Sosia .....Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Parmeno .....Mr. Ivan Berlyn
Elicia .....Miss Margaret Yarde
Arensa .....Miss Marie Royter
Sempronio .....Mr. W. G. Fay
Calisto .....Mr. Alfred Wild
Melibea .....Miss Mona Limerick
Lucretia .....Miss Carrie Haase
Celestina .....Miss Isabel Grey
Alisa .....Miss Emily Luck
Pleberio .....Mr. Henry Austin
Centurio .....Mr. Archibald McLean

The pleasure of welcoming Miss Mona Limerick back to the Metropolis was enjoyed at the Little Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, when the gifted actress opened a season, in conjunction with Mr. Iden B. Payne, with Edward Garnett's adaptation of Fernando de Rojas' 15th century dramatic novel, "La Celestina," entitled "The Spanish Lovers." The three acts are divided into seven scenes, most of which were set in a simplified form, vividly painted cloths portraying the centre of action and leaving each side blank. Mr. Garnett has turned the old story to the purposes of the stage very deftly, and has supplied it with terse and dramatic dialogue, but he has not been able to destroy the old-fashioned character of the work, which proved at times tedious and unconvincing.

It is difficult to conceive how such a strong-minded person as the haughty Melibea, who has looked with the eye of scorn upon the unworthy advances of Calisto, should allow herself to be cajoled by a reputed sorceress whom he employs to induce her to change her mind. Celestina goes to press Calisto's claims, and is overwhelmed with abuse by the senorita. The soft words of Celestina, however, turn away wrath, and the result of her interview is that Melibea sends her girdle to help to cure Calisto's ills. Having so far relented, the proud beauty conceives a passion for Calisto, and gets Celestina to arrange a midnight meeting on the terrace of her father's house. Here, after various love passages, Calisto, hastening to the assistance of his servant, who has been attacked, falls over the wall and is killed, whereupon Melibea ascends a turret in the garden, and after telling the story of her liaison to her father, leaps to her death. Meanwhile Celestina has met her fate at the hands of Calisto's servants, to whom she refuses to give a share of the plunder.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

STRAND, W.C.

Sole Proprietors: Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessee: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Manager (for Mr. George Edwardes): Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

ON SATURDAY, MAY 25th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

AUTUMN MANŒUVRES

A PLAY WITH MUSIC

By KARL von BAKONY and R. BODANSKI. Music by EMERICH KALMAN.

Adapted for the English Stage by HENRY HAMILTON.

Lyrics by PERCY GREENBANK.

Stage Production by J. A. E. MALONE.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2 O'CLOCK.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.;
Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephones—2645 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.
BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. P. OXLEY) open 10 to 10.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen in front to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

. . . Cast of the Play. . . .

Captain Frank Falconer	Of the 12th Hussars	Mr. ROBERT EVETT
Oswald Orde		Mr. LIONEL MACKINDER
Col. Annesley		Mr. A. BROMLEY DAVENPORT
Captain Devenish ...		Mr. F. W. RUSSELL
Thorpe Vercker ...		Mr. AUDLEY WILLIS
Charles Tremayne ...		Mr. CUTHBERT MONTAGUE
Corporal Kellett ...		Mr. CECIL CURTIS
Major-General Pomeroy		Mr. EDWARD SASS
Sgt.-Major Sykes	Broadshire Territorials	Mr. LEONARD MACKAY
Waterman ...	Miss Luttrell's Butler	Mr. E. H. WYNNE
Jephson	A Servant	Mr. GEORGE BELLAMY
	AND
Captain Withers ...	Broadshire Territorials	Mr. HUNTLEY WRIGHT
Alix Luttrell	Of Ambermere	Miss PHYLLYS LE GRAND
June Pomeroy	Daughter of General Pomeroy	Miss DAISY ELLISTON
Lady Ulleswater... ...	Guests at Ambermere	Miss HILDA ANTONY
Mary Medhurst		Miss LEILA GRIFFIN
Mrs. Leyland-Holt ...		Miss ANN CLEAVER
Claire Ingleby		Miss RUBY KENNEDY
Sybil Houghton		Miss DORA FRASER
Jean Ogilvie		Miss GIPSY O'BRIEN
	AND
Lady Larkins		Miss GRACIE LEIGH

ACT I.	... ...	Ambermere Park.	Alfred Terraine.
ACT II.	Evening ...	Ambermere House.	Alfred Terraine.
ACT III.	Early Morning	Ambermere House.	Alfred Terraine.

Dresses by LUCILE, LTD., 23 Hanover Square, W.
Uniforms by MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.
Ladies' Hats by MAISON LEWIS.
Music published by ENOCH & SONS, 14 & 14a, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.

Dances and Chorus Business by WILLIE WARDE.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. CARL KIEFERT

Acting Manager ... (for Mr. George Edwardes) ... Mr. CHARLTON MANN

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, MAY 27, 1912.

MILITARY MUSICAL PLAY.

SUCCESS OF "AUTUMN MANŒUVRES."

The new musical play with which Mr. George Edwardes reopened the Adelphi Theatre on Saturday evening is a real military play, with marching music and a story as clearly told as if it were an autumn drama.

"Autumn Manœuvres" comes from Vienna, but the "book" has been completely rewritten by Mr. Henry Hamilton, and some of the most popular composers in London have contributed new musical numbers. There is a happy impression of novelty about "Autumn Manœuvres"; every man in the play wears a soldier's uniform—12th Hussars and Territorials—and all through one hears the marching of men, trumpet calls, and regimental bands. Where there are soldiers one may be sure to find pretty girls, and no one ever saw prettier or more charmingly dressed girls than those in this play on Saturday evening.

The military "atmosphere" of the play made its fortune; the novelty and spirit of it delighted the audience. The finish to the first of the three acts is the most effective piece of stage management in London: soldiers asleep round a camp fire in a country park; far away the challenging cry of a sentry echoing in the night air; a trumpet call; silence; and then the curtain.

Right to the end, throughout the second and third acts, the soldiers "carry" this play. "Autumn Manœuvres" is a man's story. It has, of course, a heroine—played by Miss Phyllis le Grand—and it has two other equally charming young ladies, played most effectively by Miss Hilda Antony and Miss Daisy Elliston. But they are only in the story in a secondary character; they are there to love the soldiers—and they do love them.

In the second act there is a bewildering feast of colour and movement at the ball given to the officers at the manor. There are bugle calls and sounds of distant firing, but no one is frightened—it is all mimic warfare. Captain Withers (of the Broadshire Territorials), the drollest character Mr. Huntley Wright has ever presented, takes on himself with the lightest of hearts the responsibility of having ruined his general's plans. This part as played by Mr. Wright kept the audience in constant laughter.

Mr. Robert Evett was the manly little hussar officer who was not to be bullied or cajoled; Mr. Lionel Mackinder and Mr. Leonard Mackay also were good; and Mr. Edward Sass was to the life the peppery old cavalry commander. One could foresee what a fine character part Mr. Sass will in a short time make of this. And last, but not least, there was tireless, graceful, sincere Miss Gracie Leigh, with merry laugh and twinkling feet, to charm everyone.

J. W.

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

Tuesday, May 7th, 1912, and Every Evening at 9 o'clock,

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

THE FIVE FRANKFORTERS

A Comedy in Three Acts

By BASIL HOOD.

Adapted from the German of CARL RÖSSLER.

At 8.30 (Matinees 2.30),

THE EMBARRASSED BUTLER

A Comedy in Two Scenes, by KEBLE HOWARD.

(The Curtain will be lowered for a few seconds to indicate the passing of four hours).

Austin Grain	Mr. VIVIAN GILBERT
Celia Grain (his Wife)	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Jack (one of the Family)	Mr. WALTER RINGHAM
Tily (Austin's Butler)	Mr. WALTER KINGSFORD

Scene—Dining Room of Austin's Flat at Richmond.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY THE AUTHOR.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny "London Morning Journal,

WEDNESDAY, MAY 29, 1912.

THE BURGLAR BUTLER.

The neurotic strain that induces people to do the unconventional thing, such as employing an ex-burglar as a butler, or buying a bulldog to take care of children, was very strongly developed in the young married couple who were the central characters in a new one-act play by Mr. Keble Howard, produced last evening at the Lyric Theatre.

The young people imagined felt that they would be very unhappy if they did not employ an ex-convict as a butler, and they were still more unhappy when they got him. Althongh admittedly sorely tempted to remove the plate, the model butler did nothing worse than half strangle a dinner guest, and when the ourtain did eventually fall on "The Embarrassed Butler," we were left wondering if he felt half as unhappy as his master and mistress looked. J. W.

DALY'S THEATRE

Proprietor and Manager - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES

SATURDAY, JUNE 1st, 1912, at 8.

First Matinée, Saturday, June 8th, at 2.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

Gipsy Love

A MUSICAL PLAY IN THREE ACTS

By A. M. WILLNER and ROBERT BODANZKY.

English Libretto by BASIL HOOD.

Music by FRANZ LEHAR. Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

All Numbers, Dances, and Chorus Effects have been arranged by Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

Musical Director - - - - - - - Herr FRANZ ZIEGLER

Stage Manager - - - - - - - Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10.

Telephone: GERRARD 201 (2 lines).

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s.: Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, Front, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.;
Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

Cast of the Play

Jozsi	(a Gipsy Musician)	Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Andor	(an Innkeeper)	Mr. HARRY DEARTH
Jonel	(Betrothed to Ilona)	Mr. WEBSTER MILLAR
Kajetan	(a Shy Young Man)	Mr. LAURI DE FRECE
Dimitreanu	(Kajetan's Father)	Mr. FRED KAYE
Rudolph	(Attendants to Lady Babby)	Mr. CHARLES COLEMAN
Rollo	(Attendants to Lady Babby)	Mr. FRANK PERFITT
Richard	(Attendants to Lady Babby)	Mr. NICHOLAS HANNEN

AND

Dragotin	(a Roumanian Noble)	Mr. W. H. BERRY

Ilona	(Dragotin's Daughter)	Miss SARI PETRASS
Julesa	(Ilona's Nurse)	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Jolan	(Dragotin's Niece)	Miss MABEL RUSSELL
Zorika	(a Gipsy Girl)	Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
Marischka	(Andor's Daughter)	Miss KATE WELCH

AND

Lady Babby	(an English Lady)	Miss GERTIE MILLAR

Gipsy Dancers: Misses Dombey, Stocker, Riga, Arnold, Molyneaux, Sinclair, St. Clair, Jarvis and Collier.

Roumanian and Hungarian Guests, Gipsies, Musicians, Officers, etc., etc.

Special Dances by Miss DORMA LEIGH and OY-RA.

ACT I.—Grounds of Dragotin's House - - - E. H. RYAN

ACT II.—Interior of Andor's Wine Shop - - E. H. RYAN

ACT III.—Summer Hall of Dragotin's House - - JOSEPH HARKER

Statues by ALBERT TOFT, R.B.S., Hon. A.R.C.A. Dresses designed by COMELLI.

Dresses by Mesdames Margaine-Lecroix and Miss Fisher; Messrs. Morris Angel, and B. & J. Simmons

Chorus Dresses in Act I., Miss Gertie Millar's, Miss Mabel Russell's, Miss Sari Petrass' and Miss Leigh's, designed and made by Lucille, Ltd.

Hats by Maison Lewis. Miss Gertie Millar's and Miss Mabel Russell's Hats by Zyrot et Cie.

Boots by Clegg, and H. & M. Rayne. Wigs by Clarkson.

The fireproof curtain is lowered daily in presence of the audience.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes

The task of recording Mr. George Edwardes's successes, though pleasant, becomes in time almost monotonous, and to describe his latest production, "Gipsy Love," given at Daly's Theatre for the first time in England on Saturday last, we have to fall back on all the old superlatives. The piece is frankly a "musical play," and the English libretto to Mr. Franz Lehar's music has been prepared by Captain Basil Hood from Messrs. A. M. Willner and R. Bodanzky's original, Mr. Adrian Ross being responsible for the lyrics. All these gentlemen have done their work with their usual expertness.

The story is slight, but dramatic, and the interest is sustained throughout the three acts. Ilona, the daughter of a Roumanian noble, Dragotin, is about to be formally betrothed to Jonel, an estimable but slightly dull young man. She does not love him; in fact, does not know what love is, but sighs for freedom or the affection of "a man who has some devil in him." Jozsi, a bold, bad, gipsy musician, with a reputation to maintain, as a hunter of feminine "scalps," meets Ilona, and, seemingly unduly irritated by the "respectability" of her proposed husband, like Crichton in Mr. Barrie's play, he "casts a favourable eye" on the innocent young maiden. Ilona falls an easy victim to his fascination; and, refusing to carry out the betrothal ceremony, she escapes with him from her father's house in the boat, which has, earlier in the day, brought an English visitor, Lady Babby, to the place. The second act takes place in Andor's wine shop, a rendezvous of the gipsies. Jozsi, followed by a slightly disillusioned Ilona in peasant dress, enters, and is boisterously welcomed by his old friends. Ilona coming in for her share of unwelcome masculine admiration and feminine curiosity. Ilona is preparing for her marriage to Jozsi, but he has already wearied of her, and has no intention of offering her anything more than free and easy "gipsy love." To the wine shop also come Dragotin and the charming Lady Bab, in pursuit of the runaways. Lady Babby's "excellent plan to part a pair" is "not to worry the lady, but try to catch the man." Having explained her idea to Dragotin, she proceeds to put it into execution, and the impressionable Jozsi is promptly "on with the new love," which he finds to his hand. In the third act, all are re-united at Dragotin's house. Ilona is cured of her love of wandering: Jonel is secure in the belief that she "will give him her heart one day; it's written in Heaven above"; Lady Babby has consented to become Ilona's stepmother; and the ménage is completed by a subsidiary pair, Dragotin's niece, Jolan, and a shy young man, Katejan, her lover. Jozsi presumably consoles himself—for the present—with the company of his gipsy friends.

A Social Revival.

A custom of old that is rarely revived nowadays was very pleasantly renewed by Mr. George Edwardes last Saturday night, or rather Sunday morning. I mean the custom of a supper and dance for the company that takes part in the first performance of a new play. An hour after the curtain had fallen on the first performance of "Gipsy Love" at Daly's Theatre the principals of the company, the small part actresses, the composer, the authors, and the lyricist were all gathered together again, at Claridge's Hotel, and all, to the number of forty, sat down at one great table, with Mr. George Edwardes for chairman and host. It was a delightful, laughing, merry affair, and Mr. Edwardes proposed the composer's health, who, beaming with pleasure, replied in language that was a mixture of Hungarian, German, French, and English, and said "Gipsy Love" was never really beautiful till Mr. Edwardes produced it. All this time the Hungarian band played Lehar's music and refused to stop. Mr. Edwardes had, however, to make another little speech, no one would let him off, and then there was a dance for an hour, and then home. It was the happiest affair imaginable.

DALY'S
:: THEATRE ::

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'
PRODUCTION

GIPSY
LOVE

MR. HARRY DEARTH MISS SARI PETRASS. MR. ROBERT MICHAELIS.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES
PRODUCTION

GIPSY
LOVE

DALY'S
:: THEATRE ::

MR. W. H. BERRY as "DRAGOTIN."

IRISH PLAYERS IN LONDON.

"PATRIOTS."

A Play, in Three Acts, by Lennox Robinson, Produced for the First Time in London at the Court Theatre, on Monday, June 10.

Peter O'Mahoney .... Mr. Sydney J. Morgan
Ann Nugent ..... Miss Sara Allgood
Rose Nugent ..... Miss Kathleen Drago
Mrs. Sullivan ..... Miss Eileen O'Doherty
Bob ..... Mr. Arthur Sinclair
Harry ..... Mr. J. A. O'Rourke
Willie Sullivan ..... Mr. H. E. Hutchinson
James Nugent ..... Mr. Fred O'Donovan
Father Kearney ..... Mr. J. M. Kerrigan
Dan Sullivan ..... Mr. U. Wright
Jim Powell ..... Mr. J. M. Kerrigan
Two Young Men ..... Mr. U. Wright, Mr. Michael Conniffe

Ireland of a quarter of a century ago is recalled in the new play which the Irish company introduced to London on Monday. The piece, which was originally produced at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, on April 11 last, shows an advance in the art of playwriting by Mr. Lennox Robinson, the popular manager of the company, who has turned out a workmanlike piece with effective dialogue and much of the native wit and humour which make the plays presented by the society so acceptable. Politics are necessarily introduced into the piece, but they are of a sort that need not be disagreeable to either Party, though the bitterness of heart suffered by the chief character might have been greatly alleviated by his calling to mind the Government of Ireland Bill now on its way through the House of Commons.

A fanatical advocate of the physical force policy, James Nugent, was sent to penal servitude for having shot an informer. Eighteen years after, he comes back to his wife's new prosperous shop in Coolmore, to find the League he had established almost moribund and his former supporters without enthusiasm for the cause. Nugent is as determined as ever to continue his aggressive tactics, and appeals to his wife to aid him as she did formerly, but she replies that she has had more than enough of political agitation. Only his cripple daughter, Rose, and young Willie Sullivan rally to his aid, and Nugent realises that he has to begin all over again. He has a meeting convened in the principal hall in the town, but no one comes to it—no one wants to hear him, as his former colleague, Peter O'Mahoney, tells him. Nugent decides to transfer his operations to Dublin. Rose and Willie announce their intention of accompanying him, but the latter's father is stricken with illness through receiving from Mrs. Nugent notice to quit his house, for which three years' rent is owing, and the youth is obliged to stay at home to support his parents. Then Ann declares that Rose, on whom she lavishes all her affection, shall not go, and on Nugent insisting that she shall, reveals the fact that the child's infirmity was due to the excitement of his arrest, which brought on a premature birth. Nugeot is overwhelmed with despair, and goes home a broken man.

The various parts were realised with all the customary skill of the Abbey Theatre company. Mr. Fred O'Donovan infused fire and energy into the part of the returned convict, full as ever of the patriotism of the period, and his final surrender beneath the weight of circumstance was very affecting. The dramatic ability of Miss Sara Allgood was again apparent in her conception of Ann Nugent, whose passionate attachment to her child was artistically conveyed. Miss Kathleen Drago made a touching appearance as the cripple child, her wistful expression adding to its picturesque effect. Humour of an occasional kind was supplied by Mr. Arthur Sinclair and Mr. J. H. O'Rourke, who as Ann's simple-minded brothers acted with characteristic quaintness. Mr. J. M. Kerrigan portrayed a parish priest with his usual care, and also gave a deliciously droll sketch of an old caretaker, whose every sentence caused a laugh. Mr. Sidney J. Morgan played consistently as one of Nugent's former colleagues; Miss Eileen O'Doherty again excelled in the character of an old woman; and Mr. H. E. Hutchinson as a youthful patriot did very well, but has a tendency occasionally to lower his voice almost to indistinctness. Mr. U. Wright added to the merriment as a bibulous farmer, and with Mr. Michael Conniffe ably represented two young men.

"The Jackdaw," another of Lady Gregory's clever comediettas, which we have before had occasion to praise, followed the new piece, and its diverting incidents were given full effect to by Miss Sara Allgood, Mr. J. A. O'Rourke, Miss Eileen O'Doherty, Mr. J. M. Kerrigan, Mr. Fred O'Donovan, and Mr. Arthur Sinclair.

For the remainder of the week, commencing Thursday and concluding this evening, the programme consists of "Mixed Marriage," by Mr. St. John G. Ervine, and Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon."

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1912.

"PATRIOTS."

THREE-ACT PLAY OF A NEW IRELAND.

It is an Ireland wholly unlike the conventional Ireland of the stage that Mr. Lennox Robinson presents in the new three-act play "Patriots," produced by the Irish National Theatre Society at the Court Theatre yesterday evening.

The characters of the Irish country town of the play are the common-sense, humorous people made familiar by the productions in recent years of this Irish Theatre Society, and it is the return into such a community of a man liberated from prison after serving eighteen years for a political murder that furnishes the incidents of the play. His home-coming makes no stir; his own family has prospered in his absence. Patriotism has a new significance in the people's sudden awakening to the prosperity of their country, and the old patriot in the empty meeting-room where he had expected to see a crowd of "rebels" breaks down, and recognises at last the changed condition of things.

"I've killed a man, I've crippled a child, I've got myself shut up for eighteen years—heaven knows what good came of it all. I know I meant right—and in prison my cell used to be filled with the sad faces of men like me who had given everything for Ireland. I have tried and been broken." It was a joy to those who are actor-weary to hear that speech as Mr. Fred O'Donovan delivered it, and also to hear and watch Mr. Sydney Morgan, Miss Sara Allgood, and Mr. Arthur Sinclair. The author and the Irish National Theatre Society recognise the newer Ireland. For when the patriot is taken home by his crippled daughter, the only criticism of the old fighting ideal comes from the pleased caretaker of the hall, who sees in the abandoned meeting an opportunity to go round the corner to a "picture palace."

The performance had a reception as hearty as it deserved, and the tall boyish-looking young author, who had to take a "call," seemed surprised at his London success.

J. W.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11th, and EVERY EVENING at 8.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, JUNE 15TH, AT 2,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

OLIVER TWIST.

Fagin	HERBERT TREE (His Original Part).
Bill Sikes	LYN HARDING (His Original Part).
The Artful Dodger	FRANK STANMORE (His Original Part).
Charlie Bates	E. ION SWINLEY
Tom Chitling	STANLEY BELL
Barney	ROSS SHORE
Mr. Brownlow	HENRY MORRELL
Mr. Grimwig	A. E. GEORGE
Monks	PHILIP MERIVALE
Harry Maylie	BASIL GILL (His Original Part).
Dr. Sime	ANTHONY WARDE
Mr. Bumble	HUBERT CARTER
Giles	GEORGE MALLETT
Brittles	SYDNEY GOULDIE
Jailor	ALFRED BELLEW
Warder	ALFRED H. GODDARD
Servant	PETER UPCHER
Oliver Twist	ALFRED WILLMORE
Nancy	CONSTANCE COLLIER (Her Original Part).
Betsy	GRACE CROFT
Mrs. Maylie	ALMA MURRAY (Her Original Part).
Rose Maylie	LAURA COWIE
Mrs. Bedwin	CLARE GREET
Mrs. Bumble	STELLA ST. AUDRIE
Maid	ETHELWYN ARTHUR-JONES

LYCEUM THEATRE.

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12th, at 7-45,
AND NIGHTLY AT 7.45.
MATINEES—Wednesdays & Saturdays at 2-30.

AN ENTIRELY NEW ROMANTIC PLAY

THE WOMEN OF FRANCE

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN LANDECK.

The Play Presented and Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music specially composed by H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Characters:

The Chevalier De Villeroy (known as Captain Victor)	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Corporal Pache (of the National Guard) ...	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
The Duc de Brissac (a Brittany Nobleman)	Mr. EDMUND KENNEDY
Charles Capet (The Dauphin, Louis the 17th)	Miss MARY GLYNNE
Phillippe de Récour (a Young Aristocrat disguised as a Page)	Miss ADA GLYNNE
General Chaumette (Of the French Republican Army) ...	Mr. EDWARD VALENTINE
Paul, Fedor (Jailers of the Conciergerie) ...	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
	Mr CECIL TRESILIAN
Citizen Couthon (Commissary of the Commune)	Mr. CHARLES WINGATE
Sergeant Garbette	Mr. FRED ELSWORTHY
Jacques (a Workman)	Mr. FERRY
A Priest	Mr. CHARLES E. GORDON
Citizen Bremont (Republican Magistrate) ..	Mr. WILLIAM T. RILEY
Simon the Cobbler	Mr. FRED POWELL
Madam Simon (the Cobbler's Wife)	Miss NELLIE KELSIE
Sanson (The Executioner)	Mr. FENN CHALLIS
Pierre .. Jean ... Peasants of La Vendée ...	Mr. GEORGE CRESSY
Ben Barclay (a British Tar)	Mr. M. SMITH
Lady Atkyn (an English Woman)	Mr. H. PREECE
Suzanne (Maid at the Castle de La Torgue)	Miss HETTA BARTLETT
Lizette ... ... Margot ... ... Peasants ...	Miss EVELYN HOPE
	Miss MARY PENN
Clementine (Wife of Corporal Pache) ...	Miss GERTIE ANDREWS
Marie Antoinette (Queen of France) ...	Miss EVA DARE
AND	Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
Valerie de Brissac	Miss NORA KERIN

Soldiers, Peasants, Sans Culottes, Gendarmes, Kitchen Wenches, &c.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

ACT 1, Scene 1 ... ... Interior of the Conciergerie
The last hours of Marie Antoinette.

Scene 2 .. .. Outside the Conciergerie.
"I declare this woman to be my wife" and "I declare this man to be my husband."
During the period in which the Action of the Play takes place, it was held in Paris that a marriage could be legalised by public declaration of the parties.

ACT 2, Scene 1 Court Yard of Lady Atkyn's House on the Outskirts of Paris.
The Duc de Brissac in hiding.

Scene 2 ... ... Another Part of the Garden.
The Sacrifice, to save the King.

Scene 3 The Cobbler's Apartments in the Prison of the Temple
The Cobbler and the King.

ACT 3, Scene 1 ... La Vendee, a Tent in the Forest of Fougere.
The Advance of the Republican Army.

Scene 2 ... ... On the Borders of the Forest of Fougere.
The Scarecrow.

Scene 3 ... . Outside the Chateau De La Torgue.
The Old Soldier.

Scene 4 ... Great Kitchen of the Chateau De La Torgue.
Tableau No. 1.—The Attack on the Chateau.
Tableau No. 2.—The Women of France.

ACT 4 ... ... The Hall of the Chateau.
The Shadow of the Guillotine.

Costumes and Wigs executed by JOHN HYMAN, 19 Leicester Square.
Scenery by W. D. HOBBS and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE will play the following selections:—

(1) OVERTURE—"The Women of France" - - H. Sullivan-Brooke.
(2) SELECTION "The Pink Lady" - - - - Ivan Caryl.
(3) (a) ENTRACTE "Chanson D'Amour" - - }
(b) VALSE—"Liane" - - - - - - } H. Sullivan-Brooke.
(4) OVERTURE—"Marie Antoinette" - - - - - Dubois.

Hire of Opera Glasses 6d. obtained from Automatic Machines attached to Seats.

Popular Prices: Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. £1 11s. 6d., and £1 1s. Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Grand Circle, 4s. and 2s. 6d. (All Numbered and Reserved.) Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Box Office (Edward Hackett) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617-8 Gerrard (2 Lines.)

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

Messrs. Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck are past masters of the art of writing popular plays, and they have prepared a piece, founded on French revolutionary history, with consummate skill. Their vigorously stirring and irresistibly exciting drama is on lines which, to judge by the enthusiastic expressions of approval at the Lyceum on Wednesday, are entirely pleasing to its patrons. The plot is crowded with incident, and the action is not allowed to halt for an instant.

Marie Antoinette, momentarily awaiting the summons to take her turn at the "nation's razor," is left in charge of the Republican Captain Victor, who is really the Chevalier De Villeroy, and a Royalist enthusiast. He pledges his word to rescue and protect the Dauphin, confined in the Temple under the rough tutelage of Simon the Cobbler. The mother's last message to her son is not to try to avenge his parents; never to reign in France; and whilst being good, brave, and kind, to endeavour above all things to be forgotten. Victor, under the pretext of an insulting offer of bread, conveys to the Queen as she goes to execution a boyish letter of the Dauphin's to console her in her last moments. Valerie de Brissac, a faithful adherent of Marie Antoinette's, who loves and is loved by Victor, sees this supposedly cowardly action, and, throwing caution to the winds, vigorously upbraids him for his renegade deed. For this she herself is in danger of being killed as an aristocrat, and she is only saved by being publicly declared the wife of Victor (an acknowledgment which at that time constituted a legal marriage), her attack being considered as merely a connubial amenity. Valerie only consents to this arrangement to save her father, whose successful escape from prison, planned for that evening, will require her help; and she parts from her husband with contempt, Victor being bound by a promise to the Queen not to attempt to clear himself in her eyes.

In the second act Lady Atkyn, an English woman, who has been planning the rescue of the Queen, conceals Valerie and her father in a villa on the outskirts of Paris, and with Victor's help they are enabled to escape to the Duc's château in Brittany. The Dauphin is rescued from his wretched den in the temple, a loyal little aristocrat, Phillippe de Récour, already doomed by consumption, taking his place just before the little prisoner was to be still more securely confined. In the third act Victor and the Dauphin, in disguise, are tramping across France. Near the De Brissac château they fall in with the Republican army, with which are Brémont (a former dishonest steward of the Duc, in love with Valerie) and Simon, who both fear they will be held responsible for the disappearance of the Dauphin if the substitution is discovered. Victor, unrecognised by Valerie, rescues her from the unwelcome attentions of Brémont, and with her and the little king returns to the château. She penetrates his disguise, and still believing him a traitor, and not realising the identity of his companion, she drugs him and denounces him to his enemies. When the little monarch declares himself and testifies to Victor's devotion she is overcome with remorse, and strains every nerve, with the help of her father's household, chiefly women, to defend the château.

In the fourth act all is apparently lost, for Valerie and Victor are both captured, and Brémont is—pro tem. at any rate—triumphant; but at the moment that the Dauphin is about to surrender himself as hostage for them both, news comes that Robespierre has fallen, Brémont is deprived of his authority, and the little king, with the echo of his dead mother's last message in his ears, has got safely away to England by the help of Lady Atkyn, Victor and his now willing bride becoming reconciled and united.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1912.

MIXED MARRIAGE.

NEW IRISH PLAY OF WOMAN'S MISSION.

Men are only children, and women were put into the world to take care of them. Such is the philosophy behind the story of Mr. St. John Ervine's new four-act play, "Mixed Marriage," produced by the Irish National Theatre Society at the Court Theatre last evening.

The old wife of the Belfast workman, who turns his son out of the home because he would marry a Roman Catholic, had no doubt of what woman's mission is on earth. She is the commère of this play. Through her we learn all that the author has to say about the characters in the play and the conditions of their daily life. That life, in a sense, is narrow enough, goodness knows. We see it through the four acts of this play in the living-room of a small kitchen-house in a street in a poor quarter of Belfast. The woman's husband objects to his two sons keeping company with Roman Catholics, and the wife waiting for a good opportunity to break it to him keeps from him the secret that his eldest son wants to marry a girl of that religion.

To those who have not been brought into close contact with strong religious prejudice the motive on which the events of "Mixed Marriage" turn may appear a very slight one, but Mr. Ervine has used his materials with skill, and besides securing a real dramatic interest has written and conducted some scenes of pathos, power, and charm, in which the old woman, humble as she is, comes out a truly great woman.

"I am not sorry I married," she says to the girl kneeling at her feet. "I'd do it again if I had my life over again. Men are strange at first sight, and they're not very considerate. They don't understand women . . . . but we get to understand them soon enough. Ye know they are quare ould humbugs when ye know them. They think they are that clever, and they make us think it, too, at first. But sure you soon find them out. Och, dear, they are just like big children," and the girl kneeling at her feet who is to marry her son feels instinctively the same thing. "Ay," she says, "ye feel quare and glad when you know. Ye would think mebbe ye'd be disappointed at finding them out; but ye're not." So do these kind, gentle creatures judge the men in Mr. Ervine's story.

But the old man will not suffer them to arrange this mixed marriage. He stirs up religious feeling in the district. There is a riot, and in the street the girl is shot down. Her body is carried into the old couple's house. The old man, still obstinate though broken-down, says, "I know I was right," and the weeping old woman, patting him gently, replies, "My poor man, my poor man."

For Miss Sara Allgood's performance no praise would be too high. Next in merit came Mr. Arthur Sinclair and Mr. U. Wright.

J. W.

TO-NIGHT, FRIDAY, JUNE 14th, 1912, at 8.15,

And Subsequent Evenings at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE AMAZONS

A Farcical Romance, in Three Acts, by

ARTHUR PINERO.

GALFRED, EARL OF TWEENWAYES		Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
BARRINGTON, VISCOUNT LITTERLY		Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
ANDRÉ, COUNT DE GRIVAL		Mr. DION BOUCICAULT
REV. ROGER MINCHIN		Mr. BERTE THOMAS
FITTON	(a Gamekeeper) ...	Mr. DUNCAN McRAE
YOUATT	(a Servant) ...	Mr. LICHFIELD OWEN
ORTS	(a Poacher) ...	Mr. J. WOODALL-BIRDE
MIRIAM MARCHIONESS OF CASTLEJORDAN		... Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS
LADY NOELINE BELTURBET	Her Daughters	Miss PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY By permission of Sir Herbert Tree
LADY WILHELMINA BELTURBET	Her Daughters	Miss PAULINE CHASE
LADY THOMASIN BELTURBET	Her Daughters	Miss MARIE LÖHR
"SERGEANT" SHUTER		... Miss RUTH MACKAY

The Scene is laid first in "The Tangle," an overgrown corner of Overcote Park, and afterwards at Overcote Hall. Great Overcote, as everybody knows, is a two-hours' railway journey from town. The events of the play occur on a single day in a fine September.

D. Y. T.

14/6/1912

Orch. Stall

F19

No

Since it is nearly twenty years from the first production of Sir Arthur Pinero's farcical romance—for "The Amazons" was first performed at the Court Theatre in 1893, with Mr. F. Kerr as Viscount Litterly, Miss Rose Leclercq as the Marchioness, the late Miss Lily Hanbury as Lady Neoline, and Miss Ellaline Terriss as Lady Wilhelmina—Mr. Charles Frohman's revival with an "all-star" cast comes to the present generation of playgoers with almost the charm of novelty; and, though Mr. Weedon Grossmith is in his original part of "Tweeny," the present exponents of the parts of the youthful "girl-boys" must have been at the date of the original production in those tender years when the sex-distinction in dress is very slight indeed.

It may be remembered that the plot of the piece turns on the efforts of Miriam, Marchioness of Castlejordan—in default of a boy heir who would retain the estates in her branch of the family—to bring up her three girls on a masculine-and-feminine dual system; for the children, though they spend the greater part of their lives in "small-clothes" in the seclusion of Overcote Park, on "second Thursdays" are allowed, when visiting friends, the privileges, or lisabilities, of charming and appropriate gowns. The two younger "boys," Wilhelmina and Thomasin, on a Scotch country house visit, have received proposals of marriage from the Count le Grival and the Earl of Tweenways. Lady Noeline, on a "skirted" visit to London, whilst innocently seeking adventure in her boy's clothes one evening, has been embroiled in a street fight, rescued by her unknown cousin, Viscount Litterly, and carried to his rooms in a fainting condition. "Coming to," she manages to escape, fancying her disguise is still unpenetrated, but inadvertently she leaves her ring—a family heirloom—behind. Litterly, Tweenways, and de Grival all come to Overcote Park to pursue their acquaintance with the girls; and, after thrilling and amusing incidental misunderstandings and adventures, finally pair off with the three "Amazons," Lady Miriam being reconciled to her interloping nephew mainly because he has "her Jack's" eyes and muscles.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - LOUIS MEYER

Under the Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

MONDAY, JUNE 17th, AT 8.

FIND THE WOMAN

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS, BY

CHARLES KLEIN.

Richard Dexter - - - -	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Howard Jeffries, Senior - -	HERBERT BUNSTON
Howard Jeffries, Junior - - -	A. E. MATTHEWS
Robert Underwood - - - -	JULIAN ROYCE
Captain Clinton - - - -	JAMES CAREW
Doctor Bernstein - - - -	KENYON MUSGRAVE
Mr. Bennington - - - -	CYRIL H. SWORDER
Sergeant Maloney - - - -	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Officer - - - - - -	GILBERT CLARKE
Jones - - - - - -	CLAUDE EDMONDS
Elevator Attendant - - -	ROLAND YOUNG
Mrs. Howard Jeffries, Senior -	LYDIA BILBROOKE
Mrs. Howard Jeffries, Junior -	VIOLET VANBRUGH

The Action passes in New York City, U.S.A.

[125]

Act I.—Scene 1. Robert Underwood's Art Studio, Midnight.

Scene 2. The Same, Next Morning.

Act. II. - - Richard Dexter's Office.

Act III. - - Richard Dexter's Drawing Room.

Act IV. - - A Sky Scraper in Harlem.

Intervals between Acts I. & II. 10 minutes; between II. & III. 8 minutes; between III. & IV. 6 minutes.

Miss Bilbrooke's Dresses and Furs specially designed and made by REDFERN Ltd., 26 Conduit Street, W.

Furniture supplied by SPILLMAN & Co., 101-102 St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Wigs by FOX.

General Manager Assistant Stage Manager Musical Director Business Manager	For ARTHUR BOURCHIER	WILLIAM BURCHILL CLAUDE EDMONDS ALBERT FOX THOMAS STEVENS
Acting Manager	For GARRICK RENTERS, Ltd.	JOSÉ G. LEVY

The Box Office (C. R. STUBBS) open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.

Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.

Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

This Theatre is Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH.

rchier has got a bull's-eye at last!" people aying to each other on Monday night at rrick Theatre, where Mr. Charles Klein's
"The Third Degree," which has been such ss in America, was presented under the "Find the Woman." The American name piece would be unintelligible to an English e, to whom the author supplies some novel teresting information. "The Third De-it appears, is a method employed by the n police of extorting a confession of crime suspected person. It is an ordeal by n and suggestion that lasts for hours and t a stretch. The facts, the incidents, the of evidence are gone over and analysed and again; the circumstantial chain is tighter and tighter round the accused; the occurrences are magnified into irrefutable nd pounded and pummelled into the gradueakening consciousness of the unhappy e until at last some nerve-centre must give mething must snap.

comes the real climax. The actual criminal, made of the hardest stuff, will probably
. The innocent person, if strong enough stand the terrific mental strain, has just y convinced the police captain that pere is useless, and so wins liberty; the innond weak—pestered, worried, tormented with ns until the equilibrium of reason has gone, ter exhaustion, if not quasi-delirium, has begins to perceive the appalling fact that no chance, that the evidence is all dead him. Then sometimes does it actually that he, the wholly innocent, becomes ised into the belief that he is the veritable rator of the crime.

the exposure of this cruel and questionable forms but a small part of Mr. Charles play. The pith of it is the plucky rescue innocent man from death by a little half-ed woman, without money, without influ-with only her obstinate belief and heroic
n. Robert Underwood, a dealer in objects has been embezzling the property of his nd is on the verge of arrest. As he is ting suicide he is called upon by Howard
, jun., the son of a rich New Yorker. The has fallen in love with and married, in the f his parents' opposition, a waitress at a ant, and his father has disinherited him.
tried in vain to earn his living, Jeffries,
s taken to drink, and half-intoxicates him-Underwood's apartment. The latter carries the adjacent bedroom to recover, and is isited by Mrs. Howard Jeffries, sen., to he was once engaged, who comes to implore t to carry out the threat of committing which he has made in a letter to her.
heated argument she leaves him and he himself.

e next scene we are shown Jeffries, jun., ing the torture of the "third degree." A police officer, Captain Clinton, has made mind that the case is one of murder, and ffries, jun., is the murderer. He and his t harass the wearied wretch till he repeats ically "Shot him!" which is taken down nfession of the crime. A motive has to d and Mrs. Jeffries, jun., is called in, and ator-attendant who showed in Mrs. Jeffries, asked to recognise the younger woman as to so as to support Clinton's theory that tive of the murder was jealousy. The nt cannot do so, and Mrs. Jeffries, jun., nes to get a certain celebrated lawyer
Dexter to undertake her husband's defence.
extraordinary perseverance she waits day in Dexter's outer office, he steadily re-to see her, as he is the solicitor of Jeffries who believes his son guilty, and has made promise not to take up his case. At last does give her an interview, and, bit by pricking his self-esteem and appealing to she overcomes the lawyer's objections, her d being the insinuation that he believes jun., innocent but is afraid of offending ecting but influential parent. This act is the best in the piece, and when at the end
Dexter throws old Jeffries's business over-nd announces his intention of undertaking s defence, the curtain descends amidst stic applause.

When the aid of Dexter has once been secured, and Mrs. Jeffries, sen.'s, conscience awakened, the result is assured. By accident Underwood omitted "senior" from the address of his letter to the elder lady, and Mrs. Howard, junior, in order to save the other woman's reputation, claims that the note was written to her. Howard Jefferies is saved by the evidence of this letter. His father wants to take him abroad, proceedings for divorce being commenced in his absence, and to this the week young man agrees. But Baxter has learned the truth about the letter and brings his knowledge to bear both on father and son, clearing Mrs. Jeffries, jun., completely. In the course of the play there is some spirited fencing between Baxter and Clinton, a conflict of brain and wits which it is exciting to witness. The interest is full sustained to the close of the play, when the hard-hearted father is punished by the humiliation of learning of his wife's visit to her "old flame."

CRITERION THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Messrs. Spiers & Pond, Ltd., 222, Piccadilly.

Lessees ... ... SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and MISS MARY MOORE

On TUESDAY, JUNE 18th, and every Evening at 9 o'clock.

will be produced a New Modern Comedy in Three Acts, entitled

"ANN"

By LECHMERE WORRALL.

The Very Rev. Samuel Hargraves	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Edward Hargraves (his son)	Mr. BASIL HALLAM
"Billy" (William Lloyd)	Mr. A. HYLTON ALLEN
Mrs. Hargraves	Miss FAY DAVIS
Evangeline Lipscombe	Miss JEAN CADELL
Ann Anning	Miss RENÉE KELLY

Scene—A private sitting room in a residential hotel in London.

ACT I.	An Evening in July.
ACT II.	Afternoon of the next day.
ACT III.	The same evening.

The Play produced under the personal direction of Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM.

The Scene arranged and executed by FRYERS, LTD., 6, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.

Preceded at 8.15 by

A Persian Fantasy in One Act, entitled

"The Poetasters of Ispahan"

By CLIFFORD BAX.

Hallaj	The Public Letter Writer	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
Nejrihal	A Baker	Mr. FRANK J. ARLTON
Ala'd'din	A Seller of Perfumes	Mr. BERNARD MEREFIELD
Suliman	A Barber	Mr. ALFRED WILD (By courtesy of B. Iden Payne)
Guleesh	A Miserly Silk Merchant	Mr. CAMPBELL CARGILL
Ibn-Hassim	A Wealthy Jeweller	Mr. ARCHIBALD FORBES
Silvermoon	His Daughter	Miss GLADYS PRESTON

The Play produced and the setting designed by MAURICE ELVEY.

Programme of Music.

Dances	"Nell Gwynn"	German
Fantasie	"American Airs"	Arranged
Valse	"L'Amitie"	Andrew Levey
	Dedicated to Miss Mary Moore.
Violin Solo	"Salut d'Amour"	Elgar
Hungarian Dances	.. ..	Liszt-Brahms
March	"The Kings"	Andrew Levey

MATINÉE OF BOTH PLAYS EVERY THURSDAY AT 2.30.

All Dresses in "Ann" designed and executed by ALEXANDRA, 47, Baker Street, W. Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

The Piano supplied by CRAMER & Co.

Stage Manager	Mr. EDMUND WALLER.
Musical Director	Mr. ANDREW LEVEY.
Acting Manager	Mr. H. JALLAND.

"ANN."

New Modern Comedy, in Three Acts, by Lechmere Worrall. Produced at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday, June 18.

The Very Rev. Samuel Hargraves ..... Mr. E. Holman Clark
Edward Hargraves ..... Mr. Basil Hallam
"Billy" ..... Mr. A. Hylton Allen
Mrs. Hargraves ..... Miss Fay Davis
Evangeline Lipscombe ..... Miss Jean Cadell
Ann Anning ..... Miss Renée Kelly

The new modern comedy, by Lechmere Worrall, entitled "Ann," which was produced at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday night, has one undeniable point in its favour; it introduces to us a delightful young American actress, hitherto a stranger to these shores, Miss Renée Kelly, whose personality is as piquant as her face, her voice as melodious as her name. She it is who plays Ann, an American lady journalist of great determination and resource. Ann has made up her mind to interview Edward Hargraves, a brilliant young author, in spite of his stubborn opposition to the interview. "Woman," as Ann phrases it, "is the fighting unit, man the passive resister"; and Edward, the "passive resister" in this case, is finally circumvented by Ann, the "fighting unit," who climbs into his room by means of the fire-escape. Having run her quarry to earth, Ann proceeds to lecture him for his good. The novel that has made him famous would be greater, says she, if it did not betray such a lamentable lack of the ways of love and women. Edward confesses that his mother, a woman of rare discernment and wisdom, has made the same complaint, and that to please her—and, incidentally, to remedy his own ignorance—he has, just before Ann's unceremonious entry, proposed by telephone to Miss Evangeline Lipscombe, a "papa, potatoes, prunes, and prisms" young lady, educated in the refined but limited atmosphere of a cathedral close. Ann disapproves strongly, and Edward, observing his captivating interviewer, begins to repent his precipitation. Ann promises her help in extricating him. The priggish Edward is shocked, and still more so when Ann, scurrying down the fire-escape, calls back "Maybe I'll marry you myself!"

To effect this end, the next afternoon she takes the opportunity to leave about Edward's room a number of "intimate feminine garments," which are duly discovered at a tea-party given in honour of Evangeline, who "jumps to conclusions like a kangaroo," and leaves Edward in disgust, accompanied by his worthy papa, the Very Rev. Samuel Hargraves, who shares her suspicions. "Do you believe this of me, dad?" asks his foolish son. "He does, Edward," answers his adorable mother. "A good man always does; the better the man the worse he believes," and trots out full of laughter, leaving him to the tender mercies of the unscrupulous Ann. The fickle lady attempts to coax him to forgive her foolish trick, but Edward is adamant. He will not name of her, his pride is hurt, and his pride is greater than his love—or he thinks it is. Ann thinks otherwise. Edward loves her, she is sure, and it is up to her to bring his love to boiling point. The same evening she creeps once more into his room, dons a delectable "nighty" over her evening frock, takes down her lovely golden hair, and settles herself comfortably on her host's sofa. Strange as it may appear, her ruse is successful. Edward, the "white soul of a human understanding," is subjugated, the Very Rev. Samuel is wheedled into acquiescence by the enchantress, and the lovers clasp in the final stage embrace.

125
131

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS
JUNE 20th, 21st and 22nd, at 8.15.
SATURDAY MATINEE, JUNE 22nd, at 2.30.

The Shadow of the Glen

A Play in One Act.

By J. M. SYNGE

Dan Burke (farmer and herd) ...	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Nora Burke (his wife)... ...	SARA ALLGOOD
A Herd	J. M. KERRIGAN

SCENE - The last cottage at the head of a long glen in County Wicklow.

FIRST PRODUCTION OF

MAURICE HARTE

A Play in Two Acts,

By T. C. MURRAY

Mrs. O'Connor ...	EILEEN O'DOHERTY
Ellen Harte	SARA ALLGOOD
Maurice Harte	FRED O'DONOVAN
Father Mangan	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Michael Harte	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Owen Harte	J. A. O'ROURKE
Peter Mangan	F. WRIGHT

SCENE - The living room in the house of Michael Harte, in County Cork.

Several Months elapse between Acts One and Two.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1912.

"MAURICE HARTE."

STRONG DRAMA OF IRISH RURAL LIFE.

The new two-act play "Maurice Harte," by Mr. T. C. Murray, presented by the Irish National Theatre Society at the Court Theatre, London, yesterday evening, is eloquent of the progress of liberal ideas in Ireland. Not many years ago such a play could not have been produced in Dublin; now this play—one of the strongest if most painful dramas in the repertory of the Abbey-street Theatre—is brought from there.

It is the story of a young man being educated for the priesthood who tells his parents and his brother that he cannot continue to study for the Church as he no longer feels called to it. The tragedy that follows is an exposure of the sentiment that possesses so many Irish families to have a son in the priesthood. In Mr. Murray's play we see the boy compelled by the pleadings of his father and mother to go back to the college; and in a scene of deep feeling and agony we see him brought home again, his mind having completely given way under the strain of attempting something beyond his powers.

It was one of the most perfectly acted plays of the society; and to Miss Sara Allgood, Mr. Sydney J. Morgan, and Mr. Fred O'Donovan the author as well as the audience owed a debt for the fidelity with which they presented characters from Irish rural life.

J. W.

125 133

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS

JUNE 27th, 28th and 29th, at 8.30.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON at 2.30.

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON

OF

FAMILY FAILING

A Comedy in Three Acts,

By WILLIAM BOYLE

Maria Donnelly	EILEEN O'DOHERTY
Nelty (a Servant)	KATHLEEN DRAGO
Dominic Donnelly (Maria's Brother) ...	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Joe Donnelly (Her Younger Brother) ...	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Tom Carragher (a Neighbour) ...	J. M. KERRIGAN
Mrs. Carragher (his Wife) ...	VIOLET McCARTHY
Robert Donnelly (Dominic's Uncle)	FRED O'DONOVAN
Francy Niel (a Rural Carrier) ...	MICHAEL CONNIFFE

ACT I.	The Donnelly's Parlour. Morning
ACT II.	The Same. Evening of the same day
ACT III.	The Same. Some weeks later

General Manager ... (for Mr. J. H. Leigh) ... Mr. JAMES ANNING

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1912.

"FAMILY FAILING."

HUMOURS OF LAZINESS IN AN IRISH PLAY.

There is a bright vein of comical characterisation in the new three-act light comedy, by Mr. William Boyle, "Family Failing," which the Irish National Theatre Society presented at the Court Theatre, London, yesterday evening.

The failing of the family in Mr. Boyle's play was laziness—laziness that compelled the eldest son to say that it was better to starve sitting down than standing up. Dominic Donnelly, according to his relations, was cursed by inheriting his mother's armchair; for, until an old American uncle with a reputation for wealth returned home, he never got out of the chair until it was time to go to bed. To keep up appearances, the family, on the uncle's return, pretended to be industrious and prosperous, and when the uncle appeared the shopkeepers offered unlimited credit. Some of these scenes of make-believe prosperity were intensely comical. Dominic's futile efforts to look like a real worker were irresistibly funny. The uncle—who said he never travelled without a bed—encouraged the new industriousness, while he himself sat looking on. But eventually the old man was found to be nothing more than a pauper and the laziest man ever born in the district.

The story, it will be seen, is very light and depends for its success on its humorous dialogue and characterisation rather than on its situation or construction. But Mr. Arthur Sinclair's performance as the lazy Dominic would alone make "Family Failing" well worth seeing.

J. W.

12 135

Mr. ALFRED BUTT.
Photo: Downey.

Artists

CHARLES ALDRICH
BOGANNY'S
"LUNATIC BAKERS"
WILKIE BARD
G.H. CHIRGWIN
IDA CRISPI &
FRED FARREN
PAUL CINQUEVALLI
DAVID DEVANT
LA PIA

Artists

HARRY LAUDER
CLARICE MAYNE
PIPIFAX & PANLO
ARTHUR PRINCE
THE PALACE GIRLS
ANNA PAVLOVA
GEORGE ROBEY
VESTA TILLEY
HARRY TATE
LITTLE TICH

FANNY FIELDS
BARCLAY GAMMON
ALFRED LESTER
CECILIA LOFTUS

Palace Theatre
London W.

Managing Director — Mr. Alfred Butt.

Royal Music Hall Performance
by command of
His Majesty the King
July 15th 1912

Press Rover Ticket 117

It is unnecessary to bring this ticket to the Theatre.

MUSIC-HALL COMMAND.

ROYAL MESSAGE OF THANKS AND APPRECIATION.

Mr. Alfred Butt, chairman of the Committee of Management of the royal performance at the Palace Theatre, has received the following letter:—

Buckingham Palace, July 2, 1912.

My dear Sir,—I have had the honour of receiving the King's commands to convey to the members of the Managing Committee of the music-hall command performance and to yourself the expression of their Majesties' thanks for the admirable arrangements made for their Majesties' comfort and amusement last night.

The King and the Queen will be obliged by your assuring the artistes who were on the stage that their Majesties thoroughly appreciated their talent, so equal in excellence and varied in style.

The climax of last night's success, as these ladies and gentlemen will be the first to admit, could not have been reached without skilled and willing help, both before and behind the curtain.

I am, therefore, to ask you to be so good as to express the King's and the Queen's thanks to all the members of your staff, as well as to the orchestra, for their invaluable assistance.

The decoration of the house was greatly admired by their Majesties.

The King and the Queen noted with pleasure that the audience testified by applause and enthusiasm their enjoyment of a variety performance which, if ever equalled, has certainly never been surpassed since music-halls began.—I remain, my dear Sir, yours faithfully, WILLIAM CARINGTON.

The decorations of the Palace Theatre will be retained for the remainder of the week. The souvenir programmes will also be on sale every evening.

"You ask," said Mr. Butt, "if we have decided as to the amount available from the Royal Performance for Variety Charities? We have. Just now we have, in squaring accounts, found that those charities will be the better by £2,738 13s. 5d.

THE RUSSIAN BALLET

Organized by M. SERGE DE DIAGHILEW

LE SPECTRE DE LA ROSE

Choreographic Tableau from a poem by Th. GAUTIER
Created by J. L. VAUDOYER
Music by C. M. WEBER, orchestrated by BERLIOZ
Scenes and Dances by M. FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes by L. BAKST

La jeune fille . . . Mme. TAMAR KARSAVINA
Le Spectre de la Rose . . M. NIJINSKY

Conductor . M. TCHEREPNIN

L'OISEAU DE FEU

In Two Tableaux by M. FOKINE
Music by I. STRAVINSKY
Scenes and Dances by M. FOKINE
Scenery designed by M. GOLOVINE, and executed by MM. SAPOUNOV and CHARBEV
Costumes designed by M. GOLOVINE
Costumes worn by Mmes. KARSAVINA and PILTZ designed by M. L. BAKST and executed by M. CAPP.

L'Oiseau-de Feu . . . Mme. TAMAR KARSAVINA
Ivan Tsarevitch . . . M. ADOLF BOLM
Kostchei l'Immortel . . M. CECCHETTI
La Belle Tsarevna . . . Mme. PILTZ

Courtiers, Monsters:
Mmes. NIJINSKA, TCHERNICHEVA, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., WASILEWSKA, KOPATCHINSKA, DOBROLOUBOVA, KLEMENTOVITCH, STASZKO, GULIUK, TCHEREPANOVA, MAICHERSKA
MM. KREMNEV, KOTCHETOVSKY, KOBELEV, GAVRILOV, BOURMAN, KLEGLEV
MM. SERGUEIEV, WARZYNSKI, ZAILIK, ROMANOV
MM. KOWALSKI, STATKEVITCH
MM. SEMENOV, FROMAN, FEDOROV, ROMANOV
Mmes. ASTAFIEVA, KONIETSKA, BIBER, EONIETSKA
MM. KOSTECKI, OUMANSKY, ZIELINSKI, GOUDIN
Servants:
Mmes. KOWALEWSKA, EZERSKA, KOULTCHYTZKA, JULITZKA, GOUBERT, DOMBROVSKA, HOHLOVA
Monsters, Pages, Cavaliers de suite, Cavaliers de ronde, etc.

Conductor . M. TCHEREPNIN

Stage Director: M. O. ALLEGRI
Assistant Stage Manager: M. S. GRIGORIEV

THE RUSSIAN BALLET

THAMAR

Choreographic Drama in One Act by M. L. BAKST
Music by M. BALAKIREV
Scenes and Dances by M. MICHEL FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes designed by M. L. BAKST
Scenery executed by MM. CHARBEV and SOUDEJKINE
Costumes executed by Mlle. MUELLE

Thamar, Reine de Georgie . Mme. TAMAR KARSAVINA
Le Prince . . . M. ADOLF BOLM

Amies de Thamar:
Mmes. NIJINSKA, PILTZ, TCHERNYSHOVA, WASILEWSKA, KONIETSKA, KOPYTSINSKA, KLEMENTOVITCH, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., MAICHERSKA, STASZKO, TCHEREPANOVA

Zerghins: MM. KREMNEV, BOURMAN, SEMENOV, KOTCHETOVSKY, FROMAN, FEDOROV, ROMANOV, RACHMANOV, GAVRILOV, ZOBOIKO, SERGUEIEV, KOBELEV

Servantes: Mmes. KOWALEWSKA, DOBROLOUBOVA, GULIUK, KOULTCHYTZKA, HOHLOVA, EZERSKA, JULITZKA, DOMBROVSKA

THAMAR— continued

Serviteurs de Thamar:
MM. WARZYNSKI, ZAILIK, STATKEVITCH, KEGLER, KOSTECKI, GOUDIN, OUMANSKY, ZIELINSKI

Conductor . Mr. THOMAS BEECHAM

THE scene lies in a beautiful castle amid the snows of the Dariel, where Queen Thamar holds a perpetual fête. Lying in front of a large window, Thamar surveys the mountain, the roads, and the river Terek, the turbulent waters of which surround her dwelling.

Suddenly she rises.

A stranger, who has lost his way, approaches. He hesitates, and surveys the castle.

She sends servants, and commands that he shall be brought before her.

The stranger is very tired and cold. A sort of hood hides his head. The Queen tears off the hood and discovers a beautiful young man astonished at all this pomp. The servants adorn him, and surround him and the Queen, encouraging them to dance.

Day breaks; the servants open the shutters. All are still very animated and excited. The Queen continues to dance, but suddenly rushes at the young man, stabs him, and pushes him, through a narrow door, into the river.

Again Queen Thamar surveys the mountain, the roads, and the river Terek. Her eyes follow the corpse which the water holds.

Suddenly she rises. A stranger who has lost his way approaches. He hesitates, and surveys the castle.

It was a judicious move on the part of Messrs. Waller and Fredk. Melville to revive "Ben-my-Chree" at the Princes Theatre on Wednesday. The drama was first produced at the Princess's Theatre on May 17, 1888, with Mr. Wilson Barrett as Dan Mylrea, Miss Eastlake as Mona, Mr. Chas. Fulton as Ewan Mylrea, Mr. Austin Melford as Thorkell Mylrea, Mr. John Maclean as Gilchrist Mylrea, Mr. H. Cooper-Cliffe as Mr. Harcourt, Mr. Murray Carson as Ned Teare, and Mr. J. Welch as Michael Looney. Since then "Ben-my-Chree" has been one of the most popular plays with provincial audiences, having the strength of deep elemental human passions—love, jealousy, and hatred being racy of the strange, rough Manx soil to which the author transports us; and bringing into the playhouse an atmosphere of a simple, secluded island community, with a moral standard of its own, a legal code of its own, and a curious ecclesiastical system of its own. "Ben-my-Chree" is an exception to the rule that plays with serious interest do not win lasting popularity. The notion of the piece is too familiar to need re-description. We can all recall the strong points of "Ben-my-Chree"—the quarrel between the two brothers about a girl, the murder of Ewan by Dan, his trial for murder, and his confession of the crime. The incidents of the drama are well remembered by the playgoers of London and the provinces, and were warmly applauded by the audience at the Princes on Wednesday evening.

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3rd, AT 7-45,
AND NIGHTLY AT 7-45.

MATINEES—Wednesday & Saturday at 2-30.

THE INTERESTING PLAY,

BEN-MY-CHREE

(GIRL OF MY HEART)

By HALL CAINE and WILSON BARRETT.

Music by MICHAEL CONNELLY.
Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Dan Mylrea, son of Bishop Mylrea		Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Ewan Mylrea		Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Thorkell Mylrea, the Deemster		Mr. FELIX PITT
Gilchrist Mylrea, Bishop of Man		Mr. WILLIAM LUGG
Davy Fayle ...	Fishermen	Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD
Billy Quilleash ...		Mr. EDWIN GRIFFEN
Ned Teare ...		Mr. RONALD ADAIR
Jim Callow ...		Mr. H SMITH
Michael Looney ...		Mr. WILLIAM ALLEN
Jabez Gawn		Mr. WILSON BLAKE
Mr. Harcourt, Governor of the Island		Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
Jem Curphey, Blacksmith		Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Hommy Beg, Servant of the Deemster		Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Coroner		Mr CHARLES CLEVELAND
Kitty, Servant to the Deemster ..		Miss ALICE BELMORE
Liza Teare ...	Fishwives	Miss BETTY MELTON
Nancy		Miss PEGGY NELSON
Kathleen		Miss MARJORIE DAY

and

Mona Mylrea, Daughter of the Deemster Miss JESSIE WINTER

Fishermen, Fishwives, Townspeople, Soldiers.

Act 1	= =	GARDENS OF BALLAMONA
		Mona, my darling!
Act 2	= = =	POOLVASH BEG
		My life for my sister's honour.
Act 3	= = =	THE TYNWALD
The Sentence.		Alone let him live—Alone let him die.
Act 4, Scene 1		INTERIOR OF BISHOP'S COURT
		The Love Message.
Scene 2	= =	VIEW OF THE COAST
		Alone.
Scene 3		EXTERIOR OF BISHOP'S COURT
		The Prodigal's return.
Scene 4	= =	INTERIOR OF CHAPEL
		Girl of my heart.

Costumes executed by JOHN HYMAN, 19 Leicester Square, W.C.
Scenery by LYCEUM STUDIO and FRANCIS BULL.

The Orchestra under the Direction of ALEXANDER HUMPHREYS will play the following selections:—

OVERTURE	"Ben-my-Chree"	Connelly
FANTASIA	"Carmen"	Bizet
SELECTION	"The Arcadians" ...	Monckton & Talbot
ENTR'ACTES ...	(a) "Dawn"	A. E. Matt
	(b) "Brüderlein Fein"	Leo Fall

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. G. GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager .. .. WILSON BLAKE

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Waters, J.

12 141

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1912.

MISS E. ASQUITH AS ACTRESS.

By permission of Mrs. Waldorf Astor a performance of Sir John Vanbrugh's 200-year-old comedy "The Confederacy" was given in her drawing-room in St. James's-square last evening by an organisation known as the Theatre in Eyre. The entertainment was presented in aid of the Victoria League, and an explanatory note printed on the programme—which was otherwise conceived in a truly sober spirit—stated that: "In spite of its title, the play bears no reference to the present political situation."

Last night's company handled the materials deftly enough, and overcame to some extent the handicap of getting the illusion on a stage not much larger than a pantry. The Premier's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Asquith, played the part of Corinna with much charm, and the conspiracy of the two wives was spiritedly enacted by Miss Marcelle Du Cros and Lady Eileen Elliot. A success of curiosity would be, perhaps, the best verdict on play and players. J. W.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS,

JULY 11th, 12th and 13th, at 8.30.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON at 2.30.

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON OF

THE COUNTESS CATHLEEN

A PLAY IN FIVE SCENES,

By W. B. YEATS

Produced by NUGENT MONCK

Mary Rua	... NELL BYRNE
Teig Rua	... U. WRIGHT
Shemus Rua	PATRICK MURPHY
The Countess Cathleen	...MAIRE O'NEILL
Oona (her Nurse)	...MON O'BEIRNE
Aleel	FRED. O'DONOVAN
First Merchant... ...	... HERBERT HEWETSON
Second Merchant	J. M. KERRIGAN
Steward	H. E. HUTHINSON

Peasants, Servants, Angelical Beings, Spirits.

The Scene is laid in Ireland and in Old Times.

SCENE I.	The House of Shemus Rua
SCENE II.	A Wood
SCENE III.	Hall in the House of Countess Cathleen
SCENE IV.	A Wood
SCENE V.	The House of Shemus Rua

Waters, J.

15 1173

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1912.

"COUNTESS KATHLEEN."

MR. W. B. YEATS'S NEW PLAY AT THE COURT THEATRE.

The Irish Theatre Society made a distinct departure last evening from the general character of its offerings at the Court Theatre by presenting a play based on a tale of folk lore. Mr. W. B. Yeats, the author, has, in the notes appended to his recently published version of this play, been at some pains to explain that he could not obtain absolute information regarding the origin of the legend that inspired him to write "The Countess Kathleen."

In a somewhat different version he had given this play to Dublin thirteen years ago, and then had the exciting experience of finding it necessary to send for a score of police to prevent some objecting students from interrupting the performance.

The first public performance of "The Countess Kathleen" in London last evening occasioned not a suspicion of discontent in any part of the crowded theatre. On the contrary, this curious legend of early Christian Ireland—in which the ministers of the devil, the spirits of the woods and air, are as real to the starving peasants as the angels of Christian belief—was listened to with rapt attention.

The story is far from complex, and depends more for its interest on the imagery of some of the poet's lines rather than on the incidents of the lady of the land, who, to save her poor dependents from the tortures of the famine, sold her soul to the devil and gave the money in charity. This legend, written in five short scenes that followed each other with not more than a moment's interruption, was acted throughout with quite extraordinary reverence and a sense of poetry that could not fail to impress.

The stage effects and mounting, although of the simplest and most inexpensive kind, were a help, not a hindrance, to the drama, which was played on a stage without footlights, lighted for the greater part of the performance by arc lamps placed in one of the circles.

J. W.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

ONDON, MONDAY, JULY 15.

ONDON OPERA HOUSE.

END OF THE SEASON.

a "gala performance," as it was styled, ended urday night Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's second gu at the house he built and dedicated to Kingsway. In respect of the works it has roduced, the season now brought to a close proved very momentous, and anything like hy retrospect of its doings is hardly called or many and obvious reasons interest centred in the production of Lord Howard de and Mr. Joseph Holbrooke's Cymric music- "Children of Don," and if that work, in so it failed to realise the expectations of those hoped that it might advance the cause of opera, proved a disappointment, yet Mr. erstein must have credit for his enterprise in it a hearing. A complete list of the operas in the course of a three months' season d in our columns on Saturday, and there is to repeat it. But one may note that Offen- "Tales of Hoffmann" takes pride of place as the number of performances it secured— and that "La Traviata" stands at the of the list, having been given but once. The oreign novelty brought to a hearing was el's "Don Quichotte," a work quite charac- of its composer, and possessing charm rather alities of a more arresting order. But at t enjoyed the advantage, like most of Mr. erstein's productions, of beautiful staging, introduced us, moreover, in Mr. Lafont—who ed in the title-part—to an artist of command- rits.

ously the closing performance calls for no discussion. Its attractions were of the kind ribed as miscellaneous, the programme con- of operatic "snippets." To many people the crowded audience the most interesting of the evening, probably, was Mr. Hammer- speech, in which, as will be seen below, the manager spoke of his heavy losses and pro- nevertheless, to try his luck again in the —an announcement received with immense asm.

that matter, the whole evening was one of asm. The Venice scene from "Tales of nn"; the second act of "Rigoletto," with elice Lyne (also heard later in the "Shadow from "Dinorah") as Gilda, Mr. Orville as the Duke, and Mr. Vilmos Beck as the a scene from Massenet's "Herodiade," as Madame Augusta Doria and Mr. Henry Miss Victoria Farr's performance of the ene from "Hamlet"; Madame Jeanne singing of the Jewel Song from "Faust"— things, among others, called forth the t tributes, and everybody seemed happy. ola and Mr. Ernaldy were the conductors.

MR. HAMMERSTEIN'S LOSSES.

Cheerful in adversity and modest in manner, Mr. Hammerstein addressed Saturday's audience from the stage, and let them into some of his secrets, financial and otherwise. He spoke of heavy losses as one accustomed to such trifling matters, assumed a tone half-earnest, half-jocular, and had his reward in a tremendous ovation. He was not always quite audible, but a good deal that he said was clear enough, and excited sympathetic interest and applause, as well as laughter on occasion. Some time ago, he mentioned, one of his artists sued him. That was nothing new. She sued him for breach of promise. He had promised to let her sing—and didn't. That was the breach of promise. He had produced his books, showing the receipts of his establishment during the opera season. During the seven months in which he had produced grand opera in London he had lost over £45,000. (A voice, "Shame.") He recalled his production of "Don Quichotte"—one of Massenet's most popular creations. On the first night the public assembled in great multitudes, and the receipts were £85. From that they dwindled to £51 at the last performance of the work. The question arose: Was it his fault, or the fault of the public? ("Not your fault, sir," shouted someone.) But he had not come before them to whine, and be indignant. He would only tell them that he had been warned before he came to London that he was going to present grand opera to an absolutely uneducated public. Musically, though, he believed he was coming before a public that desired all his best efforts. But operatically they were uneducated. Love for grand opera must be inherited. It must come from generation to generation. That was why the Governments of other countries—all except America—built and subsidised opera houses. They considered grand opera the most educational form of music. It was a mystery to him how the London public allowed themselves to be without it. Why did they not ask their County Council or their Ministers to build them an opera houses? They had a right to it. (A Voice: "We have taxes enough already.") He was not such a rich man as to be able to continue indefinitely such an undertaking. He had a mortgage on the building amounting to some £40,000. Any other man would have said good-bye to the enterprise. But he was proud of having created such an organisation. Nearly everything and everybody connected with it—except some of the leading artists—was English, and he took the opportunity of saying that finer voices could not be heard anywhere in the world than in this country, and the love of music here was inborn.

What was he to do? Devote that house to music-hall purposes? ("No.") In his opinion it would be a crime. With the little brain he possessed he had tried hard to solve the problem. He was alone in the enterprise. Not a solitary soul besides himself was interested in it to the tune of a penny. It was his inborn love for his profession that enabled him to face disaster. He had no desire for wealth. He was an enthusiast, a musician, and to withdraw now would be to him horrible. He had struggled against it, and it was a terrible thought to him to contemplate giving up that beautiful edifice and slinking away.

"And so," Mr. Hammerstein concluded, "I am going to give opera again." A great burst of cheering greeted this announcement, whereupon Mr. Hammerstein added that he would be here again in the middle of November, and would end "when you don't come again."

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Miss ADA POTTER'S SEASON

MONDAY, JULY 15th, at 8.30,

The Ideal Wife

By MARCO PRAGA

Translated from the Italian of "La Moglie Ideale,"
By Mrs. T. C. CRAWFORD.

Gustavo Velati	(a Lawyer) ...	Mr. C. M. HALLARD
Andrea Campiani	(a Stockbroker)	Mr. CLARENCE BLAKISTON
Giannino (his Son) ...	...	Master FRANK BERESFORD
Constanzo Monticelli	(Velati's Partner)	Mr. LESLIE FABER
Teresa ...	... ...	Mrs. JAMES HEARN
Ettore ...	... ...	... Mr. FRED PENLEY
Julia Campiani	(Wife of Campiani)	... Miss ADA POTTER

ACT I. ...	Dining Room at Andrea Campiani's House
ACT II. ...	Sitting Room in Gustavo Velati's House
ACT III. ...	Drawing Room at the Campianis' House

Miss Ada Potter's Dresses by SHERIDAN & HOUSE, 6, Lansdowne Place, Russell Square.

The Play Produced by Mr. NORMAN McKINNELL.

Preceded at 8.0 by a Comedy in One Act,

FOR PEACE AND QUIET

Adapted by Mrs. MAX O'REILL

John Stoker	... ...	Mr. LESLIE FABER
Valerie Stoker	....	Mrs. LESLIE FABER
Scene	... ...	John Stoker's Study

Mrs. Leslie Faber's Dress by MADAME MOLLIE, 99, Regent Street.

Furniture supplied by Messrs. SPILLMAN. Plate by WALKER & HALL

Programme of Music

MARCH ...	... "A Bunch of Roses" ...	...	Chapi
FANTASIE ...	... "Cavallario Rusticana" ...	...	Mascagni
SELECTION ...	... "The Pink Lady" ...	...	Ivan Caryll
POTPOURRI ...	... "Princess Caprice" ...	...	Leo Fall

Musical Director - - - EDWARD JONES

General Manager, Stage Manager } For Miss Ada Potter { RICHARD T. MAYNARD, FRED PENLEY

Ices, Tea and Coffee can be had of the Attendants

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co., Ltd.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 2 and 8. Commence at 2.30 and 8.30

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office, (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10

Business Manager (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) MR. HERBERT CLARK

First produced by Eleonora Duse at Turin, the English translation of this piece, by Mrs. T. C. Crawford, had a preliminary canter at Crosby Hall in May, when Miss Ada Potter appeared in the leading female part for two performances. As may be remembered, "The Ideal Wife" is Julia Campiani, whose temperament and adaptability enable her, whilst for two years the passionate lover of Velati, a lawyer, to discharge to the full all her duties to her unsuspecting husband, Andrea, and their little son, Giannino. But Velati, tired of the liaison and wishing to marry, finds Julia's amiability an obstacle, especially as he has not the moral courage to explain that he no longer loves her. Convinced at last that the break must be final, the woman reconciles herself to the situation, insisting, nevertheless, on her right to have outward appearances respected by an apparently gradual withdrawal, so that her husband's confidence may remain unimpaired.

and was preceded by a comedy in one act, adapted by Mrs. Max O'Reill, entitled

"FOR PEACE AND QUIET."

John Stoker .....Mr. Leslie Faber
Valerie Stoker .....Mrs. Leslie Faber

This also treats of matrimonial difficulties, but of a lighter nature. Valerie, the irresponsible young wife of John Stoker, literary man and long-suffering husband, comes to demand her periodic allowance, only to find that it has been swallowed up in fines. These have been inflicted by her husband for various wifely failings as a final attempt to secure immunity from constant outbursts of temper and consequent interruptions to work. But, in the present case, Valeria had anticipated her allowance by purchasing an expensive "hall lamp with stained-glass panels," an unnecessary article which has been an object of dispute between them; and she has given a promise to pay signed with her husband's name. After various ineffectual attempts to move him, she is obliged to make a clean breast of the matter, and, "for peace and quietness," he gives in, this time, to a wife who is just beginning to appreciate her husband at his real worth.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Tuesday

16/7/1912

Orch. Stall

E 18

This to be retained

To-Night, Tuesday, July 16th, at 9 o'clock
Mr. CYRIL MAUDE begs to announce
Miss HORNIMAN'S COMPANY
From the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester
In a Lancashire Play, called

HINDLE WAKES

By STANLEY HOUGHTON.

Mrs. HAWTHORN	Miss ADA KING
CHRISTOPHER HAWTHORN	Mr. LEONARD MUDIE
FANNY HAWTHORN	Miss EDYTH GOODALL
Mrs. JEFFCOTE	Miss DAISY ENGLAND
NATHANIEL JEFFCOTE	Mr. HERBERT LOMAS
ADA	Miss HILDA DAVIES
ALAN JEFFCOTE	Mr. J. V. BRYANT
Sir TIMOTHY FARRAR	Mr. EDWARD LANDOR
BEATRICE FARRAR	Miss SYBIL THORNDIKE

ACT I. Scene 1—Kitchen of the Hawthorns' House, 137, Burnley Road, Hindle. Bank Holiday, Monday, August 6th, 9 p.m.
Scene 2—Breakfast-room of the Jeffcotes' House, Bank Top, Hindle Vale. The same night, 10.30 p.m.
Scene 3—The same, 1 a.m.
ACTS II. and III. The same, Tuesday Evening.

Produced by Mr. LEWIS CASSON.

Preceded, at 8.20, by

MAKESHIFTS

A Comedy, in One Act, by GERTRUDE L. ROBINS.

CAROLINE	Miss ADA KING
DOLLY	Miss SYBIL THORNDIKE
Mr. THOMPSON	Mr. HERBERT LOMAS
ALBERT SMYTHE	Mr. LEONARD MUDIE

Scene:—A Suburban Sitting-room.

Director ...	For Miss A. E. F. Horniman	Mr. Lewis Casson
Business Manager ...		Mr. Edwin T. Heys
Acting Manager ...		Mr. H. Chiswell Billing
Stage Manager ...		Mr. Edward Broadley

GENERAL MANAGER . . . . . Mr. ALFRED TURNER

Mr. Stanley Houghton's fine play of Lacashire life, "Hindle Wakes," was first produced a few weeks ago by the Stage Society, when it received due notice in these columns; but it is worthy of a second detailed notice on its public production at the Playhouse last Tuesday. It is acted as before by Miss Horniman's company from the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, and when we say that the play and the acting are worthy one of the other, we give each highest praise. "Hindle Wakes" is a human, virile, courageous play; from the opening scene it arouses one's interest and grips one's sympathies. The acting is beautifully artistic in its fine restraint and its glorious equality. The story tells of a factory owner's son of Hindle in Lancashire who takes one of his father's mill hands to spend a week-end with him at Llandudno. The girl is supposed by her parents to be with a friend at Blackpool, and it is through the accidental death by drowning of this friend on the Sunday that the truth is brought to light. Fanny Hawthorn's parents, honest, respectable people, are shocked, but philosophical. "It's what happens to many a lass," says the father; "I never thowt it would happen to mine." The mother "talks rather bitter like" at first, but is willing to admit her daughter's cleverness if she can use the incident as a means to become a rich man's wife—"plenty of girls make good matches that way," she philosophises. Off goes Christopher Hawthorn, the father, to his old friend, now the rich mill owner, Nathaniel Jeffcote, and tells the story of his daughter's betrayal. Nathaniel, all sympathy, promises to see that the girl is righted; and even when he learns that the culprit is his own son, Alan, the fine old man does not waver in his resolve.

But Alan, who is on the point of marriage with a girl to whom he is deeply attached, refuses to wed Fanny Hawthorn, in spite of his father's threats to disinherit him. His mother upholds his resolve; but Beatrice, his fiancée, sees the matter differently. She has strong religious convictions; and her definite standard of morals points to Fanny's prior right to Alan's name. Nevertheless, Beatrice's renunciation, Nathaniel's threats, Alan's sullen acceptance, all go for nothing. Fanny "won't be driven not any road," and in a magnificent outburst of pride she refuses to be "made an honest woman of" by Alan. She is fond of him, yes, they have had a very good time together; but he is only her "fancy" as she was his. He is not "man" enough to become her husband; she is strong and daring enough to claim an equal moral code. Untamed, defiant, magnificent in her self-assertion, Fanny marches off to face the future where some day she will find her true mate awailing her.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. FRANK CURZON.

Under the Sole Management of W. H. C. NATION.

PRODUCTION OF A NEW COMEDY IN TWO ACTS.

On MONDAY, AUGUST 5th, AND FOLLOWING EVENINGS AT 8

Will be presented a New Comedy in Two Acts, Adapted from

L'ONCLE BAPTISTE by EMILE SOUVESTRE

Originally produced at the Theatre du Gymnase, Paris, entitled

FALLING HIS CREST

Paul Dupont, Inventor and Manufacturer of Machines ... Mr. DAVID BARNETT
Baptiste Dupont, his brother, a Mechanician ... ... Mr. BUCHANAN WAKE
Quentin, a Commercial Traveller, afterwards a Big Financier ... Mr. HUGH MARLEIN
Arthur de Restoul, a Civil Engineer of the Government for Bridges and Roads ... ... Mr. LESLIE RYECROFT
Baron de Verneux ... ... Mr. RICHARD COWELL
Benoit, Paul Dupont's Cashier ... ... Mr. TERRY HURST
Lolotte, Baptiste Dupont's Wife ... ... Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW
Louise ... ... Miss JOAN WILLOUGHBY
Emma, Paul Dupont's Daughter ... ... Miss PHYLLIS BIRKETT

ACT I. ... ... Paul Dupont's Cotton Mill, near Orleans

ACT II. ... ... Paul Dupont's Residence in Paris

To be followed by the Musical and Satirical Play, in Three Scenes, introducing several New Songs by W. H. C. NATION, entitled

THE LAND OF NONLOCIA

Florian, Prince of Logria, travelling in disguise ... ... Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW
Coriander ... ... Mr. HUGH MARLEIN
Phormio ... ... Mr. CHARLES HANBURY
Arbutus, King of Nonlocia ... ... Mr. DAVID BARNETT
Mercutio, First Lord in Waiting ... ... Miss LORNA DELLAR
Princess Iris, Daughter of the King ... ... Miss DOROTHY HOBBS
Amaryllis, Lady in Waiting ... ... Miss FLORENCE LINDLEY
Lord Goldsticko ... ... Miss WINIFRED HAYS
Lord Silverstick ... ... Miss ZOE VASHTI

Lords, Ladies, Guards, Attendants, etc., etc.

Scenery by HEMSLEY. Costumes and Wigs by CLARKSON.

"The Orphaned Little Sweeps." Imitated from a French Ballad by W. H. C. Nation. Sung by Miss Dorothy Hobbs
"The Reverse of the Medal." Written by W. H. C. Nation. Composed by Napoleon Lambelet. Sung by Mr. Charles Hanbury
"The Little Cabin Boy." Imitated from a French Tyrolienne by W. H. C. Nation. Sung by Miss Una Bruckshaw
"An Old Established Inn."* Written by W. H. C. Nation. Composed by Napoleon Lambelet. Sung by Miss Lorna Dellar
"The Magic Mirror." Written by W. H. C. Nation. Composed by Napoleon Lambelet. Sung by Mr. Charles Hanbury
"The Woodcutter" Imitated from a French Rustic Song by W. H. C. Nation. Sung by Mr. Hugh Marlein
"The Reaper." Imitated from a French Harvest Song by W. H. C. Nation. Sung by Miss Florence Lindley and Chorus
"Love in Winter." Written by W. H. C. Nation. Composed by H. G. B. Hunt, F.R.S.E., Mus. B. (Oxon.) Sung by Miss Una Bruckshaw
"The Anti-Jingo Blacksmith." Imitated from the French by W. H. C. Nation. Sung by Mr. Hugh Marlein

* The Words of this Song are to be found in the Third Illustrated Edition of Mr. W. H. C. NATION'S Work, "PRICKLY PEAR BLOSSOMS" (Published by GAY & HANCOCK, 12 Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.).

Scene 1 ... ... The Gardens of the King's Summer Palace
Scene 2 ... ... A Room in the Palace overlooking a Cornfield.
Scene 3 ... ... The Gardens

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. T. H. FRIEND
MUSICAL DIRECTOR AND CONDUCTOR ... ... Mr. NAPOLEON LAMBELET

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.

Doors open at 7.30. Commence at 8.

Having had, during the last six years, nine half a dozen seasons of several months' duration apiece, at Terry's, the Gaiety, and the Royalty, that undaunted veteran Dovonian, Mr. William Hamilton Barrington Nation, bobbed up again serenely at another theatrical local habitation, this time Wyndham's, on Monday, when, before a noisy and unkindly boisterous Bank Holiday audience, he presented a double bill of the kind now familiar to his supporters. Thus, it opened with another of his adaptations from the French, and ended with a musical piece, containing several of those melodious songs so skilfully imitated from French ditties by Mr. Nation, who once more has Mr. T. H. Friend as his acting manager and treasurer, and Mr. Napoleon Lambelet for musical director and conductor. Falling His Crest, described as a new comedy, in two acts, which started the programme on Monday, is an adaptation of Emile Souvestre's L'Oncle Baptiste, originally produced a good many years back at the Gymnase. Mr. Nation has preserved the Gallic names and locale and the post-Restoration period, whilst introducing into the dialogue many touches of pithy humour, presumably his own. In his English version, Falling His Crest (a not especially significant title) is a domestic drama of a type formerly very popular, and, capably played, it seemed to cause considerable interest at this first performance at Wyndham's. The Uncle Baptiste of the French title is a "free-and-easy" rough diamond, an honest old workman, brother of Paul Dupont, a cotton manufacturer, who seems to be more skilful in inventions than in actual matters of business, to judge from his surprise and perturbation when he discovers that his affairs are in a state of financial embarrassment. From this position Paul is, of course, extricated by the savings of Baptiste, grievously offended twice in the course of the action because the inventor had seemed to be ashamed of the homely manners of his humble brother and the latter's suspicious and meddlesome wife, Lolotte. It was, indeed, to further the marriage of his daughter Emma with Arthur de Restoul, her cousin, a young engineer with the incubus of a stiff-backed Baron for an uncle, that Paul Dupont had left Orleans for Paris, refusing the loan of 42,000 francs that Baptiste had just won in a lawsuit. This sum the inventor is only too glad to accept in the second act, after his fine friends are forsaking him through Baptiste, in drink and in choler, blurting out a true story (which he had thought to be a fiction) that Paul was in dire straits, and in urgent need of money. Speedily repairing the harm done by his faux pas, Uncle Baptiste also smoothes over the matrimonial difficulties of Emma and young De Restoul by threatening to expose the former cowardice of the very starchy other uncle, the Baron de Verneux, who had, years before, been a regimental comrade of Baptiste. This effective character was played on Monday in a suitably bluff and downright manner by Mr. Buchanan Wake, with capable support from Miss Una Bruckshaw as Lolotte and Mr. David Barnett as Paul. Miss Phyllis Birkett gave a very pleasing embodiment of Emma, whose lover, with his uncle, had passable exposition from Mr. Leslie Ryecroft and Mr. Richard Cowell. Mr. Hugh Marlein acted briskly as Quentin, a time-serving financier.

As for that musical and satirical play, The Land of Nonlocia, which had some success at the Royalty in the spring and summer of last year, it did not meet with favour from an unruly section of "the gods" at Wyndham's on Bank Holiday. In the circumstances one must note the plucky efforts made by the company in general, and in particular by MONDAY, AUGUST 12th, 1912, at 8.30.

Matinee every Wednesday at 2.30.

MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH'S SEASON.

An Original Comedy, entitled

"READY MONEY"

By JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Jackson Ives	An International Character	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Stephen Baird	Owner of "Sky Rocket" Mine	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
William Stewart	Of the "Garden Estates" Co.	Mr. FRANK DENTON
Sydney Rosenthal	Of the "Equality" Insurance	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Sam Welch	A Millionaire's Son	Mr. TOM SHELFORD
Sumner Holbrook	A Broker	Mr. ROBERT RENDEL
James E. Morgan	Owner of "Safety" Mine	Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Hon. John H. Tyler	A retired Business man	Mr. HARRY CANE
Captain West	U.S. Secret Service	Mr. FRANKLYN ROBERTS
Hammond		Mr. HUBERT WILLIS
Quin		Mr. EDWARD THIRLBY
Flynn		Mr. JAMESON THOMAS
Nell	Welch's Manservant	Mr. FRANK TENNANT
Paul	Maitre D'Hôtel	Mr. CECIL ROSE
Reddy	Office Boy	Mr. WILLIAM MANNING
Miss Grace Tyler		Miss HILDA ANTONY
Miss Ida Tyler		Miss ALICE RUSSON
Mrs. John Tyler		Miss MAY WHITTY
Miss Margaret Elliott		Miss DOROTHY THOMAS

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. .. .. .. Welch's Chambers, Fifth Avenue, New York.—Time—11.15 p.m., New Year's Eve.
ACT II. .. .. 11 a.m. New Year's Morning. The same.
ACT III. .. .. The next day at 22, Wall Street.

Produced under the direction of MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

PRECEDED AT 8 BY

"AN OBJECT LESSON"

By FREDERIC SARGENT.

Mark Graffam	A Barrister	Mr. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Marie Graffam	His wife	Miss LILLEMORE HALVORSEN
Noel Frobisher	Their friend	Mr. FRANK TENNANT

Gowns and hats from Debenham & Freebody, Wigmore Street. Furniture by Oetzmann & Co. Floral Decorations by J. Russell, Haverstock Hill. Ascherberg-Perzina Piano used in this Theatre. The Perfumed Fans supplied by L. T. Piver & Cie, of Paris.

Programme of Music.

Before "An Object Lesson"—Overture "Raymond" .. .. .. A. Thomas
Before "Ready Money"—Selection of Irish Melodies.
Before Act II.—Violin Solo (Selected) .. MR. ALBERT CAZABON.
Berceuse
Spring Dance .. .. Grieg
Before Act III.—French Suite .. .. Bach

Acting Manager	for Mr. Allan Aynesworth	Mr. HARRY ELMER
Stage Manager		Mr. HARRY CANE
Assistant Stage Manager		Mr. JAMESON THOMAS
General Manager	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	Mr. A. F. HENDERSON

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1912.

"READY MONEY."

ROLLICKING AMERICAN COMEDY.

Jackson Ives .....Mr. Allan Aynesworth.
Stephen Baird .....Mr. Kenneth Douglas.
William Stewart .....Mr. Frank Denton.
Sydney Rosenthal .....Mr. A. E. Benedict.
Sam Welch .....Mr. Tom Shelford.
Sumner Holbrook .....Mr. Robert Rendel.
James E. Morgan .....Mr. Owen Roughwood.
Hon. John H. Tyler .....Mr. Harry Cane.
Miss Grace Tyler .....Miss Hilda Antony.
Miss Ida Tyler .....Miss Alice Russon.
Mrs. John Tyler .....Miss May Whitty.
Miss Margaret Elliott .....Miss Dorothy Thomas.

America has sent London a new play funny and exciting enough to draw crowded audiences to the New Theatre for many a day to come. It was introduced there last evening by Mr. Allan Aynesworth, to inaugurate his actor-managership, and, to use an American phrase of the theatre, it "handed out" laughs and thrills without one moment's cessation.

"Ready Money" is the title of this comical detective drama, invented and written by Mr. James Montgomery, an American dramatist hitherto unknown in this country. There is money all over the play and detectives are racing at full speed to try and discover where it came from. "Ready Money" is a play of gold mines, financiers, and police; a hero made rich by an adventurer's counterfeit bank-notes, and no one a penny the poorer for the trick.

I is a breathless business, in which everybody in the story does just what the audience hopes they will do. It is full of the most comical exaggeration: even the hotel waiter admits to having made fifty thousand dollars by tips. Finally, in sore distress, the hero honours counterfeit bank notes. From that moment he is literally surrounded by police. Never before did detectives put men through such an ordeal of cross-examination, and never before did detectives meet with such a defeat. The brilliant adventurer beat them at every turn, the hero did nearly as well.

It is all capital sport of the stage; intensely funny because it is all taken—as it ought to be—half-seriously, and last night's audience shouted and laughed at the Mephistopheles-like adventurer that Mr. Aynesworth gave them with such good humour, and at the innocent daring of the get-rich-quick hero that Mr. Kenneth Douglas enacted with such admirably assumed innocence.

It was the first play of the new season, and the laughter that followed it was the best criticism.

J. W.

NEW THEATRE

E
12/8/1912

Orch. Stall
D 58
To be retained
LEFT

"You must have money to get money" is the axiom that Jackson Ives hammers at the head of young Stephen Baird, his three weeks' acquaintance in "Ready Money." Poor Stephen is in a desperate plight, "living a hand-to-mouth existence, with his hand getting longer every day," and reduced to his last "quarter" on New Year's Eve in New York. His only asset is an apparently worthless gold mine in Arizona which will cease to be his on Jan. 2 unless he can find 20,000 dollars by that date. Stephen sees as little chance of getting the money as the moon; and when Mr. Ives presents him with fifty thousand-dollar bills as a loan his gratitude is great, and he burns to make some repayment in other than kind. Mr. Ives is not slow to test his gratitude; binding him to secrecy, he informs the horrified Stephen that he (Ives) is a counterfeiter—a great artist at the game. The notes that Stephen holds are magnificent forgeries, "better than the originals." But Ives is a marked man. Captain West, of the U.S. Secret Service, is on his track, and is only waiting until he can put his hand on sufficient evidence. Stephen is at first indignant, then interested and curious, as Ives divulges his scheme. He does not suggest for an instant that Stephen shall be guilty of dishonesty; he knows his man too well for that. All that he shall do is to show the "ready money" and await the results, in which Ives proposes to share. Out of curiosity, Stephen agrees.

The effect is instantaneous. Everyone jumps to the conclusion that Stephen's mine has turned out trumps; his friends are eager to share his good luck; his popularity goes up by leaps and bounds; cheques for shares are thrust upon him; congratulations deafen him; and the New Year finds a silent and bewildered Stephen displaying in one hand a sheaf of cheques, and in the other a wad of counterfeit notes. The next day he attempts to put matters right. He assures his friends that the mine is still worthless, no gold has been discovered, and he will return their cash; but as he can give no explanation for the "ready money" he had shown, they refuse to believe him, and reproach him with wishing to keep a good thing to himself. Matters are further complicated by the arrival of Ives with startling news. The "'tecs" have discovered his whereabouts, and, finding no evidence at his rooms, are hot on his bee's. The notes are still in the possession of honest Stephen, and, if found, he also is liable to arrest. Ives, hating to destroy his work, hits on an ingenious plan. The notes shall be posted to Stephen, and "the Government will guard them during the night." They are just slipped into an addressed and stamped envelope when the "'tees" burst into the room. From this moment the interest that has never flagged reaches and sustains a very high pitch, and thrill succeeds thrill. Every moment discovery and arrest seem imminent; but the coolness and resource of the counterfeiter and his unwilling partner foil the "'tees" time after time, and they bluff and bully in vain. Under their very eyes the incriminating notes are carried off in the bag of Steve's "best girl," and remain in her unconscious possession until the day after, when she comes to see her fiancé at his office. Stephen is once more holding the coveted envelope in his hand, when they are again surprised by the Secret Service men. This time all appears lost. With a gratified smile, Captain West takes the notes from their cover and hands them to the expert who accompanies him, but their faces fall woefully when the notes are tested and are found to be good. "Do you mean to say that money is good, after all?" cries Stephen, as the door closes on the discomfited West and his minions. "Good!" echoes the counterfeiter, "the best I ever made!" But Stephen's spell of bad luck is broken, and he is left happy in the possession of unimpaired honesty, the sweetest of "best girls," and the best of good luck.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

TO-NIGHT at 8.30

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRODUCE A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

ENTITLED:

Little Miss Llewelyn

Founded on "Le Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans,"

By FRANTZ FONSON and FERNAND WICHELER.

Enos Llewelyn ...	...	MR. EDMUND GWENN
James Barrington	...	MR. E. W. GARDEN
Walter Barrington	...	MR. RONALD SQUIRE
Owen Griffiths ...	...	MR. TOM OWEN
Thomas Griffiths	...	MR. R. A. HOPKINS
Gwilym Richards	...	MR. D. H. MUNRO
Noah Davies ...	...	MR. ERNEST G. COVE
Emlyn Evans ...	...	MR. DAVID PRYCE
Benjamin Lewis	...	MR. JEFFREY REES
David Jones ...	...	MR. OWEN PRITCHARD
Mrs. Llewelyn ...	...	MISS HANNAH JONES
Lizzie ...	...	MISS LILIAN MASON
Maggie Annie ...	...	MISS PAMELA DUDLEY
Miss Llewelyn ...	...	MISS HILDA TREVELYAN

The Scene is laid in Carmarthenshire, Wales.

ACT I.	...	Enos Llewelyn's Office
ACT II.	...	The Dining Room
ACT III.	...	"The Ship" Inn

The Play Produced by Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL.

Preceded at 8 by a Phantasy in One Act, entitled

THE MAKER OF DREAMS

By OLIPHANT DOWN

Pierrot ...	...	MR. ELIOT MAKEHAM (By kind permission of Miss Horniman)
Pierrette ...	...	MISS PAMELA DUDLEY
The Manufacturer	...	MR. E. W. GARDEN

The Incidental Music by BEATRICE PATTENDEN

The Play produced by Mr. DONALD CALTHROP.

Programme of Music

PRELUDE ...	...	"The Maker of Dreams"	...Beatrice Pattenden
SELECTION	...	... "Welsh Airs" ...	... F. Godfrey
POTPOURRI	...	"Princess Caprice"	... Leo Fall
a. TWO STEP	...	"The Cranky Crawl"	... Arthur Chesney
b. VALSE	...	... "One More" ...	... Isobel Quin

Musical Director - - MR. EDWARD JONES

The Scenery has been painted by W. T. HEMSLEY.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by JAMES S. LYON.

The redecoration of the Theatre has been carried out by Messrs. ROPLEY, 35, Duke Street, W.

Manager - -	for Miss Trevelyan and Mr. Gwenn	- MR. CECIL PAGET
Stage Manager		MR SIDNEY T. PEASE

Ices, Tea and Coffee can be had of the Attendants

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co., Ltd.

MATINEES on Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 2 and 7.30. Commence at 2.30 and 8.

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office, (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) MR. HERBERT CLARK.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

31/8/1912

STALL

D14

This part to be retained

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW.

Waters, J.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1912.

A WELSH COMEDY.

MR. EDMUND GWENN'S SUCCESS.

'LITTLE MISS LLEWELYN.'

Enos Llewelyn .....Mr. Edmund Gwenn.
James Barrington .....Mr. E. W. Garden
Walter Barrington .....Mr. Ronald Squire.
Gwilym Richards .....Mr. D. H. Munro.
Lizzie .....Miss Lilian Mason.
Miss Llewelyn .....Miss Hilda Trevelyan.

"Little Miss Llewelyn," produced by Mr. Edmund Gwenn and Miss Hilda Trevelyan at the Vaudeville on Saturday evening, is an English version of the charming Belgian play "Le Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans," of M. Frantz Fonson and M. Fernand Wicheler, which was given in French for a limited season at the Globe Theatre a year ago.

The story as set out by the adaptor—his name does not appear on the programme—is the same in both plays, but instead of the home of a Brussels brewer we were shown on Saturday the home of a licensed victualler in a Welsh town. The change is unimportant. We get again the lovable, comical hot-headed old man with a charming daughter who pulls all the strings and finds a way eventually out of a marriage of convenience with a wealthy neighbour's son in order that she may engage herself to the much more attractive young fellow who is learning something of commercial life in her father's office.

The success of "Le Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans" depended to a very considerable extent on its humour—the humour of simple Belgian folk laughing at the young Parisian's method of speaking French, and at his more polished manners which they regarded as absurd. Transfer the story to a town in Carmarthenshire, substitute Welsh folk for Belgians, take a young Londoner instead of a Parisian and you get the Belgian play in Welsh form as it was given at Messrs. A. and S. Gatti's Theatre on Saturday evening.

There was no question about the humour of "Little Miss Llewelyn." The laughter that accompanied every word spoken by old Enos Llewelyn was eloquent of the favour it won. His failure to understand his London employé, his outbursts of indignation, and then his sudden conversions to gentleness were delightful, and all the more so because he never for one moment was conscious of the fact that his daughter was charming, coaxing, and inspiring everyone to do as she wanted. Those quaint country folks, characters everyone, Gwennie Llewelyn, her mother, the woman servant, and their neighbours, were all delightful, but above them, speaking English as well as any Welshman, was old Enos Llewelyn, licensed victualler, ambitious of the presidency of his trade society, and the unconscious hero of his native town.

For this venture into the theatrical world as joint managers, Mr. Edmund Gwenn and Miss Hilda Trevelyan have not been content to rely mainly on their own ability and popularity. They have surrounded themselves by excellent artistes, some of whose names are new, but all of whom contributed to the success of their play.

J. W.

Poetically fanciful in other respects, besides in the matter of name, The Maker of Dreams, a phantasy, by Oliphant Downs, which, fairly well played, forms the curtain-raiser in the Vaudevillo bill, has its general effect marred by certain prosaic touches. There is a serio-comic Pierrot, who protests that he has been singing badly in the market-place on account of the cold, a statement which may agree with his view, "Everything is absurd; that is the Tragedy of Pierrot," though it seems to conflict with his continual, yet unavailing, Quest of the Ideal Woman. Yet all the time he had a loving, real woman at hand in his purely business partner, Pierrette. The latter is visited by the so-called Manufacturer, a bewigged Cupid grown old, who, shooting at Pierrot with his toy bow, causes the latter to see that Pierrette had loved him all along.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912, at 8.15,
AND EVERY EVENING,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

KLAW & ERLANGER'S PRODUCTION

(DIRECTION OF JOSEPH BROOKS)

REBECCA

OF

SUNNYBROOK FARM.

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN and CHARLOTTE THOMPSON.

Adapted from Mrs. Wiggin's Rebecca Books.

THE PEOPLE.

Miranda Sawyer ...	Rebecca's Maiden Aunts	... MARIE L. DAY
Jane Sawyer ...		ELIZA GLASSFORD
Mrs. Perkins		... ADA DEAVES
Mrs. Simpson		... VIOLA FORTESCUE
Rebecca Rowena Randall		... EDITH TALIAFERRO
Emma Jane Perkins ...	Village Children	... LIELA FROST
Clara Belle Simpson ...		VIOLET MERSEREAU
Minnie Smellie		... NUNETTE FOSTER
Alice Robinson		... CLARA MERSEREAU
Jeremiah Cobb, Village Stage Driver... ...		... ARCHIE BOYD
Abner Simpson		... SAM COIT
Abijah Flagg		... EDWIN SMEDLEY
Adam Ladd ("Mr. Aladdin")...		... HAYWARD GINN

SYNOPSIS.

ACT I. Scene 1 ... ... The Brick House Dooryard. July

"She won't no more fit int' that house than Perkins' Colt."

Scene 2 The Stage Driver's Kitchen. Uncle Jerry Cobb tries his hand at diplomacy.

ACT II. ... ... The Ladd Cottage, North Riverboro. September

"I'm sure you must be Mr. Aladdin."

ACT III. ... ... The Sawyer's Barn. Harvest Time

"It needs a child's hand, with a light touch. Yours was made for it. Rebecca."

(Three and a half years elapse. Little Riverboro puts on long dresses.)

ACT IV. ... ... The Brick House in June. Graduation Day

"Mother was right after all. My coming to the Brick House was just like a fairy story."

PLACE State of Maine. TIME About 1880.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1912.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM.

COMEDY OF SIMPLE SENTIMENT.

Plays made from popular works of fiction are favoured commodities in American theatres, and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which was presented at the Globe Theatre yesterday evening, was more than an ordinarily successful instance, in the United States, of the book-made play.

This dramatisation by Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin and Miss Charlotte Thompson of the former's chronicles of "Rebecca" had the advantage of being interpreted yesterday evening by the American company that has played it to crowded "houses" in many American cities; and no doubt that was much the best arrangement. On no farm in this country could time have been found for the amount of sentiment generated in the Brick House, in the State of Maine, where Rebecca from Sunnybrook Farm grew from childhood into womanhood. Nor would it have been fair to expect English actors wholly to understand the humour of American village life such as was set out here in four acts of uninterrupted sentiment and sweetness.

Rebecca herself was a pleasant child, merry and mischievous, but entirely free (until she grew to be a big girl) from the sentimentality of the villagers near the Brick House where her maiden aunts made their home. But sweet seventeen—fatal age—condemned Rebecca to become as sentimental as the other inhabitants of the village, and in a scene that showed how young America has accepted the old, old fairy stories of Europe, Princess Rebecca promised her hand to Prince Adam.

It is only fair to all concerned to say that the acting was as good as could possibly be expected in a slight play of such obvious sentiment, and that Miss Marie L. Day, Miss Ada Deaves, Mr. Hayward Ginn, and Miss Edith Taliaferro earned the friendly applause accorded them at the close of the evening.

J. W.

It is difficult to estimate the qualities of the child Rebecca in one breath or in one sentence. She is one of a large family oppressed by the monotonous regularity with which the necessity for paying the interest on a mortgage on their farm recurs. She is thirteen years of age, impressionable, apparently artless, with a large fund of antiative, and when she alights from Jeremiah Cobb's stage coach on a visit to her aunts Miranda and Jane at the Brick House, she is on her best and most polite behaviour. The aunts being temporarily absent, and opportunity presenting itself, she organises and enjoys a romp with other girls, which at its wildest part is interrupted by the return of Aunts Miranda and Jane. Miranda is of the busy, scolding order, and her sharp temper and harsh words so frighten Rebecca that the child runs away the same night in the midst of a thunderstorm, and takes shelter in the house of Jerry Cobb, the coach driver. That genial person, after allowing a judicious mingling of tears and tea, succeeds in helping Rebecca to make up her mind to go back to Brick House and to face the amenities of a life and education with her two aunts. In the second act we find her engaged with other girls in trying to sell soap to neighbours in order to provide a certain Simpson household with something which it does not want. The effort brings her in contact with Adam Ladd, who seems eventually to act as the good fairy to everyone in the piece. In the third act Rebecca is again interesting herself in the household worries of the Simpsons, this time because the neighbours will have nothing to do with the Simpsons on account of "Mrs." Simpson having no wedding ring. So Rebecca sets out to procure the "piece of jewellery" which will make "Mrs." Simpson happy, by asking Adam Ladd for a ring. That individual devotes to the purpose his mother's wedding ring, which, as he explains at length to Rebecca, he has always carried with a photograph over his heart. Simpson does the "right thing" by the mother of his child, and is engaged by Adam Ladd on a permanent job. The last act is placed three and a-half years later, Rebecca has put up her hair, and let down her frocks and has graduated, and is the joy of her friends and the pride of Aunt Miranda, now a broken old woman. Rebecca is now going to work hard and save money to pay off the mortgage. But Adam Ladd has been before her. He arrives with the news that "the railway" have bought the farm, and that, after paying off the mortgage, there will be 5,000 dollars to spare, a matter palpably engineered by himself. He would marry Rebecca, but she asks him to "wait." As she is only seventeen, he says he will.

TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 3rd, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

DRAKE.

Francis Drake - - - - - - - - - LYN HARDING
Queen Elizabeth - - - - - - - - - PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

Lord Burleigh	BASSETT ROE
Lord Howard of Effingham	FREDERIC SARGENT
Christopher Hatton	ROHAN CLENSY
Sir Walter Raleigh	HAROLD BLISS
John Doughty	HERBERT WARING
Thomas Doughty	PHILIP MERIVALE
Don Guerau D'Espes	FRANCIS CHAMIER
Don Pedro Zubiaur	W. E. GEHE
Don Bernardino de Mendoza	DIGBY STROUS
Don Pedro de Valdez	E. A. SMYTHE
Sir George Sydenham	HENRY MORRELL
Le Sieur de Marchaumont	ARTHUR V. WEBSTER
Sir John Hawkins	FRED VIGAY
Martin Frobisher	WILLIAM HARBERD
John Wynter	N. CAMPBELL BROWNE
John Chester	J. ESMOND WALLS
Captain John Thomas	CHRIS WALKER
Thomas Fenner	SCOTT CLARKE
Tom Moone	A. E. GEORGE
Gregory	ROSS SHORE
Brewer	FREDERICK ROSS
Lady Lenox	ELINOR FOSTER
Mother Moone	CICELY RICHARDS
Bright	ROY BYFORD
Fleming	HOWARD ROSE
Rev. Francis Fletcher	BEN FIELD
Pedro	STANLEY HOWLETT
Diego	LORING FERNIE
Mr. Vicary	ANTHONY WARDE
Mr. Charles	FREDERICK J. BURNETT
Mr. Caube	H. E. NICHOLLS
Cooke	ERNEST DIGGES
William Hawkins	W. ESMONDE
Yole	ALFRED H. GODDARD
Potter	ARCHIBALD FORBES
Bewes	A. E. ALLEN
Doidge	SYDNEY GOULDIE
Menhennick	MONTAGUE KERR
Beckerleg	GORDON CARR
Courtenay	ARTHUR CHICKEN
Tailor	M. A. BUXTON
Haberdasher	A. THORNLEY
Pikeman	GEORGE LAUNDY
Balladmonger	ALEXANDER SARNER
Dame Sydenham	STELLA ST. AUDRIE
Elizabeth Sydenham	AMY BRANDON-THOMAS

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

DRAKE.

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS BY LOUIS N. PARKER.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

"There's time to finish the game and beat the Spaniards too."

Thanksgiving at Old St. Paul's Cathedral

In this naval pageant-play of Mr. Parker, crowded as it is with historical characters and with the reproduction of real episodes more or less as they actually happened, the plot proper seems to have designed to work up to Drake's exhortation, after the overthrow of the Armada, to future generations of Englishmen to maintain the naval supremacy that he had helped to gain. At the opening, at Hampton Court, we are shown Francis Drake's meeting with Queen Elizabeth and with his wife to be, Elizabeth Sydenham. There follows this Great Adventurer's seeing the Pacific at a Pass across the Isthmus of Darien, for the first time, with his earliest experience of the frankly piratical joy of seizing Spanish gold and other treasure from the Indies; and his return to Plymouth synchronises with the opening of the machinations against him of John, the fanatical Catholic brother of Thomas Doughty. Drake's entertaining the Queen in his garden, and his secret marriage to Elizabeth Sydenham are matters dealt with early in Mr. Parker's second act, which goes on to the court martial, held at Port St. Julian on the deck of Drake's ship, "The Golden Hind," of Thomas Doughty, who, found guilty of conspiracy to murder and high treason, is duly executed. The revengeful brother John is conspicuous in the Deptford scene, three years later, where Elizabeth, engaged in a Royal progress, knights Drake, in spite of the vehement protests of the Spanish Ambassador, Don Bernardino de Mendoza. The Armada looms large in the third and last act of this bold attempt to reproduce scenes in the glorious days of Good Queen Bess. A vivid representation is given of the historic game of bowls on Plymouth Hoe, and, later, the victorious hero, on the good ship "Revenge," is shown as heading in triumph the "Rosario," the captured flagship of the Andalusian squadron. John Doughty re-appears, again furiously hostile against Drake, whom in despair to slay near St. Paul's, for it is on the West Front of the Cathedral that takes place the pageant in celebration of the overthrow of the Spanish Fleet. Here Elizabeth personally offers up thanks for the victory of her sailors, standing on the steps of the Cathedral; and the play ends with Drake's patriotic appeal, including the sentence, "See that ye hold fast the heritage we leave you."

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.

DRAKE'S DRUM.

SCENE 1. A Chamber at Hampton Court—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 2. The Pass across the Isthmus of Darien—Alfred E. Craven.

SCENE 3. The Quay at Plymouth—Alfred E. Craven.

ACT II.

THE WORLD ENCOMPASSED.

SCENE 1. Drake's Garden at Plymouth—Alfred E. Craven.

SCENE 2. On board the "Golden Hind" at Port St. Julian. —Alfred E. Craven.

SCENE 3. The deck of the "Golden Hind" at Deptford. —Alfred E. Craven.

ACT III.

THE FORTUNATE AND INVINCIBLE ARMADA.

SCENE 1. Plymouth Hoe—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 2. On board the "Revenge" at Sea—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 3. The Precincts of Old St. Paul's—Alfred E. Craven.

SCENE 4. The West Front of Old St. Paul's—Joseph Harker.

The Play Produced by Sir HERBERT TREE in conjunction with the Author.

The Music has been specially composed by Sir CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

The Author wishes to express his obligation to Miss ISA M. FREEMAN for much valuable assistance.

Many of the Principal Dresses designed by SEYMOUR LUCAS. R.A.
Costumes executed by B. J. SIMMONS and by L. & H. NATHAN.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th,
and every following Wednesday and Saturday at 2.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING.
ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d Balcony 5s.
Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. POTTER.) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The Armada

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE. DRAKE

"ENGLAND IS WATCHING"

On WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, at 8.30,

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Mr. and Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT

AND THEIR COMPANY OF SCOTTISH PLAYERS

— IN —

A SCRAPE O' THE PEN

A Scottish Comedy in Three Acts, by GRAHAM MOFFAT,

Author of "BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS."

Characters in the order of their appearance.

Eppie Oliphant Inglis	Miss KATE NESBIT
Flora M'Gilp	Miss DORIS LINDSAY
Mrs. Baikie	Miss MARGARET NOBLE
Geordie Pow	Miss AGNES MILLER
Hugh Menzies	Mr. JOSEPH BARKER
Leezie Inglis	Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Mattha Inglis	Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT
Peter Dalkeith	Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT
Miss Pringle	Mr. WILL JAXONE
Taffy Knot	Miss MARGARET BOYD
Jean Lowther (Mrs. Hugh Menzies)	Mrs. BLAKE ADAMS
Alec Inglis	Miss JEAN AYLWIN
Beenie Scott	Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN
Wedding Party, Villagers, etc.	Miss ADELAIDE GRACE

ACT I.	The Farm Kitchen, Honeyneuk.	Time, afternoon.
ACT II., Scene 1	The same.	Night.
	There will be Three minutes interval between Scenes 1 and 2.
Scene 2	The Village Cross, Minniehive.	Near midnight.
ACT III.	Same as Acts I. and II.	Midnight

The Action takes place on the 31st Dec., 1874, and on 1st Jan., 1875, immediately after the year comes in.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE, "Rob Roy"	Foster
a. SERENADE, "Love in Arcady"	Hadyn Wood
b. DANSE RUSSE	Tschaikowsky
SELECTION, "The Thistle"	Middleton
MARCH, "Wee Macgreegor"	Devin

Play Produced under the personal direction of Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT and Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Costumes designed by Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT.

Scenic Artist .... Mr. SYD COOK. Incidental Music ... Mr. JULIAN H. WILSON.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

FIRST MAT[illegible], SEPTEMBER 7th.

Stage Manager ... ...
Acting Manager ... ...

Moffat ... CLIFFORD BROOKE
... J. CHAS. HUMPHREYS

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: [illegible]s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows; 4s. Unreserved Seats. [illegible]theatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager .. ([illegible]re) .. Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE
Sole Lessee,
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
4/9/1912

STALL
H19

To be retained

strength of plot or force of dramatic movement. A slighter story has rarely been spread over three acts. The piece, we believe, was originally in two acts, in which it was played in Scotland. The charm lies in the intimate revelation of the naïveté of primitive conditoins of life—a naïveté that derives a certain piquancy from the point of view of the audience, a point of view that amiably if unconsciously flatters itself because of its relative worldly sophistication.

Mr. Moffat puts his period a little forward. The period of Bunty Pulls the Strings was about 1850. That of A Scrape of the Pen is 1874. Yet, between 1860 and 1874, the world in the village of Honeyneuk, which is very like the village of Lintiehaugh, did not move very much. The costumes—with the ugly "bustle" much in evidence—seem antique enough in these days; and there are customs—such as the midnight wedding of Geordie Pow—and doings— such as Peter Dalkeith's always going about in the flowing headdress of a funeral mute—that might very well be mediæval instead of affairs of the late seventies. The presence of an English lady in this scene of action is, from force of contrast, a little disturbing. She is a sort of deus ex machinâ—though by no means a welcome one. She is a travelled woman, a Mrs. Baikie, who supposes that she is doing a kindness in returning to old Mattha Inglis a lost pocket-book that has come into her possession. It is a pocket-book that Jean Lowther gave as a girl to Aleo Inglis, the scapegrace son of Mattha and Leezie Inglis. Jean has for some years been the wife of Hugh Menzies, and the two live with the Inglises. The pocket-book contains the record of a Scots marriage between Jean and Aleo, duly witnessed by Geordie Pow and Flora M'Gilp. Immediately after this left-handed marriage, Alec went away; and nothing has been heard of him since. Jean hardened against Alec, particularly when she learnt that Alec had been untrue to her. The measure of his misdoing is seen in little Eppie, whom the Inglises adopted when her betrayed mother died in childbirth. Regarding the irregular union as "a scrape of the pen," Jean married in the ordinary way Hugh Menzies. The entry in the pocket-book tells everything to Mattha Inglis; and Jean, when he taxes her, does not deny. Inglis is of the Calvinist stock, and he is sorely tried when Jean beseeches him to keep the secret of the first marriage. But he promises to say nothing to Hugh Menzies. Then, in the midst of the moonlit merrymaking on a snowy New Year's eve over the wedding of Geordie Pow and Beenie Scott, the prodigal returns a rich man from South Africa, eager to make up to Jean for his seven years' desertion. His return brings about a good scene between the old father and mother, hesitating whether they shall or shall not, for Jean's sake, destroy the only evidence of the first marriage. Aleo comes into the room. They have already told him of his child sleeping upstairs. They give him now the paper from the pocket-book. He knows the position. The old people tremblingly leave it to him to do what he will with the paper. It seems that there is a real sacrifice for him, for—however unreasonably—he thinks that the right, as well as the hardship, is on his side. A long silence follows—and he tears up the paper and puts it on the fire. The curtain falls here, with the rest left to the imagination. The scene is, in its way, acutely dramatic, and one would not have it altered, even if the audience is put in a sudden doubt whether the play is actually at an end.

Mr. and Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT in

"A SCRAPE O' THE PEN"

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors - The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager ... . FRANK CURZON.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH FRANK CURZON

To-Night, Thursday, September 5th, 1912, at 8.0,

MISS MARIE TEMPEST

PRODUCES A NEW PLAY ENTITLED

"ART AND OPPORTUNITY"

A Comedy in Three Acts, by HAROLD CHAPIN

Algernon Horace Gossamore ...	(Third Duke of Keeleton) ...	Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE
George Frederick Gossamore	(Earl of Worplesdon, his Cousin)	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Algernon George Frederick Gossamore	(The Earl's Son)	Mr. EDMOND BREON
Henry Bently, M.P. ...	(The Duke's Secretary)	... Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Tenby	... ...	Mr. HOLTON COOPER
Lady O'High ...	(Aunt to the Cousins, Gossamore by birth)	Miss KATE SERGEANTSON
Pauline Chevrelle ...	AND	Miss MARIE TEMPEST

Act I. ... ... The Hall at Eftswood
Act II ... ... The Park at Eftswood
Act III ... ... The Drawing Room at Eftswood

The Play produced by Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music

The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co. 30 Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by BLUTHNER & Co. 18 Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... F. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 2485.

Business Manager (for Miss Marie Tempest) HERBERT ROSS
Business Manager (for Frank Curzon) T. B. VAUGHAN

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

This Pauline Cheverelle, called Peter, as "short" for Pauline, by Algernon George Frederick Gossamore, the rather, but not altogether stupid young aristocrat to whom she had somehow got herself engaged, was a delightfully intriguing young widow, self-called an adventuress, the death of whose late love-match husband could have never been doubted by the Gossamore family, if only they had known how he had been in the habit of "mixing his drinks." This is all that one hears of the deceased Cheverelle, who is of no account in Harold Chapin's new version of a widow's wiles. Pauline Cheverelle came down "like a jelly-fish" on the fold inhabited by Algernon Gossamore the younger, who was nephew and heir to Algernon Horatio Gossamore, third Duke of Keds, and son of that leading Cross Bench peer's cousin, George Frederick Gossamore, Earl of Worplesdon, both elder men coming to grief, as signally as did the youth, in their bouts with the merry widow. "Peter," who had succeeded in hooking her Algernon, prided herself not only upon the ease with which she twisted men round her finger, but also upon the transparent candour of her conduct and upon the frankness with which she laid her cards upon the table. But her pretty comparison of herself to a jelly-fish was neatly capped by the rider added by her quondam foe and fourth victim at Eltswood, the Duke's secretary, Henry Bently, M.P., who remarked, with his characteristic sound sense, "A jelly-fish is transparent, so that it may not be easily seen through." Yet, confessing that an artist needs luck (alias, Art its Opportunity), she admits to the Earl that she usually manages to get her own way, and that she does not expect her specious little arguments to be taken too literally. This enchanting woman of the world, a little dangerous no doubt, if by no means so black as she painted herself, was brought down to Eltswood in order that she might undergo a sort of public examination as to her good points and less commendable qualities from a sort of family council, an important member of which is Lady O'Hoyle, the very imposingly aristocratic aunt of the Duke and the Earl, who fails in her plan of "overawing" the supposed little simpleton nearly as badly as the Duke with his crudely insulting proposal of buying "Peter" off.

Algernon the younger, not really in love with Mrs. Chevorelle, who, as he perceives, might be rather of a trial in married life, is almost glad when she herself breaks off the engagement, ostensibly because she is five years his senior, "too old for him," as the Earl significantly says. Worplesdon, who is shown tenderly drying the widow's eyes as they are sitting together on the great staircase of the Hall, in the first act, is, for the second or third time in the action, bluffed into making a supposed declaration to her himself and in attempting to cut out his own, and not unnaturally jealous, son, after "Peter" has indignantly and impulsively returned, torn up, a cheque for £5,000, which she had, after a first refusal, accepted from Bently, acting on behalf of the Duke. This massively, if brutally, intellectual secretary-M.P., who represents the "reasoning brain" that is said to render plausible the dictates of "the unreasoning will" of the by no means brilliant Duke ("brains against blood," as Pauline says by a slip of the tongue), is, in his turn, subjugated by the fascinating widow. At first openly acting against her, Bently becomes so much exercised by her apparent sensitiveness at being beaten by him, and especially by a touchingly reproachful letter acknowledging defeat, that he feels a strange interest in Pauline, which she cunningly and successfully explains as being the dawn of love. This most unexpected passing from Earl to secretary is greatly to the relief of the Duke, afraid of being caught himself, for he, at the truly whimsical final curtain, shakes Bently's hand warmly, crying, "You did it for me."

As a matter of fact, Pauline, so far from being but a scheming little cat keen after the main chance, was seemingly an ordinary woman of impulse, rapidly turning her attention to Bently as being so much cleverer than his aristocratic employers. So, after all, there may have been an intended italicisation on the author's part of the "blood against brains" saying.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE

ART AND OPPORTUNITY

MARIE TEMPEST

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912,
at 8 o'clock,
Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY
PRESENTS

THE GIRL IN THE TAXI

A Musical Play in Three Acts

By FREDERICK FENN and ARTHUR WIMPERIS.
Adapted from the German of GEORG OKONKOWSKI.
Music by JEAN GILBERT.

Baron Dauvray (A newly elected Member of the Academy)	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Baroness Delphine Dauvray (His Wife)	Miss AMY AUGARDE
Jacqueline (Their Daughter)	Miss MARGARET PATON
Hubert (Their Son)	Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
Rene (Their Nephew, Lieutenant)	Mr. ALEC FRASER
Mariette (Their Housemaid)	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Monsieur Pomarel (A wealthy Manufacturer of Tours)	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Suzanne (His Wife)	Miss YVONNE ARNAUD
Professor Charcot	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH
Rose	Miss CECILY STUCKEY
Alexis (Head Waiter of the Jeunesse Doree) ..	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Emile, Felix (Waiters)	Mr. GEORGE CARROLL
Tina	Mr. W. H. GEALE
Mimi, Phyrnette, Irma, Fraisette, Charlotte, Celeste (Stars of the Jeunesse Doree)	Miss PHYLLIS ALLEN, Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR, Miss DANIE RAYNE, Miss ETHEL MORRISON, Miss VIOLET VERNON, Miss GOOGOO MURRAY, Miss PEGGY BETHEL
Godet, Paillasson, Vivarell (Habitues of the Jeunesse Doree)	Mr. EDMUND DIGUES, Mr. LOUIS RUSSELL, Mr. OTTO ALEXANDER

Act I.	Reception Room in Baron Dauvray's House in Paris
Act II.	Restaurant "Jeunesse Doree"
Act III.	Same as Act I.
Time	The Present.

There will be an interval of Fifteen minutes between the Acts.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

The Scenery, Costumes and Properties by BARUCH & Co., London, New York, Vienna, Berlin.
Furniture and Decorations by FRYERS, LTD., 6 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.

Should an encore be demanded and refused it will not be from want of courtesy to the audience, but from a desire on the part of the Management that the piece should conclude in reasonable time on the first night.

Gentlemen's Modern Dress by Messrs. WALKER & Co., 38 Sackville Street.
Modern Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.
The Pianos used in the Theatre kindly supplied by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co.

Stage Manager	Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager	... Mr. E. F. SAXON
GENERAL MANAGER	Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2. Commence at 8; Matinees at 2.30.
Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1912.

"THE GIRL IN THE TAXI."

A GREAT SUCCESS AT THE LYRIC THEATRE.

Baron Dauvray .....Mr. Arthur Playfair
Baroness Delphine Dauvray (his wife) .....Miss Amy Augarde
Hubert (their son) .....Mr. Robert Averell
Rene (their nephew, Lieutenant)....Mr. Alec Fraser
Monsieur Pomaret .....Mr. C. H. Workman
Suzanne (his wife) .....Miss Yvonne Arnaud
Professor Charcot .....Mr. Louis Goodrich
Alexis (head waiter) .....Mr. Frederick Volpe

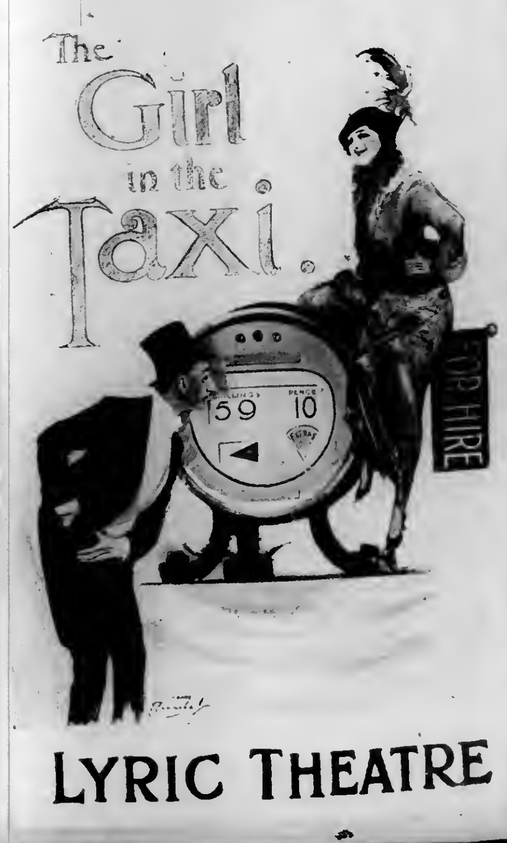
Mr. Philip M. Faraday gave something almost new last night in the musical piece that he presented at the Lyric Theatre under the title of "The Girl in the Taxi." We have had all sorts of musical plays, good musical comedies, and indifferent comic operas, but Mr. Faraday gives us a farce that can hold its own for high spirits and uproarious fun with any farce with or without music that has been seen in London for years.

If it never had a note of music to help it it would yet score heavily, for it is played as spiritedly as a Palais Royal farce. Last night's audience roared with laughter, while strange to relate, the success of the performance was made by three actors who do not belong to the musical comedy side of the profession.

Mr. Arthur Playfair, Mr. Robert Averell, and Mr. Frederick Volpe carried "The Girl in the Taxi" out of the region of musical plays. They hardly allowed the audience to remember that there were some pretty tunes—some of them, perhaps, reminiscent of other popular tunes—for the farce was the thing, and they kept to it in spite of the music.

"The Girl in the Taxi" makes no claim to originality in the character of its story. There need be no quarrel with that fact. Mr. Frederick Fenn and Mr. Arthur Wimperis have prepared the English version from the German of Herr Georg Okonkowski, who on his part had based his story on a French light comedy.

Paris remains, as in the Continental version, the scene of the farce, and the characters have figured before in such plays. There are husbands who prefer to go to restaurants when they ought to be asleep. There are comical waiters and pretty women, but the authors who employed these in the making of this play have used their materials with a sense of humour and skill, and Mr. Faraday has provided actors who know how to be comical. The result was therefore what it should have been—an entertainment of irresponsible fun and high spirits.



Mr. Alec Fraser, Mr. C. H. Workman, Mr. Louis Goodrich, and Miss Amy Augarde were all good in what they were given to do, and Miss Yvonne Arnaud sang charmingly, but first honours go to Messrs. Playfair, Averell, and Volpe. J. W.

As to the flavour of the story, there may be more than one opinion, although similar themes have often been exploited upon the stage, notably in such pieces as Pink Dominoes. Musical plays, like life, must not be taken too seriously, but, at the same time, the strict moralist would find much to condemn in The Girl in the Taxi. Whether the strict moralist—or the maiden aunt, or the unsophisticated "flapper," for that matter—is wanted in the theatre at all is an open question. At all events, and without being squeamish, one may be permitted to deprecate the growing tendency upon the stage to count marital infidelity and the repudiation of the marriage tie as amusing so long as they are accompanied by music or witty dialogue. Having admitted, however, that the story is decidedly risqué and by no means food for babes, one may resign oneself to its humorous qualities. And that these are plentiful will be evident from a brief recital of the plot. Baron Dauvray, at whose mansion in Paris the action commences, is as unblushing a humbug as it would be possible to find in a day's march. He is an eminently respectable scientist by day, whose métier is heredity; by night he is something of a satyr, and well-known at the haunts of gilded vice. By some caprice or other he has awarded a prize for conjugal virtue to a certain Suzanne Pomard, the young wife of a wealthy and middle-aged silk manufacturer of Tours, a circumstance which brings the Pomards up to the Gay City upon a mission of thanks. Suzanne, who is by no means as innocent as she is painted, has had an affaire with a young lieutenant named Rene, a nephew of the Baron, who is in love with the Baron's daughter Jacqueline, but regarded with disfavour by the parents because of his cerulean past. The Baron has also a son, Hubert, who finds it impossible to cut a dash on an allowance of five shillings a week, and greatly desires to "see life"; and the ball is set rolling in good earnest when René takes the education of Hubert in hand, and when he, Rene, has obtained the Baron's permission to his engagement with Jacqueline if he can detect him in any peccadillo. There is plenty of the peccadillo element in the next act, which takes place in the small hours at the Restaurant, Jeunesse Dorée, whither most of the characters have surreptitiously repaired. Here, Hubert, in place of Rene, is found taking supper with Suzanne, who has kicked over the traces upon her husband's departure for a fortnight's military service, and here, also, the Baron has a cosy little meal behind curtains with a lady named Rose, who is the wife of a Professor Charcot. Rose, by the way, is really the girl in the taxi of the title since she and the Baron had accidentally entered the same vehicle by opposite sides, and decided that "My taxi, I believe?" should be "Our taxi!" The amusing imbroglio which follows is caused by all the characters meeting unexpectedly at the restaurant—father and son, and even daughter (for Rene has indulged Jacqueline's foolish desire to "see life"), and by M. Pomard's subsequent appearance upon the gay scene in a state of chronic inebriety. How M. Pomard, who has not gone to the manœuvres after all, is cleverly prevented from meeting his wife face to face, how the Baron is pleased to find that his son is a gay dog, and his theories of heredity are confirmed when he realises that he is not the champagne father of a Mellin's Food son, as he expresses it, after all, and how the suspicions of Professor Charcot are aroused, may well be imagined. There are also some highly amusing scenes in the last act, when the roysterers sit down to breakfast next morning, and are waited upon by a new butler, who turns out to be the ex-head waiter at the restaurant, and when Pomard, whose only sin is that he had looked upon the wine when it was red, is artfully persuaded by the Baron to apologise all round, and so set all remaining suspicions at rest. All the "naughty" folk are certainly victorious in this scene, while unsuspecting virtue is made to look decidedly foolish, and the curtain falls upon the inference that the Dauvray ménage will continue to maintain its unruffled respectability after many riotous "nights out" to come!

APOLLO THEATRE.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

Mr. TOM B. DAVIS'S PRODUCTION

THE GRASS WIDOWS

A Comic Opera in Three Acts

Written by ARTHUR ANDERSON and HARTLEY CARRICK
Founded on the German of A. M. WILLNER and JULIUS WILHELM

Music by GUSTAVE KERKER
Composer of "THE BELLE OF NEW YORK."

Polycarp Ivanovitch .. .. Mr. BERT COOTE
Count Boris Rimanow .. .. Mr. GORDON CLEATHER
Jerome I. (King of Silonia) .. .. Mr. EDWARD McKEOWN
Prince Petroff (Russian Chargé d'Affaires at Tassello)
Mr. WALTER DOWLING
M. Deschamps (Dancing Master at the Academy)
Mr. JACK BUCHANAN
Lieutenant André (An Officer of Cossacks) Mr. FRANK A. WOOD
Priest .. .. Mr. ERNEST ARUNDEL

AND

Vodka (Janitor of the Academy, formerly Horace Dudman)
Mr. ALFRED LESTER

Betty Baker (of 2 Marine Parade, Bloomsbury)
Miss DOROTHY MINTO

Princess Athanasia (Lady President of the Academy)
Miss DAISY LeHAY

Olga	Students at the Academy	... Miss MURIEL MORRIS
Irene		... Miss NORA GUY
Elisa		... Miss LARRY LAWSON
Natalie		... Miss DAISY MANNING
Nadina		...Miss DAISY WEST COLLINS
Petrovna		... ... Miss LILY COLLIER
Lydia		... Miss GERMAINE ARNOUX
Anna		... Miss FLORENCE RAY

Honorka (Tatjana's Friend) .. .. Miss THELMA RAYE

AND

Tatjana .. .. Miss CONSTANCE DREVER

Solo Dances in Acts II. and III. by Miss TOPSY SINDEN.
Arranged by E. ESPINOSA. Music by GUY JONES.

APOLLO
THEATRE
7/9/12
Orch. Stall
C 1
To be retained

Act I. ..	Dancing Hall at "The Snowdrops" Academy, St. Petersburg
Act II.	At the Embassy at Tasselle (Three months later)
Act III.	The Hall at the King's Falconry (The following day)

The Costumes and Scenery designed by PERCY ANDERSON.

Costumes executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8 King Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Miss Dorothy Minto's Dresses by Madame ALEXANDRE.

Scenery painted by F. L. SCHMITZ.

The Duel in Act III. arranged by FELIX BERTRAND.

Production by GUYTON HEATH.

The Orchestra will be conducted by the Composer.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

Prices:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Last Row, 6s. Upper Circle 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone Gerrard 3243.

Stage Manager } For } EDWARD SHALE
General Manager } Mr. Tom B. Davis } A. C. BELSEY

Extract from Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2. The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1912.

"THE GRASS WIDOWS."

MISS CONSTANCE DREVER IN A NEW MUSICAL PLAY.

Alexarp Ivanovitch .....Mr. Bert Coote.
Count Boris Rimanow .....Mr. Gordon Cleather.
Prome I. .....Mr. Edward McKeown.
Prince Petroff .....Mr. Walter Dowling.
Sonka .....Mr. Alfred Lester.
Peggy Baker .....Miss Dorothy Minto.
Princess Athanasia .....Miss Daisy LeHay.
Manorka .....Miss Thelma Raye.
Marijana .....Miss Constance Drever.

It would be necessary to go back a few years to an older class of musical comedy to find one to correspond with "The Grass Widows," produced at the Apollo Theatra on Saturday evening. It wears an old-fashioned air and looks but a country cousin of the polished, quick-witted, confident, alive musical comedies that London is now accustomed to.

The authors of "The Grass Widows," with a very natural desire to have some element of novelty in the play which they have adapted from a Viennese original, have overloaded it with improbabilities. A ladies' school, for instance, where the penalty to be paid by a male visitor is immediate marriage with the girl he is seen speaking to is admittedly far fetched, even for an academy in St. Petershurg; and the presence in the school, as janitor, of a melancholy Cockney from Bloomsbury does not exactly add a note of poetic fancy to the improbable one.

MARRIED SCHOOLGIRLS.

The adventure of the two young men who were married instanter to two of the most charming girls in the school went very flat. It hardly appeared worth the girls' while capturing two such witless noblemen, and it appeared still less worth while prolonging the play for a further two acts in order to reconcile the men to their clever wives.

Of course, there was always the delight of listening to Miss Constance Drever. As a singer she has no superior in musical comedy, and she can act with intelligence. Mr. Gustave Kerker has provided her with very pretty numbers, and ona very showy scene such as usually takes an audience by storm, but the make-believe sincerity that Miss Drever is expected to command in the loving scenes with her husband and with a song went for nothing, simply because they were frankly impossible and unlika anything outside a theatre. Miss Drever is such a good artiste that she is always worth hearing, and in her scenes with alert Miss Thelma Raye there was much pretty acting and some admirable tunes.

These pleasant features and the rare comical figure cut by Mr. Alfred Lester as a wandering Englishman doing odd jobs in Russia—janitor in a girls' school, "dungaree-dnster" to a royal court, falconer to a king, and at last reconciled to his own "girl" from Bloomebury—helped in some measure to commend "The Grass Widows" to Saturday's audience, which was not altogether unanimous at the close of the entertainment.

J. W.

1.175 177

Proprietress: THE Miss Lena Ashwell

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Lillah McCarthy – Granville Barker

Every Evening. Matinees: Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The Voysey Inheritance

A Comedy, in Five Acts by Granville Barker.

Mr. Voysey - - -	Edmund Maurice
Mrs. Voysey - -	Florence Haydon
Trenchard Voysey, K.C. -	Eugene Mayeur
Honor Voysey - -	Geraldine Olliffe
Major Booth Voysey -	Charles Fulton
Mrs. Booth Voysey (Emily)	Janet Hope
Christopher - - -	Eric Rae
Edward Voysey - -	Arthur Wontner
Hugh Voysey - -	Harcourt Williams
Mrs. Hugh Voysey (Beatrice)	Grace Lane
Ethel Voysey - -	Barbara Everest
Denis Tregoning - -	Charles Maunsell
Alice Maitland -	Jean Sterling Mackinlay
Mr. Booth - - -	William Farren
The Rev. Evan Colpus -	Charles Daly
Peacey - - - -	Moffat Johnston
Phoebe - - - -	Gwynneth Galton
Mary - - - -	Vera Cunningham

THE KINGSWAY.

On Saturday evening, September 7, 1912, was revived here the comedy, in five acts, by Granville Barker, entitled: The Voysey Inheritance.

178

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

Mr James Watts'

Presence on

Thursday Evening, Sept. 12, 1912

At 8 o'clock

To witness the Production of

EVERYWOMAN

HER PILGRIMAGE IN QUEST OF LOVE

A MODERN MORALITY PLAY

BY

WALTER BROWNE

Music by GEORGE W. CHADWICK Conductor, J. M. GLOVER

The Play Revised by STEPHEN PHILLIPS

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

P. 1.175 179

EVERYWOMAN

HER PILGRIMAGE IN QUEST OF LOVE

A MODERN MORALITY PLAY

BY

WALTER BROWNE

Music by GEORGE W. CHADWICK. Conductor, J. M. GLOVER

The Play Revised by STEPHEN PHILLIPS

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS.

Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE	as	EVERYWOMAN
Miss KATE RORKE	as	TRUTH
Miss GLADYS COOPER ... (By arrangement with Vedrenne & Eadie)	,,	BEAUTY	Everywoman's Companions
Miss PATRICIA COLLINGE	,,	YOUTH
Miss JESSIE WINTER	,,	MODESTY
Miss WILDA BENNETT	,,	CONSCIENCE
Miss MARY BROUGH	,,	GREED
Miss VERA BERINGER	,,	SELF
Miss CLARA BECK	,,	VICE
Miss B. BAILEY ...	,,	VANITY
Mr. H. B. IRVING	as	NOBODY
Mr. FRED LEWIS	,,	WEALTH, a Millionaire
Mr. W. H. DENNY	,,	STUFF	Theatrical Managers
Mr. HENRY WENMAN	,,	BLUFF
Mr. WILFRID DOUTHITT	,,	PASSION, a Play Actor
Mr. JOHN TRESAHAR	,,	PUFF, a Press Agent
Mr. ION SWINLEY	,,	KING LOVE
Mr. E. H. KELLY	,,	WITLESS
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	FLATTERY
Mr. E. W. ROYCE	,,	AGE
Mr. HOWARD RUSSELL	,,	TIME

Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	as	POTTS
Mr. ASHDOWN	,,	CHARITY
Mr. BOLDRINI	,,	SCRIBE
Miss M. BELL	,,	PERT
Miss V. FOSTER	,,	FLIRT
Miss F. WATSON	,,	DIMPLES
Miss S. BOURCARD	,,	CURLS
Miss M. MACDONA	,,	GIGGLES
Miss F. VAUGHAN	,,	SHAPE
Miss I. DEAN	,,	SMILES
Miss V. RANGDALE	,,	SLY
Miss C. MURRAY	,,	CURVES

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I.

EVERYWOMAN'S HOME [R. McCleery

ACT II.

THE STAGE OF A THEATRE [Bruce Smith

ACT III.

EVERYWOMAN'S MANSION [R. McCleery

ACT IV.

Scene 1. PICCADILLY CIRCUS (New Year's Eve) [R. McCleery

CHANGING TO

Scene 2. EXTERIOR OF A CHURCH [R. McCleery

The Interval between Acts IV. and V. will be five minutes only.

ACT V.

EVERYWOMAN'S HOME [R. McCleery

Gowns and Costumes designed by COMELLI.

Business Manager ... ... SIDNEY SMITH

The Weekly Dispatch
LONDON: 2, Carmelite Street, E.C.

SEPTEMBER 15, 1912.

"Everywoman."

"Everywoman," presented by Mr. Arthur Collins at Drury Lane Theatre on Thursday evening, is so totally unlike the thing that is expected there that a natural hesitancy must arise when it has to be described. We go to Drury Lane Theatre every September disposed to be interested and amused by a drama dealing, in more or less exaggerated terms, with a series of exciting incidents having a theatrical relationship to possible events. This year, however, all those conventions are put aside, and in place of what we have always looked for find something in the nature of a sermon, that is described on the programme as "a modern morality play." I have no quarrel with the policy that seeks for novelty in a stage production, and "Everywoman" is a novelty for Drury Lane, but it is not a novelty for London, as all who saw the revival of the old morality play "Everyman," impressively presented by the Elizabethan Stage Society ten years ago, can remember.

• • • • •

"Everywoman" was written in America, and it requires no great stretch of the imagination to conceive the idea that the author may have been inspired by the success obtained in America by the company taken over there in "Everyman" from England by Mr. Bén Greet. To say, however, that "Everywoman" has a tithe of the impressiveness of "Everyman" would not, in my opinion, be true. It is, I admit, very beautifully staged at Drury Lane Theatre; it is well acted, too, and may be an enormous success, but I felt all through the performance that it is more likely to create an audience for itself than to attract the play-going public that loves a drama.

• • • • •

There are five acts in "Everywoman" devoted to a woman's "pilgrimage in quest of love," and all the characters appearing in these five acts are symbols—Love, Truth, Passion, Beauty, Modesty, Youth, Vice, etc., etc. Woman mistakes passion for love, and although she makes no lapse from the straight path, we find her practically outcast, very wretched, and deserted. In one act, or rather two, conceived in questionable taste, we are led to understand that there is no place for modesty in the theatre, but if the management of Drury Lane Theatre had to take this play as they got it from America, it is only charitable to presume that this peculiar view of affairs represents American opinion. It certainly can be taken for granted that the picture of a rehearsal as given in this "morality" play comes up to the description that we might expect to find given by a preacher convinced that the stage is a place of perdition, and quite unfit for any decent woman. That, of course, may be an American view of the theatre, and if it suits them they are welcome to it.

There is a representation of Piccadilly-circus in the new spectacle at Drury Lane, introduced by the chorus thus:—

> See this is Piccadilly pavement gay,
> With good intentions paved, as poets say,
> And so another place resembling well . . .

In the matter of good intentions Everywoman is on a par with Piccadilly and the other place. But, unlike the other place, it is cold. As morality, it is edifying, but it is cold as art. If in art, as in nature, motion generated heat, Everywoman would be almost as hot as the other place. It is full of bustle, dance, alarums, and excursions; at times it is even orgiastic. But it remains cold. The reason is quite simple. Art deals with intuitions, not with concepts; with concrete individual things, not with abstract ideas. If the artist shows you a set of concrete individual things—say the personages in a play—and tells you that they stand for certain abstractions—say conscience and wealth and vice—he is telling you what is, artistically, irrelevant. It is by virtue of his concrete individual things, and of nothing else, that he will move you. At best, the attribution of a symbolic value to his concrete things will only be an addition to his art, a kind of afterthought, a mental exercise over and above the dose of æsthetic enjoyment. But the American author of Everywoman has not gone to work in that, comparatively harmless, way. He has thought of the abstract things first and tried to turn them into concrete things. Indeed, his process has been naïvely simple. He has taken a commonplace about life, perfectly true but perfectly commonplace, which you may suppose to be worded thus:—A woman with youth and beauty naturally seeks for love; but if she is deceived by the flattery of her mirror and discards her modesty she is likely to find a love that is not born of truth. Though she may succeed in escaping the snares of passion she will probably be seduced by wealth. Then, her youth and beauty forsaking her, she comes to grief. The author has taken this statement, exactly as it stands, given each of the nouns a capital letter, assigned them as names to a set of players, and, hey presto! there you have Everywoman. Art of this kind is on the level of those political cartoonists who illustrate current phrases—draw one statesman "sitting on the fence" and another "ploughing the sands." Politically, we daresay, these cartoons are vastly effective; but considered as efforts of the artistic imagination, they might come from the nursery. And that is what one feels about Everywoman; it has a touch of the babyish. To name a young woman Youth and a beautiful woman Beauty, to kill them off, and then to assume that the intrinsic poverty of this notion as drama will be in any way compensated by the fact that it has been suggested by a moral commonplace, is a piece of artistic infancy. True, they did this sort of thing in the fifteenth century, when the Morality Play was a natural growth, appropriate to its time and surroundings. But the author of Everywoman, though he calls it a Modern Morality Play, cannot reproduce that time, its naïveté, its sincerity, and all its other qualities that make it the 15th century and not the 20th. And his "modern" element is only an incongruity. The spirit and the appeal of a genuine Morality Play are whole worlds away from the spirit and appeal of a realistic presentation of Piccadilly-circus.

It is there, of course, that Mr. Arthur Collins comes in. We hear much nowadays about "diseases of occupations," and the particular complaint which attacks managers of Drury Lane (owing to the vastness of the stage, an obvious resort for crowds) is agoramania. Mr. Collins has long since fallen a victim to it. He must always have a crowd, is obsessed by crowds, rides the whirlwind and directs the storm of crowds. Regularly, twice a year, he has fits of crowds, and on each occasion the symptoms are the same; two attacks in rapid succession—a crowd of pretty women and a miscellaneous street (or race-course, or river) crowd. They both duly recur this autumn in Everywoman. The crowd of pretty women consists of chorus-girls, supposed to be rehearsing before the manager (or rather the two managers—the more the merrier is the Drury Lane motto) of a theatre. They are quite a festive and corybantic lot; we have not the slightest objection to seeing a cohort of beauties in dazzling silks and satins kicking their heels in the air, but fail to see what it has to do with the soul-adventures of Everywoman. Nor do we mind being shown Piccadilly-circus at midnight—in fact at that particular hour much prefer Piccadilly-circus at Drury Lane than at Piccadilly-circus. The fact remains that your "modern Morality Play" here becomes stark staring "musical comedy." You have the familiar chorus; daughters of Joy (shrill treble) alternating with "Johnnies" (baritone) and Pickpockets (bass). Through the windows of the Criterion Restaurant we observe multi-millionaires supping with bediamonded ladies. Then from the steps of the Criterion the arch-multi-millionaire addresses the crowd, like Drake at St. Paul's at another playhouse, while the police obligingly enforce silence. Having blessed the crowd, the orator drives away (in a real "electric") with Vice. Yes, decidedly, we prefer to visit our Piccadilly-circus at Drury Lane.

But we are forgetting the orgy. Next to its crowds, Drury Lane is famous for its orgies. We have seen them at hunt-breakfasts and mess-dinners; in this instance we have it at a supper, given by Everywoman, at the charges of the multi-millionaire. When enough champagne corks have been popped Everywoman mounts the table, while the gentlemen go down on their knees to her. Then the voice of Conscience is heard (a very sweet voice—Miss Wilda Bennett's), Youth is observed to be faint and Beauty moribund on a sofa, the dessert turns into death's-heads, and the orgy ends in wild confusion.

These are the things for which the patrons of Drury Lane will rush to see Everywoman. A church scene, with organ-peals, funeral procession, and a theatre-full of incense, they will find a separate ecstasy. And when at last they see Everywoman safe in the arms of True Love, they will no doubt have a comfortable feeling of virtuous satisfaction. It is the wildest theory once more. You saw them at Piccadilly-circus and tipsy supper parties, have had the fun of seeing multi-millionaires driving off with Vice in electric broughams, and yet come out on the right side in the last act, partly in sympathy with True Love and all the copy-book virtues.

But for our part Everywoman leaves us cold. A spark of imagination, a momentary glow of poetic feeling, an individual turn given to the old commonplaces, would have made all the difference. The author has not vitalized his theme, but merely throws his abstractions at our head; the vitality is in the crowds, and they would have done just as well in any other play. As for the players, they make praiseworthy, but hopeless, efforts to turn concepts into individuals. Miss Alexandra Carlisle is only the conventional heroine-in-distress; what else could she be? Miss Gladys Cooper and her companions are just pretty girls being pretty girls. Mr. Fred Lewis as the multi-millionaire is a tight fit for the electric brougham. Mr. W. H. Denny, an old Savoy favourite, is thrown away upon a minor part; so is Miss Kate Rorke. Mr. H. B. Irving as chorus (called Nobody, for no apparent reason except that the author may play upon the ambiguous use of "nobody" in English) recites his speeches with a dignity which their inherent insignificance will hardly bear. He reminds us of Goldsmith telling Johnson that he would make little fishes talk like big whales. The play, it seems, has been revised by Mr. Stephen Phillips—which sets us wondering what the unrevised version can have been like. There is an almost continuous musical accompaniment, composed with a sense of the appropriate by Mr. George Chadwick, and played with immense gusto by Mr. Glover's orchestra. But the best music was the voice of Conscience. Of course the author called it a "still, small voice." Fortunately it was neither.

A. B. Walkley in The Times

Miss Alexandra Carlisle ("Everywoman")

1.175 183

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietor - - SIR JOSEPH BEECHAM
General Manager - - A. M. LOADER
(Who holds the Licence of the Lord Chamberlain).

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th, at 8 p.m.

And EVERY EVENING following at 8.30. SATURDAY MATINEE at 2.30.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

SIR JOSEPH BEECHAM

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS

THE GREAT JOHN GANTON

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS

(Founded upon ARTHUR J. EDDY'S celebrated Novel "Ganton & Co.")

By HARTLY J. MANNERS

Dresses and Hats by VIOLA, 27 Albemarle St., W.
Grand Piano by J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.
Furniture by J. S. LYON, Ltd. Typewriters by REMINGTON.

Acting Manager ... ... DONALD BAYLIS

PRICES:—Boxes, £3 3s., £1 10s.; Stalls, 10/6; Balcony, 7/6, 5/-; Upper Circle, 3/-, 2/6; Pit (unreserved), 2/-; Gallery (unreserved) 1/-.

BOX OFFICE (L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

Waters, J.

The Great John Ganton

By HARTLY J. MANNERS

At 8 p.m. Saturday Matinee at 2.30

CAST:

John Ganton - - -	George Fawcett
Will Ganton - - -	ERIC MATURIN
Alan Borlan - - -	EARLE BROWNE
Jack Wilton - - -	DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Browning - - -	FRANK COLLINS
Delaney - - -	ERNEST LEICESTER
Rev. R. Clavering - -	HERBERT VYVYAN
Dr. Shields - -	H. APPLEBY
Norbury - - -	E. GULSON
Dr. Morton - - -	J. MURDOCH
Adolph - - - -	T. BERRY
Shafter - - - -	KING FORDHAM
Macduffy - - - -	A. GLENROY
Clerk - - - -	F. HILL
May Kating - - -	LAURA COWIE
Mrs. Wilton - - -	MABEL TREVOR
Hester Ganton - - -	MARIE HEMINGWAY
Mrs. King - - -	LORNA TUFFLEY
Mrs. Trelway - - -	MARJORIE WATERLOW
Nurse - - - -	MAY TAVERNER
Typist - - - -	MURIEL MASON

Act I. - John Ganton's Office, Union Stockyards, Chicago
Act II. - - The Verandah at the Chicago Golf Club
Act III. - - - - John Ganton's Office
Act IV. - - - - John Ganton's Home

The Play produced by E. DAGNALL.

Programme of Music.

1. OVERTURE ... ... "Euryanthe" ... ... Weber
2. VIOLIN SOLO ... ... "Siegfried Paraphrase" ... Wagner-Wilhelmj or
   "Sursum Corda" ... ... Elgar
3. ALLEGRETTO FROM 8th SYMPHONY ... ... Beethoven
4. DANZE PIEMONTESE, No. 1 IN A. ... ... Sinigaglia

Musical Director - Mr. THOMAS CHAPMAN

1.17. 185

ALDWYCH :: THEATRE

Proprietor : : : : Sir JOSEPH BEECHAM
General Manager : : : : Mr. A. M. LOADER

GEORGE FAWCETT in "THE GREAT JOHN GANTON"

Last night a new American drama, with yet another self-made, strong, obstinate man as its central character, made its appearance in London, and this time the theatre was the Aldwych. The production was under the auspices of Mr. Louis Meyer, by arrangement with Sir Joseph Beecham, proprietor of the theatre, and the actor exploited in the name part in this drama by Hartley Manners was Mr. George Fawcett, who on his first and last visit to London a few years ago earned very considerable popularity as Big Bill, a cowboy, in Mr. Lewis Waller's production of "A White Man." In that play Mr Fawcett's performance indicated an ability to interpret a much more serious part than a very bluff cowboy, and last night's experience of his acting powers endorsed fully the flattering anticipations of the actor's American friends.

Meat Packer as Hero.

It is quite true, of course, that "The Great John Ganton" is no subtle example of a stage play. It is, indeed, no more than a very obvious drama in which the interest is entirely centred on this John Ganton, a millionaire meat packer of Chicago, who smashes all who oppose him in speculation, and is eventually cornered—in domestic affairs—by the simple young girl whom he had forbidden his son to marry. It will be understood that the entertainment of the play is confined to all the grim, strong, fighting things done by this great John Ganton, his utter contempt for men and women, whether friends or foes, and his ultimate conversion to the view of life taken by his boy and the girl that loved him. In no department can "The Great John Ganton" be described as new, but there is an amusing, American, hustling way of carrying the incidents that is attractive, and last night's audience was fairly well pleased with what they saw, and if critical of the drama, were not so of Mr. Fawcett, who really gave an excellent performance within the limitations of the drama he had to make possible and entertaining. J.W. & W.D.

CRITERION THEATRE

Tuesday, September 17th, 1912, at 9 o'clock.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday, commencing Saturday, September 21st, at 2.30 p.m.

"A Young Man's Fancy"

A Comedy in Three Acts

By H. V. ESMOND

Lord Porth		Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Hon. Gerald Porth	(his son)	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Lord Pierton		Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
Worgan	(Lord Porth's valet)	Mr. THOMAS WEGUELIN
Steele	(Lady Julia's butler)	Mr. CHARLES BISHOP
Lady Julia Ventermere		Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Ella Grant		Miss ENID BELL
Madame Monpansier		Miss MARIANNE CALDWELL
Cora	(Her daughter)	Miss DORA BARTON
Mrs. Macherew	(Lord Porth's housekeeper)	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Miss Rudder		Miss JANE COMFORT
Clara	(Madame Monpansier's Assistants)	Miss AVICE SCHÖLTZ
Emily		Miss EILEEN BARRY
Clorinda		Miss ELSPETH INNES-KER
Waitress		Miss JOY LUMSDEN

ACT I. .. .. Lord Porth's Bedroom (morning)

ACT II. .. .. Madam Monpansier's Flower Shop (afternoon)

ACT III. .. .. Drawing Room at Lady Julia Ventermere's (evening)

The action of the Play takes place in one day.

[illegible] Debenham & Freebody. Miss Enid Bell's dresses by Blanchquaert. Hats by [illegible] Paints to be Seen in. Flowers by Cripplage Flower Mission. Wigs by [illegible]

Preceded at 8.15 by

"THE FORTUNE TELLERS"

A One-Act Play by H. R. ABBOTT.

Sir William Brancaster	Mr. THOMAS WEGUELIN
Julius Brancaster	Mr. THOMAS PAUNCEFORTE
Claud Thornleigh	Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
Lady Brancaster	Miss CONSTANCE ROBERTSON
Lady Angela	Miss JOY LUMSDEN

SCENE

Fortune Teller's Tent at a Bazaar in Sir William Brancaster's Grounds.

Manager	ARTHUR FENLEY
[illegible]	CLAUDE VERNON
[illegible]	CHRISTOPHER WILSON

The "young man" of the play is the Hon. Gerald Porth, son of Lord Porth, a breezy and genial man of the world. The first act opens in Lord Porth's bedroom, at 10 o'clock in the morning. To be introduced to the sleeping apartments of the aristocracy is no novelty to the playgoer—Sir Arthur Pinero did it in "The Princess and the Butterfly," and others have followed his example—but the details in this case are humorously realistic, the steam rising from the bath, which is seen through an open door, a most realistic valet, and, as a lady in the audience remarked, "real naked feet." Owing to the fact that the painters are in the house Lord Porth's bedroom becomes the scene of action, and here, pallid with last night's debauch, in dressing-gown and slippers, comes the Hon. Gerald, between whom and his relations—represented by his aunt, Lady Julia Ventermere—there are differences. These have been caused, not by an opposition of interests, but by the tactless way in which Aunt Julia has tried to "hustle" Gerald into an engagement with Ella Grant, a rich young American girl. Gerald is really in love with her, and she with him; but he refuses to propose to her "on compulsion," and she is in a position which demands the finest tact for its proper handling, for Gerald has compromised himself by an entanglement with Cora Monpansier, the very wide-awake daughter of Mme. Monpansier, who keeps a flower shop. His father gives Gerald a cheque to pay off Cora with, and Lady Julia, who calls on Lord Porth to protest against Gerald's behaviour, determines to go to his rescue.

In the second act we have a very faithful reproduction of a fashionable flower shop, with Mme. Monpansier, a sharp and business-like old Frenchwoman, in the pay-box, and a bevy of girl assistants attending to customers. Gerald hands Cora the cheque, and there is a scene of very droll comedy when Lady Julia tries to "tackle" Mme. Monpansier, who, entrenched in her "cage," is more than a match for her assailant. Then Lady Julia has a passage of arms with the clever Cora, who easily comes off victorious. By Mme. Monpansier's instructions Cora announces that she and Gerald are married, and the young man acquiesces in the misstatement in order to annoy his aunt, and, perhaps, to beguile Ella.

In the last act Lady Julia prepares a kind of court-martial or conseil de famille on the supposed marriage, and informs Gerald that his "wife" is flirting outrageously with a certain Lord Pierton. Cora and Pierton send letters of excuse; and Gerald explains the real state of things, proposes to Ella, and is accepted.

"THE FORTUNE TELLERS."

Sir William Brancaster..Mr. Thomas Weguelin
Julius Brancaster .. Mr. Thomas Pannceforte
Claud Thornleigh ..... Mr. Roland Pertwee
Lady Brancaster .. Miss Constance Robertson
Lady Angela ..... Miss Joy Lumsden

There was perhaps too prolonged preparation for the fun of this piece, which proved to be a pleasant anecdotal comedietta, strong enough, perhaps, for an entertainment which evidently aimed at gaiety and lightness. Two young people, Claud Thornleigh and Lady Angela, have quarrelled; and it is the object of Lady Brancaster and Sir William Brancaster to reconcile the ex-lovers. Julius, Sir William's son, who is presiding over a fortune-telling tent in the grounds of his father's house, where a bazaar is being held, persuades his parent to dress up as the seer; and Sir William, Claud, and Lady Angela in turn occupy the tent, and assume the position of presiding prophet. In this way, Claud and Angela come to an understanding, and are engaged. The recent suppression of fortune-telling advertisements makes the play topical,

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lillah McCarthy. Granville Barker.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21ST, 1912, AT 8 P.M., AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.15.

SHAKESPEARE'S

The Winter's Tale

PRODUCED BY GRANVILLE BARKER.

Time	HERBERT HEWETSON
Leontes	HENRY AINLEY
Mamillius	ERIC RAE
Camillo	STANLEY DREWITT
Antigonus	GUY RATHBONE
Cleomenes	FREDERICK CULLEY
Dion	FREDERICK MORLAND
Polixenes	CHARLES GRAHAM
Florizel	DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY
Archidamus	FELIX AYLMER
Mariner	FRANCIS ROBERTS
Old Shepherd	H. O. NICHOLSON
Clown	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Autolycus	ARTHUR WHITBY
A Servant	ERIC LUGG
Another Servant	J. P. TURNBULL
Shepherd's Servant	NEVILLE CARTSIDE
A Gaoler	HERBERT ALEXANDER
An Officer of the Court	JOHN KELT
The Court Poet	H. B. WARING
A Lord	GEORGE BURROWS
Another Lord	FRANK CONROY
Paulina's Steward	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Hermione	LILLAH McCARTHY
Perdita	CATHLEEN NESBITT
Paulina	ESMÉ BERINGER
Emilia	ENID ROSE
Mopsa	JANET ROSS-JOHNSON
Dorcas	EFGA MYERS
A Lady	MARY DEVERELL
Another Lady	VERA DYER

DECORATION OF THE PLAY BY NORMAN WILKINSON.

THE COSTUMES DESIGNED BY ALBERT ROTHENSTEIN.

There will be One Interval of 15 minutes.

Stage Director ... HAROLD CHAPIN Stage Manager ... OSWALD MARSHALL.
Acting Manager ... HOWARD LESLIE
General Manager ... A. S. PIGOTT

Mr. Bernard Shaw, captured whilst admiring the new gallery in the Little Theatre after a rehearsal of "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," allowed himself to be drawn on the subject of the production of "A Winter's Tale" by Mr. Granville Barker at the Savoy.

"The subject is really a highly technical one," he said. "Nobody but a practised stage craftsman can understand the importance of the revolution that Barker has effected in the lighting and general aspect of the stage. He has got rid of the footlights, and apparently trebled the spaciousness of the stage, though the actual addition consists only of a strip formerly occupied by the orchestra and the front row of stalls. To the imagination it looks as if he had invented a new heaven and a new earth. Instead of the theatre being a huge auditorium, with a picture frame at one end of it, the theatre is now a stage with some unnoticed spectators round it. The crushing importance of the front of the house has gone.

"You see, to Barker the play's the thing; and consequently in his theatre the stage is the thing. People used to talk of the tyranny of the actor-manager; but the real tyranny was that of the acting-manager, gloating over his rows of well-dressed deadheads, and oblivious and contemptuous of the Punch and Judy show in the corner called the stage. In Barker's house the stage is triumphant; the play is triumphant; and the spectators are so utterly extinguished by the splendour of the stage that they might just as well wear jerseys and tam-o'-shanters as try to make fashion plates of themselves in the ordinary way. I challenge the stalls to dress up to the stage at the Savoy if they can."

"The critics were not all pleased with the change, though?"

"Nonsense! They never noticed the change. It was so right that they took it as a matter of course. What they didn't like was Shakespeare. It will take them ten years to acquire the taste for Shakespeare's later plays, and to learn his language, which is now almost a dead language. Just read one of their notices purely as a piece of English. Then read a page from 'A Winter's Tale'; and believe, if you can, that the two writers were fellow-countrymen. Probably they will never learn the riot of Renaissance art. On the whole, they don't like art. They always speak of it as something new and disagreeable. To Barker it is something eternal and delightful. That is what nerves him to these astonishing adventures."

"WHERE they do agree on the stage, their unanimity is wonderful." In view of the controversy created by Mr. Granville Barker's production of "The Winter's Tale" at the Savoy, one might cap Mr. Puff with the remark that where the critics are at variance their disagreement is remarkable. Rarely have there been such marked differences of critical opinion as those which greeted this revival. One charge, that against the actors of exceeding the speed-limit and talking to the danger of the verse, has, it is true, been pretty well substantiated. But the degree of criminality involved has been very differently estimated. The REFEREE, for instance, considered that this fault was to some extent mitigated by the correspondingly and by the fact that—particularly in the speeches of Leontes—the verse is too intricate and involved to be really intelligible on the stage, so that the actor was, in a measure, justified in considering the spirit before the letter of the text. To this view the Westminster Gazette also subscribed, and highly extolled the beauty of the staging, considering also that "the effect [of the costumes] against the white background was fascinating. One had a kind of complicated poem of moving colour of a depth greater than that of precious stones." The Pall Mall Gazette, too, appraised Mr. Norman Wilkinson's "decoration" of the play very highly, liked the men's costumes exceedingly and the girls' not at all, but felt so far as the poetry was concerned that Mr. Barker "has extinguished it, and, unfortunately, with it he has extinguished—so far as this revival is concerned—the soul of 'The Winter's Tale'!"

Increased Swiftness of Dramatic Action,

* * *

The Times dubbed the production "Post-Impressionist Shakespeare," but continued with the admission that "It is very startling and provocative and audacious, and on the whole we like it." The Morning Post was scarcely so kind: "We had been prepared for a certain amount of freakishness, not to say perversity, but not for a performance so unimpressive." The Daily News and Leader was even more antagonistic. "Shakespeare has suffered," says this journal. "He has been for Mr. Norman Wilkinson's simple-minded scenery, for Mr. Albert Rothenstein's baroque costumes, and for Mr. Granville Barker's love of a stage picture. Acting is sacrificed to a false idea of the need of rapidity of action." On the other hand, though the Daily Telegraph found in the presentation "something too anxious, too restless, and something discordant," it also found "acting of compelling passion and tenderness, of grace, humour, and charm," and described the whole thing as "a fine piece of work in which there is to be found infinitely more promise than flaw." The Daily Chronicle put it "candidly" that there was "too much Barker."

Made a Stalking Horse

* * *

But the Standard's dictum is "a remarkable dramatic experience," a verdict supported not unnaturally by the Evening Standard, which agree that "it is something new, enlivening, and entirely entertaining." The Daily Graphic regards the revival as "an event that contributes a new and beautiful note to the stage production of Shakespeare." The Daily Mail, however, flaunting the mantle of prophecy, assumes that "By the compact majority it will be regarded as a triumphant vindication of existing methods"; while the Observer asserts, "The production certainly marks an advance in our staging of Shakespeare"; and the Sunday Times evidently regards it as the result of half-digested ideas "made in Germany."

* * *

Meanwhile, Mr. Gordon Craig, with characteristic impetuosity, has dashed to the assistance of Mr. Barker, who, to judge from the extensive interviews that have appeared, is quite capable of undertaking his own defence. Mr. Barker meets the chief criticism of his work with that it is not the actors who gabble, but "the Playgoer who does not known how to listen." This may be sound argument from one who probably knows every word of the text, but it is poor comfort for the playgoer who is seeing and hearing the play for the first time. Again, "the music, the swing, the dash of it all are half the battle," says Mr. Barker, and he gives a quotation from one of Leontes's speeches, which certainly "no amount of slow-going" would make more comprehensible. And, in a letter to the Daily Mail on Thursday, Mr. Barker declares: "There is no Shakespeare tradition," and he challenges anyone, "having cleared his mind from a generation of prejudice to deny" that "The Winter's Tale" "is played as Shakespeare wrote it, and in the spirit he meant it to be."

The Reproof Valiant

Dr. Johnson said that "The Winter's Tale" was entertaining in spite of its absurdities. This play, "Cymbeline," and "The Tempest" were the three latest dramas that came from Shakespeare's pen. He was in the serener stage of his strenuous life, and it is possible that he "took it easy" in the choice of the story and in the treatment. It may have been that he wrote these three dramas rather to occupy himself than with the idea of increasing his fame and fortune, and that the allotment of a seashore to Bohemia was a hint that he looked upon the whole story of Greene's "Pandosto" as a fairy-tale, only worthy of a location in "Cloud-cuckoo-land." "The Winter's Tale" looks like the free, careless play of a consummate artist, who still shows his quality in the reckless but masterly strokes of his brush.

Considering what Johnson called its "absurdities," it is surprising that "The Winter's Tale" should have been so often revived by moderns. Garrick butchered it apologetically for Drury Lane in 1756, and played Leontes in that garbled version. Kemble sustained the same character when the drama was done at the same house in 1802, with Mrs. Siddons as Hermione; and Macready was the Leontes of a revival at Covent Garden in 1837. The cast of Charles Kean's elaborate production of the play in 1856 included Miss Heath who played Florizel, the Perdita being Miss Carlotta Leclercq, while John Ryder was the Polixenes. Then there was Chatterton's revival at Drury Lane in 1878, with Miss Wallis as Hermione, Mrs. Hermson Vezin as Paulina, and Miss Emily Fowler as Perdita, and, above all, Miss Mary Anderson's production of the piece at the Lyceum in 1887, when she doubled the rôles of Hermione and Perdita, Mr. Forbes-Robertson playing Leontes; Mr. F. H. Macklin, Polixenes; Mr. J. Maclean, Camillo; and Mr. Charles Collette, Autolycus.

Plays

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK,

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Mr. and Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT

AND THEIR COMPANY OF SCOTTISH PLAYERS

— IN —

A SCRAPE O' THE PEN

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

ALL MEN ARE FOOLS

A Play in One Act by H. M. VERNON.

Colonel Hazeldon	Officers of the Gordon Highlanders	Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Major Farnam		Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN
Lieut. the Hon. Percy Montrose ...		Mr. J. V. BRYANT
Tanda (an Indian Servant)		Mr. J. MORTON

Scene—Room in the Colonel's Bungalow in India. Time—The Present.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

	DANCE, "The Cadet"	Haines
(Before Act I.)	OVERTURE, "Rob Roy"	Foster
(Before Act II.)	1. "Dance Russe"	Tschaikowsky
	2. "Love in Arcady"	Hadyn Wood
	3. "The Ramblers"	Matt
(Before Act III.)	SELECTION, "Princess Caprice"	Leo. Fall
	MARCH, "Wee Macgreegor"	Devin

Play Produced under the personal direction of Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT and Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE.
Costumes designed by Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT.

Scenic Artist ... Mr. SYD COOK. Incidental Music ... Mr. JULIAN H. WILSON.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager	For Mr. Graham Moffat	CLIFFORD BROOKE
Acting Manager		J. CHAS. HUMPHRYS

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager ... . LEONARD LILLIES

THE COMEDY.

On Thursday, September 19, 1912, A Scrape o' the Pen was preceded by a play, in one act, by H. M. Vernon, entitled:—

All Men Are Fools.

Harry M. Vernon, favourably known as author of The Third Degree, Canada, The Deputy Sheriff, and other plays and sketches, has not undertaken any serious responsibility in providing the new first piece at the Comedy. All Men Are Fools, which has been serving as curtain-raiser to A Scrape o' the Pen since Thursday, is a mere trifle, written brightly enough, which may derive some adventitious charm from the picturesque and romantic Indian setting and environment that have been bestowed upon it. The title refers to the fooling of three men by one woman, and, incidentally, of a fourth by another, the name of the fair impostor being given in neither case. In the pretty bungalow of Colonel Hazeldon, of the Gordon Highlanders, one hears the discussion between him and Major Farnam as to how Hammond, a brother officer, had been humbugged by a girl, who, going back to England, ostensibly to get her trousseau, had employed that indispensable stock for the benefit of another man. The Colonel and the Major, becoming communicative, confess, severally, that each was engaged, the former's fiancée waiting only for his promotion, and the latter's for his succession to a title. It turns out that both have had their noses put out of joint by a subaltern, Lieut. the Hon. Percy Montrose, who, coming to ask for leave of absence, as he wishes to get married, having actually come into a peerage, shows them the photograph of the woman who was about to make him happy. Oh, for feminine duplicity; the photo. was the counterfeit presentment of the charming widow who had deluded both Colonel and Major.

FIRST PERFORMANCE, TO-NIGHT, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, 1912.

The Playhouse

LESSEE & MANAGER

Mr Cyril Maude

Telephone Nos.: Box Office City 5162 & 5163; Gerrard 3970
Manager's Office: Gerrard 487

To-Night, Saturday, September 28th, 1912, at 8.45 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, for the first time, a New Farce, in Three Acts, called

THE LITTLE CAFE

By TRISTAN BERNARD. (Author of "Toddles," "French as he is spoke," etc.)

ALBERT LORIFLAN (The Waiter at the Little Café)	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
BIGARDON (A Solicitor)	Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY
PHILIBERT (Proprietor of the Little Café)	Mr. CHARLES BIBBY
LUIGI (Head Waiter at the Café Fifine)	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
PLOUVIER (Motor Car Agent)	Mr. JAMES DALE
GASTONNETT (A Jeweller)	Mr. GEORGE C. BROWNE
COLONEL KERKONDEC	Mr. MARK PATON
ROCHE VILLAR	Mr. HASTINGS LYNN
PIETRO	Mr. E. R. HOLLWAY
CELLARMAN	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
BIANCA POGGIAPARTICO	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
BERENGERE D'AQUITAINE	Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
YVONNE (Daughter of Philibert)	Miss VERA COBURN
MIRIAM (Cashier at the Little Café)	Miss DAISY THIMM
JACQUELINE	Miss PEGGY HYLAND

LAPORTE (A Detective)	Customers at the Little Café	Mr. G. MASTERS	DIANE	Customers at the Little Café Miss MAUDE ANDREWS
JABERT		Mr. RONALD BRENT	AMÉLIE	Miss FAITH CELLI
PEZARD		Mr. W. HEMSTOCK	MADAME GRANDET	Miss A. TRAVERS
POULAIN		Mr. T. CASS	ANTOINETTE	Miss MONICA WEBB
POPINOT		Mr. G. H. GILBEY	PAMELA	Miss T. EDGAR BRUCE
PARBONNET		Mr. COLSTON MANSELL	ZOUZOU	Miss M. FORSYTH
RADINOT		Mr. G. MORRIS	NANON	Miss LAWRENCE COOPER
OLIVIER		Mr. L. ANDERSON	ZELIE	Miss AMY ELLIOT
XAVIER		Mr. R. CARFAX	CORINNE	Miss DOROTHY HANBURY
FRASIER		Mr. H. COATS	SUZANNE	Miss NETTA WESTCOTT
CROUCHOT		Mr. C. B. KESTON	STEPHANIE	Miss ALICE CHALMERS
NINON		Miss RUTH BIDWELL	AIMÉE	Miss ROSE ATKINS
LAWYER'S CLERK		Mr. L. PRINCE	LOLA	Miss DAISY LEIGH

BIANCA'S BAND: Miss KATHLEEN GRAHAME, Miss ELSIE MAYNARD, Miss G. VANE, Miss DORIS BATES.

Customers, Waiters, Sergt. de Ville, etc., etc.

ACT I.	The Little Café
ACT II.	The Café Fifine	BRUCE SMITH
ACT III.	The Little Café	"
		"

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

Ladies' Evening Dresses by MARTIAL & ARMAND, 125, New Bond Street. Hats, etc., by the MAISON LEWIS, 210, Regent Street.
Jewellery worn by the Ladies in Act II. by the Goldsir Diamond Co., 135, Regent Street. Wigs by CLARKSON, [illegible]
Costumes by MORRIS ANGEL, Cambridge Circus. Fancy Costumes by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD, 38, Royal Avenue, Chelsea.
Dress Suits by COOLING, LAWRENCE & SONS, 47, Maddox Street, W. Furniture by DRUCE & Co., Baker Street.
Silver and Cutlery by G. G. HONOUR, 63, Hatton Garden, E.C.
Mr. MAUDE wishes to thank Mr. DEGUILI, of the Pall Mall Restaurant, for his assistance in arranging the tables, etc., in Act II.
Words of songs sung by Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR written by Mr. C. H. BOVILL. The song "O Sole Mio" sung by Miss MAIDIE HOPE is by arrangement with Messrs. G. RICORDI & Co., 265, Regent Street.

Preceded at 8.15 by a Comedy in One Act, also for the first time, called

AUNT BESSIE

By WILFRED T. COLEBY. (Author of "Their Point of View," etc.)

Mr. GIBSON	Mr. D. MUNROE
FRED CHAYTER	(By arrangement with Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn.) Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
EMILY C. ROUCHER	Miss MABEL GARDEN
Mrs. GIBSON	Miss JOAN BLAIR

Scene—The Gibsons' Parlour, 127, Accacia Road, Brixton.

The following Programme of Music will be played:

"MARCH OF THE GIANTS"	Finck	"CHANSON DU PRINTEMPS"	Gillet
SUITE ... ... "Woodland Pictures" ...	Fletcher	VALSE ... ... "Tesoro mio!"	Becucci
1. In the Hayfields		"LA LISONGERA"	Chaminade
2. An Old Garden.		INTERMEZZO ... ... "Petite Câline" ...	Gillet
3. The Bean Feast.		VALSE ... ... "The Rose of Yesterday" ...	Lehmann
"DANSE DES BAISERS"	Ch. Borel Clerc	MARCH ... ... "La Berangère" ...	J. Ansell
"The Cubanola Glide"	Von Tilzer

Matinee Every Wednesday & Saturday at 2.15

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
Musical Director - - - - - - - - Mr. JOHN ANSELL

Assistant Business Manager - Mr. H. M. THORBURN

Box Office Open 10 to 10 under the direction of Mr. F. R. UNDERWOOD.

Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Stalls, 10/6 Balcony Stalls, 7/6 Fauteuils, 6/- Balcony, 5/- Upper Boxes, 2/6 Gallery 1/-

All Seats, including Gallery, can be booked.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - - Mr. ALFRED TURNER

We are so accustomed to have comedies presented to us under the title of farces, that when a frank farce is offered to use with a correct description of its quality, we are rather inclined to demand more from it than it professes to supply, which is fun. Of fun there is no lack in "The Little Café," and that statement disposes of all analytic or microscopic criticism. The piece does not pretend to be anything more than a farce, with an ingeniously-invented story, plenty of comic incident, and at least one extremely funny personage.

"Other waiters have no past, no present, and no future, they simply wait for all time. I am an extraordinary waiter; I have a past." Thus does Albert Loriflan, waiter at the "Little Café," differentiate himself from "other waiters." In the first place, Albert's parentage was extraordinary; his father was a gentleman, "gay, handsome, debonair," his mother was Scotch—"extra dry" Scotch—and in their son the characteristics of both parents struggled for precedence. Albert's "guv'nor," M. Philibert, proprietor of the "Little Café," has a beautiful daughter, Yvonne, who speaks Italian of sorts and plays the piano after a fashion. Albert loves Yvonne passionately; she is attracted by the man, but despises the waiter. Doubtful of herself, she petitions Papa Philibert to give Albert the sack. Papa is about to obey his daughter, when the serpent enters Eden, and tempts honest Philibert, who, after a feeble resistance, falls.

Bigardon, a solicitor, has advance news of a fortune for Albert, a heritage of £32,000; and as solicitors in French farces are invariably unscrupulous, he has concocted a clever little scheme for dispossessing Albert of one-fourth of his fortune as soon as he is in possession of it, and of this Bigardon proposes to annex one-half, leaving the remainder to Philibert for his share in the transaction. When Albert ascends from the cellar where he had been putting "a little wine on the top of a lot of beer," inducing thereby a mood of much conviviality, he is persuaded with little difficulty to sign a contract by which he agrees to remain at the little café for twenty years at a salary of £4 a week, the forfeit for breach of the contract to be the sum of £8,000. But when news of his inheritance arrives by the next post, Albert refuses to fall into the trap set so cleverly for him by the wily Bigardon. The Scotch caution inherited from his mother asserts itself; and, after a futile attempt to make Philibert the contract-breaker, Albert makes up his mind to remain a waiter from 8 to 12, and follow in the footsteps of the "bon vivcur," his father, from 12 to 8.

This decision nonplusses the conspirators for a while; but clever Bigardon again rises to the occasion. He will see to it that the life of Albert the gentleman shall become too attractive for Albert the waiter, so he introduces him to smart restaurants and still smarter ladies, who try their hardest to win his love in order that they may spend his money. The "canny Scot" remains uppermost in Albert; he revels at night at the expense of others, by day he serves coffee, absinthe, "one Bock one," to the patrons of the "Little Café," pockets their tips, and remains ever faithful to Yvonne the Scornful, "a silent worshipper outside a shrine he could never hope to enter." In despair, Bigardon at last abandons his original plan of campaign, and prepares another. This time Yvonne is to be an unwilling confederate, and is to hex Albert to leave the "Little Café" for her sake. This she agrees to do with some reluctance; but the sight of his distress touches her heart. She discloses the true state of her feelings for him, and Albert enters the shrine, a "silent worshipper" no longer.

"The Little Café" was preceded by a new comedy in one act, by Wilfred T. Coleby, entitled

"AUNT BESSIE."

Mr. Gibson .....Mr. D. Munroe
Fred Chayter .....Mr. Arthur Curtis
Emily C. Roucher .....Miss Mabel Garden
Mrs. Gibson .....Miss Joan Blair

"Aunt Bessie" is rather a cynical little piece. Aunt Bessie's husband has a favourite niece, Emily, of whom the aunt is inclined to be jealous, and her feeling is intensified when she hears from Emily's lips a confession of dishonesty under stress of circumstances, and is told of her uncle's help to disentangle her from the "consequences" which the aunt is supposed to have heard about from her husband. Aunt Bessie, however, still manages to score off the latter, though she has to descend to a little prevarication in order to accomplish this desirable end

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

195

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

EVERY EVENING at 8.15 (MATINEES at 2)

WILL BE ACTED

THE TURNING POINT

An English version, in Three Acts, of HENRY KISTEMAECKERS' Play, "La Flambée" by PETER LE MARCHANT

Lieutenant-Colonel Felt	... ...	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Bertrand de Mauret	... ...	ATHOL STEWART
Marcel Beaucourt	... ...	GODFREY TEARLE
Julius Glogau	... ...	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Monseigneur Jussey	... ...	J. D. BEVERIDGE
Stettin	... ...	RUPERT LISTER
Henri Cartelle	(Prosecutor for St. Claude)	ALFRED A. HARRIS
Paul Rudiet	... (Examining Magistrate) ...	HAROLD HOLLAND
Justin	... ...	EDGAR B. PAYNE
The Mayor	... ...	HERBERT REA
Dr. Dufot	... ...	W. COATS-BUSH
Recorder to M. Rudiet	... ...	JOHN RIDLEY
Orderly	... ...	AUSTIN FEHRMAN
Country Policeman	... ...	V. C. GUY
Monique Felt	... ...	ETHEL IRVING
Yvonne Stettin	... ...	NORMA WHALLEY
Thérèse Deniau	... ...	LETTICE FAIRFAX
Annette	... ...	OLGA NICHOLSON

The Scene is laid at Stettin's Country House.

THE SCENES ARE FROM DESIGNS BY FELIX JOUBERT AND GUY LAKING AND PAINTED BY G. SACKMANN.

INTERVALS: 10 minutes between the Acts.

"THE TURNING POINT."

English version, in Three Acts, by Peter le Marchant, of Henry Kistemaecker's Play, "La Flambée," produced at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 1.

"The Turning Point" is one of the most interesting and remarkable plays that have been presented in London for a long time. That it is a triumphant success at the St. James's goes without saying; its sensational story and strong scenes make that secure. But the treatment is curious—and curiously effective. For instance, the author, M. Kistemaecker, is elaborate in his preparation. The way in which we are introduced to the personages in the first act is unusually deliberate. We glide into knowledge of how matters stand, as Burke was said to glide into a subject, "like a serpent." It is necessary that the audience should be informed of the exact state of Monique Felt's feeling for her husband. M. Kistemaecker manages this most adroitly. A benevolent bishop is introduced, who gives his former penitent a lecture on the sin of divorce, and the evil of advanced modern thought. We are interested in the argument, and, under cover of it, we acquire the information that Monique's husband has worn out the love which grew out of her nursing the strong man during his illness by the way in which he has kept that part of his life which concerns his career as an important military magnate entirely separate from her, and by his stoical self-sufficiency. At one time it seems as if the author were merely failing into the mistake of verbosity; but, later on, we realise how much this artistic preparation adds to the strength of the action when it comes. Again, there are few "common or garden" dramatists who, at whatever inconvenience regarding scenery, could have resisted the temptation to show us the murder of Glogau actually committed. But M. Kistemaecker knew better. The climax of "La Flambée" is a moral, not a physical, one. It is not whether Felt shall escape punishment for his justifiable homicide, but whether he shall win back his wife's love, that is the most important thing at stake.

Felt has got deeply into debt in order, by supplying his wife with luxury, to win her love. Having lost this wife's love, he tries to regain it by giving her all that most women covet and desire. The secret agent of a foreign power, anxious to obtain the plans of an important French fortress, buys up all Felt's bills, and then threatens to make him bankrupt. At the same time, his wife, worn out by his attitude towards her—an attitude which the misguided man imagines to be the way to win her deepest affection—has arranged with a certain Marcel Beaucourt, a successful barrister and politician, that she shall obtain a divorce from Felt—who, in order to excite her jealousy, has been pretending to make love to another woman—and that she shall then marry Beaucourt. This is the situation at the end of the first act, the curtain coming down on Glogau, the agent of the foreign power, making an appointment with the Colonel in his room.

The second act takes place in Monique's dressing-room, which "gives," as the French say, on her husband's bedroom—the pair are divorced de thoro already. Monique has arranged with Beaucourt to come to her at 1 a.m. to discuss the divorce. Just before that hour, Monique's maid arrives from above to tell of a mysterious "thud" she has heard on the floor on which Monique and her husband sleep. Then Felt comes in, no longer the self-contained, authoritative soldier, but a trembling, hopeless criminal. Broken-spirited, and seeing death and disgrace at hand, he explains to his wife his past and present conduct, and finally confesses to having strangled Glogau in the next room, in a fit of fury at the agent having offered to return him his bills in exchange for the plans of the important French fortress. Then Monique's love, which was not dead but only sleeping, awakes. There is a short scene of passionate affection between them, and then she takes command of the situation, and prepares to save her husband. This is done in the last act by taking Beaucourt into their confidence. At first eager to ruin Felt, he hears the whole story, and succeeds in getting Glogau's death attributed to Anarchists.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 2nd, at 7-45,
and NIGHTLY at 7-45.
MATINEES—Wednesdays & Saturdays at 2-30.

AN ENTIRELY NEW AND ORIGINAL DRAMA

THE OPEN DOOR

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN LANDECK.

The Play Presented and Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music specially composed by H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Characters:

Raphael (a Refugee)		Mr. C. W. STANDING
Colonel Stepanmitch (Chief of Military) ...		Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Tarask Kravosky (Judge of Court) ...		Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Superintendent of Police		Mr. HARRY NEWMAN
Osip		Mr. C. MORGAN RICKARDS
Rabbi Simeon		Mr. EDWARD THANE
Jankel		Mr. LAWRENCE PHILLIPS
Fifi Dupont	Dancers of St. Petersburgh Grand Ballet	Miss EVELYN HOPE
Carmen Gelaune		Miss CISSIE NORRIS
Vi Darville		Miss LILIAN DACROY
Hortense Rigodon		Miss GLADYS VIVIAN
Joseph (a Jailor)		Mr. FRED ELSWORTHY
Anna Feodorovna		Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Judah Abramoff (a Spy)		Mr. FRED MORGAN
Baron Gavrilo Petroff	Governor of the Province	Mr. ALBERT WARD
Kwas	Cossacks	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Gourki		Mr. FRED POWELL
Peter		Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Paul		Mr. CYRIL GRIFFITHS
Feodor Shtabel		Mr. HARRY G. WRIGHT
Major Zarvod ...	Russian Officers	Mr. H. SMITH
Lieut. Pavolda ...		Mr. ALFRED EVERITT
Capt. Kara ...		Mr. HAROLD GAZE
Capt. Vladimir ...		Mr. HUGH SELWYN
Ivan Vinikoff (Government Prosecutor) ..		Mr. WILL T. RILEY
Zorah (a Dancing Girl)		Miss LILIAN HALLOWS
Miriam (Raphael's Wife)		Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
and
Homo (a Friend of Man)		Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES

Soldiers, Prison Guards, Peasants, etc.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

ACT 1. Scene 1.	The Refugees.	The City of Molsk.
Scene 2.	A Friend of Man.	The Forest.
Scene 3.	"The man can die, but the woman must live."	Inside the Cave.
ACT 2. Scene 1.	The Law and the Woman.	The Court House at Molsk.
Scene 2.	The Brute and the Woman.	The Barrack Yard.
ACT 3. Scene 1.	Temptation of the Flesh.	The Governor's Grand Supper Hall.
Scene 2.		On the road to the Plains.
Scene 3.	Faith.	The Plains.
ACT 4. Scene 1.	The Gates of Freedom.	Within the Prison.
Scene 2.	Unto the Sea and the Land Beyond.	The Open Door.

Costumes executed by J. HYMAN & CO., 19 Leicester Square, W.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE will play the following selections :—

(1) OVERTURE	- -	"Semiramide"	Rossini.
(2) ENTR'ACTE	- -	"Nero"	Coleridge Taylor.
(3)	- - -	"Capriccio Italien"	Tschaikowsky.
(4) TWO INTERMEZZOS	-	(a) "Miriam" (b) "Homo"	H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

Myaticism and melodrama are effectively allied in the autumn production at the Lyceum. "The Open Door" approaches closer, perhaps, than any other play to the dramatisation of the life of the Redeemer, a typical scene being that where the chief figure is placed for execution between two other condemned men, one unrepentant and the other justified, and after lying lifeless for a few seconds rises unscathed by the bullets of a firing party which have killed his companions. The incidents of the play are in most cases reverently presented, though the passage regarding St. Antony is not in the best of taste, and the implication of a religious in a charge of Infraction of the seventh commandment is to be deprecated. The drama, however, contains innumerable scenes of sentiment beloved of the masses, and preaches a salutary lesson of virtue and faith.

The leading personage, significantly named Homo, is first seen in the depths of a Russian forest, where he preserves from self-destruction, Raphael, a young Jew, and his wife, who have fled to the woods to escape the persecutions of Baron Petroff, a Muscovite inspector-general, who has cast lascivious eyes upon Miriam, the young Jew's pretty wife. Homo conducts them to a cave, and promises to protect Miriam, while Raphael goes off to warn his fellow-religionists in a distant town of a contemplated massacre of his brethren. Miriam's safety is short-lived, for a band of Cossacks raid the cave and carry off the girl, not, however, before Homo has given them a specimen of his supernatural power, for when the leader of the troup strikes him on the face and Homo turns the other cheek, the man's arm, raised to strike, falls powerless by his side.

Consigned to prison, Miriam is subsequently brought up to be tried for resisting the law, but the charge, at the Governor's instigation, is altered to a graver fault, which implicates the protector Homo, and she is sentenced to the knout. All preparations are made for the punishment, but the Cossack who is selected to perform the operation refuses to flog a woman, and is supported by his comrades, who revolt. They are about to attack the Governor and his officers when Homo, who has obtained a strange influence over the men, steps forward and restores order.

The Baron shows his gratitude to his preserver by arranging for Zorah, a dancing girl, to make an attack on his virtue. Draped in the approved Salome fashion, Zorah employs all her artifices and allurements, but in vain, and the interview ends in the complete surrender of Zorah, who, like the Magdalen, falls weeping at the feet of Homo. Meanwhile, Raphael has been betrayed into his enemies' hands by one of his brethren, who gets the promised reward of thirty pieces of silver, but is sentenced to be shot. Raphael and his wife are languishing in prison lamenting the absence of their promised preserver, when the prison door suddenly opens and Homo appears. He beckons them to follow, and the next scene finds them on a raft on the sea, whence they are taken on board a British ship, leaving Homo standing a solitary figure on the broad ocean.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3rd, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING AT 9,

DOORMATS

A New Comedy in Three Acts, by HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.

Noel	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Uncle Rufus	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Captain Harding	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Aunt Josephine	Miss NINA BOUCICAULT
Leila	Miss MARIE LÖHR

The action takes place in Noel Gale's house in Chelsea.

ACT I.	The Studio (Six weeks elapse)
ACT II.	The Drawing Room (A month elapses)
ACT III.	The Dining Room

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Marie Löhr's Costumes by PAQUIN, Ltd., 39 Dover Street, W.
Miss Nina Boucicault's Costumes by VIOLETTE, 20 Orchard Street, W.
Furniture by D. L. ISAACS, 50 New Oxford Street, W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.
(FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5th, at 2.15.)

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1. SPANISH MARCH, "La Giralda" ... Juarrauz
2. SELECTION, "Princess Caprice" ... Leo Fall
3. a. DANCE OF THE LITTLE FEET ... Gaston de Bréville
   b. "That Mysterious Rag" ... Ted Snyder
   c. NEW VALSE ... Corelli Windeatt
4. a. SONG, "Winds in the Trees" ... Goring Thomas
   b. MELODIE, "Un peu d'amour" ... Lao Silesu
   c. ENTRACTES, "Dream Dances" ... Coleridge Taylor

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 7.45. Matinees at 1.45. Commence at 8.15. Matinees at 2.15.

Business Manager ... HERBERT JAY

It is Aunt Josephine who explains the significance of the term "doormats" as applied to human beings. There are in this weary world the people who give all and the people who take all. The former, according to Aunt Josephine, are the doormats, and the latter are the boots. The charming old lady further explained to her nephew, Noel Gale, that there are men and women who are by nature unyielding and selfish; there are, happily, others who are just as pliant and unselfish, who find a never-ending delight in ministering to and in giving way to those they are closely associated with. Noel Gale, artist and good fellow, has allowed his wife to have her own way ever since their marriage. He has spoilt her just as a child is often spoilt.

Uncle Rufus, a retired Indian judge, and his wife—the Aunt Josephine already mentioned—come to stay with the Gales at their home in Chelsea, and they have not been long in the house before they discover that the young artist, their nephew, is not so happy in his domestic relations as they had hoped he was. There is a screw loose somewhere. Aunt Josephine, who is a bit of a critic in her way, detects a deterioration in Noel's artistic work. The portrait he is painting is mechanical. Noel admits that his wife, Leila, is fond of gadding about to theatres, balls, dinner parties, and other social functions. Of course, he must go with her, and the result is that his work as an artist suffers. He does not like the life, but he has given in to his wife's wishes. The old judge, having seen a good deal of life, tells his nephew that he has made a mistake. There is no recompense for the man who sacrifices himself at the altar of love.

An American calls upon Gale and suggests that he should enter into competition for an important job in America, but it is necessary that he should visit that country, all his expenses being guaranteed. He decides to accept the offer, but is keenly disappointed when he finds that his wife makes it quite evident that she has no wish to accompany him. What has happened—bearing out the judge's view—is that Leila has not appreciated what a good husband she has, and has entered into a foolish flirtation with Captain Harding. He is having his portrait painted by Gale, but that is only a pretext for seeing Mrs. Gale as often as possible. Leila does not mean that any harm shall come of making the captain her captive, but playing with fire is a dangerous game.

Gale departs for America. Leila is left in charge of Uncle Rufus and Aunt Josephine. The gallant Captain, quite indifferent as to whether his picture is ever finished or not, calls at the house every day, and Leila visits him at his chambers. The Captain believes he is very much in love, and he and the grass widow "spoon" in the drawing room. The old couple are disgusted, and Leila listens calmly to strong remonstrances. The Captain is given the cold shoulder. Then Noel returns home before he is expected, his letter having failed to reach his wife. When he learns of the goings on of Harding and Leila, Noel is naturally very angry, and this leads up to a strong scene between him and the naughty spoilt child, his wife. Taking the advice of Uncle Rufus, he attempts to turn the tables by making Leila jealous of the wife of his American friend, but it all ends in a complete surrender to Leila. But Gale has lost confidence in his wife, and the breach between the couple becomes wider every day. Indeed, the human "doormat" is having a very bad time of it, and the state of affairs becomes intolerable. His wife, he believes, is in love with another man. He must make a further sacrifice, and give her her freedom. The Captain, waxing bolder than ever, tempts Leila to run away with him in a motor-car which is waiting round the corner. Gale proposes to his wife that he should return to America, pick up with some woman there, and so give Leila the opportunity of bringing an action for divorce. Uncle Rufus and Aunt Josephine are horrified, the old man also waxes very wrath, but Noel is determined to unravel the matrimonial tangle in his own way. The three people principally concerned discuss the situation. The Captain and Leila are opposed to Gale's Quixotic proposal, but, finding the husband resolved, Harding gives in. Leila, however, stands firm, and the Captain loses his temper. The man appears in his true colours. He is an arrant cad, and selfish in the extreme. He and Leila say unpleasant things to each other, and the Captain, a despicable figure, beats an undignified retreat. The husband, however, weak as he has shown himself to be, is not disposed to take the lady back to his arms just yet. It is her turn to play the part of the doormat. Having had her lesson, there is hope that Leila will become a true and devoted wife in the future. All the same, one regrets that the Captain does not get the thrashing he so thoroughly deserves.

201

Queen's Theatre.

∴ October 7th, 1912. ∴

MISS ETHEL WARWICK's SEASON.

"ZAZA"

By PIERRE BERTON and CHARLES SIMON, adapted by DAVID BELASCO.
By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.

Cast of the Play.

Bernard Dufrene		Mr. GUY STANDING
Duc de Brissac		Mr. H. ASHETON TONGE
Jacques Rigault	(An old College Chum of Bernard)	Mr. PHILIP HEWLAND
Cascart	(The Singing Partner of Zaza)	Mr. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Blac	(Coricaturist)	Mr. LESLIE RYECROFT
Joly	(Stage Manager, Ambassadors Theatre)	Mr. HEATH HAVILAND
Hector	(Cafe Chantant Performer)	Mr. KENNETH BASHAM
Verneau	(Cafe Chantant Performer)	Mr. FREDERICK BINNINGTON
Rosa Bonne	(Zaza's Aunt)	Miss KATE KEARNEY
Madame Dufrene		Miss MINNIE GREY
Divonne	(A Housekeeper)	Miss NANCY GIRLING
Lisette	(A Maid)	Miss CONSTANCE BACHNER
Toto		Miss DOROTHY BURGESS
Alice Morel		Miss BEATRICE AINLEY
Florianne	(ex-favourite)	Miss MADELEINE MEREDITH
Lolotte	(Cafe Chantant Performer)	Miss FLORENCE GRIMALDI
Juliette	(Cafe Chantant Performer)	Miss MADELAINE BOWLAND
Flower Girl		Miss ESME FRANCIS
Nathalie		Miss INE CAMERON
Zaza		Miss ETHEL WARWICK

Plays

2

NEW PRINCES THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE (New Oxford Street End),

LONDON, W.C.

Under the direction of { WALTER MELVILLE. FREDK. MELVILLE.

On WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9th, 1912, at 7.45.

Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND (as EDMOND DANTES) Miss FRANCES DILLON (as MERCEDES)

AND FULL COMPANY IN

The Great Romantic Drama of ALEXANDRE DUMAS' MASTERPIECE

The Adventures of the COUNT DE

MONTE CRISTO

Play Presented and Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

CHARACTERS IN THE PROLOGUE.

Edmond Dantès, Mate of the Pharaoh	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
M. Danglars, Supercargo of the Pharaoh	Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Fernand Mondego, Catalian Fisherman	Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
M. Noirtier, a Bonapartist	Mr. G. MAYOR COOKE
M. Villefort, Procureur de Roi	Mr. FELIX PITT
Caderouse, a Drunken Tailor	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Gendarme	Mr. HERBERT MILTON
La Carconte, Wife of Caderouse	Miss POLLY MARSH
Marie, a Servant	Miss ISABEL ROLAND
Mercedes, a Catalian Peasant Girl	Miss FRANCES DILLON

PROLOGUE—Scene 1 ... ... The Harbour of Marseilles
Scene 2. Offices of the Procureur du Roi. The Brothers.
Scene 3. The Harbour. Arrest of Dantès.

A period of 14 years elapses between the Prologue and the Drama.

CHARACTERS IN THE DRAMA.

No. 19
Abbe Busoni ...
Johannes, a Jew ...	... ... Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Count de Monte Cristo
Abbe Faria
Fernand Mondego, Count de Morcerf	Mr. FRED D. DAVISS
Baron Danglars	Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
M. Noirtier	Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
M. Villefort	Mr. G. MAYOR COOKE
Caderouse	Mr. FELIX PITT
Albert de Morcerf	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Geodarme	Mr. R. MARIUS ST. JOHN
La Carconte	Mr. SPENCER CARPENTER
Mercedes	Miss POLLY MARSH
	Miss FRANCES DILLON

Act I. ... Scene 1 ... ... Madame de Morcerf's Secret
Scene 2. Dante's Cell in the Chateau D'If. Dantès and the Abbe Faria. Death of the Abbe. The Oath of Vengeance. The Escape of Dantès. Change to the Open Sea. The World is Mine.

Act II. ... ... Inn of the Pont Du Garde
The Abbe Busoni. The Diamond. The Avenger. "ONE."
A Period of 5 years elapses between Acts II. and III.

Act III. ... ... Salon de Morcerf
The Banker. Albert de Morcerf's Story. The Count de Monte Cristo. Mercedes. The Living Man with a Dead Heart. "TWO."

Act IV. ... ... The Forest of Fontainebleau
The Denunciation. The Duel. THE LAST ONE. "THREE."

The Scenery painted by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS and the LYCEUM STUDIO.
Uniforms and Costumes by JOHN HYMAN, 19 Leicester Square, W.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... G. GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager ... ... W. WILSON BLAKE

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

Proprietors MR. & MRS. FRANK WYATT.

On MONDAY, OCTOBER 14th, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and on subsequent Evenings, at 8.30,

"I suppose I must not try to lead the conversation round to the triple bill at the Duke of York's?"

"Why not? There is no secret about it. It is in active rehearsal. There will be three plays by three authors—Barrie, Pinero, Shaw. Let the theatres of Europe produce three better men if they can!"

"What is the name of your play, Mr. Shaw?"

"There is no need to tell you: the authors will be recognised by their style: you can't mistake them. Good morning."

"One moment more. Is it true that when the three plays were finished it was found that all three authors had hit on the same subject, and that new plays had to be written?"

"No; because the new ones would have been on the same subject, too. What really happened was that the play that was finished first had a ghost in it, and when the second play arrived it had six ghosts in it. Now, it happens that there is only one ghost in stock at the Duke of York's Theatre; so the author of the six ghosts had to retire for ten minutes and knock off another play. As that is the simple truth of the matter, I may safely tell it to you, because nobody will believe it. Good morning."

Exit Mr. Shaw.

Very naturally, perhaps, some paragraphic capital has been made out of an alleged "coincidence" between the plays which Sir Arthur Pinero and Mr. J. M. Barrie have written to be presented with Mr. Shaw's new piece in which Mr. Charles Frohman is to present. During a short talk with Sir Arthur on general dramatic matters we touched upon this "coincidence" business in connection with his contribution to the Duke of York's programme.

The Three-Dramatist Bill

* * *

"As to the so-called coincidence between my play and Mr. Barrie's original contribution to our triple bill," said Sir Arthur Pinero, "you may take it from me that there is little or nothing in it. The plays are wholly dissimilar in story, characterisation, and setting. There are, however, some 'effects'—I use the word in its purely theatrical sense—common to both pieces, the repetition of which might give an air of monotony to the programme; and it is for this reason, I assume, that my friend Mr. Barrie has withdrawn his original play and substituted another.

* * *

"But any play from Mr. Barrie's pen is bound to be charming and tender and altogether delightful; and I think the public may rely upon it that they will be offered something characteristic of his great genius. In the meantime, the matter has provided material for the sensational paragraph which, it seems, must always accompany a production nowadays, and which does so much, in my opinion, to vulgarise the theatre and to disgust those who would like to see its work carried on modestly."

* * *

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—A little misunderstanding seems to have arisen regarding three one-act plays to be produced presently at the Duke of York's Theatre, though you put the matter correctly in your Notes the other day. One of these plays is by me, and it is not the one I had written for the purpose. It is said that the change was made because of a resemblance between mine and one of the other plays. There is no resemblance either in subject or treatment, but the management discovered a somewhat similar scenic effect, which they thought was unfortunate for the programme, and I discovered that it was much better done by the other dramatist (I am showing some skill in writing this without mentioning his name), and so, without showing him my play, I substituted another. All this must be about as interesting to the general public as the appearance of a mouse in Bond-street, but perhaps you will kindly find space for it.—Yours truly,

The Athenæum. Sept. 30. J. M. BARRIE.

ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 14th at 8 o'clock, and on subsequent Evenings at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

OVERRULED,

A DEMONSTRATION

BY

BERNARD SHAW.

GREGORY LUNN	Mr. CLAUDE KING
SIBTHORPE JUNO	Mr. ADOLPHUS VANE TEMPEST
MRS. JUNO	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
MRS. LUNN	Miss GERALDINE OLLIFFE

(By Arrangement with Miss Lillah McCarthy and Mr. Granville Barker).

SCENE ... A Corner in a Seaport Hotel.

PERIOD ... Yesterday Night.

THE WIDOW OF WASDALE HEAD

A FANTASY

BY

ARTHUR PINERO.

SIR JOHN HUNSLET	Mr. A. E. ANSON
MR. EDWARD FANE	Mr. VERNON STEEL
TUBAL (A Servant at the inn)	Mr. WILLIE WARDE
REUBEN (Sir John's man)	Mr. J. WOODALL-BIRDE
THE VISITOR	Mr. FRED KERR
MRS. JESMOND	Miss MARGERY MAUDE

SCENE ... A room in an inn at Wasdale Head in Cumberland.

TIME ... In the reign of George the Third.

The Costumes designed by BYAM SHAW, and executed by B. J. SIMMONS.

ROSALIND,

A COMEDY

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

MRS. PAGE	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
CHARLES (her friend)	Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
MRS. QUICKLY	Miss HELEN HAYE

SCENE ... Far from London.

Plays

Mr. J. M. Barrie's piece, Rosalind, last on the programme, came as a welcome relief after the rather depressing ghost tale. Mr. Barrie has a wonderful sense of the theatre. He touches on sentiment and is off again before one can accuse him of being sentimental—his humour is quaint and so light and enjoyable; and yet at the finish of Rosalind one is driven to the conclusion that the success of the piece is the success of sentiment. Of course, Mr. Barrie had Miss Irene Vanbrugh to help him, and it was partly, if not mainly, due to her that the intangible something—usually referred to as atmosphere—was secured in Rosalind from the rising of the curtain. Mrs. Page is enjoying tea with her landlady—in a cottage presumably in the country somewhere. She is in a drab dressing-gown, with bedroom slippers, her hair rather untidy—in fact, she is rather slatternly, but she is evidently enjoying the cosy comfort of everything immensely as she thinks befits her middle age. She confesses to "forty and a bittock." Obtruding on her comfort comes Charles, a young man who, caught in the rain, wants to dry his clothes. He discovers a photograph on the mantelpiece of the actress with whom he is in love, and, thinking that Mrs. Page is her mother (she passes herself off as such), he reveals to her how deep and sincere his affection is. Mrs. Page is the actress in question, who, seen off by her admirers in a train for Monte Carlo, has chosen to rusticate and to enjoy for a month comfortable middle age, and she opens the eyes of Charles to the astonishing fact. That he does not believe it, and has to be convinced by the enumeration of particulars, such as the altered dress, the untidy hair, and the matter of the exchange of figure for comfort are channels for some of Mr. Barrie's delightful writing and nimble wit. On the stage, says Mrs. Page, people are either under 29 or over 60. No dramatists, except the inexperienced, wrote plays for middle-aged women. A woman was permanently 29 for years and years, and she was not confined to the stage; the stalls were full of twenty-nines. A telegram arrives. It is from her manager, to the effect that he had intended to produce three short plays, but they have turned out to be so much alike that he is going to put up As You Like It, and wants her for Rosalind. Charles has been summing up his emotions, which have been rather shaken, and Mrs. Page has chaffed him into admitting that he will go in her train, but get out at the next station. While she is changing and packing, the sentimental utterances of the landlady decide him to the heroic. He will marry her and make her middle age happy and smooth. But when Mrs. Page emerges from her room it is as the Beatrice he had previously known. Her middle age has been put off with her drab dress. She is as young, sprightly, and animated as she ever appeared, and she is going up to town to play Rosalind. "Good-bye, mother," she says, kissing her hand to the empty bedroom, and the two are gone in a whirl of laughter and high spirits. Charles will not get out at the next station; he will go all the way.

There is, of course, no particular novelty in the idea of Mr. Barrie's Rosalind. We have had it before, most recently, we think, in Lady Frederick

THE LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN STREET. ADELPHI. W.C.

Proprietress GERTRUDE KINGSTON

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15th, 1912, at 8 p.m.,
And Every Evening at 8.30 p.m.

Captain Brassbound's Conversion

By BERNARD SHAW.

Felix Drinkwater ...	HARRY NICHOLLS	Osman	ARTHUR BACHNER
The Rev. Leslie Rankin	GRAEME CAMPBELL	Johnson	HUGH TABBERER
Lady Cicely Waynflete	GERTRUDE KINGSTON	Sidi el Assif ...	PHILIP CUNINGHAM
Sir Howard Hallam ...	CHARLES SUGDEN	The Cadi of Kintafi ...	GEORGE BARRAN
Marzo	DAVID HALLAM	Captain Hamlin Kearney (of the United States Cruiser Santiago)	W. B. DAVIS
Captain Brassbound ...	GERALD LAWRENCE
Redbrook	GEOFFREY DENYS	Petty Officer ...	CLIFFORD MARQUAND

Act I.—On the heights overlooking the Harbour of Mogador.

Act II.—A Room in a Moorish Castle.

Act. III.—A Room in Rankin's House.

Scenery by W. JOHNSTON. Costumes by EDITH CRAIG. Wigs by CLARKSON

Miss Kingston's Dress in Act I made by MADAME CARLIE, 60, Brompton Road, S.W., and in Act II by MADAME IRENE, 45, South Audley Street, W.

A Gong will sound on the Stage and a bell ring in the Tea Room one minute before the rise of the curtain.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
First Matinee, Saturday, October 19th.

Business Manager ... ... ARTHUR PENLEY

Captain Brassbound's Conversion,

written in 1899, had its copyright secured in the same year through a performance by Sir Henry Irving's company at the Court Theatre, Liverpool, when the title part was played by Mr. Laurence Irving, and that of Lady Cicely Waynflete by Miss Ellen Terry. It was performed in London by the Stage Society, at the old Strand Theatre, on Sunday, the 16th December, 1900, when Miss Janet Achurch played Lady Cicely, and Mr. Laurence Irving again Captain Brassbound. In October, 1907, it was produced in Berlin with Miss Agnes Sorma as Lady Cicely. It did not come into the normal traffic of the English stage until 1906, when it was produced by Messrs. Vedrenne & Barker at the Court Theatre, with Miss Ellen Terry as Lady Cicely. Miss Terry then made her jubilee tour of America, and subsequently of the British Provinces, with the play. It has been attempted by the Repertory Theatres of Glasgow, Manchester and Liverpool; but its dependence for the adequate performance of the part of Lady Cicely (written for Miss Ellen Terry) on artistic faculty and personal attraction of a very rare order has prevented its performance by companies without special resources.

Even Miss Terry had to struggle in 1906 against adverse opinions of the play owing to the rather violent transition through which the art of the theatre was then passing. When any art drifts into that phrase of extreme artificiality in which its touch with contemporary life is lost, the ensuing reaction to natural subjects and straightforward lifelike methods—the Return to Nature, as we say—may be welcome enough to the world at large; but it invariably and inevitably produces on the case-hardened professional critic an impression of perverse and outrageous violation of custom, undertaken wantonly in a spirit of mischief or as a bid for notoriety. In 1906 the Return to Nature was operating very grotesquely in this way in the London theatres; and Captain Brassbound's Conversion suffered with many other plays by the same author. Indeed it suffered specially because its thesis was trite, its story obviously taken straight from contemporary life, and its technical method ancient and simple. To begin with the method, it was far older than the platform-stage method of Shakespear or even the ritual method of ancient Athens, being frankly the time-honored trick of those dramatic interludes between the clown and the ringmaster which have enlivened circuses since men learnt the art of horsemanship. This method was stamped on the consciousness of literate Europe 250 years ago through its deliberate adoption by Molière. The material is some six years and a-half

Captain Brassbound's Conversion,
ed by Miss Gertrude Kingston, on day, at the redecorated and altered playhouse in the Adelphi, was ed at the Court at a series of renne-Barker matinées, beginning ch 20, 1906. Miss Kingston now mes the rôle of Lady Cicely Wayn-
, sustained at the Court by Miss n Terry, and, before that, by Miss et Achurch, at the Strand, on the -private production in December,
, by the Stage Society, then in their nd season, and again by her at the public performance, at the Queen's, chester, May 12, 1902. The pirate or and here, at present played by Mr.
ald Lawrence, had a grimly sardonic onent, with the Stage Society, in Mr.
rence Irving, followed, at the Court,
Mr. Frederick Kerr; whilst his kidped uncle, the indignant Judge, Sir ward Hallam, is on this revival acted
Mr. Charles Sugden, treading in the formerly filled by Mr. Courtenay orpe and Mr. J. H. Barnes. Mr.
nd Gwenn is succeeded in the part the Scotch missionary Leslie Rankin's kney convert, Felix, or "Brandy-faced
" Drinkwater, by that long popular edian Mr. Harry Nicholls, whom we pleased to see in the West End again;
the rescuing American officer, Cap-
Hamlin Kearney (at one time played
Mr. Granville Barker and again by James Carew), the fanatical Sheik Sidi Assif, his superior the Cadi, the unded bandit Marzo, and two other of sbound's crew, Johnson and "Kiddy" lbrook, are other parts affording op-rtunity for good character sketches in "Adventure" of George Bernard aw, which the sarcastic author pub-ed, under the category of "Three ys for Puritans," together with The ll's Disciple and Cæsar and Cleopatra.

Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietors: Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessee: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Manager (for Mr. George Edwardes): Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19th, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

THE DANCING MISTRESS

A MUSICAL PLAY IN THREE ACTS.

By JAMES T. TANNER.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and PERCY GREENBANK.

Music by LIONEL MONCKTON.

Stage Production by J. A. E. MALONE.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. CARL KIEFERT

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.;
Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephones—2645 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.
BOX OFFICE open from 10 to 10.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen in front to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

. . . Cast of the Play . . .

Widdicombe ...	Butler at "Down House"	... Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Lord Lyndale (otherwise Mr. Viner) ...		... Mr. F. POPE STAMPER
Dubois		... Mr. O. J. WILLIAMS
Baron Montalba		... Mons. G. CARVEY
Berchili ...	Manager of Grand Hotel des Alpes	... Mr. IVAN BERLYN
Signor Tonelli	Singing Master at "Down House"	... Mr. ELIOT SKINNER
Mons. Rosemblum ...	A Banker ...	... Mr. ERNEST A. DOUGLAS
	AND
Teddy Cavanagh ...	An Aeroplanist ...	... Mr. JOSEPH COYNE
Jeanic McTavish	"Tuckwoman" at "Down House"	... Miss GRACIE LEIGH
Mlle. Virginie Touchet ...	French Mistress at "Down House"	... Mlle. M. CAUMONT
Bella Peach ...	Daughter of an Argentine Millionaire	... Miss ELSIE SPAIN
Miss Pindrop...	Principal of "Down House"	... Miss AGNES THOMAS
Lady Margrave		... Miss MAUD GRESSALL
Lili	A Parisienne ...	... Miss GINA PALERME
Margot
Paula		Miss RUBY KENNEDY
Genie		Miss ANN CLEAVER
Mimi	Friends of Lili	Miss GERTRUDE WHITE
Tonse		Miss LEILA GRIFFIN
Riette		Miss LILIAN HADLEY
Camille		Miss DOROTHY DEVERE
Toinette		Miss YVONNE FITZROY
Tommy		Miss HEATHER FEATHERSTONE
Lina		Miss ISOBEL ELSOM
Mary		Miss KATHLEEN VINCENT
Nora		Miss GIPSY O'BRIEN
Dora		Miss CLAIRE LYNCH
May	Schoolgirls	Miss BETTY OLGAR
Alicia		Miss FLORA ALLEN
Jo'		Miss NORA WADELEY
Sybil		Miss MAUDE ASTON
Phyl		Miss BESSY MILLARD
		Miss GLADYS IVERY
	AND
Nancy Joyce ...	Dancing Mistress of "Down House" ...	Miss GERTIE MILLAR

Act I. ... "Down House," a finishing School for Girls, near Brighton ... ... Terraine

Act II. ... The "Chalet," Grand Hotel des Alpes, Oberwald } Harker

Act III. ... The "Hotel Bristol," London ... ... }

Dresses: Act I. by FIRENZE; Act II. by Miss FISHER and MARGAINE LECROIX; Miss Gertie Millar's and Act III. Dresses by LUCILE, Ltd.
MORRIS ANGEL & SON, B. J. SIMMONS and BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS.
Dresses from designs by COMELLI.

Dances arranged by FRED FARREN
(By permission of the Directors of the Empire Theatre)

Acting Manager ... (for Mr. George Edwardes) ... Mr. CHARLTON MANN

Nancy Joyce is the dancing mistress at a finishing school for girls near Brighton kept by a middle-aged spinster of mid-Victorian primness named Miss Pindrop. The establishment also boasts a comical butler called Widdicombe, who makes a hook among the young ladies and is very sweet upon an attractive Scottish tack-woman, Jeanie McTavish, as well as a warm-hearted French mistress of pronounced gambling proclivities in the person of Mlle. Virginie Touchet. Mlle. Touchet's friendship for and indebtedness to Nancy prompts her to make her a present of a Panama lottery ticket of the potential value of £20,000, and romance comes into the schoolroom when Lord Lyndale, in the character of a riding-master, comes to woo Bella Peach, the daughter of an Argentine millionaire, and when Teddy Cavanagh, an airman, drops from the clouds on a like mission to Nancy. Teddy, by the way, carries upon his person an Indian squaw stone which is calculated to turn from green to red when he meets "it" among the girls of his acquaintance, and it begins to blush when he first encounters Nancy. In the meantime, various "brothers" have been invited to tea by the young ladies in the absence of Miss Pindrop; a very weak and laughable effort at a French lesson is made by Mlle. Touchet; and Widdicombe, the butler, discovers by accident that the aforementioned lottery ticket bears the winning number—a discovery which prompts the immediate transference of his affections to Mlle. Touchet, whom he believes to be the winner, and from whom he withholds all news of her supposed good fortune. Nancy's summary dismissal from the school by Miss Pindrop for leading the company in a more or less decorous dance called "The Porcupine Patrol" brings the first act to a close.

In the second act, which takes place at the Grand Hôtel des Alpes at Oberwald, among a gaily dressed crowd engaged in skating, bob-sleighing, ski-ing, and other Alpine sports, Nancy is discovered as the skating-dancing mistress, and various musical comedy devices bring the whole of the company together again. There is also present a rather "bad" French baron, who seeks Nancy's favours, and causes much amusing jealousy upon Teddy's part. Teddy wagers with the Baron that he will fly over the Alps to London in forty-eight hours, and eventually takes the not-too-light Widdicombe with him as a passenger in his aeroplane. Before leaving, however, he entrusts a waiter with an open envelope addressed to Nancy, in which he encloses the Indian squaw stone, together with a request that she will wear it when he makes his ascent, and so let him know that his affection for her is reciprocated. When it is said that the Baron gets hold of the letter and substitutes for the squaw stone a necklace Teddy knew he was about to offer for her acceptance, and that Teddy sees it upon her neck when he takes his flight, the situation will readily be imagined. Everything comes right again, however, as in all true love affairs in all well-regulated musical comedies. Teddy wins his wager with the Baron, and he and Widdicombe arrive safely in London; the temporary estrangement between Widdicombe and Jeanie is dispersed in a final embrace; and Nancy becomes the happy possessor of the £20,000 lottery money, and her daring and terribly-in-love aviator into the bargain. Bella Peach and Lord Lyndale are also presumably made quite happy, and the only person whose future is at all hazy at curtain-fall is the generous-hearted Mlle. Touchet, who has apparently been captured by a bogus prince, and certainly deserves a better fate.

Waters, J.
Plays

2/3

Plays

CRITERION
THEATRE

E

Oct. 22

Orchestra Stall

H147

Tuesday, October 22, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and every following evening at 9.

"TANTRUMS."

By FRANK STAYTON.

Myrtle .. .. (Mrs. Halstead's younger daughter) ..	Miss CHRISTINE SILVER
Cranley Fordyce	.. Mr. JOHN DEVERELL
Rose .. .. (Virginia's maid)	.. Miss DORA BARTON
Mrs. Halstead	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Virginia .. .. (her elder daughter)	.. Miss MARJORIE DAY
Mr. Halstead	.. Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Butler at the Halsteads'	(By arrangement with Charles Frohman)
Parlourmaid at the Halsteads'	.. Mr. L. WILLIAMS
Charlton Vansittart	.. Miss GLADYS PRESTON
Porter at Hotel Washington, Paris	.. Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Waiter at Hotel Washington, Paris	.. Mr. GORDON HAY
	.. Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE

The Characters are in the order of their appearance.

Act I.—June	The Halsteads' Home in Liverpool.—Afternoon.
Act II.—July	The Hotel Washington, Paris. Night.
Act III.—September	Vansittart's Flat, London.—6 p.m.
Time ..	The Present.

Gramophones by The Gramophone and Typewriter Co. Scenery by Joseph Harker & Charles Sharp. Costumes by Mesdames Hind & Pyne.
Hats by Zyrot. Furniture by Spillman. Wigs by Clarkson.

On the first night the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock, and every following evening at 9, preceded at 8.30 by

"THE FORTUNE TELLERS"

A One-Act Play by H. R. ABBOTT.

Sir William Brancaster	Mr. THOMAS WEGUELIN
Julius Brancaster	.. Mr. THOMAS PAUNCEFORTE
Claud Thornleigh	Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
Lady Brancaster	.. Miss AVICE SCHOLTZ
Lady Angela	.. Miss E. INNES-KER

SCENE - - - Fortune Teller's Tent at a Bazaar in Sir William Brancaster's Grounds.

Programme of Music.

Overture	Prelude E Minor	Christopher Wilson
Before Act I.	Prelude in G Major / "Bourree"	Christopher Wilson
Before Act II.	Waltz for Stringed Orchestra	Brahms
Before Act III.	Second Suite	Christopher Wilson

Matinee, Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30, commencing Saturday, October 26th.

Business Manager	ARTHUR PENLEY
Stage Manager	CLAUDE VERNON
Musical Director	CHRISTOPHER WILSON

2/4

Her Petruchio (his name is Charlton Vansittart, and he comes from New York) wants to tame her? Instantly she is so tame that she takes the ground from under his fine manly feet. He pretends poverty, because hard work will chasten her temper? Then he shall feed at home—and on her cooking, while she dines at the smartest restaurants and sends the bills to papa. This is the plain truth about Petruchios and Katherines. The great savage brutes come to heel at a word; and their mistresses are mighty proud to be seen in the street with their market baskets carried between monstrous jaws.

Unfortunately, Mr. Stayton will not be believed, because he has not played fair. In the first place, his Petruchio is no Petruchio at all, but a flabby imitation. So, not only do we lose interest in him very early, but we strongly suspect that Katherine, having once cowed him, would have taken him to the dogs' home instead of letting him carry her basket. We do not think it was all, or largely, Mr. Charles Maude's fault; but it is true that that very charming and clever young actor is not cut out to put up a good fight against a shrew.

And then, again, it was not fair on Mr. Stayton's part to give him not one but two shrews to fight. Early in Act II. we looked down the programme to see whether Miss Marjorie Day were not "doubling" two parts. No, she is still Virginia Vansittart (née Halstead). But how comes this witty, delightful woman to have the same name and appearance as the childish fool in Act I.? It is not merely a change of mood; it is a complete change of character; and our poor little Petruchio, who would have had small chance against the pettish idiot in Act I., is merely ridiculous when he takes on the finished piece of witty malice that confronts him in Act II. Habet! The play is over, and Mr. Stayton, who had a good point to make, has failed to make it.

He has omitted, too, a good deal of what we should like to know. At what point did Virginia see through this apparently very decisive Petruchio from New York? When and why did she begin to "love" him? What happened between that amusing scene (for Mr. Stayton can be amusing) in the Paris hotel on the first night of their honeymoon and the return to London? On these points and others we should welcome a good deal more information. For to be light in touch is not necessarily to be empty; and Mr. Stayton has taken such pains to be light in touch that he has forgotten what profundities a light touch may express.

Plays

An Original Comedy, entitled

"READY MONEY"

By JAMES MONTGOMERY.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

"THE FERRET"

John Benham .. .. Mr. HUBERT WILLIS
Kate Benham .. .. His wife .. .. .. Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Philip Morgan .. .. An Actor .. .. .. Mr. FRANK TENNANT

Both Plays produced under the direction of Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH

NEW THEATRE

E
28/10/12
Orch. Stall

F 95
To be retained
LEFT

piece dealing with New York criminal life, with title, The Ferret, derived from the sobriquet applied by the American police to the wicked woman who had married John Benham. Earlier in her career, Kate had been known unfavourably as a blackmailer, an associate of thieves and murderers, and a bad character generally. One of her victims had been Philip Morgan, an actor, who, though he had formerly befriended her in adversity, had, so she gives her husband to believe, ruined her. That he may kill Morgan out of revenge, Benham invites the actor to his home, and there we learn many explanatory details which might in themselves almost have stocked a conventional full-size melodrama. Kate had come bare-foot to the stage-door, when Morgan was still a struggling actor, had been taken home by him, of course, without any evil motive, and then, when he was dangerously ill, had decamped with all his money and valuables. This is the damning story unfolded by Morgan to Benham, who suddenly bethinks himself that he had made a will dividing his property between this mercenary creature and a son by a former marriage of his. To convince the husband of Kate's true character, the actor shoots up into the air, and stage-manages a scene of. Benham supposedly lying dead on a sofa. At this the woman cries exultantly that she will be free from both men, as Benham is dead and Morgan will be hanged. Her confusion, when she finds that the whole thing is "spoof," brings down the curtain upon a rather pretentious and unnecessarily involved half-hour melodrama, with much tiresome, silent business, and many prolonged pauses.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT (WEDNESDAY), OCTOBER 30th, 1912, at 8.30, and EVERY EVENING FOLLOWING at 9,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

OFFICER 666

A Melodramatic Farce,

By AUGUSTIN MacHUGH.

NOTE.—The characters are named in the order in which they make their first appearance.

Bateato	ALBERT ROCCARDI
Officer Phelan 666	DAN'L MOYLES
Whitney Barnes	SAM SOTHERN
Travers Gladwin	WALLACE EDDINGER
Helen Burton	VIVA BIRKETT
Sadie Small	ENID LESLIE
Mrs. Burton	HELEN FERRERS
Alfred Wilson	JOHN MILTERN
Watkins	ARTHUR CULLIN
Police Captain Stone	HARRY PARKER
Detective Kearney	GEORGE STEPHENSON
Ryan	FRED FORREST
Policemen	W. F. MALTBY
	CHARLES BISHOP
	ERIC ELLESMERE

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY WINCHELL SMITH.

Waters, J.
Plays

The entire action of the play takes place in the mansion of Travers Gladwin in Upper Fifth Avenue, New York City.

TIME—Present.

ACT I.	Five o'clock p.m.
ACT II.	Ten o'clock p.m.
ACT III.	Begins where Act II. ends.

All the Gowns and Cloaks designed and executed by ALEXANDRA, 47 Baker Street, W.

Preceded to-morrow (Thursday) and every Evening following at 8.30,

BY

HAROLD MONTAGUE

In a Humorous Pianologue.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Orchestra under the Direction of MAURICE JACOBI.

1. MARCH OF THE GIANTS ... ... H. Finck
2. OVERTURE, "Raymond" ... ... Ambroise Thomas
3. a. ROMANCE ... ... } N. Lambelet
   b. VALSE, "Je veux toujours t'Aimer" ... ... }
4. MINIATURE SUITE— } Eric Coates
   1. "Children's Dance" ... ... }
   2. Intermezzo ... ... }
   3. "Scene du Bal" ... ... }
5. MARCH, "Wellington" ... ... W. Zehle

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, AT 2.30,
AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY FOLLOWING.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. VINCENT POTTER) open 10 to 10.

Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d
Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager ... ... W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

The New Farcical Drama.

For all who can enjoy the experience of a thrill and a good laugh there is nothing better in London than the new American farcical drama called "Officer 666," that Mr. Charles Frohman presented at the Globe Theatre on Wednesday evening. It is a play like "Raffles," "Jimmy Valentine," and "Ready Money," in that it has a gentlemanly adventurer, who the police are after, for its chief character. In this new play at the Globe Theatre you will see a regular squad of policemen after the clever thief and the most exciting series of tricks being practised to elude them. It is all the best of fun, a breathless adventure, acted with rare dash by American actors.

"Live" American Actors.

In farces of this new type, such as "Officer 666," American actors can put our actors to sleep. They are infinitely more resourceful, quicker, and in every case possess a happier sense of humour. They have the advantage, it is true, in these American quick-change farces of being provided with brighter dialogue than English authors appear capable of, but that alone would not suffice. They are better farcical comedians than our actors, whose slower methods are out of date. They are in fact "alive," and that is why they are better worth watching. I hope that Messrs. Albert Roccardi, Daniel Moyles, Wallace Eddinger, and John Miltern will not have to return to New York for a very long time.

Officer 666 lends Gladwin his coat.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

TO-NIGHT at 9

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRODUCE A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

ENTITLED

Little Miss Llewelyn

Preceded at 8.30 by the Kerbstone Episode, entitled

"A PENNY BUNCH"

By A. NEIL LYONS and HENRY SETON

Sarah Moon	...	... Miss LILIAN MASON
Poppy Dyke	...	... Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD (By the courtesy of Messrs. VEDRENNE and EADIE)
Professor Alf. Beeny	...	... Mr. ELIOT MAKEHAM (By the courtesy of Miss HORNIMAN)

Scene - - - The Pavement.

The Playhouse

Every Evening at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE presents a New Farce, in Three Acts, called

THE LITTLE CAFÉ

Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in One Act, called

THE DUSTY PATH

By WILFRED T. COLEBY.

KITTY SCARCLIFFE	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
GEORGE SCARCLIFFE	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON
Mrs. POSTHURST	Miss HELEN ROUS

Scene—The Nursery, The Rectory, Renscome, Dorset.

THE PLAYHOUSE.

HORS D'ŒUVRE "AT THE LITTLE CAFE."

MARRIAGE, according to Kitty Scarcliffe, was a straight and dusty road that led onward to the grave, and "The Dusty Road" is the title given by Mr. Wilfred T. Coleby to his one-act comedy, which was produced as a prelude to "The Little Café" at the Playhouse. "To marry," said Kitty, who was the proud mother of a long-clothes baby, "is to domesticate the recording angel," and for about ten minutes this volatile young woman rattled on in this fashion against marriage, subpœnaing Abraham, Solomon, and other experts in support of her arguments. And when Kitty had pulled her aunt's leg—as she put it—and induced her to believe that she really was living with George, and when Mr. Coleby had pulled our leg and almost persuaded us that Kitty's baby was, as the horrified aunt said, "a nameless infant," it came out that Kitty was married to George's brother, and that George lived with them until such time as he married Kitty's sister. And the flippant Kitty played this trick on her aunt because that worthy woman had been breathing and writing threatenings and slaughter against Christianity, and Kitty felt that, as a parson's wife, it behoved her "to get the Gospel some of its own back." And auntie, who was really only a conventional woman in search of notoriety, was shocked into ignominious capitulation, and driven from her trenches by an unceasing fire of words. Miss Athene Seyler rattled gaily and breathlessly along as Kitty, and Miss Helen Rous was in turn portentous and flabbergasted as the Aunt. But one was not very impressed by Mr. Coleby's ideas on the possible behaviour of very young wives and mothers.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

(By arrangement with C. AUBREY SMITH),

INSTINCT

A Play in Three Acts from the French of HENRY KISTEMAECKERS,

BY

PENRHYN STANLAWS

(As produced at the Liverpool Repertory Theatre).

BRADFORD MANDOVER, M.D., F.R.S.	Mr. C. AUBREY SMITH
ARTHUR MANDOVER, M.D.	Mr. NORMAN McKEOWN (By permission of the Liverpool Repertory Theatre)
CHRISTY	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD (By permission of Mr. H. B. Irving)
WALKER	Mr. TOM MOWBRAY
MRS. MANDOVER	Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
AMY VANE	Miss MURIEL BEAUMONT
MRS. WALKER	Miss MARY RABY

Acts I., II. & III. take place within the space of five hours in a sitting-room in Dr. Bradford Mandover's house, Long Island, New York

N.B.—As the curtain will be lowered for a few seconds only between Acts II. & III., the audience is respectfully requested to remain seated.

Miss Braithwaite's Costumes designed and executed by Madame ELSPETH PHELPS, 28, Albermarle Street, Miss Beaumont's by Madame LOYSE, 11, Princes Street, Hanover Square.

ROSALIND,

A COMEDY

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

MRS. PAGE	...Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
CHARLES (her friend)	Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
MRS. QUICKLY	Miss HELEN HAYE
SCENE ...	Far from London.

Plays

D. Y. T.

—

6/11/1912

—

Orch. Stall

F18

No

The plot was given fully by our Liverpool critic when Instinct was produced on the 14th ult. at the Repertory, Liverpool. Mrs. Mandover is out of sympathy with her husband, a famous surgeon, Bradford Mandover, whom she regards as a scientific butcher of human bodies, with "big hands always covered with blood"; and she is somewhat dangerously attracted to a young consumptive, of whom the audience hears a great deal but sees nothing. Physical ill-health is naturally disagreeable on the stage, but a dramatist weakens the effect of his work when he leaves a leading character to the imagination. There may be rare instances where this consequence does not follow, but scarcely in modern pieces of the quasi-realistic sort, such as Instinct. The poetic mind and the sympathetic nature of this invisible young man are, however, impressed on the audience, not merely by much verbal assurance, but also by the terms of a letter unwisely drafted by him and carelessly thrown away. A discharged servant, who owes the youthful poet a grudge, and who also owes the surgeon a debt of gratitude for medical succour—everything fits in with mathematical society in this mechanical play—carries the letter to Mandover. Mandover realises that, immersed in his work, he has allowed his wife to drift into what he fears is an intrigue with another man. He requires her to leave at once with him for Switzerland. Mrs. Mandover believes that to forsake the poet without bidding him farewell will cause his death, and she is therefore driven to make an assignation with him at midnight in her own room. While the wife and poet are together in the room, Mandover and his brother discuss the subject of the wife's infatuation; and here a plausible turn is given incidentally to the title by Mandover's declaring that instinct will justify a man in killing his wife's lover. The brother, to get Mandover away, is forced to lead him to suppose that his wife, in defiance of this request, has gone out; and Mandover, furiously jealous, and thinking the worst, disappears in search of her. Then enter Mrs. Mandover. The poet has burst a blood-vessel, fallen, and struck his temple. The husband returns, the truth comes out, and there is a war of words. Accusations from the husband; denials, protests, reproaches from the neglected wife. Meanwhile the poet is at the point of death. Mandover declares that he will do nothing to save the young man. The words of the wife goad Mandover into the room. There he does his professional duty. Exactly what happens the audience does not know. The audience—denied the poet altogther—also does not see Mandover at this culminating moment of the play. But the audience realises that the poet is to live—as long as his consumptive tendencies will allow—and it is left to reconcile the matrimonial difficulties of husband and wife as favourably as it pleases.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.). Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lillah McCarthy. Granville Barker.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15TH, 1912, AT 7 P.M., AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.15 P.M.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

Twelfth Night

PRODUCED BY GRANVILLE BARKER.

Orsino	ARTHUR WONTNER
Sebastian	DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY
Antonio	HERBERT HEWETSON
A Sea Captain	DOUGLAS MUNRO
	(By arrangement with Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn)
Valentine	COWLEY WRIGHT
Curio	FRANK CONROY
Sir Toby Belch	ARTHUR WHITBY
Sir Andrew Aguecheek	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Malvolio	HENRY AINLEY
Fabian	H. O. NICHOLSON
Feste	C. HAYDEN COFFIN
Priest	EDGAR PLAYFORD
1st Officer	FRANCIS ROBERTS
2nd Officer	HERBERT ALEXANDER
Servant	NEVILLE GARTSIDE
Olivia	EVELYN MILLARD
Maria	LEAH BATEMAN HUNTER
Viola	LILLAH McCARTHY

Lords, Guests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, Attendants.—Messrs. Geo. Burrows, Maurice Tosh, Gilbert Chalmers Colona, Felix Aylmer, William Moore, Harold French, Eric Lugg, H. B. Waring, Reginald Garnett, Cecil Apted, J. Burrows, S. Belinfante.

Mesdames Margaret Bruhling, Vera Dyer, Enid Rose.

DECORATION OF THE PLAY AND COSTUMES DESIGNED BY NORMAN WILKINSON.

There will be Two Intervals of 10 minutes.

Acting Manager	Howard Leslie
Stage Manager	Oswald Marshall
General Manager	A. S. Pigott

Twelfth Night at the Savoy is a great improvement on The Winter's Tale. Shakespeare's merry comedy satirising sentiment is admittedly less difficult a task to deal with than The Winter's Tale; and Mr. Granville Barker has wisely reconsidered some of his methods. He has realised the fact that verse must be delivered with a sense of its structure and with unimpeachable clearness, and that characters must at the least not be presented ridiculously, however eccentric their scenic environment. In the matter of "decoration," however, Mr. Barker is unrepentant; and the performance of Twelfth Night succeeds in spite of toy-like sets and of flimsy drop-cloths, on which flutter designs that even the Italian futurists would hesitate to call their own. The lighting also is still much at fault. It is indefensible and absurd, whatever the æsthetic theories, to get figures silhouetted against the sky. Nor are we reconciled to the apron stage. The effect is to lessen the dramatic illusion. It is beside the point to argue, as Mr. Barker does in the preface to his acting edition, that Twelfth Night was written for a bare platform stage. Viola was written for a boy to play. Why does Mr. Barker not cast Viola to a boy-actor? He does not do so because he knows that, in spite of the writing of the part for a boy, the old condition of casting was a bad one. That of the bare platform was equally bad. Does anyone believe that Shakespeare, if he had had any choice between the crude mechanical achievements of his day and the scientifically planned and equipped modern stage, would have hesitated between the two? The performance, then, would gain immensely if it were cut off from the auditorium by means of the proscenium line, and if so cut off it were properly supported by scenery. The scenery, designed by Mr. Norman Wilkinson, is on a small scale, and it interferes, one supposes, with the proper dispositions of stage-management. Else Mr. Barker could scarcely have left the characters huddled together as they are in the all-important scene of Malvolio's reading of the forged letter. The garden scene—anything more unlike a garden could scarcely be imagined—has little or no proper foreground, so occupied has Mr. Nicholson evidently been with his pink-and-white confectionery pieces, centre and right and left. Two diminutive trees and a staring green colour cannot afford any sort of cover for the eavesdropping Sir Toby, Aguecheek, and Fabian. They and Malvolio are practically rubbing shoulders the whole time, and it is only making a mock of the intelligence of an audience to assume that the onward cannot see these characters. In the same cramped manner the midnight scene of carousal, which should be laid according to the text in the servants' hall, is given in a tiny tapestry-hung room, a sort of stage inset, which allows the characters barely space to move. Sometimes, too, an act-drop falls without clearing an actor or a piece of furniture. It is a droll thing in any circumstance to meet with a sea coast represented by a few weird lines and a casual and lonely little splash of blue, but when a piece cloth of this kind is suddenly hitched because there is not room enough for to fall evenly and fully the effect not only droll but slovenly. We here in detail what is the essential fault of this method of staging and, to a great extent, of production. The style is narrow. It has pretension of a sort. But the heart of Shakespeare's mystery is, we think, far away from the ephemoral preciosity that seems to have attracted Mr. Barker and also, to judge from his preface, a little hurt his literary manners. He calls the last scene of Twelfth Night "scandalously ill-written." He speaks of As You Like It and Much Ado About Nothing thus—"I find them so stodgily good, even a little—dare one say it?—vulgar." Mr. Barker, no doubt, uses these words in their modern sense, though their relation to each other and much more to Shakespeare is difficult to understand. Is Rosalind or Beatrice stodgy or vulgar? To anæmic wit or anæmic art, perhaps. But Shakespeare is free, spacious, elemental. It is in these respects that the producing method of the Savoy is out of sympathy with Shakespeare.

2 225

"SYLVIA GREER."

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS.

Dr. Wybrant	Mr. GUY STANDING
Mr. Blount	Mr. HUGH ARDALE
Captain Harte	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Mr. West	Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
Bertie Channing	Mr. P. PERCIVAL CLARK
Paget Carmody	Mr. HEATH HAVILAND
Sir John Gatacre	Mr. W. R. STAVELEY
Colonel Greer	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Sylvia Greer	Miss ETHEL WARWICK
Mrs. Greer	Miss TREVOR LLOYD
Mrs. Harte	Miss ALICE MANSFIELD
Mrs. West	Mrs. SAM SOTHERN
Lillian Channing	Miss CONSTANCE LITTLE
Kitty Ingersoll	Miss JANE SAVILE
Lady Gatacre	Miss CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
Grace Woolcott	Miss LYDIA RUSSELL
A Maid	Miss NANCY GIRLING

Act I. and III. Drawing Room at Fernhurst Salport.

Act II. Marquee in Rectory Grounds, Salport.

PRODUCED BY MR. NORMAN MCKINNEL.

Queen's
THEATRE.

E
Nov. 16

Orch. Stall
G 16
To be retained.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

"SYLVIA GREER."

"WHO is Sylvia, What is she, that all our swains commend?" We know who she was, but goodness only knows what she was that all the swains not only commended her, but also wanted to marry her. So, for further enlightenment on this point you are referred to the play to which she gives her name. "Sylvia Greer," brought out at the Queen's Theatre last night by Miss Ethel Warwick. Unlike Shakespeare's Sylvia, she was neither holy, fair, nor wise—but in her own words "heartless, selfish, unprincipled" and "jolly hot stuff." As this seems a fairly adequate summing up of her character, we can leave it at that, except that she was also neurotic and erotic.

She seemed to have a perfectly wonderful knack of attracting unpleasant people, if one may judge of the family of which she was a member. Her relations with her father were those of armed neutrality and open contempt. She always thought that either he had played her a dirty trick or was just going to. She lived in a state of contiual bickering with her step-mother and step-sister, who were both cats. As for two swains and one swine who were attracted by her— those we met, not those we merely heard of, whose name was legion—she dismissed the swine at midnight in the churchyard, engaged herself to the rich young soldier for his money, and held midnight assignations with the poor young doctor in the drawing-room after the rest of the household was supposed to be in bed. Then she broke off her engagement on the eve of her wedding, and would have finished off everything with a dose of potassium cyanide if the poor young doctor hadn't played a trick on her which saved her from taking the poison. Even then she nearly died by auto-suggestion, and it was really rather a pity she didn't, because the poor young doctor promised to marry her and to give up his work in Rotherhithe for her, and altogether we felt that the poor young doctor was in for a bad time, for his wife would certainly estrange all his women patients and flirt with all the men.

The play is a curious blend—no, not blend, patchwork—of bad psychology and conventional theatricality. There is some attempt to account for Sylvia Greer's neurasthenia by showing that she was the "love child" of her parents, and that she came of bad stock, morally, on both sides of her family. Certainly both heredity and environment did seem to have been rather against her.

The dialogue is not without a certain humour of a kind which one might term the unexpected obvious.

The best-drawn character is that of the poor young doctor, who is one of the few likeable people in the play, and he was played by Mr. Guy Standing with an easy, lounging manner and a keen sense of humour which rather blinded one to the fact that neither the doctor's manners nor his morals were above suspicion. Mr. Reginald Owen did his best with the part of the straight, stupid soldier man, and Mr. C. M. Lowne gave point and polish to the cynical Colonel Greer. Miss Ethel Warwick suggested the physical attraction of Sylvia for her various wooers and the girl's highly strung nervous nature, but she could not get our sympathy for Sylvia nor persuade us that she was anything but a most trying young woman. And that seemed to be the general opinion of the audience.

The authorship of the play is attributed to the author of "Irene Wycherley," but for some reason his name did not appear on the programme.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

SPECIAL MATINEES

By Arrangement with FRANK CURZON.

To-day and Every Tuesday and Friday, at 2.30

(For a limited number of performances).

MISS MARIE TEMPEST

PRODUCES

A TRIPLE BILL.

"AN IMAGINARY CONVERSATION"

By Norreys Connell.

Kate Moore ... ... Miss MARIE TEMPEST
Tom Moore ... ... Mr SHIEL BARRY
Robert Emmet ... ... Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE

Scene: Tommy Moore's Room over his Father's Shop in Aungier Street, Dublin, May, 1797.

Produced under the direction of the Author.

Miss Tempest's Costume by Lucile, Ltd., 23, Hanover Sq.

"THE DUMB AND THE BLIND"

By Harold Chapin.

Joe Henderson (of Mud Barge E 1) Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE
Liz ... ... (His Wife) Miss ELSIE DAVISON
Emmy ... (His Daughter) ... Miss BESSIE COURTNEY
Bill Pegler ... (His Friend) Mr. JOHN ALEXANDER

Scene: A Tap Room in a Tenement House in Bermondsey.

Produced under the Direction of the Author

The Orchestra, under the direction of Harold Robertson Grimston, will play the following Music:—

Overture ... "La Reine de Saba" ... ... Dubois
Ballet ... "La Feria" ... ... Lacome

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON.

Prices: Dress Circle, 10s. 6d. to 15s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7193.

Business Manager (for Miss Marie Tempest) ... HERBERT ROSS
Business Manager (for Frank Curzon) ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

"THE MALINGERER"

A Fantastic Wordless Comedy.
Invented by Sidney Lewis-Ransom.
Music by Herman Finck.

Frivol ... ... (Pierrot) ... Miss MARIE TEMPEST
Malice ... (His Rival) Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE
Fraud ... (His Doctor) Mr. SIDNEY LEWIS-RANSOM
Silence ... (His Servant) Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Caprice ... (His Enchantress) Miss FRANCES DILLON
(By kind permission of Messrs. W. & F. Mew.)

Scene: Frivol's Bedchamber—Midnight.

The Scene, Costumes and Furniture designed, and the Play produced by Sidney Lewis Ransom.

The Costumes executed by B. J. Simmons & Co., 8 King Street, Covent Garden.

The Furniture and Properties executed by J. A. Fraser.

Wigs executed by W. Clarkson.

Draperies by Lucile, Ltd., of Hanover Square W.

On this occasion the Orchestra will be conducted by the Composer.

(a) Valse d'Amour ... ... Gillet
(b) Celesta Solo ... ... "Estrella" ... ... Ketelbey
The Celesta by Mustel & Co. 80, Wigmore Street, W.

Stage Manager ... ... F. W. TARVER.

Prince of Wales' Theatre.

Lessee and Manager - - FRANK CURZON

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON

The Management request the honour of your presence at a Special Matinee
On MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, at 2.30 to witness the Press Performance of

MISS MARIE TEMPEST'S

TRIPLE BILL

Authors galore, and actors, and many actresses who are resting, were present at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Monday for the first of the series of matinées that Miss Marie Tempest is, by arrangement with Mr. Frank Curzon, giving of a new triple bill. It was a varied programme. First came an Irish play, in which the characters were the patriot Robert Emmet, Tommy Moore, the song writer, and his sister Kate. It was the best and most attractive item of the three, for the author, Norreys Connell, has brought imagination into his little incident, and in addition to that it provides Miss Tempest with opportunities to sing delightfully.

The Triple Bill.

Neither of the other two items of the triple bill impressed me much. A one-act piece by Harold Chapin called "The Dumb and the Blind" is a sentimental piece of the humble Cockney variety; and the wordless play by Sidney Lewis-Ranson entitled "The Malingerer" is not calculated to upset one's impressions of the wonderful art of the Russian mimes we have seen in three seasons at Covent Garden. I could not help thinking of "Le Carnaval"—that exquisite fantasy that Michel Fokine evolved from the music of Robert Schumann. What a fantasy that was! Well! the memory of it did not help my enjoyment of "The Malingerer." Herman Finck's music was its best feature. One must wonder why when Miss Tempest has a success with "Art and Opportunity" she should dissipate some of the public interest by putting on another bill for matinées.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET

Lessee and Manager
Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

MONDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 18TH, 1912, at 8 o'clock, the Dress Rehearsal of FREDERICK HARRISON'S New Productions

An Adventure of Aristide Pujol

A Comedy in One Act, by WILLIAM J. LOCKE

(The characters are in the order of their appearance)

Maid	ANGELA LEE LEWES
Aristide Pujol	LEON M. LION
Herr Schneider	E. A. WARBURTON
Miss Christabel Smith	ANNE CAREW
Mr. Smith	FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Monsieur Poiron	CREAGH HENRY
The Hon. Harry Ralston	J. WOODALL-BIRDE

Scene—The Lounge Hall in Mr. Smith's House in London.—Joseph Harker

The Play produced by NORMAN PAGE

Miss Carew's dress has been made by NIGEL, Ltd.

At 8.30

The Golden Doom

A Play in One Act, by LORD DUNSANY
To Music by NORMAN O'NEILL

(The characters are in the order of their appearance)

First Sentry	ALLAN JEAYES
Second Sentry	G. DICKSON-KENWIN
Stranger	LEONARD E. NOTCUTT
Girl	EILEEN ESLER
Boy	ERIC RAE
Spies	CLAUDE RAINS, GERALD JEROME & CYRIL HARDINGHAM
Chamberlain	E. LYALL SWETE
The King	HENRY HARGREAVES
First Prophet	RALPH HUTTON
Second Prophet	FRANK RIDLEY
Chief Prophet	EWAN BROOK
Attendants ...	M. BRIER, R. LEWIS, C. MILES & G. PLAYFORD

Scene—Outside the King's Great Door in Zericon. Time—Some while before the fall of Babylon.

The Play produced by E. LYALL SWETE

The Scene painted by JOSEPH HARKER from a drawing by S. H. SIME, who has also designed the Costumes.

The Costumes have been made by L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Plays

At 9.10

The Younger Generation

A Comedy in Three Acts
By STANLEY HOUGHTON

(The characters are in the order of their appearance)

James Henry Kennion, the Father	STANLEY DREWITT
Mrs Kennion, the Mother	ADA KING
Maggie, Maid at Mr. Kennion's	HILDA DAVIES
Reggie Kennion	J. V. BRYANT
Grace Kennion	CAROLINE BAYLEY
Thomas Kennion, the Uncle	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Mr. Leadbitter	NORMAN PAGE
Mr. Fowle	LUKE FORSTER
Arthur Kennion	J. WOODALL-BIRDE
Mrs. Hannah Kennion, the Grandmother ...	Mrs. CROWE
Clifford Rawson	EWAN BROOK

Scene—The Dining Room of James Henry Kennion's House at Longton Park, a suburb of Manchester. Joseph Harker

The action of the play takes place at the present day, within the space of 24 hours—

Act I.	Saturday Evening
Act II. ...	Sunday Morning
Act III. ...	Sunday Afternoon

The Play produced by STANLEY DREWITT

Dresses by Mrs. CALEB PORTER

There will be an interval of 5 minutes after the First Play, 8 minutes after the Second, 10 minutes after Act I. of "The Younger Generation," and 5 minutes after the 2nd Act.

Mr HARRISON begs to acknowledge the courtesy of Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER and Miss LILLAH McCARTHY in releasing Mr. STANLEY DREWITT; of Miss HORNIMAN in releasing Miss ADA KING, Mr. J. V. BRYANT and Miss HILDA DAVIES; and of Messrs VEDRENNE and EADIE in releasing Miss CAREW and Mr. HARGREAVES to take part in this programme.

Stage Manager, CHARLES LA TROBE. Assistant, CLAUDE RAINS
Musical Director, NORMAN O'NEILL
Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

"The Younger Generation."

On Tuesday evening Mr. Frederick Harrison reopened the Haymarket Theatre with a programme consisting of two one-act plays and one play of three acts. The latter piece, which was first done in Manchester by Miss Horniman's repertory company, is Stanley Houghton's "The Younger Generation," a most amusing comedy of Manchester suburban family life. It is the story of a rebellion by two sons and a daughter against parental authority, and shows in a pleasantly humorous way how the boys and the girl get their own way. There is no attempt at getting dramatic situations. The story, such as it is, grows out of the domestic conflict occasioned by the hopeful eldest son's determination to be trusted with a latchkey and of the daughter's conviction that she is old enough to be engaged to be married. It makes a very good entertainment but could have been much better acted. Apart from Miss Ada King, Mr. J. V. Bryant, Mr. Norman Page, and Mr. Luke Forster I was not impressed.

A Fantastic Play.

Of the two one-act plays at the Haymarket, W. J. Locke's "An Adventure of Aristide Pujol" comes first. It is a really clever little piece of fooling in which the romantic little Frenchman finds himself in a strange house in London and being there mistaken for a bogus baron who is to assist in cheating the son-in-law of the host. How Pujol puts matters straight for the honest folks, and correspondingly awkward for the dishonest ones, makes a very good little play incident. It is written in Mr. Locke's fantastic manner, and wholly pleased the audience. The second of the one-act pieces was another of Lord Dunsany's half mysterious stories of ancient times in some unnamed Eastern kingdom. It concerns a king who arouses the jealousy of the stars (or thinks he has) and makes the sacrifice of his sceptre, as directed by the priest. As the warning on the palace gate was the mere freak of a child armed with a piece of chalk, it is easy to see Lord Dunsany's humour. As in the other two plays, the acting was not up to the level of Haymarket traditions; casting a play to the best advantage is not always easy.

J. W.

"THE HAVOC."

UNREAL PLAY OF THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE.

American drama, which has showered many favours, and other things, on the London theatres this year, flung one more gift to them yesterday. The latest example—presented in this instance by Mr. Arthur Bourchier—was produced yesterday afternoon at the Garrick Theatre for the first of two special matinées. The chief fault in connection with this three-act American drama is that it was played as if it were intended to be taken seriously. It was another example of the "love tragedy" based on the eternal triangle—two men and a woman—and it is called in Mr. H. Sophus Sheldon's play, "The Havoc."

The tradition that one woman can talk as much as any two men was knocked to smithereens yesterday. The fact did not give the title to the play, but it might well have done. For the two men talked through the day and night about the woman, and the poor woman, having no callers, had hardly a chance to open her mouth. It was not fair.

The combatants struggling throughout "The Havoc" for possession of the woman were an American director of a great English railway company and his secretary. The woman was the magnate's wife, and the secretary, living under the same roof, devoted his spare time partly to sneering at the common-sense of his employer and partly to making love to his wife. The magnate returned unexpectedly one night. Then he made a long speech and the secretary made a long reply. Each of them made several long speeches and the patient woman eat out the whole debate without a murmur or a "Hear, hear."

Nor did she protest, when, as a result of the late sitting, it was settled that she should become the secretary's wife (after she divorced the other), and that the magnate should become their lodger. In Act II. the new arrangement was in full swing. The secretary was discovered to be a bad husband and the magnate was rubbing his hands. In Act III. the secretary-husband was flying from justice because he sold railway tickets under cost price, and there up in the great railway office was the silent wife sitting down by her first husband's desk starting the day's work as his typist.

There were some little side incidents to give colour and sentiment, but they did not affect for a moment the stormy passage of "The Havoc."

There were only three parts of any account in the play, and they were taken by Mr. James Carew, Mr. Julian Royce, and Miss Maud Cressall. Each acted with all possible sincerity, and did all that any actors could possibly have done to try and impart an air of probability to the incidents of an unreal drama.

A short play by Mr. Stanley Houghton, entitled "Phipps," in which Mr. Arthur Bourchier gave an amusing sketch of a butler, finished the programme. J. W.

:: GARRICK THEATRE ::

Lessees :: :: ARTHUR BOURCHIER & HERBERT SLEATH
Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. :: :: LOUIS MEYER

THE GARRICK THEATRE

The Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

19/11/12
M
Orch. Stall
N23

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, at 2.30:

"THE HAVOC"

∴ A Play in Three Acts ∴
BY
H. SOPHUS SHELDON

Richard Craig	JAMES CAREW
Paul Hessert	JULIAN ROYCE
Paton	FREDERICK JAMES
Sandberg	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Kate Craig	MAUD CRESSALL

(By kind permission of George Edwardes)

ACT I	A Room in Richard Craig's Flat
ACT II	The Same (18 months later)
ACT III	Private Rooms at the Office of the London Railway Co. (18 months later)

The Action takes place in London.

During the Action of Acts 1 and 2 the Curtain will fall for a few seconds to denote passing of time.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

FOLLOWED BY—

"PHIPPS"

∴ ∴ A Comedietta ∴ ∴

BY

STANLEY HOUGHTON

Phipps (a Butler) - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER

Gerald } not long married } - A. E. MATTHEWS

Fanny } not long married } - - ROSALIE TOLLER

SCENE - A Morning Room in the West-End of London

ARTHUR BOURCHIER is indebted to COMBER WIATT for his assistance in preparing "THE HAVOC" for the English Stage

The Programmes are kindly supplied by THE HAYCOCK-CADLE Co., Camberwell

And the Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co., 101 & 102, St. Martin's Lane

Miss CRESSALL'S Dresses by LOYSE, 11, Princes Street, Hanover Square

The Typewriter used in "The Havoc" is the famous Monarch Light Touch Typewriter

Teas can be had from the attendants—proceeds from which, and also from bars are generously given by Messrs. WESTBY & Co.

General Manager	For Arthur Bourchier	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Assistant Stage Manager		CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director		ALBERT FOX
Business Manager		THOMAS STEVENS
Acting Manager	For Garrick Renters, Ltd.	JOSÉ G. LEVY

Extract from Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain—1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill—2—The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards—3—Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during the performance to ensure its being in proper working order—4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium—5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

This Theatre is Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietor - - SIR JOSEPH BEECHAM
General Manager - - A. M. LOADER

The Management beg to announce

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS,

entitled:

THE PRICE

By GEORGE BROADHURST.

FIRST PERFORMANCE

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21ST, 1912,

At 8.45 and every Evening. Matinee, Wednesdays at 2.30.

To be preceded at 8 o'clock by

THE FLAG STATION

By EUGENE WALTER.

Dresses by ALLEN, 106 New Bond Street, W.

Acting Manager ... ... DONALD BAYLIS
Stage Manager ... ... ARTHUR WHITE

PRICES:—Boxes, £3 3s., £1 10s.; Stalls, 10 6; Balcony, 7 6, 5/-; Upper Circle, 3/-, 2 6; Pit (unreserved), 2/-; Gallery (unreserved) 1/-.

BOX OFFICE (L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

A Revised Version of "THE GOLDEN LAND OF FAIRY TALES" will be produced (for Matinees only) on SATURDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 21st, and every following afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Booking Plan will be opened Monday, December 2nd.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof curtain to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept clear from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, at 8.45 p.m.

THE PRICE

By GEORGE BROADHURST.

CAST:

Ethan Bristol, M.D.	- - - -	BEN WEBSTER
Stannard Dole	- - - -	J. W. DEAN
Professor Damaroff	- - - -	FREDERICK KERR
Ambrose Lorrimer	- - - -	MAX LEEDS
Mrs. Dole	- - - -	HENRIETTA WATSON
Florence Bromley	- - - -	MURIEL MASON
Susan	- - - -	PATTIE BROWNE
	AND
Ethel Toscani	- - - -	FANNIE WARD

Act I.—Stannard Dole's Studio ... ... Walter Johnson
Act II. Drawing Room in Dr. Bristol's House ... Walter Hannan
Sixteen months later
Act III.—The Same. A month later

The Play produced by Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL.

THE FLAG STATION

By EUGENE WALTER

CAST:

J. W. DEAN. J. COOKE BERESFORD ELEANOR MOORE.

Scene—A Signal Box on a lonely mountain in America.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

1.	Overture ...	"Lurline" ...	Wallace
2.	... ...	... Two Slavonic Dances ..	Dvorak.
3.	... ...	... Violin Solo
		Mr. THOMAS PARKER or Flute Solo
		Mr. GEORGE ACKROYD
4.	... ...	...Characteristic Waltzes...	Coleridge Taylor
		or Operatic Selection
	Musical Director ...	... THOMAS CHAPMAN

Mr. Broadhurst has gone to English fiction or English journals for his language; and to the English nineteenth-century drama for most of his details. And yet, though he treats us to the young and famous man stricken with one of those mysterious stage diseases which render fatal any kind of "shock," he does reveal, beneath a thick layer of that kind of material, some glimmering sparks of independent thought. The "shock" that killed Stannard Dole, the famous young artist, was the sudden announcement by his secretary and mistress, Ethel Toscani, that she had fallen in love with Dr. Ethan Bristol, and meant to marry him. Mr. Broadhurst, that is, asks us to understand and sympathise with a woman who had the courage to follow her instincts and to draw back when she found them leading her wrong; though, having two more acts to fill, he dares not give her the courage to speak out to the doctor, and tell him to take her as she is, or consider himself not the man for her. She lied to the doctor; and paid the price. For Mrs. Dole, who had known all along what was going on but had held her tongue (another concession, for so downright and forcible a woman would have called her objectionably ill-mannered husband to heel pretty quickly), bided her time till Ethel had married Ethan, and then came as housekeeper to a very happy home, which she broke up by hints at causes of jealousy, by veiled threats, finally by a complete revelation of the past through her husband's diary and her own additions to it. Ethan bounced out of the house, not only shocked to the depths of his New England soul at Ethel's pre-marital infidelity, but believing that she had killed her lover on purpose in order to be free to marry. And Ethel remained behind, to be prevented from suicide by Seeusan, the motherly "hired girl," and to wait for the (possible) return of Ethan.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

The Eldest Son

A domestic drama, in three acts,
by John Galsworthy
Produced by Granville Barker.

Sir William Cheshire, Bart.	Edmund Maurice
Lady Cheshire	Irene Rooke
Bill, their eldest son	Guy Rathbone
Harold, their second son	Robert Rendel
Ronald Keith, their son-in-law	Claude King
Christine Keith, their eldest daughter	Winifred Scott
Dot, their second daughter	Irene McLeod
Joan, their third daughter	Mary Deverell
Mabel Lanfarne	Ellen O'Malley
The Rev. John Latter,	Charles Maunsell
Studdenham, the head-keeper	William Farren
Freda, his daughter	Cathleen Nesbitt
Dunning	Moffat Johnston
Rose Taylor	Irene Hentschel
Jackson	E. H. Brooke
Charles	Val Cuthbert

KINGSW
GT. QU
Miss Lillah McCart
Saturday
Evening
Nov. 23
Stall
No. 7 20
This to be retained

Time—The Present.

The action passes on two successive days at the end of November at the Cheshire's country house, in one of the shires.

ACT I.

SCENE I. The hall; before dinner.
SCENE II. The hall; after dinner.

ACT II.

Lady Cheshire's morning room; after breakfast.

ACT III.

The smoking room; tea-time.

Dresses by GORTON & VAUGHAN, 20, South Molton Street

Preceded at 8.30 by Margaret Morris and her Dancing Children.

Matinees of FANNY'S FIRST PLAY Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 2.30.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

THE BOX OFFICE IS OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.
TELEPHONE: 4032 GERRARD (two lines).

Manager - - - - - A. E. DRINKWATER.
Stage Manager - E. H. BROOKE. Assisted by - - VAL CUTHBERT
Box Office Manager - REGINALD WYNNE. Box Office Assistant - OTHO STANTON

SAVOY THEATRE.

Every Evening at 8.15. Matinees Saturdays at 2.30.
TWELFTH NIGHT.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE
Matinees every Wednesday and Thursday at 2.30.

NEW PROBLEM PLAY OF CASTE.

"The Eldest Son" Who Had a Conscience.

GALSWORTHY DRAMA.

Sir William Cheshire, Bart. .....Edmund Maurice
Bill, their eldest son .....Guy Rathbone
Dot .....Irene McLeod
Mabel Lanfarne .....Ellen O'Malley

The domestic drama by John Galsworthy, presented at the Kingsway Theatre last evening, although entitled "The Eldest Son," might, from its texture, have gone back some years and taken the title "Caste." It is a play that hinges on caste, and the author makes no attempt in any moment of its three acts to conceal his knowledge of the importance it exerts in shaping the lives of people, or of his own contempt for them because of it.

"The Eldest Son" is no big drama. It is little more than an episode in the history of an English county family, which traces its ownership of the land back to the thirteenth century. It is a family that will have no scandal on the estate, so when a young gamekeeper refuses to marry a girl of the village with whom scandal has linked his name, Sir William Cheshire, Bart., has no alternative to offer him but the choice to marry or clear out.

Mr. Galsworthy gives prominence to that incident—which later becomes but a minor interest—only that he may prepare the mind of his audience for the grim horror of the great family up at their house when the eldest son, heir to the title, is discovered in the same position with a girl in his mother's service. This discovery involved nothing less than a revolution—for whereas in the case of the young gamekeeper everyone was bent on his marriage, yet when it became a question of caste, as with the eldest son and the mother's maid, all, and, curiously enough, the men the more intolerant—marriage was not to be thought of. It was a grim analysis of family pride, this struggle between the eldest son and his relatives, driven distracted by the boy's determination to stand by the girl. Mr. Galsworthy—more was the pity—did not carry the conflict very far. One felt as if after two acts he had become somewhat tired of the subject, and so brought it to a lame conclusion by showing us the indignant, if poor, father of the girl refusing her permission to marry into a family that did not want her.

The acting successes were made by Mr. Edmund Maurice, Mr Guy Rathbone, and Miss Irene McLeod, but apart from them the play was taken too solemnly. There was an unusually representative audience present that included Mr. Bernard Shaw, Mr. Winston Churchill, and Lord Howard de Walden.

J.W.W. — J.W.D

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

ACT 1. Scene 1. ... ... Room in the Workhouse
The Mysterious Orphan. Oliver Twist "asks for more."
The Stranger requires Oliver to be apprenticed to a Thief.
Scene 2. ... ... Mr. Sowerberry's Shop.
The New Apprentice.
Scene 3. ... ... Near Highgate Gatehouse.
Oliver meets the Artful Dodger.
Scene 4. ... Fagin's School for Thieves. The Den.
The Gang of Thieves. Oliver's New Friends.

ACT 2. Scene 1. ... ... The Parlour at Mr. Brownlow's.
"If ever that Boy comes back again, I'll eat my head."
Scene 2. ... ... Clerkenwell.
The Books and the Five Pound Note.
Scene 3. ... ... Fagin's Den.
Plotting the Burglary.
Scene 4. ... The Garden of Mrs. Maylie's House.
The Burglars.

ACT 3. Scene 1. ... ... Bill Sikes' Garret.
Nancy fails to keep her Appointment.
Scene 2. ... Mr. & Mrs. Bumble at the Workhouse.
Mr. Bumble finds he has sold himself cheap. Mr. Monks buys the Proofs.
Scene 3. ... ... The Steps of London Bridge.
Fagin watches Nancy and her new friends.
Scene 4. ... ... Bill Sikes' Garret.
The Murder of Nancy.

ACT 4. Scene 1. ... ... The Garret.
Bill Sikes at Bay. The Attempted Escape.
Scene 2. ... ... Newgate Prison.
Fagin's Last Hours.
Scene 3. ... ... At Mr. Brownlow's.
The Confession of Monks. The Missing Will.
Oliver Twist loses his bad friends and is united to his good friends.

Costumes executed by J. HYMAN & CO., 19 Leicester Square, W.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE will play the following selections :—

(1) OVERTURE - "Die Irrfahrt um's Glück" - - - Suppé
(2) SELECTION - - "The Rose" - - - Myddleton
(3) SELECTION - - "Gipsy Love" - - - - Lehar
(4) OVERTURE - - "Marinerella" - - - - Fučik

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

MONDAY, NOV. 25th, at 7-45, & Nightly at 7-45

MATINEES at 2-30
WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS

FOR THREE WEEKS ONLY. CHARLES DICKENS' IMMORTAL FOR THREE WEEKS ONLY.

OLIVER TWIST

Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE
Music specially composed by H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Characters:

Oliver Twist (an Orphan Boy) ... ... Miss MARY GLYNNE
Mr. Brownlow (a retired Gentleman, residing in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell) } Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Mr. Grimwig (his Neighbour and Companion) } Mr. EDWARD THANE
Mr. Sowerberry (an Undertaker, of a Melancholy and Poetical Imagination) ... } Mr. CYRIL GRIFFITHS
Mr. Bumble (Parochial Beadle of Mudfog, afterwards Master of the Workhouse) } Mr. PERCY BAYERSTOCK
Monks (a Stranger) ... ... Mr. FRED MORGAN
Noah Claypole (an ill-favoured Charity Boy) Mr. LAWRENCE PHILLIPS
Giles (Butler to Mrs. Maylie) ... ... Mr. GEORGE DAYTON
Brittles (Her Footman) ... ... Mr. H. SMITH
Harry Maylie ... ... Mr. C. W. STANDING
Bill Sikes (a Housebreaker, of a savage and reckless disposition) ... ... } Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Toby Crackit, otherwise Flash Toby ... Mr. HENRY G. WRIGHT
Fagin (a Jew, keeper of a Den of Thieves) Mr. ALBERT WARD
The Dodger, alias The Artful ... ... Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Charley Bates (a Youthful Thief) ... ... Mr. HAL. CHARLTON
Turnkey ... ... Mr. GEORGE ASTON
Susan (a Workhouse Woman) ... ... Miss EVELYN HOPE
Rose Maylie ... ... Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
Nancy ... ... Miss LILIAN HALLOWS
Mrs. Corney, afterwards Mrs. Bumble ... Miss BLANCHE STANLEY

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

CRITERION
THEATRE

E

Nov. 26

Orchestra Stall

B 33

By Arrangement with CARL F. LEYEL

On Tuesday, November 26th, at 8.30, and every Evening following at 9

LOUIS MEYER presents

"WHERE THERE'S A WILL——"

A Four Act Comedy by BERNARD PARRY.

Richard Temple, K.C.	PAUL ARTHUR
James Burchell	M. R. MORAND
Harry Redgrave	VERNON STEEL
Herbert Mossop	SPENCER TREVOR
Arthur Crossfield	HOWARD STURGE
Hilda Burchell	DORA BARTON
Dolly Graham	DOROTHY MINTO
Mrs. Burchell	VANE FEATHERSTON
Pearson	ELIZABETH ROSSLYN

Act I., Scene 1. Morning Room at the Burchell's House near Windsor.
Scene 2. The Same.
(The curtain is lowered for a few seconds between Scenes 1 and 2 to denote the passing of time.)

Act II. Hilda's Bedroom.

Act III. Morning Room at the Burchell's House near Windsor.

Act IV. The same.

Gowns by WALTER HANES. Dresses & Hats by VIOLA, 27, Albemarle St., W. Bedroom Furniture by HEAL & SONS, Tottenham Court Road, W.

The Play Produced by LOUIS MEYER and E. DAGNALL.

Overture	"Felseumule"	Reissiger
Suite	"The Conqueror"	Edward Jones
Suite	"Merchant of Venice"	Frederick Ross
	"Characteristic Waltzes"	Coleridge Taylor

Orchestra under the Direction of Christopher Wilson.

MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.45.
Box Office 10 to 10. Telephone Gerrard 3844.

Business Manager, Stage Manager .. For LOUIS MEYER ... . ARTHUR PENLEY, CLAUD VERNON

Another new play at the Criterion! There is, however, nothing startlingly new in

"Where There's a Will——"

by Mr. Bernard Parry, which was produced on Tuesday evening, for in style and form; in the simple nature of the story, and in the conduct of the plot there is something old-fashioned about it all. Hilda Burchell is a young lady who has been beguiled by her mother into an engagement to marry a muff of a fellow of the fine, old, crusted name of Mossop. But Hilda has secretly married Harry Redgrave, a young bank clerk, who has been left a fortune by an eccentric old gentleman he seems to have fished out of the river. To this old gentleman's will Harry's newly married wife had put her signature as witness, and it is pointed ont by her uncle Richard, an eminent barrister (who is admitted to Hilda's confidence), that the wife's signature as a witness invalidates the will in favour of her husband. So Hilda decides to pretend not to be married at all, and when Harry Redgrave presents himself at her father's house she denies any acquaintance with the young gentleman who claims her for his wife. Therefore, it follows by all the rules and conventions that Harry must be regarded by the family, at once, as an amiable lunatic, and be treated as such.

* * *

Certainly Hilda's mother would be justified in that opinion in the second act when she finds the young man, who has entered the house again by the window, in her daughter's bedroom. (Bedroom furniture," as the programme explicitly states, "by ——," a well-known firm in the Tottenham Court-road, whose price list, to complete the obligation, should be given away with the programme.) But she prefers now to think he is there solely intent on robbery. Suspected in turn of being a lunatic and a thief, Harry comes out well in the end, however, when it is discovered that a second will exists which gives him an incontestable title to the fortune—and to the approval of his worldly mother-in-law. And that is all there is to it.

* * *

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

L
N
–

THE GLOBE THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Sole Lessee and Manager - CHARLES FROHMAN.

Dear Sir,

CHARLES FROHMAN requests the honour of your presence

On Wednesday Evening, November 27th, at 8.30,

when he will present

"PLAYING THE GAME"

An Original Comedy in one Act, by LEON M. LION AND AUSTIN PHILIPS,
Founded on Austin Philip's Story "The Choice"

With the following Cast:

Donald Blakiston... ... ... VINCENT CLIVE
Joan Hartland ... ... MAUD DAVIS
Sir Reuben Benyon-Blayne ... ... ARTHUR CULLIN
Ruth Benyon-Blayne... ... FLORENCE HARWOOD
Tom Mowbray ... ... ALFRED WILTSHIRE

Scene - The Manager's private room in the Belboro' Branch of Boyd's Bank.

Time - Between 10 and 11 in the forenoon.

To be followed at 9 o'clock, by the Successful Farce,

"OFFICER 666"

Should you or your representative be unable to be present, I shall feel obliged if you will immediately return the enclosed Ticket to

Yours faithfully,

OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.,
Business Manager.

But those who, for the sake of a good seat for "Officer 666," are obliged to sit through the curtain-raiser should be given good entertainment. As a short story by Mr. Austin Philips, "Playing the Game" may have been to the taste of the readers of popular magazine fiction; but, as turned into "an original comedy" by Mr. Leon M. Lion, its inherent faults of excessive sentimentality, inaccurate observation, and strained theatricality are conspicuous. It showed how a young bank clerk, by playing the game of honesty and straight-dealing, snatched a triumph over the managing director who all his life had played "the ruthless and unscrupulous game that brings people to the top." The fruits of victory were the managership of the Glasgow branch. It seemed to me rather rough on Glasgow, on the staff there, on the bank's customers there, and on the bank's shareholders generally that a young cashier at a country branch should be jumped into such an important post. I was wondering what the other directors would think of their managing director's high-handed action, and feeling somewhat aghast at the principles of banking as practised at Boyd's Bank, Belboro', when the curtain rose on "Officer 666," and I finished my evening pleasantly, thanks to the quaint humours of the farce and the capital acting of Mr. Dan'l Moyles, Mr. Sam Sothern, Mr. Wallace Eddinger, Miss Viva Birkett, and Mr. John Miltern, who plays the picture thief with such magnificent audacity.

Daly's Theatre,

Leicester Square,

PROPRIETOR
AND MANAGER.
MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

London, W.C.,

27th November, 1912

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES requests the honour of your presence on Saturday Evening next, the 30th inst., at the

FIRST APPEARANCE

OF

MISS CONSTANCE DREVER as LADY BABBY,

IN HIS NEW PRODUCTION

"GIPSY LOVE"

A Musical Play in Three Acts.

The Curtain will rise at 8.15 p.m. prompt.

Should you be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed ticket will be esteemed a favour

Address to—

T. J. COURTLY,

Acting Manager

[P.T.O.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

L
N
-

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH
Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - - LOUIS MEYER

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

EVERY EVENING, at 8.15. Dec 11.

Matinees at 2.15 on Saturday Dec. 14th, Wednesday Dec. 18th, Thursday Dec. 19th, Saturday Dec. 21st.
On and after Dec. 23rd Twice Daily at 2.15 and 8.15.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S PRODUCTION.

WHERE THE RAINBOW ENDS.

By CLIFFORD MILLS and JOHN RAMSEY. Music specially composed by Mr. ROGER QUILTER.

Characters:

Rosamund Carey	-	Miss ESME WYNNE
Crispian Carey	-	Master PHILIP TONGE
William	-	Master NOEL COWARD
Cubs	-	Master GUIDO CHIARLETTI
Matilda Flint	-	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Joseph Flint	-	Mr. REGINALD P. LAMB
Schlapps	-	Mr. LESLIE REA
The Genie of the Carpet	-	Mr. JAMES CAREW
Jim Blunders	-	Master SIDNEY SHERWOOD
Betty Blunders	-	Miss DOT TEMPLE
St. George of England	-	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
The Dragon King	-	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Dunks	-	Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
The Sea Witch	-	Miss MAXINE HINTON
Captain Carey	-	Mr. JAMES CAREW
Mrs. Carey	-	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
The Slacker	-	Master HEREWARD KNIGHT
The Slitherslime	-	Mr. A. CHARLWOOD
Spirit of the Lake	-	Miss GRACE SEPPINGS
Dragon Sentry	-	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
Hope	-	Miss DOROTHY LOVE
	AND
Will o' the Wisp	-	Miss MAVIS YORKE

Dragons, Hyenas, Elves, Flower Fairies, Dragon Flies, Rainbow Children, Spiders, Caterpillars, Toads, a Leopard, etc.

Flower Fairies:—Olga Warneford, Margaret Stuart, Kathleen Jones, Ivy Bell.
Dragon Flies, Water Lilies, and Rainbow Children:—Odette Gambiault, Norah Thornburrow, Dorothy d'Arcy, Doris Bell, Eileen Grist, Joyce Robey, Irene Stuart, Estelle Gill, Winnie Thomson, Phyllis Williams, Lily Seppings, Zenia Lynfeld, Nora Robinson, Sybil Harvey, Freda Warneford, Doris Rex, May Stuart, &c.
Elves, Toads, Hyenas, &c.:—Reginald Grasdorf, Philip Bates, Norman Haddock, Jack Rea, John Renshaw, Robert Chapman, Harry Withey, William Woodhouse, Arthur Brocknor, Brian Ahearn, Harold French, Victor Smith, Thos. Britten, Bernard Hackett, Freddy Oldrey, Charlie Wade, &c.
Dragons:—A. Charlwood, P. Duigan, G. Gresham, W. Brown, G. Whiteley, J. H. Napper, Dennis Cowles.

Empire Theatre,

Leicester Square.

Manager - ARTHUR ALDIN.

The PREMIER VARIETY THEATRE.
The Cosmopolitan Club
and
The Rendezvous of the World.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR.
Every Evening at 8.

PRICES:

Private Boxes, 1 to 3 guineas. Stalls (Numbered and Reserved), 10s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. Parterre, 5s. Box Circle, 6s. and 5s. Grand Circle, 4s. and 3s. Amphitheatre, 1s. No Re-Admission.

Telephone No.: 3527 Gerrard.

Box Office (J. E. PICKERING) open 10 to 10.

Stage Director—SPENCER BARRY.
Musical Director—CUTHBERT CLARKE.
Treasurer—JAMES DAVIS.

Floral Decorations by ROBERT GREEN, Ltd., Crawford Street, W.

This Programme is subject to alteration at the discretion of the Management.

EMPIRE

346

Row E

No 10

STALLS, 10/6

Wednesday, Dec. 11
1912

This portion does not admit to the Theatre.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE FOLLIES'" version of

ALADDIN.

Written and composed by H. G. PELISSIER, with additional numbers by Bach, Beethoven, and Lionel Rubens, with corrections in the grammar and spelling in the Dialogue by Morris Harvey, Lyrics by Milton, Swinburne, and Hugh E. Wright, and Orchestration and Harmonies tamed by Henri Lucas and Christopher Wilson.

Produced by FRED FARREN.

Dresses designed and supervised by C. WILHELM and executed by Miss HASTINGS and MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

Properties by P. GRIEVSON. Electrician, C. WINTER.

Machinist, W. SHELDON. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Musical Director (for H. G. Pélissier), HENRI LUCAS.

Stage Manager (for H. G. Pélissier), HERBERT MASON.

CAST.

Aladdin	Douglas MacLaren
Princess Balbroubadour	Fay Compton
Widow Twankey	H. G. Pélissier
Slave of the Lamp	Lewis Sydney
Slave of the Ring	Phyllis Bedells
Abanazar	Morris Harvey
Emperor of China	Dan Everard
Empress of China	Dalsy Fisher
Maids to the Princess	Effie Cook, Doris Vane, Margaret Woolmer, Loule Bond
Arab Slave	Doris Vane
Court Torturer	Fitz Lewis
Court Plasterer	Herbert Mason

Odds and ends by BRYCE WILSON, "BEN," "REGGIE," "DICK," &c.
Full Chorus.

Special Dances by Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS, supported by the Empire Corps de Ballet.

GENTLEMEN ARE POLITELY INFORMED THAT PIPES ARE NOT ALLOWED IN THE STALLS OR BOX CIRCLE

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

SCENE I.	-	Workshop of "The Follies."
SCENE II.	-	Outside the Emperor's Palace, Pekin.
SCENE III.	-	Entrance to the Cave.
SCENE IV.	-	Interior of Cave.
SCENE V.	-	At Widow Twankey's.
SCENE VI.	-	On the Road to the Palace.
SCENE VII.	-	Aladdin's Palace among the Almond Blossoms.
		Changing to
SCENE VIII.	-	Aladdin's Palace in the Desert of Sahara.
SCENE IX.	-	Park Lane.
SCENE X.	-	Widow Twankey's Reception in Park Lane.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FIRST PANTOMIME.

"THE FOLLIES" IN "ALADDIN" AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE.

Old fashioned pantomime, simple, humorous, and not too responsible, will find no serious rival in the version of "Aladdin" presented at the Empire Theatre last evening, with the members of The Follies troupe playing the speaking parts. Last evening's pantomime, the first of many in London this season, might as well be described as a musical comedy in ten scenes as be called a pantomime, for apart from a comical animal parade—one of the very few amusing things in the business—it savours little of a Christmas fairy play.

Frankly, it must be said that Mr. Pelissier has attempted something outside the talent of himself and his company. His "Aladdin" is not good pantomime, and it is but poor musical comedy, judged at least by the standards of the London musical play theatres. All the clever little business associated with the early successes of the Follies as a pierrot troupe were missing from both the songs and the dialogue of "Aladdin," and instead were given musical comedy scenes through which the company laboured, obviously overloaded. Fortunately there was a moment or two of relief when half-way through the fourth scene the Empire Theatre ballet, with charming Miss Phyllis Bedells at its head, made its appearance to execute a dance that was wholly in the spirit of a good fairy pantomime.

In the matter of the scenery and costumes the Empire Theatre kept well up to its reputation for good taste and display, but it was a pity that these adornments were not to serve a better cause than two hours of funless musical comedy.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE TIDE."

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS.

BY BASIL MACDONALD HASTINGS.

Felicity Scarth -	Miss ETHEL WARWICK
Dr. Stratton - -	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR (By permission of Miss MARIE TEMPEST).
Jerry le Maitre -	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Lieut. Car Whithair	Mr. EDMOND BREON (By permission of Miss MARIE TEMPEST).
Mrs. Bretherton -	Miss CICELY HAMILTON
Maisie Bretherton --	Miss MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
Mr. Strick - -	Mr. HEATH HAVILAND
Tom Denny - -	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN

Hotel Chambermaids Miss NANCY GIRLING, Miss LYDIA RUSSELL.
Miss KATHLEEN BARRETT. Page at the Hotel Mr. ERIC H. ALBURY.

Act I.—A Bedroom in a London Hotel.

Acts II. and IV.—Petit Bot Bay, Guernsey.

Act III.—A Cottage in Guernsey.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY MR. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Musical Director - -	CHEV. NAPOLEON LAMBELET.
Stage Manager - - -	Mr. LESLIE RYECROFT.

Queen's
THEATRE.

E
Dec. 14

Orch. Stall

L 19
To be retained

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY AT THE QUEEN'S.

Miss Ethel Warwick in Piece by Mr. Hastings. W. D

MR. NORMAN TREVOR'S SUCCESS.

Felicity Scarth	Miss Ethel Warwick
Dr. Stratton	Mr. Norman Trevor
Jerry le Maitre	Mr. Shiel Barry
Lieut. Car Whithair	Mr. Edmond Breon
Mrs. Bretherton	Miss Cicely Hamilton
Maisie Bretherton	Miss Muriel Martin Hervey
Mr. Strick	Mr. Heath Haviland
Tom Denny	Mr. J. T. Macmillan

Last night Miss Ethel Warwick made her third venture for the present season at the Queen's Theatre with a new play by Mr. Basil Macdonald Hastings, called "The Tide." It is the fashion nowadays in London management when a new author appears with a work savouring of success to appeal to him for the privilege of producing yet another of his plays, and no doubt Miss Warwick congratulated herself on getting a drama by the author of so original a piece as "The New Sin"—produced early in the year by Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie. There is a world of difference, however, between "The Tide" and "The New Sin," for while the latter was concise in thought and direct in its action, the play that it was Miss Warwick's lot to produce last evening was diffuse, old fashioned in its main theme and treatment, and merely saved from being tiresome by occasional flashes of bright writing.

It is not easy to lend acceptance to the proposition that after eighteen years a woman will suddenly change the whole character of her surroundings, and go back "to rough it," because she at last feels need of the child of shame, born to her when she was herself but little more than a child. The author makes the point still difficult because the mother and child had been separated before they had been a day together. He avoids, however, cleverly enough, the convention of melodrama that the two must, by instinct, after the lapse of nearly twenty years, recognise each other. In his play last night he shows the child refusing the mother's love, and the mother after a hour or two of storm, drying her tears and agreeing to go back into the world as the wife of the man who failed in his attempt to reconcile parent and child.

It must in truth be stated that, as the play was acted, much of the business was unconsciously funny. Much credit, however, is due to Miss Ethel Warwick for a brave attempt to carry the play, and an immense amount of credit is due to Mr. Norman Trevor for his great skill in saving some of the situations. One of the features of last night was the palpable public recognition of Mr. Norman Trevor as a foremost leading actor of the English stage. J.W.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

General Manager - - A. M. LOADER

Saturday, DECEMBER 21st and every afternoon at 2.30.

MATINEES ONLY.

The Golden Land of Fairy Tales

Translated and adapted by A. H. QUARITCH and MAURICE RAYE.
Music composed by HEINRICH BERTÉ.
Produced by DONALD BAYLIS, under the supervision of A. M. LOADER.

Scenery and Costumes designed by CHEVALIER FORMELLI.
Costumes made under the direction of EMILIO COMELLI by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., C. ALIAS, Ltd., M. FISHER, Ltd., J. A. HARRISON & Co., Ltd., MUELLE and ALEXANDRA.
Armour by C. BRAND of PARIS.
Scenery painted by CHEVALIER FORMELLI, WALTER HANN, HARRY BROOKE, ALFRED CRAVEN and W. JOHNSON.
Wigs by GUSTAVE.

Acting Manager ... ... Mr. DONALD BAYLIS

Musical Director ... ... EMIL KREUZ

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. ARTHUR WHITE

PRICES: Boxes, £3 3s., £1 1s.; Stalls, 10 6 and 7 6; Dress Circle, 7/6, 6/- and 5/-; Upper Circle, 4/- and 3/-; Pit, 2/-; Gallery, 1/-

CHILDREN HALF PRICE TO ALL PARTS.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof curtain to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept clear from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

CAST.

THE PROLOGUE.

Fairy Queen ... EVELYN HOPE
Granny ... EVELYN SHELLEY
Lotty ... ELSIE MARGETSON
The Wanderer ... ALBERT CHAPMAN

PUSS-IN-BOOTS.

Puss-in-Boots ... ERNEST SELIG
The Princess ... GWEN TREVITT
Miller's Son ... CLIVE CATTLEY
The King ... T. P. HAYNES
The Giant Ogre ... H. LANGLOIS
Tom Thumb ... DOROTHY TURNER
The Hare ... Master HAROLD BARRETT

LITTLE RED-RIDING-HOOD.

Red-Riding Hood ... FLORRIE LEWIS
The Grandmother ... JOY CHATWYN
The Wolf ... ERNEST SELIG
The Huntsman ... ALBERT CHAPMAN

THE MAGIC WOOD.

The Fairy Amora ... EVELYN HOPE
Cinderella ... CECILY ELDON
Snowdrop ... ISLA RAINE
The Sleeping Beauty ... GWEN TREVITT
Prince Arthur ... VERNON BOOTH
Prince Richard ... ANEW McMASTER
Prince Henry ... HARRY E. DUFF
The Magician ... HARRY TREADAWAY
Solo Dancer ... DOROTHY FINUCANE

CINDERELLA

Cinderella ... CECILY ELDON
The Stepmother ... LENA FLOWERDEW
The Stepsisters ... Misses NORA ROY and E. WALTER
The Fairy Godmother ... DOROTHY FINUCANE
The Bull Dog ... ERNEST SELIG
Prince Richard ... ANEW McMASTER
Master of Ceremonies ... CLIVE CATTLEY
Court Marshal ... T. P. HAYNES

SNOWDROP.

Snowdrop ... ISLA RAINE
Prince Henry ... HARRY E. DUFF
Chief Dwarf ... DOROTHY TURNER
Wicked Queen ... JOY CHATWYN
Huntsman ... ALBERT CHAPMAN

SLEEPING BEAUTY.

The Sleeping Beauty ... GWEN TREVITT
Prince Arthur ... VERNON BOOTH

EPILOGUE.

VISION OF THE GOLDEN LAND.

The Fairy Queen ... EVELYN HOPE
Granny ... EVELYN SHELLEY

Solos in the Fairy Harlequinade Ballet, danced by FLORRIE LEWIS and DOROTHY TURNER.

Produced by Donald Baylis, under the supervision of A. M. Loader.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

By arrangement with ... ... Messrs. A. & S. Gatti

EVERY AFTERNOON, at 2.30 o'clock

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRODUCE THE CHILDREN'S PLAY IN TWO ACTS, ENTITLED

Shock-Headed Peter

By PHILIP CARR and NIGEL PLAYFAIR
(Founded on Struwwelpeter)

Music by WALTER RUBENS

Pappa ...	...	... Mr. T. N. WEGUELIN
Peter ...	...	... Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Augustus	...	... Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
Philip ...	...	Mr. E. COMPTON-COUTTS
The Blackamoor	...	... Mr. GEORGE LANE
Mintz and Mauntz	Cats	Master GEORGE SELIG Mr. W. A. HARVIE
Mamma ...	...	... Miss KATE BISHOP
Harriet ...	...	... Miss NELLIE BOWMAN

Guests at Peter's Party:—Misses Betty Adair, Phyllis Austin, Mattie Bloch, May Trewin, Eileen Esler, Gertrude Grant-Gordon, Kathleen Holt, Jessie Johnstone, Dorothy Manville, Nancy Pawley, Viola Parry, Doris Prosser, Winnie Seaman, Vera Wilkinson; Masters J. Flowers, T. Gunnell, Frank Moger, W. Quaden, Samuel Thiel, Charles Wareham, Henry Michel, R. Eames.

Scene ... ... Pappa's Garden
(Designed by TONY SARG and painted by PHILIP HOWDEN)

The Play produced by Mr. NIGEL PLAYFAIR

Solo Dance by Miss MATTIE BLOCH
Whistling by Miss DOROTHY MANVILLE
Trio by Miss MATTIE BLOCH, Miss BETTY ADAIR and Miss EILEEN ESLER
The Words and Music of the Song, "The Dog and the Rabbit," by PAUL A. RUBENS
Dances arranged by HARTLEY MILBURN
Dresses by MARGARET & MINNIE TERRY
Shoes by H & M. RAYNE and JOHN BARNES & Co., Ltd
Wigs by CLARKSON. Music published by ENOCH & SONS

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - A. & S. GATTI

Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Miss HILDA TREVELYAN and Mr. EDMUND GWENN request the honour of your presence on SATURDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 21st, for the first performance of

Preceded at each performance by some

OLD ENGLISH SINGING-GAMES FOLK-SONGS, SWORD AND COUNTRY DANCES

Performed by Children under the personal direction of Mr. CECIL J. SHARP,
Honorary Director of the English Folk Dance Society

Country Dance	.. ..	"Gathering Peascods"
Singing Game	.. ..	"The Roman Soldiers"
Country Dance	.. ..	"The Ribbon Dance"
Folk Song	.. ..	"The Keeper"
Singing Game	.. ..	"Looby Loo"
Country Dance	.. ..	"The New Bo-Peep"
Singing Game	.. ..	"Jenny Jones"
Sword Dance	.. ..	"There Stands a Lady"
Singing Game	.. ..	"Flamborough"
Violinist	.. ..	"A-Hunting we will go"
Instructress	.. ..	Miss ELSIE AVRIL
	.. ..	Miss MAUD KARPELES

Musical Director .. .. Mr. EDWARD JONES
Manager (for Miss Trevelyan and Mr. Gwenn) .. .. Mr. CECIL PAGET
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. GEORGE DESMOND

The redecoration of the Theatre has been carried out by Messrs. ROPLEY, 35, Duke Street, W.

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD OF THE ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.
ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co., Ltd.
Toilet Table appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDES, LTD., London and Birmingham.
PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 2 and 8. Commence at 2.30 and 8.30
Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.
Box Office, (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10

Business Manager (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) MR. HERBERT CLARK

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

Duke of York's Theatre.

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

On Tuesday next, December 24th, 1912, at 7.30 o'clock prompt.

CHARLES FROHMAN will present

PETER PAN

Or, THE BOY WHO WOULDN'T GROW UP.

By J. M. BARRIE.

The Music Composed and arranged by John Crook.

Peter Pan	...	PAULINE CHASE
Jas. Hook	...	HOLMAN CLARK
Mr. Darling	...	LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Mrs. Darling	...	VIVA BIRKETT
Wendy Moira Angela Darling	...	MARY GLYNNE
John Napoleon Darling	...	ALFRED WILMORE
Michael Nicholas Darling	...	REGGIE SHEFFIELD
Nana	...	EDWARD SILLWARD
Tinker Bell	...	IANE WREN
Tootles	...	GERTRUDE LANG
Nibs	...	MAJORIE GRAHAM
Slightly	...	CHARLES THOMAS
Curly	...	PRUDENCE BOURCHIER (at Matinees)
1st Twin	...	JOAN CARROLL (Evening Performances)
2nd Twin	...	ANNA LANGLEY
Sntee	...	SYBIL HOOK
Gentleman Starkey	...	GEORGE SHELTON
Cookson	...	CHARLES TREVOR
Mullins	...	CHARLES MEDWIN
Cecco	...	JAMES PRIOR
Jukes	...	WILLIAM LUFF
Noodler	...	JAMES ENGLISH
		JOHN KELT
		A. STEVENSON,
		S. SPENCER, CHARLES CALVERT
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	HUMPHREY WARDEN
Tiger Lily		MARGARET FRASER
Braves, LILY McINTYRE, GLADYS JESSON, MARGARET KING, ANNA NESBITT, MAISIE YORKE, MAIR VAUGHAN
Mermaid	...	DORA SEVENING
Baby Mermaid	...	MOYA NUGENT
Liza	(Author of the Play)	MOYA NUGENT
Crocodile	...	S. NAGLE and M. ROSE
Ostrich	...	W. CHILD
Pack of Wolves, W. MANNING, GORDON CARR, B. ROSE, A. H. KENT, V. PIERPOINT, D. SEARLE

Members of Peter's Band

Pirates

Act I. OUR EARLY DAYS — Scene, The Nursery.
Act II. THE NEVER, NEVER, NEVER LAND.
Scene, The House we built for Wendy.
Act III. MAROONER'S ROCK, OR THE MERMAID'S LAGOON.
(Showing an average ten minutes in Peter's Life).
Act IV. OUR HOME UNDER THE GROUND.
Act V. HOME, SWEET HOME.
Scene 1 The Pirate Ship.
Scene 2 A last glimpse of the Redskins.
Scene 3. The Nursery.
Scene 4. Outside the House.
Scene 5. The Tree Tops.

The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1912.

PETER PAN GROWING OLD.

"Peter Pan" began its ninth consecutive London season at the Duke of York's Theatre on Christmas Eve, with the members of the original first-night company of December 1904, now reduced to three, named Messrs. James English, John Kelt and George Shelton.

This season Mr. Barrie, the author, and Mr. Frohman, the manager, surrounded "Peter" by children in place of somewhat more mature characters. The change does not much benefit the performance. The curiously wistful note that was predominant throughout the early performances of "Peter Pan" has grown less year by year until now it has almost wholly disappeared. All through the performance on Christmas Eve there was an almost hysterical disposition to over-play every incident and to address the dialogue almost directly to the audience. "Peter Pan" will become prematurely old if represented always as he was on Christmas Eve. Much the best performances were those by Mr. George Shelton and Miss Moya Nugent. J. W.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

2 2257

THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE

KINGSWAY

Managing Director - - - - - - FERNAND AKOUN

EVERY EVENING AT 8.
Matinees Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.
Special Matinee Friday, Dec. 27th, at 2.30.

Grand Christmas Programme.

ORCHESTRAL SELECTION.

STEDMAN'S COMPANY OF FORTY PERFORMERS IN

1. - "THE MAGIC BELL"

A Fairy Fantasy.
Book and Music by ARCHIBALD H. BENWELL.
Produced by MARSHALL MOORE.

Thistledown ... ... Miss EDITH HILL
Love in the Mist ... ... Miss GLADYS VIVIAN
Queen of the Fairies ... ... Miss MYFANWY NEWELL
Harebell ... ... Miss EILEEN JOWITT
Ariel ... ... Miss VERA CLARKE

AND

BETTY ... ... Miss IVY SAWYER
BILLY ... ... Mr. DAN LENO, Junr.
Green Man ... ... Mr. PERCY DAVISON
Rags ... ... Mr. GEO. NASH
Bones ... ... Mr. JAMES HARCOURT
Spirit of the Golden Bell ... ... Miss VIOLET DENZEL

(The above cast is in the order the Characters appear.)

Special Ballets and Dances Invented and Arranged by Mlle. LILIAN LEOFFLER.
Extra Numbers by Mr. KENNETH MORRISON.
The whole production under the Direction of STEDMAN'S.

2. - - HERBERT LLOYD (The King of Diamonds)
IN
"DISCORDIA."
A Burlesque on Variety, Musical Comedy, Minstrels and Pantomime.
A Conglomeration of Di-scord.

3. - - - THE CLARKONIANS
First Appearance in England of the Greatest Gymnasts and Trapeze Performers in the World.

4. - - Miss KITTY SINCLARIS and her Five Little Maids.
SONGS, DANCES and POTPOURRI.

5. - - - BEATIE & BABS
The Unique Juvenile Stars in their Original Comedy Scene,
"THE PAVEMENT REHEARSAL."

6. - - PLEASURE LAND
Arranged by NEAT.

7. CINEMATOGRAPHY

Unique and Extraordinary.

The Largest and Clearest Moving Pictures Ever Produced.
Projected by an Entirely Novel Process. No Rays of Light Visible.

COMPLETE CHANGE OF PICTURES TWICE WEEKLY.

The First Week's Programme will include amongst others
"THE BABES IN THE WOOD" (a Magnificent Pantomime Production in Natural Colours).
"A LESSON IN LOVE" (in Colours).
"THE WATER FUNKER."
"PEEPS AT PASTORAL ENGLAND."
"FUNNICUSS AT LUNA PARK."
"RACE FOR AN INHERITANCE."
"VALLEY OF THE VESBIE."
"O KAKA SAN" (in Colours).
"RANCHMAN AND THE HUNGRY BIRD."
"THE SHUTTLE OF FATE."
"BOBBY AND TINY TIM'S CAPTURE."
CURRENT EVENTS.

THE MOST ACCESSIBLE THEATRE IN LONDON.

Trams from all parts to Aldwych Tram Station. One minute from Holborn and British Museum Tubes and Strand and Holborn 'Buses.

AFTERNOON TEAS AND REFRESHMENTS AT POPULAR PRICES.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, 10/6, 15/- and 21/-: Fauteuils, 3/-: Orchestra Stalls, 2/6: Stalls, 2/-; Grand Circle, 3/-: Family Circle, 2/-: Balcony, 1/-; Gallery, 6d.

ALL SEATS RESERVED AND BOOKABLE IN ADVANCE.

Box Office, 10 to 10. Telephone: Holborn 6840.

General Manager ... ... BEN NATHAN
Press Manager ... ... HERBERT GROVER
Stage Manager ... ... ALFRED HEMMING
Musical Director ... ... CLAUDE FENN-LEYLAND

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether temporary or permanent.

Je ttre.

THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE

MATINEE

Thursday, Dec. 26, 1912

[redacted]

PRICE 3s. 6d.

Row E No. 6

This Portion to be given up.

RIGHT

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

Every Evening at 8,

"Written in Red"

A DETECTIVE DRAMA IN FOUR ACTS

By F. M. DOUGLAS.

John Redwood, Barrister-at-law ...	Mr. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Amos Larpent	... Mr. SAM LIVESEY
Ambrose Faber, M.D. ...	... Mr. CHARLES VANE
Jordan Bull, Barrister-at-law ...	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Isaac Leverson, Solicitor ...	... Mr. ROTHBURY EVANS
Viscount Carswell, a County Magistrate	Mr. HARDING STEERMAN
Inspector Webb, S.Y. ...	... Mr. PHILIP HEWLAND
Mr Teale, Analytical Chemist ...	Mr. CHARLES TERRIC
Rossiter, Redwood's Clerk	Mr. DESMOND BRANNIGAN
Mr. Hilton, Clerk to the Justices	Mr. ARTHUR HAMBLING
James Boyle, a Boatman ...	... Mr. FRED GROVE
Thorney	... Miss GILLIAN DEVERELL
Janet Royle	... Miss ARMINE GRACE
Hilda Larpent ...	... Miss MAY CHEVALIER

ACT 1. Redwood's Chambers in the Temple (Wednesday Morning)
ACT 2. Mr. Rackshaw's House at Shepperton (Thursday Afternoon)
ACT 3. ... ... The Same (Thursday Evening)
ACT 4. ... ... Magistrate's Court Room (A Fortnight Later)

TIME - - - THE PRESENT DAY

The Play produced by H. A. SAINTSBURY

General Manager	JERRARD GRANT ALLEN
Business Manager	JOHN EYRE MASSY
Stage Manager	DESMOND BRANNIGAN
Assistant Stage Manager	ARTHUR HAMBLING

General Manager ... (for Mr. J. H. Leigh) ... Mr. JAMES ANNING

COURT
THEATRE.

26/12/1912

Stall

No. B 2

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1912.

"WRITTEN IN RED."

Detective dramas if not too closely examined can provido a very good evening's entertainment in tho theatre; and Mr. F. M. Douglas's play "Written in Red," made by that author from his novel of the same name, was accepted as good fare by last evening's audience at the Court Theatre.

The brilliant detective work of the barrister in Mr. Douglas's story—work so original and unerring that it made the Scotland Yard men look and feel very uncomfortable—had the pleasing effect of reducing to very small proportions the morbid interest of the poison mystery he had set himself to unravel. That the good woman on whom Scotland Yard had cast a suspicion was proved innocent was a foregone conclusion, but that the real murderer could have even gone so far as he did in misleading the detectives must be reckoned among those things that only those who go to the theatres can understand.

As far as the simple nature of detective drama materials would allow Mr. H. A. Saintsbury, Mr. Sam Livesey, and Mr. Charles Vane did very good work.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

THE LITTLE THEATRE

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, W.C

Proprietress GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Boxing Day and Every Afternoon and Evening at 2.30 and 8.30.,

Mr. BRANDON THOMAS'S COMPANY

in the Famous Comedy

CHARLEY'S AUNT

By BRANDON THOMAS.

COL. SIR FRANCIS CHESNEY, BART., Late Indian Service		Mr. CHARLES WEIR
STEPHEN SPETTIGUE, Solicitor, Oxford...		Mr. JAMES PAGE
JACK CHESNEY	Undergraduates at St. Olde's College	Mr E. EVAN THOMAS
CHARLES WYKEHAM		Mr. F. T. COOPER
LORD FANCOURT BABBERLEY ...		Mr. CHARLES WINDERMERE
BRASSETT, a College Scout		Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
DONNA LUCIA D'ALVADOREZ from Brazil		Miss ADA FERRAR
KITTY VERDUN, Spettigue's Ward		Miss URSULA GRANT
AMY SPETTIGUE, Spettigue's Niece		Miss IVY CLEMOW
ELA DELAHAY, an Orphan		Miss PAULINE HUGEN

ACT I. ... ... Jack Chesney's Rooms in College.
"When Pious Frauds are dispensations."—Hudibras.

ACT II. ... ... Garden outside Jack Chesney's Rooms.
"While there's Tea there's Hope."—Pinero.

ACT III. ... ... Drawing Room in Spettigue's House.
"Dinner lubricates Business."—Russell.

The Management reserves the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

Pianoforte Selections will be given between the Acts, by Miss MABEL RUTLAND.

SELECTION ... ... "College Songs." ... ... Arr by J. W. Turner

Introducing: 1. Carmen—Etonese. 2. Wanderer—University. 3. Songs Harrow. 4. Bucker—Harrow. 5. Eton Boating Song. 6. Left, Right—Harrow. 7. Forty Years on—Harrow. 8. Willow the King—University. 9. Io Triomphe—University. 10. Floreat—Rugby. 11. Old Towler—University. 12. Dulce Domum—Winchester. 13. John Peel—University. 14. There is a Tavern—Yale. 15. Upidee—Harvard. 16. Carmen Heriodum—Wellington.

Preceded each Evening at 8.0 by

"THE LAST GREEN"

(A Golfing Incident)

By F. S. A. LOWNDES.

MISS DOLLY DORMY ...	(Daughter of Col. Dormy) ...	Miss DULCIE GREATWICH
THE EARL OF ROBERTSBRIDGE ...	(An Undergraduate) ...	Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
DONALD ANGUS MCTAVISH ...	(A Caddie) ...	...Mr. D. HALLAM

Scene—The Last Green of a Golf Course. Time—Summer Afternoon.

Scenery by W. JOHNSTON and W. BANKS.
Hats by Mme. KOSKY, 14, Sloane Street, S.W.
The Pianofortes are supplied by STEINWAY & SONS.
Costumes by Mme. HENRIETTE & Co., 10, Savile Row, W.
Stage Furniture by Messrs. WOLFE & HOLLANDER.
Cigarettes by Messrs. ABDULLA Ltd.

Box Office open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. (Mr. RICHARDS), Telephone 1957 CITY.

General Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL BARTH
Acting Manager ... ... Mr. ROBERT BURNETT

Popular Prices. Reserved Seats:—Balcony, 4s. Stalls, 4s. and 5s. Orchestra Stalls 10s. 6d. Private Boxes, 21s. and 31s. 6d.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove their Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

"Charley's Aunt" began yesterday yet another of its Christmas seasons in London of two performances daily. The venue on this occasion is the Little Theatre, where a holiday audience enjoyed the quaint vagaries of the aunt from Brazil just as heartily, no doubt, as another audience did on a December evening twenty years ago, when Mr. Brandon Thomas's amusing farce made its first appearance in London at the Royalty Theatre. J. W.

Proprietress: THE Miss Lena Ashwell

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Lillah McCarthy – Granville Barker

Matinees every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, at 2.30

John Bull's Other Island

A play in four acts

by Bernard Shaw

Broadbent - -	Louis Calvert
Hodson - - -	A. B. Tapping
Tim Haffigan - -	Hunter Nesbitt
Larry Doyle - -	Harcourt Williams
Keegan - - -	William Poel
Patsy Farrell - -	Percy Crawford
Nora - - -	Ellen O'Malley
Corney Doyle - -	Lewis Scaley
Father Dempsey -	J. D. Beveridge
Aunt Judy - -	Maud Magrath
Barney Doran - -	Blake Adams
Matthew Haffigan -	J. Fisher White

Mr. Beveridge appears by courtesy of Sir George Alexander.

KINGSWAY Theatre. Prop., Miss Lena Ashwell.
LILLAH McCARTHY. GRANVILLE BARKER.
TO-NIGHT, at 9. (Last 4 Performances.)
THE ELDEST SON, by JOHN GALSWORTHY.
Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.
At 8.30, Margaret Morris and her Dancing Children.
JOHN BULL'S OTHER ISLAND, by BERNARD SHAW.
MATINEES TO-DAY (Tuesday), Thursday, Friday, at 2.30.
Commencing SATURDAY, Jan. 11, EVERY NIGHT at 8.15.
Mats. Wed., Jan. 15, Sat., 18, and following Weds., Sats., 2.30.

KINGSW
GT. Q
Miss Lillah McCart
Thursday
Matinee
Dec. 26
Stall
C 12
This to be retained

"JOHN BULL'S OTHER ISLAND."

Mr. Bernard Shaw's amusing satire on English and Irish character "John Bull's Other Island" was revived yesterday at the Kingsway Theatre for a season of matinées. The eight years that have elapsed since this play was first produced at the Court Theatre have not in the least dimmed its humour nor blunted the edge of its caustic contrast of racial characteristics.

Yesterday it kept a crowded holiday audience in the best of good humour with themselves and an excellent company that included Mr. Louis Calvert, Mr. William Poel, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, and Miss Ellen O'Malley. J. W.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

To the Audience at the Kingsway Theatre.

A Personal Appeal from the Author of John Bull's Other Island.

DEAR SIR OR MADAM,

It is your custom to receive my plays with the most generous and unrestrained applause. You sometimes compel the performers to pause at the end of every line until your laughter has quieted down. I am not ungrateful; but may I ask you a few questions?

Are you aware that you would get out of the Theatre half an hour earlier if you listened to the play in silence and did not applaud until the fall of the curtain?

Do you really consider that a performance is improved by continual interruptions, however complimentary they may be to the actors and the author?

Do you not think that the naturalness of the representation must be destroyed, and therefore your own pleasure greatly diminished, when the audience insists on taking part in it by shouts of applause and laughter, and the actors have repeatedly to stop acting until the noise is over.

Have you considered that in all good plays tears and laughter lie very close together, and that it must be very distressing to an actress who is trying to keep her imagination fixed on pathetic emotions to hear bursts of laughter breaking out at something she is supposed to be unconscious of?

Do you know that even when there is no such conflict of comic and tragic on the stage, the strain of performing is greatly increased if the performers have to attend to the audience as well as to their parts at the same time?

Can you not imagine how a play which has been rehearsed to perfection in dead silence without an audience must be upset, disjointed, and spun out to a wearisome length by an audience which refuses to enjoy it silently?

Have you noticed that if you laugh loudly and repeatedly for two hours, you get tired and cross, and are sorry next morning that you did not stay at home?

Will you think me very ungrateful and unkind if I tell you that though you cannot possibly applaud my plays too much at each fall of the curtain to please me, yet the more applause there is during the performance the angrier I feel with you for spoiling your enjoyment and my own?

Would you dream of stopping the performance of a piece of music to applaud every bar that happened to please you? and do you not know that an act of a play is intended, just like a piece of music, to be heard without interruption from beginning to end?

Have you ever told your sons and daughters that little children should be seen and not heard? And have you ever thought how nice theatrical performances would be, and how much sooner you would get away to supper, if parents in the theatre would follow the precepts they give to their children at home?

Have you noticed that people look very nice when they smile or look pleased, but look shockingly ugly when they roar with laughter or shout excitedly or sob loudly?. Smiles make no noise.

Do you know that what pleases actors and authors most is not your applauding them but your coming to see the play again and again, and that if you tire yourselves out and spoil the play with interruptions you are very unlikely to come again?

Do you know that my plays, as rehearsed, are just the right length: that is, quite as long as you can bear; and that if you delay the performances by loud laughter you will make them half an hour too long?

Can I persuade you to let the performance proceed in perfect silence just this once to see how you like it. The intervals will give you no less than five opportunities of expressing your approval or disapproval, as the case may be.

And finally, will you believe me to be acting sincerely in your own interests in this matter as your faithful servant,

THE AUTHOR.

New Year,
1913.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

BOXING DAY, December 26, at 2, and TWICE DAILY at 2 & 7-30.

THE LYCEUM CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME,

The FORTY THIEVES

Written by NEWMAN MAURICE. Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE

Music specially composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE. Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, WILLIAM HOBBS, J. SOAM S and LYCEUM STUDIO. Mechanical and other effects by THOMAS REES. Electrical and other effects by JOHN WATERS. Costumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, Wardour St., W. The Ballets invented and arranged by MDLLE. ROSA.

Characters:—

Ali Baba (a Poor Woodcutter)	Mr. JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD
Mrs. Cogia Baba (his Wife)	Mr. DAVE O'TOOLE
Cassim (his Rich Brother)	LITTLE ZOLA
Mrs. Cassim	Miss LILY LONG
Mokeana (a Donkey)	Mr. SAKER HARLOW
Hakki	Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Selim	Miss MAGGIE LESTER
Hadgi	Miss FLO EDWARDES
Cadgi	Miss ROSE ELSWORTHY
Tee-To-Tum	ALEXANDRA THE GREAT
The Forty Thieves	BY THEMSELVES
Abdallah (Captain of the Forty)	Miss IDA BARR
Hassarac and Cassarac (Two of the Forty of Dark Looks)	SCOTT and WHALEY
The Caliph of Bagdad	Miss LILY MAXWELL
Grand Vizier	Mr. FRED DE VERE
Grand Vizier's Secretary	Mr. WILL HALLETT
Waite, Runno, Tarry (Waiters)	THE THREE COMERFORDS
Mustapha (a Cobbler)	Mr. GRIFF HODSON
Hassan	Miss ELSIE FARMAN
Terpsichore (a Dancer)	Miss LILY FLEXMORE
The Swan	Miss GRANNY PICKFORD
Zaidee	Miss LILY GULLICK
Morgiana (in love with Ganem)	Miss DAISY BINDLEY
and
Ganem (the Woodcutter's Son)	Miss DAISY JAMES and numerous others, including

SIX LANCASHIRE LASSES and MADAME VICTOR'S BABY BRIGADE.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES

Part 1.

Scene 1 ... ... THE MARKET-PLACE OF BAGDAD
(Designed and Painted by William Hobbs.)

Scene 2 ... ... A STREET NEAR ALI BABA'S HOUSE

Scene 3 ... ALI BABA'S HAPPY HOME AND THE DONKEY'S BEDROOM
(Painted by J. Soames.)

Scene 4 ... ... ON THE ROAD TO THE FOREST

Scene 5 ... ... THE DEPTHS OF THE FOREST
(Designed and Painted by H. K. Browne.)

MARCH OF THE FORTY.

INTERVAL (ABOUT TEN MINUTES).

Part 2.

Scene 6 ... ... THE RESTAURANT

Scene 7 ... ... ALI BABA'S HOUSE
(Painted by George Miller.)

Scene 8 ... ... ON THE ROAD TO THE FOREST

Scene 9 ... THE MYSTIC CAVE OF THE FORTY THIEVES
GRAND BALLET.—Solo Dances by THE SIX LANCASHIRE LASSES; LITTLE GRANNY PICKFORD (the Child Pavlova); Miss LILY FLEXMORE (Dance Extraordinaire); and ALEXANDRA THE GREAT (Baby Dancer).
Invented and arranged by Mdlle. Rosa. Music composed by H. Sullivan-Brooke.
The Piano used in the Cave Scene, stolen by the Forty Thieves, is from J. B. CRAMER & CO., Limited, 139 New Bond Street, London, W.

Scene 10 ... ... OUTSIDE ALI'S HOUSE

Scene 11 ... ... THE FORTY OIL JARS IN A GARDEN

Scene 12 ... ... ALI BABA'S PALACE
(Designed and Painted by William Hobbs.)

CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE.

The Lyceum Clown ... Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Pantaloon ... ... Mr. FRED DE VERE

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

268

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

BOXING DAY, Dec. 26, at 2 and 7-30 and TWICE DAILY at 2 and 7-30.

THE PRINCES FAIRY - - - PANTOMIME,

CINDERELLA

Written by NEWMAN MAURICE. Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE

Music specially composed and arranged by ALEXANDER HUMPHREYS. Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, WILLIAM HOBBS, J. SOAMES, and LYCEUM STUDIO. Stage Managers, HENRY G. WRIGHT and WILSON BLAKE. Mechanical and other effects by TOM REES and CHAS. HERMAN. Costumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.

Characters:

Cinderella		MISS ELISE CRAVEN
Dandini (Valet to the Prince)		MISS VENIE CLEMENTS
Baron De No Cash		MR. SIMS WOOLLEY
Clorinda (Cinderella's Ugly Sisters)		MR. K. SCOTT BARRIE
Thisbe (Cinderella's Ugly Sisters)		MR. K. SCOTT BARRIE
Butcher		MR. GEORGE RAPLEY
Baker		MR. WILLIAM RICHARDS
Milkman		MR. HENRY CARLYLE
Grocer		MR. ALFRED SYLVESTER
Gold Stick	Prince's Attendants	MR. GEORGE HARVEY
Silver Stick	Prince's Attendants	MISS ROSE MERTON
Copper Stick	Prince's Attendants	MISS FLORENCE CARR
Walking Stick	Prince's Attendants	MISS MAUD HILTON
Flipper	Merry Jacks-of-all-Trades	MISS CONNIE BUTLER
Flopper	Merry Jacks-of-all-Trades	WOODHOUSE and WELLS
Prince Paragon		MISS JEWEL ST. LEGER
Lord Holborn		MISS N. BEATON
Duke of Tottenham Court Road		MISS ETHEL MORTIMER
Earl of Oxford Circus		MISS ELSIE HARVEY
Sir Percy Piccadilly		MISS NORA ERSKINE
Johnny Woggle		MR. HERBERT MARSHALL
Demon Malvino (a Bad Spirit)		MR. HARRY MAYNARD
Hate	The Demoniacal Imps	MR. F. BARNETT
Malice	The Demoniacal Imps	MR. S. ALEXANDER
Greed	The Demoniacal Imps	MR. H. LEVEY
Jealousy	The Demoniacal Imps	MR. THOMAS HENRY
Godmother (the Fairy Crystal)		MISS NANCY BEVINGTON
Spirit of the Slipper		MISS LOUIE ROE
Buttons		MR. HARRY ROXBURY

And numerous others, including LOTTIE STONE'S TROUPE of LADY DANCERS. ARTHUR BRETON'S TROUPE. Ballets invented and arranged by MDLLE. ROSA.

PART I.

Scene 1 ... The Demon Forge and the Magic Slipper
(Painted by J. Soames).

Scene 2 ... ... A Glade in the Forest
(Painted by William Hobbs).

Scene 3 ... ... The Baron's Hall

Scene 4 .. .. The Baron's Kitchen
(Painted by J. Soames).

Cinderella's Good Fairy and the Pumpkin, Rats and Mice.

Srene 5 .. .. The Gates of Fairyland

Scene 6 ... ... The Fairy Bower
(Fairyland Scenes designed and painted by H. K. Browne).

Scene 7 ... Grand Ballet of Dreamland

Speciality Dances by The Lottie Stone Troupe. Solo Dance, Miss Elise Craven. Ballet arranged by Mdlle. Rosa.

The Evolution of Magic Coach and Ponies from Pumpkin, Rats and Mice. Cinderella on her way to the Ball.

INTERVAL (about 10 minutes).

PART II.

Scene 8 ... ... Exterior of the Prince's Palace

Scene 9 ... ... The Ball Room
(Painted by William Hobbs).

Scene 10 ... Exterior of the Baron's Mansion

Scene 11 ... ... Apartment in the Prince's Palace

Scene 12 ... ... The Wedding in Fairyland (Painted by H. K. Browne).

CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE.

Clown ... ... MR. ARTHUR BRETON
Pantaloon ... ... MR. GEORGIE BELL

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. G. GORDON JEFFERSON

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

267

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

Mr James Waters 's

Presence on

BOXING-NIGHT

Thursday Evening, Dec. 26, 1912

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK

To witness the Production of

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

ENTITLED

The

Sleeping Beauty

BY

GEO. R. SIMS, C. H. BOVILL and ARTHUR COLLINS.

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER.

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

T.R.D.L.
26/12/1912
Retain this portion, which is the Voucher for One Seat only, and does not admit to the Theatre.
Row E | No. 1
Orches. Stall

On BOXING-NIGHT, Thursday, December 26th, at 7

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	Duke of Monte Blanco
Mr. WILL EVANS	,,	Pompos (Nemo's confidante, formerly Chancellor to Monte Blanco)
Mr. WILFRID DOUTHITT	,,	Auriol
Mr. CHARLES ROCK	,,	Duke Nemo
Mr. BARRY LUPINO	,,	Finnykin, a foundling
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	Jacques, a peasant
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	The Dog
Mr. WILL POLUSKI	,,	Blake } Detectives
Mr. SAM POLUSKI	,,	Holmes }
Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON	as	Princess Marcella (Beauty)
Miss RENÉE MAYER	,,	Puck
Miss IRENE MAY	,,	Zizi, a Dairy Maid
Miss ALICE CHARTRES	,,	Anarchista (Monte Blanco's Second Wife)
Miss MAY HANNAM	,,	Jeanne, Jacques' Wife
Mr. BERTIE WHITE	as	Gaga
Mr. JACK FROST	,,	The Lamb
Mr. E. ARUNDELL	,,	Chantecleer
Miss JOSE LYONS	,,	Beauty's Chaperone
Miss MARIE LOVELL	,,	The Equerry
Miss BARBARA KEPPELL	,,	Goldstick
Miss R. RAYMOND	,,	Silverstick

Fairy Godmothers:

Miss GWEN FOTHERGILL
Miss LILIAN CRIPPS
Miss SYBIL SPARKS
Miss FLORENCE VAUGHAN
Miss AMY PRESTON
Miss MAUD ROSS

Courtiers:

Mr. E. ARUNDEL
Mr. H. STRONG
Mr. L. ASHDOWNE

Witches:

Mr. E. MORGAN
Mr. EDWARDS
Mr. ODNIL

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PART I.

Scene 1.	THE WITCHES' DELL	[C. Formilli
Scene 2.	ROOM IN DUKE NEMO'S CASTLE	[C. Formilli
Scene 3.	THE PRINCESS'S GARDEN	[Bruce Smith
Scene 4.	BORDERLAND	[Joseph Harker
Scene 5.	THE PALACE GATES	[Joseph Harker
Scene 6.	BEAUTY'S DREAM	[R. McCleery
Scene 7.	BEAUTY'S AWAKENING	[R. McCleery

PART II.

Scene 1.	THE BLUE LAGOON	[Joseph Harker
Scene 2.	A MOUNTAIN CHÂLET	[Joseph Harker
Scene 3.	THE IDEAL DAIRY FARM	[R. McCleery
Scene 4.	IN THE PALACE	[Bruce Smith
Scene 5.	DUKE OF MONTE BLANCO'S PALACE	[Bruce Smith

HARLEQUINADE:

Scene 1. A STREET
Scene 2. A TRAIN } Bruce Smith

Clown - - GEORGE LUPINO

Pantaloon, GEORGE COOPER
Harlequin, WILLIAM RUSSELL
Columbine, MAY DAY
Policeman, EUGENE COBRA
Butcher, TOM MACKNEY
Swell, S. ASHER

All the Costumes Specially Designed and supervised by COMELLI.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Secretary - R. H. LINDO
Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS
Business Manager - - - SIDNEY SMITH

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

The Stirrup Cup.

The "Revenge" sets sail.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

The World Encompassed.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

TWICE DAILY 1·30 & 7·30

DRURY LANE THEATRE

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 1913.

SPECULATION IN PLAYS.

UPS AND DOWNS OF A TWELVEMONTH.

All sorts of societies and various classes of men and women take a keen interest in the drama, would reform it where it requires reforming, and would generally do many things to make it conform to their individual tastes and interests. Some of the enthusiasts proclaim the year just ended a great year; some of the many reformers say it was not so.

But the old rule of life still applies to the theatre just as truly as it does to more worldly things, such as shops—"you pays your money and you takes your choice." And in the following list of the plays of the year (unembellished by many musical numbers) will be found many on which, at some time or another, high hopes were placed:—

CHU CHIN CHOW.—The first play produced in London in 1912. Another example, following "Sumurun," of Professor Max Reinhardt's partiality for bringing the players close to the audience—an idea now much appreciated by revue producers.

THE DUST OF EGYPT.—A farcical fantasy that was played sixty-six times at Wyndham's Theatre and led Mr. Gerald du Maurier into asking the readers of The Daily Mail, "What is a critic?"

THE MIND THE PAINT GIRL.—A drama of musical comedy life, according to Sir Arthur Pinero, which had a mixed reception on the first night at the Duke of York's Theatre, and ran nearly four months.

9876.—A play that was said to have been written by a Cabinet Minister but was not. Produced at the Criterion Theatre on February 27, and sent into cold storage five weeks later.

MILESTONES.—Produced at the Royalty Theatre on March 5. Neither the management nor the audience were aware of the success about to be achieved. The pit was not half full on the first night. Next day all London wanted to buy tickets. It is still running.

RUTHERFORD AND SON.—Produced at the Little Theatre. The ablest play by a woman seen in recent years.

BILLY.—A play produced at The Playhouse. All about a man who lost his false teeth. Lost money for the management; might have lost more, but was withdrawn within two weeks.

IMPROPER PETER.—Mr. Bourchier, who produced this play in April, afterwards changed the title to "Proper Peter." But it had no good effect. It finished its London career at the Garrick in June.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.—Only remarkable because it was the only play of the year produced on the 13th of the month. The management afterwards tried reduced prices, but never overcame the handicap.

THE SPANISH LOVERS.—Produced at the Little Theatre. Had the shortest run of the year—five nights.

HINDLE WAKES.—Produced by a Manchester company at The Playhouse. Ran for 109 performances. Possibly the only painful "close to life" play of the year that attracted enough of the public to make it pay and get generally talked about.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM.—Interesting as an example of the sentimental play that can run for years in America. Ran for fifty-six performances in London, at the Globe Theatre.

DRAKE.—Will exceed the run of "An Englishman's Home."

EVERYWOMAN.—Morality play, substituted for autumn melodrama at Drury Lane Theatre; replaced by pantomime. Was played ninety-seven times.

THE PRICE.—Produced at the Aldwych Theatre. Author, Mr. George Broadhurst. His play another of the many examples of the American drama that will not be acclimatised in London. Finished on the sixteenth performance.

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

December 23

"Hullo, Rag-time!"

A REVUE

Written by MAX PEMBERTON and ALBERT DE COURVILLE
Music by LOUIS HIRSCH (composer of "The Gaby Glide")
—— Produced by AUSTEN HURGON —— Dances and Ensembles by JACK MASON

CAST

ETHEL LEVEY
SHIRLEY KELLOGG
DOROTHY MINTO
BONITA
MADGE MELBOURNE
LEW HEARN
IRENE RICHARDS
O. P. HEGGIE
VIVIEN HESSE
JERRY KIRBY
CYRIL CLENSY
JACK MASON
JAMIESON DODDS
WILLIE SOLAR
AMBROSE THORNE
ERIC ROPER
CHECKERS VON HAMPTON

AND . .

HIPPODROME BEAUTY CHORUS

Scene 1 - Hotel de Luxe, London
Scene 2 - - An Oriental Garden
Scene 3 - The Exhibition Grounds

Costumes designed by COMELLI; Executed by LANDOLFF, Paris; LUCILE; MICHARD SŒURS; ALIAS; MORRIS ANGEL; MARY FISHER, &c.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS and MAISON DUSSET.

3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1913.

THE THEATRICAL YEAR.

1912

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES.

By JAMES WATERS.

The theatrical year of 1912-13 is supposed to have been a disastrous period for the presenters of plays in London. Attention was fixed on a crop of failures, and no attention whatever was directed to the many successes that rewarded the recognised managers and actor-managers. No manager, actor, or author lives who can absolutely visualise a play in the manuscript so as to be able with certainty to know in advance that it will be a success when acted. There are some who can make better attempts than others, and these are they who remain through years in management. None of these men, I think, complain of want of public support of their theatres last year. On the contrary, they had a season of more than average prosperity.

It is well to remember that several plays of the spring of 1912 ran well into 1912-13 to crowded houses, helping to swell the profits of the theatres. Take, for instance, the following plays that ended in the season just over. "Bunty Pulls the Strings," 618 performances; "Fanny's First Play," 628; "The Glad Eye," 492; and "Milestones," which ended last night, 609 performances.

SHORT RUN PROFITS.

There were no costly failures last year. There were a very great number of short runs, but it is a fact that some of these short runs actually showed a profit. Many of last season's revivals, too, were very profitable affairs. One manager alone made ten thousand pounds with revivals.

Every man who goes to a theatre is a critic, and the public for the theatres—notwithstanding the music-halls and cinemas—is increasing. But these nightly critics want entertaining plays, and the men of the theatres on the lookout for them are not finding their work any easier because every second man in the street thinks he is a born dramatist. The productions and revivals for 1912-13 were as follows:

Plays of two or more acts	67
Musical plays	7
Pantomimes	3
One-act plays	34
Revivals of plays of two or more acts	28
Shakespeare's plays	8

The lists given below include all the plays of the theatrical year since the season began on August 12, 1912, given in the order in which they were produced. From them are excluded all one-act pieces and all plays produced by stage societies or for special performances only:

	Performances.
"Ready Money," New	232
"Little Miss Llewelyn," Vaudeville	186
"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Globe	56
"Drake," His Majesty's	220
"A Scrape o' The Pen," Comedy	161
"Art and Opportunity," Prince of Wales	115
"The Girl in the Taxi," Lyric	~~[illegible]~~	432
"The Grass Widow," Apollo	50
"Everywoman," Drury Lane	97
"The Great John Ganton," Aldwych	48
"A Young Man's Fancy," Criterion	35
"The Little Café," Playhouse	123
"The Turning Point," St. James's	111
"The Open Door," Lyceum	61
"Doormats," Wyndham's	186
"Monte Cristo," New Prince's	69
"The Dancing Mistress," Adelphi	241
"Tantrums," Criterion	22
"Instinct," Duke of York's	43
"Sylvia Greer," Queen's	12
"The Younger Generation," Haymarket	134
"The Price," Aldwych	16
"The Eldest Son," Kingsway	47
"Oliver Twist," Lyceum	24
"Where There's a Will—," Criterion	45
"The Tide," Queen's	29
"Written In Red," Court	9
"The Forty Thieves," Lyceum	90
"Cinderella," New Prince's	66
"The Sleeping Beauty," Drury Lane	113
"General John Regan," Apollo	~~[illegible]~~	268
"Get Rich Quick Wallingford," Queen's	158
"Billy's Fortune," Criterion	28
"Turandot," St. James's	27
"Esther Castways," Prince of Wales	46
"The Headmaster," Playhouse	163
"The Son and Heir," Strand	49
"Three," Little	15
"Trust the People," Garrick	42
"Eliza Comes to Stay," Criterion	131
"The Pretenders," Haymarket	35
"Ask Quesbury," Globe	30
"Lady Noggs," Comedy	59
"Oh, oh, Delphine," Shaftesbury	176
"Nell Gwynne," Lyceum	108
"Her Side of the House," Aldwych	66
"The Handful," Prince of Wales	66
"Open Windows," St. James's	90
"Bought and Paid For," New	84
"The Greatest Wish," Garrick	56
"The Happy Island," His Majesty's	20
*"The Great Adventure," Kingsway	~~[illegible]~~
"The Yellow Jacket," Duke of York's	154
"Vanity," Globe	22
*"Typhoon," Globe (Hungarian)	~~[illegible]~~	204
"The Inferior Sex," Comedy	20
*"The Girl on the Film," Gaiety	~~[illegible]~~	232
"Brother Alfred," Savoy	14
"The Cap and Bells," Little	45
"Thompson," Royalty (matinées)	6
"The Chaperon," Strand	58
"The Seven Sisters," Savoy	21
*"The Marriage Market," Daly's	~~[illegible]~~	423
"Ivanhoe," Lyceum	52
"Crœsus," Garrick	50
*"Within the Law," Haymarket	~~[illegible]~~	427
"Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," His Majesty's	8
*"Oh! I Say!!" Criterion	~~[illegible]~~	289
"Yours," Vaudeville	15
"Panthea," Ambassadors	14
"The Duchess's Necklace," Aldwych	6
"The Faun," Prince of Wales	~~[illegible]~~
"A Cardinal's Romance," Savoy	15
"The Perfect Cure," Apollo	4
"The Gilded Pill," Globe	29
"The March Hare," Ambassadors	23
*"The Barrier," Strand	~~[illegible]~~

Plays marked thus * are still running, and the number of performances given are calculated up to and including Saturday last.

282

D-10
3724
1912
Waters, J.
Plays

The following were the season's revivals with number of performances: —

"The Voysey Inheritance," Kingsway, 82; "Zaza," Queen's, 45; "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," Little, 70; "Where the Rainbow Ends," Garrick, 84; "The Golden Land of Fairy Tales," Aldwych, 39; "Shock-Headed Peter," Vaudeville, 30; "Peter Pan," Duke of York's, 64; "Charley's Aunt," Little, 54; "John Bull's Other Island," Kingsway, 65; "The Indian Mutiny," New Prince's, 45; "The Importance of Being Earnest," St. James's, 20; "The Schoolmistress," Vaudeville, 103; "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," Drury Lane, 17; "The Light that Failed," Drury Lane, 13; "Mice and Men," Drury Lane, 10; "Cæsar and Cleopatra," Drury Lane, 5; "The Woman in the Case," Strand, 32; "Diplomacy," Wyndham's, 165 (still running); "The School for Scandal," His Majesty's, 47; "Lady Frederick," Globe, 57; "Strife," Comedy, 49; "Brewster's Millions," New Prince's, 56; "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," St. James's, 66; "Bunty Pulls the Strings," Playhouse, 38; "Jim the Penman," Comedy, 61; "The Only Way," Prince of Wales, 30; "Officer 666," New, 51; "Oliver Twist," Lyceum, 46. Eight of Shakespeare's plays were revived during the year, the total number of performances given being 318.

IMPORTED PLAYS.

Of the year's total of 67 plays, 11 were American—namely, "Ready Money," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Everywoman," "The Great John Ganton," "Officer 666," "The Price," "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "Bought and Paid For," "The Yellow Jacket," "Within the Law," and "The Barrier." Six plays were French or Belgian—namely, "Little Miss Llewelyn," "The Little Café," "The Turning Point," "Instinct," "Crœsus," and "Oh! I Say!!" Two of the season's output, "Turandot" and "Three," were plays of Italian origin. "The Pretenders" was Norwegian, and "The Happy Island," "Typhoon," and "The Seven Sisters" were imported from Hungary. Five of the English plays, "Written In Red," "Oliver Twist," "Lady Noggs," "The Greatest Wish," and "The Great Adventure," were made from novels, so if we deduct the foreign and book-made plays from the total of 67 productions, we get 39 as the contribution of British dramatists to the dramatic year of 1912-13. I am including with the British dramatists two who, although of American birth, live and work in this country.

The Weekly Dispatch
AUGUST 17, 1913. 112th YEAR.

The Season's Record.

Of the seventy-seven new plays (including musical pieces and pantomimes) produced during the theatrical year 1912-13 now ending only two, namely, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "The Son and Heir," were written by women. The first-named was adapted by two American women from a book by a woman, so "The Son and Heir" was the only original play of the year written by a woman, and she is an American. It ran for forty-nine performances. The play called "Three," produced by Miss Kingston at the Little Theatre, was adapted by a woman from the Italian; "Lady Noggs," produced at the Comedy Theatre, was a dramatised version by a woman of a novel written by a man; and "Her Side of the House," produced at the Aldwych Theatre, was the joint work of a man and a woman.

Shakespeare Popular.

Shakespeare was better represented on the London stage during the season of 1912-13 than has been the case for a long time, the following being the list of revivals and number of performances. "The Winter's Tale" 57, "Twelfth Night" 147, "Romeo and Juliet" 33, "Hamlet" 24, "Merchant of Venice" 14, "Othello" 3, "Julius Cæsar" 8, and "The Taming of the Shrew" 32. Superstitious people may be interested to know that "Ask Quesbury," produced at the Globe Theatre on February 14, was the only play of the twelve months presented on a Friday, and that "The Pretenders" was the only piece produced on the 13th of a month. It was presented at the Haymarket Theatre on February 13 and ran for 35 performances. "Ask Quesbury," presented the following evening, only scored 30.

J. W.

Adored One 203.
Adventure of Reuben
Alice in
Ali the Nurse
Amber
Anna Karenina
Answer
Ar Jan
Archduke
Ask Rumbury
Augustus in Aurora's Capture
Babes in Barrier
Beggar Girl's
Betty
Between Sunset
Big Game. The 177.
Billy's Fortune
Bought and Paid For
Bourgeois Gentilhomme
Brewster Millions 118.
Broken String 48
Brother Alfred. 92.
Bunty Pulls The Strings
Cap's and Bells
Cardinal's Pawn
Charley's Aunt- 323
Come Over Here. (revue) 101.
Crime 131.
Damn's Gold 158.
Daughter of Francis a 260
Dear Departed. The 142
Death of Tintagiles. The 311
Diplomacy 73.
Dorian Gray, The Picture of 183
Doctor's Dilemma 305
Drums of Oude. The 169.
Duchess's Necklace. The 151.
8d a Mile. (revue) 113.
Eliza Comes To Stay 27
Ester Castaways 13
Even Open Door. The 207.

Fancy Dress
Faun The
Fortune Hunter. The Fugitive The
Geminae
General John Regan
Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford
Gilded Pill. The Girl From U.S.A.
Girl in the Taxi. The Girl on the Film
Girls
Girl Who Didn't
Gombeen Man. The Grand Secret
Great-Adventure
Great-Catherine
Greatest-Wish. The Green Cockatoo. The Half an Hour
Hamlet

Handful. The Happy Island. The Harbour Watch The Harlequinade. The Headmaster The
Her Side of the House
Hindle Wakes
How He's Done
Hullo Tango (revue)
I Dine With My Wife
If We Had Only Known
I Love You
Importance of Being Earnest. The Indian Mutiny. The Inferior Sex. The
In Haarlem There Dwelt-
Interlopers
Interrupted Divorce. An
In the Air
Ivanhoe
Jane Clegg

Jim the Penman
Jonesses. The
Joseph and His Brethren 9[illegible]
Julius Caesar
Lady Frederick 10[illegible]
Lady Noggs
Laughing Husband. The 2[illegible]
Love and Laugh[illegible] 200
Mademoiselle Fifi 22[illegible]
Magic 2[illegible]0
Magnanimous [illegible] 146
March Hare. The 17[illegible]
Marriage Force 30[illegible]
Marriage Market. The 12[illegible]
Marriage of Columbine 297
Mary Goes First 22[illegible]
Merchant of Venice 113.153.
Milestones 49
Mr Wu 295
Morning [illegible] 69
Nell Gwynn 43
Never Say Die 218
New Duke. The 238

Night-Hawk. The 303
Officer 666 169
Oh! I say!! 142
Oh! Oh!! Delphine 39
Oliver Twist 171
Only Way. The 168
Open Windows 53
Panthea 149
Pearl Girl. The 231
Pearly Bunch. A 41
People Like Ourselves 252
Perfect Cure. The 100
Peter Pan 325
Place in The Sun. A 276
Playboy of The Western World. The 147
Playgoers 79
Poor Little Rich Girl. The 337
Post-Office. The 174
Pretenders. The 29
Pursuit of Pamela. The 278
Quality Street 293

Real Thing. The 185
Robina in Search of a Husband 309
Romeo and Juliet 60. 153
Scarlet Band. The 181
School For Scandal 94
Schoolmistress. The 45
Sealed Orders 215
Second Mrs Tanqueray 148
Seven Sisters. The 119
Shadows. The 259
Shepherdess Wife 318
Silver Box. The 31
Sirocco. The 184
Sleeping Beauty & the Beast 333
Son and Heir. The 17
Story of the Rosary. The 320
Strife 109
Stuffing 235
Taming of the Shrew. The 114
Their Point of View 105
13 Summer Street 100
Thirteen 276
This Way Madam 235
Three 19
Three Wayfarers. The 284
Thompson 102
Through the Post 2
Trust the People 23
Turandot ?
Twelfth Night 153
Typhoon 83. 86
Uncle Bill 165
Under Two Flags 267
Vanity 80
Where the Rainbow Ends 332
Who's the Lady 289
Widows Weeds 159
Wife Tamer. The 219
Wild Duck. The 301
Will. The 203
Witch. The 265
Within the Law 134
Woman in the Case. The 69
Yellow Jacket. The 75
Years of Discretion 210
Young 144

altering plays 206. 247. 315. 333.
Critics and actors. 20. 25.
Forbes Robertsons farewell season. 61.
Friday Night performances 33. 185. 280. 318.

First-night-performances . 11. 82. 189

Gaiety-actors go to america . 92

London Opera House . 100. 101 . 306

Music-hall turns in Theatres . 191

Noises and orchestras . 41. 72. 187. 272. 307

Opening of Ambassadors Theatre . 15

Rag-time . 101 . 101

Shakespeare Festival . 75

Shaw, Bernard, on . 190

Short-Runs . 1
Long Runs . 74

Theatre Land . 6. 337. 349

Unknown Titles . 6. 77.

Censor . 291

Siege of the Garrick Theatre . 125

Harlequin (short history) . 189

13th of the month superstitions . 1

Jean Peploe . 339

Beggar Prince wedding Lawsuit . 345

The Plays of the Season . 349

APOLLO THEATRE.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production.

GENERAL JOHN REGAN

By GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM.

Dr. Lucius O'Grady (a Dispensary Doctor)	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Timothy Doyle (a Hotel Keeper) ...	Mr. LEONARD BOYNE
Major Kent (a Local Landlord) ...	Mr. FRANC STONEY
Thaddeus Golligher (Editor of the Connaught Eagle)	Mr. W. G. FAY
Horace P. Billing (an American Tourist)	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
C. Gregg (District Inspector of Royal Irish Constabulary)	Mr. J. R. TOZER
Sergeant Colgan (R.I.C.) ...	Mr. S. GRENVILLE DARLING
Constable Moriarty (R.I.C.) ...	Mr. PATRICK QUILL
Tom Kerrigan (Band Master) ...	Mr. BERNARD CROSBY
Rev. Father McCormack (Parish Priest of Ballymoy)	Mr. EDMUND GURNEY
Lord Alfred Blakeney (Aide-de-Camp to the Lord Lieutenant)	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Mrs. de Courcy (Wife of the Resident Magistrate)	Miss GLADYS FFOLLIOT
Mrs. Gregg	Miss DOROTHY O'NEILL
Mary Ellen (Servant in Doyle's Hotel)	Miss CATHLEEN NESBIT (By kind permission of Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER.)

PEASANTS:—Messrs. T. RIVERS, HUGHBERT DANE, PATRICK TRAYNOR, ALBERT DUDLEY, ERIC HOWARD, PATRICK DUIGAN, B. BUTLER, S. J. CHAMBERLAIN, etc.

Misses HILARY JESMOND, GLADYS PRESTON, KATE MARTIN, IRENE L'ESTRANGE, OLGA HOPE, PHYLLIS BARKER, MARY ERVINE, M. WELLS, E. TEMPLE, M. SUMMERLEY, M. DUIGAN, B. FAY, D. SNOW, C. MOORE, B. COURTENAY, etc.

Act I. .. .. The Market Square, Ballymoy

Act II. .. (A fortnight has elapsed.) Coffee Room of Doyle's Hotel

Act III. .. .. .. (A fortnight has elapsed.) Same as Act I

Scenery Designed by Mr. TOM HESELWOOD and Painted by Mr. ALFRED E. CRAVEN.

Frocks by PETER ROBINSON and Mrs. NEVILLE.

Hats by Madame ALBERT, 45 Maddox Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Furniture by J. S. LYON & Co., 112 High Holborn.

APOLLO THEATRE
9/1/13
Orch. Stall
D 2
To be retained

Preceded at 8 o'clock by

THROUGH THE POST

(Adapted from the French of D. RICHE)

By ATHOL STEWART.

Edward Stacy Spells	Mr. GEORGE F. TULLY
Lilian Stacy Spells	... Miss MONA HARRISON
George Binning	... Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY MR. CHARLES HAWTREY.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

TWO-STEP, "Robert E. Lee"	Pether
SELECTION, "Shamrock"	Myddleton
ENTR'ACTE, "Celestine"	Guy Jones
WALTZ, "Brüderlein Fein"	Leo Fall
SUITE, "Enfantine"	Lardelli

Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. GUY JONES.

MATINEE WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	... Mr. B. CAMPLIN-SMITH
Assist. Stage Manager		... Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager ...		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone Gerrard 3243.

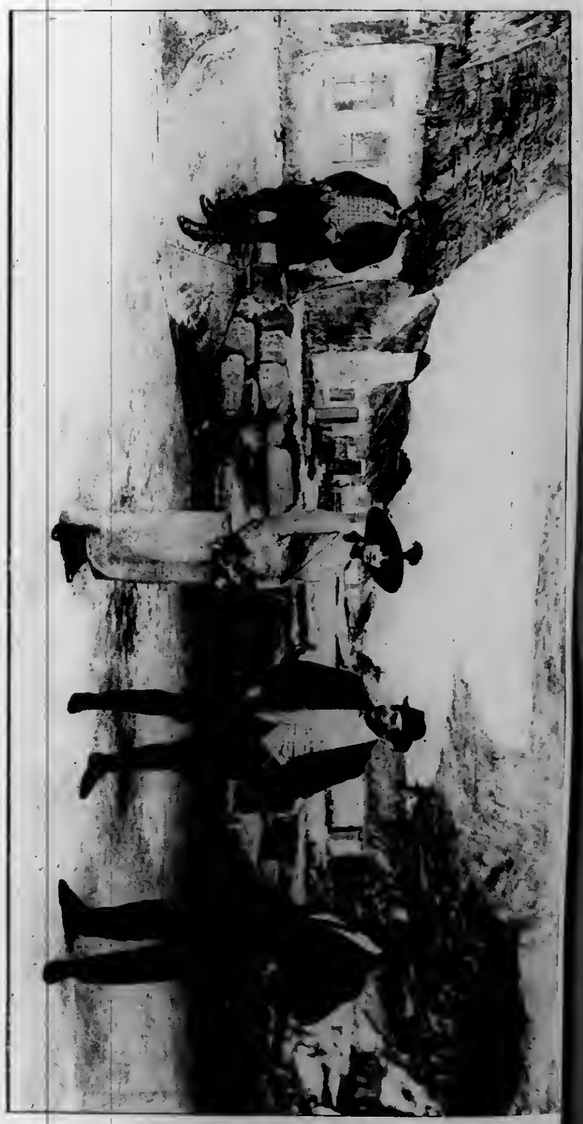
General Manager ... ...(For Mr. Tom B. Davis)... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"GENERAL JOHN REGAN."

ROLLICKING IRISH FARCE BY GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM.

The humour of George A. Birmingham (Canon Hannay) found a new outlet in a play that served Mr. Charles Hawtrey for the inauguration of a new season, at the Apollo Theatre, London, last evening. "General John Regan" is an Irish play, of broad humour, wholly farcical in character, and designed at every point to provoke laughter. There is no attempt at finesse. Rollicking farce serves best to describe its rough spun texture, planned to hold up to ridicule the inconsistencies of the life of a little West of Ireland town.



There is no sentiment of either loyalty or love in this new play. It is Mr. Birmingham's first effort as a dramatist, and love of anything, or loyalty to anything, only serves to evoke the laughter which it is his object to obtain. Last night there was laughter in abundance at the Apollo Theatre. It was almost a continuity, yet one could have wished at moments for something else as a contrast; some suggestion of seriousness, in sentiment or characterisation.

The incidents are simple enough and arise from the visit to the town of an American tourist determined to enliven matters by suggesting that Ballymoy was the birthplace of a South American general. That the general never existed would, of course, have been clear enough to the simple folk had not their local doctor determined to get some fun by making them think otherwise. He called a meeting, proposed the erection of a statue to the "general," and invited the Lord Lieutenant to unveil the monument.

When an aide-de-camp arrived from Dublin to demand an apology, the doctor made him accept an illuminated address, and forced him to make a speech. Out of the American tourist he got the price of the statue, and at the fall of the curtain seemed far on the road to making Ballymoy richer than ever it had been before. It was amusing enough, but from Mr. Birmingham one might reasonably have expected something a little more subtle.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey overcame fairly easily the difficulty of the Irish accent and played the doctor with a fine sense of his farcical characteristics. But he was generous enough to show last night that the success of the representation depended quite as much on Mr. Leonard Boyne's acting as on his own.

J. W.

THE GENEALOGIST. — Lucius O'Grady, the local doctor (Mr. Hawtrey), thereupon invented a whole history of the "General," finding a "grand-niece" for him in the hotel maid! He is here seen interesting the police inspector's wife in the scheme.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford.

A New and Original Farcial Comedy in Four Acts.

By GEORGE M. COHAN. Adapted from the Stories by GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.

MATINEES: WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

Cast of the Play;

J. Rufus Wallingford	Mr. HALE HAMILTON
Horace Daw ("Blackie")	MR. JULIAN ROYCE
Andy Dempsey	MR. HERBERT VYVYAN
Edward Lamb	MR. CECIL CAMERON
Richard Welles	MR. LAURENCE CAIRD
Kenneth Lampton	MR. J. R. CRAUFORD
G. W. Battles	MR. FRANK COLLINS
Timothy Battles	MR. ELDRETT GULSON
Harkins	MR. DOUGLAS GORDON
Henry Quig	MR. R. A. BRANDON
Doc. Gunther	MR. FORRESTER HARVEY
Tom Donahue	MR. ROBERT AYRTON
Willie	MR. C. DENIER WARREN
Yosi	MR. FRANK STANMORE
E. B. Lott	MR. BRYAN G. POWLEY
Mrs. Dempsey	Miss MARY BROUGH
Gertie	Miss ELSIE WOOD
Dorothy	Miss MAY LESLIE STUART
Bessie	Miss SIMETA MARSDEN
Chambermaid	Miss RITA CARR
AND
Fanny Jasper	Miss MADGE FABIAN.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

E
14/1/13
Orch. Stall
G 6
To be retained.

ACT I. "The Crown" Hotel

ACT II. Wallingford's Rooms at "The Crown"

ACT III. Wallingford's Office

ACT IV. Wallingford's House and Grounds

The action of the play takes place in the Town of Battlesbury.

During the evening a selection of Music will be rendered by The Sinfonia Quartette.

HERR OTTO MACHTIG — ARTHUR HOWES

FREDERICK EDGAR — TELFORD MOSS

Stage Manager	Mr. FRANK COLLINS
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. BRYAN G. POWLEY
Acting Manager	Mr. W. S. HOOKE
Business Manager	Mr. HORACE COLLINS

All communications to be addressed to the Business Manager.

Scenery by Messrs. HENRY OWEN, W. T. HEMSLEY, and BRUCE SMITH

Costumes by Messrs. MORRIS ANGEL & SON. Dresses by Messrs. STAGG & MANTLE

Dress worn by Miss Madge Fabian in 4th Act by HENRY'S, Dover Street

Miss Marsden's Dresses by MAUDE MOORE, 41 New Bond Street.

Furniture and Appointments by J. S. LYON. Piano and Organ supplied by HARRODS

Wigs by CLARKSON. Floral Decorations by J. P. KILLINGBACK.

Typewriter by REMINGTON

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen in the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions whether permanent or temporary.

PRICES: Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. — Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.

Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. & 5s. — Upper Circle, 4s. & 3s.

Pit, 2s. 6d. — Gallery, 1s.

Box Office Telephones, 9437-8 GERRARD.

"TICK." A "crook," Jim Wallingford (Mr. Hale Hamilton seen talking to the man in the motor-coat), and his confederate, "Blackie," bore down on the town of Battlesbury and began living in the local hotel on "tick," by pretending to be rich. They were, of course, warmly welcomed.

There is a capital evening's amusement to be had now at the Queen's Theatre in the American farce called "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" that Mr. Arthur Collins presented there on Tuesday evening. It is good honest fun, even if its hero is none too honest when you first meet with him. If you like a play that is full of good humour, that makes you laugh pleasantly, you will find it now at the Queen's Theatre. There is no sarcasm, no offensive character drawing, nothing to make you do anything but laugh. It is a story of two American adventurers who arrive in a sleepy American town determined to swindle the citizens out of as much wealth as they are willing to put into a bogus manufacturing company.

"Get-Rich-Quick."

In the first act of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" we saw one of the two swindlers, Horace Daw, at the Battlebury Hotel telling all he came in contact with of the fabulous wealth, the vast schemes, and the astounding commercial enterprises of his great chief, J. Bates Wallingford, who was on his way to Battlebury to transform it into a great hive of industry. Some of the citizens pretended to believe him, others did not, but when a telegram was sent on his table from Wallingford no one doubted, and the great man when he did arrive was offered an ovation, the town band swept into the hall, and when peace was restored Wallingford won all hearts by an eloquent speech. An hour later he explained his plans for building factories, tramway lines, theatres, and hotels.

Comical Absurdity.

The fact that he and his accomplice had empty pockets made no difference to Wallingford. They bought options on every site in the town, and to their own surprise not only created a "boom," but they actually made the town a thriving city and themselves rich men. It was a splendid piece of comical absurdity, acted with immense spirit by Mr. Hale Hamilton, an American actor new to London. Mr. Julian Royce, too, was very good, and Miss Madge Fabian should not want an engagement as a leading actress after her delightful performance in this play. In smaller parts Mr. Frank Collins, and Mr. Cecil Cameron were quite good, and Miss May Stuart looked very sweet and played prettily. At the end of the evening Mr. Hale Hamilton had an enthusiastic reception, and when he called on Mr. Arthur Collins many people present thought he was showing us the author, George M. Cohan, who lives in America, and is at the moment at home.

UNIVERSAL TACK CO LTD
P.T.O

CRITERION
THEATRE

E
Jan. 16

Orchestra Stall
B 33

Thursday, January 16th, at 8, and every following evening at 8.30.

BILLY'S FORTUNE

A Comedy by ROY HORNIMAN

Mr. Groby	H. V. SURREY	Jarvis Gameboys	RUDGE HARDING
Mrs. Davis	SINNA St. CLAIR	Mr. Stone	PHILIP K. KNOX
Billy Charteris	JOHNNIE BROWN	Chummy	THE DOG
Mr. Dakin	HOWARD STURGE	Wopsall	HEATH J. HAVILAND
Sarah	LYDIA WEST	Cook	ELLA TARRANT
Benjamin Gameboys	ARTHUR VEZIN	Aunt Fanny	ALICE MANSFIELD
Mrs. Benjamin Gameboys	GLADYS MASON	Waters	ELIZABETH ROSSLYN
Bertie Bradley	CLIFFORD MOLLISON	Broomhall	HETTA BARTLETT
Mr. Bradley	E. M. ROBSON	Tilda	GERTIE BRITTON
Mrs. Bradley	HENRIETTA LEVERETT	Tommy Gameboys	CHRISTOPHER SAINT'EYE
Mrs. Thomsett	ALICE BEET	Benjie Gameboys	JACK ROOKE
Mrs. Jarvis Gameboys	GWYNNETH GALTON	Jane Gameboys	EDNA O'NEIL
Mr. Thomsett	O. B. CLARENCE	Maloney	VICTOR WAYRE

The characters are in the order of their appearance.

ACT I. ... ... The Shrubberies at Surbiton—March.
ACT II. ... ... Sitting Room at the Thomsett's, Holloway—November.
(All the external indications of common-minded people with obtrusive tastes).
ACT III ... ... Living Room at Benjamin Gameboys, the Garden City, Walthamstow—Xmas Day.

Scene II.—The same as Act I.

Scenery and Costumes designed by PERCY MACGROID.
Scenery painted by Walter Hann. Furniture by Spillman.

THESIS OF THE PLAY.

THE Play opens on the day of the reading of Mr. Gameboy's Will. Greedy relatives are eagerly waiting to hear to whom the fortune of £500,000 has been left.

The Will, to the disappointment of the relatives, leaves the bulk of the fortune to Billy Charteris, a small boy of humble origin whom Mr. Gameboys adopted. It provides that Billy shall himself choose his guardian from among these relatives after spending three months with each branch of the family in turn.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"Princess Caprice"	Leo Fall
Selection	"Pellissiana"	Fink-Pellisier
Selection	"Fink-a-Linke"	Arranged by Aubrey Winter
Danse Debonaire		Willeby

Orchestra under the direction of CHRISTOPHER WILSON.

Business Manager ... ... ARTHUR PENLEY
Stage Manager ... ... CLAUD VERNON

MATINEE, WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Criterion Theatre has been a hustling place since Mr. Carl Leyel went into management there at the end of September. In less than four months four plays have been produced there, the last to make its appearance being one called "Billy's Fortune" on Thursday evening. Mr. F. H. Payne (of Olympia) really discovered this new play of Roy Horniman's, but Mr. Carl Leyel, the present manager of the theatre, had declared a few days before its production that if Mr. Payne had not secured the play and produced it he would most certainly have done so. So we can fairly say that the honours are divided. It is a story of the anxiety of a number of jealous relatives as to what shall be the ultimate fate of the wealth left behind by a very wealthy connection. The bulk of the fortune, it is true, had been left to a small (adopted) boy beloved of the old man, but [redacted] there was also one hundred thousand pounds to go to the relative that the boy should choose for guardian.

An Enfant Terrible.

It will be understood that with such conditions the three acts of this play were devoted to exposing the obvious meannesses of all the deceased's relatives, the only exception being a very Christian and worthy young man with a pale wife, who won and deserved the guardianship of the boy and the £100,000 perquisite. There were some good players in the company—Mr. O. B. Clarence, Mr. Rudge Harding, Mr. E. M. Robson, Mr. Howard Sturge, and Miss Alice Beet—but, candidly, I felt sorry to see them trying to put life and humour into these drawn-out scenes where old men and women spent their days toadying to a brat. One can only wonder why the old man made this boy his heir. Perhaps he thought that so bad-mannered a boy would require some money to attract friends. He certainly was a dear-at-any-price boy, and if the author had designed his story so that the enfant terrible should fall to the villain as a punishment in his old age, I would certainly have applauded him. As it was, he fell on a Christian young man with a pale wife, who committed no crime but that of dulness.

J. W.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30 (MATINEES at 2.30)

WILL BE ACTED

TURANDOT

Princess of China

A CHINOISERIE IN PROSE AND VERSE, IN THREE ACTS

By

KARL VOLLMOELLER

English Version by

JETHRO BITHELL

Music by FERRUCCIO BUSONI

Altoum ...	... (Emperor of China)	...	... J. H. BARNES
Pantalone	... (Prime Minister)	...	... EDWARD SASS
Tartaglia	... (the Chancellor)	...	... E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Brigella	... (Chief of the Guards)	...	... FRED LEWIS
Truffaldino	... (Chief of the Harem)	...	... NORMAN FORBES
Calaf ...	... (Prince of Astrakan)	...	... GODFREY TEARLE
Barak ...	... (his Tutor)	...	... JAMES BERRY
Prince of Samarkand	... ...	...	... AUSTIN FEHRMAN
Ishmael	... (his Tutor)	...	... ALFRED HARRIS
Executioner	... ...	...	... W. E. HALL
Turandot	... (Princess of China)	...	... EVELYN D'ALROY
Adelma	(a Tartar Princess, Slave of Turandot)	...	HILDA MOORE
Zelima ...	... (another Slave)	...	... MAIRE O'NEILL
Skirina ...	... (her Mother)	...	... MARGARET YARDE
Muley-wa Tien-wa Kin Yen-Shing	Slaves of the Harem		MARY CLARE MARGARET CHUTE SUSIE CLAUGHTON STELLA RHO

Act I., Scene 1 ... ... Outside the Gates of Pekin
Scene 2 ... ... The Corridors of the Palace
Scene 3 ... ... The Emperor's Court

Act II., Scene 1 ... ... Turandot's Room
Scene 2 ... ... A Corridor
Scene 3 ... ... A Street
Scene 4 ... ... A Corridor
Scene 5 ... ... A Room in the Palace
Scene 6 ... ... Calaf's Sleeping Room

Act III., Scene ... ... The Emperor's Court

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER has produced the Play in conjunction with the Author.

The Scenery and Costumes designed by ERNST STERN, and executed by BARUCH & CO., of London and New York.

The Score, adapted from the Concert Version, by JOHANN WYSMAN.

The Dance arranged by WILLIE WARDE.

TURANDOT

Princess of China

By

Dr. KARL VOLLMOELLER

English Version by

JETHRO BITHELL

Music by

FERRUCCIO BUSONI

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

G 148
STALLS
Jan. 18.
1913
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

"Turandot, Princess of China."

Some Explanations by F. GILBERT WEBB.

The History of the Play.

"TURANDOT, PRINCESS OF CHINA," is a particularly interesting instance of evolution in art and the interplay of the mutual influence of the story-teller, the dramatist and the composer. The origin of the work is one of the Persian Tales contained in "A Thousand and One Days," attributed to a Persian Dervish Monk of the thirteenth century, the English version of which, by Justin Huntly McCarthy, was published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus in 1892. The story of the "Chinese Princess, Turandot," was converted into a comedy by the famous Italian writer of the eighteenth century, Carlo Gozzi, and the far-famed composer-pianist, Mr. Ferruccio Busoni, took this as the basis for an Orchestral suite. This music so impressed Dr. Karl Vollmoeller as peculiarly illustrating the spirit of the old play, that he resolved to use the plot as the foundation for a fantastical comedy. The work was produced by Professor Reinhardt in October, 1911. Sir George Alexander was present at the first performance, and having secured the performing rights for England, commissioned Mr. Jethro Bithell to provide the English adaptation now presented.

The Weekly Dispatch
LONDON: 2, Carmelite Street, E.C.

JANUARY 19, 1913.

Last night Sir George Alexander made a distinctly new departure at St. James's Theatre in the character of the entertainment he presented there. It would indeed be difficult to imagine anything more unlike in texture the plays he is in the habit of producing at St. James's Theatre than the Chinese drama that he last evening produced there for the first time in this country.

In an explanatory statement accompanying last night's programme Sir George Alexander has had set out in a very interesting manner the history of "Turandot, Princess of China," described as a Chinoiserie in prose and verse, in three acts, by Karl Vollmoeller, with music by Ferruccio Busoni. The story which is the origin of the work is a Persian tale, dating from the thirteenth century, and it was an orchestral suite of Mr. Busoni's based on this romance that inspired Dr. Vollmoeller to write the play. Sir George Alexander witnessed a performance of the drama in Germany fifteen months ago, and having secured the English rights, gave Mr. Jethro Bithell a commission to provide the English adaptation now presented.

Princess Man-Hater.

The story is not an involved one. Turandot was a lovely princess, the only daughter of the Emperor of China, and a man hater. Suitors she had in abundance, but she would not marry; she even made it a condition that if a man dared to propose to her he should propound three riddles invented by her, and failing to answer them should be executed at once. Prince after prince had attempted this task, and died, but Calaf came, saw, and conquered. It is true that when he fulfilled the conditions set him, the princess still rebelled against placing herself under the domination of a man, but love prevailed and the prince at last won Turandot's heart, as well as her hand.

In the manner of staging this play, it is impossible to escape noticing some resemblance to the methods and designs of the great Russian artists responsible for the presenting of the Russian ballets at Covent Garden. Most of the stories of the Russian ballets owe their inspiration, or origin, to famous compositions that existed before the ballets were written, and the designs for last night's costumes, the scenery, and the tableau curtains, while wanting the touch of genius found in Leon Bakst's designs, called up memories of those wonderful creations. Admitting, however, that "Turandot," pictorially and dramatically, does not reach the high standard set by the Russian management, it possesses a great deal that is beautiful and interesting, and, of course, differs from the Russian productions in that there is a spoken story to listen to. In the early part of last night's play the author seemed uncertain whether or not W. S. Gilbert should be his model, but afterwards he made only very rare lapses in that direction, and conducted his story on straight lines, or at least on lines that might be described as parallel to those laid down in "Kismet."

Sir George Alexander is not taking any part in the performance of this Chinese play, but he was present in the theatre, and appeared on the stage at the end to take his bow.

J. W.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager ... ... FRANK CURZON.

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON

To-night, Tuesday, January 21st, 1913, at 7.30,

MISS MARIE TEMPEST

PRODUCES

"Esther Castways"

A New Play in Four Acts,

By JEROME K. JEROME.

Esther Castways	... Miss MARIE TEMPEST
Philip Castways	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
[illegible] Farrant	Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Janet [illegible] Peterson	Miss MARIE POLINI
Virginia Grey	... Miss ROWENA JEROME
Reuben Pierce	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Mr. Jackson Follett	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
Mrs. Jackson Follett	Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Miss Fennimore	... Miss SYBIL CARLISLE
Lenny Wrigglesworth	Mr. STAFFORD HILLIARD
Stephens	... Mr. HORTON COOPER
Hodgson	Miss DRUSILLA WILLS
Manservant	Mr. MONTAGUE ELPHINSTONE

Acts I., II. and IV. PHILIP CASTWAYS' HOUSE IN MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK (W. Hann & Son)
Act III. ... ... AN APARTMENT ON RIVERSIDE DRIVE, NEW YORK (W. Hann & Son)

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Miss Tempest's Costumes by Mme. Anne Hayward, 67, New Bond Street, W. Miss Serjeantson's and Miss Polini's Costumes by Lucile, Ltd. [illegible] Costumes by Madame Hastin, Seymour, 45, New Bond Street and Miss Francis' Hats by Maison Lew [illegible] Furniture by Oetzmann & Co., Ltd., Hampstead Road, N.W. Wigs by Clarkson.

First Matinee Saturday Next at 2.15.

[illegible] under the direction of Harold Robertson Grimston, will play the following Music:—

[illegible]	"Kela Beat"	(a) Czardas No. 2	Macbe
[illegible]	Margis	(b) Celesta Solo	Lacey
[illegible]	Saint-Saens	(c) Valse	Spurin
[illegible]	Chopin
[illegible]	Tchaikowsky	The Celesta & Mustel Organ by Mustel & Co., 84, Wigmore Street.
[illegible]	Grieg	Grand Pianoforte by Bluthner & Co., 19, Wigmore Street, W.
[illegible]	F. Buccalossi

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON. | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

[illegible] Orchestra Stalls 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 4s.
[illegible] Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7484.

Business Manager (for Miss Marie Tempest) ... ... HERBERT ROSS
Business Manager (for Frank Curzon) ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

Marie Tempest interested me much the new play called "Esther Cast-which by arrangement with Mr.
urzon she produced at the Prince Theatre on Tuesday evening, than done in anything that I have seen
r years. Her part in this play, e K. Jerome, was that of a simple-very honest, very sincere young woman, who found a better-look-unscrupulous friend luring her from her. Miss Tempest was no longer the "country mouse," Sharp, nor society flirt, gay and n turn as the flirtation, or con-cessitated. She was just a sincere possessed of much common sense, t she possessed something uncom-
ke it up to the moment that she to sacrifice her own good name in save her "stick" of a husband consequences of an unsavoury i-

• • • •

are four acts in this "Esther
," and three of them took place utiful New York home of Esther husband the brilliant advocate.
aining act was located in the flat ther's husband had a midnight on with the other woman. To insufferable condition of sharing and with another Esther turned e apartment, and eventually con-er rival that the wife had first
The other woman having admitted went away, and Esther remainnd for a few minutes was sur-here by the man who lent the t for the assignation. Other rrived on the scene and Esther a result, although innocent, have good name with the New York Hundred," had not the leadere of ety decided she was to be white-
The author's daughter. Miss
Jerome, is in the cast, and acted

J.W.

To-night, Wednesday, January 22nd, 1913, at 9 o'clock,

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, for the First Time, a New Comedy, in Four Acts, called

THE HEADMASTER

By WILFRED T. COLEBY and EDWARD KNOBLAUCH

THE REV. CUTHBERT SANCTUARY, D.D.	(Headmaster of Carchester School)	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
PORTIA	(his Daughters)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
ANTIGONE		Miss KATHLEEN JONES
JACK STRAHAN	(Assistant Master)	Mr. EDWARD COMBERMERE
MUNTON	(the School Sergeant)	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
THE VERY REV. THE HON. MANFORD WILTON, M.A., F.R.G.S., etc.	(Dean of Carchester)	Mr. CHARLES BIBBY
THE HON. MRS. GRANTLEY	(his Sister)	Miss FRANCES IVOR
PALISSER GRANTLEY	(her Son, Assistant Master at Carchester School)	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
RICHARDS MAJOR	(Senior Prefect and Captain of the Eleven)	Mr. JACK HOBBS
JIM STUART	(Boys in the School)	Master ERIC RAE
BILL ETHERIDGE		Master KENDRICK HUXHAM

ACTS I., II. and IV. The Hall in the Headmaster's House at Carchester School. BRUCE SMITH
ACT III. ... ... A Room in the Deanery at Carchester ... ... " "

Miss MARGERY MAUDE'S Costumes by Mlle. RACHELLE OSPOYAT, 69, New Bond Street, W.
Miss FRANCES IVOR'S Costumes by Miss GRAY, Ltd., 9, Brook Street, W.
Greek Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Clerical Costumes by MORRIS ANGEL & SON.

Preceded at 8.20 by a Dutch Idyll, entitled

IN HAARLEM THERE DWELT—

A Musicdrame in Four Pictures, from a Story by Pieter Van Der Meer

By DORA BRIGHT

MINNA	(her Husband)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
GERRITT	(his fellow Cashier)	Mr. MARK PATON
POLMAN		Mr. JAMES DALE

Scene The "Kamer" of a Dutch House F. SCHMITZ

After Picture I. Three Weeks are supposed to elapse; after Picture II. Six Months; and after Picture III. Two Days.

Costumes supplied by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN, 17, Coventry Street, W.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Wednesday

22/1/1913

Orch. Stall
F 16

This to be retained

VERY amusing entertainment, which has all the making of a popular success, is Messrs. Wilfred T. Coleby and ward Knoblauch's "new comedy," which, under the title of

"The Headmaster."

r. Cyril Maude presented at the Playhouse on Wednesday. is the authors who style their piece a "comedy," not I. my mind it is farce, or, at the best, that hybrid mas- rade of true comedy usually designated "farcical comedy," d as such would have been better done in three acts than in ur. When you call a play a comedy you implicitly claim it some likeness to life, even if it convey only a superficial se of reality. But you are never persuaded that the things t happen in "The Headmaster" would really happen, or t the people of the play are in any degree real people, with exception, perhaps, of Stuart and Etheridge, pretty average ples of the Lower Fourth, and Antigone, Dr. Sanctuary's nger daughter, who, writing with bursting heart from the ishment of boarding school, began her letter "The grub e is muck." There spoke the modern child.

* * *

The stage has never dealt faithfully by the pedagogue. dramatist, so far as I can remember, has ever been able resist the temptation to make fun of him and belittle n. One might imagine that the collaboration of two play- ghts of the standing of Mr. Coleby and Mr. Knoblauch on lay of school life would result in something less flattering the stage conventions of the subject, for Both Authors Are Men of Ideas,

d Mr. Coleby, so I understand, has a more intimate ociation with those majestic beings who rough-hew the nies of British youth than is permitted to most of us. ey might have given us a play of ideas. Education with a pital "E" might have figured in it. Possibly an hentic picture of Public School life might, for the t time, have been placed on the stage. Instead r authors have contented themselves with this rather nble farcical comedy, but if they are more success- y concerned in providing food for laughter than for ught, doubtless the box-office will be the better pleased. the Rev. Dr. Sanctuary is the latest pedagogic caricature, d it is only in the natural order of things that the funnier r. Cyril Maude makes him, the more unfitted he seems to for the responsible position of Headmaster of Carchester hool.

* * *

It is more difficult still to picture this placid "Head" as Bishop of Rutland, a see he hoped to obtain through the ert wire-pulling of the Hon. Mrs. Grantley. This over- ering, domineering woman's muff of a son was a grotesque istant master at Carchester, and anxious to marry Dr. ctuary's elder daughter, Portia, a capable young woman, se affections were already bestowed on stalwart Jack ahan, the well-known Cambridge blue, who was nominally ence master, but actually at Carchester

"To Look After the Cricket."

e Doctor, thinking to further the interests of young ntley, sounded Mrs. Grantley as to the feasibility of union of her son and his daughter, and, in accordance with e tradition, this worthy woman, seeing herself in the t of a bishop's wife, interpreted the Doctor's discreet biguities into a direct proposal of marriage. Forthwith assumed direction of the Head's household, a self- ointed dictator. She packed the younger daughter off to ool, bullied Portia, and the Head himself—irreverently wn to the junior school as "Old Thunderguts"—hadn't pluck to point out to her the error of her assumption for r of losing the prospective bishopric. Soon it became a stion of choosing between the gaiters and the girls, and ength, reminded by Portia of what her mother would have ught of his time-serving policy, he refused the bishopric was accordingly refused by the lady.

* * *

STRAND
THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

Saturday Evening, February 1st, 1913, at 8-0.

Following Evenings at 8-30.

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS

"THE SON AND HEIR."

An Original Play in Four Acts, by

GLADYS UNGER.

Sir Everard Titsy Chilworth, Bart....	EDMUND MAURICE
Everard Chilworth	MAX LEEDS
Pascoe Tandridge	NORMAN TREVOR
Felix Fourié	RAYMOND LAUZERTE
John Brock	J. PARISH ROBERTSON
Cecil Chilworth	BOBBIE ANDREWS
Tidder	CHARLES DALY
William	LAMBERT PLUMMER
Lady Chilworth	CYNTHIA BROOKE
Amy Chilworth	ETHEL DANE
Miss Chilworth	JEAN CADELL
Dorman	MARY GRIFFITHS
AND
Beatrice Wishaw	ETHEL IRVING

The Action takes place at "Ledgers," Sir Everard Titsy Chilworth's Country Seat in Hertfordshire, early in January.

Act I.	The Hall - - -	Afternoon
Act II.	The Schoolroom -	Evening
Act III.	Beatrice Wishaw's Room	Night
Act IV.	The Breakfast Room	The Next Morning

The Play acquired from Messrs. VEDRENNE & EADIE.

Produced by CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. Eric Zardo.

SELECTION ...	... "The Dancing Mistress" ...		Lionel Monckton
After Act I. ...	... "Three Dream Dances" ...		Coleridge Taylor
After Act II. ...	(a. "Ninon"		N. Zardo
	(b. "Berceuse de Jocelyn"		Godard
After Act III. ...	(a. Pianoforte Solo Polonaise in A flat ...		Chopin
	E. ZARDO.
	(b. Minuette		Rose Risers

Acts I, II. & III by W. JOHNSTON. Act IV. by W. HEMSLEY.

Miss Irving's Dresses by BAROLET, Knightsbridge

Miss Dane's and Miss Brooke's Dresses by VIOLA, Albermarle St., W.

The entire Decoration has been designed, and the Furniture supplied by THORNTON-SMITH, Soho Square.

Furs supplied by GRUNWALD, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

The "Silent Night" Motor Car used in Acts I and IV. supplied by the DAIMLER CO., Pall Mall, S.W.

Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-30.

Business Manager	BERNARD HISHIN
Stage Manager	MARTIN HENRY

Preceded at 2.15 and 8-15, by

'An Interrupted Divorce,"

A Comedy in One Act, by FREDERIC SARGENT.

Sir James Thurloe, K.C., M.P.	...ERNEST LEICESTER
Mabel Carden	... Mrs. SAM SOTHERN
Judd	LAMBERT PLUMMER

Scene: Sir James Thurloe's Chambers

The Weekly Dispatch

LONDON: 2, Carmelite Street, E.C.

FEBRUARY 2, 1913.

As an entertainment the new four-act play by Miss Gladys Unger, entitled "The Son and Heir," presented by Mr. Louis Meyer at the Strand Theatre last evening, has much to recommend it. The author possesses the faculty for writing quite amusing dialogue, dialogue that kept the house in constant laughter throughout the first act. It was, perhaps, mainly owing to the bright and observant lines of the play that Miss Unger's work so strongly recommended itself to an audience that was content to accept as good entertainment a piece with but the slightest plot, a plot of a very unconvincing character. In the matter of two of the players it must be recorded that Mr. Louis Meyer has shown both enterprise and skill, for it is impossible to conceive some of the parts being under any circumstances better acted than they were last evening.

Story of the Play.

As the title indicates, the story concerns itself with a family of position—Sir Everard Chilworth, his heir, also a younger son, a married daughter, and an unmarried girl. In the story, or as much of it as is seen on the stage, the heir is of no account. He is a mere cad, and his father, the baronet, is at moments also uncommonly like one. Perhaps the tendency to display bad manners, so strongly developed in father and son, accounted for much of the timid nature of the women folk of the family; anyhow, the men had it all their own way until one of the women by threatening to bolt with another man secured a compromise by which the women if they did not both get all they wanted, secured sufficient to make the play end happily. Slight as the story may be it cannot matter much in measuring the value of "The Son and Heir" as an entertainment. It gets laughters throughout two of its four acts, and the other two are devoted more or less convincingly to scenes of passion that, however cleverly conducted we may admit them to be, are, after all, but scenes of theatrical passion that leave us wholly unconvinced.

Mr. Raymond Lauzerte made a decided success of his work last evening as an intelligent French gentleman visiting England and expressing his opinion. Mr. Edmund Maurice acted with singular strength, and as the two who loved and swore to wait Mr. Norman Trevor and Miss Ethel Irving did as well as the story permitted. The play had quite an enthusiastic reception, and the author acknowledged it in person."

J. W

13 10

Tuesday, February 4th at 8 p.m., and every following Evening at 8.30. Matinees: Wednesday & Saturday 2.30.

"THREE"

A Modern Comedy of Roman Life in Three Acts.

Translated from the Italian of ROBERTO BRACCO, by Miss D. ST. CYR.

Adapted by GILBERT CANNAN.

The Characters are in the order of their appearance on the Stage.

BARONESS LOUISA SANGIOVI	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
BARON FREDERICO SANGIOVI	BEN WEBSTER
ENRICO RANEO	SCOTT CRAVEN
BATTISTO ... ... (Servant to Enrico Raneo)	DAVID HALLAM
GIOVANNI ... ... (Servant to Baron Sangiovi)	R. C. HARCOURT
MAID	JOAN TEMPLE

Act I, The Baroness' Boudoir. Act II, Room in Enrico Raneo's House. Act III, Same as Act I.

NOTE.—In Italian Society it is customary for ladies to receive visitors every evening at their house after dinner, as this is the fashionable visiting hour in Rome.

Dresses in Acts II. and III., Cloak and Draperies in Act II. are from the Atelier of MARIANO FORTUNY, 29, Maddox Street.

Dress in Act I. by Miss GREY, 11, Brook Street. Cigarettes by ABDULLA, Ltd., 168, New Bond Street.

To be followed by

"The Arbour of Refuge"

A Comedy in One Act,

By GILBERT CANNAN.

The Characters are in the order of their appearance on the Stage.

TRUMAN	BERTRAM FORSYTH
MARY	MADGE McINTOSH
GARDENER	DAVID HALLAM
LOCUM	BEN WEBSTER
SEMPTER	EDWARD RIGBY
DASHBORD	SCOTT CRAVEN

Scene—Mary's Garden

Both plays produced by GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Box Office open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. (Mr. RICHARDS), Telephone 1927 CITY.

Business Manager ... ... ARTHUR PENLEY
Stage Manager ... ... CLIFFORD MARQUAND

s Gertrude Kingston, the well-known s. has asked the "P.M.G." to pub- the following Open Letter to the atic critics :—

MEN,

ast production at the Little Theatre of " and "The Arbour of Refuge" has ade the subject of a remarkable attack morning Press. Can it be that this is some remarks of mine in the "Nine- Century and After" as to who dic- e question of dramatic supply, or can hat I am made the scapegoat, post- sly, for Mr. Bernard Shaw's remon- with the critics on the first night of oduction of "Captain Brassbound's sion"?

t be remembered that I built the Little , intending it for light comedy, and ilies of the type of "Three" and Arbour of Refuge." Where else can played? Are these often exquisite to be wasted for want of an appro- setting? Yet no sooner does the critic the Little Theatre than, instead of and whipped cream, he strenuously r suet pudding, with or without as f the treacle of sentiment as his palate ls.

LEASING ANYBODY.

ersations overheard at the Little two nights ago from two gentle- the Press sitting two rows apart are eristic :—

t Gentleman: Beastly cold here! I hate lace!

ond Gentleman: I like the Little Theatre, hy do they keep it so hot?

f the plays I produce here! If light, called "thin and talky"; if heavy, e declared unsuitable for so small a y other theatre of larger dimensions seen actors and actresses go up to mpter and get the word without On Tuesday evening two members company wanted prompting (once from very reasonable nervousness, e notice said that the only person ew his part was the one who should een mate! Yet on no first night in have I ever been prompted!

I am accused of being essentially Now, my mother is a Venetian, u may meet a dozen women of my as many hours in any part of Italy, Italy I am addressed by Italians as ian.

T THE ITALIANS.

I am told that the only Italian-look- ople in "Three" were the man- and maid-servant, as if that were an t and not an intentional choice on my But let me point out to the writer so hypersensitive to atmosphere, that are not all black-haired like the Garden Italian, nor the contadina t girl) with coral earrings and a chief folded over her head. Let him k at the paintings by Italian masters hat their subjects range from golden- o russet, and are of all sizes and colours. Indeed, the cultured classes of all nations resemble one another, and have no definite type

Moreover, it may have escaped the eyes of these gentlemen that the scenery of Act 2, designed by myself and built in my own workshops, is the exact reproduction of a room in an Italian "sette cento" house; that the gowns I wore in Acts 2 and 3, called "extravagant" or "fantastic" (I forget the exact words), were made in an Italian workshop by an Italian artist, Mariano Fortuny by name, son of the famous painter, and designer of the most exquisite patterns and materials, of which some of the stage decorations and my frocks were composed.

GET A DICTIONARY!

Another gentleman complains that the Italian servant said "yes" in Italian and "no" in English. I would ask him to get down an Italian dictionary from the office library of reference, and observe that "No" is the same in both languages!

Because I have not put the name of any Mr. Blank of Blank as designer or producer, but have laboured without stint of energy in the theatre myself, never a kindly word has been said by the Press of any of my productions, although artists have written to me on many occasions about my stage pictures. Indeed, one well-known critic, after I had spent many hours on lighting an out-of-door scene in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," deigned to accord the credit of it to the scene painter, so little did he know of the technicalities of the stage, so grudging was he lest I should get the benefit of my personal endeavours.

Come, come, gentlemen, fair play, fair play!—Yours, etc.,

GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

The unconscious humour of the new play entitled "Three," produced by Miss Gertrude Kingston at the Little Theatre on Tuesday evening, saved the performance from the charge of dulness. The story is located in Rome, the period is the present time, and the scene is the boudoir of a married lady. The lady had the reputation of being fascinating. Her husband swore he was not jealous of any of her many admirers, but if his looks were to be trusted he hardly spoke the truth.

The Embarrassed Lover.

In the second act the lady gave a meeting to the most ardent of her admirers. He had told her he would conquer her if she would but meet him alone. This was the most genuinely funny scene in the play, for the poor man looked so ill at ease that instead of captivating the lady he appeared to have wiped out whatever good opinion she may ever have held of him. In the last act the retired Lothario recognised that the lady loved her husband, and having placed a rose on her table, he heaved a sigh, and disappeared. So ended the story. Miss Gertrude Kingston and Mr. Ben Webster played the married couple. Mr. Scott Craven acted the part of the lady-killer.

J. W.

20

THE LIT
JOHN ST
Proprietress

Tuesday
Evening
Feb. 4

Stall

No. H 17
This to be retained

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, at 7-45
and Every Evening at 7-45.

MATINEES, Wednesdays & Saturdays, at 2-30

MISS DORA BARTON
(as Chuz-nah,
an Indian Woman trained to Arms)

MR. HENRY LONSDALE
(as Nebu Singh, one of the most Notorious Characters of 1857).

AND POWERFUL COMPANY IN THE

ROMANTIC DRAMA,

Founded on the great Historical Event,

THE INDIAN MUTINY

Written by GEORGE DAVENTRY.
Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters—British:

Lieut. Manley	MR. C. W. STANDING
Captain Manley, his brother, commanding Detachment	MR. F. C. LEISTER
Major Ingleby, Commissioner in charge of the Garrison	MR. ROTHBURY EVANS
Ensign Blake, of the same Corps	MR. WILSON BLAKE
Terry O'Brien, Captain Manley's Body Servant	MR. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Serg. Thompson	MR. H. BROWNE
Mrs. Major Ingleby, the Martinet	MISS BLANCHE STANLEY
Kate Ingleby, her Daughter	MISS LILIAN HALLOWS

Hindoos:

Nebu Singh, Leader of the Rebels	MR. HENRY LONSDALE
Abul Khan, the Lion of Lahore	MR. ALBERT WARD
Ra Goonga, a Brahmin, his Retainer	MR. PHILIP HEWLAND
Mara Ba, a Sepoy Officer	MR. CLEVELAND
Asfinga	MR. GEOFFREY PATRICK
Ghaute Je, the second self of Nebu Singh	MR. H. ELSWORTHY
Syed Rao, the Nana's Messenger	MR. F. DOONE
Rama Goosh, an attendant to the Khan	MR. BACHNER
Ghuz-nah, a Brahim Priestess, trained to Arms, supposed Daughter to the Khan	MISS DORA BARTON

Soldiers, Sepoys, Hindoos, &c.

Act 1 ... ... Court of the Khan's House
The Night before the Mutiny - Ra Goonga's One-Day Oath of Peace—A Brahmin Priestess versus Love.
"THE FEAST OF LIGHT."

Act 2 ... Mountain Pass near the English Camp

Act 3 ... A Ruined Mosque on the River's Bank BOUND TO THE CANNON'S MOUTH.

Act 4 ... ... Before the Walls of Dholpoor
THE HOUR OF VENGEANCE.
Eve of the Centenary of Plassey, June 23rd. 1857.

Act 5 ... ... A Hindoo Mountain Fortress
THE SIGNAL OF MUTINY.

The Scenery painted by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS, and the LYCEUM STUDIO. Uniforms, Costumes and Wigs by JOHN HYMAN, 19 Leicester Square, W.

The Orchestra will play the following selections:

OVERTURE	"Fra Diavolo"	Auber
SELECTION	"The Sunshine Girl"	Paul Rubens
FANTASIA	"The Count of Luxembourg"	Lehar
MARCH	"Entry of the Bulgars"	Lotter
VALSE	"Gipsy Love"	Lehar

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. Mr. G. GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager .. .. .. Mr. WILSON BLAKE

* * *

Glory and gunpowder, heroism and hysterics, plots and iards, rebellions and "round eights," love and limelight ght be put down as forming the chief ingredients in last dnesday's production at the Princes—namely, itten by George Daventry. In sundry preliminary para- phs this melodrama has been described as new. As a tter of fact, it was produced at Burnley twenty years ago Boxing Night, and was toured by its author for many rs, with himself as the chief villain, Nebu Singh. After Daventry's death, "The Indian Mutiny" was toured his widow, Miss Clare Howard, the original representative the half-caste heroine. From time to time Miss Howard e, as a change, performances of "Hamlet," with herself the Moody Dane, the tragedy being enacted as a melo- ma accompanied throughout by bits of "agit," izzicato," and other more or less impressive morceaux melos.

"The Indian Mutiny,"

* * *

Some years ago I happened on "The Indian Mutiny" sketch form at the South London Music Hall. Then its f situation, the condemning of the villain to be blown n a big pivot gun, aroused, as it had always aroused, the lest excitement among kind friends in front. At the nces' production the episode was greeted with some ghter owing to having been sufficiently rehearsed, and because the although well within its "period," seemed such oy compared with the cannon of to-day. Doubt- this scene will yet go properly, however, for it is y a strong situation. The villain, rescued by his w-mutineers, swings the gun around to empty it the British Army o.p., when, in the very nick of , the Eurasian heroine swings it back and mows down rde of advancing Sepoys P.S. The principal plotter, Nebu h, is a boldly drawn, picturesque character, whose com- villainy reminds one of Macaulay's description of Nun- ar: "What the Italian is to the Englishman; what the du is to the Italian; what the Bengali is to the Hindu, was Nuncomar to other Bengalis!"

The Swinging Gun

* * *

New Prince's.

"THE INDIAN MUTINY."

BY GEORGE DAVENTRY.

"The Indian Mutiny" is not a very choice example of the melodrama of yesterday. Its plot is not built on broad lines, and the action is often scrappy and involved. But at least it is free from any of the sickly sentimentality —amorous or religious—that has crept into the melodrama of to-day; and there are many moments in it which are at any rate meant to be exciting, and may prove so to all who do not look too closely into the machinery. And if you like the noise of fire-arms, "The Indian Mutiny" is the very play for you. Not only are there pistols and rifles—more rifles than there were even in "The Women of France"—but there is a great cannon which enjoys surprising adventures—has Mr. Henry Lonsdale, as Nebu Singh, the villain, tied to its mouth and untied again; is all but fired by the comic man, Mr. Herbert Williams, as Tony O'Brien; and is waltzed round this way and that until it must feel like Willy, before Miss Dora Barton, as the heroine, Ghuz-nah, gives it the final twirl and mows down with one discharge whole rows of rebellious Sepoys

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - - LOUIS MEYER

Under the Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6th, at 7.45

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

"TRUST THE PEOPLE"

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS, BY

STANLEY HOUGHTON

John Greenwood (President of the Board of Labour)	Of Blackshaw, Lancashire	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
John Greenwood, Senr. (his Father)		JOHN MCNALLY
Mrs. Greenwood (his Mother)		BARBARA GOTT
Stephen Jebb (his Agent)		P. PERCEVAL CLARK
Nathan Brierley		FRANK J. ARLTON
Joseph Walmesley		W. S. HARTFORD
The Mayor		W. HUBERT
The Mayoress		EDITH KING
Mrs. Riley (a Suffragette)		MARGARET BOYD
One of the Lads		CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
A Reporter		HUBERT WOODWARD
The Earl of Eccles (Secretary of State for Wales)		THOMAS WEGUELIN
The Marquis of Cheadle (an Opposition Peer)		KENYON MUSGRAVE
Lord Richard Northenden (his Younger Son)		RICHARD NEVILLE
Sir James Harvey-Macpherson (Prime Minister)		HERBERT BUNSTON
Morris Johns (Chief Government Whip)		THOMAS SIDNEY
Thompson		ARCHIBALD MCCLEAN
A Waiter		CEDRIC HARDWICKE
Lady Violet Ainslie (Widowed Daughter of Lord Cheadle)		VIVA BIRKETT
Miriam Felton		MARJORIE WATERLOW

ACT I.	LONDON - -	The House of John Greenwood
	A month elapses.
ACT II.	BLACKSHAW
	Scene 1 - -	A Room in the Queen's Hotel
	Scene 2 - -	A Corridor in the Town Hall
ACT III.	BLACKSHAW -	The House of John Greenwood, Senr.
	The same evening.

The Action of the Play passes in the Future—the year 19...

Dresses and Hats by VIOLA, Albemarle Street, W.

Scenery by ARTHUR PULLINGER.

Furniture supplied by SPILLMAN & Co., 101-102 St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Wigs by Fox.

Business Manager	... (For Arthur Bourchier) ...	THOMAS STEVENS
Assistant Stage Managers	,, ...	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY, CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director...	... ,, ...	ALBERT FOX
Acting Manager ...	...(For Garrick Renters, Ltd.)...	JOSÉ G. LEVY

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30

The Box Office (C. R. STUBBS) open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

GENERAL MANAGER ... (For Arthur Bourchier) ... WILLIAM BURCHILL

(To whom all communications must be addressed.)

"Trust the People."

They were doomed to disappointment who went to the Garrick Theatre on Thursday evening in the expectation of witnessing in Stanley Houghton's "Trust the People" a play of the close-to-life order such as might have been expected from the author of "Hindle Wakes." "Trust the People" will not make history or reputation. Mr. Houghton has his story in London, and although his hero was a man of the people, he had by politics gone up in life, was a Cabinet Minister, and—it may be added—a co-respondent. Here are, indeed, materials for melodrama.

Story of the Play.

As for the story of "Trust the People," Act I is located in the town house of John Greenwood, self-made man, Cabinet Minister. It is morning. The great man is very busy. There are many callers, and they all call to tell him he is to be cited as a co-respondent. Will he pay the other man or go out of public life? Answer: He will do neither. His sin dated from long ago. The intrigue had ended long ago. He will pay no hush-money to the husband who wants to blackmail him; in fact, he has already thrown him down the front steps. The great man, his head well back, was heroic, and well he might be, surrounded as he was by those friends of his, mostly freaks, labelled for the purposes of the play "Cabinet Ministers." Act I, therefore, with such characters in it, degenerated into burlesque; and with Act II. another sample of stagecraft appeared—namely, melodrama. Act III. was on the Robertsonian model—"Kind hearts are more than coronets." Mr. Arthur Bourchier stood out from all in the cast, but that fact must not detract from the success of some of the musical-comedy political characters who come into his life in Act I.

"P.M.G." Special.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, with his usual good nature and also with all his accustomed vigour, received me last night at the Garrick Theatre, writes a representative of the "Pall Mall Gazette," for the purpose of replying to the critics who have been finding fault with Mr. Stanley Houghton's new play, "Trust the People."

"They have all admitted," he began, "the great success of the play, both artistically and from the point of view of enthusiasm—the writing and the acting. But what there has been a deliberate attempt on the part of a certain section of the Press to do is to condemn Mr. Houghton to remain for ever in Lancashire, and only to write Lancashire characters.

"They have also accused him of putting on the stage Cabinet Ministers who could not possibly exist, in spite of the fact that he has taken particular pains to lay his play in the future.

"Mind you, I do not speak in general terms of the Press. I never do that. I refer to a particular section of critics—that section that I call the Jaeger brigade, who try to induce young authors to don the Jaeger and write drab, dreary plays with a Post-Impressionist background, for empty box-office tills. They are the persons who are damaging the cause of the drama more than anything, because they try to keep the public away. Authors are frightened also at what they will say, and plunge headlong into Pre-Raphaelitish Ibsenism.

An Illustration from the Studio.

"Now, with regard to the critics' attempt to condemn Mr. Houghton to remain for ever in Lancashire." Is Mr. Lavery, the great Scottish painter, only to paint Scottish lochs and tarns? Would he be the great man he is if he had been condemned to do that? Probably his critics tried to condemn him to paint only Scottish scenery, and if they did, no doubt he said 'fudge' to them. What do you say Mr. Houghton?"

The author of the play, who was sitting quietly through the interview whilst Mr. Bourchier paced the room, replied: "I cannot say anything about it, because I have not read the notices."

"But now that you have heard something of what they say?"

"I don't see quite why I should not do something else besides Lancashire."

"More especially," Mr. Bourchier said, "as he has been very generous and met them half way."

Cabinet Ministers Flattered.

"Then, with regard to the second objection," Mr. Bourchier went on to say, "that Mr. Houghton has put on the stage Cabinet Ministers who could not possibly exist, I am going to say something very definite and very strong.

"I am sorry to say I have a personal acquaintance with five members of the present Cabinet, and I knew a great many of the last Cabinet. I can only tell you that Mr. Houghton has flattered them very considerably. He has made them a great deal more stately and more dignified than [illegible] acquaintance with them has shown "Excellent men, worthy men they are, no doubt, but never brilliant men—not half as brilliant as Mr. Houghton has made them out to be.

"I may be ordered to Tyburn, they may extradite me, I may be sent to Devil's Island," Mr. Bourchier added, laughing, "but I shall still hold my opinion. Were they half as dignified and half as witty as Mr. Houghton makes them, I should never have been in a position to meet them.

"With one I happened to be at school. I used to sit next to him at Eton. He was at the theatre last night, and was delighted with the play.

"If I am accused of being unpatriotic, I say, 'On the contrary, I am stirring up patriotism.' Mr. Houghton keeps away from politics; but where there happens to be in the play such lines as 'Why should we resign?' the audience applauded most heartily, showing that the present Government is regarded with satisfaction by the public.

"Even the word 'Limehouse' got a very good-natured laugh."

"Yes," Mr. Stanley Houghton remarked, "but please make it perfectly plain that it is merely the name of a street."

"People, however, would be surprised if anything complimentary was ever said about me or about the plays that I produce. And my attitude towards the Press is so well known that one of the biggest 'laughs' from the audience—and a sympathetic cheer from the members of the Press sitting in front—came last night when I said, 'Who is that knocking at the door? If he's a reporter I'll brain him!'"

STRAND THEATRE W.C. LOUIS MEYER PRESENTS

ETHEL IRVING IN

THE SON AND HEIR

BY GLADYS UNGER.

EVENINGS 8.45

MATINEES—WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS AT 2.45

CRITERION THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Messrs. Spiers & Pond, Ltd., 222, Piccadilly

Lessees and Managers: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM
And MISS MARY MOORE

H. V. ESMOND'S
and
EVA MOORE'S Season.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12th at 8.30

Following Evening at 9.

"Eliza Comes to Stay"

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts by H. V. ESMOND.

Hon. Sandy Verrall	H. V. ESMOND
Alexander Stoop Verrall	FRED. GROVE
Montague Jordan	ERIC LEWIS
Herbert (a Valet)	CHARLES ESDALE
Lady Pennybroke	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Vera Lawrence	DIANA PORTIS
Mrs. Allaway	CONSTANCE GROVES
Eliza	EVA MOORE

ACT I. ... ... Room in the Hon. Sandy Verrall's Flat in London
ACT II. ... ... Same as Act I. Week later.
ACT III ... ... Same as Act. I. Month later.

Dresses by Madam KARSLER, 50, Queen's Road, Bayswater.

Preceded at 8 (following Evenings at 8.30) by

STACY AUMONIER

IN HIS OWN CHARACTER SKETCHES.

MATINEES - - WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30

March	"Sounds of Peace"	... Franz von Blon
Overture	... "Raymond"	... A. Thomas
Valse	"Amour Passager"	Pedro de Zulueta
Two-Step	"The Gaby Glide"	Louis H. Hirsch
Selection	... "Gipsy Love"	... Lehar
March	"The Children o' the Regiment"	... Fucik

General Manager ... ... For H. V. ESMOND and EVA MOORE ... ... ERNEST BENHAM
Stage Manager ... ... CHARLES ESDALE

"Eliza Comes to Stay."

Although the new play called "Eliza Comes to Stay," which Mr. H. V. Esmond and Miss Eva Moore presented at the Criterion Theatre on Wednesday evening, is not altogether novel, it makes a very pleasant entertainment, and is very much better in the last act than in the others. In the story Mr. Esmond takes the part of a fairly well-to-do young bachelor, who is suddenly called upon by the dying request of an old friend to accept charge of his daughter. Believing that his ward is to be a little golden-haired child, he engages a nurse to await her arrival, and purchases all sorts of toys likely to amuse a youngster. Judge of his horror, then, when he finds that his ward is a full-grown, awkward, bespectacled young woman in the costume of a charwoman.

A Pleasant Impression.

It is not very difficulty to forecast what happens. Eliza, simple as she is, falls in love with her guardian, and although her every attempt to make herself look captivating in his eyes only succeeds in driving him away to travel, her womanly instinct and charm prevail, and when he returns it is only to find that a charming girl is at home to welcome him back. This final scene is played with very great charm by Miss Eva Moore, and, in spite of the fact that the story is very slight for a whole evening's entertainment, it leaves a pleasant impression and a feeling that the evening in a theatre has not been lost.

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13TH, 1913, AT 8 O'CLOCK

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

The Pretenders

Translated by WILLIAM ARCHER, from KONGSEMNERNE, an Historic Drama in Five Acts, by HENRIK IBSEN

The Music by NORMAN O'NEILL

Hakon Hakonsson, the King elected by the Birchlegs	BASIL GILL
Inga of Varteig, his Mother	YVONNE Q. ORCHARDSON
Dagfinn Bonde, his Marshal	MONTAGU LOVE
Earl Skule	LAURENCE IRVING
Lady Ragnhild, his Wife	HELEN HAYE
Sigrid, his Sister	TITA BRAND
Margrete, his Daughter	NETTA WESTCOTT
Nicholas Arnesson, Bishop of Oslo ...	WILLIAM HAVILAND
Sira Villiam, his Chaplain	HENRY HARGREAVES
Ivar Bodde, Hakon's Chaplain	HENRY CROCKER
Master Sigard of Brabant, a Physician ...	FRANK RIDLEY
Guthorm Ingesson	ROBIN SHIELLS
Gregorius Jonsson, a Nobleman ...	EWAN BROOK
Paul Flida, a Nobleman	E. A. WARBURTON
Chief Bratte, from the Trondheim district	ALLAN JEAYES
Jatgeir Skald, an Icelander	GUY RATHBONE
Ingeborg, Andres Skialdarband's Wife ...	MADGE McINTOSH
Peter, her Son, a young Priest	E. ION SWINLEY

Chieftains—Messrs. TERRIC, BELCHER, GILBERT, STONE, GULLAND, MATHER, GEORGE, WILD, BRENTWOOD, LAIDMAN and O'BRIEN

Townsmen, Guests, Skalds, Monks, House Boys, etc.—Messrs. FORTESCUE, DOUGLAS, SANGSTER, KNIGHT, ALBURY, JEROME, HARISON COOK, BERTRAM, SHARPLY, LANGLEY, COURTNEY, SKROBISCH, MILES, THORN, VIVIEN, and MASTERTON

Townswomen, Nuns, Queen's Attendants—Misses WHITAKER, BLAKE, STUART, HALL, ELDER ROBERTSON, BLUME, OWEN, JENNINGS, BLAIRE, HOPCRAFT, HARBERT, EPPS and DERRICK

Men-at-Arms, Guards, etc.

The Play produced by E. LYALL SWETE.

Act I. Scene 1.—Outside Christ Church, Bergen
„ Scene 2.—A Hall in the Palace, Bergen
Act II. ... Banquet Hall in the Palace, Bergen
Act III. Scene 1.—In the Bishop's Palace, Oslo
„ Scene 2.—A Room in the King's Palace, Oslo
Act IV. ... The great Hall, Nidaros
Act V. Scene 1.—A Fir Wood on the hills above Nidaros
„ Scene 2.—The Courtyard of Elgesaeter Convent

The action of the play takes place in Norway early in the 13th Century

Scenery designed by S. H. SIME and JOSEPH HARKER, and painted by JOSEPH HARKER

Costumes designed by S. H. SIME, and executed by L. & H. NATHAN Properties made by E. BRUNTON. Electrical effects by T. J. DIGBY. Wigs by CLARKSON

Miss WESTCOTT appears by arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE & EADIE, and Miss MADGE McINTOSH by arrangement with Miss KINGSTON.

Stage Manager, CHARLES LA TROBE. Assistant, CLAUDE RAINS

Musical Director, NORMAN O'NEILL

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2 o'clock

[First Matinee—Wednesday, February 19th]

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10

Reserved Seats from 2s. 6d. Telephone—Gerrard 3344.

Mr. FREDERICK HA[RRISON] Charles Frohman) he ha[s] "THE YOUNGER G[ENERATION]" where it is played ever[y] Miss KATE MOFFAT ("[Pe]Comedy in One Act by [Ar]and Saturday.

[e] that (by arrangement with [Ba]oughton's Three Act Comedy, [THE] DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE, [at] k, and followed at 10.30 by [THE] ELVE-POUND LOOK," a every Wednesday, Thursday

Business Manager ... . HORACE WATSON

HAYMARKET
Manager HARRISON
Thursday
Evening
Feb. 13
Orchestra Stl 10/6
No. J 20
This to be retained

This ticket is issued suject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON

By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 14th, at 8.30 o'clock.

"ASK QUESBURY"

A Farce.

By T. HERBERT LEE.

John Quesbury	WEEDON GROSSMITH
William Daintree	EDWIN H. WYNNE
Pragnell Thurston	RUDGE HARDING
Twiggs ... ... (Quesbury's Manservant) ...	HENRY FORD
Frank Riverton	GEOFFREY DENYS
Louisa Daintree	DAISY THIMM
Fanny Thurston	MAUD CRESSALL
Ida Mountjoy	NORA LAMING
Morris	SHELLEY CALTON

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY FREDERICK KERR.

Stage Manager ... ... DUNCAN DRUCE

The Scene is laid at John Quesbury's Flat in London.

ACT I.	The Library (night)
ACT II.	The Dining Room (next morning)
ACT III.	The Library (same morning, immediately after)

The Dresses worn by Miss Maud Cressall and Miss Daisy Thimm by PAQUIN, LTD.
Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co. Silverware by WALKER & HALL.
Hats worn by Miss Maud Cressall and Miss Daisy Thimm by MAISON LEWIS.
Miss Nora Laming's Costume by COREA.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Orchestra under the Direction of MAURICE JACOBI.

1.	OVERTURE, "Le Cheval de Bronze"	Auber
2.	SUITE DE BALLET, "Coppélia"	Delibes
3.	a. ENTR'ACTE, "Philémon et Baucis"	Gounod
	b. TWO STEP, "The Robert E. Lee"	L. Muir
4.	MARCH, "Entry of the Bulgars"	Lotter

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22nd, AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. VINCENT POTTER) open 10 to 10.

Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

General Manager (For WEEDON GROSSMITH) ... RICHARD T. MAYNARD

General Manager (For CHARLES FROHMAN) ... W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager (For CHARLES FROHMAN) ... OSCAR BARRETT, JUNR.

The three-act farce, "Ask Quesbury," by Mr. T. Herbert Lee, with which Mr. Weedon Grossmith opened his season at the Globe Theatre on Friday night, has a basic situation which is not unfunny. The hero, a wealthy young bachelor, having expressed antinomian opinions on the marriage laws in a printed pamphlet, such of his married friends as propose becoming antinomians themselves, all feel that they can safely seek his hospitality. Consequently, every room in his spacious flat is, in a single night, invaded by some errant wife or over-frolicsome husband, with the result that all sorts of complications ensue in the morning.

Alas! however, that is all the fun there is in the piece, for, unfortunately, nobody has anything witty to say, and, apart from their anti-nomianism—and even that proves of a very mild order in the end—the characters are as negative a lot of people as it is possible to imagine. And as, after all, the fundamental idea of the piece is scarcely of an overpoweringly original character, the final result is an entertainment of a somewhat desolating nature.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON

By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.

February 26

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15.

"HOW IT'S DONE"

Clarice Manette De Vere	(Professional Swindler)	...SHELLEY CALTON
Major Vivian	(Ditto) ...	... HENRY FORD
Reginald Bantock ...	... (of Wisbeach) ...	GEOFFREY DENYS
Proprietor of Hotel ...	... ...	... ... F. TEBBUTT
Police Inspector ...	... ...	... ... GUY LANE

SCENE.—A Private Room in an Hotel in Surrey Street, Strand.

AT 9.30.

"ASK QUESBURY"

GLOBE THEATRE.

The programme at the Globe Theatre has now a triple attraction. Mr. Weedon Grossmith has found "Ask Quesbury" go so quickly that he can include in the evening's entertainment both a one-act play and Mr. Bertram Wallis's "Musketeers." The play, which was added to the bill last night without an author's name, is called "How It's Done." There was a red-haired widow and the son of a Balaclava hero—such at least was the surface they offered to the world, and as such they were unfavourably known to the police—and they played the confidence trick on a young fool who thought himself clever. It is a brisk little anecdote, capably if rather elaborately told, and it was well acted by Miss Shelley Calton, Mr. Henry Ford, and Mr. Geoffrey Denys. The second dish in the menu, the "Musketeers" of Mr. Bertram Wallis, is very good fun, and "Ask Quesbury" and Mr. Weedon Grossmith's misadventures are honoured with loud laughter.

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

WILL PRODUCE

LADY NOGGS

A Comedy in Three Acts,
By CICELY HAMILTON.
Adapted from the Story by EDGAR JEPSON.

Lord Orrington ...	(Prime Minister) ...	...Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Billy Borrodaile ...	(his Secretary) ...	Mr. E. EVAN THOMAS
Rev. Alfred Gregg	... ...	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Lord Hartlepool	... ...	Mr. LEWIS FIELDER
Jimmy Cottenham	... ...	Mr. KENNETH KENT
Colonel Stiffgate	... ...	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Cotterill	... ...	Mr. REYNER BARTON
Morton	... ...	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Felicia, Lady Grandison ("Noggs")	... ...	Miss MARY GLYNNE
Countess Karskovitch ...	... ...	Mrs. SABA RALEIGH
Miss Stetson	... ...	...Miss MARY MACKENZIE
Duchess of Huddersfield ...	... ...	Miss HETTIE CAVENDISH
Lady Hartlepool	... ...	Miss MAY WARLEY
Suzette	... ...	...Miss MARGARET CHUTE

ACT I. ... ... THE LIBRARY AT STONORILL (Morning).
ACT II. ... THE TERRACE AT STONORILL (Afternoon, a week later).
ACT III. ... ... THE LIBRARY AT STONORILL (Next Evening).

Mrs. Raleigh's Dresses and Hats by REDFERN, 26 Condnit Street, W.; others by COROT ET CIE. and LIBERTY & Co.
Scenery Painted by G. SACKMANN.
The Antique Furniture and Fittings in Acts I. and III. kindly lent and arranged by Messrs. OWEN GRANT, LTD., 3 Clifford Street, W.

Preceded at 8.30

On Monday, February 17th, and Every Evening thereafter, by

Miss JOSEPHINE LA BARTE

IN SONGS AT THE PIANO

INCLUDING

"A fat li'l feller wid his mammy's eyes." Published by CHAPPELLS.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Before Act I.	OVERTURE, "Giralda"	Adam
Before Act II.	a. INTERMEZZO, "Mystic Beauty"	Finck
	b. MORCEAU CA[illegible] "[illegible]it Napolitaine"	Duchatel
	c. ENTR'ACTE, "	Haines
Before Act III.	SELECTION, "Th	Monckton
	MARCH, "Soko	Arnold

MATINEE EVERY W[illegible] AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, [illegible]s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Unreserved Seats: [illegible], First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. theatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 15
Sole Lessee.
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
15/2/1913
STALL
H19
To be retained

I'VE had a most exciting evening," said Lady Noggs, towards the end of the new play at the Comedy last night. Our own feeling was one more of surprise than excitement, though we admit to feeling something very like a thrill when the expeditious little lady snatched the secret treaty from the grasp of the nefarious Countess and thus saved a European scandal and averted International complications of a serious order. It was surprising to find the name of Miss Cicely Hamilton as the author—or, rather, the adapter—of this rather ingenuous, pretty-pretty comedy, "Lady Noggs." Miss Hamilton's name has been rather prominently before the public this week. Last Sunday she had "A Matter of Money" produced by the Pioneers, a piece by no means of the bread-and-butter genre, and yesterday she was numbered among the elect whose plays have been banned by the Censor. So we suspect—and it can be only suspicion, because we have not read Mr. Jepson's story on which "Lady Noggs" is based—that Lady Noggs and her uncle, the Prime Minister, and the marriage her ladyship makes and the marriage her ladyship mars are born of the imagination of Mr. Jepson, and that Miss Hamilton's is the technique which has transferred them from page to stage.

The play belongs to that period before Germany succeeded Russia as Britain's bugbear, and it is really a sufficient indication of the plot to say that the Prime Minister of England, a simple, unsuspicious soul, whose guilelessness must somehow or other have escaped the Opposition, sheltered beneath his roof at the same time the draft of an important treaty and a fatally fascinating foreign female diplomatist whose name ended in "vitch." The Countess captured the heart of the Premier, and would most certainly have captured the treaty as well but for the astuteness of Lady Noggs. And the other glorious deeds of the Countess—are they not written in the chronicles of Mr. William le Queux?

In "Debrett" Lady Noggs appeared as Felicia, Lady Grandison, a peeress in her own right, aged twelve years. She was the apotheosis of the enfant terrible, and by turns a terror, a tomboy, and an angel-child, so that life in Lord Orrington's household was never dull. In the intervals of taking a hand in International politics she looked after the domestic comforts of her uncle's tenantry and did a bit of matchmaking. For governesses in general she had a particular antipathy, for Miss Stetson in particular a peculiar sympathy; so, adopting the Beatrice-Benedick method as her model (she had probably never heard of either Beatrice or Benedick), she brought about a marriage between Miss Stetson and the Rev. Alfred Gregg. Thus was Miss Stetson's happiness secured, and thus Noggs gained a brief respite from vulgar fractions and Tudor Kings.

There is no doubt that in the light of the play Lady Noggs would have made a much better Prime Minister than Lord Orrington, and ——Good gracious, we have walked right into Miss Hamilton's trap! We have unconsciously blundered on the secret of Miss Hamilton's share in the play. Of course "Lady Noggs" is feminist propaganda subtly disguised as sentimental comedy. Who is the quick-witted saviour of her country? Lady Noggs. Who teaches the Prime Minister wisdom, so that he thanks her in husky tones? Lady Noggs! Who, in fact, rules the whole roost, a managing but quite unmanageable little person? Lady Noggs! Who ought to have been smacked for her precocity?

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

Sole Lessee and Manager - SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

15 February

EVERY EVENING at 8.40 (MATINEES at 2.30)

FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF PERFORMANCES

WILL BE ACTED

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST

A Trivial Comedy for Serious People

By OSCAR WILDE

John Worthing, J.P.	(of the Manor House, Woolton, Hertfordshire)	GERALD AMES
Algernon Moncrieffe	(his Friend)	A. E. MATTHEWS
Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D.	(Rector of Woolton)	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Merriman	(Butler to Mr. Worthing)	AUSTIN FEHRMAN
Lane	(Mr. Moncrieffe's Man-servant)	ALFRED HARRIS
Lady Bracknell		HELEN ROUS
Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax	(her Daughter)	DOROTHY FANE
Cecily Cardew	(John Worthing's Ward)	ROSALIE TOLLER
Miss Prism	(her Governess)	ALICE BEET

The Shaftesbury Theatre

Lessee and Manager
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

TUESDAY, 18th FEBRUARY, 1913
AT EIGHT O'CLOCK

A Musical Comedy
IN THREE ACTS

Oh! Oh!! Delphine!!!

Book and Lyrics by
C. M. S. McLELLAN
Music by
IVAN CARYLL

Founded on the French Farce,
"Villa Primrose"
by
GEORGES BERR and MARCEL GUILLEMAUD

Matinees:
at Two o'clock
Wednesdays & Saturdays

Programme

The Shaftesbury Theatre

Oh! Oh!! Delphine!!!

Characters
(In the order of their appearance)

Colonel Pomponnet	Mr. COURTICE POUNDS
Fernande	Miss CISSIE DEBENHAM
Bleum (a hotel manager)	Mr. CONINGSBY BRIERLEY
A Hall Porter	Mr. CHARLES CHAMIER
Victor Jolibeau	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Jacqueline	Miss WINIFRED ROMA
Tutu	Miss GWENYTH HUGHES
Antoinette	Miss MARJORIE COMPTON
Amandine (Models)	Miss MOLLIE HANBURY
Lulu	Miss CONNIE LUTTRELL
Distinguette	Miss MARJORIE VILLIS
Louis Gigoux	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Alphonse Bouchotte	Mr. WALTER PASSMORE
Delphine	Miss IRIS HOEY
Finette (a flower girl)	Miss WINIFRED DELEVANTI
Bimbouca (a Persian woman)	Miss DOROTHY JARDON
Uncle Noel Jolibeau	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Pluchard (a lawyer)	Mr. FRED EVISON
Simone	Miss NAN STUART
Madame Bax	Miss VIOLET GOULD

Army Officers, Officers' Wives, Midinettes, Jewellers, Shop Messengers, Hotel Guests, Porters, Waiters, Housemaids.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GEORGE A. HIGHLAND

Orchestra under the Direction of ARTHUR WOOD

On the First Night
THE COMPOSER WILL CONDUCT

Programme continued on following pages

Programme

ACT 1.

The Entrance Hall and Lounge of the Hotel Beau Rivage, at Brest, France.

Painted by WALTER HANN.

ACT 2.

The Verandah and Rose Gardens of the Villa Primrose.

Painted by R. C. MCCLEERY.

ACT 3.

A Grand Reception Hall opening into a Ballroom. Hotel Beau Rivage.

Painted by CONRAD TRITSCHLER.

Daily Express

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 19, 1913.

NOISY SCENE AT A THEATRE.

MUSICAL PLAY GREETED WITH CRIES OF "CENSOR."

A scene of great disorder greeted the final fall of the curtain after the production of "Oh! Oh! Delphine" at the Shaftesbury Theatre last night. The gallery raised cries of "Censor, Censor!" and when Mr. Robert Courtneidge attempted to speak, the audience would not listen.

Rarely has a first night seen so boisterous a reception of a new play. The outcries lasted for almost ten minutes, and contents and malcontents fought for the victory. Cries of "Hypocrites!" mixed with those of "Censor!" and it seemed for a moment as though worse might happen.

"OH! OH! DELPHINE."

NEW MUSICAL PLAY AT THE SHAFTESBURY.

Music with a swing; a story with a tangle, a host of lovely girls—and such dresses!—the audience at the Shaftesbury Theatre last night, until the final fall of the curtain, welcomed "Oh! Oh! Delphine" with all their hands.

The new production—book and lyrics by C. M. S. McLellan, author of "The Belle of New York" and "Leah Kleschna"; music by Ivan Caryll, composer of a score of "winners"; founded on the French farce, "Villa Primrose"—with all its splendour and all its glitter, is in its essentials commonplace. The music, for all its swing, its lilt, and its spirit, has little distinction or freshness; the story, for all its tangle, and hustle, and flamboyance, has little wit or invention.

But there are no reservations to be made about the girls and the dresses—also the sumptuous and beautiful scenes. They are superb.

There is also a very attractive company. Mr. Courtice Pounds, even yet, has no song worthy of him, but at least we see and hear him frequently, and Miss Iris Hoey, as dominating and fascinating in musical as in real comedy, becomes better and better every day, and in "Oh! Oh! Delphine" gives us the attraction of personality and the spirit of something a good deal better than the medium in which she appears.

It all happens in Brest. The stage is crowded with French soldiers in dreams of uniforms and "artist's models" whose splendid forms are hardly veiled in ravishing gowns.

More than this it is difficult to explain. Victor Jolibean, artist and military officer, pretends still to be married to his first wife, and Alphonse Bachotte is in the same quandary, for some reason or the other which time, space and the necessity of being understood prevent one explaining. The artist is accompanied by six models for his picture of Venus, and everybody has come from Paris to Brest in order to get on the stage of the Shaftesbury Theatre.

There is plenty of primitive comicality in the thing, and Mr. Passmore is funnier than he has been for a long time. Mr. Fred Lewis and Mr. Reginald Owen help to fill out the picture pleasantly, and once more there are Mr. Pounds, Miss Hoey, and Mr. Welchman to get everything out of the material at their disposal. Miss Jardon, unnecessarily realistically made up, is a striking figure.

The story is not pleasant, although the company and author treat it as inoffensively as the theme permits. But it is curious that Mr. Courtneidge, who stood for sweetness and beauty in "The Arcadians," should have produced "Oh! Oh! Delphine."

Mr. Caryll has several numbers which commanded encores and which will be heard in all the restaurants and on all the organs. Some of his choruses rise above the level of the greater part of the score, and there are always rhythm and spirit in his numbers. Compared with the throb of Vienna and the grace of the Gaiety it falls short, but, such as it is, it is merry and "catchy."

Daily Express

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 19, at 7-45 & Nightly at 7-45.

MATINEES Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-30.

THE ROMANCE OF

NELL GWYNNE

THE KING'S FAVOURITE.

"The Life of Nelly truly shown, from Cole-Yard or Cellar to the Throne." Sir George Etherege, "The Lady of Pleasure"

The Play Presented and Produced by Walter and Fredk. Melville.
Music specially composed by H. Sullivan Brooke.

Characters:

Charles II., King of England	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Lord Villiers ...	Mr. H. WILMOT JACKSON
Lord Brookwell	Mr. FRED. INGRAM
Captain Summers, of the Dragoons ...	Mr. GEORGE MILTON
William, Footman to Nell Gwynne ...	Mr. F. WILLING
"Flash Howard," Knight of the Road	Mr. SAM. LIVESEY
Sir Basil Fairfax, Betrothed to Dorothy ..	Mr. FRANK HARVEY
Sir Edward Westerby, Dorothy's Brother	Mr. HAL. CHARLTON
Ned Hawkshead ... ... } Ruffians	Mr. W. T. SMITH
Joe Midders ... ... }	Mr. RICHARD BOPE
Lady Beaumont }	Miss MAUD ELLIOTT
Lady Amherley } Ladies of the Court	Miss JANET ALEXANDER
Lady Cowleigh }	Miss OLIVE ELTONE
Lady Dorothy Westerby, the King's Ward	Miss KITTY RICIMER
Louise, Comtesse de Fréville	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY
Cyclops, a Rogue	Mr. FRED. MORGAN
Mother Cyclops, his Wife ...	Miss POLLY MARSH
Kate, Lady Dorothy's Maid	Miss CONSTANCE BACHNER
Monseigneur, Political Agent ...	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Chevalier D'Arbois, French Envoy ...	Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Edwards .. ... } Soldiers of the King	Mr. FRED. ELSWORTHY
Jackson ... ... } Footmen	Mr. CHARLES WINGATE
Chapman	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Chiffinch, the King's Page ...	Mr RAYMOND WOOD
Miles, Sir Basil's Servant	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
and
Nell Gwynne, an Orange Girl	Miss TITTELL-BRUNE
Courtiers, Guards, Ruffians, etc.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

ACT 1.	Scene 1.	... ...	Apartment in Whitehall Palace. The King and his Ward.
	Scene 2.	... ...	A Turning off the Strand. The Monarch who could not Laugh.
	Scene 3.	... .	The Garret in Drury Lane. Meeting of Nell Gwynne and Charles II.
ACT 2.	Scene 1.	... ...	The House at Chelsea. The Abduction of Lady Dorothy.
	Scene 2.	... ...	Garden of Hampton Court. Nell Gwynne Plays a New Part.
ACT 3.	Scene 1.	... ...	Nell Gwynne's House. The King and his Mistress
	Scene 2.	... .	Outside the Falcon Inn.
	Scene 3.		The Thieves' Kitchen at the Falcon Inn. A Night of Adventure.
ACT 4.		... ...	Hampton Court, King's Palace. The Conspirators Surprised.

"And the Women do very well, but above all little Nelly." (Pepys' Diary, December 8th, 1666.

Wigs and Costumes designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, 41 Wardour Street, W.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS, and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE will play the following selections:

(1)	OVERTURE - -	"Nell Gwynne" - - -	E. German
(2)	SELECTION -	"Pirates of Penzance" - - -	Sullivan
(3)	SUITE - -	"Old English Dances" - - -	Cowen
(4)	SELECTION -	"Gipsy Love" - - - -	Lehar

The Programme of Music is subject to alterations according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

Of the many Nell Gwynne plays since Douglas Jerrold's two-act gem bearing that name, the most melodramatic is the one produced at the Lyceum last Wednesday evening under the title of which very much reminded me of sundry Surrey-side and East-End dramas of my very early playgoing youth—more especially of that long-celebrated sanguifulminous melodrama "Whitefriars." Some notion of the Lyceum play's sanguifulminosity may be gleaned from the statement that in the course of its four acts the following episodes are shown: The abduction of the King's ward, Lady Dorothy Westerby; the pursuit of the abductors, Louise Comtesse de Fréville and the Chevalier D'Arbois, by the abductee's gallant lover, Sir Basil Fairfax, and his many sword combats and dangers during that pursuit; the strangling of Lady Dorothy's brother by a one-eyed desperado of Alsatia, one Cyclops, by order of the aforesaid abductors; these foreign villains' plot to kill the King; the frustration of their knavish tricks by Nelly, disguised as a Herefordshire sailor-boy; Nell's capture and being left bound in the Alsatian inn, just set on fire by the plotters; her rescue by her Royal master, who has followed on in disguise, because he is jealous of Ellen; and the ex-orange wench's final triumph over all her enemies and her restoration to that glory which, as we all know, her fickle regal protector did not allow her to enjoy long. Running through the play is a Claude Duval-like High Toby merchant, known as "Flash Howard." This Knight of the Road has long loved Nell, and, true lover that he is, he is ever at hand, with pistol and cutlass, ready to slay all who would dare upset Nelly—aye, even the King himself! For his doughty deeds, especially in helping Ellen to foil the would-be regicides, His Majesty knights Flash Howard at the finish.

"Nell Gwynne, the King's Favourite,"

* * *

Of course it is easy to find flaws in plays of this rapid rushaway kind. Really, this Nell Gwynne drama is a good specimen of its class, and it is acted in the proper spirit—

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

On Tuesday Evening, February 25th,
at 8.30 o'clock,

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRESENT THE FARCE IN THREE ACTS,

ENTITLED

The Schoolmistress

By ARTHUR PINERO

The Hon. Vere Queckett	Mr. DION BOUCICAULT
Rear-Admiral Archibald Rankling, C.B. ... (H.M. Flagship "Pandora")	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Lieutenant John Mallory	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Mr John Saunders ... (Mr. Mallory's nephew, of the Training Ship "Dexterous")	Master C. SAINT EVE
Mr Reginald Paulover ...	Mr. STAFFORD HILLIARD By kind permission of Miss Marie Tempest
Mr. Otto Bernstein ... ... (a Popular Composer)	Mr. WALTER WESTWOOD
Tyler (a Servant)	Mr. ARCHIE McCAIG
Gott	Mr. DOUGLAS MUNRO
Jaffray	Mr OLIVER G JOHNSTON
Miss Dyott ... ... (Principal of Volumnia College for Daughters of Gentlemen)	Miss WINIFRED EMERY
Mrs. Rankling	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT
Dinah	Miss MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
Gwendoline Hawkins	Miss CRISSY BELL
Ermyntrude Johnson	Miss NELL CARTER
Peggy Hesslerigge (an Articled Pupil) ...	Miss HILDA TREVELYAN
Jane Chipman	Miss LILIAN MASON

Time - 1885.

ACT I. THE MYSTERY. -
Reception Room at Volumnia College, Volumnia House, near Portland Place.

ACT II. THE PARTY.
Class Room at Volumnia College.

ACT III. NIGHTMARE.
Morning Room at Admiral Rankling's in Portland Place.

Preceded at 8 by the Kerbstone Episode, entitled

"A PENNY BUNCH"

By A. NEIL LYONS and HENRY SETON

Sarah Moon	Miss LILIAN MASON
Poppy Dyke	Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD
	(By the courtesy of Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie)
Professor Alf. Beeny	Mr. GEORGE DESMOND

Scene - The Pavement

Programme of Music

SELECTION ...	"Pleasure Land"	J. Neat
POT-POURRI	"Songs of 1885-6"	Williams
SELECTION ...	"Rip Van Winkle"	Planquette
FANTASIE ...	"Les Cloches de Corneville" ...	Planquette

Musical Director - - Mr. EDWARD JONES

Dresses by Madame BLANCHE, Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN and Mrs. CLARKE.
Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Scenery by Messrs. WAYNE & Co.

Manager - -
Stage Manager - - for Miss Trevelyan - Mr. CECIL PAGET
Assistant Stage Manager and Mr. Gwenn - Mr. GEORGE DESMOND
Mr. OLIVER G. JOHNSTON

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietor - - SIR JOSEPH BEECHAM
General Manager - - A. M. LOADER

TUESDAY, MARCH 4TH, 1913, AT 9 P.M.

Sir Joseph Beecham

PRESENTS

A NEW COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

"HER SIDE OF THE HOUSE"

BY

Mr. LECHMERE WORRALL & Miss ATTÉ HALL.

CAST:

Lord Arlington (Chou Chou) - - -	GODFREY TEARLE
Duke of Vernay - - - - -	SPENCER TREVOR
Lord Gerald Cholmley - - - -	HAROLD DEACON
Guy Errington - - - - - -	PHILIP ANTHONY
Monsieur Teste - - - - - -	ALFRED TOOSÉ
Simpson - - - - - - -	JOHN PROBERT
Phillips - - - - - - -	HENRY WYNN
Summers - - - - - - -	C. L. STUART
Mr. Perkins - - - - - -	RICHARD CARFAX
Cecile - - - - - - -	DULCE MUSGRAVE
Mme. De Brienne - - - - -	HELEN FERRERS
Peggy Tresyllian - - - - -	HELEN GREEN
Lady Heathcote - - - - -	JOY CHATWYN
Victorine - - - - - - -	JANE COOPER
Marie - - - - - - -	MANORA THEW

ACT I. Madame De Brienne's house in the country. (A few months elapse.) (Walter Johnstone).

ACT II. Cecile's Boudoir in Lord Arlington's house in Carlton House Terrace. (W. Hann).

ACT III. The Lounge Hall at Carlton House Terrace. (W. Hann).

Play produced by Miss ROSINA FILIPPI.

IT is a very difficult matter to have to say the right thing about the new play by Lechmere Worrall and (Miss) Atté Hall, called "Her Side of the House," that was presented at the Aldwych Theatre on Tuesday evening. Sir Joseph Beecham, the proprietor of the Aldwych Theatre, is sincerely anxious to give the public the very best theatrical fare he can find. He is extremely generous and fair, and he has proved over and over again that he is not afraid to spend money in management. Notwithstanding all his efforts, however, he has not got very far with any of his productions, and it is hard to see how "Her Side of the House" can add any glory to the Aldwych.

Better Fortune Deserved.

This play called "Her Side of the House" is concerned with a marriage of convenience between a rich and attractive young girl and an impecunious young peer. To the amazement of her friends, the young wife decides on her wedding day that there shall be no honeymoon trip; they shall simply go up to her husband's house in London and occupy different sides of the mansion until she decides whether or not she loves him. To relieve the monotony of this sort of life she takes two friends along with her, and as the man, Lord Cholmeley, was an old admirer, and she still continues to accept his adoration, her young husband, now fast making money for himself in the City, gathers that she wants him to clear out. It will be readily seen how absurdly theatrical the whole business is. Yet it drags on, until at the end of three acts the young peer, who, we are told, has all along been in love with his wife, discovers that she, too, is in love with him. Such material as this gave no opportunities for acting. Mr. Godfrey Tearle looked all right as the bridegroom; Miss Dulce Musgrave looked sweet and pretty as the bride. Mr. Spencer Trever was comical as an old duke, and Mr. Harold Deecon in the very ungrateful part of a blackguard showed that he possesses the gift of acting. If Mr. Deacon gets a chance in a good play he will do well.

PRECEDED AT 8.15 O'CLOCK BY

"THE BROKEN STRING"

A DRAMATIC EPISODE BY

Mr. EDALE LATCHFORD.

CAST:

Sir Richard Vane - - - - -	DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Ben Bowden - - - - - -	RICHARD CARFAX
Margaret Vane - - - - -	EVELYN HOPE

SCENE - Sir Richard Vane's Town House.

The Broken String is a more or less pathetic, if rather naive, little piece, with a sort of Middleman root idea, dealing with the stealing of a working engineer's invention by his employer's son. In this way, by patenting Ben Bowden's plane for a contrivance for the conversion of waste scraps of paper and leather into a substitute for wood, Richard Vane had not only saved his firm from bankruptcy, but laid the foundations of his own fortune, and gained a title for himself. Years later, when he is the powerful Sir Richard, his charitably disposed daughter, Margaret, insists upon bringing in an old man, who is playing the violin in the snow outside. As the girl questions her prospective "old pensioner," the itinerant musician slowly reveals the details of his spoiled life, and it becomes apparent to Margaret that her father had amassed wealth at the price of Bowden's failure. She tries to persuade Vane to resign everything to the man whom he had wronged, and the musician seems disposed to accept the arrangement, with the rather odd proviso that she shall accept the position of heiress, when Bowden, as he is playing, falls back in a chair, with the ejaculation "The string is brokon," and, maybe, this meant that he was dying, thus saving Vane from an awkward dilemma.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1913.

"MILESTONES" A YEAR OLD.

"Milestones" celebrated its anniversary at the Royalty Theatre last evening with the same cast as that which drew smiles and tears from the first audience a year ago.

Twelve months have not affected the charm of Messrs. Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch's comedy. The linked love stories of three generations have lost none of their romance because every evening for twelve months these stories have been enacted in the same place by the same clever people to audiences that in almost every instance know by heart all the quaint and lovable incidents of the narrative.

Last night the anniversary audience exhibited an attitude of almost reverence for the play, and by reserving their applause to the end paid the highest possible compliment to the authors and the theatre.

J. W.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Saturday, March 8th, 1913, at 8.15,

MISS MARIE TEMPEST

PRODUCES

"The Handful."

A Comedy in Four Acts.

By WILLIAM GORDON EDWARDS.

Sir Arthur Wetheral, K.C.	Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Richard Stern	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Tom Wetheral	Mr. STEFF MACDONALD
Lord Brandon	Mr. JOHN ASTLEY
Landlord of Inn	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Butler	Mr. GEORGE C. BROWNE
A Fisherman	Mr. GEORGE BELLAMY
Lady Wetheral	Miss MARIE TEMPEST
Joyce Wetheral	Miss MARGARET BRUHLING
Maid	Miss EVELYN BEAUMONT

ACT I. THE BILLIARD ROOM AT LADY WETHERAL'S HOUSE IN LONDON.

ACT II. THE PARLOUR OF THE "WHITE HART" A FISHING VILLAGE IN DEVONSHIRE.

A FORTNIGHT LATER

ACT III. THE SAME A WEEK LATER. ACT IV. THE SAME EVENING OF THE SAME DAY.

TIME - - THE PRESENT DAY.

The Play produced by Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE.

[illegible] Hats by MME. HAYWARD, 25, New Bond Street, W. Dresses by LUCILE, Ltd., 2, Hanover [illegible] Dresses by MISS HANLEY Sykes of 174, New Bond Street, W. and LUCILE, Ltd. Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., [illegible] Road, N.W. Properties, &c., by J. BURNETT & Co., 22, Garrick Street, Covent Garden. Wigs by CLARKSON. The Billiard Table supplied by THURSTON & Co., Ltd.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

The Orchestra under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON will play the following Music

Overture "Marguerite"	Faust	Valse ...	"Le Bois Enchanté" ... O. Roberts
Ballet ... "Les Sylphides"	Tschaikowsky	Selection	"Celeste Aida" ... ... Verdi
Intermezzo "La Source"	Gautier	Scotch Step	"Fun by Moonlight" ... Bonnet
Selection "Three Dukes"	Germain
Waltz "Sweet Spring"	Ogens, R.	The Orchestra & Musical Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore St., W.
Overture "Diplomatic Amour"	Sidney	Grand Pianoforte by BLUTHNER & Co., 1, Wigmore St., W.
Selection "Le Capitaine Fatrôl" ...	Monckton

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

Prices: Orchestra Stalls 4s. 6d. Balcony Stalls 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 4s. Pit Stalls 4s. Gallery 1s. Box Office open to 10 p.m. Telephone No. Gerrard 7285

Business Manager (For Miss Marie Tempest) ... ... HERBERT ROSS

Business Manager (For Frank Curzon) ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

Waters, J. Plays

MISS MARIE TEMPEST'S NEW PLAY.

"The Handful" at the Prince of Wales' Last Night.

COMEDY BY YOUNG AUTHOR.

Sir Arthur Wetheral, K.C. ..... Mr. W. Graham Browne
Richard Stern ..... Mr. Charles V. France
Tom Wetheral ..... Mr. Steff Macdonald
Lord Brandon ..... Mr. John Astley
Landlord of Inn ..... Mr. Horton Cooper
Butler ..... Mr. George C. Browne
A Fisherman ..... Mr. George Bellamy
Lady Wetheral ..... Miss Marie Tempest
Joyce Wetheral ..... Miss Margaret Bruhling
Maid ..... Miss Evelyn Beaumont

Miss Marie Tempest possesses a rare instinct for discovering plays that provide her with an effective acting part, and the new four-act comedy entitled "The Handful," which she oresented at the Prince of Wales Theatre last night has at least the advantage of securing her some very fair opportunities to charm and to look charming. The story that makes the play is somewhat slight, and its title is the description applied to its central character—a fascinating grass widow with a grown-up son and daughter. Fancy Miss Tempest in a play acting the part of a mother. One hesitates to believe it, though there we found her last evening, and none the less piquant and merry because of such responsibilities.

"How old do you think I am?" she asked the keeper of the little hotel in Devonshire to which she had retired from the gaieties of London, and the fellow, determined to please and to tell the truth, answered, "If you are the mother of the young gentleman and lady you are forty; if you are their stepmother you are only twenty-nine." And so it was with the audience . . . she might have been twenty-nine. Sometimes she just looked a little more; she did so when the boy and girl she loved asked her to give them a chance; to retire, as it were, from fascinating all the people who came into their home in London, and to give them a chance to shine as host and hostess. And so it came about that "young Lady Wetheral" went down into Devonshire and being lonely and having nothing better to do, fascinated the first likely man she fell in with. Her day of reckoning came, however, when the man transferred his affections from the mother to the daughter, and the "Handful" had to recognise at last that youth will be served.

The Purpose of the Play.

In this story the disappointment led to no tragedy. The grass widow had common-sense. She had pretty feet, too. Her wandering husband returned to his first love. Her pretty shoes attracted his eye. Her pretty ways attracted his heart again. The love story was renewed and the "Handful"—when the curtain was falling last night—was destined once more to become the fascinating head of a house in London, not Devon.

The play, it will be seen, has the making of a pleasant evening's entertainment. To fulfil its purpose, and the acting of Miss Tempest, Mr. C. V. France, and Mr. Graham Browne fits it perfectly. The girl is prettily played by Miss Margaret Bruhling, and the boy (a tiresome part) by Mr. Steff Macdonald. The young author of the play, Mr. William Gordon Edwards, has never before written for the theatre. A few years ago he belonged to the now non-existent "Unacted Authors Society," but, being a son of a magnate in the rubber market, he could afford to wait. He can write amusing dialogue, and will be heard of again. He looked very nervous when he took his call last night.

J. W.

5-3

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S. S.W.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30 (MATINEES at 2.30)

WILL BE ACTED

OPEN WINDOWS

A New Play, in Three Acts,

By A. E. W. MASON

John Herrick	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Sir Henry Cluffe	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Captain Cluffe	REGINALD MALCOLM
Philip Brook	SYDNEY VALENTINE
Henri Fournier	A. E. BENEDICT
Hobbs	H. TEMPLETON
Footman	JOHN RIDLEY
Howard	AUSTIN FEHRMAN
Lady Cluffe	MAY WHITTY
Cynthia Herrick	IRENE VANBRUGH
Elsie Herrick	ROSALIE TOLLER

The First Two Acts take place in the Library at Highfields, the house of Sir Henry Cluffe; and the Third in Herrick's house in London three days later.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY G. SACKMANN.

INTERVALS: 10 Minutes between the Acts.

Waters, J.
Plays

147
G
STALLS
Mar. 11.
1913
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS PART

5-8

THREE acts go in the making of "Open Windows," by Mr. A. E. W. Mason, the new play produced by Sir George Alexander at the St. James's Theatre, and although there is no point at which the interest is thrilling there is enough happening all the time to keep one's attention on the alert. The central character is John Herrick, Home Secretary, and the story begins when he and his wife (Miss Irene Vanbrugh) arrive at a country house the owner of which, assisted by a secretary, is to coach him up in the details of some measure intended to be of benefit to those who labour in pottery works. This secretary (unknown to the Home Secretary) had, years before, previous to a scandal that compelled a change of name), been the lover of the girl who was now Mrs. Herrick, and on the evening of the visit to this country house Herrick for the first time learnt of this episode in his wife's life, and learnt, too, that she had married him only when her lover went away and she knew that before a year would elapse she would be a mother.

* * * * *

The painful moment, or rather the most painful moment, arrived with this discovery of Herrick's. He made no scene. Quietly he said he would go out of his wife's life. She would have her girl, the child was not his. Then a few days later he changes his plans. His wife he knew had loved him ever since their wedding day. They would forget the past. And on that reconciliation the play ended. The weakness of the play is its want of action.

* * * * * J.W.

53

NEW THEATRE

E
12/3/13
Orch. Stall
L 198
RIGHT
To be retained

MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH'S Season.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12th, 1913, at 7.45, and following Evenings at 8.30.

"BOUGHT & PAID FOR"

By GEORGE BROADHURST.

Robert Stafford	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
James Gilley	Mr. FRANK CRAVEN
Oku	Mr. GIRO KIM
A Waiter	Mr. J. H. STEWART
Virginia Blaine	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Fanny Blaine	Miss ALICE CRAWFORD
Josephine	Miss SONIA BOURCARD

The Time is the Present. The action takes place in New York City.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES.

ACT I.	Robert Stafford's Rooms in an Apartment Hotel. Night
ACT II.	Mrs. Stafford's Boudoir. Two years later. Night
ACT III.	Mrs. Stafford's Boudoir. The next morning
ACT IV.	James Gilley's Flat. Three months later.

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. GEORGE BROADHURST and Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

Miss Alexandra Carlisle's Evening Gown and Cloak in Act II. by Paquin, Ltd.; Negligé and Gown worn in Act III. by Doucet, Ltd., 21, Albemarle Street. Miss Alice Crawford's Gown in Act II. by Mme. Handley Seymour, 47, New Bond Street.

Floor Coverings throughout the Theatre by Hindes, Ltd., London and Birmingham.

Scenery and Properties by Hall & Co., Law and Bert Tuckman, of New York. Furniture by Oetzmann & Co. Lamp Shades by Spence. Electric Fittings by Verity & Co.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Before the Play
Overture .. "Back to the Constantinople" Henri Lucas . Two Songs without Words .. .. .. Mine

Before Act 2.
Russian Boatmen's Song .. .. arr. by A. Schmid Violin Solo .. .. Selected .. ..
"An Maine" .. .. Godard Mr. ALBERT CAZABON
Prelude to Act I .. .. Albert Cazabon Slavonic Dance, No. 5, in G minor .. .. .. D

Musical Director - - Mr. ALBERT CAZABON.

MATINEE—Saturday, March 15th, and every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

Acting Manager	for Mr. Allan Aynesworth	.. ..	Mr. HARRY ELMER
Stage Manager		.. ..	Mr. HARRY CANE
Business Manager	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	.. ..	Mr. H. JALLAND

Authors, J.
Plays

63

"Bought and Paid For."

On Wednesday evening Mr. Allan Aynesworth presented another American play at the New Theatre and got a genuine success of laughter with it. The new play is called "Bought and Paid For." Its author's name is George Broadhurst, and the scene is New York. The acting of a young American, Mr. Frank Craven, is good enough and funny enough to make all London want to witness it, but it is to the actor and not the author that I would hand the bouquets. The drama in "Bought and Pair For" is not novel, and I saw no novelty of treatment.

* * * * *

It is the story of a New York millionaire who marries a charming girl employed as a telephone operator in an hotel. He gives her everything that money can buy and she loves him for himself, not his money. When therefore he comes home drunk and insists on paying her rather brutal attentions she resents. In his anger at being repulsed he tells her he has bought her. Next morning he is contrite. That does not satisfy her; he must promise never to drink again. He says he never did anything he was told he must do, so she goes out of his home in the poor clothes she brought into it, and her sister and her brother-in-law, who depended indirectly on the great man, went back with her to poverty. With the reconciliation in Act IV. the play came to an end. It is a very obvious story, undistinguished by any particular merit. It is as much like life as any melodrama, and no more need be said except that Mr Aynesworth and Miss Sybil Carlisle acted very nicely. The thing, however, that will make this play a delight to thousands of people will be the acting of Mr. Craven as James Gilley, the grocer's clerk. The roars of laughter that followed his quaint phrases stopped the play again and again. He was simply irresistibly funny, and there is no measuring the value he is to this play. Mr. Girokim (a Japanese) was very, very good as a Japanese valet, but Miss Alice Crawford was asked to do a great deal when cast to play an American character part.

J. W.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - - LOUIS MEYER

Under the Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

THURSDAY, MARCH 20th, 1913, at 8 o'clock.

"THE GREATEST WISH"

A Comedy, in a Prologue and Three Acts, by

E. TEMPLE THURSTON

(Adapted from his novel "The Greatest Wish in the World.")

Father O'Leary		ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Stephen Gale		FARREN SOUTAR
Pinchers		THOMAS SIDNEY
Nicholas Gadd		FRANK J. ARLTON
Michael		W. S. HARTFORD
Carter Paterson's Man		ARCHIBALD MACLEAN
Longshoreman		W. HUBERT
Mrs. Parfitt		HENRIETTA WATSON
Mrs. Gooseberry		BARBARA GOTT
Mrs. Coburn		BEATRICE MAY
Peggy		ISABEL JEANS
Lizzie		AIMÉE DE BURGH
The Reverend Mother	Ursuline Order	MAUD MILTON
Mother Mary Carthage	Ursuline Order	NINA BENTLEY
Sister Mary Conception	Ursuline Order	AGNES THORNTON
Sister Mary Catherine	Ursuline Order	FLORENCE PIGGOT
Sister Mary Berchmans	Ursuline Order	EDITH KING
Elizabeth		JOYCE ROBEY

The action of the Prologue passes seventeen years ago, and takes place in the Presbytery of Ss. Peter and Paul's Chapel, in a little street in the neighbourhood of Covent Garden, London. Here, too, the events of Acts I. and II. and the first scene of Act III. occur, but the latter scene passes in the Sacristy.

The second scene of Act III. is laid in the Garden of the Ursuline Convent, Cappoquin, County Waterford, Ireland.

Scenery, Act I. and Act III., Scene 1, by ARTHUR PULLINGER; and Act III. Scene 2, by WILLIAM SACKMANN.

Furniture supplied by SPILLMAN & Co., 101-102 St. Martin's Lane, W.C.
Wigs by Fox.

Programme of Music.

1.	OVERTURE ...	... "Polonaise"	Chopin
2.	ENTR'ACT ...	(a) "Rêve"	A D'Ambrosio
		(b) "Chanson Triste" ...	Tschaikowsky
3.	ENTR'ACT	(a) "The Shepherd's Even Song"	Brockett
		(b) "Rêve d'Avenir (Valse)	Davies
4.	SELECTION ...	... "Emerald Isle"	Sullivan & German
5.	MARCH ...	"L'Amour Qui Rit"	Christiné

Business Manager	(For Arthur Bourchier) ...	THOMAS STEVENS
Assistant Stage Managers	,, ...	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY	CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director ...	,, ...	ALBERT FOX
Acting Manager ...	(For Garrick Renters, Ltd.) ...	JOSÉ G. LEVY

GENERAL MANAGER ... (For Arthur Bourchier) ... WILLIAM BURCHILL
(To whom all communications must be addressed.)

"The Greatest Wish."

Simple, pleasant, homely folk, in simple surroundings, make of "The Greatest Wish," at the Garrick Theatre, an entertainment that has something to recommend it. There is not much drama in it. There is no great thrill; but there is ever present in it an atmosphere of homely sentiment, and although for a moment the summer day is darkened by a cloud, the sun shines out glowing at the end and everyone is made happy. The hopeful note is surely something to be grateful for. It does not make Temple Thurston's play a particularly good play, but at least it makes it a pleasant entertainment, and Father O'Leary, the chief character in it, happy, good-natured, genial Irish priest, is worth going a very long way to meet.

* * * * *

Practically the whole of "The Greatest Wish" is played in Father O'Leary's house attached to a little church near Covent Garden, and the interest begins where the priest, finding a baby left at the font of the altar steps, adopts it. Then seventeen years pass and the baby has grown to be a pretty young woman who has attracted the admiration of a young sailor lodging across the way from Father O'Leary's little home. How the sailor goes away and how Peggy, thinking he has deserted her, goes to a convent in Ireland to become a nun, and how the sailor returning home and explaining everything satisfactorily to Father O'Leary, races off to the convent with the good priest and gets his Peggy back again, furnish the incidents of a pretty little romance in humble life. It was all very well acted by everybody, but Mr. Bourchier as Father O'Leary comes first, and then Mr. Farren Soutar, Miss Isabel Jeans, and Miss Henrietta Watson.

Waters, J.
Plays

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Saturday, March 22, at 7-45 and
EVERY EVENING AT 7-45.
Special Matinee, Easter Monday at 2-30

MATINEES, Wednesdays & Saturdays, at 2-30

SHAKESPEAREAN PRODUCTION.

SHAKESPEARE'S PLAY

ROMEO AND JULIET

Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Music by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Romeo	Mr. Harcourt Williams
Mercutio	Mr. Gordon Bailey
Tybalt	Mr. Philip Hewland
Paris	Mr. Henry Hargreaves
Benvolio	Mr. Frederick Leister
Montague	Mr. John Melton
Capulet	Mr. Rothbury Evans
Friar Laurence...	Mr. Alfred Brydone
Friar John	Mr. George Fellowes
Kinsman to Capulet	Mr. Alfred Weston
Apothecary	Mr. Victor Lorraine
Escalus, Prince of Verona	Mr. Asheton Tonge
Peter	Mr. Willie Garvey
Abram	Mr. H. H. Stanton
Gregory	Mr. Percy Bray
Balthasar	Mr. Eric Snowdon
Officer of the Guard	Mr. Charles Cleave
Page to Paris	Mr. W. T. Smith
Lady Montague	Miss Rose Withers
Lady Capulet	Miss Grace Lester
Nurse	Miss Blanche Stanley
Juliet	Miss Lilian Hallows

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. GORDON JEFFERSON

Act 1.

Scene 1	... A Public Place in Verona
Scene 2	... ... Street in Verona
Scene 3	Outside the Capulets' House
Scene 4	... ... The Ball Room

Act 2.

Scene 1	Outside the Capulets' House
Scene 2	... ... The Garden
Scene 3	... Friar Laurence's Cell
Scene 4	... ... Street in Verona
Scene 5	Terrace of Capulet's Garden
Scene 6	... Friar Laurence's Cell
Scene 7	... A Public Place in Verona

Act 3.

Scene 1	The Terrace of the Garden
Scene 2	... ... The Friar's Cell
Scene 3	... ...Juliet's Bedchamber
Scene 4	... ... The Friar's Cell
Scene 5	... ...Juliet's Bedchamber

Act 4.

Scene 1	... .. Street in Mantua
Scene 2	... ... The Friar's Cell
Scene 3	... ... Outside the Vault
Scene 4	...The Tomb of the Capulets

Waters, J.
Plays

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED.

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON
AND
Mr. ARTHUR COLLINS

Request the pleasure of

Presence on

Saturday Evening, Mar. 22. 1913

At 8 o'clock

To witness the Performance of

SHAKESPEARE'S TRAGEDY OF

Hamlet

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

MR. FORBES-ROBERTSON.

FAREWELL TO LONDON.

SHAKESPEARE'S TRAGEDY OF

Hamlet

Claudius (King of Denmark)		WALTER RINGHAM
Hamlet		J. FORBES-ROBERTSON
Horatio (Friend to Hamlet)		S. A. COOKSON
Polonius (Lord Chamberlain)		J. H. BARNES
Laertes (his Son)		ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY
Ghost of Hamlet's Father		PERCY RHODES
Fortinbras (Prince of Norway)		GRENDON BENTLEY
Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, Osric	Courtiers	MONTAGUE RUTHERFURD; E. A ROSS; GEORGE HAYES
Marcellus, Bernardo	Officers	A. ROBERTS; A. RICHARDS
Francisco (a Soldier)		E. ADENEY
Reynaldo (Servant to Polonius) ...		R. ERICSON
First Player		ROBERT ATKINS
Second Player		R. ANDEAN
First Gravedigger		J. H. RYLEY
Second Gravedigger		S. T. PEARCE
Priest		R. MONTAGU
Gertrude (Queen of Denmark) ...		Miss ADELINE BOURNE
Player Queen		Miss OLIVE RICHARDSON
Ophelia (Daughter to Polonius) ...		Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT

Lords, Ladies, Soldiers, Attendants.

General Manager	For FORBES-ROBERTSON	PERCY BURTON
Treasurer		H. B. FITZGIBBON
Stage Manager		ALEXANDER CASSY
Musical Director		PERCY E. FLETCHER
Assistant Manager		RAY HENDERSON

Synopsis of Scenery

ACT I.

Scene 1 ... ... The Platform Before the Castle
Scene 2 ... ... The Room of State in the Castle
Scene 3 ... ... The Platform
Scene 4 ... ... A More Remote Part

Interval of Six Minutes.

ACT II.

Scene ... ... A Room of State in the Castle

No Interval.

ACT III.

Scene 1 ... ... A Room of State in the Castle
Scene 2 ... ... Another Room in the Same

Interval of Seven Minutes.

ACT IV.

Scene .. .. The Orchard

Interval of Six Minutes.

ACT V.

Scene 1 ... ... The Churchyard
Scene 2 ... ... Near the Castle
Scene 3 .. .. A Hall in the Castle

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER and HAWES CRAVEN.

Music Programme selected from "HAMLET."
Music by Tschaikowsky.

N.B.—It is particularly requested that the audience do not leave their seats between Acts II. and III., as there will be no interval.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Secretary - R. H. LINDO Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS
Business Manager - - - SIDNEY SMITH

THE HAPPY ISLAND

Derek Arden		HERBERT TREE
Andrew Remmington		NORMAN McKINNEL
Gilbert Hall		ERIC MATURIN
Mortimer Hunt		NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Lord Somerfield		ARTHUR WOOD
Sir Gordon Stephens		A. SCOTT CRAVEN
James Blake		HENRY SCOTT
Baxter		A. E. GEORGE
Groves		FRANCIS CHAMIER
Rorotu	Natives	J. FISHER WHITE
Jadedik	Natives	E. O. SMYTHSON
Captain Bainbrig		HENRY MORRELL
Lieutenant Hawes		STANLEY HOWLETT
Midshipman Merryweather		REGINALD GRASDORFF
Rogers	Blnejackets	ROY BYFORD
Williams	Blnejackets	BEN FIELD
Murphy	Blnejackets	ARCHIBALD FORBES
Smith	Blnejackets	GEORGE LAUNDY
Clair Remmington		PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Lady Agatha Pangbourne		FRANCES DILLON
Ruby Pardue		PATRICIA HANNE
Alice Forder		MARGOT BRIGDEN
Eva Barnes		MARJORIE DYSON
Jababa	A Native Woman	MARJORIE PATTERSON

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager · SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

THE

HAPPY ISLAND.

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS BY JAMES BERNARD FAGAN.

FOUNDED ON THE HUNGARIAN OF MELCHIOR LENGYEL.

TO-NIGHT AT 7 PUNCTUALLY. 24 March

SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8.30

Synopsis of Scenery

ACT I.

A Room in Andrew Remmington's House in London—Joseph Harker.

ACT II. AND ACT III.

SCENES 1 & 2—The Happy Island in the South Pacific—Joseph Harker.

The Play Produced by Sir HERBERT TREE.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"A Comedy"	Hamilton Harty
	AFTER ACT I.
SERENADE		Percy Pitt
	AFTER ACT II.
SUITE DE BALLET	"Nuit d Egypte"	A. Arensky
	AFTER ACT III.
THE BAMBOULA		T. Coleridge Taylor

The incidental Music composed by Adolf Schmid.

Uniforms and Native Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, W.C.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS, at 2.15.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - - HENRY DANA.

ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.

"The Happy Island."

Sir Herbert Tree's new play is a drama in three acts by the Hungarian author Melchior Lengyel, and in its English version, by James B. Fagan, prepared for His Majesty's Theatre, is called "The Happy Island." It is another story of two men and a woman. One of the men is rich. His business interests in distant parts of the world cause him to neglect his young wife, and on the evening of his return to London after a two years' absence he discovers that she has an intrigue with a witty man about town whose chief troubles are his debts.

Ex-Army Officer as Actor.

The reception held at the millionaire's London house on the night of his return makes perhaps the most attractive portion of the play's entertainment. A motley crowd of backbiters discussing absent friends is amusing enough, and its unconcern when it suddenly finds that Derek Arden (Sir Herbert Tree), the chief subject of their gossip and the recognised admirer of their hostess, is among them adds an uncomfortable piquancy to the situation. It is just as well to mention here that in this scene two very small parts (that never appear in the story after Act I.) are particularly well acted, one of them being in the hands of Mr. Scott Craven, who as a character actor should one day make a big success; the other small part is excellently well done by Mr. Arthur Wood (a son of Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood), who recently left the Army to go on the music-hall stage.

Not a "Thriller."

This first act scene of the reception ends, as it ought to do, in strong drama. The husband gives the other man a plain hint that he knows enough to justify strong action. He does not, however, wish to push matters to an extremity. The wit has said he could make good workers of the Islanders of the South Pacific. Well! he will take him at his word. Let the Waster go out there and prove it. If he succeeds he can have £30,000 for his trouble. The other man, to save the woman, goes out there. He exerts extraordinary influence over the natives, and then, suddenly converted, or perverted, advises them not to work. Of course the employer goes out to the island. So does the wife. But the Waster has turned preacher, and rebel, and the play ends when a landing party from a British cruiser puts a finish to his life, and leaves his body to the natives. However interesting the story might have been made, it certainly is not thrilling in performance. It was taken slowly enough to have injured a much stronger drama, and although it is beautifully mounted and has an accompaniment of beautiful music, it leaves the spectator quite cold. Miss Phyllis Neilson Terry, Mr. Norman McKinnel, Mr. A. E. George, and Sir Herbert Tree deserve better material to work on than this Hungarian drama provides.

STRAND
THEATRE, W.C.

24 March

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

EVERY EVENING AT 8-45.

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS A REVIVAL OF

"The Woman in the Case"

A Play in Four Acts, by

CLYDE FITCH.

Claire Forster	VIOLET VANBRUGH
Margaret Rolfe	NORA LANCASTER
Mrs. Hughes	MARY GRIFFITHS
Elsie Brewster	GWENDA WREN
Dora Winter	RITA JONSON
Louise	MONICA WEBB
Tompson	WM. F. GRANT
Julian Rolfe	HERBERT SLEATH
Klauffsky	E. DAGNALL
Jimmy O'Neill	J. PARISH ROBERTSON
Walters	MARTIN HENRY
Inspector	ARTHUR BELL
1st Warder	LAMBERT PLUMMER
2nd Warder	LAWRENCE BURTON

Preceded at 2-15 and 8-15, by

"THE MORNING POST,"

By MORLEY ROBERTS and HENRY SETON.

Bertram Michelmore	RUDGE HARDING
Mrs. Eve Michelmore	VERA BERINGER
Chalmers	W. R. STAVELEY

Scene: Dining Room of the Michelmores.

The Playlet produced by Mr. STANLEY DREWITT.

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDE'S, Ltd., London and Birmingham.

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS NECESSITATED THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-15.

Business Manager	BERNARD HISHIN
Stage Manager	MARTIN HENRY

"The Woman in the Case" is preceded by a little play which attracted attention immediately when it was produced the other day at a special matinée given by Miss Esmé Beringer. "The Morning Post," by Mr. Morley Roberts and "Henry Seton" (whom everybody knows to be Miss Vera Beringer), tells how, during the absence of her pompous fool of a husband, a young and charming woman spends the night from home. She stayed, as she explains to her returned lord, with her female cousin, who was alone at a hotel, and they went to see "Macbeth" at the Theatre Royal. And then the husband opens the paper and sees that during the performance the Theatre Royal was burned to the ground. It is in the manner of the discovery and its handling that the dramatists show the very best of their skill. The end might have been commonplace, and they have made it extremely effective. There is point, too, in the notion of making the husband an ardent feminist, always surrounded by adoring women, and a great champion of their rights. The little piece, which is well above the level of most first pieces, is admirably played by Mr. Rudge Harding as the husband, Miss Vera Beringer as the wife and Mr. W. R. Staveley as their butler.

KINGSWAY THEATRE,

Great Queen Street,

Proprietress - - Miss Lena Ashwell

LILLAH McCARTHY GRANVILLE BARKER

The Great Adventure

A Comedy in four acts by Arnold Bennett.
The play produced by Granville Barker.

Ilam Carve	Henry Ainley
Albert Shawn	Gedge Twyman
Dr. Pascoe	Claude King
Edward Horning	Neville Gartside
Janet Cannot	Wish Wynne
Cyrus Carve	Guy Rathbone
A Page	Cyril Bennett
Father Looe	Acton Bond
Honoria Looe	Lydia Bilbrooke
Peter Horning	A. G. Poulton
Ebag	Clarence Derwent
A Waiter	Val Cuthbert
James Shawn	Geoffrey Denys
John Shawn	John Astley
Mrs. Albert Shawn	Alma Ellerslie
Lord Leonard Alcar	Dawson Milward
Texel	Franklyn Roberts
A Servant	Owen Mansel

KINGSW
GT. QUE
Miss Lillah McCarthy
Tuesday
Evening
Mar. 25
Stall
No. C 11
This to be retained

ACT I.

Ilam Carve's house, 126, Redcliffe Gardens, S.W.

Scene I. Evening in August. Scene II. The next morning but one.

One day elapses.

ACT II.

A Private room at the Grand Babylon Hotel.

Scene I. Morning. Scene II. Afternoon, four days later.

Two years elapse.

ACT III.

Janet's sitting room at Werter Road, Putney.

Scene I. Morning in November. Scene II. Early morning, three months later.

One day elapses.

ACT IV.

Lord Leonard Alcar's study in Grosvenor Gardens.

Scene I. Afternoon in February. Scene II, Three minutes later.

Matinees, Saturdays, at 2.30.

Miss Wish Wynne appears by courtesy of the Directors of Moss' Empires, London Theatres of Varieties and Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. John Astley appears by courtesy of Miss Marie Tempest.

Miss Bilbrooke's black dress supplied by Rachelle Ospovat.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Proprietress.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

The Box Office is open Daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone: 4032 Gerrard (two lines.)

Manager - A. E. Drinkwater.

Stage Manager - E. H. Brooke Assisted by - Val Cuthbert

Box Office Manager - Reginald Wynne. Box Office Assistant - Otho Stanton

New Four-Act Play.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Granville Barker and Miss Lillah McCarthy presented a new four-act play, by Arnold Bennett, entitled "The Great Adventure," at the Kingsway Theatre. The plot is based on the story of the same author's novel called "Buried Alive." The Kingsway Theatre is to-day the theatre of the "intellectuals" in London. It gets all the self-reliant, earnest-looking young women to its pit and gallery that used, in the days of the Vedrenne and Barker management, to go to the Court Theatre; and on Tuesday evening, instead of the buzz of conversation coming from the stalls (during the entr'actes) none could be heard but that which arose from the animated comments and laughter of the earnest young women in the gallery. "The Great Adventure" amused the audience by its rather acid wit for the greater part of three acts, and had it ended might have made a much better impression than that which was left when the fourth act was over. A feature of the cast was the appearance in it of Miss Wish Wynne from the music halls. This selection was a triumph for Mr. Barker, and Miss Wynne

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Propristors - - - - - - - - - - Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

ON WEDNESDAY, 26th MARCH, 1913,

AND EVERY EVENING AT 8, MATINEES AT 2,

DIPLOMACY

An English Version of a Play, in Four Acts, by VICTORIEN SARDOU.

Characters.

Henry Beauclerc	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Julian Beauclerc	Mr. OWEN NARES
	(By arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie)
Algernon Fairfax	Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
Count Orloff	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Baron Stein	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
Markham	Mr. H. LAURENT
Sheppard	Mr. ALGERNON WEST
Antoine	Mr. FREDERICK CULLEY
Lady Henry Fairfax	Lady TREE
Marquise de Rio-Zarès	Miss ANNIE SCHLETTER
Countess Zicka	Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS
Dora	Miss GLADYS COOPER
	(By arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie)
Mion	Miss MALISE SHERIDAN

The scenes are laid in a hotel at Monte Carlo; Henry Beauclerc's rooms in the Champs Elysées, and the British Embassy in Paris.

The Play Produced by Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER under the control of Sir SQUIRE BANCROFT.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Gladys Cooper's Dresses by Mdlle. RACHELLE OSPOVAT, 69 New Bond Street, W.; Hats by ZYROT ET CIE, 14, Hanover Square, W.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys' Dresses and Hats designed and made by LUCILE, Ltd., 23 Hanover Square, W.
Miss Annie Schletter's Dresses by PAQUIN, Ltd., 39 Dover Street, W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	OVERTURE, "Ballet Russe"	Luigini
2.	a. "PETITE SUITE DE CONCERT"	Coleridge Taylor
	b. WALZER, "Der Fidele Bauer"	Leo Fall
3.	a. INTERMEZZO, "Burma Maid"	Chas. Ancliffe
	b. INVOCATION	Louis Ganne
4.	a. VENUS VALSE from "Oh! Oh! Delphine"	Ivan Caryll
	b. "FETE ALSACIENNE"	Edmond Missa
	c. DANCE, "The Wedding Glide"	Louis Hirsch

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 7.30. Matinees at 1.30. Commence at 8. Matinees at 2.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

* * * March 26 1914

"Diplomacy" reaches its anniversary performance at Wyndham's next Thursday, and has just passed its four hundredth representation at that theatre. This not only beats all previous runs of that absorbing drama but also, it is thought, surpasses any revival run of any play, dramatic or musical. My heartiest congratulation to Messrs. Du Maurier and Curzon on their splendid success.

* * *

"Diplomacy" has been transferred from Wyndham's Theatre to the Prince of Wales Theatre. The company, with the exception of Mr. Gerald du Maurier, is the same. April 20 1914

To-Night, Thursday, March 27th, 1913, at 8, and on subsequent evenings at 8.30.

Mr. GASTON MAYER

(By arrangement with Mr. Robert Loraine)

PRESENTS

THE YELLOW JACKET

A Chinese Play given in the Chinese manner.

By GEO. C. HAZELTON and BENRIMO. Music by WILLIAM FURST.

(The Characters are in the order in which they will appear).

PART I, ACT I.

Property Man	HOLMAN CLARK
Chorus	FREDERICK ROSS

By the courtesy of Sir H. Beerbohm Tree

Wu Sin Yin (Great Sound Language), Governor of the Province	E. HENRY EDWARDS
Due Jung Fah (Fuchsia Flower), second wife of Wu Sin Yin	DOROTHY FANE
Tso ... (Fancy Beauty), maid to Due Jung Fah ...	PEGGY HYLAND
Tai Fah Min (Great Painted Face), father of Due Jung Fah, second wife	ERNEST HENDRIE
Chee Moo (Kind Mother), first wife of Wu Sin Yin ...	LENA BURNLEIGH
Assistant Property Men	E. REYNOLDS ARTHUR VEZIN ALEX. BROWN HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Lee Sin ... (First Farmer)	CHARLES DORAN
Suey Sin Fah (Lily Flower), wife of Lee Sin and maid of the first wife Chee Moo	CHRISTINE SILVER
Ling Won ... (Spirit) ...	FREDERIC de LARA

PART II, ACTS II and III.

Property Man	HOLMAN CLARK
Chorus	FREDERICK ROSS

By the courtesy of Sir H. Beerbohm Tree

Suey Sin Fah...	CHRISTINE SILVER
Lee Sin	CHARLES DORAN
Wu Hoo Git (Young Hero of the Wu Family) destined for "The Yellow Jacket"	F. COWLEY WRIGHT
Wu Fah Din ... (Daffodil)	GEORGE RELPH
Yin Suey Gong ... (Purveyor of Hearts) ...	ERNEST HENDRIE
See Quoe Fah ... ... (Four Season Flower)	DOROTHY FANE
Mow Dan Fah ... (Peony)	PEGGY HYLAND
Yong Soo Kow ... (Hydrangea)	CHRISTINE RAYNER
Chow Wan ... (Autumn Cloud) ...	HILDA BAILEY
Moy Fah Loy (Plum Blossom), daughter of Tai Char Shoong)	SHEILA HAYES
See Noi .. (Nurse), in Charge of Plum Blossom ...	EVELYN ROBSON
Tai Char Shoong ... (Purveyor of Tea to the Emperor)	E. HENRY EDWARDS
The Widow Ching	LORNA LESLIE
Maid to Widow Ching	CHRISTINE RAYNER
Git Hok Gar ... (Philosopher and Scholar) ..	FREDERIC de LARA
Loy Gong ... (God of Thunder)	CHARLES DORAN
Kom Loi ... ... (Spider)	C. W. STANDING
Chee Moo	LENA BURNLEIGH

The Scene which is an exact reproduction of one of the Principal Theatres in Canton has been built (from a model by Char-Jett), by Mr. C. Cory and painted by Mr W. Johnson.

The Play produced by BENRIMO.

The Costumes and Properties are supplied by Kwong Sun Chong of Canton and San Francisco.

There will be an interval of eight minutes between each act.

The Orchestra will be under the direction of Mr. Jacques Sennoi, and will comprise:—

Yue Chin, San Chin, Hu Chin, Toyi Shen, Chinese Symbols, Chinese Flageolet, Drums, &c., &c.

Wigs by W. Clarkson, 41, Wardour Street, W.C.

Matinees, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2.30.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will assist in having it carried out.

The Toilet Hairbrushes, etc., used in the Cloakrooms in this Theatre are supplied by Messrs. Hindes, Limited, London and Birmingham.

Business Manager Stage Manager	For Mr. Gaston Mayer	Mr. H. F. Nokes Mr. Claud Vernon

D. Y. T.

27/3/1913

Orch. Stall

F18

No.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1913.

"The Yellow Jacket."

If a success of curiosity is a fair criticism to apply to the Chinese play called "The Yellow Jacket," presented by Mr. Gaston Mayer at the Duke of York's Theatre, all should be well with it. To compare this entertainment with any other in London would be impossible, for we are given to understand that this representation of a Chinese drama is done exactly as plays are done in a first-class theatre in China.

The evening's entertainment began with the lowering of tableau curtains of Chinese patterns. The appearance in front of them of a silent stage manager beating a gong. And the arrival a moment later of Mr. Frederick Ross impersonating the Chinese author and prepared with an amusing narrative of the story his actors had got to tell. Before and after each act this amusing Chinese dramatist appeared before his audience that he might tell them more about himself and his play, and the actors of The Pear Tree Garden, who felt honoured in being permitted to act. It was all good fun that had the effect of arousing curiosity, a curiosity that increased when the curtain rose and showed the author in his chair, a little native orchestra behind him, and the native stage hands standing on one side.

* * * * *

The little drama of a young man's adventures in search of his parents and his estate was quaintly presented. His fights, his temptations, and his final triumph were so comically told that they reminded one of a children's picture book in their simplicity they were in some instances more simple than even children could imagine—the ascent to Heaven by a ladder for instance, the snowstorm of scraps of paper, the chairs arranged to represent a boat on a river. All through this strange series of events, the silent stage manager moved about smoking a cigarette, and handing—in sight of the audience—to the actors everything they required during the performance. It was all quite amusing, quite harmless, and unexciting, and it pleased the audience Mr. Holman Clark was the unperturbed stage manager and his success was great.

THE CHORUS
Mr. Frederick Ross.

UNKNOWN TALENT.

THEATRICAL MANAGERS' DISCOVERIES.

The search for talent for the stage has seldom had a better illustration than when the company was being chosen for the production of the Chinese play "The Yellow Jacket," now being performed at the Duke of York's Theatre.

The "simple manner" of the performance involved the complete discarding of many stage conventions, and although there were opportunities for several recognised players the producer and part-author, Mr. Benrimo, made it a condition that for the greater number of the parts no artist who applied and whose physique was favourable to the Chinese make-up (a very trying one) should be refused a hearing. They could rehearse "on approval" if they so desired, but no engagement was to be given until they had convinced Mr. Benrimo and Mr. Gaston Mayer that they were able to act the parts as the management thought they should be acted.

1. Miss Sheila Hayes. 2. Miss Hilda Bailey. 3. Miss Lena Burnleigh.

NO PREVIOUS EXPERIENCE.

The result proved that there was talent waiting for an opportunity. There is, for instance, the case of Miss Hilda Bailey, described in the play as "the temptress of the flower boat." She had never before played even in amateur performances. She was a stranger to everyone in the theatre, and her experience was limited to a few lessons from Miss Kate Rorke.

Miss Sheila Hayes, who plays Plum Blossom, had no previous stage experience, yet after rehearsing "on approval" for ten days was engaged to play the heroine. Miss Lena Burnleigh was quite unknown when she applied, and she got her engagement because of the earnest manner in which she worked at rehearsals.

Mr. F. Cowley Wright, the hero, although not unknown, had never taken so prominent a part in a London production, and it was the willingness and the enthusiasm with which he rehearsed without insisting on an engagement that secured the part in which he has made such a conspicuous success.

There are other examples in the Duke of York's company that go also to show that, if the difficulties placed in the way of artists unknown to West End audiences were less insurmountable, many clever aspiranta to places on the London stage would be discovered by managers.

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

THIS EVENING, MONDAY, MARCH 31st, 1913, at 8

WILL BE ACTED, FOR THE FIRST TIME,

PLAYGOERS

A Domestic Episode

By ARTHUR PINERO

The Master	A. E. BENEDICT
The Mistress	MARY CLARE
The Cook	MARGARET YARDE
The Kitchenmaid	IRIS FRASER FOSS
The Parlourmaid	ELIZABETH CHESNEY
The Housemaid	ANNIE WALDEN
The Useful Maid	ESME CHURCH
The Odd Man	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS

Scene: The Morning Room of a London House.

Another busy week of new plays began on Monday evening last with the production at St. James's Theatre of an amusing one-act farce by Sir Arthur Pinero called "Playgoers." The unpretentious trifle is an episode of a domestic character which has the morning-room of a London house for its scene and the young master and mistress and their six servants for its characters. Not having during this the first year of their married life got on very well with their servants, the mistress conceives the idea of treating the newly arrived six (called by her husband "the gang") as reasonable beings, and as her notion of doing so is to pack them off to a theatre to which none of them appear anxious to go there is a rebellion, and the five women servants give notice. It is a comical affair very drolly played by all the servant characters, and if only Miss Mary Clare, as the Mistress, and Mr. A. E. Benedict, as the Master, had brought some more humour into their work the fun would have been general and Sir Arthur Pinero's little play might have been a scream.

J. W.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue. W.

TUESDAY, APRIL 1st, and Every Evening at 8.15,

By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN

GILBERT PORTEOUS

PRESENTS

ETHEL IRVING

IN

"VANITY"

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS by ERNEST DENNY

Author of "All-Of-A-Sudden Peggy"

"O, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us!"

—BURNS.

Produced by DION BOUCICAULT

Stage Manager ... TOWNSEND WHITLING	Treasurer ... WILLIAM J. DOUGLAS
GENERAL MANAGER	CHARLES THORBURN

Piano supplied by Messrs. ASCHERBERG. Scenery by WALTER HANN.
Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN. Perruquier, W. CLARKSON.
Ethel Irving's Hats by Madame ELSIE, Bond Street.

CHARACTERS.

MISS FRY (Aunt Heppy)	Vanity's Quaker Aunt ..	PHYLLIS VERRALL
HOPE	.. Vanity's Sisters ..	CAROLINE BAYLEY
PRUDENCE (Prue)		RUTH BIDWELL
ADA KEMP ..	Vanity's Private Paragraphist	MABELLE HUNT
DICKSON	Vanity's Maid ..	MABEL TREVOR
JEFFERSON BROWN ..	Vanity's Fiancé ..	GUY STANDING
DICK BRODERICK ..	Vanity's Solicitor ..	PAUL ARTHUR
AUGUSTUS KING ..	Vanity's Manager	TOWNSEND WHITLING
LORD CAZALET (Cazzy)	Vanity's Victim ..	JAMES LINDSAY
PILGRIM FRY (Pilly) ..	Vanity's Brother	ERIC MAREO

AND

Vanity .. Professionally known as "Vanity Fayre" ETHEL IRVING

ACT I. .. .. .. As we see ourselves (Three weeks elapse)

ACT II. .. As others see us (A few minutes are supposed to elapse)

ACT III. .. .. With Open Eyes

The entire action of the Play takes place in the same room, being the Drawing Room in Vanity's Flat in London at the present day.

Miss Ethel Irving as Manager.

On Tuesday Miss Ethel Irving began her term of management of the Globe Theatre. It is true that the programme announced that "by arrangement with Charles Frohman, Gilbert Porteous presents Ethel Irving in 'Vanity,' a play in three acts by Ernest Denny," but we prefer to have it that Miss Irving is the manager, and we feel sure that her husband, Mr. Gilbert Porteous, will not have the very faintest objection to our saying so. In this new play Miss Irving has the part of a very fascinating musical-comedy actress who in her own home is so selfish that none of her intimates waste any love on her. Vanity (that is the young lady's name) thinks, however, that she is indispensable, but when—in order to learn what is said of her in her absence—she goes to Dieppe and by a trick makes it appear that she has been drowned, and then, disguised as an old woman, returns to her home, her vanity is anything but flattered by the remarks made of her by the newspapers and her friends in mourning. The details of this portion of the play are foolish. Newspapers do not publish critical notices of the dead, and Vanity's friends must have been of very little account to have discussed her as they did. Miss Irving and Mr. Porteous might also have corrected the author about musical-comedy engagements, salaries, understudies, managers, etc. Fortunately, however, these little errors of detail do not affect the fortunes of the play: it was found to be a good entertainment by the audience. After Miss Irving's, the best performance of the evening was that by Mr. James Lindsay as a silly Peer, and Mr. Paul Arthur, too, was very good as Vanity's friend and adviser. J. W.

Vanity.

GLOBE THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Lessee and Manager - - CHARLES FROHMAN

Under the Management of Mr. Gilbert Porteous.

WHY ALL FOOLS DAY?

There is wisdom in folly, just as there is folly in wisdom, and good things are often born of foolishness. Besides, to admit one's folly is a sign of becoming modesty, while to boast of one's wisdom is evidence of arrogance. So, I have chosen All Fool's Day for the beginning of my management of the Globe Theatre because I really am very modest. We hope we shall be a big success. We have done our best. If we succeed we shall be very, very grateful.

There is, of course, an injunction "to deal with a fool according to his folly." But that may be regarded from two points of view. It may be taken to mean, "poor fool, he cannot help it, let us be gentle to him," and I suggest that if we are found to be super-foolish on this festival of fools, we should be regarded with kindly tolerance and not judged too hardly. That is, of course, if the play and the players do not please the audience. Naturally I do not anticipate so dire a calamity. Rather I expect that the audience will be so pleased that they will be surprised at our diffidence and will leave the theatre with the remark, "If these are fools, hurrah for folly!"

Finally, as Mr. Ernest Denny's play is called "Vanity, All Fool's Day seemed the very ideal occasion for its production. Of all follies, Vanity is the most foolish, but it is curable. That is the lesson of the comedy—"Vain folly on April 1st, but self-forgetful modesty on April 2nd."

Ethel Irving

T 83

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2ND, 1913, AT 7.45,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.30,

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

Typhoon

A New Play in Four Acts, from MELCHIOR LENGYEL'S "TAIFUN."

Baron Yoshikawa	Japanese Colony in Paris.	ROBIN SHIELLS
Takeramo, Doctor of Letters...		LAURENCE IRVING
Kobayashi, Doctor of Letters...		HENRY CROCKER
Omayi, Doctor of Laws ...		CLAUDE RAINS
Kitamaru, Doctor of Medicine		AZOOMA SHEKO
Yamoshi, Doctor of Laws ...		CHARLES TERRIC
Hironari		LEON M. LION
Amamari		ARTHUR STANLEY
Miyake		S. ISOGAI
Tanaka		A. TSUCHIYA
Yoshino		K. SUMOGE
Yotomo		GEORGE CARR
Georges, Takeramo's Servant		H. O. NICHOLSON
Renard-Beinsky		LEON QUARTERMAIN
Professor Dupont		E. LYALL SWETE
Benoit, Investigating Judge		ARTHUR WHITBY
Marchland, Judge of the High Court... ...		ALLAN JEAYES
Simon, Judge's Clerk		HERBERT HEWETSON
Usher		STUART MUSGROVE
Therese		MARJORIE WATERLOW
Helene		MABEL HACKNEY

The action of the play takes place in Paris at the present day.

Acts I., II., and IV.—Takeramo's Flat.
Act III.—Room of an Investigating Judge.

The play produced for FREDERICK HARRISON by Mr. LAURENCE IRVING, with the assistance of Mr. A. S. TSUBOUCHI and Mr. YOSHIO MARKINO.

There will be intervals of eight minutes after Act I, ten minutes after Act II, and eight minutes after Act III.

Plays

84

It will be noted that in the scenes where the Japanese are conversing with each other, and therefore supposed to be speaking their own language, they use no accent, though pitch and intonation have a certain national peculiarity. But in the scenes where they are conversing with Europeans, and are therefore supposed to be speaking a foreign language, a strong accent will be marked.

"NIPPON" or "NICHON" (pronounced as in the French "on") is the name by which the Japanese designate their own country, the word "JAPAN" being of foreign coinage.

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER

MISS HACKNEY'S dress in Act I. made by DŒUILLET, LTD.
Other dresses made by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN.

Programme of Music.

I. (a) March	Ganne
(b) English Dance	Cyril Scott
(c) Eastern Dance
II. (a) Danse Russe	Tschaikovsky
(b) Song
III. Suite	Debussy
IV. (a) Après un Rêve	Fauré
(b) March	Schubert

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

Stage Manager, CHARLES LA TROBE. Assistant, CLAUDE RAINS

Musical Director, NORMAN O'NEILL

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10

Reserved Seats from 2s. 6d. Telephone—Gerrard 3344.

Messrs. WHITE, ALLOM & Co. Auditorium from designs by and under the superintendence of E. WALKER & JENKINS,

Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
Wednesday
Evening
Apr. 2
Orchestra Stl 10/6
No J 20
This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right at the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

Plays

THURSDAY, APRIL 3rd, at 8.30. FOLLOWING EVENINGS at 9.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

KENNETH DOUGLAS and CARL F. LEYEL,

PRESENT

THE INFERIOR SEX

A Comedy in Three Acts, by FRANK STAYTON.

Charles Winslow		Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Bennett	(his Valet)	Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Luigi	(a Sailor)	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Ah Sin	(the Cook)	Mr. PERCY GOODYER
Engineer		Mr. REYNER BARTON
Officer of R.M.S. "Dunottar Castle"		Mr. GERALD AMES
Eve Addison		Miss RENÉE KELLY

ACT I. ... ... THE CABIN (9.30 p.m.).

ACT II. ... ... THE SAME (9 a.m. a Week later).

The lights are lowered during the Act to denote the passing of six hours.

ACT III. ... ... THE DECK (7 a.m. next Morning).

The Action takes place on the Yacht "Firefly."

Scenery in Acts I. and II. by W. HANN; Act III. by JOSEPH HARKER.

Preceded at 8 and following Evenings at 8.30 by

AN ADVENTURE OF PIERROT

Arranged from Old French Songs by GUSTAVE FERRARI.
Produced under the direction of DION CLAYTON CALTHROP.

Pierrot	Miss NANCY DENVERS
Jeanette	Miss MARGOT ASHTON
Tircis	Miss VIOLET MORTON
Lisette	Miss DORA MATTHEWS

Villageoises—Misses Munday, Hunter, Ashton, Palmer, McCready.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

	OVERTURE, "Tantalusqualen"	Suppé
Before Act I.	SELECTION, "Princess Caprice"	Leo. Fall
Before Act II	a. "Honolulu Honey Lou"	Melville Gideon
	b INTERMEZZO, "Rose of my Heart"	Hermann Lohr
	c. "A Woodland Dance"	Herbert E. Haines
Before Act III.	RAGTIME SELECTION, "Pleasureland"	Baynes

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager ... (for Kenneth Douglas and Carl F. Leyel) ... Mr. ARTHUR PENLEY

Business Manager .. .. Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 3
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
3/4/1913
STALL
119
To be retained

"The Inferior Sex."

The narrow limitations of a small steam yacht cruising in the Atlantic serve for the scenes of the very unpretentious farce, by Frank Stayton, entitled "The Inferior Sex," which Messrs. Kenneth Douglas and Carl F. Leyel (by arrangement with Mr. Arthur Chudleigh) produced at the Comedy Theatre on Thursday evening. The owner of the yacht had chosen the lonely seas for the purpose of writing a book to ventilate his views about women and "the inferior sex" generally. He was a fussy young gentleman, who hated anyone but his valet to enter his cabin, and when his crew picked up a young lady who had been blown out to sea in a small boat he resented in very plain terms her intrusion on his privacy. Need it be added that this unexpected guest eventually converted the woman-hater into a most ardent lover, and that when this fact was made absolutely clear the play was ended. The business of the farce did not give any great opportunities for acting, but such as they were, Mr. Douglas, Mr. O. B Clarence, and Miss Renee Kelly made the very most of them. PLAYGOER.

"The Typhoon."

In "The Typhoon," presented at the Haymarket Theatre on Wednesday evening, London has been given a play of a higher quality than managers usually think necessary. The impressions made by the performance were that something very beautiful and illuminating had found its way into the theatre, and that this was another rare instance of a play being produced which made a real appeal to the intelligence. "The Typhoon" is a four-act play from the Hungarian author Melchior Lengyel's "Taifun," and it is an open secret that the adaptation has been made by Mr. Laurence Irving, who also plays the chief part in the drama.

Incidents of the Play.

The story of "The Typhoon" concerns itself mainly with the Japanese colony in Paris, and in particular with the political genius of that colony, a doctor of letters, Takeramo, entrusted by his Government with the conduct of a secret mission in Europe. It can be taken for granted that the details of the mode of life of the colony are absolutely correct, that the ceremony of their own private meetings and their manner of speaking of their country and of their Sovereign are represented with truth in the incidents of this play, for the names of the Japanese artists who assisted Mr. Irving in getting the production on to the stage are an absolute guarantee of fidelity to life. Many of the manifestations of loyalty to high patriotic ideals that are shown during the acting of the drama make a deep impression, particularly so when Takeramo, having murdered his mistress, is commanded (in order that he may serve his country) to conceal the fact and to allow one of the younger members of the colony to take his place and be delivered to the police as the guilty one. In every department this play is splendidly presented. The cast, the scenery, the properties, the stage management, and the acting are perfect. Mr. Laurence Irving is superb as Takeramo, and on his shoulders falls the burden of the drama. He had an ovation on Wednesday, and the author appeared with him for a moment to share it.

Gaiety Theatre.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain. Mr. George Edwardes

Manager Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

To night Saturday, April 5th. 1913, at 8.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES

Will produce a New Musical Farce, in Three Acts

ENTITLED.

"THE GIRL ON THE FILM,"

By JAMES T. TANNER.

From the German of RUDOLF BERNAUER and RUDOLF SCHANZER

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS

The Music by WALTER KOLLO
WILLY BREDSCHNEIDER, and ALBERT SIRMAY

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER ... ... Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

TO-NIGHT, SATURDAY, APRIL 5TH, 1913, AT 8,
For the First Time,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION,

"THE GIRL ON THE FILM,"

A Musical Farce,

By JAMES T. TANNER,

From the German of RUDOLF BERNAUER and RUDOLF SCHANZER.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

Music by WALTER KOLLO, WILLY BREDSCHNEIDER and ALBERT SIRMAY

Cornelius Clutterbuck	(A Miller, Linda's Uncle)	Mr. GEO BARRETT
Valentine Twiss	An old College friend of Max's. In love with Linda	Mr. CHAS MAUDE
Doddie	(Prompter at the "Vioscope" Offices)	Mr ROBERT NAINBY
General Fitzgibbon	V.C., D.S.O., of the War Office	Mr. GRAFTON WILLIAMS
Sergeant Tozer	Commissionaire at the "Vioscope" Offices	Mr. REGINALD CROMPTON
Lord Ronny	(Secretary of the Army League)	Mr. ARTHUR WELLESLEY
Tom Brown	(The defeated Candidate)	Mr. WILLIAM STEPHENS

AND

Max Daly	A Cinema author, actor & producer. The leading spirit of the "Vioscope"	Mr. GEO GROSSMITH
Winifred ("Freddy")	(Gen. Fitzgibbon's Daughter)	Miss EMMY WEHLEN
Linda	Clutterbuck's niece, secretary to Max at the "Vioscope"	Miss MADELEINE SEYMOUR
Signora Maria Gesticulata	An Italian Cinema Actress	Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Lady Porchester	... ...	Miss VIOLET WILSON
Viola, Olivia, Portia	Her daughters, friends of "Freddy"	Miss BLANCHE STOCKER, Miss GLADYS WRAY, Miss FLORENCE READE
Mrs. Clutterbuck	... ...	Miss IRENE VERONA

AND

Euphemia Knox (Manageress of the "Vioscope") Miss CONNIE EDISS

GIRL TYPISTS, ACTRESSES, ACTORS (of the Cinema).
COUNTRY GIRLS AND MEN, SOCIETY PEOPLE (in the last Act)

Dance in Act III. by DY-RA and DORMA LEIGH.

ACT I. ... The Offices of the "Vioscope," London (Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. The Mill, Poggleford, Lincolnshire (T. E. Ryan)

ACT III. ... The Army League Soirée (Alfred Terraine)

Duet "The Antidote" in Act I. and Song "Mr. McGee" in Act III composed by MELVILLE J. GIDEON.

Costumes designed by COMELLI
and executed by MARGAINE LACROIX, Paris; PAQUIN, Ltd.;
MICHARD SŒURS; Madame HAYWARD; Miss M. E. FISHER, Ltd
FIRENZE; Madame FIELD; B. J. SIMMONS & Co.;
MORRIS ANGEL & SON; BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS.

Miss Emmy Wehlen's and Miss Madeleine Seymour's Dresses in Acts I. and III. designed and made by LUCILE, Ltd., 23, Hanover Square, W.

Miss Madeleine Seymour's Hat and Dress in Act II. by ZYROT & CIE, 14, Hanover Square, W.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS, HARRY H. SANBY and ZYROT & CIE.

Typewriting Machines supplied by THE MONARCH TYPEWRITING CO.

Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE and G. MANZO.

Wigs by CLARKSON Properties by H. W. ELLIOTT

Electrical Effects by G. A. APPLEBEE Machinist, J. SHELDON.

Stage Manager ... . Mr. HARRY B. BURCHER
Musical Director ... ... Mr. G. W. BYNG

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10

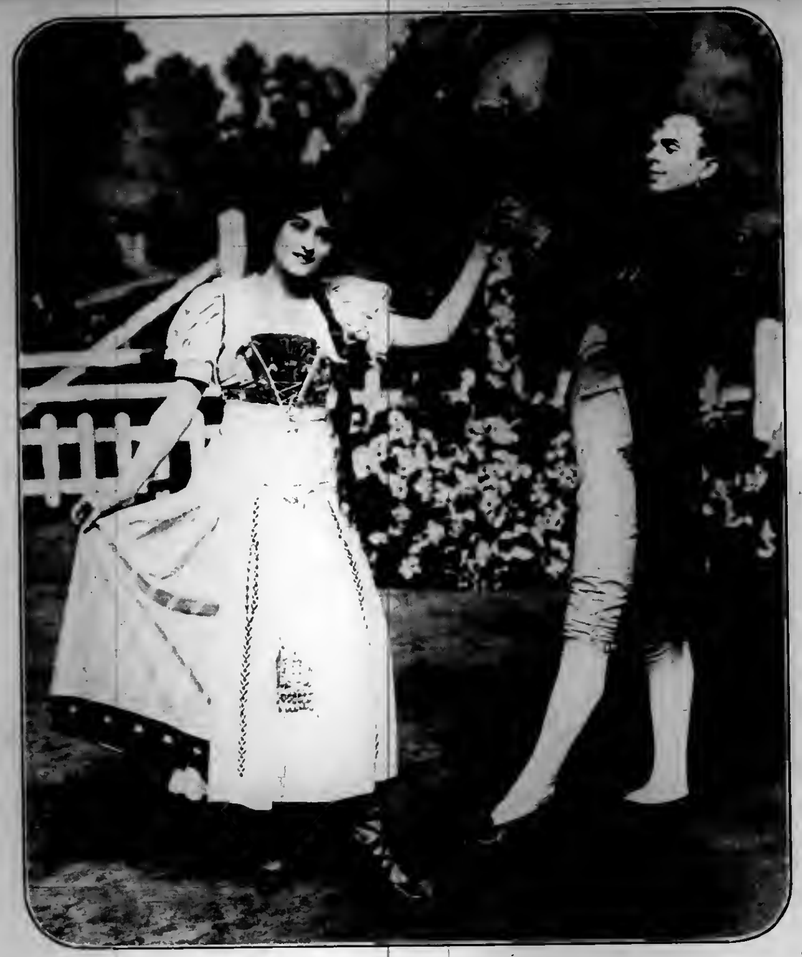
Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.



(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

(3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.

(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.

(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

For the material of their story the authors have gone to the latest industry in the entertainment world, that of the kinema, and the first act shows the staff of the "Vioscope" in the throes of preparation for a film to be called "Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter," an incident supposed to have taken place after the battle of Leipzig. The author, actor, and producer of the "Vioscope" company is Max Daly, an inveterate ladies' man, and the first hint of love interest is when Winifred ("Freddy") Fitzgibbon, the daughter of General Fitzgibbon, disguises herself as a dapper boy and secures an engagement to act as a Drummer Boy in the said film in order to be near Max, who is her kinema idol. Another love affair started in this act is that between Valentine Twiss, a college friend of Max's, and Linda, the lady secretary of the company; while plenty of comedy is forthcoming from the persons of Euphemia Knox, the manageress, and Doddie, the prompter. The lady who is to appear as the Miller's Daughter (much to the disgust of Euphemia Knox, who thinks she is cut out for the part) is a famous Italian kinema actress named Signora Maria Gesticulata, and no sooner does she arrive than Max falls in love with her. As she cannot understand a word of English, however, "Freddy" is engaged to act as interpreter, and thereby hangs a tale. In the next scene, the whole company assemble at the mill at Poggleford, in Lincolnshire, in order to pose for the film —Max, as Napoleon, on a white charger, Euphemia Knox as a vivandière, "Freddy" as Drummer Boy, the Signora as the miller's daughter, and so on—but at the last moment, "Freddy" causes the Signora to throw up her part and leave the company in anger and disgust by putting some more or less choice Italian into a love-letter Max had commissioned her to write for him. This, of course, is "Freddy's" chance; she, herself, although a "boy," will disguise herself and appear as the Miller's Daughter, and all will be well. All would indeed have been well had not the mill been owned by a dunderheaded old gentleman named Cornelius Clutterbuck, whose pet delusion is that the Germans have designs upon England in general, and Poggleford in particular. The posing for the film is proceeding merrily, and the Emperor is casting favourable eyes upon the Miller's Daughter, after having sentenced her father to be shot as a spy, when old Clutterbuck unexpectedly blunders into the picture with a cider mug in his hand and a clay pipe in his mouth. What more natural than that he should think that the Germans have already landed, and that Napoleon's picturesque Old Guard are Teutons come to annex Poggleford? In the highly amusing scene that follows, a scene that caused hearty laughter on Saturday evening, Clutterbuck sounds the tocsin of war, and, at the head of an inrushing mob of villagers and oldest inhabitants, armed with pitchforks and staves, causes the terror-stricken "invaders" to retire in great confusion. The next act is something of an anti-climax, although it brings the story to a satisfactory conclusion. At a soirée given by the Army League, the actual kinematograph film is shown to a smart audience, including "Freddy's" father; and the fact of his recognising his daughter in the film, and ordering it to be destroyed, results, of course, in Max discovering the real identity of "Freddy," and becoming her accepted lover. The love affair of Valentine Twiss and Linda is also satisfactorily confirmed, the young lady coming into a legacy of three thousand pounds kept in trust for her by her uncle, who is none other than old Clutterbuck.

EMMY WEHLEN as Winifred "Freddy." Mr. GEO. GROSSMITH as Max

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1913.

The final performance of "The Girl on the Film" at the Gaiety on Friday night drew an enthusiastic and distinguished audience, who gave the entire company a splendid send-off in view of its having to sail yesterday for America. At the end of the performance there was uproarious applause and call after call. Mr. George Grossmith returned thanks; and even after that crowds waited outside the stage-door to indulge in still more "send-off-ing."

* * *

There were more crowds and more enthusiasm yesterday at Euston when this big contingent of the Gaiety's Co.—all named by me last week—left for Liverpool to sail, per the Mauretania, to open in New York with "The Girl on the Film" at the local Casino on Christmas Eve. The Gaiety will remain closed until January, when Mr. George Edwardes will present a new play. Among the new-comers to the Gaiety will be Mlle. Bonita and Mr. Lew Hearn, both from the Hippodrome's last revue.

* * *

E

83

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8th, 1913, AT 8.30 P.M.
SUCCEEDING EVENINGS AT 9 P.M.

LAWRENCE GROSSMITH

PRESENTS

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts, entitled

BROTHER ALFRED

By H. W. WESTBROOK and P. G. WODEHOUSE.

John Marshall	G. MAYOR-COOKE
Billy Marshall, his Son	ARTHUR CHESNEY
George Lattaker	LAWRENCE GROSSMITH
Augustus Arbutt, Lattaker's Uncle	E. W. GARDEN
Count Fritz von Coslin, Equerry to H.S.H. the Prince of Saxeburg-Leignitz	PHILIP CUNINGHAM
Denman Sturgis, Private Investigator	SYDNEY SKARRATT
Voules, Billy Marshall's Valet	EDWARD SASS
Sidney	ARTHUR HATHERTON
Mrs. Vanderly	GWYNNETH GALTON
Stella, her Daughter	FAITH CELLI
Mamie Foster	MAUD CRESSALL
Pillbeam, Mrs. Vanderly's Maid	FLORENCE TEMPEST

Guests: Misses Wanda de Baron, Mary Fenner, Freda Watson, Dorothy Wyndgirl, Grace Denbigh-Russell, Violet Blyth-Pratt, Jessie Forbes. Messrs. H. V. Surrey, Stapley, Adkins, Begbie, Vaughan.

The action of the Play takes place on Mr. Marshall's S.Y. "Circe," anchored off Monte Carlo.

ACT I.	Late Afternoon. Outside the Harbour
ACT II.	The next Morning. In the Harbour
ACT III.	Same as Act II. Evening.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY LAWRENCE GROSSMITH.

Dresses by LORINA and REDFERN'S Ltd. Hats by GAMI Ltd., and REDFERN'S Ltd.

Preceded To-night at 8 p.m.

Other Evenings at 8.30. Matinees at 2.30.

BY

AUGUSTUS IN SEARCH OF A FATHER

By HAROLD CHAPIN.

Augustus .. .. NORMAN YATES
The Night Watchman .. .. .. ALFRED A. HARRIS
Policeman .. .. VINCENT HOLMAN

Scene—A London Square.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE ...	..."Invitation à la Valse"	Weber
Before "Brother Alfred"...	"Holberg Suite"	Grieg
Before Act II.	"Norwegian Melody"	Ole Bull
	"English Dances"	Quilter
Before Act III.	"Mock Morris"	Grainger
	Valse	Tchaikovsky

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by removing their hats.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, APRIL 12th.

Business Manager ... ...
Acting Manager... ... ...
Stage Manager ... ... for Lawrence Grossmith
Musical Director ... ...

WALTER MAXWELL
ROBERT ELSON
LIONEL BEVANS
GEOFFREY TOYE

"Brother Alfred."

Quite a clever piece of stage building is to be seen at the Savoy Theatre just now in the yacht on whose deck are enacted all the incidents of the new farce called "Brother Alfred." It is a splendidly contrived scene, and whether from its deck (as it lies in the harbour of Monaco) we watch Monte Carlo and its background of hills in the mid-day sun, or see it at night when the town is illuminated, the view is always enchanting. The scene deserved perhaps a more lively play than H. W. Westbrook and P. G. Wodehouse wrote for it, and something less mournful in the way of a farcical hero than Mr. Lawrence Grossmith was for the occasion.

• • • • • •

For a love interest in the Savoy farce we get a flirtation between a young man and a young woman who are both visitors of an American millionaire with a craze for entertaining curious people in his yacht. The young man, spending an evening ashore, gets into a fight and, having beaten somebody or other, loses consciousness. On coming to he believes he has injured a royal Highness of some Continental brand, and to avoid the consequences pretends that, he is not George Lattaker but is really Alfred Lattaker—his twin brother. When, however, he learns that he is a "hero" he once more becomes George and resumes his privilege of hugging the young lady he had flirted with. The farcical elements in the play are many, and both Mr. Edward Sass and Mr. Arthur Hatherton made the very most of their opportunities and got plenty of laughter all through the evening. J. W.

A SOLICITOR'S AFFAIRS.

The first meeting of creditors was held at Bankruptcy-buildings yesterday under the receiving order made on May 26 against Mr. Edgar Benjamin Cohn, solicitor, formerly of Great Winchester-street, E.C.

Mr. DANIEL WILLIAMS, Assistant Official Receiver, who presided, reported that the debtor had not lodged a statement of affairs, but he estimated his liabilities at £7,500 and disclosed no assets. A year or two ago his wife arranged to provide £3,000 for producing a play called Brother Alfred. Mr. Lawrence Grossmith produced the play at the Savoy Theatre, but it was unsuccessful. The debtor's wife found only £1,500, and Mr. Grossmith sued her for the balance, the debtor being made a party to the action as guarantor. The debtor said that when the case came on for trial his wife, who was the principal witness, was ill, and he allowed judgment to go against him for £1,250 and costs. His wife had since paid £300 in respect of this judgment. The debtor attributed his failure to liability as guarantor and law costs. Since June, 1913, some 40 bankruptcy petitions had been presented against him.

The meeting was adjourned until July 10 that a scheme might be submitted for the arrangement of the debtor's affairs.

Times 9/6/14

PROGRAMME.

The First Performance of "All The Winners!"

APRIL 9th, 1913.

"ALL THE WINNERS!"

REVUE,

By C. H. BOVILL.

Produced by FRED FARREN.

Music Composed and Arranged by CUTHBERT CLARKE.
Dresses Designed and Supervised by C. WILHELM, and executed by Miss Hastings and Morris Angel & Sons (except where otherwise specified). Hats by Malson Lewis.
Machinist, W. SHELDON. Electrician, C. WINTER.

EMPIRE

99
Row E
No 10
STALLS, 10/6
Wednesday, April 9
1913

This portion does not admit to the Theatre.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1913.

"ALL THE WINNERS."

WITTY IMITATORS IN NEW EMPIRE REVUE.

The Empire Theatre, with its new revue "All the Winners," presented for the first time last night, lives up to its reputation of knowing how to produce a topical entertainment.

In Mr. C. H. Bovill the management have an author who has wit and humour and a faculty for inventing clever situations. His revue is intended to be a kindly burlesque of the "Rag-time" craze, but Mr. Bovill's composere have at moments evidently been too much for him, and "All the Winners" succumbs again and again to the fascinations of that tuneful fashion in song and dance. There are three scenes in this up-to-date skit on fads and follies—a London hotel, a provincial town hall, and the Terrace at Monte Carlo on a sunny day—and through all of them a company of eleven artists who never tire is kept going at the highest speed.

There is an exhilarating atmosphere of life and gaiety throughout the performance, and with four such clever mimics as Mr. Seymour Hicks, Mr. Vernon Watson, Mr. Lionel Mackinder, and Miss Maidie Hope to introduce admirable counterfeits of well-known people there is an amusing and confounding sense of reality brought into many of the incidents.

The author has not, however, thrown all the responsibility of making an undoubted success of "All the Winners" on a few of the artists. On the contrary, he hes given nine or ten people opportunities to do well, and in every instance they have succeeded. No one could possibly be more charming than Miss Unity Moore, and if time had allowed what encores she might have had!

Then, too, there was that extraordinary eccentric comedian Mr. Barry Lupino, the best of dancers; clever Miss Ida Crispi, and stately Miss Kate Sergeantson—all of them working loyally and joyously to make this revue the merriest of affairs and the most successful of entertainments. J. W.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

The School for Scandal

Sir Peter Teazle	HERBERT TREE
Sir Oliver Surface	A. E. GEORGE
Sir Harry Bumper	HARRY WILLIAMS
Sir Benjamin Backbite	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Joseph Surface	PHILIP MERIVALE
Charles Surface	MATHESON LANG
Careless	C. HAYDEN COFFIN
Snake	BEN FIELD
Crabtree	J. FISHER WHITE
Rowley	HENRY MORRELL
Moses	G. W. ANSON
Sir Toby	ROY BYFORD
Trip	STANLEY HOWLETT
Servant to Joseph	ALEXANDER SARNER
Lady Teazle	PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Mrs. Candour	ROSE EDOUIN
Maid to Lady Teazle	WINIFRED FITCH
Maria	MARIE HEMINGWAY
Maid to Lady Sneerwell	IRENE DELISSE
Lady Sneerwell	FRANCES DILLON

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager · SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

CRITERION THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Messrs Spiers & Pond, Ltd., 222, Piccadilly

Lessees and Managers: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM
And MISS MARY MOORE

"Eliza Comes to Stay"

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts by H. V. ESMOND.
Preceded at 8.30 by

"FANCY DRESS."

A Comedy in One Act by GERALD DUNN.

Captain Truscott ... ... CHARLES ESDALE
Lawrence Browning ... ... RICHARD LANE
Parkins ... ... FRED GROVE

The Scene is laid in Captain Truscott's Flat in Putney.

Time—The present—early morning

THE LITTLE THEATRE

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.

Proprietress GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Thursday, April 17th, at 8.30.
Following Evenings at 9.

"THE CAP AND BELLS"

A Comedy in Three Acts, by ROBERT VANSITTART.

Earl of Chislehurst ... ... FRED KERR
Duke of Dartford ... ... ERIC MATURIN
Percy Robinson ... ... GODFREY TEARLE
Hammond ... ... HEATH HAVILAND
Lady Chislehurst ... ... MAUDE MILLETT
Lady Clara Marden ... ... ETHEL WARWICK

Act I.—The Morning Room at Wood End. Afternoon.
Act II.—The same. Six weeks later.
Act III.—The same, 7.40 p.m. A week later.

A Gong will be sounded one minute before the rise of the Curtain.

The Play produced by FRED KERR.

Scene by R. HARFORD. Furniture by SPILLMAN. Silver by WALKER & HALL.
Miss Ethel Warwick's dresses by THÉRÈSE, Ltd., 64, New Cavendish Street.
Miss Maude Millett's dresses by M. E. HUMBLE, Conduit Street.

Preceded at 8, following evenings at 8.30, by

MISS DOROTHY VARICK

In Character Sketches at the Piano.

During the evening, the following Selections of Music will be played in the Foyer by ALEX. YANTIAN'S QUARTETTE.

SELECTION ... ... "La Bohème" ... ... Puccini
SONGS ... (a) "Gute Nacht" ... ... Joh Brahms
(b) "Wiegenlied"
SELECTION ... ... "Lohengrin" ... ... Wagner
SONG ... ... (a) "Un peu d'amour" ... ... Silésu
VALSE LENTE ... (b) "Nigh 's Gladness" ... ... Arncliffe

MATINEES, THURSDAY AT 2.30

9797

Cap and Bells."

Much of the new three-act farce "Cap and Bells," by Robert Vansittart, presented by Miss Ethel Warwick at the Little Theatre on Thursday evening, is quite amusing, and it is quite likely that if this comedy were played as a farce it could be made one of the most humorous entertainments in the London theatres. The chief male character in the story, its hero, in fact, is a leader of the people, an uncompromising Socialist, who, finding himself in the house of a nobleman whom he has been abusing—because he is a capitalist—is made as pretty a fool of by the countess as anyone can well imagine. Now, an author who makes his hero look an ass is looking for trouble, and after that scene, in which his supposed-to-be able and eloquent hero is made ridiculous, all hope of securing serious attention for him as an aspirant for the daughter of the titled house was gone. Of course, this young Socialist leader did eventually win the Lady Clara, but there were three acts of dialogue—much of it witty—to be got through before that result was secured, and in the meantime little that was interesting happened. It is true that we saw a duke dismissed—rejected by the young lady who loved the Socialist, but the duke who was despised by the agitator because he played golf was, in the opinion of some people, just as good a man as the hero who threw over his own cause in the comfortable atmosphere of a peer's country house. There was quite a friendly reception for this wholly theatrical play, but one can imagine the roars of laughter it might have raised if it had been produced as a farce. J. W.

ETHEL WARWICK

LITTLE THEATRE

Proprietress - - - - Gertrude Kingston

The Cap and Bells

By ROBERT VANSITTART

LONDON OPERA HOUSE,

KINGSWAY.

General Managers:
CLIFFORD C. FISCHER and BEN NATHAN.

Proprietor - - - OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN.
Lessees - - - THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE, LTD.

OPENING NIGHT,

SATURDAY, APRIL 19th, 1913,

THE NEW REVUE,

"COME OVER HERE"

In Two Acts and Twelve Scenes.
Book by WILSON MIZNER & MAX PEMBERTON.
Music by LOUIS A. HIRSCH & J. ROSAMOND JOHNSON
Lyrics by HARRY WILLIAMS.
Staged by GUS SOHLKE.

Entire Revue arranged under the personal supervision of CLIFFORD C. FISCHER.

4/92

SUCCESS OF "COME OVER HERE."

Last Night's Wonderful Revue at London Opera House.

MOTOR RACE AND LAKE.

BY OUR DRAMATIC CRITIC.

Last night the long expected revue at the London Opera House made its appearance. It is a big affair in innumerable scenes, and has a chorus of girls as energetic as if each individual in it was driven by a Gnome motor. The chorus and the effects got with it are the live features of this revue. London has not had such a chorus "sensation" since April 1898, when "The Belle of New York" took away its heart. It is not an unusually good-looking chorus: our best musical comedies can do much better in that line, and sing much better, too, but this little army of untiring girls goes "hammer and tongs" for three hours, dancing, singing, marching, giving a hustling help to everything and everybody, and it must be on the effects got with these auxiliaries that the revue is to stand or fall.

Mr. Wilson Mizner and Mr. Max Pemberton, the authors of the revue, have christened it "Come Over Here." Their object has been to invent and write something that will afford opportunities for stage display and situations for the introduction of effects. They have succeeded in their purpose. They place their opening scene on the Promenade des Anglais at Nice. They give us sunshine, soldiers, the gay world, a carnival, and then a runaway couple leaving the south in a motor-car to beat the express to Paris.

Audience Taken by Storm.

The stage manager might have done better than give a cinematograph picture of the start of the race with a Portsmouth hotel for a background, but if that is forgotten the same will not be said of the actual stage effect that follows—where on a mountain side the spectators watch the distant lights of train and car racing through the night. On they come through the darkness, and when at last engine and car, headlights flashing, come down almost to the footlights one admits having seen about the best bit of dramatic stage effect seen in a theatre. It took the audience by storm, and it hardly seemed likely that another surprise would be in store. Yet in the next act there was another outburst of enthusiasm when down into a lake marched a dozen Amazons to disappear actually under water.

Some Tuneful Numbers.

There were diving bells, it is true, to receive them down there, but the audience could not see them, and so the effect was wonderful. It is such effects as these that distinguish the London Opera House revue, for it is not topical. Its music is of the tuneful American variety, very pleasing in several numbers, and reflects credit enough on Mr. Louis Hirsch and Mr. J. R. Johnson, who composed it, but it is not the music that won the lion's share of the approval. The singing is fair enough. It goes with the entertainment, and if the management had only refrained from handing out encores ad lib. it would have gone better. There was too much of the ballet too, and that part of the business might have been confined to the acrobatic duel that terminates it.

It was pretty late when the entertainment finished, and the company, mostly American, was obviously handicapped by appearing before a strange audience. For that reason a criticism of individuals would hardly be fair where all worked and nearly all were strangers. The authors had an enthusiastic call when the end of the revue came. Mr. Pemberton said a few words of thanks. Some of the Americans also said a word or two, then there was more applause, and an entertainment that may stand as an amusing and interesting example of what American hustle can do came to an end.

J. W. — W. D

Ragtime in the Drama.

Mr. Gerald du Maurier is earning a reputation as an effective and witty speech-maker, and after Mr. Lawrence Irving is the most convincing speaker on the London stage. Last Sunday night, in reply to the toast of "The Drama" at the Playgoers' Club dinner, he said: "The only new movement he could detect in the drama was ragtime . . . and that was not new. It was merely a good melody marred or a poor one galvanised into life. The one-step was supposed to be a new movement in dancing, and the success of it was that it need not be learnt. Anybody could do it; in fact, it was the first thing a baby could do when it could walk by itself. All these new dances, such as the Bunny-hug and the Turkey-trot, were only forms of the oldest dance in the world—St. Vitus Dance." He said many other witty and amusing things that show that Mr. du Maurier has opinions and knows how to express them. By the by, "Diplomacy" is packing Wyndham's Theatre to its utmost capacity at every performance, and it ought to.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1913.

LONDON OPERA HOUSE SALE

MR. E. A. V. STANLEY AS SOLE PROPRIETOR.

Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, the founder of the London Opera House, Kingsway, sold the theatre on Tuesday to Mr. Edward A. V. Stanley, the chairman of the company that leased it last November, and yesterday the formalities were completed that make Mr. Stanley the sole proprietor. The purchase price cannot be given here, but it is no secret that it falls a very long way short of the £150,000 that Mr. Hammerstein is stated to have spent on the Opera House before its opening with grand opera on November 13, 1911.

Mr. E. A. V. STANLEY.

He was not in London yesterday when the sale was completed, but was represented by his son, Mr. Arthur Hammerstein. Mr. Stanley will control the policy of the theatre from now onwards. He is the owner of the Quantock estate, Somersetshire, is a grandson of the late Lord Tauntou, and was at Eton and Oxford.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOONS,
April 22nd, 25th, 29th, May 2nd, 6th, and 9th, 1913,
at 2.30,

THE HARBOUR WATCH

An Original Play, in One Act, by

RUDYARD KIPLING.

Emanuel Pyecroft, R.N.	Mr. A. B. MURRAY
Edward Glass, R.M.L.I.	Mr. G. F. TULLY
Albert Blashford, R.N.	Mr. LAWFORD DAVIDSON
William Agg	Mr. H. LANE BAYLIFF
Corporal Walters, R.M.L.I.	Mr. W. LEMMON WARDE
Jenny Blashford	Miss MARJORIE DAY

Produced under the Direction of FRANK VERNON.

THOMPSON

A Comedy, in Three Acts, by

ST. JOHN HANKIN and GEORGE CALDERON.

Mrs. Vaughan	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Helen	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
Miss Latimer	Miss ALICE BEET
Gerald	Mr. ROBERT HORTON
Frohock	Mr. G. F. TULLY
James	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Produced under the Direction of J. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

THE GLOBE THEATRE,

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

CHAS. FROHMAN ... ... Sole Lessee and Manager.

SATURDAY, APRIL 26th, and EVERY EVENING at 9,

By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN

GILBERT PORTEOUS

PRESENTS

ETHEL IRVING

IN

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM'S Famous Comedy

"LADY FREDERICK"

Stage Manager ... TOWNSEND WHITLING | Treasurer ... WILLIAM J. DOUGLAS

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... CHARLES THORBURN

Scenery by W. T. HEMSLEY. Furniture by Messrs. BAILEYS, Ltd., Kensington.

Dresses and Hats by BAROLET, 51 Knightsbridge, S.W.

Perruquier, W. CLARKSON.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Orchestra under the Direction of MAURICE JACOBI.

1.	SELECTION	"Gipsy Love"	Lehar
2.	SELECTION	"The Girl in the Taxi"	J. Gilbert
3.	(a)	"La Chanson des Abeilles"	E. Filippucci
	(b) VALSE	"Toujours Gai"	A. Jonge
4.	SUITE	"Spanish Dances"	Moszkowski
5.	MARCH	"Les Cambrioleurs"	Gabriel

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

CHARACTERS.

Lady Frederick Berolles	(her original character)	ETHEL IRVING
Sir Gerald O'Mara	(her Brother) ..	J. WOODALL-BIRDE
Mr. Paradine Foulde ..	(his original character) ..	C. M. LOWNE
Lady Mereston	(his Sister) ..	HENRIETTA WATSON
Lord Mereston	(his Nephew) ..	LANGHORNE BURTON
Captain Montgomerie		THOMAS W. WEGUELIN
Admiral Carlisle		PERCIVAL STEVENS
Rose	(his Daughter) ..	BARBARA EVEREST
Thompson	(Mr. Foulde's Man)	TOWNSEND WHITLING
A Waiter		ERIC MARÈO
Lady Frederick's Dressmaker	(her original character)	FLORENCE WOOD
Lady Frederick's Footman		HUBERT DANE
Lady Frederick's Maid		MIGNON O'DOHERTY

ACT I. .. .. Drawing Room at the Hotel Splendide, Monte Carlo
ACT II. .. .. The Same
ACT III. .. .. Lady Frederick's Dressing Room

Time—The Present Day.

There will be an Interval of 10 minutes between each Act.

Preceded at 8.30 by

"THEIR POINT OF VIEW"

By WILFRED T. COLEBY.

CHARACTERS.

Mrs. Bartlett (her original part)	BERYL MERCER
The Rev. Phillip Moncton	CECIL BEVAN
Arthur Bartlett	WILLIE WEST

Scene—The Chaplain's Room, The Industrial Home, Beechcroft.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

BRITTEN) open 10 to 10. Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.
3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
rcle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

"Lady Frederick."

After a run of twenty-two performances "Vanity" was withdrawn from the Globe Theatre last evening (Saturday), and as its successor Miss Ethel Irving will next Saturday revive W. Somerset Maugham's popular comedy, "Lady Frederick." I remember well the Saturday evening in October 1907 when Mr. Otho Stuart produced this play at the Court Theatre. Nobody present expected very much from it, for the author at that time was only known by a tragedy that had failed to draw at the Avenue Theatre, and another thing that tended to lessen the interest was the fact that "Lady Frederick" clashed with another new production the same night at the Duke of York's Theatre. The other play was called "Miquette"; it was an adaptation by Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, and Mr. Charles Frohman presented it with Miss Pauline Chase as the heroine. "Miquette" ran for fourteen performances; "Lady Frederick" ran for twelve months and five days, with a total of 422 performances. Mr. C. M. Lowne, who was one of the great factors in the making of the success of "Lady Frederick," is to be in it again with Miss Irving next Saturday, and Miss Henrietta Watson (an actress of distinction) is engaged to play the part of his sister Lady Mereston.

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

Saturday Evening, April 26th, 1913, at 8-30.

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS

"THE CHAPERON"

AN ORIGINAL FARCE, in Three Acts,

Written by JOCELYN BRANDON AND FREDERIC ARTHUR.

Hilary Chester	CYRIL KEIGHTLEY
Hon. Algernon Brocklehurst ...	LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Christopher Pottinger, M.P. ...	E. DAGNALL
Admiral Peter Maxwell	M. R. MORAND
Colonel Redwood	HOWARD STURGE
Paul Kominsky	EDWARD IRWIN
Schwarz	J. PARISH ROBERTSON
Butler	LAMBERT PLUMMER
Page Boy	MAURICE EDMONDS
Rosamond Gaythorne	ETHEL DANE
Louisa Pottinger	HELEN HAYE
Harriet Maxwell	ADA KING
Doris Mayne	MARY DIBLEY
Curtis	VIOLET GRAHAM

Guests, Waiters, &c.

Act I. - Vestibule of the Restaurant Royal. Evening.
Act II. - Hall at Pottinger's Country House, near Crow's Nest. Sunday Afternoon. Two days after.
Act III. - The Same. Two hours later.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY E. DAGNALL

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. Eric Zardo.

MARCH ...	"Salut a Vienne" ...	Louis Ganne
Before Act 1—SELECTION ...	"Oh, Oh! Delphine" ...	Ivan Caryll
Before Act 2— ...	Fontaine sur Carmen ...	Georges Bizet
Before Act 3—PIANOFORTE SOLO ...	Ballade (A flat) ...	Chopin
WALTZ ...	"Magic Shadows" ...	N. Zardo

Preceded at 8. by

"THE QUAINTS,"

Or PIERROTLAND.

Written and Produced by R. B. SALISBURY. Original Music by GEORGE BUCHANAN.

GEORGE BUCHANAN.
DOROTHY FROSTICK. AGNES CROXTON.
ROBERT MACHLACHAN. ERNEST BUTCHER. R. B. SALISBURY.

1. AGNES CROXTON takes you to Pierrotland ... ... R. B Salisbury & Geo. Buchanan
2. R. B. SALISBURY sings about the Empire ... R. B. Salisbury & Geo. Buchanan
3. ROBERT MACHLACHAN & ERNEST BUTCHER will sing about Little Pigs ... Old Song
4. DOROTHY FROSTICK will imitate Pavlova.
5. AGNES CROXTON will sing about the course of time R. B Salisbury & Geo. Buchanan
6. R. B. SALISBURY advises you not to be late ... Music by Geo. Buchanan
7. ROBERT MACHLACHAN will sing "'Tis You" ... Music by Paul Alberto
8. THE QUAINTS give their idea of a ragged Opera ... May Windsor
9. R. B. SALISBURY shows how to keep the old flag waving ... Arthur Devonport and Geo. Buchanan
10. "The Song of Florian." Shepherd ... Robert Machlachan
The Onlooker ... Ernest Butcher
Shepherdess ... Agnes Croxton
The Nymph ... Dorothy Frostick
The Clod ... R. B Salisbury

11. ERNEST BUTCHER will sing "Widdicombe Fair" assisted by "The Quaints."

At the Piano ... ... GEORGE BUCHANAN

All the numbers in "The Quaints" Repertoire are published by Joseph Williams & Co., Music Publishers, Great Portland Street, W. All performing rights strictly reserved.

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd. London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS NECESSITATED THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-15.

Business Manager ... ... BERNARD HISHIN
Stage Manager ... ... MARTIN HENRY

STRAND THEATRE LESSEE & MANAGER LOUIS MEYER

LOUIS MEYER PRESENTS

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45 MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS

"The Chaperon."

Last night the Strand Theatre turned once more to farce as its attraction, and in "The Chaperon" Mr. Louis Meyer has discovered something piquant enough to satisfy those innumerable patrons who were delighted with "The Glad Eye." The public that loves a play finds something irresistibly comical in watching an indiscreet husband lying to his wife and friends, and in "The Chaperon" this feature is served up, both hot and strong. It began innocently enough. . . . . Just a little dinner, a gay old spark and a pretty girl, and the scene was the smart hotel where the manager kept a chaperon in stock who could be employed as the imaginary husband of the lady. Some of the patrons of this restaurant liked the chaperon, because he could save the situation if an inquiring wife arrived, and in the new play at the Strand Theatre an amateur chaperon was lent to Christopher Pottinger, M.P. The amateur chaperon was, however, the cause of all the trouble, for he was introduced as the husband of the girl when the old man's wife arrived, and, what was worse, he accepted an invitation to bring his "wife" to dinner on Sunday. Needless to say, the motor that this couple chose to go out of town to dinner broke down, they were asked to stay the night, that dreadful complications arose in consequence, that only by a miracle was a shred of anybody's reputation left.

The authors, Jocelyn Brandon and Frederick Arthur, have garnished their story with many incidents such as have made farces acceptable, and they handle many a slightly risky situation cleverly enough to avoid being offensive. Taking it all round it was very well acted, particularly so by Mr. Cyril Keightley, Mr. Edward Dagnall, Miss Ethel Dane, and, best of all, by Miss Ada King. The reception of play and players could not have been more friendly, and it seems likely that Mr. Meyer will get a run with this play at the Strand Theatre.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Every Evening at 8.40 o'clock

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRESENT THE FARCE IN THREE ACTS,

ENTITLED

The Schoolmistress

To-night at 8 & Every Evening, a New One Act Play, entitled

"13, Simon Street"

By ANTHONY WHARTON

William Lassen	...	Mr. GEORGE DESMOND
John Rutt	...	Mr. DOUGLAS MUNRO
Cecil Henry Carter	...	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
AND
Miss Raeburn	...	...Miss HILDA TREVELYAN

Scene - A Room in a Tenement House, Whitechapel

Daily Mail

...ily Circulation SIX Times as ...rge as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1913

"13, SIMON-STREET."

The theatre, through the medium of a ...act play, very very rarely succeeds in ...arting a thrill so naturally and con...cingly as was the ease at the Vaudeville ...atre last evening with a little twenty-...utes drama, by Mr. Anthony Wharton, ...ed "13, Simon-street."

The episode concerns the escape of a man ... a woman from being robbed and mur...ed in a lonely house at night, and as the ...hor has written his story simply and ...urally, with never a superfluous phrase, ... gave Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. ...nald Squire an opportunity to hold the ...dience in suspense up to the last moment, ...en they crept ont of the dismal room to ...edom. The little drama made a most ...ective contrast to the gaiety and humour ... Sir Arthur Pinero's "The Schoolmis...ss," which is still the main attraction ... the programme.

J.W.

SATURDAY, MAY 3rd, at 8.15; FOLLOWING EVENINGS AT 8.45.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

KENNETH DOUGLAS and CARL F. LEYEL

PRESENT

STRIFE

By JOHN GALSWORTHY.

PERSONS OF THE PLAY.

John Anthony	(Chairman of the Trenartha Tin Plate Works) ...	NORMAN McKINNEL
Edgar Anthony, his Son		ATHOL STEWART
Frederic H. Wilder...	Directors of the same	KENNETH DOUGLAS
William Scantlebury		LUIGI LABLACHE
Oliver Wanklin ...		... BASSETT ROE
Henry Tench...	(Secretary of the same)	... O. B. CLARENCE
Francis Underwood, C.E. ...	(Manager of the same)	... REYNER BARTON
Simon Harness	(A Trade Union Official)	... CHARLES KENYON
David Roberts ...		J. FISHER WHITE
James Green... ...		EDGAR B. PAYNE
John Bulgin	The Workmen's Committee	... CECIL DU GUE
Henry Thomas ...		... F. CREMLIN
George Rous		OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Henry Rous... ...		... AKERMAN MAY
Lewis		HAROLD BRADLEY
Jago		DANELL GREENE
Evans	Workmen of the Trenartha Tin Plate Works	PERCY GOODYER
A Blacksmith ...		JAMES LEMROSE
Davies...		... C. McLAUGHLIN
A Red Haired Youth		... F. CHARLTON
Brown		... JACK DENTON
Frost	(Valet to Sir John Anthony)	... ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Llewellyn	... ...	... JOHN KELT
Enid Underwood ...	Wife of Francis Underwood, daughter of John Anthony	... RENÉE KELLY
Annie Roberts	(Wife of David Roberts)	... DORA BARTON
Madge Thomas	(Daughter of Henry Thomas)	... ESMÉ BERINGER
Mrs. Rous	... (Mother of George and Henry Rous)	... MARIE AULT
Mrs. Bulgin	(Wife of John Bulgin)	... DOROTHY EDWARDS
Mrs. Yeo	(Wife of a Workman)	... ELLA TARRANT
Jan	(Madge's brother, a boy of ten)	... WALTER PRITCHARD

ACT I. .. The Dining-room of the Manager's House.

ACT II. .. Scene 1—The Kitchen of Roberts' Cottage near the Works
Scene 2—A space outside the Works.

ACT III. .. The Drawing-room of the Manager's House.

The action takes place on February 7th, between the hours of noon and six in the afternoon, close to the Trenartha Tin Plate Works, on the borders of England and Wales, where a strike has been in progress throughout the winter.

Miss Renée Kelly's Dresses by MADAME ALEXANDRA. Furniture by SPILLMAN.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

Before Act I.	OVERTURE, "The Wanderer's Goal"	Suppé
Before Act II.	a. TWO MOVEMENTS, "Peer Gynt"	Greig
	b. "Melody in B Flat"	Haines
Before Act III.	ORIENTAL DANCE, "An Eastern Romance"	Haines
	TWO MOVEMENTS, "Casse Noisette"	Tschaikowsky

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 3

Sole Lessee.
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

3/5/1913

STALL

H19

To be retained

"Strife" at the Comedy.

At the Comedy Theatre Messrs. Kenneth Douglas and Carl Leyel's first production in joint management, "The Inferior Sex," finished its very brief run last night (Saturday). Mr. Leyel has certainly had quite a lot of experience in play producing this season. The next attraction at the Comedy Theatre will be John Galsworthy's sombre play "Strife," with Mr. Norman McKinnel in his original part of John Anthony, the chairman of the company whose employés were on strike. Mr. Edmund Gwenn played the valet to John Anthony, but he will not be available now. "Strife" has had twenty-two performances—six at the Duke of York's, nine at the Haymarket, seven at Adelphi, all of them in the year of its production, viz., 1909.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

The Merchant of Venice

Duke of Venice	IAN ROBERTSON
Prince of Morocco	GRENDON BENTLEY
Shylock (a Jew)	J. FORBES-ROBERTSON
Antonio (a Merchant of Venice) ...	PERCY RHODES
Bassanio (his friend)	BASIL GILL
Lorenzo (in love with Jessica) ...	CHARLES GRAHAM
Gratiano, Salanio, Salarino — Friends to Antonio and Bassanio	ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY; WALTER RINGHAM; GEORGE HAYES
Tubal (a Jew)	MONTAGUE RUTHERFURD
Launcelot Gobbo (a Clown)	H. ATHOL FORDE
Old Gobbo (father to Launcelot) ...	S. T. PEARCE
Leonardo (servant to Bassanio) ...	E. A ROSS
Balthazar (servant to Portia) ...	ROBERT ATKINS
Gaoler	ERIC ADENEY
Clerk of the Court	RICHARD ANDEAN
Portia (a rich heiress)	Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT
Nerissa (her waiting-maid)	Miss AUDREY FORD
Jessica (daughter of Shylock) ...	Miss JOAN TUCKETT

Magnificoes of Venice, Officers, Servants, Waiting-Maids, etc.

General Manager	For FORBES-ROBERTSON	PERCY BURTON
Treasurer		H. B. FITZGIBBON
Stage Manager		ALEXANDER CASSY
Musical Director		PERCY E. FLETCHER
Assistant Manager		RAY HENDERSON

Synopsis of Scenery

ACT I.

Scene 1	Street in Venice
Scene 2	Garden at Belmont
Scene 3	Street in Venice

Interval of Ten Minutes.

ACT II.

Scene 1	A Room in Portia's House
Scene 2	By Shylock's House

Interval of Ten Minutes.

ACT III.

Scene 1	Street in Venice
Scene 2	A Room in Portia's House
Scene 3	Street in Venice
Scene 4	A Room in Portia's House

Interval of Twelve Minutes.

ACT IV.

Scene	A Court of Justice

Interval of Ten Minutes.

ACT V.

Scene	Garden at Belmont

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER and W. T. HEMSLEY.

Secretary	Stage Manager - -	ERNEST D'AUBAN
	Acting Manager - -	C. F. TAYLOR
	R. H. LINDO	Treasurer C. H. THOMAS
Business Manager - - - -		SIDNEY SMITH

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, MAY 6, 1913.

A NEW SHYLOCK.

MR. FORBES-ROBERTSON IN "THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Mr. Forbes-Robertson, who presented at Drury Lane Theatre last evening a revival of Shakespeare's play "The Merchant of Venice," appeared for the first time in London in the character of Shylock.

The very natural curiosity to see Mr. Robertson in a part so different from those in which he has won great popularity attracted a representative audience, but in justice to the actor's deservedly great reputation it must be said that as Shylock he did not succeed in maintaining the high standard reached in other of his well-known parts.

The dignity, the eloquence, the carriage were such as were to be expected, but the character of Shylock requires more than Mr. Robertson put into it last evening, and most of all were missing the pride of the old Jew, his scorn for those not of his own people, the hatred of those he regarded as his enemies. Just for one moment—when he was about to leave the court, after the trial scene did he succeed in realising to perfection the attitude of the old man to those around him.

Miss Gertrude Elliott in the earlier acts was a charming Portia, but temperamentally she was not well suited in the trial scene. She failed to convince us that she had convinced the court. Taking the performance of the play generally it cannot be described as inspiring, but Mr. Basil Gill and Mr. Percy Rhodes gave more than useful support to their leader. J. W.

1090

"8d. A MILE"

The New Stop Press Revue

In Two Acts and several appointments by GEORGE GROSSMITH and FRED THOMPSON.

Music Composed and arranged by WILLY REDSTONE.
Lyrics by HUGH E. WRIGHT.
Ballets by THEODOR KOSLOFF.
Dances and Ensembles by JULIAN ALFRED.

Produced by GEORGE GROSSMITH, A. CHARLOT, and M. V. LEVEAUX.

ROBERT HALE

ALFRED AUSTIN | AUSTIN MELFORD

HUGH E. WRIGHT

GARRY LYNCH | HORACE HOWARD

J. MORRISON

RENE KOVAL

MAURICE & FLORENCE WALTON

ELLA RETFORD

VIOLET ENGLEFIELD | MARJORIE MAXWELL

DOROTHY SELBORNE | PHYLLIS MONKMAN

MARY ROBSON | JEAN DE LANDE

CARLOTTA MOSSETTI | HILDA BEWICKE

MURIEL HUDSON

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Saturday, May 10th, 1913, at 8.30,

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY

PRESENTS A REVIVAL OF

"A PLEASANT CONCEITED HISTORIE," called

"THE TAMING OF THE SHREW,"

By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE,

IN A NEW WAY.

A Lord ... ... Christopher Sly (a Tinker) Hostess ... .. Page ... ... Huntsman ... ... Baptista	Persons in the Induction	... Mr. PERCY WALSH Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY Miss FLORENCE HUNT Master HAROLD FRENCH Mr. DAVID BAIN
Vincentio	.. (A rich Gentleman of Padua) ...	... Mr. ALBERT E. RAYNOR
Lucentio	(An old Gentleman of Pisa) ...	Mr. CHARLES J. CAMERON
Petruchio ...	(Son of Vincentio, in love with Bianca)	Mr. EUGENE WELLESLEY
Gremio	(A Gentleman of Verona, Suitor to Katherina)	... Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Hortensio ...	... (Suitors to Bianca) ...	Mr. ERNEST STIDWELL
Tranio		Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Biondello	(Servants to Lucentio) ...	Mr. GORDON McLEOD
Grumio		Mr. DENHOLM MUIR
Curtis ...	... (Servants to Petruchio) ...	Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
A Pedant	... ...	Miss BESSIE ELDER
A Tailor	... ...	Mr. ALFRED TIBERSON
A Haberdasher ...	... ...	... Mr. GERALD JEROME
A Widow	... ...	Mr. SYDNEY COLTSON
Bianca	... ...	... Miss BRENDA GIBSON
Katherina	... (Daughters of Baptista) ...	Miss ANNIE TURRELL Miss N. de SILVA

Ladies in Attendance.—Misses MARY GRAY, RITA RITCHIE, LILIAN STIDWELL, MOLLY WELLESLEY, &c.

Servants, Huntsmen, Officers, &c.—HAROLD CARTON, A. ROBINSON, H. McHUGH, C. GOODALL, A. LLOYD.

The Heraldry and Costumes designed by GEORGE KRUGER.

Stage Decoration painted by GEORGE J. DODSON. Costumes executed by the Misses GLOAG and C. ALLAN.

The Play will be performed with continuous action, and with only one interval.

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY begs to acknowledge his indebtedness to Mr. WILLIAM POEL for his help in the staging of the play.

The Old Music under the direction of Miss NELLIE CHAPLIN, whose Orchestra will play the following:—

"... Day" Traditional (From the Fitzwilliam Collection)
"... Night" .. (From Playford's Dancing Master)
... March" .. (From the Fitzwilliam Collection)

The Entr'acte Music will be played in the Bower Scene

"Axre" ... ... By Barrett
"The Old Spagnioletta" .. .. By Giles Farnaby
"Saint Martin's" ... ... By Playford

... instruments used in the Entr'acte Music are Viola d'Amore (The Dragon) made and lent by G. Saint George, and the Viola da Gamba by Barak Norman (1718) Kindly lent by Arthur F. Hill

Stage Director ... ... Mr. JOHN KURKAMP | Musical Director ... ... Mr. W. H. HUDSON
Assistant Stage Managers ... ... Mr. DAVID BAIN and Mr. SYDNEY COLTSON

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
2it. 2s. 6d. Gallery 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7483.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

LAST NIGHT'S PLAY.

Mr. Martin Harvey's Success in "The Taming of the Shrew."

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Mr. Martin Harvey can congratulate himself on having thoroughly interested, pleased, and highly amused his audience at the Prince of Wales Theatre last evening with his production and performance of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." Mr. Harvey is no truculent Petruchio, grim of aspect and threatening voice. On the contrary, he is a very natural fellow, merry and of unfailing good humour, and by his very humour makes Katherine see the folly of her ways, and so cures her of her tempers. It was a pleasure to witness a performance of this "historie," free from the unnecessary noise that some actors have considered necessary.

In last evening's production there was much that was curious and novel, but that is no reason why the method followed need be described as an improvement on, or even as good as, the more modern method of realistic background. At the Prince of Wales's Theatre all the action takes place in an arched court, opening at the back to a green plain that stretches to the horizon. The proscenium is arched shape, and bordered with laurels, and all the lights are thrown on the stage from lamps within the auditorium. The stage itself is carried into the stalls, and from it steps lead down to the floor, reminding one to some extent of the Reinhardt influence.

Mr. Harvey used Mr. Poel's design to carry out the idea of a play within a play, and a fruitful source of amusement to many people were the antics of the tipsy tinker, Christopher Sly, as he sat in a pew on the stalls floor watching a performance supposed to be given for his entertainment. Mr. Charles Gleaney as the tinker made the very most of his opportunities in such circumstances, and, after Mr. Harvey, secured the larger share of the applause. Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, too, was a prime favourite of the audience. These actors and Miss N. de Silva, who gave a performance as Katherine that, without being distinguished or subtle, served the purpose of showing off Petruchio as the commanding personality of the comedy. Taking the performers generally apart from the principals, it can be conceded that their support was sufficient. It certainly pleased the audience, which was not satisfied until, after many calls, Mr. Harvey made a short

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, MAY 6, 1913.

WHAT IS HAPPENING IN THEATRE LAND.

By JAMES WATERS.

London's play land, the central area within which the seeker of amusement will find all the first-class theatres, music-halls, cinemas, and restaurants, has once more resumed its normal condition of being a surprisingly interesting city within a great metropolis. The "slump" that was so expensive an affair for the theatres in the winter has gone. It had disappeared by the time it began to be discussed. There have been failures since. There are failures at the moment—several of them—but the desolating condition of things that kills nearly all the good plays as well as the very poor ones has gone. Theatre Land is happy enough now with its many successes, but the managers are not boasting of them, for they know how fickle the great public can become, and the summer that is coming may not be so inclemently favourable to their business as was the summer of 1912.

THEATRES FOR 36,000 PEOPLE.

Theatre Land has now thirty-one theatres, and one more is being built. They can accommodate about 36,000 people. Twenty-five of these houses are open at the moment, and all but one of the remaining six are getting ready new attractions. In the same area there are twelve music-halls, with accommodation for 20,000 people, and, holding their own with them are scores of cinema theatres. Greater London has just over one hundred theatres and music-halls and very nearly four hundred cinema palaces. But for the purpose of play production only the thirty-one theatres in the central area are of any account. It is with the producing managers of that little play-city (that has, say, Leicester-square for its geographical centre) that the English dramatist has to do his business. A success there gets the dramatist a world-wide audience—America, the over-sea Dominions, the Continent, and our own provinces. It is the highest ambition, too, of every English-speaking actor in the world—whatever be his nationality—to win the good will and applause of that curiously (not to be analysed) human, emotional thing that we call a West End audience.

The curiosities of play-producing in Theatre Land increase, rather than lessen, with experience. Can anyone explain the strange verdict given on the first night of every new play in London? It is quite unnecessary to have been there in order to get a reliable opinion as to the chances of a new play's success. There is no necessity either to wait until the morning or even to see anyone that has been there. The verdict has got round somehow. In the clubs and restaurants men will say, "They have got a success at such and such a theatre to-night." They may say, "They have got a failure!" And, curiously enough, this casual opinion, which seems to be in the very air on the night of a new play, is seldom wrong.

THE SUCCESS OF "MILESTONES."

It is said that it takes London two weeks to become fully aware of a West End success. Innumerable instances to the contrary could be given. Take "Milestones" for one instance. Little or nothing was known about it outside the Royalty Theatre before the first performance. The most noticeable thing about the audience before the curtain was taken up on the first night was its apathy. The pit was not full. Everyone in the house seemed indifferent. Yet at half-past eleven that night every restaurant and club in the West End knew that a play that all London would flock to see had been produced at the Royalty, and next day the theatre was besieged by people clamouring to book seats. That was fourteen months ago, and the same company is nightly acting the same play to crowded houses.

The success of a play does not depend on the theatre, nor the luck of a theatre on its locality. The Royalty Theatre is in a side street in Soho. A play will succeed there at least as well as if the theatre doors face the passing crowds of Piccadilly. For years we have been told that theatre-patrons favour the western end of Theatre Land. But do they? Just now the theatres in the most easterly district of it are playing to their utmost capacity, dwarfing probably the receipts at the other end of this amusement city. The motor traffic these nights from the eastern section of Theatre Land and the Strand is a sight such as no city in the world can or could show. Covent Garden, Drury Lane, London Opera House, the Kingsway, and the Gaiety Theatres are all of them playing to their seating capacity, and yet they are in the extreme east of London's playground and from it send hundreds and hundreds of motor-cars at night westward, like a resistless flood, and the pavements when the "break" comes (as the cabmen call theatre closing time) are congested with hurrying crowds. No. There are no unlucky theatres. Look at the playbills to-day and see "Diplomacy," thirty-five years old, but splendidly theatrical and splendidly cast, a revival billed at Wyndham's Theatre, filling that theatre in every corner every night.

RIVALRY OF THE REVUES.

The successful revues and American productions at the big music-halls in Theatre Land can do the right sort of plays no harm. The gorgeously uniformed official with the little cane in his hand who stands at the door of each picture palace will not tempt anyone to put off going to see a play that is made of the right stuff. The public prefers a play (if it is right) to either variety or cinema, and no doubt may continue to do so even if smoking is permitted during the performance.

American rag-time has been for some time the feature of many of the variety theatres, but the one that is ignoring it is none the less selling every seat on the fame and attraction of a Russian dancer. Theatre Land is nothing if not cosmopolitan. It is beautifully inconsistent, too. That is why so many plays get short runs. There are incidents of management that expose the want of relationship between the cost of an article and the price asked for it. The "holiday" manager with a play that will cost £700 a week to run will ask the same price for his seats as the manager whose weekly expenses are more than double that. This is asking for failure.

One of the happiest changes that are taking place in the theatres is the getting rid of one-act plays. Our public is making up its mind that it wants a whole evening's play, and theatre managers are encouraging their rivals in Theatre Land—the variety managers—to take over their stock of one-act plays. One susceptible general manager of a variety organisation made an attempt to run his house with these sketches for his main attraction, but realised his mistake in time to save his property.

Good plays, good variety bills, good cinema theatres are all doing well in the Theatre Land of this city of seven million inhabitants. There is plenty of room for the best of everything, but the public has its own opinion as to what is the best and does its choosing independently of its advisers. Of the three branches of amusement—theatres, variety, and cinema—the theatre is the most fettered and the most abused. It could well afford to be left alone. The music-hall complains of the cinema opposition, but the opposition of the cinema is much exaggerated, for much of the money that goes into the latter is lost to the public-house, not to the theatre or the music-hall.

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WHIT MONDAY, MAY 12th, at 2.30 and 7.45

EVERY EVENING AT 7-45.

MATINEES, Wednesdays & Saturdays, at 2-30

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

By WINCHELL SMYTH and BRYON ONGLEY

(Dramatised from Mr. GEORGE McLUTCHEON'S Novel)

By arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman

Monty Brewster	Friends of Monty Brewster	Mr. PERCY HUTCHISON
Charlie Harrison		Mr. GERALD FITZGERALD
Joseph McLeod		... Mr. ERNEST DEANS
Frank Bragden		... Mr. HEATON GREY
Archie Golding		... Mr. HENRY HAMPSON
Tommy Smith		Mr. HERBERT MARSHALL
Horace Pettinghill		... Mr. GEORGE SALVER
Mr. Grant (of Grant and Ripley) ...		... Mr. AUBREY MATHER
Colonel Drew		... Mr. STANLEY KILLBY
Captain Perry...		... Mr. CHAS. BEDELLS
Rawles		... Mr. F. G. THURSTANS
Monsieur Bargie		Mr. A. MAITLAND STAPLEY
Bertram		... ... Mr. F. HUNTER
First Office Boy		... ... Mr. W. HUGHES
Commissionaires		Messrs. YATES and GREEN
Quartermaster		... ... Mr. F. GORDON
Officers		Messrs. FORBES and BROWN
Mrs. Dan de Mille		... Miss LILIAS EARLE
Janice Armstrong		... Miss CLAIRE MILVAIN
Barbara Drew		... Miss ELLA DAINCOURT
Trixie Clayton...		... Miss OLIVIA GLYNN
Miss Boynton		... Miss BETTY LINLEY
Margaret Grey (Peggy)		... Miss ELSIE STRANACK

PRECEDED BY

TWO IN A TRAP,

By A. E. DRINKWATER.

119

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

NORMAN TREVOR'S SEASON.

TO-NIGHT AT 9.

THE SEVEN SISTERS

An Original Farcical Comedy from the Hungarian of FERENCZ HERCZEGH translated by FERIKE BOROS.

Characters in the Play.

Mrs. Gyurkovics, Widow of an Army Officer		MARY RORKE
Katinka	her Daughters	ENID BELL
Sari		HEATHER FEATHERSTONE (By permission of GEORGE EDWARDES, Esq.)
Ella		PEGGY FITZMAURICE
Mici		LAURA COWIE
Terka		FLORENCE PIGOTT
Liza		OLIVE WALTER
Klari		MATTIE BLOCK
Toni, her Nephew, a Young Farmer		BERTRAM STEER
Yanko, her Servant		ARTHUR CLEAVE
Czori, Conductor of the Hungarian Band		JACKSON BOYDE
Baron Radviany, a Colonel of Hussars		EDMUND MAURICE
Baron Gida Radviany, his Nephew		ERNEST THESIGER
Sandorffy, Member of Parliament and Lieutenant of Reserves		SAM SOTHERN
Count Feri Horkoy, Lieutenant of Reserves		NORMAN TREVOR

ACT I.	..	Dining-Room in Mrs. Gyurkovics' Home
ACT II.	..	Enclosed Terrace at Radviany Castle
ACT III.	..	Girls' Bedchamber in Radviany Castle
ACT IV.	..	Garden and Terrace of Radviany Castle

A Small Garrison Town not far from Buda-Pesth. Time—The Present.

SAVOY
THEATRE

14 MAY 1913

EVENING

STALL
H 5
No

TO BE RETAINED

Preceded at 2.15 and 8.15 by
A One-Act Comedy,

"I DINE WITH MY MOTHER"

Adapted from the French by MICHAEL MORTON.

Characters:

Sophie Arnould		PEGGY FITZMAURICE
Prince D'Hanteville		LEWIS FIELDER
Peter Didier	(An Artist)	ERIC COWLEY
The Chevalier		RUPERT LUMLEY
Marion	(Maid)	MARGARET GROS
Chef		A. J. CHARLWOOD

Footmen: Messrs. EGBERT CARTER, ALAN TROTTER, ERIC CHARLES.

Scene Sophie Arnould's Boudoir, Paris. Time Jan. 1st, 1765.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

HUNGARIAN DANCES	Brahms
SUITE, "Ballet Russe"	Luigini
CLOG DANCE, "Handel in the Strand"	Grainger
RAKOCSKY MARCH.
TAMBOURIN	Rameau
VALSE ROMANTIQUE	Toye

Musical Director—GEOFFREY TOYE.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Acting Manager	GEORGE ROBINSON
Stage Manager	DUNCAN McRAE
Manager	WALTER MAXWELL

Charming New Play.

There is a pleasant and amusing flavour about the new play, called "The Seven Sisters," presented by Mr. Norman Trevor at the Savoy Theatre on Wednesday evening that is very grateful. Mr. Trevor deserves to get a success with this English version of a Hungarian play, for it possesses charm as well as drollery and is free from the nastiness so often considered good fun in farcical comedy. It is a story of a mother, the widow of an army officer, living in a small garrison town, trying as best she can to settle, in turn according to age, her seven pretty daughters, the eldest of whom is but twenty-one. How to do it she did not know, for the girls had no fortune and eligible young men were few. One day, however, the fourth girl, Mici, came home, expelled from school for making fun of one of the professors, and in her wake arrived a gallant cavalry officer, who volunteered to marry off Mici's three elder sisters, so that she could wear long dresses, and his reward was to be three kisses.

The Colonel Engaged.

In one hour after his arrival this gallant and ingenious young cavalryman had his colonel engaged to Mici's eldest sister. Three months later he got a wealthy young lieutenant married to the second eldest, and he completed his match-making contract before the year was out by bringing off an alliance between the third girl and a young nobleman of the neighbouring county. Needless to say there were many pretty little incidents, flirtations, adventures, and much merriment while thie little history was being enacted, and if there was not a great deal of excitement there was plenty of good entertainment calculated to make the evening pleasant for the audience. Mr. Trevor, too, did a great deal to make his venture pleasing. He acted well, and if he had not danced we would have been happier. His and Miss Laura Cowie's attempt to do a czardas brought comparisons to our mind that were best not there. However, that dancing did not affect the play, nor the pleasant performance of it given by Miss Enid Bell, Miss May Rorke, Mr. Sam Sothern, and Mr. Edmund Maurice. It was well received, and, whatever be its fate, deserves success.

THE SAVOY.

On Monday, May 26, 1913, was produced here, as a curtain-raiser to The Seven Sisters, a one-act comedy adapted from the French by Michael Morton, entitled:—

I Dine with My Mother.

Sophie Arnould ..... Miss Peggy Fitzmaurice
Prince D'Hanteville ..... Miss Lewis Fielder
Peter Didier ..... Mr. Eric Cowley
The Chevalier ..... Mr. Rupert Lumley
Marion ..... Miss Margaret Gros
Chef ..... Mr. A. J. Charlwood
Footmen: Messrs. Egbert Carter, Alan Trotter, Eric Charles.

The subject matter I Dine with My Mother is so slight, and its dramatic value of so little apparent value, that the wonder is that the English author, Michael Morton, should have troubled to adapt the piece, especially as in the form in which it is presented at the Savoy, a by no means inexpensive setting and quite elaborate dressing are necessary. I Dine with My Mother is essentially French, dealing as it does with a local New Year's custom and the French indulgence in étrennes. It is New Year's Day, and Sophie Arnould, a popular operatic artist, is lonely. Her admirers, including a Prince, and a gentleman rather scantily entitled the Chevalier, have loaded her with costly presents; but all refuse her invitation to dine with her. Each has an engagement to dine with his mother, and is prosaically annoying in persisting in allegiance to his family. Even her maid has a similar engagement, and is heroically prepared to accept dismissal rather than to break it. Peter Didier, an artist, makes the happy suggestion that Sophie shall accompany him and dine with his mother; but after Sophie has gone to the extent of changing her gown for the purpose, she refuses to go, and eventually, after taking back her maid, and trebling the wages of all her servants, Sophie dines by herself, faced with a portrait of her own mother.

DALY'S THEATRE

Proprietor and Manager - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES

SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 17th, 1913, and
EVERY EVENING AT 8.
Matinee every Saturday at 2.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

THE MARRIAGE MARKET

MUSICAL PLAY IN THREE ACTS

By M. BRODY and F. MARTOS.

Music by VICTOR JACOBI.

Lyrics by ARTHUR ANDERSON and ADRIAN ROSS.

Adapted for the English Stage by GLADYS UNGER.

Musical Director - - - - - - Herr FRANZ ZIEGLER

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10.

Telephone: GERRARD 201 (2 lines).

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s.: Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.: Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.: Upper Circle, Front. 5s.: Other Rows. 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

. . Cast of the Play . . .

Jack Fleetwood ...	(known as "Slippery Jack") ...	Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Senator Abe K. Gilroy	... ...	Mr. E. A. DOUGLAS
Bald Faced Sandy ...	(Sheriff of Mendocino Bluff and Proprietor of the Palace Hotel)	Mr. TOM WALLS
Mexican Bill	Cowboys	Mr. POP CORY
Shorty		Mr. MAURICE TOSH
Tabasco Ned		Mr. EDWARD ARUNDELL
Cheynne Harry ...		Mr. FRANK PERFITT
Hi-Ti	... (a Chinese Bar-keeper) ...	Mr. HUGH WAKEFIELD
Padre Pedro	... (a Spanish Priest) ...	Mr. WALTER ADAMS
Captain on the "Mariposa"	... ...	Mr. HARRY DEARTH

AND

Blinker (Valet to Lord Hurlingham) Mr. W. H. BERRY | Lord Hurlingham Mr. G. P. HUNTLEY

Mariposa Gilroy ...	... ...	Miss SARI PETRASS
A Middy	... ...	Miss ELISE CRAVEN
Emma	... (Maid to Mariposa) ..	Miss AVICE KELHAM
Dolly	(Guests on the Yacht)	Miss EILEEN MOLYNEAUX
Pansy		Miss DOLLY DOMBEY
Peach		Miss BEATRICE VON BRUNNER
Dora		Miss DORIS STOCKER
Dolores	... ...	Miss KATE WELCH

AND

Kitty Kent ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR

Spanish and American Cowboys, Spanish and American Girls, Miners, Sailors, Guests, Middies, Footmen, etc.

Stage Production by EDWARD ROYCE.

ACT I.—Mendocino Bluff, Southern California - E. H. RYAN
ACT II.—The Yacht "Mariposa" anchored in the Bay of San Francisco - - - ALFRED TERRAINE
ACT III.—Senator Gilroy's Palace, San Francisco - E. H. RYAN

Time - - - The Present Day

Dresses designed by COMELLI.

Dresses by Mesdames Zimmerman, Maison Agnes, Michard Sœurs, Miss Fisher and Margaine-Lacroix, Messrs. Morris Angel, Johns & Bonham, B. & J. Simmons and Birkenshaw & Knights.

Miss Sari Petrass's and Miss Gertie Millar's dresses in Act II., and Miss Avice Kelham's in Act III., by Lucile, Ltd.

Head Dresses by Maison Lewis. Hats by Zyrot et Cie. Wigs by Clarkson.

Boots by Saunders and H. & M. Rayne.

. The fireproof curtain is lowered daily in presence of the audience.

"THE MARRIAGE MARKET."

Great Triumph at Daly's Last Night.

DELIGHTFUL MUSIC.

Splendid Yacht Scene: Miss Gertie Millar's Success.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Jack Fleetwood (known as "Slippery Jack") ..... Mr. Robert Michaelis
Bald Faced Sandy (Sheriff of Mendocino Bluff and Proprietor of the Palace Hotel) ...Mr. Tom Walls
Captain on the "Mariposa" .....Mr. Harry Dearth
Blinker (Valet to Lord Hurlingham) ..... Mr. W. H. Berry
Lord Hurlingham .....Mr. G. P. Huntley
Mariposa Gilroy .....Miss Sari Petrass
A Middy .....Miss Elise Craven
Emma (Maid to Mariposa) .....Miss Avice Kelham
Kitty Kent .....Miss Gertie Millar

Last night Daly's Theatre had a huge success with "The Marriage Market," unquestionably the most beautiful production of a musical play ever seen in London. There is a distinction about everything that is done at Daly's Theatre, and that reputation—created by the taste, judgment, and generosity of Mr. George Edwardes—easily accounted for the widespread interest that was centred on his production of the new musical play. In no theatre in London or elsewhere are greater efforts made regardless of expense to give the very best that the theatre can give, and the applause that literally shook Daly's last evening was the eloquent criticism of a delighted audience. Mr. Edwardes's newest production comes from Hungary. It was originally written, composed, and produced in Budapest, and there its suitability for London was discovered. Mr. Victor Jacobi, the composer of "The Marriage Market," has never before had anything of his presented in England. But he knows London. He is a charming, observant, and clever young man. He speaks English almost perfectly. He is only twenty-four, but he had found time to visit London again and again so that he might study its theatres and its demands, and to meet him now is to meet someone familiar with our ways and sympathies.

His intimacy with London is apparent in the score of "The Marriage Market." It is not so Eastern in character as Lehar's music. It is not wholly free from it. It would be a loss if it were, but it has much less of that peculiar Eastern character that comes out at every turn from the musical plays of Franz Lehar and Oscar Straus. He avoids rag-time, thank goodness, and gives instead some entrancing valses, spirited march tunes, and at least two ballads that are as melodious as any that musical play composers have yet had to offer.

A Capital Story.

There is a capital story in this "Marriage Market," and Miss Gladys Unger is given on the programme as the English adaptor of the original Hungarian of M. Brody and F. Martos. There are three acts to it. The first with a background of Californian forest and mountain, and the rare adventurous air of cowboys, sheriffs, and Mexicans, armed and ready to shoot, and in their midst an English nobleman travelling in the Far West in search of a rich bride. Mr. Edwardes gives points to Covent Garden in the manner in which he stages this scene, for it is not unfair to say that he has done it more effectively than we saw it done for "The Girl of the Golden West." There, of course, the comparison ends. At Daly's the scene is set for bright effects, for laughter, a little drama, and for a swift, pleasant episode whereby the rich daughter of a millionaire senator, thinking the marriage market to which the girls of the neighbourhood and the cowboys from the ranches gather is only make-believe, gets really and truly married to one of those wild men who live with the cattle out there on the plains. That stood out as the dramatic corner of this play picture. The fun lay elsewhere, mainly with one of the best-acted character bits now to be seen in London; this was Mr. Tom Walls as the sheriff of the district and the proprietor of the local saloon. His manner with a loaded gun of inducing visitors to order drinks was indescribably droll. His readiness to change his mind when paid to do it was irresistible, and when his gun upset the time-table of the "auction" and the heiress was knocked down to the cowboy Slippery Jack instead of to the travelling nobleman he was the only one present who knew that instead of the wedding being a joke the pair were being "tied up" by a real priest. Then came a moment later the consternation of the practical joke-making girl when she found herself married to a mere cowboy. How dare he?

But Jack would dare anything and was determined to hold his capture till his love (or pity) prevailed, and he let her go. Six months later we saw her on the sunlit deck of her father's yacht, day-dreaming. She was thinking of that handsome, manly fellow, with love in his eyes, who reluctantly let her go, instead of taking her, as he might have done, across the mountains to his home. She was dreaming of all that, and she sang of it, and up there above in the rigging a sailor was singing, and unknown to her he was the cowboy working his way as a sailor (so that he might be always near her) in her father's ship.

A Stage Triumph.

This ship was another of Mr. Edwardes's stage triumphs. A beautiful yacht at anchor in San Francisco Bay, its decks busy with charming visitors in charming frocks, uniformed officers too from the fleet near by, and neat little midies to dance and sing with Miss Gertie Millar—who in the story was the English girl friend of the rich senator's daughter. Miss Millar had a charming part to play, and she played it charmingly. As Kitty Kent she too had been at the marriage market with her rich girl friend Mariposa, and there to her surprise got married to that comical English nobleman who wanted an American heiress. And of course that wandering lord had in the interval of six months inherited a fortune, and a marquisate to add to his other title, and so he was back again in America looking for his charming bride, and having found her in this ship he and she plotted to help Mariposa and that manly cowboy. So the cowboy dropped from the sky, or rather the rigging, at Mariposa's feet, and she was very happy, and allowed him to hug her. That was enough to have served in most theatres, but Mr. Edwardes had more surprises; and songs, and dances, and delights to serve up. So trouble arose between the lovers, even when Jack outshone all the men, and it was only in the third act, when he went to her father's house to sign away his claim on her, that the lovers met again, and so ended in happiness the romance of their meeting at the marriage market.

Delightful Music.

There is such a prodigality of entertai ment in "The Marriage Market" that merely outlining the story no reasonab idea can be given of its excellence. Th music is again and again delightful. Th finales are all exquisitely tuneful an romantic too. To hear Mr. Harry Dearth as the captain of the yacht, singing " Sailor Man" is alone worth the price a ticket. To see Miss Gertie Millar, to hea her pretty songs, to watch her tripping fee is a delight. There is in no sense a rivalr between Miss Millar and Miss Sari Petra This charmingly sympathetic artist sing to perfection, and in all her scenes wit Jack acts with perfect sincerity of char Then there is Miss Elise Craven, of "Pink and the Fairies" fame, as a little Middy Miss Kate Welch, who promises to be o of the best character actresses in Londo as a laughable village woman, going to sho how perfectly even the small parts are fitted Between Mr. G. P. Huntley, Mr. W. H Berry, and Mr. Robert Michaelis there ar no comparisons to be drawn. The latter ha done better than he has ever done befor —which is high praise. Mr. Berry is droll and will be droller; and I will say of Mr G. P. Huntley that in "The Marriage Mar ket" he has the best opportunity he has had since "Kitty Grey," and he scored a greater success last night than he has ever done since he came to London, saw, and con quered. One word more about the com pany—a word of praise for Miss Avice Kel ham.

Never at any time in its existence has Daly's Theatre presented so beautiful a pro duction. It makes comparison between it and others impossible. It is the last word in beauty, and, what is more, the beau tiful costumes that are worn are worn, even to the newest girl in the chorus, by people who sing, and know how to sing, in tune.

J. W.

The Marriage Market
Daly's Theatre

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15
MATINEE Every Wed. at 2

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' PRODUCTION

DALY'S THEATRE

The Marriage Market

Miss SARI PETRASS

Miss GERTIE MILLAR.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

THURSDAY, MAY 22nd, at 7-45,
and NIGHTLY at 7-45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S ROMANCE

PRODUCTION OF

IVANHOE

Music specially composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
The Play presented and produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE, who are assisted in the production and staging by S. MAJOR JONES.

Ivanhoe (Wilfred of Ivanhoe. The Crusader)		Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Prince John (Regent of England)		Mr. FRED MORGAN
Lucas de Beaumanoir (Grand Master of the Templars)		Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Ahmed, Abdul	Saracens	Mr. GUSTAVE
Cedric the Saxon		Mr. H. SULLIMAN
Gurth (his Serf)		Mr. ALLAN WILKIE
Wamba (his Fool)		Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Athelstane (called the Unready)		Mr. FRED INGRAM
Oswald (a Steward)		Mr. NORMAN LEYLAND
Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert		Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
De Bracy ...	Knight Templars	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Claude Vipont... ...		Mr. W. E. HALL
Reginald Front de Bœuf		Mr. MAURICE SMITH
Fitz Urse ...		Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Philip Malvoisin ...		Mr. K. MCBEAN
Will Locksley ...		Mr. ALLEN ELLIS
Friar Aymer ...	Foresters	Mr. FRANK HARVEY
Much the Miller ...		Mr. JERROLD MANVILLE
Allan A Dale ...		Mr. GEORGE MILTON
Stamford		Mr. RICHARD BODE
Sarah (Serving Woman)		Mr. CHARLES WINGATE
Ulrica (the Mad)		Miss MARJORIE BATTIS
The Lady Rowena		Miss GRACE LESTER
Elgitha (her Maid)		Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
Richard King of England (known as the Black Knight)		Miss NANCY BEVINGTON
Conrad (Jailor)		Mr. E. A. WARBURTON
Francis (Jailor)		Mr. F. ELSWORTHY
Isaac of York		Mr. F. WILLING
Rebecca (the Jewess)	and	Mr. HUBERT CARTER
		Miss TITTELL-BRUNE

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES

123
1
1921

ACT 1. Scene 1	... ...	On the Border of Moorlands
DUET	- - - -	"Cushla Ma Chree."
	Composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
	2	... The Outlook Tower
	3	The Hall of Rotherwood Castle
ACT 2. Scene 1	... ...	... House of Isaac the Jew
	2	... The Hut in the Woods
SONG	- - - -	"The Barefooted Friar"
	Composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
	3	... Sherwood Forest
SONG	- - - -	"Hey Derry Down."
	Composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
ACT 3. Scene 1	...	A Dungeon in the Castle of Torquilstone
	2	A Turret Chamber in the Castle
	3	The Tapestry Tower
	4 ...	The Outer Walls of Torquilstone Castle
	5	At the Castle Gates
	6	The Castle of Torquilstone
ACT 4. Scene 1	... ...	... In the Preceptory
	2	...The Judgment Hall
	3	The Grand Tournament

Sword Fights arranged by Professor FELIX GRAVÉ.

Wigs and Costumes designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, 41 Wardour Street, W.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS, and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra, under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

(1) PRELUDE TO "IVANHOE" - - - H. Sullivan-Brooke
(2) SELECTION - "Lohengrin" - - Wagner
(3) SELECTION - "Oh! Oh! Delphine" - - Ivan Caryl
(4) SELECTION FROM THE OPERA "IVANHOE" - - Sullivan

The Programme of Music is subject to alterations according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

The Lyceum public is one of the best in the world. They know what they like, and when they get it they may be reckoned on to express their satisfaction in unmistakable terms. Last night they manifestly found the Messrs Melville's new production of "Ivanhoe" entirely to their taste, and promptly stamped it with the seal of their approval. The anonymous adapter of Sir Walter Scott's novel has indeed fashioned a capital drama, picturesque and thrilling, out of the material at his disposal. If somewhat inclined to drag in the earlier scenes, the piece speedily improves in pace, and finishes in a veritable gallop. The story, allowing for a little dramatic license, is followed with creditable closeness, while the production is altogether worthy of the present traditions of the theatre. In the big hall at Rotherwood Castle Cedric the Saxon offers a ready welcome to all comers, even if they be Normans, such as Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert and Reginald Front de Bœuf, who stand for the villains of the play. Rebecca, also, come Ivanhoe himself, disguised as a Pilgrim, Isaac of York, and Rebecca. Soon we are in the very thick of the intrigue which leads to the return of Richard of England, the rallying to his standard of the bold outlaws of Sherwood Forest, the siege of Torquilstone Castle, and, finally the grand tournament, ablaze with light and colour, at which Ivanhoe at last defeats his unworthy foe.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1913.

FILM BATTLE AT THE TOWER.

The Tower of London echoed to the clash of armed men in the early hours of yesterday morning, but never a head was broken. Saxon and Norman fought in the moat and up by the gates, and the sentries of the King beheld the battle, and two men with cinematograph machines turned the cameras on the fights gallantly fought by the "Ivanhoe" company, late of the Lyceum Theatre.

Strange pranks are ofttimes played with history. Here, in the Tower of London, 250 "supers" fought yesterday morning to reproduce some stirring scenes from the Lyceum version of Scott's "Ivanhoe," and when the series of encounters that began at six o'clock ended three hours later Saxons and Normans crowded pell-mell into the waiting motor-omnibuses that brought them to the Tower, and back they were carried to the Lyceum Theatre to doff their arms and armour before sitting down, on the stage, to breakfast.

Hardly a man of them knew that he was supposed to have fought at the Castle of Torquilstone, and with a good meal under each belt and a fee for the fighting done all were well content to let it be.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, MAY 19, 1913.

THEATRE SIEGE.

FREE FIGHTS FOR POSSESSION.

ROTHSCHILD PLAY DISPUTE.

GUARD FOR MR. BOURCHIER.

An unrehearsed drama was played outside and inside the Garrick Theatre—the first act late on Friday night and the last on Saturday afternoon. The plot was worked out by the rival supporters of Mr. J. Salter Hansen, an American theatre manager, producer of Baron Henri de Rothschild's play "Crœsus," and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who is to take the leading part in the play and who had leased the Garrick Theatre to Mr. Hansen for thirteen weeks under certain conditions.

An interim injunction applied for by Mr. Hansen against Mr. Bourchier and Baron Henri de Rothschild was granted by Mr. Justice Bucknill last Thursday. By that injunction Mr. Bourchier was restrained from preventing Mr. Hansen from exercising certain rights under an agreement in respect of the Garrick Theatre dated April 1, 1913. Mr. Bourchier immediately applied for a discharge of the injunction, and this was granted at a private hearing at Mr. Justice Bucknill's house at Epsom on Saturday.

BARRICADED BOX-OFFICE.

On Friday night, shortly after eleven, Mr. Hansen arrived at the theatre with some men and a woman. They went to the room occupied by Mr. Bourchier's general manager, Mr. Burchill, and four other men, and pushed them into the street. One man, it is alleged, was taken down the stairs head first. Mr. Hansen and his men remained in possession.

On Saturday afternoon, receiving news by telephone from Epsom that the injunction against Mr. Bourchier had been dissolved, Mr. Burchill and some twenty men went to the theatre and found Mr. Hansen's party, including the woman, barricaded in the box-office. This was rushed, the barricade of planks and chairs was broken down, and the woman was escorted out of the building. Free fights then took place, during which Mr. Hansen and his men were ejected.

Later in the day Mr. Hansen was arrested in Gray's Inn-road, an allegation being made against him of having uttered threats of personal violence towards Mr. Bourchier. He was taken to Vine-street Police Station, and the case will be heard at Bow-street to-day.

MR. BOURCHIER'S STATEMENT.

Interviewed yesterday at his house, where a detective was on duty to guard him, Mr. Bourchier said: "Briefly, this is what took place with regard to the theatre and the play. I leased the theatre to Mr. Hansen for thirteen weeks, one of the conditions being that I should have the sole use of three rooms. I had nothing whatever to do with the production of the play and was simply asked by Baron Henri de Rothschild, in an emergency, to play the leading part. One of my conditions of acceptance was that I should not be interfered with.

"At a rehearsal Mr Hansen began interfering, and I said I could not allow that. Going to the theatre on Tuesday I found the author in a terrible state. He said that Mr. Hansen had made various objections to the play, and I found that the scenery had been taken away and lodged in a depository. I hope to get it back to-morrow, and the play will be produced on Thursday."

Mr. Hansen, in a statement to the Press, said: "The reason I do not want to allow the performance next Thursday is merely this: that the translation of the play (which was written originally in French) is very weak, and I am sure it will be a failure."

SUNDAY NIGHT REHEARSAL.

A rehearsal of "Crœsus" was held in the Garrick Theatre last night, Mr. Arthur Bourchier taking part. Commissionaires remained in force during the day, each entrance being guarded.

THEATRE SIEGE SEQUEL.

ALLEGED THREATS TO MR. BOURCHIER.

A sequel to the siege of the Garrick Theatre, arising out of a dispute over Baron Henri de Rothschild's play "Crœsus," was heard at Bow-street yesterday. Mr. John Salter Hansen, thirty-three, an American citizen, who described himself as an impresario, of the Savoy Hotel, was remanded on a charge of using threats towards Mr. Arthur Bourchier.

Mr. Bodkin (prosecuting) said these proceedings had been taken at the instance of Mr. Bourchier not for the purpose of punishment, but to secure safety in going about his ordinary pursuits. It was through the arrangements which had given rise to civil proceedings that Mr. Bourchier first became acquainted with the defendant. On two occasions since then threats of a serious nature had been uttered by Mr Hansen—accompanied by most abominable language, and Mr. Bourchier was in consequence really and actually in fear of personal violence from him.

Detective-Inspective Carlin said he received a warrant for Mr. Hansen's arrest and at 6.30 p.m. on Saturday, in company with Sergeant Vanner, he saw Mr. Hansen leave the courtyard of the Savoy Hotel in a taxicab. He crossed over and said, "Mr. Hansen, I am a police officer. I want to speak to you." The defendant stood up in the cab and waved a stick over his head, saying, "Keep back; keep back." The cab went along the Strand.

TAXICAB PURSUIT.

The inspector said he and Sergeant Vanner followed in another taxicab. Presently Mr. Hansen again stood up and waved his stick. Outside Gray's Inn-road police station Mr. Hansen's cab stopped, and the witness, who had been following all the way, stopped Mr. Hansen as he was entering the station, saying, "I believe your name is John Salter Hansen?" Mr. Hansen was terribly excited and tried to push him back, saying, "What the —— has that to do with you? Who are you? Are you one of Baron Rothschild's men? What are you getting out of this job?"

When asked why he did not stop when called (added the witness) Mr. Hansen said, "I suppose you will get £1,000 out of the baron for this." He was still very excited, and the inspector said to him, "Please keep calm. I tell you again I am a police officer and hold a warrant for your arrest." Mr. Hansen retorted, "—— your warrant; you won't keep me here," and tried to force his way out of the charge-room. The inspector read the warrant to him, and in reply he said, "Bourchier has done me for £10,000." While being searched he became very violent, and it required four or five officers to restrain him. Nothing of a dangerous character was found on him.

On the way to Vine-street police station in a cab (said the inspector) Mr. Hansen remarked, "I did not think Bourchier would do this." After reading the warrant at the station he said, "I will get my own back. Bourchier and the baron shall suffer for this." When the witness brought him from the detention room that morning Mr. Hansen was still very violent and hostile towards him and said, "I'll make you pay for this. I will tell the judge all about your violence to me."

Mr. Bodkin: From his behaviour on Saturday night how would you describe him?—I thought the man was mad. He certainly looked like a madman.

In cross-examination the witness said he and Sergeant Vanner were in plain clothes, and the defendant could not have seen from their appearance that they were police officers.

SCENE OUTSIDE THE THEATRE.

Police-Inspector Bridges said that at 3.15 p.m. on Saturday Mr. Hansen and another man drove up in a motor-car to the Garrick Theatre. Mr. Hansen walked backwards and forwards in front of the theatre gesticulating and shouting in a very excited manner, but the witness did not hear what he said. About two minutes afterwards he got into the car and said to the witness, "Why have you allowed those people to get into the theatre?" He replied that he could not interfere, and Mr. Hansen shouted in an excited voice, "I gave you instructions last night not to allow anyone to enter the theatre." As Mr. Hansen drove away he shouted, "I'll see about you later on."

Mr. Valetta (defending) said the interests involved between the parties were very great indeed. Civil proceedings had already been started. He submitted that if the defendant gave an undertaking not to approach or interfere, either directly or indirectly, with Mr. Bourchier he should not be placed in a position which would prejudice the civil proceedings.

The magistrate (Sir Curtis Benaett) said he should not allow the defendant out on his own recognisances. He should require substantial sureties.

Mr. Valetta said the difficulty was that the magistrate had heard only one side.

The Magistrate: I have been carefully watching the defendant.

The Defendant: I haven't slept for three nights and haven't had anything to eat for two days. I am absolutely in no condition to be here.

After a private consultation with counsel on both sides the magistrate said: "What I am going to do in this case is this—I am going to remand the defendant till Friday morning. I have told your counsel what my private view is, and he understands the position. I need not say more."

Mr. Bourchier asks us to state that he undertook the stage production of "Crœsus" at the request of Baron Henri de Rothschild in an emergency. It was always a vital part of the contract at the Garrick Theatre that he should play the leading part.

123 K71
Waters, J.
Plays

THEATRE SIEGE.

HANSEN'S APPEAL AGAINST AN ORDER.

As a sequel to the recent siege of the Garrick Theatre, in the dispute between Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Mr. J. Salter Hansen with regard to the production of a play, "Cræsus," an appeal by Mr. Hansen against an order made by Mr. Justice Horridge in chambers on Tuesday was heard in the Court of Appeal yesterday.

Mr. P. Rose-Innes, for Mr. Hansen, said the appeal was from an order made in two actions, Hansen v. Bourchier and Bourchier v. Hansen. By that order the judge granted Mr. Bourchier an injunction to restrain Mr. Hansen and his servants from entering the Garrick Theatre and from preventing Mr. Bourchier from using the theatre until the trial of the action. The judge also granted a mandatory injunction ordering that Mr. Bourchier should have the scenery at Taylor's depository in order to produce the play as advertised.

The hearing was adjourned. The court directed that the furniture and scenery should be moved to the theatre.

GARRICK THEATRE DISPUTE.

MR. HANSEN'S APPEAL.

ADVERSE DECISION.

In the calm atmosphere of the Court of Appeal a temporary truce was called in the stirring episodes which have recently occurred at the Garrick Theatre. Mr. John Salter Hansen failed to obtain an injunction to restrain Mr. Bourchier from producing Baron de Rothschild's translation or adaptation of "Cræsus" until after the trial of the pending action, and also failed to obtain the reversal of a mandatory injunction ordering him to deliver up certain scenery for the play.

The appeal was heard before Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, Lord Justice Buckley, and Lord Justice Hamilton.

Mr. Hansen asked:

1. For the reversal of an injunction granted by Mr. Justice Horridge in chambers, restraining him, until the trial of the action, from entering the theatre.

2. For the continuance of an injunction granted by Mr. Justice Buckmill, and afterwards discharged by the same judge, restraining Mr. Bourchier from exercising his rights in the license of the theatre.

3. For the reversal of a mandatory injunction requiring him, before two o'clock yesterday, to deliver up to Mr. Bourchier certain scenery.

Mr. Rose Innes, K.C., and Mr. Valetta (instructed by Mr. G. R. Crau) appeared for Mr. Hansen; Mr. McCardie, Mr. Harold Morris, and Mr. St. John Field (instructed by Messrs. J. D. Langton and Passmore) were for Mr. Bourchier and Baron de Rothschild.

Both Mr. Bourchier and Mr. Hansen were in Court.

ORIGIN OF THE QUARREL.

According to the statement of Mr. Rose Innes, Baron de Rothschild wrote an adaptation of the play "Cræsus," and entered into an agreement with Mr. Hansen on Jan. 29, 1913, in Paris, authorising him to produce the play in English, £600 being paid for the right of production. On April 1 Mr. Hansen entered into an agreement with Mr. Bourchier, by which the latter agreed to let the Garrick Theatre to Mr. Hansen for three months. By another agreement Mr. Hansen engaged the services of Mr. Bourchier to play the principal part at a salary of £125 a week. Subsequently Mr. Bourchier got into close touch with Baron de Rothschild, and a dispute arose between him and Mr. Hansen as to whether the "Cræsus" which Mr. Bourchier was proposing to play was the "Cræsus" referred to in the agreement made in Paris. Mr. Hansen had made a contract with persons for the supply of scenery, and after some of it had been delivered Mr. Bourchier and Baron de Rothschild approached the contractors for its purchase. Dispute arose as to whether the scenery was supplied to Mr. Bourchier or to Mr. Hansen, resulting in the wild scenes which took place at the theatre last week. Mr. Hansen removed the scenery, which had already been delivered to a depository. The sequel was the arrest of Mr. Hansen, followed by his release on Tuesday night.

Counsel, pursuing this story, stated that when Mr. Hansen went to the theatre last week he found that his men had been forcibly ejected by an army of commissionaires.

Mr. McCardie: I do not dispute that; but he had first obtained possession by forcibly ejecting us.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams: In an ordinary house tenancy, if one person ejects the other, they are both wrong. If a man is in wrongful possession, I do not think the law invites you to go and by force of arms take possession.

Lord Justice Hamilton: It appears to have been a case of diamond cut diamond.

Mr. Rose Innes read a number of affidavits, and proceeded to submit that it was obvious that the production of the proposed adaptation by Mr. Bourchier would seriously injure Mr. Hansen, who was not in default in any way: but had done everything he had undertaken to do by his agreement.

Mr. McCardie, at the request of Mr. Rose Innes, read an affidavit filed by Mr. Bourchier, in which he said that the adaptation which he was to make from the French was to be one approved by Baron de Rothschild.

"EXCLUSIVE" RIGHTS.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, giving judgment, said he did not propose to go into the question of the conduct of the parties further than was absolutely necessary for the purposes of his judgment. On the general subject, all he would say was that everyone must regret that there had been such a quarrel as this, and that force should have been used in the way it had been used. It was especially undesirable to go into these matters, seeing that amongst the allegations made was one by Baron de Rothschild against Mr. Hansen of having obtained the agreement by fraud. Personally, he did not gather whether the agreement gave Mr. Hansen any exclusive rights or not; the appeals could be disposed of without deciding that matter. One thing was certain—the word "exclusive" was not used in the agreement. If there was an exclusive right, that question must depend upon inference to be drawn from the agreement taken as a whole. With regard to the license agreement, he was bound to express a closer opinion. Although he recognised to the full that there were words in the agreement which might reasonably be looked upon as meaning that the agreement was not a mere personal license, that was not sufficient. He could not help feeling that the intention of both parties was that there should not be the grant of any estate or property whatsoever in the theatre, but merely a license, and that was the reason why the word "license" was used. He therefore dealt with the case on the bases that the license was not a personal license, but one which by law would be revocable at the will of the grantor, but would leave the grantor liable to pay damages in case his revocation was contrary to the rights of the parties concerned. Mr. Hansen asked for an injunction restraining defendants from producing their adaptation of the play. He thought the Court ought not to grant that injunction. It might be that when the case came to be tried the point would be decided, but the granting of an injunction was a matter for the discretion of the judge, and he could understand why the injunction was not granted by the judge.

It was not a case in which the refusal inflicted an irrevocable loss upon Mr. Hansen. On the contrary, if anything had been done by defendants which injured him in such a way that he was entitled to damages, there was an undertaking to satisfy those damages. So that he was left perfectly safe in law. In these circumstances he thought the judge rightly exercised his discretion. So, also, as to the withdrawal of the injunction restraining Mr. Bourchier from exercising his rights in the license. If anything wrong was done, there was ample security to Mr. Hansen in damages. It would not, therefore, be to the interests of either party that there should be such an injunction.

As to a continuance of the injunction restraining Mr. Bourchier from acting in excess of the agreement, if there had been such a breach, and it continued, Mr. Hansen might obtain damages. The appeals therefore failed on all points, and must be dismissed, with costs.

WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

Lord Justice Buckley agreed. In such matters as this the Court would determine, as far as possible, what was the proper course to take to maintain things in such a state as they ought to be kept in until the trial, and not prejudice matters which at the trial could be ascertained by examination and cross-examination in open court. It would have to be decided at the trial whether Baron de Rothschild granted exclusive rights to Mr. Hansen. For present purposes he took it that he did not. What he appeared to give was a right to perform a play which was not the work of Mr. Hansen but of Mr. Bourchier, but which Mr. Hansen was to translate or adopt. As to the agreement by which Mr. Bourchier granted Mr. Hansen certain rights in the theatre, it seemed to him plain that that was a license, and not a demise. It was only a grant of a right to use the Garrick Theatre. A right could not be granted to a man to use his own property; it must be somebody else's property. The words therefore involved that the tenancy of the land and the building remained with Mr. Bourchier, and did not create a right in Mr. Hansen to use that which did not belong to him. In other words, he had no estate in the land, but was granted a license to use the land.

With regard to the scenery, the facts seemed to be these: Mr. Hansen ordered the scenery, and application was made for a cheque on account, and it was not responded to. Next day Mr. Bourchier's manager ordered the contractors to go on making the scenery for Mr. Bourchier, and two sums were paid by Mr. Bourchier. The scenery was delivered; the dispute arose; and Mr. Hansen removed it to a depository. In his view, the mandatory injunction ordering Mr. Hansen to deliver up the scenery was rightly granted.

Lord Justice Hamilton also agreed.

The appeals were therefore dismissed, with costs in any event.

THE GARRICK.

On Thursday, May 22, 1913, was produced here a play, in three acts, by Henri de Rothschild, entitled:—

Cræsus.

After all the adventitious advertisement and noisy réclame of the melodrama of the beleaguered theatre, and after the expectant playgoer had passed his way, with policemen to right of him and policemen to left of him, in almost disappointing safety, through entrance and lobby, into the auditorium of the Garrick, the adjustment of the bearings took some little time, and it was not all at once that Baron Henri de Rothschild's Cræsus could be judged quite impartially and altogether upon its not exactly transcendent merits. Perhaps there may be something of "the human document" about this stage representation of the woes of a Lonely Millionaire (a title which might have served just as well as Cræsus, had not Mrs. Henry de la Pasture used something very similar before), but it is safe to say that, had not the piece borne the Rothschild signature, we should not have had the painful sensation of the Bourchier-Hansen controversy, which seems, after all, almost to have been Much Ado About Nothing. The author, whose dramatic output includes also La Rampe, dealing with stage matters, La Sauvgarde, and Potage Bisque, appears to have based his artless story, treated artificially, upon experiences gained first hand, or imparted second or third hand, and his main thesis seems to be that one cannot have both Money and Love, expressed somewhat differently as Money cannot buy Love.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - LOUIS MEYER

Under the Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

EVERY EVENING at 8.30.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

"CRŒSUS"

A Play in Three Acts, by

HENRI DE ROTHSCHILD

Comte Sorbier	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Le Vicomte de Fonsac	SPENCER TREVOR
Georges Grandval	HERBERT BUNSTON
Rochebrune	F. KINSEY PEILE
Maurice Darcet	PHILIP LESLIE
Couturier	CYRIL H. SWORDER
Brouard	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Rene Verley	ALAN MURE
Hippolyte	CLAUDE EDMONDS
Adolf	PERCEVAL CLARKE
Servant	ARCHIBALD MACLEAN
Marcelle de Ligneray	GABRIELLE DORZIAT
Madame de St. Alvaire (Her Mother)	BARBARA GOTT
Antoinette de Fougerolles	MAUD CRESSALL
Helene de Grandcourt	SUSIE CLOUGHTON
Elise	BARBARA THORNTON
Marie Louise	BARBARA HANNAY
Gabrielle	PEARL AUFRBRE
Mdlle. Villette	ISABEL JEANS
Madame Robert	CARMINA ELLIOT
Madame Martin	BEATRICE MAY
Toto	JOYCE ROBEY
Yvonne Pinchard	MARJORIE WATERLOW

The Action of the Play takes place in Paris.

ACT I. At Marcelle de Ligneray's.
ACT II. At Claude Sorbier's.
ACT III. At Yvonne Pinchard's.

Programme of Music.

1. OVERTURE ...	..."Venus auf Erden"...	...	... Lincke
2. SELECTION ...	"Oh! Oh! Delphine"	...	... Caryll
3. SELECTION ...	... "Gipsy Love" ...	...	... Lehar
4. POLKA MARCHE ...	"L'Amour" ...	...	Christine

Mdlle. GABRIELLE DORZIAT's Gowns and Cloaks by "LA MAISON DOUCET," Rue de la Paix, and Hats by "LA MAISON GABRIELLE CHANEL," Rue Cambon, Paris.

Dresses and Hats for Misses WATERLOW, CLOUGHTON, GOTT and CRESSALL by VIOLA, Albemarle Street, W.

Other Dresses and Hats by CHAS. LEE & SON, Wigmore Street, London.

Furniture by SPILLMAN.

Business Manager	THOMAS STEVENS
Assistant Stage Managers	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY, CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director...	ALBERT FOX

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... WILLIAM BURCHILL

(To whom all communications must be addressed.)

The Box Office (C. R. STUBBS) open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

This Theatre is Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH.

"Crœsus" at the Garrick.

"Pity the sorrows of the poor millionaire!" would seem to be the burden of Baron H. de Rothschild's play, "Crœsus," which was produced at the Garrick Theatre on Thursday evening. His hero, Comte Sorbier, earnestly desires to be loved for himself alone, only to find that it is his money that everyone wants. His mistress, Marcelle de Ligneray, leaves him for a younger man; his friends sponge on him, and one, Le Vicomte de Fonsac, uses the money he gets out of Sorbier to dazzle Yvonne, the little cabinette, to whom Sorbier is posing as a poor but honest lover. Alas! reflects this Crœsus, "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of love"!

A Poor Play.

In all this there is little observation and less wit. In fact, the baron has written a poor and colourless play—the sort of thing that might be expected from a wealthy dilettante. The play revels in the obvious—stale platitudes are given with the air of profound aphorisms, and there is an entire absence of grip in the action. With such material the actors could do little; but Mr. Arthur Bourchier looked the millionaire all over and played him as though he believed in his reality. Mlle. Gabrielle Dorziat wasted her charm on the shadowy part of Marcelle, and Mr. Spencer Trevor gave an amusing character sketch of the parasitic De Fonsac. The rest is silence.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE,

SATURDAY, May 31, 1913.

THE GARRICK THEATRE SIEGE.

MR. HANSEN LEAVES LONDON TO-DAY.

UNAVAILING PLEA.

Mr. John Salter Hansen, the American impresario, who was ordered to find two sureties in £500 each on a charge of using threats to Mr. Arthur Bourchier, following the siege at the Garrick Theatre, was brought up before Sir Henry Curtis Bennett at Bow-street to-day, in the charge of two warders.

He had been unable to find the sureties, and yesterday the magistrate agreed to accept his own recognisances in £1,000 upon being informed that he had signed an undertaking not to molest or annoy Mr. Bourchier and to leave the country for a period of four months.

Mr. Hansen looked pale, and his beard had been allowed to grow during the time he had been in prison. In reply to the magistrate he said he had read the undertaking referred to, but he did not wish to sign it. He considered that he had been very badly treated.

The Magistrate: I understood you were prepared to accept it.

Business in England.

The Defendant: But there were certain verbal considerations which I was led to understand would not be lost sight of.

"I agree to leave the country," continued Mr. Hansen, "but there is all my business at the present time in England, and I have been preparing for it for many months past. All my money is tied up here, and it is impossible for me to leave England and be in a financial position to continue doing anything whatever. Therefore, on my release, if I obtain the sureties, I wish to come back."

The Magistrate: Then, I understand you do not agree to the undertaking?

The Defendant: I agree to it, certainly; otherwise I would not have signed it.

The Magistrate: It is no good to leave the country and come back the next day. I won't let you out on those conditions.

The Defendant: Mr. Bourchier has made certain statements about me which are false.

The Magistrate: You have undertaken not to return to this country for four months. The other side are content with that, and they are not content with anything else. Unless you consent to that you will go back from whence you came.

In Prison Ten Days.

The Defendant: In that case I must agree, evidently. I have been in prison now for ten days altogether, and I am not anxious to remain in prison. I think you would soon realise my situation if you would let me explain.

The magistrate pointed out that the defendant had signed the undertaking, which was that he should leave the country on his release, and he would be required to leave by the two o'clock train for Dover.

The Defendant: May I ask you if I may take criminal proceedings against Mr. Bourchier in the future?

The Magistrate: Your solicitor will instruct you as to that.

Ultimately the defendant agreed to abide strictly by the undertaking he had given, and he was then released upon entering into his own recognisances in £1,000.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET

Lessee and Manager
Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30 (MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30)

In conjunction with HERBERT TREE & PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY,

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

Within the Law

A New Play in Four Acts, by BAYARD VEILLER, adapted for the English Stage, by FREDERICK FENN & ARTHUR WIMPERIS.

Edward Gilder, Proprietor of the Emporium	FREDERICK ROSS
Richard Gilder, his Son	J. V. BRYANT
George Demarest, his Solicitor	E. LYALL SWETE
Sarah, his Private Secretary	MABEL BURNEGE
Thomas, his Butler	ERNEST DEGGES
Henry Cassidy, a Private Detective at the Emporium	LEON M. LION
Smithson, a Shop-walker	FRANCIS CHAMIER
Margaret Taylor, a Shop-girl at the Emporium afterwards known as Mary Turner	EDYTH GOODALL
	(By arrangement with Messrs. Vendrenne & Eadie).
Helen Morris, another Shop-girl at the Emporium	CONSTANCE BACHNER
Joe Garson	EILLE NORWOOD
Ginger	JOHN HOWELLS
Tom Dacey	ARTHUR HARE
Jim Wade, known as Gentleman Jim	CHARLES GARRY
Agnes Lynch	MABEL RUSSELL
Members of a Criminal Association
	(By arrangement with Mr. George Edwardes).
William Irwin, a Solicitor	FRANK RIDLEY
Chief Inspector Burke, of Scotland Yard	JAMES BERRY
Sergeant Smith	ARCHIBALD FORBES
Constable Baker	WILLIAM ABINGDON of Scotland Yard
Williams, Clerk to Demarest	ARTHUR HARE
Fanny, Mary Turner's Servant....	ETHEL MORRISON

The Play produced by SIR HERBERT TREE.

THE HAYMARKET.

On Saturday evening, May 24, 1913, was produced here a play in four acts, adapted by Frederick Fenn and Arthur Wimperis, from the American play by Bayard Veiller, entitled:—

Within the Law.

Act I.—Edward Gilder's Office at "The Emporium." (R. C. McCleary).

Act II.—Morning Room of Mary Turner's Flat.
Two years later.

Act III. Scene 1.—Library in Edward Gilder's Home. (Joseph Harker).
The next night at 11 o'clock.

„ Scene 2.—The Same. The same night—12 o'clock.

(The curtain will be lowered for a few seconds between Scenes I. & II. to mark the passage of time).

Act. IV.—Mary Turner's Flat. The next day.

Acts II. & IV. decorated, built and furnished by Frank R. Collinson & Co., 24 Grafton Street, W.

Furniture in Acts I. & III. supplied by Spillman.

Ladies Dresses by Madame Raymond, 76 Regent Street. Wigs by Clarkson.
Hats by Maison Lewis.

Programme of Music.

1.	(a) Allegro vivace		Mozart
	(b) Overture ... ... "Fledermaus"		Strauss
2.	(a) La Fringante		Fiocco-O'Neill
	(b) Pavane (c) Torch Dance		E. German
3.	(a) Dance		Humperdinck
	(b) Prelude and Entracte		Bizet
4.	(a) Polish Dances		Chopin
	(b) Au den Fruhling		Grieg
	(c) Galop		Strauss

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

Stage Manager, Charles La Trobe. Assistant, Claude Rains

Musical Director, Norman O'Neill

The Box Office (W. H. Leverton) is open daily from 10 to 10

Reserved Seats from 2s. 6d. Telephone—Gerrard 3344.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

Messrs. White, Allom & Co. are decorating the Auditorium from designs by and under the superintendence of W. H. Romaine-Walker & Jenkins, Architects.

Business Manager ... ... Horace Watson

THRILLING NEW PLAY AT HAYMARKET LAST NIGHT.

Successful Production of "Within the Law."

STRONG DRAMATIC SITUATIONS.

A play full of thrills and throbbing with dramatic situations; a performance instinct with nervous tension. That, briefly, is the record of last night's production at the Haymarket Theatre, and it is little wonder that the audience rose to it with enthusiasm. "Within the Law" has crossed the Atlantic with a record of success in New York, and there can be no doubt that the triumph will be duplicated in London. Although Mr. Bayard Veiller's play has been anglicised by Messrs. Frederick Fenn and Arthur Wimperis, it has suffered far less in the process than have most American plays. The reason for this no doubt lies in the fact that it is so crammed with dramatic stuff and ingenious "twists" that its appeal is almost irresistible.

When we first meet Margaret Taylor she has been charged with theft at the emporium presided over by Edward Gilder. She is innocent, but the evidence is overwhelming. She appeals to Gilder—not for mercy, but for a chance for other girls who may be driven to crime through over-long hours, insufficient food, and under payment. He laughs at her and in the next breath is dictating letters disbursing large sums in charity. Then she turns upon him and swears to be revenged after she has served her sentence in dramatic climax to the first act, in which Miss Edyth Goodall and Mr. Frederick Ross fairly held their audience.

Handsome Criminal.

In the second act Margaret Taylor, sweated shopgirl, has blossomed out into Mary Turner, the hard-one, fashionably-dressed director of a criminal association. As to how this striking metamorphosis has been accomplished the author leaves us rather vague; but we accept his ruling without a murmur for the thrills he gives us by way of compensation. In this guise she browbeats solicitors, gets money for her accomplices, and snaps her fingers at Scotland Yard. Everything she does is "within the law" and, like Agnes Lynch, a slangy gutter-snipe in the gang—played with a brilliant sense of character that at once established Miss Mabel Russell as an actress of quite uncommon gifts—she is advised by a lawyer whose "Christian name as habeas corpus!" Her scheme for revenge on Edward Gilder involves marriage with his only son Richard, and her announcement of the fact to the old man and his denunciation of her as a criminal brings the second act, which needs knitting together, to a dramatic conclusion. Previous to this, however, the events of the third act have been carefully—perhaps over-carefully—prepared. Jim Wade, criminal and agent provocateur, has tempted Joe Garson and the rest of Mary's gang into a robbery at the house of Edward Gilder and simultaneously "given the office" to the police. Mary will have nothing to do with it because the business is not "within the law"; but, when the gang is at work with the customary darkened scene and flashing "dark lanterns"—a scene full of nervous intensity to which the actors contribute their share—she comes to stop them.

An Eerie Thrill.

Her appeals are interrupted by the arrival of her young husband, and explanations are cut short by the arrival of the detectives, the shooting of the "nark" by Joe Garson with a Maxim silencer pistol—an eerie thrill this—the finding of the body, and the arrest of Richard Gilder.

After such an orgy of sensation the final act seems necessarily somewhat tame; but it is relieved by a brilliant comedy scene between Agnes and the detective, in which Miss Mabel Russell confirmed the earlier impression of her as a remarkable little comedienne; and the confession of the real murderer paves the way to a reconciliation between the young couple and the old man.

WITHIN THE LAW

HAYMARKET THEATRE

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager • SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

Ariadne in Naxos

RICHARD STRAUSS' LATEST OPERA,

Book by Hugo Von Hofmannsthal.

Preceded by

The Perfect Gentleman

An adaptation by W. Somerset Maugham, of

MOLIÈRE'S COMEDY

Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme

SIR HERBERT TREE will produce the Comedy.

MR. THOMAS BEECHAM will be responsible for the Opera and personally conduct the BEECHAM SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

IMPORTANT.

Eight Performances Only.

In consequence of the unusual and elaborate nature of this production, and the desire on the part of the Management to give the public the opportunity of hearing the finest of available German singers, whose services have been secured with great difficulty, it has been found possible to give only eight performances of this work which will take place on the following dates :—

Opening Performance, Tuesday, May 27th.

Wednesday	May 28th	Monday	June 2nd
Friday	May 30th	Wednesday	June 4th
Saturday	May 31st	Thursday	June 5th

Last Performance, Saturday, June 7th.

PRICES :—

Boxes	£8 8s. and £4 4s.
Orchestra Stalls	30s. „ 21s.
Balcony Stalls	21s. „ 15s.
Upper Circle	7s. 6d., 5s., 4s.
Gallery (unreserved)	2s. 6d.

The Comedy.

Monsieur Jourdain	HERBERT TREE
Madame Jourdain	ROSE EDOUIN
Dorimene	PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Dorante	PHILIP MERIVALE
Nicole	STELLA ST. AUDRIE
Music Master	A. E. GEORGE
Dancing Master	BEN FIELD
Fencing Master	GERALD AMES
Master of Philosophy	ROY BYFORD
Tailor	HENRY MORRELL
An Apprentice	ALEXANDER SARNER
First Footman	B. NICHOLLS
Second Footman	SYDNEY GOULDIE
Third Footman	STANLEY HOWLETT
Fourth Footman	PATRICK KIRWAN
Composer	WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Dancer	MABEL ROY

The Opera.

Ariadne	EVA VON DER OSTEN
Bacchus	OTTO MARAK
Najade	MARTHA WINTERNITZ-DORDA
Dryade	LILLI HOFFMAN-ONEGIN
Echo	ERNA HELLENSLEBEN

als Intermezzo

Zerbinetta	HERMINE BOSETTI
Harlekin	CARL ARMSTER
Scaramuccio	HEINRICH ESSER
Truffaldin	JOSEF SCHLEMBACH
Brighella	JUAN SPIVAK

Conductor - - - THOMAS BEECHAM

Opera Produced by EMIL GERHÄUSER and T. C. FAIRBURN

THE STORY.

M. Jourdain, a wealthy tradesman, is determined to storm the barricades of exclusive society, and with that object in view he is initiated into the various polite accomplishments forming the equipment of a gentleman of fashion. The dancing master, the fencing master, the singing master, and even a professor of philosophy, are called in ; and a tailor (rich in original and daring ideas) decks him in garments, which shame the plumage of parrot and of peacock. He also dips into logic, and makes sufficient progress in his education to discover that everything said or written is either verse or prose.

Madame Jourdain, a dear practical person, has no sympathy with her husband's ambition, even though he humbly offers to 'undergo a whipping before the whole world' if the chastisement will result in his acquiring the 'book-learning' which is the heritage of every school-boy. Nor does Madame Jourdain hold with her husband fawning on highly placed but parasitic persons who only batten on his weakness in order to relieve him of his money. M. Jourdain, having decided on a culminating effort, invites some of his titled friends to an amphitrionic repast, which is to be followed by an opera written round the legend of Ariadne's desertion by Theseus, and subsequent consolation at the lips of Bacchus. And lest some of the guests be bored by so serious an entertainment, a troupe of Italian buffoons is also engaged, the whole to be followed by a firework display timed to take place at nine o'clock in the evening. In spite of an untimely interruption of the supper party by Madame Jourdain, who gives everyone present a piece of her mind in what her husband calls 'thoroughly middle-class style,' this entertainment eventually takes place, but not quite in the manner originally intended. While the assembled company of singers and dancers are awaiting the signal to begin, a footman comes forward and announces a change in the programme In order to save time and allow the fireworks to go off exactly at the appointed time, the opera and harlequinade, instead of being played the one after the other, shall be performed together. The composer of the opera and the singers are quite overcome by this amazing blow, but the dancers, who are not cursed with aesthetic scruples, can see no objection to the proposal, and finally persuade their colleagues to fall in with it.

M. Jourdain now appears with his guests, and the performance begins. The scene of the Opera is the island of Naxos, where Ariadne, deserted by Theseus, inhabits a lonely cave. Her three companions, Naiad, Dryad, and Echo, are discussing her inconsolable grief, and lament her never ceasing longing for death. Ariadne next appears and delivers a long, heart-broken soliloquy which M. Jourdain finds exceedingly monotonous. Then Zerbinetta, Harlekin, Brighella, Truffaldin, and Scaramuccio, the five members of the troupe of Italian dancers, endeavour to enliven Ariadne by means of a little exhibition of their art, but without producing the slightest effect on the mourner. Then Zerbinetta tells her that she too has suffered many a time from the same complaint, but has invariably risen to the occasion by accepting the first consolation that has come to her aid, and advises her sad listener to do the same, but Ariadne (in their love-affairs women vary strangely !) will not listen to this well-meant advice and retires into her grotto. Zerbinetta's friends here suggest that she might be employing her time in a more amusing way than by endeavouring to console a woman who has long ago made up her mind to be eternally miserable. Then follows an animated scene in which each one of the four men vies with the other in an attempt to make a sentimental impression on the fancy of their volatile companion ; the latter shows a decided partiality for Harlekin.

Naiad, Dryad, and Echo now announce the miracle of Bacchus' arrival ; and as his voice is heard Ariadne leaves the grotto and listens spell-bound. She at first believes that Bacchus is the messenger of death for whom she has prayed so long, however, she soon discovers her mistake, and enthralled by the beauty and youth of the god, throws herself into his arms. As the enamoured pair retire from the scene Zerbinetta and the others sing mockingly after them and then dance away.

M. Jourdain, who has peacefully slept through the entire entertainment, now awakes but finds that his noble guests have departed. Left quite alone he soliloquizes on the advantages to be derived from associating with the upper classes, and pathetically envies the indescribable something which enables them to do everything, 'even if it is rude' with such a fine air.

Wednesday, May 28th, 1913, at 8.30, and following Evenings at 9.

"OH! I SAY!!"

A Parisian Farce. Adapted from "Une nuit de Noces" of Henri Kéroul and Albert Barré.

By SYDNEY BLOW and DOUGLAS HOARE.

Marcel Durosel	The Bridegroom	Mr. JAMES WELCH
Henri Gourdon	The Best Man	Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
Monsieur Duportal	Suzette's Father	Mr. BRUCE WINSTON
Jacques Laverdet	A Commissaire of Police	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Alphonse Sorbier	Actors in Sidonie de Matisse's Company	Mr. H. LANGDON BRUCE
Claude Langely
M. Batinot	Proprietor Hotel d'Angleterre, Beauvais	Mr. W. LINDSEY
A Cook		Mr. ERIC ALBURY
A Waiter		Mr. CECIL FAIRFAX
Gerard	Gendarmes	Mr. JAMES ASHFULL
Leroux		Mr. GEORGE MUIR
Joseph	Servant at the Flat in the Rue de la Victoire	Mr. TOM FENTON
Suzette Durosel	The Bride	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Marguerite Senechal	A Bridesmaid	Miss SYBIL DE BRAY
Madame Duportal	Suzette's Mother	Miss MAXINE HINTON
Claudine	Sidonie's Maid	Miss HANNAH JONES
Madame Pigache	Sidonie's Housekeeper	Miss RUBY MILLER
Gabrielle	Actresses in Sidonie de Matisse's Company	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
Julia		Miss EILEEN NORTHE
		Miss KATHLEEN GOWER
Sidonie de Matisse	AND An Actress	Mlle. MARGUERITE SCIALTIEL

Time—The Present.

Synopsis of Scenes.

ACT I.	Foyer of Hotel d'Angleterre, Beauvais.	Time—3 p.m.	(Bruce Smith)
ACT II.	A Flat in the Rue de la Victoire, Paris.	Time—9 p.m.	Same day (Bruce Smith)
ACT III.	A Flat in the Rue Cambrey, Paris.	Time—Midnight.	(W. T. Hemsley).

Mlle. Marguerite Scialtiel's and Miss Hannah Jones's Gowns by WORTH. Miss Sybil de Bray's Dresses by Madame RAYMOND, 70, Regent Street.
Miss Ruby Miller's Dresses by CHEZ JACK.
Mlle. Marguerite Scialtiel's Furs by SELFRIDGE'S.
Cigarettes by ABDULLAH. Hats and Ospreys by MICHIE ZAC, 2, Hanover Court, Hanover Street, W.
Champagne by MOET & CHANDON. Furniture by OETZMANN & Co. Piano by CRAMER & Co.

Preceded on Wednesday evening, May 28th, at 8 o'clock and following evenings at 8.30, by

"THE DEAR DEPARTED"

A Comedy in One Act by STANLEY HOUGHTON.

Mrs. Slater	Sisters	Miss MAXINE HINTON
Mrs. Jordan		Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
Henry Slater	their husbands	Mr. ERIC A. ALBURY
Ben Jordan		Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Victoria Slater (aged 13)		Miss DAISY SNOW
Abel Merryweather		(By kind permission of Mr. Charles Hawtrey) Mr. H. LANGDON BRUCE

The action takes place in a Provincial Town on a Saturday afternoon.

Stage under the direction of Mr. JAMES WELCH.

Programme of Music.

Before "The Dear Departed."
Overture—"A Midsummer Night's Dream"— Ambroise Thomas
Before "Oh! I say!!"
Barcarolle ("Tales of Hofmann") .. Offenbach
Polka-Rondo .. "Wanda" .. Raff
Musical Director .. Mr. ALBERT CAZABON

Before Act II.
Valse Bacchanale .. De Zulueta
Gavotte .. "La Cammargo" .. Dora Bright
"March of the Little Lead Soldiers" .. Pierné
Before Act III.
Fantasia on "Coppelia" .. Delibes

MATINEES every Wednesday and Thursday at 2.30, commencing June 4th.

General Manager .. Mr. MARK BLOW
Business Manager .. Mr. PHILIP SUCKLING (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)
Business Manager .. Stage Manager .. Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
.. Mr. CECIL BRETON

CRITERION
THEATRE

May 28
E

Orchestra Stall
G115

CRITERION THEATRE

On Wednesday, May 28th, and every evening at 9 p.m.
MATINEES: Wednesday and Thursdays at 2.30

144

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

Saturday, May 31st, at 8.30 o'clock

Miss Hilda Trevelyan and Mr. Edmund Gwenn

WILL PRESENT A NEW COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

ENTITLED

"YOURS"

By WILFRED T. COLEBY & SYDNEY BLOW

Lady Worth	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Arthur Worth, M.P. (her Son) ...	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Marjorie Grey (her Niece and Ward)	Miss JESSIE WINTER
Frank Prescott (her Secretary) ...	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON
Mullins (her Butler) ...	...Mr. GORDON TOMKINS
Charles (her Footman) ...	Mr. T. A. STEVENSON
Griffin (her Page-boy) ...	Master FRANK BERESFORD
Miss Grimley	Miss LILIAN MASON
Jim Wilson	Mr. C. M. HALLARD
Dench	Mr. WILLIAM ROKEBY
Jackson	...Mr. DOUGLAS MUNRO
Guppy	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Jenny Gibson	Miss HILDA TREVELYAN

ACTS I & III.
Morning Room at Lady Worth's.

ACT II.
The Shop.

The Play Produced by NORMAN PAGE

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY EVENINGS,

JUNE 2nd, 3rd and 4th, at 8.30

And MATINEE WEDNESDAY, at 2.30

First Production in London of

The Magnanimous Lover

A PLAY IN ONE ACT

BY

ST. JOHN G ERVINE

Produced by LENNOX ROBINSON

Sam Hinde	J. A. O'ROURKE
Mrs. Cather	HELENA MOLONY
William Cather	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Henry Hinde	J. M. KERRIGAN
Maggie Cather	SARA ALLGOOD

SCENE - Living Room in William Cather's House

THE PLAY WAS WRITTEN IN 1907

THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

BY

J. M. SYNGE

Margaret Flaherty, call "Pegeen Mike" ...	EITHNE MAGEE
Shawn Keogh, her Second Cousin, a Farmer	J. M. KERRIGAN
Michael James Flaherty, called "Michael James," a Publican	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Philly Cullen } Small Farmers	J. A. O'ROURKE
Jimmy Farrell }	U. WRIGHT
Christopher Mahon	FRED O'DONOVAN
Widow Quin	NORA DESMOND
Sara Tansey	EILEEN O'DOHERTY
Susan Brady	KATHLEEN DRAGO
Honor Blake	HELENA MOLONY
Old Mahon, a Squatter	SYDNEY J. MORGAN

The action takes place on a dark Autumn evening and the following day on the coast of Mayo

The Scene is Flaherty's Public House

THE ORCHESTRA, under the direction of BRIGATA BUCALOSSI, will play the following Selection of Music:

		Before First Piece.
INTRODUCTION	...	"Ireland" ...	F. Godfrey
		Before Act I.
OVERTURE	...	"To an Irish Comedy" ...	John Ansell
		Before Act II.
SELECTION	...	"Oh! Oh! Delphine" ...	Ivan Caryll
		Before Act III.
a VIOLIN SOLO	...	"Silent O'Moyle" ...	arr. M. Esposito
		(Mr. T. W. WARD)
b VALSE	...	"Estrella" ...	Casa Bianca

Grand Piano supplied by CRAMERS, Bond Street.

General Manager ... (for Mr. J. H. Leigh) ... Mr. JAMES ANNING

June 4

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

Sole Lessee and Manager - SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER
EVERY EVENING at 8.15 (MATINEES at 2.15)

WILL BE ACTED

THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY

A Play, in Four Acts,

By ARTHUR PINERO

Aubrey Tanqueray	GEORGE ALEXANDER (His Original Character)
Sir George Orreyed, Bart.	JAMES LINDSAY
Captain Hugh Ardale	REGINALD MALCOLM
Cayley Drummle	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Frank Misquith, Q.C., M.P.	A. E. BENEDICT
Gordon Jayne, M.D.	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Morse	FRANK G. BAYLY
Servants at "Highercoombe"	JOHN RIDLEY MARY CLARE
Lady Orreyed	LETTICE FAIRFAX
Mrs. Cortelyon	KATE BISHOP
Paula	Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL (Her Original Character)
Ellean	ROSALIE TOLLER

The Scene of the First Act is laid at Mr. Tanqueray's Rooms, No. 2x, The Albany, in the month of November; the occurrences of the succeeding Acts take place at his house, "Highercoombe," near Willowmere, Surrey, during the early part of the following year.

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

WEST STREET, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C. (Opposite the Palace Theatre.)

Proprietors - - - - - - - - THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Managing Director and Licensee - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT JAY.

ON THURSDAY, 5th JUNE, 1913, AT 8, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

DURRANT SWAN

(By arrangement with CHARLES MAUDE) presents

"PANTHEA"

A New Play, in Four Acts, by MONCKTON HOFFE.

Characters:

Gerard Mordaunt	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Baron de Duisitort	Mr. C. V. FRANCE
Pablo Centeno	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Henry Symon Mordaunt	Mr. GEORGE FITZGERALD
Percival Mordaunt	Mr. RUDGE HARDING
Dr. Von Reichstadt	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
François Bonito	Mr. RALPH HUTTON
Count Stephanoff	Mr. G. MAYOR-COOKE
Rev. Walter Pringe	Mr. REGINALD LAMB
Little Pogo	Master HARLEY MERICA
Gibson	Mr. JOHN PROBERT
Cynthia Mordaunt	Miss CAROLINE BAYLEY
Mrs. Kilby Cubitt	Miss LENA FLOWERDEW
Princess Malchi	Miss BARBARA CONRAD
Matilda Vanier	Miss EDIE GRAHAM
Gilda Bonito	Miss NONA WYNN
Lucie la Var	Miss VERA CUNNINGHAM
Priska	Miss EVELYN BEAUMONT
Rosa	Miss VERA GAY
Babette	Miss IRIS WHITE
Elsa	Miss ELISE CLAIRE
Julie	Miss CYNTHIA GOODE
Panthea	Miss LILLEMOR HALVORSEN

ACT I. The Home of the Mordaunt family, on the Coast of Northumberland in England.

(Two years elapse.)

ACT II. ... A Capital in Europe. The Apartment of Gerard Mordaunt. (Some weeks elapse).

ACT III. ... ... The Home of the Baron de Duisitort.

ACT IV. ... ... Pablo Centeno's Garden at San-Juliot.

The Play produced by CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Halvorsen's Dresses by Madame REEVES, 221 Ebury Street, S.W.
The other Ladies' Dresses by ALEXANDRA, 47 Baker Street, W.
The Decorations designed and the Furniture supplied by THORNTON-SMITH, of Soho Square.
Silverware and Table Appointments by the ALEXANDER CLARK Co., Ltd., 188 Oxford St., W.
Wigs by CLARKSON.
The Theatre erected from the designs, and under the personal superintendence, of W. G. R. SPRAGUE, the well-known Theatre Architect. Builders, KINGERLEE & SONS, of Oxford.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT, THE 11th JUNE.

The Orchestra, under the direction of MARK STRONG, will play the following Music:—

Before Act I.	—ROMANTIC OVERTURE	Kéla-Béla
,, Act II.	—SELECTION ... "Tannhäuser"	.. Wagner
,, Act III.	—THREE SONGS	Landon Ronald
,, Act IV.	a. ... ... "La Tosca"	... Puccini
	b. MELODY IN E FLAT ... "Panthea"	Specially composed by Norman O'Neill

General Manager ... ... F. ROLISON LITTLER
Stage Manager ... ... LILFORD ARTHUR
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... JOHN PROBERT
Musical Director ... ... MARK STRONG

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 11s. 6d. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d.

BOX OFFICE (L. A. GROTH) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 2890 REGENT.
Doors open at 8. Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinees at 2.30.

The Ambassadors Theatre, London's newest playhouse, was opened by its lessee, Mr. Durant Swan, on Thursday evening, and very nice and cosy it looked in its purple upholstery. The Ambassadors is the smallest theatre in London—it seats only 500 people—but there is room for a house like this for the presentation of clever comedies of real people, acted by clever actors, who need not be called upon to shout in order to make themselves understood. The piece chosen for the inauguration of the Ambassadors on Thursday was a four-act comedy, or tragedy rather, by Monckton Hoffe called "Panthea." The first act promised great things. The scene was a quiet country house on the Northumberland coast at night. The inmates were hardly a sympathetic lot, and Gerard, a nephew of the great landowner, stood out as the only human thing among them. From a wreck on the rocks close by a rescued woman was brought into the house. Her passengers from the ship gave the information that she was a political prisoner being conveyed back to Russia. Gerard suggested that she should be given a chance to escape. No one agreed with him, and Panthea, instinctively feeling his sympathy, tempted him to go away with her. Two years later we find them living together in Italy, and eventually the curious pair of lovers with a strange sense of humour having decided that much the most enjoyable thing in life is death, took poison and realised their wish. After Act I. the play rapidly lost its interest, and the efforts of a strong cast failed to make the story acceptable. A friendly audience, however, was generous with its applause. J. W.

ALDWYCH THEATRE,

ALDWYCH, STRAND, W.C.

Licencee and Manager - - - - A. M. LOADER

SATURDAY, JUNE 7TH, 1913, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

JAMES A. DOUGLAS

PRESENTS

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS:

'THE DUCHESS'S NECKLACE'

By JAMES A. DOUGLAS.

CAST:

Charles Harvey	CHARLES KENYON
Alfred Wood	A. B. IMESON
Reginald Fletcher	HENDERSON BLAND
Barry Groom	E. VASSALL-VAUGHAN
Colonel Delve	LEWIS SEALY
Rene Desparre	WARBURTON GAMBLE
Rubenstein	HARRY PARKER
Julius Macfloosy	E. H. KELLY
Doctor Duncan	W. BRUNTON
Waiter	H. WYNN
Page Boy	J. CHERRY
The Duchess of Hemna	MARGARET HALSTAN
Gertrude Fair	PHYLLIS RELPH
Violet Harvey	FRANCES DILLON
Mrs. Duncan	GERTRUDE LE SAGE
Rebecca Rubenstein	DIANA DURAND
Lizzie	DAUNE O'NEILL
Mary	EVA TREVENNA

(By courtesy of Mr. Kenneth Douglas and Mr. Carl E. Luell.)

ACT I. ELYSIAN HOTEL, LONDON.
ACT II. MAREDALE COURT, BERKSHIRE. (The same evening).
ACT III. HARVEY'S HOUSE IN MAYFAIR. (Twelve months later).
ACT IV. THE SAME. (The next morning).

Play produced by FORBES DAWSON.

Costumes designed and executed by VIOLA, Albemarle Street, W.

Furniture and Upholstery by J. S. LYON, High Holborn.

Photographic Apparatus supplied by KODAK, LTD.

"THE DUCHESS'S NECKLACE."

New Detective Drama Produced at the Aldwych Last Night.

Mr. James Douglas, the author and manager of the new play, "The Duchess's Necklace"—produced at the Aldwych Theatre last night—describes it as an "original detective play." It so far merits the claim to originality that the audience received its most serious and intense moments with bursts of uncontrollable merriment. When burglars attack a duchess's safe and rob it of a black pearl necklace worth £60,000 they stop to drink liqueurs solely, so far as one can determine, in order that the detective who arrives immediately afterwards may take a flash-light photograph of their finger-prints!

When, later on, the principal burglar, having made a quarter of a million by speculation—in Marconis, one presumes, or by backing Aboyeur for the Derby—wishes to turn over a new leaf, he incautiously leaves his finger-prints on a piece of paper. Immediately the "greatest detective in the world" (the description is his own!) pounces upon it and, a little later, having surrounded the house with "a ring of steel" (otherwise a force of police) obligingly gives the ex-criminal the chance of shooting himself or being arrested. He refuses the offer and holds out his hands for the handcuffs. But the duchess will have none of them. She refuses to prosecute on the ground that he was the "victim of circumstances"!

Enough has been said of the play to show that criticism has nothing to say to it.

I have been informed by one of the company that Mr. A. Douglas, author of that ill-fated drama "The Duchess's ecklace," not only took his critical gruel like a good sports-an, but also that, to compensate his company for the short un at the Aldwych, he paid all concerned a month's salary. n these days, when actors and actresses are so often "let own" under similar circumstances, I am sure that all efereaders will join me in wishing this plucky young play-right better luck next time.

* * *

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager — SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

NINTH ANNUAL
SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Monday, June 9th to Saturday, June 14th.

"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE"

Shylock	HERBERT TREE
Portia	PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

Monday, June 16th to Saturday, June 21st.

"TWELFTH NIGHT"

Malvolio	HERBERT TREE
Viola	PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

Monday, June 23rd to Saturday, June 28th.

"JULIUS CÆSAR"

HERBERT TREE — PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

BASIL GILL — A. E. GEORGE — PHILIP MERIVALE

IRENE DELISSE — JAMES BERRY — KATHERINE KAELRED

Monday, June 30th.

"ROMEO AND JULIET"

HERBERT TREE — PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

PHILIP MERIVALE — JAMES BERRY — A. E. GEORGE

The entire Production lent by Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry.

MATINEES: WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

Tuesday, June 10th, and Every Evening.

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY

PRESENTS A NEW PLAY, ENTITLED

"THE FAUN,"

By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

Prince Silvani ...	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Lord Stonbury ...	Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Sir Ernest Craddock, K.C. ...	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Maurice Morti	By kind permission of Mr. Robert Courtneidge.
Cyril Overton ...	Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY
Fish ...	Mr. STAFFORD HILLIARD
Jackson ...	Mr. GORDON McLEOD
Lady Alexandra Vancey ...	Mr. ERNEST STIDWELL
Mrs. Hope Clarke ...	Miss MADGE FABIAN
Vivian, her daughter ...	Miss HELEN ROUS
Miss Lydia Vancey ...	Miss MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
	Miss ADA PALMER

The Play produced by FRANK VERNON.

Act I ...
Acts II and III. ... The Library, Lord Stonbury's House, Knightsbridge.
... The Conservatory, Stonbury Park, Sussex

The First Act takes place during Ascot Races, and the Second and Third Acts the night before [illegible]

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC

OVERTURE ...	"Rosamunde" ...	Schubert
SELECTION ...	"Pagliacci" ...	Leoncavallo
SELECTION ...	"La Boheme" ...	Puccini

The Scenery Painted by G. SACKMANN. All the Furniture and Draperies supplied by THORNTON SMITH [illegible]
All the Gowns and Cloaks worn in this production designed and executed by COROT & CIE, [illegible]

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
First Matinee, Saturday, June 14th.

Doors Open at 8 (Matinees 2) Commence at 8.30 (Matinees 2.30.

Prices—Boxes £1 1s to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows 5s, Other Rows 4s.
Pit, 2s 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone Gerrard 7[illegible]. Telegrams [illegible]

Business Manager ...	Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL
Stage Director ...	Mr. JOHN KURKAMP
Musical Director ...	Mr. W. H. HUDSON
Assistant Stage Manager ...	Mr. DAVID BAIN

Waters, J
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE

"THE FAUN."

Daily Telegraph

You begin to think of the older world. "The Faun" should echo the music of Doric shepherds, and "Tityrus piping underneath his beechen bowers," should bring back to us

Panaque Silvanumque senem nymphasque sorores.

Pan and old Silvanus and "the nymph in the brake." But Mr. Knoblauch's play is not like that. We never believed that his Faun had seen Pan with the great goat shanks. When he tried most to be pagan, he was in the modern, eloquent Emersonian manner. As a rule, he was merely theatrical.

There is no reason in the nature of things why a playwright should not bring a Faun into a Knightsbridge house in order that the creature may use his familiarity with animals to give unerring tips for Goodwood. Any kind of farce is good if you can laugh at it. But no kind of farce goes well with solemn invocations of the great god Pan, and symbolic kisses and eloquence in the "I am nothing, I am everything" vein. One element devastates the other. You are not much amused. You are not in the least impressed. In fine, Mr. Edward Knoblauch's play falls between two (or more) stools, to become a disappointment.

One thing at least we count upon from the author who devised "Kismet" and half of "Milestones"—a sure sense of stage effect. There were certainly scenes in "The Faun" which vastly pleased the audience last night. But for the most part Mr. Knoblauch seemed to have lost his magic. Everything was preposterously long. The most ordinary incidents became invested with awful importance. Inventions of no interest were elaborated into utter tedium. Obvious devices of construction were treated as earnestly as if they were marvellous. Then the Faun had or made occasions for eloquence, and the things which he said and the phrases he used for them sadly lacked distinction. They were echoes of familiar notions with no new quality to commend them. All Mr. Martin Harvey's graces of diction could not avail to make them move us. Yet there are scenes which make their effect well enough, and in one of them Mr. Martin Harvey's romantic fire and Miss Madge Fabian's charm won thunders of applause.

STONY.

Lord Stonbury's pet name was Stony, and as he had lost £70,000 which he could not pay he was going to shoot himself. The penniless Suffragist cousin, Lady Alexandra, who liked him and whom he liked, bade him bon voyage. There was also a money-lender in the first act and subsequently, but we saw no justification for his existence, except that Mr. Charles Glenney made him the occasion for a clever bit of farcical acting.

Just as Stony was ready for the revolver the Faun arose out of the geraniums. He was naked, except for a leopard skin—"noble and nude and antique." He had pointed ears and horns, which he showed us, and a tail, which he kept decently veiled. At first Stony declined to believe in him. Then he shot at the creature, did no damage, and was convinced. The Faun capered and laughed in an inhuman fashion, and they made a bargain. The Faun was to tell Stony what horses would win, and Stony would introduce him to the world of clothes and houses.

So the Faun was christened Prince Silvain, and much farce ensued. The kind of farce which you have met before, consisting in the horrid behaviour of the anachronism in modern society. He made Stony rich again, and proceeded to arrange his life. For as an immortal, the Faun had duties—a point of view which you would not expect of his species.

THE SUFFRAGIST.

Stony had given his country house for a Suffragist meeting. The Faun attended and broke it up with the laughter of Pan. Stony was engaged to a cold but wealthy maiden. The Faun dealt with her mother and paired the child off with an ultra-modern young artist. Then he approached Lady Alexandra, the vehement and also cold Suffragist. He assured her that what she wanted was love. He taunted her with being afraid of it, and she let him kiss her. This was the best piece of stuff in the play, and it was finely acted. The woman felt the kiss and fainted, and the thunder of Pan rolled.

What followed was a tedious anti-climax. There was an infinite deal of talk, a sentimental scene for an old K.C. and the mother of the girl assigned to the artist quite overwhelming in its sweetness, then much more talk, including denunciations of our horrid money-grubbing world, and then at long last Alexandra and her Stony came face to face, and the Faun finally explained himself. What did it matter if he had kissed her? He was merely part of them, he was the joy of life, he was nothing, he was everything, and he jumped back into the dawn to Pan.

Mr. Martin Harvey, working tremendously hard, did make the Faun something mystic and weird. He could not persuade us to be much amused by the farce or to care much for the eloquence, but he did suggest a strange, wayward, vehement creature, and cast over it in all his dancing and prancing and strange laughter the glamour of the unhuman. Miss Madge Fabian played the Suffragist finely. There was reality in her indications of the woman's character and a most agreeable, courageous good fellowship. She made the sudden surge of passion seem powerful and beautiful. Mr. Basil Hallam hit off Stony in a pleasant style, and Miss Muriel Martin Harvey played prettily as the cold fiancée. The audience liked everything heartily.

In front of "The Faun," at the Prince of Wales's, Mr. Martin Harvey presented last Wednesday evening Mr. Tom Gallon's new (to London) playlet entitled "Aurora's Captive." It is nearly ten years since this piece was "copyrighted" at Ladbroke Hall and about two years since it first went into a regular bill—namely, at the New Theatre, Cardiff. Like all Mr. Gallon's work, is neatly written. At the Prince of Wales's it provides Miss N. de Silva (Mrs. Martin Harvey), as it provided her at Cardiff and subsequently "on the road," with a smart little character part. She figures as a sympathetic slavey who, having inadvertently "captured" a burglar, pretends to her mistress (in order to give the intruder "another chance") that he is her young man who has just dropped in to see her, and that the revolver he carries is the weapon with which he meant to blow out his brains if she persisted in refusing to marry him. The mistress being neither credulous nor sympathetic, Aurora receives notice to quit, and there is nothing for her but to return to "the workus." Moved by Aurora's kindness and coming adversity, the burglar resolves to reform and to make her his bride. So all ends on a happy "note." Since its first night "The Faun" has been revised and generally improved. Doubtless the play will stand Mr. Martin Harvey in good stead, especially when he again goes "on the road."

"Aurora's Captive"

* * *

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

NORMAN TREVOR'S SEASON.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.20,

and Following Evenings at 9 o'clock,

A CARDINAL'S ROMANCE

A New Play in Three Acts by EDWARD G. HEMMERDE.

Characters in the Play.

Clive Rushton	of Durham College	NORMAN TREVOR
Mark Cartel	of Durham College	DOUGLAS GREET
Gilbert Tyrell	of Durham College	HUNTER NESBIT
Richard Farrant, a Tutor at Durham		FRED KERR
Frank Lester, a Barrister, formerly at Durham		ERNEST MAINWARING
Kenneth Lester, his Son		GEOFFREY KERR
Father Luigi Villari		ALFRED BRYDONE
William, Clive's Scout		FREDERICK MORLAND
Sr. Tito Castelli, a Teacher of Singing		FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Beatrice, his Grand-daughter		ENID BELL
Mrs. Frank Lester		JOY CHATWYN
Gladys Pennant		ETHEL TUSON
Sibell Jackson		CICELY LE GROS
Dolly Rushton		PEGGY FITZMAURICE

ACT I. .. The Gardens of Durham College, Oxford, June, 1893

ACT II. The Hall of Bentley Abbey, nr. Oxford, Christmas Eve, 1893

ACT III. .. .. Kenneth's Rooms in Durham, June, 1912

The Play Produced by FRED KERR.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY AT 2.30

Acting Manager	GEORGE ROBINSON
Stage Manager	DUNCAN MCRAE
Business Manager...	WALTER MAXWELL

SAVOY
THEATRE
14 JUNE 1913
EVENING
STALL
H 5
No
TO BE RETAINED

1913
Waters, J
Plays

K.C.'S NEW PLAY STAGED LAST NIGHT.

"A Cardinal's Romance" Makes Poor Start at the Savoy.

"LAMELY-TOLD NARRATIVE."

By Our Dramatic Critic.

There are stories so wanting in plausibility that we never believe them, and the story of "A Cardinal's Romance" is one of them. The present day desire to get fresh ideas for plays has been the cause of hurrying on the stage many curious examples of the drama. but it is not easy to remember many instances of a more tamely told narrative than last evening's play, by Edward G Hemmerde, produced at the Savoy Theatre by that very admirable actor Mr. Norman Trevor. The scene of the story is Durham College, Oxford, and the central character is a young man who, having taken his degree, is about to go away in order that he may prepare to become a Roman Catholic priest, and so fulfil what he is told was the dying wish of his father. Vocation for the Church had no place whatever in this young man's feelings. On the contrary, he was in love with a girl of his own class in life, and on the very day that he should have gone with an ordained priest to prepare for the Church he proposed to the girl.

A few months later we are shown the young couple happy in their new-made home. Then came the tragedy. The mystery of his youth, the mystery of the girl's youth was at last explained. . . They were the children of the same father . . . and in a scene of conflicting passion intended to be very strong, but in reality—as we saw it—extremely stagey, husband and wife were separated (because they were supposed to be brother and sister) and the man went off that the marriage might be annulled and that he might find peace in religion.

Opinion of the Gallery.

This tragic end to the marriage of the young lovers might have been made very terrible had proof of the statement that brought it about been sought and found. But proof was the last thing that seemed necessary to those concerned, with the result that no value could be given to anything said or done. Thus, when, after a supposed lapse of twenty years, the man —now a cardinal—returned home to bless the woman, who had been his wife, and had never been his sister, the play became just a little more than one could reasonably accept as plausible. The audience certainly did not take it quite seriously and it was hardly worth the while of the gallery to boo so much that Mr. Trevor could not make a speech. The play was poor material for him, Mr. Fred Kerr, and Miss Enid Bell, and no more than that need be said.

J. W.

"A CARDINAL'S ROMANCE."

To the Editor of "The Evening News."

Dear Sir,—There was in yesterday's Evening News an announcement to the effect that "A Cardinal's Romance" would be withdrawn after last night's performance. Since you have thus prematurely numberd us with the dead, you will, I feel sure, in fairness to myself and my company, give me this opportunity of stating that so far from intending to withdraw the play I propose to keep it just where it is.

Meanwhile I am maturing plans for a future production, some interesting details of which I hope very shortly to be in a position to announce.—Yours faithfully,

Norman Trevor.

Savoy Theatre.

[We much regret the misstatement. Our paregraph was founded on information in this week's issue of the theatrical paper The Stage.—Ed. E.N.]

21st June

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . . Mr. J. H. Leigh
Under the Joint Management of Mr J. H. Leigh & Mr. K. T. E. Nerves

MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY EVENINGS,
JUNE 16th, 17th and 18th, at 8.30
And MATINEE WEDNESDAY, at 2.30

First Production in London of

Damer's Gold

A Comedy in Two Acts, by LADY GREGORY

Delia Hessian ... ... SARA ALLGOOD
Staffy Kirwan, her brother ... SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Ralph Hessian, Delia's husband ... PHILIP GUREY
Patrick Kirwan (called Damer), Delia and Staffy's brother ... J. M. KERRIGAN
Simon Niland, their nephew ... ... C. WRIGHT

ACT 1 - The Kitchen in Damer's House, evening
ACT 2 - - - The Same, the next morning

Produced by LENNOX ROBINSON

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1913.

LADY GREGORY'S NEW PLAY.

Lady Gregory's keen sense of humour had a new phase in the almost tragic story of a miser's loneliness and conversion, narrated in her new two-act play, "Damer's Gold," produced, for the first time in London, by the Irish National Theatre Society at the Court Theatre last evening.

With the simple background of a lonely Irish cabin, Lady Gregory gave her story of an old miser cunningly defending his right to retain his hoard from relatives who suggested that unless he made over his fortune to them he would have no real happiness on earth or in heaven.

It was a sordid conflict of peasants' wit and greed, and it might well have been a very painful one. Fortunately the grotesque humour of the old man's fancy allowed of a happy ending. He would spend the money himself, and so, arrayed in his best of twenty years earlier, the old man, with a laugh on his lips and his pockets filled with the hoarded gold, went as gaily as he could out of the cabin to find his way to a racecourse, to renew the joys of his younger days.

The old man was well conceived and acted with a keen instinct by Mr. J. M. Kerrigan.

J. W.

159

THE PLAYHOUSE

Monday

16/6/1913

Orch Stall

E 5

This to be retained

To-Night, Monday, June 16th, and Every Evening at 9 o'clock
Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present the famous Scottish Comedy

BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS

By GRAHAM MOFFAT

Characters in the order of their appearance

RAB BIGGAR		Mr. EDWARD LYNTON
BUNTY BIGGAR		Miss KATE MOFFAT
SUSIE SIMPSON		Miss JEAN TURNBULL
TAMMAS BIGGAR		Mr. M. R. MORAND
WEELUM SPRUNT		Mr. WATSON HUME
EELEN DUNLOP		Miss ELSPETH DUDGEON
TEENIE	(Eelen's Niece)	Miss MAY MOORE
JEEMS GIBB	(The Minister's Man)	Mr. A. P. ROXBURGH
MAGGIE MERCER		Miss NELLIE GREIG
DAN BIRRELL	(The Policeman)	Mr. WILLIE BLACK

Elders, Shepherd, Villagers and other Kirkgoers.

The Period of the Comedy is about 1860.

ACT I.	Tammas Biggar's Parlour - - - -	Sunday Morning
ACT II.	Lintiehaugh Kirkyard - - - -	The Same Day
ACT III.	Same as Act I. - - - -	Monday Morning

Preceded at 8.15 by a Play, in One Act, called

"THE WIDOW WOOS"

By M. E. FRANCIS (Mrs. Francis Blundell) and SYDNEY VALENTINE

THE RECTOR OF THORNLEIGH		Mr. KENNETH BLACK
WILLIAM LUPTON	(a Carpenter)	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
BARBARA COWELL		Miss CLARE GREET
TOMMY	(her Son)	Master WILLIAM COURTNEY

The Scene is laid at Thornleigh, a North Country Village
PERIOD ... TO-DAY

APOLLO THEATRE.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production.

THE PERFECT CURE

A Comedy in Three Acts

By STANLEY HOUGHTON.

Vincent Cray - - -	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Madge Cray (his daughter) -	Miss CATHLEEN NESBITT (By kind permission of Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER.)
Jack Probyn - - -	Mr. LYONEL WATTS
Miss Scandrett - - -	Miss MAUDE MILLETT

Scene:—A room in Vincent Cray's House, in an outlying suburb of London.

Scene designed by Mr. Tom Heselwood and painted by Mr. Alfred E. Craven.

Gowns by "Janet," 44 Clareville Grove, S.W.

Miss Nesbitt's Hats by Madame Albert, 45 Maddox Street, W.

Bicycle in Act III. kindly supplied by The Premier Cycle Co.

Wigs by Clarkson. Furniture by Oetzmann & Co.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY MR. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	... Mr. B. CAMPLIN-SMITH
Assist. Stage Manager		... Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager ...		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

Prices of Admission:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone Gerrard 3243.

General Manager ... ...(For Mr. Tom B. Davis)... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

There have been far worse plays than "The Perfect Cure" and plays received with far less approval. All the same, Mr. Hawtrey withdrew it from the Apollo after its fourth performance last Friday and has arranged to revive "General John Regan" there to-morrow evening. It is hoped that by to-morrow week Mr. Leonard Boyne will be able to resume his original part.

* * *

APOLLO
THEATRE

17/6/13

P

Orch. Stall

D 1

To be retained

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18th, at 8; following Evenings at 9.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

KENNETH DOUGLAS and CARL F. LEYEL

PRESENT

JIM THE PENMAN

A Play in Four Acts by Sir CHARLES L. YOUNG.

Persons of the Play:

James Ralston	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
Louis Percival	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Baron Hartfeldt	.. Mr. FISHER WHITE
Captain Redwood	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lord Drelincourt	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
George Ralston	.. Mr. EVAN THOMAS
John Chapstone, K.C.	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Dr. Pettywise	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Walter Netherby	.. Mr. E. F. MAYEUR
Butler	Mr. DANELL GREENE
Footman	Mr. HAROLD BRADLEY
Agnes Ralston	.. Miss RENEE KELLY
Lady Dunscombe	Miss HELEN FERRERS
Mrs. Chapstone	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Mrs. Ralston	.. Miss GRACE LANE

ACT I. The Drawing Room in James Ralston's House in Regent's Park
ACT II. The Same—Next Day
ACT III. The Study at James Ralston's Country House at Ardleigh, a few Days later.
ACT IV. The Same—a Week later

Dresses by Blanquaert, South Molton Street.
Miss Lane's Dresses by Hanley Seymour, New Bond Street. Millinery by Renee Le Roy.
Furniture by Spillman. Scenery by Walter Hann.

The Play Produced by Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. Herbert E. Haines.

Programme of Music.

Before Act I.	Overture, "The Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
Before Act II.	Selection, "Madame Butterfly"...	Puccini
Before Act III.	a. Entr'acte, "A Venetian Romance"	Haines
	b. Morceau Elegant, "Fairy Tiptoe"	Fredericks
	c. "Polka de Concert"	Grünfeld
Before Act IV.	Potpourri, "Melodious Memories"	Finck

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

163

COMEDY THEATRE 18

Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

18/6/1913

STALL

H19

To be retained

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1913.

DETECTIVE MELODRAMA.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL OF "JIM THE PENMAN."

The revival of "Jim the Penman" at the Comedy Theatre last evening was enough to make one rub one's eyes and wonder why on earth our managers on the look-out for exciting detective dramas should in recent yeare have gone to America and the Continent in search of such wares.

This drama of thrills, of make-believe, of jewel robberies and forgeries made its appearance, originally, twenty-seven yeare ago. Its author, Sir Charles Young, is dead. Its story was forgotten by the generation that saw it acted at the Haymarket Theatre in April 1886, but to the majority of the audience who saw it last night this splendidly theatrical and impossible history of Jim the Penman—who planned and carried out great jewel robberies all over the world—has new melodrama such as America is exporting every week in return for authors' fees.

Last night it was full of theatrical life, and Mr. Norman McKinnel, strong and grim as the great thief, defied detectives in a manner that we suspected was becoming a lost art in our melodrama. It was a good performance this—the right sort of acting for a detective drama, and for a contrast in the scenes of conflict there was the cool insolence of Mr. Kenneth Douglas as the man from Scotland Yard who never failed. It was a well-cast play all round, and there is a particularly pleasant memory of Miss Grace Lane, who most assuredly possesses the enduring gift of charm.

J. W.

THE GLOBE THEATRE,

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

CHAS. FROHMAN ... ... Sole Lessee and Manager.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18th, and EVERY EVENING at 9,

By Arrangement with GILBERT PORTEOUS,

Rutland Barrington & Eustace Burnaby

PRESENT

THE GILDED PILL

A Play in Three Acts by J. STORER CLOUSTON.

CHARACTERS.

Lord Savedale		EUSTACE BURNABY
Sir Bevis Seaton Glastonbury		EDMOND BREON
Lionel Seaton Glastonbury	(his brother, 2nd Lieut. 25th Hussars)	ERIC MATURIN
Diana Seaton Glastonbury		NINA BENTLEY
Muriel Seaton Glastonbury		MARY O'FARRELL (By courtesy of Messrs. VEDRENNE & EADIE)
Mrs. Fanton	(their Aunt)	EMMA STOCKLEY
Kitty Tyson	(her Niece)	LAURA COWIE
The Duke of Polegate		GUY DAWSON
The Duchess of Polegate		GLADYS HOMFREY
Mrs. Hathway-Dene		MURIEL HAMPTON
Dr. Carmichael		DAVID MILLER
Barker	(Gamekeeper)	ERIC BRIDGMAN
Footman		H. EDWARDS
Robert Dennison		RUTLAND BARRINGTON

ACT I.—The Morning Room, Seaton Place, Sir Bevis Seaton Glastonbury's Country Seat .. .. (Morning)

ACT II.—The Drawing Room .. .. (Afternoon)

ACT III.—The Morning Room .. .. (Evening)

The Play Produced by LOUIS CALVERT.

Preceded at 8.30 by

UNCLE BILL

A Comedy in One Act, by ROSEMARY REES.

CHARACTERS.

Sir William Rickmansworth ..	(an Explorer) ..	.. LEYTON CANCELLOR
Freddy Talbot	(his Nephew) ..	.. EDMOND BREON
Mary Brooke	(an Actress) ..	.. ROSEMARY REES

Scene—Freddy Talbot's Rooms in London. Time—Present day.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Orchestra under the Direction of MAURICE JACOBI.

1. OVERTURE	"Our Miss Gibbs"	...	Caryll & Monckton
2. SELECTION	"The Mikado"	...	Sullivan
3. (a) VALSE	"Nights of Gladness"	...	Ancliffe
(b) MELODIE	"Un peu d'Amour"	...	Silesu
4. SELECTION	"Melodious Memories"	...	H. Finck
5. TWO-STEP	"The Wedding Glide"	...	Hirsch

Scenery by Messrs. J. T. BULL & SON. Furniture by Messrs. LYON & Co.

The Dresses worn by Mesdames Cowie, Bentley, Stockley & O'Farrell by Mesdames BURNABY, Ltd., 1 Harriet Street, Sloane Street, S.W.

Perruquier, W. CLARKSON.

The "Carlton" Cigarettes, used exclusively in this production, supplied by Messrs. ARDONNIS & Co. (Wholesale and Export), 133, Jermyn Street, Piccadilly.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & THURSDAY AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (MR. A. R. BRITTEN) open 10 till 10. Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Stage Manager / GENERAL MANAGER } For RUTLAND BARRINGTON and EUSTACE BURNABY { ERIC BRIDGEMAN / WILFRED H. SIMPSON

Treasurer / GENERAL MANAGER } For GILBERT PORTEOUS { WILLIAM J. DOUGLAS / CHARLES THORBURN

If anything can make the public, always eager for such specifics swallow of Mr. J. Storer Clouston, which was presented at the Globe on Wednesday evening, it is Mr. Rutland Barrington's capital performance of Robert Dennison. In thought and feeling and form Mr. Clouston's work is more than a little out of fashion, but he provides Mr. Barrington with a good part, and Mr. Barrington makes uncommonly good use of his opportunities. The making of pills, no more than the making of frills, nor the making of anything else, is no longer regarded as anything but a credit to the State, and the dramatist is a little behind the times in presenting to us a family of arrant snobs, masculine and feminine, who are shocked and shamed when they learn for the first time that their father's fortune was derived from the manufacture of pills. It is Robert Dennison who shared with their father the position of a pillar—piller, I should say—of the State, who breaks it to the young people that their family fortune had been made out of pills, and lost, apparently, by fashionable living. To ask one to believe that no member of the family of which Sir Bevis Seaton Glastonbury is so proud to be the head had ever heard that their father's fortune was made out of the "gilded pill" is far-fetched enough, but it is carrying it a bit too far to expect us to believe that they are all, men and women alike, simply horrified by the idea when it is brought home to them (literally) by Robert Dennison, the good-natured vulgarian, whose sole aim in life is apparently to benefit them all. However, by way of rounding things off, we have the benevolent old gentleman in the end pairing off with his old love in the person of the aunt, impersonated by Miss Emma Stockley, whose performance of the middle-aged lady is just as gracious and refined as it well could be.

"The Gilded Pill"

* * *

Apart from the mystery of "The Gilded Pill" there is but little intrigue in the piece, and if the domestic interests may be said to be sacrificed to a certain extent, and perhaps too great an extent, to the abstract idea that making pills is a degrading way of making a fortune—which is absurd—we get glimpses of character now and then in the acting. Miss Gladys Homfrey, who, like Mr. Rutland Barrington himself, has graduated with honours in the school of musical comedy, plays with style and finish the part of the Duchess of Polegate, whose subservient husband is represented with a touch of character by Mr. Guy Dawson, and Miss Laura Cowie acts very prettily the part of the humble dependent of the family, who comes out on top in the end. The trivial little piece, "Uncle Bill," by Miss Rosemary Rees, which is played before "The Gilded Pill," is not exactly the sort of thing to go down so easily.

* * *

THE GILDED PILL

Preceded at 8.30 by

BETTY versus DOLLY

A Home Truth in One Act by ANNA KINNISON.

CHARACTERS.

Sir Edward Norman	.. SCOTT CLARKE
Chas. Willoughby (105th Fusiliers)	.. GEOFFREY GILBEY
Miss Betty Vereker	.. MARJORIE MOORE

Sir Edward Norman's Chambers in Duke Street.

THE GLOBE THEATRE
2/7/1913
E
Orch. Stall
D16
To be retained
No Hats allowed

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH
Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY EVENINGS,
JUNE 30th, JULY 1st and 2nd, at 2.30,
And WEDNESDAY MATINEE, at 2.30

FIRST PRODUCTION OF

"The Gombeen Man"

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS,

BY

R. J. RAY.

Produced by LENNOX ROBINSON.

Michael Myers, clerk to Stephen Kiniry ...	J. M. KERRIGAN
Richard Kiniry, son of Stephen Kiniry .	FRED O'DONOVAN
Roger Connors	J. A. O'ROURKE
William Naughton, a shopkeeper ...	PHILIP GUIRY
Mrs. Naughton, his wife	EILEEN O'DOHERTY
Stephen Kiniry, a Gombeen man ..	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Martin Shinnick, a farmer ...	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Mrs. Kiniry, his daughter ...	SARA ALLGOOD

ACT I. The Office of Stephen Kiniry. Morning.
ACT II. The Same. Afternoon.
ACT III. The Same. Night.

The Action of the Play takes place in one day.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors — The Executors of the late Mr. EDNAR BRUCE.
Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

Monday, June 30th, and Every Evening at 8.20,

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY

PRESENTS A REVIVAL OF

"The Only Way,"

By FREEMAN WILLS,
Founded on Charles Dickens' Story, "A Tale of Two Cities."

PROLOGUE, 1774.

Marquis de St. Evremonde Mr. ALBERT E. RAYNOR
Vicomte de St. Evremonde Mr. L. GORDON
Dr. Manette ... Mr. A. HARDING STEERMAN
Jean Defarge ... ... Mr. DAVID BAIN
A Peasant ... ... Mr. SIDNEY COLTSON

THE PLAY, 1793.

Sidney Carton (his original part) Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Ernest Defarge ... ... Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Mr. Lorry ... ... Mr. PERCY FOSTER
Mr. Stryver ... ... Mr. PHILIP HEWLAND
Dr. Manette ... Mr. A. HARDING STEERMAN
Charles Darnay (son of the Marquis de St. Evremonde)
Mr. EUGENE WELLESLEY
President ... ... Mr. CHARLES J. CAMERON
Public Prosecutor ... ... Mr. GORDON McLEOD
Comte de Fauchet, No. 46 Mr. ALBERT E. RAYNOR
M. de Maury, No. 44 ... ... Mr. J. E. FRASER
Aristocrats, Citizens, Citizenesses, Jailors, Sans-Coulottes, Tricoteuses, Associates, &c.
Marquis de Boulainvilliers, No. 45 ... Mr. W. ABBEY
Gabelle ... ... Mr. PAUL BARRY
Barsad ... ... Mr. G. LLOYD
Jailor ... ... Mr. A. ROBINSON
First Citizen ... ... Mr. ALFRED IBBERSON
Second Citizen ... ... Mr. H. BLACKBURN
First Juryman ... ... Mr. H. McHUGH
Lucie Manette ... ... Miss MAUD RIVERS
The Vengeance ... ... Miss MARGARET YARDE
A Citizeness ... ... Miss BESSIE ELDER
Mimi (her original part) ... ... Miss N. DE SILVA

A Loft in an Old House in the vicinity of the Chateau St. Evremonde (Joseph Harker)
Act 1—London ... ... Carton's Chambers (Mr. F. Potts)
Interval of Eight Minutes.
Act 2—London ... Dr. Manette's Garden in Soho, 1793 (Hawes Craven)
Interval of Twelve Minutes.
Act 3—Paris ... ... Revolutionary Tribunal
Interval of Eight Minutes (Hawes Craven)
Act 4—Paris Dr. Manette's Apartments (Mr. H. Young)
Scene 2—Cell in Conciergerie (Hawes Craven)
Scene 3—Hall in Conciergerie (Hawes Craven)
Interval of Ten Minutes.

TABLEAU—"It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done. It is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known."

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE—"The Only Way"	Hamilton Clarke
ACT I.—"Petite Suite"	Coleridge Taylor
ACT II.—"Romeo et Juliet"	Gounod
ACT III.—"Yevette"	Lucien Clément
Entracte "Mimi"	Hamilton Clarke
ACT IV.—"Chanson de Matin"	Elgar
Entracte "Lucie"	Hamilton Clarke

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Prices—Boxes £1 1s to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
Pit, 2s 6d Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone Gerrard 7485 (Two Lines).

Business Manager ... Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL | Musical Director ... ... Mr. W. H. HUDSON
Stage Director ... ... Mr. JOHN KURKAMP | Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. DAVID BAIN

NEW THEATRE

Wednesday, July 2nd, 1913, and every Evening at 9.

Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM and Miss MARY MOORE have arranged with Mr. PERCY HUTCHISON for a revival of the successful Farcical Comedy:

OFFICER 666

A Farce by AUGUSTINE McHUGH.

(By arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)

Travers Gladwin	PERCY HUTCHISON
Whitney Barnes	SAM SOTHERN
Alfred Wilson	BEN WEBSTER
Officer Phelan 666	F. G. THURSTANS
Police-Captain Stone	HARRY PARKER
Detective Kearney	GEORGE STEPHENSON
Watkins	ALFRED WILTSHIRE
Ryan	AUBREY MATHER
Bateato	CECIL ROSE
Policemen	CHARLES BISHOP
... ...	CHARLES POWELL
... ...	W. HUGHES
Mrs. Burton	LAURA HANSEN
Sadie Small	CLAIRE MILVAIN
Helen Burton	ENID BELL

(By kind permission of Mr. NORMAN TREVOR)

The Play produced by PERCY HUTCHISON.

The entire action of the Play takes place in the Mansion of Travers Gladwin in Upper Fifth Avenue, New York City.

	Time	PRESENT
ACT I.	... ...	Five o'clock p.m.
ACT II.	... ...	Ten o'clock p.m.
ACT III.	... ...	Begins where Act II. ends

Preceded at 8.30 by

THE DRUMS OF OUDE.

A Play in One Act by AUSTIN STRONG.

Captain Hector McGregor ...	AUBREY MATHER
Lieutenant Alan Hartley	VIVIAN GILBERT
Mrs. Jack Clayton	OLIVIA GLYNN
Sergeant McDougal ...	GEORGE STEPHENSON
Stewart	W. HUGHES
First Hindoostani Servant ...	ALFRED SHINGSTER

(By kind permission of Mr. LAURENCE IRVING)

Second Hindoostani Servant ...	CHARLES BISHOP

Produced by GEORGE STEPHENSON

INTERVALS ... After "Drums of Oude," 10 minutes. After Act I., 8 minutes. After Act II., 8 minutes.

MATINEE of both Plays EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30.

Stage Manager	For Mr. Percy Hutchison	... ... Mr. ALFRED WILTSHIRE
Acting Manager		... ... Mr. WALLACE STRANACK
Business Manager		... ... Mr. WILLIAM LATRICK

Prices: Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. & 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone 2473 Gerrard.

Business Manager ... ... MR. H. JALLAND

"The Gilded Pill" will finish its run at the Globe Theatre on Saturday next (July 12), and on the following Monday Mr. Lawrence Irving will transfer "The Typhoon" there, from the Queen's Theatre.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Li

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVI

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, at 7-45, and Nightly at 7-45.

MATINEES at 2-30
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS

CHARLES DICKENS' IMMORTAL

OLIVER TWIST

Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music Specially composed by H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Characters:

Oliver Twist (an Orphan Boy) ... ... Miss MARY GLYNNE
Mr. Brownlow (a retired Gentleman, residing in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell) ... Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Mr. Grimwig (his Neighbour & Companion) Mr. EDWARD THANE
Mr. Sowerberry (an Undertaker, of a Melancholy and Poetical Imagination) ... Mr. FRANK HARVEY
Mr. Bumble (Parochial Beadle of Mudfog, afterwards Master of the Workhouse) ... Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Monks (a Stranger) ... ... Mr. FRED MORGAN
Noah Claypole (an ill-favoured Charity Boy) Mr. LAWRENCE PHILLIPS
Giles (Butler to Mrs. Maylie) ... ... Mr. GEORGE DAYTON
Brittles (Her Footman) ... ... Mr. H. SMITH
Harry Maylie ... ... Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Bill Sikes (a Housebreaker, of a savage and reckless disposition) ... ... Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Toby Crackit, otherwise Flash Toby ... Mr. HENRY G. WRIGHT
Fagin (a Jew, keeper of a Den of Thieves) Mr. ALBERT WARD
The Dodger, alias the Artful ... ... Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Charley Bates (a Youthful Thief) ... ... Mr. HAL CHARLTON
Turnkey ... ... Mr. GEORGE ASTON
Susan (a Workhouse Woman) .. ... Miss NANCY BEVINGTON
Rose Maylie ... ... Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
Nancy ... ... Miss LILIAN HALLOWS
Mrs. Corney, afterwards Mrs. Bumble ... Miss BLANCHE STANLEY

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. LESLIE HUGHES

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

WEST STREET, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C. (Opposite the Palace Theatre.)
Proprietors - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Managing Director and Licensee - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT JAY.

On THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913, AND EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK,

Miss MARY FORBES

PRESENTS

THE MARCH HARE

A Farce in Three Acts, by HAROLD SMITH.

Characters:

Uncle John Croker .. .. Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
Dr. Dart .. .. Mr. ROBERT HORTON
Rev. Joshua Flewitt .. .. Mr. J. H. BREWER
James Bolton .. .. Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Sykes .. .. Mr. ARTHUR G. LEIGH
Dr. Lister .. .. Mr. CHARLES STEUART
Mrs. Tiverton .. .. Miss MARY BROUGH
Lucy Tiverton .. .. Miss EDIE GRAHAM
Mrs. Pilling .. .. Miss ENID BAIRD
Mary .. .. Miss ELIZABETH ROSSLYN
Kate Tiverton .. .. Miss MARY FORBES

Scene—The Morning Room at Dr. Tiverton's in the Village of Hayford.

ACT I. .. .. About Four o'clock in the Afternoon
ACT II. .. .. Before Breakfast the next Morning
ACT III. .. .. Late Afternoon the following Day

The Play produced by CLIFFORD BROOKE.

Dresses by ALEXANDRA, 47 Baker Street, W.
Furniture supplied by OETZMANN & Co., Limited.
Silverware and Table Appointments by the ALEXANDER CLARK Co., Ltd., 188 Oxford St., W.

PRECEDED AT 2.30 AND 8.30 BY

Miss HELEN MAR

AMERICAN STORIES.

The Theatre erected from the designs, and under the personal superintendence, of W. G. R. SPRAGUE, the well-known Theatre Architect. Builders, KINGERLEE & SONS, of Oxford.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of MARK STRONG, will play the following Music:—

TWO-STEP ... ... "My Little Billiken" ... ... —
SUITE from the Ballet "Coppélia" ... ... Lotter
(a) TANGO ... ... "El Choclo" ... ... Delibes
(b) VALSE ... ... "Smiles, then Kisses" ... ... Villoldo
(c) "Ma Blonde Aimée" ... ... Ancliffe
SELECTION ... ... "The Girl on the Film" ... ... Volpatti
MARCH ... ... "Georgina" ... ... —

Business Manager ... } For Miss MARY FORBES { ... H. WOODFORD
Stage Manager ... ... LILFORD ARTHUR
Musical Director ... ... MARK STRONG

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 11s. 6d. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d.
BOX OFFICE (L. A. GROTH) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 2890 REGENT.
Doors open at 8, Commence at 8.30. Matinees at 2, Commence at 2.30.

"THE MARCH HARE."

They tossed the furnitnre about and smashed all the china. They tied Uncle up in a rope and let the Vicar be arrested as a lunatic. Of such stuff is "The March Haro" made. If we add that after its innocent fashion it is often ludicrous, you know nearly all that needs to be known about it. The methods of Mr. Harold Smith's humour are primitive or primeval, but however superior you may feel he will extort from you a smile or two. For those who are content to be easily amused. "theirs not to reason why," it is nearly all great fun, and there was huge laughter last night.

Something new may be found in the foundation of the piece. By reading the third page of a letter as the second, a doctor's wife convinced herself that her rich brother was a lunatic in bud, and the locum tenens in charge of her husband's practice a poisoner of repute. Upon that rises a basis of wild misunderstandings and preposterous adventures, with vast noise and rushing to and fro. It is all wholly free from guile. None of it attempts any refinements of construction. They talk to the audience with an innocence singularly engaging in 1913. Not one of them tries to be witty. They are out for the fun of the brave days of old, and surely you cannot have the heart to want them more sophisticated. We may complain that they have interludes of pause. Sometimes they stop being wild long enough for us to begin to think about them. They suffered most, perhaps, from an inability to begin and make an end. It took them some time to start and too long to get the curtain down. But these are small things, and for the most part the rattle of it was fast enough.

THE RICH UNCLE.

He was a rich and crusty uncle, and he was the terror of everybody, and he was Mr. Spencer Trevor. You understand the fun of that. He stayed with a sister and rang his bell till we hated him. Then the sister had that letter of misfortune which made her believe him prone to the breaking of crockery and furniture and suspect her husband's locum of illegal researches in toxicology. There was also a large, timid, and bibulous butler who was quite amusing, and the parlourmaid who had "cast an eye" on him, and a wicked, rebellious daughter. The daughter was the only one who read the letter aright, but her uncle had her sent to bed, and so she kept the truth dark to pay him out.

Mrs. Tiverton confided to the uncle that the locum dealt in poisons, and to the locum that the uncle was going mad. From such natural, reasonable policy proceeded the natural, reasonable events of farce. You will not ask for record of how the uncle took an emetic after the locum's medicine, and how the locum found that none of his patients would swallow his prescriptions till he had tasted them. A new anxiety for the general practitioner! You will imagine how the butler smiled and smiled again upon the supposed lunatic, and how he primed himself for combat by visits to the Spotted Cow.

The wicked daughter smashed all the china in the breakfast-room, and left her family to suppose that the uncle had done it. So they thought he was finally mad, and tied him up in a fine large rope. When the man in uniform came to take him away it was inevitably the vicar who was found dancing on a barricade of furniture, the vicar who was pursued and arrested. Then it was time for explanations, and after they had been going on too long the curtain came down.

It was all briskly acted. Mr. Spencer Trevor was funny in his well-known manner as the uncle, and Mr. Stanley Turnbull was monumentally ludicrous as the butler; Miss Elizabeth Rosslyn put some fun into the parlourmaid. Mr. Robert Horton played the much-tried locum in a most agreeable style. His swiftness and lightness of touch were invaluable. Miss Mary Brough made the most of the helpless lady of the house, and Miss Mary Forbes gave us a termagant of a "flapper" who was duly terrific. The audience, as we have suggested, enjoyed it all heartily.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor - - - - Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

THURSDAY and FRIDAY EVENINGS,

JULY 10th and 11th, at 8.30,

SATURDAY MATINEE, JULY 12th, at 2.30,

First Production in London of

The Post Office

A Play in Two Acts, by RABINDRANATH TAGORE.

Produced by LENNOX ROBINSON

Madhav	... ARTHUR SINCLAIR
The Doctor	J. M. KERRIGAN
Gaffer	... FRED. O'DONOVAN
Amal, Madhav's adopted Child ...	... LILIAN JAGOE
The Dairyman	... SYDNEY J. MORGAN
The Watchman	H. E. HUTCHINSON
The Headman	... PHILIP GURRY
Sudha, a Flower Girl	... EITHNE MAGEE
Boys	...
The King's Herald	... E. WRIGHT
The King's Physician	J. A. O'ROURKE

ACT I. - - - - Outside Madhav's House

ACT II. - - - - Inside Madhav's House

STRAND
THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

Every Evening at 8-30.

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS

"THE BARRIER"

A Play in Four Acts.

Adapted by PHILIP E. HUBBARD from the Novel by REX BEACH.

The Characters in the order of their appearance.

John Gale (alias Gayton) a Storekeeper	... CHARLES ROCK
No-Creek Lee, a Miner ...	...HUBERT WILLIS
Alluna, a Pah-Ute Indian, Gale's Squaw ...	LUNA LYNDON
Necia (Gales supposed daughter)	MAY BLAYNEY
Meade Burrell, Lieutenant U.S. Cavalry	MALCOLM CHERRY
Poleon Doret, a French Canadian Trapper	MATHESON LANG
Runnion	LEWIS WILLOUGHBY
Corporal Thomas, U.S. Cavalry	ELLDRETT GULSON
Trooper	WALTER PLINGE
Dan Stark (alias Bennett) ...	HARCOURT BEATTY
Skagway Jack, Pincher Pete, Trailer Johnson — Hobo's	SIDNEY VAUTIER ... R. C. HARCOURT
Trooper Parker	LOUIS ASHMEADE ... W. HUBERT

Miners, Troopers, &c.

STRAND
THEATRE

P
17/7/1913

STALL
H 2
To be retained

ACT I.	INTERIOR OF JOHN GALE'S STORE AT FLAMBEAU, ALASKA Late Afternnon.
ACT II.	THE SAME One night passes.
ACT III.	THE DIVIDE OF BLACK BEAR CREEK Next morning.
ACT IV.	BURREL'S LIVING ROOM IN THE LOG FORT Thirty-six Hours pass.

The Play produced by MATHESON LANG.

Scenery by FRANCIS H. BULL. Costumes by C. & W. MAY. Wigs by CLARKSON. Miss BLANEY'S Evening Gown by VIOLA, Albermarle St., W. Incidental Music by BEATRICE PATTENDEN. Skins and Furs by JAMES INCE 156, Oxford Street, W. Revolvers by COSSWELL & HARRISON, 226, Strand, W.C.

The Play has been acquired by arrangement with Messrs. H. ARMITAGE and ARTHUR LEIGH.

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. Eric Zardo.

Before Act 1	"El Albanio"	A. Javaloges
Before Act 2	... "Indian Love Lyrics" ...	Amy Woodford-Finden
Before Act 3—	(a) PIANOFORTE SOLO "Scherzo C Sharp Minor"	Chopin
	(b) "Norwegian Rustic Wedding" ...	Waldemar Sommerfelt
Before Act 4	... (a) "Bois Enchante" ...	Osborne Roberts
	(b) "Tutti in Maschera" ...	C. Pedrottst

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd. London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinee on Wednesdays, at 2-15.

Business Manager ... ... BERNARD HISHIN.
Stage Manager ... ... FRANCIS SERLE.

Box Office (Mr. JOHN C. BROWN) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Prices:—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 1s. 6d.
Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Last Row, 6s.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s.
Gallery (unreserved), 1s.
Doors Open 8 Matinees 1-45. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

The Barrier."

The American play, called "The Barrier" is another of those mining-camp mas in which all the men characters lithe, very rough, honest fellows, or very gh blackguards. Its performance got ce than an enthusiastic reception from very peaceable London audience at the rand Theatre on Thursday night, for if give a peace-loving citizen a drama in ich there are love and lots of murderous ings you can depend upon hearing him eer it.

* * * * *

Now "The Barrier" for its main issue the love troubles of a young American rmy officer, who hesitates to marry the Wild Rose" of Alaska because he mis- kenly thinks she is a half-breed, and to ve local colour and atmosphere to this ory the inhabitants of the district where e romance takes place wear flannel shirts, se wonderful American slang, and fire evolvers on the slightest provocation. It a pity we had not Americans to give the ccent to the slang; it loses its effectiveness oken by foreignere. Apart from that eakness in the performance all went well, nd Mr. Charles Rock, Mr. LEWIS Willoughby, Mr. Malcolm Cherry, Mr. Harcourt Beatty, and Mr. Matheson Lang all id good work.

* * * *

NEW THEATRE

E
19/8/13

Orch. Stall

J 152
RIGHT
To be retained

On Tuesday, August 19th, 1913, at 8.15, and every following Evening at 8.30

Will be produced a New Play in Four Acts

ENTITLED

THE BIG GAME

By SYDNEY WENTWORTH CARROLL.

CAST

Mrs. Grimshaw	... Miss FRANCES IVOR
Kitty Morrison...	... Miss EILEEN ESLE
Mildred Carruthers	Miss MARGARET CHUTE
Lizzie Hopton ...	Miss MARY O'FARRELL
Maid ...	Miss MARGARET DALLAS
Rita Morrison ...	... Miss ETHEL DANE
Edward Grimshaw	Mr. FREDERICK KERR
Doctor Doyle ...	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Charles Geddes...	Mr. LYONEL WATTS
Julian Ross	Mr. DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY

(By kind permission of Miss LILLAH McCARTHY and Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER.)

Act I. ... ... Thorndyke Hall, Essex
Act II.... ... ... Mrs. Morrison's Flat, Mayfair
Act III. ... ... Thorndyke Hall, Essex
Act IV. ... ... Mrs. Morrison's Flat, Mayfair

Six months are supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II. A few hours only between Acts II., III. and IV.

Time—The Present.

The Play produced by Mr. FREDERICK KERR.

Miss Frances Ivor's dresses by GRAY, LTD., 9, Brook Street. Hat worn by Miss Ivor by MAISON LEWIS, 210, Regent Street, W.
Miss Ethel Dane's dresses by VIOLA, 18, Albemarle Street.

23

On ~~Thursday~~, August ~~21st~~, and every following Evening, THE BIG GAME will be preceded at 8 o'clock by

IN THE AIR

By FREDERICK FENN

A One Act Drama designed to draw public attention to the need for an adequate National Air Fleet.

Characters:

Hilda Marsden ...	Miss MARY O'FARRELL
Lieutenant Geoffrey Tregenna ...	Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT
Lieutenant Dennis Brady ...	Mr LEONARD ROBSON
Major-General Stewart Pole ...	Mr. JOHN ARMSTRONG

Scene—Outside the Hangars.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ...

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20th, 1913, and EVERY EVENING at 7-45.

MATINEES at 2-30
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS

THE ORIGINAL NOVEL DRAMA—

The Beggar Girl's Wedding

Written by WALTER MELVILLE.
Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music by EDWARD REEVES. Incidental Music by H. Sullivan-Brooke.

Characters:

Jack Cunningham, the Man who Marries the Beggar Girl	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Doctor Millbank, an Eccentric Physician	Mr. ALBERT WARD
Dicky Storm, a Greengrocer, afterwards Richard Stormington, Esq.	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Norman Marsh, in love with Elsie Cunningham	Mr. FRANK HARVEY
P.C. Phillips	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Rev. Mr. Melsom, the Vicar of St. John's	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Thompson, a Waiter	Mr. C. BROWN
Davis, Mr. Grimshaw's Clerk	Mr. B. ELTON
Lizzie, a London Slavey	Miss LILY TROUNSELL
Tina Torkington, a Maid, afterwards the Wife of Richard Stormington, Esq. ...	Miss EVA DARE
AND
Maud Villiers, a fascinating Society Lady	Miss ELINOR FOSTER
Gilbert Lindsay, Jack's Friend—? ...	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Joe Webster, a Thief Trainer	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
The Dodger, one of Joe's Pupils	Mr. HORACE KENNEY
Robert Grimshaw, a Lawyer	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Old Cloe ... } Frequenters of Thames Embankment	Mrs. WILSON
Jim Rothschild }	Mr. GEORGE BATES
Corky ... ... }	Mr. J. CLARK
Elsie Cunningham, Jack's Sister	Miss CICELY STUCKEY
AND
Bessie Webster, the Beggar Girl	Miss PHYLLIS RELPH

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

1913

ACT 1. Scene 1. ... ... Lindsay's West End Flat
Women, Cards and Wine. The Road to Ruin.
The Temptation of a Beautiful Woman's Face.
A Good Friend is better than a Near Relation.

Scene 2. ... The Thames Embankment by Night.
London's Rich and Poor.
Jack Cunningham's Meeting with the Beggar Girl.

Scene 3. Jack Cunningham's Mansion, Hyde Park.
The Greengrocer's Fortune. A Wife wanted at any price.
The Handsomest Flower is not the Sweetest.

Scene 4. The Church of St. John's, Knightsbridge.
Love Sacrifices all things. 'Whom He hath joined together.'

ACT 2. Scene 1. The Bride's New Home, The Mansion at Hyde Park.
Richard Stormington, Esq., makes a call. Found out at last.
Taint of the Prison. False friend discovered and gets his reward.

Scene 2. ... ... Berkeley Gardens.
The Forged Deeds come to light.

Scene 3. ... ... Robert Grimshaw's Office.
The Man behind the Curtains.
Jack Cunningham falls into a trap. The Burglers.

ACT 3. Scene 1. ... ... Clementina Stormington's Home.
Money can't buy happiness, but it can do a lot. The Abduction.

Scene 2. ... ... Maud's Flat in Town.
Birds of a feather flocking together.

Scene 3. ... ... Doctor Millbank's Chamber.
Bride and Bridegroom in the Cages of Death.

ACT 4. Scene 1. Jack Cunningham's Mansion at Hyde Park.
Tricking the Trickster. Married but parted.

Scene 2. ... ... Flat in London.
Run to earth. Gilbert Lindsay's Last Shot.

Scene 3. ... ... The Cottage at Glynde, Sussex.
Life without Love, what is it? Did he love the Beggar Girl?

Mechanical and other effects by TOM REES and WILLIAM CRISP.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, W. D. HOBBS, and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra, under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

OVERTURE	"The Beggar Girl's Wedding"	Reeves
SELECTION	"The Marriage Market"	Jacobi
SELECTION	"Babes in Toyland"	Herbert
VALSE	"Down the Danube"	De Blonc
OVERTURE	"Fortune's Labyrinth"	Suppé

The Programme of Music is subject to alterations according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1913.

"BEGGAR GIRL'S WEDDING."

NEW LYCEUM DRAMA OF MANY THRILLS.

Mr. Walter Melville's drama, "The Beggar Girl's Wedding," had its first West End performance at the Lyceum Theatre last night, Miss Phyllis Relph taking the part of the beggar girl.

Never was there a more gallant hero than Jack Cunningham, of Mayfair. He had all the virtues and follies of all the heroes of melodrama. He drank sparkling wines, played cards, stayed out late at night, and looked awfully unhappy, until one evening his lawyer told him that if he did not marry next morning—his twenty-fifth birthday—he would, by a covenant in his father's will, lose all his vast fortune. Jack pulled himself together and went out into the night to give away to the poor all his ready money.

Miss Phyllis Relph, who took the part of the beggar girl. [Claude Harris.

Across his moonlit path moved a homeless, hungry girl, and sad but gallant Jack, being without a fiancée to complete the conditions of his father's will, married the poor but lovely beggar-girl and brought down on his and her heads the hatred of his cousin, a villain by nature and accustomed to wear evening dress. Foiled of a fortune, he set about murdering all and sundry. He strangled, drugged, suffocated, and abducted without remorse, and apparently without risk, but Fate was at length too much for him. He had to be arrested—and the spectators, with an impartiality that was good to witness, cheered every bit as loudly when the villain and his accomplices met their doom and hero and heroine were happily reunited.

J. W.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45.

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

Will produce a Three-Act Play entitled

THE SCARLET BAND

By JOHN EMERSON and ROBERT BAKER.

Winthrop Clavering	.. Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
Jack Howell	.. Mr. MARSH ALLEN
Shipman	.. Mr. R. A. CLIFFORD
Colonel Schultz	.. Mr. REYNER BARTON
Kaufman	.. Mr. J. ROBERTSON HARE
Captain Ryan (of the New York Police) ..	.. Mr. LEWIS FIELDER
Mr. Christopher	.. Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Uncle Mark	.. Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Victor Holt	.. Mr. MALCOLM TEARLE
Savelli	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Weinberg	Mr. ALFRED P. PHILLIPS
Newsboy	Master LESLIE STONES
Juanita	.. Miss EDYTH LATIMER
Martha	Miss GERTRUDE IRVING
Rose Towne	Miss VICTORIA ADDISON
AND
Margaret Holt	.. Miss MARIE DORO

ACT I. ... ..."The Refuge," an East-side Settlement House (Evening)

ACT II. ... Winthrop Clavering's Study, on the First Floor of an Old House in the Lower part of Town. Two Weeks Later. Late Afternoon.

ACT III. ... ... Same as Act II. Ten Minutes Later

The Action of the Play occurs in New York in 1912, during the investigation of Graft in the Police Department by District Attorney Whitman.

Miss Doro's Dress by MICHARD SŒURS. The Furniture supplied by LYON and SPILLMAN.
The Gramophone used in Act I. is a "His Master's Voice" instrument, and is supplied by THE GRAMOPHONE CO., LTD., 21 City Road, E.C.

The Overture will commence at 8 o'clock. Followed by

Mr. ARCHIE NAISH at the Piano.
Mr. ERNEST MILLS, Art Humourist.
Mr. TOM EDWARDS in "Ventriloquial Bloodless Surgery."

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

	OVERTURE, "Mareo Spada"	Auber
	VALSE, "Springtide"	Frank Lambert
Before Act I.	OVERTURE, "William Tell"	Rossini
Before Act II.	a. INTERMEZZO, "Demoiselle Chic"	Percy Fletcher
	b. VALSE CAPRICE, "Bal Masque"
Before Act III.	HUNGARIAN RHAPSODY No. 2	Liszt

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.45.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 27
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
27/8/1913
STALL
D21
To be retained

"The Scarlet Band."

In the new play called "The Scarlet Band" that Mr. Chudleigh presented there are many interesting elements, and although the story is American with a New York background it is entirely free from the many obvious examples of language that ofttimes make American plays difficult for many people in a London audience. "The Scarlet Band" takes its name from a secret criminal society whose members are supposed to be in pursuit of the heroine, but we never get a sight of the "crooks" until the last act, and then, happily for the heroine, the police are in charge of them. I thought the play quite an amusing one, full of incident exciting and humorous, and what is very much in its favour is that the farther it goes the better it gets. It had a splendid reception from a full house.

J. W.

A great deal has been prattled and printed concerning Mr. Arthur Chudleigh's arrangement to give in front of the new detective drama, "The Scarlet Band." The variety papers (and people) seem to regard Mr. Chudleigh as a poacher upon variety preserves, as setting up in opposition to neighbouring halls, particularly the "Pav." Lovers of that persuasion appear to regard Mr. Chudleigh's curtain-raising act as affording a fresh chance for variety folk to get into the regular theatres as a kind of quid pro quo for the many theatrical folk invading the halls. That Mr. Chudleigh's experiment—to be given with fresh artists from time to time—had aroused interest in variety circles was shown by the fact that several variety managers, artists, and agents were present on Wednesday. And, indeed (why disguise it?), I was there myself.

A Variety Show at the Comedy

* * *

The three brilliant entertainers who present the Comedy's variety curtain-raiser are Mr. Archie Naish, with his clever piano-sketch; Mr. Ernest Mills, the clever and humorous cartoonist; and Mr. Tom Edwards, the famous ventriloquist, who did the "First Turn" at the recent Royal performance at Knowsley. Regarding this trio of always welcome artists, it has been said in certain journals that they must have felt disturbed at having to perform while many stallites, &c., were coming in. This idea is ridiculous. All variety artists have to give their shows to the accompaniment of goers and comers in the halls. In fact, such conditions are far worse in some halls, where the babble is increased by the touting of waiters and the clinking of cannikins in front and at the bars. As a matter of fact, Mr. Chudleigh's three-turn experiment is but a modification of the usual entertainer who has taken the place of the front-piece. And, after all, why be surprised at having variety turns in a West-End theatre? Is it any more strange than having so many dramas and dramatic sketches in the halls since the "Dual Licence"? Good luck to all of them, say I.

* * *

1913

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

THURSDAY, 28th AUGUST, 1913, at 8 p.m.,

MONSIEUR

LOU-TELLEGEN

WILL PRESENT

The Picture of Dorian Gray

BY

OSCAR WILDE,

Dramatised by G. CONSTANT LOUNSBERY

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS AND A PROLOGUE.

Cast in order of their appearance—

Basil Hallward ...	Mr. ARTHUR SCOTT CRAVEN
Parker	Mr. STANLEY ROBERTS
Lord Henry Wooten ...	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Dorian Gray	MONSIEUR LOU-TELLEGEN
Mrs. Vane ...	Miss MOLLY HAMLEY CLIFFORD
Mr. Isaacs	Mr. IVAN BERLYN
James Vane	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Sybil Vane	Miss JULIA JAMES
Victor	Mr. ANDRÉ CERNAY
Doctor Allan Campbell ...	Mr. CHARLES KENYON

In front of "The Picture of Dorian Gray" was given Strindberg's "Sirocco," a flamboyant, inconsequent melodrama, semi-realistic and semi-allegorical, which is not worthy of its author's name. Still, I fancy that there is more to be got out of this play than the rather commonplace performance of it on Thursday night suggested. It gives another glimpse of the misogynist in Strindberg, and tells a curious, indefinite tale of how a young Frenchman was driven to suicide in an Arab encampment by hypnotic suggestions of his wife's infidelity and his men's cowardice.

* * *

PROLOGUE - -	Basil Hallward's Studio
ACT I. - - -	Sybil Vane's Dressing Room in an East End Theatre.
ACT II. - -	Dorian Gray's Room.
ACT III. - -	The Same. Twenty years later.

The Play Produced by Monsieur LOU-TELLEGEN.

Preceded by

THE SIROCCO

By AUGUST STRINDBERG.

Adapted and Produced by ARTHUR SCOTT CRAVEN.

Biskra	Miss ELLA ERSKINE
Yussuf	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Guimard	Mr. VERNON STEELE

SCENE—In the Desert.

The MIRACLE PICTURE invented, protected and produced by Mr. P. T. SELBIT.

Furniture by GILL & REIGATE, OETZMANN, and SPILLMAN.

Programme of Music

BALLET	"Egyptien"	Lugini
SELECTION ...	"La Tosca"	Puccini
PETITE SUITE ...	... ...	Puccini
FANTASIE	"Madam Butterfly" ...	De Bussé
PAVANNE }	... ...	Puccini
MINUET }		M. Ravel

Musical Director - - Mr. EDWARD JONES

Stage Manager - - - Mr. STANLEY ROBERTS

Assistant Stage Manager - - Mr. EDMUND GOULDING

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD of the ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co.

MATINEE every THURSDAY & SATURDAY, at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 2 and 7.30 Commence at 2.30 and 8.0

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office, (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

The Picture of Dorian Gray."

Those who contend that Oscar Wilde's story "The Picture of Dorian Gray" will not lend itself to effective dramatisation are likely to put forward the play presented by M. Lou-Tellegen at the Vaudeville Theatre on Thursday evening as a strong argument in their favour. The play is nothing more than a few loosely-hung-together incidents from that unpleasant book, and can hardly convey to anyone unacquainted with the story the meaning of the original. It is a painful erotic series of excerpts from a ghastly story of a debauchee's life, but its very weakness in its stage form saved the audience from realising the horror of what the tragedy meant. The author, Miss P. Constant Lounsbery, cannot be blamed for the unhealthy character of the story written by Wilde. At the same time she is entitled to no congratulations for the drama she has taken from it. M. Lou-Tellegen overcame to a considerable extent the handicap of speaking in a foreign language. His English is good, but it is far from perfect. Mr. Franklyn Dyall, Mr. Edmund Goulding, and Miss Julia James were all good in the parts they had to play.

185

3724
1913

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - - LOUIS MEYER

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 29th, 1913, at 8.30.

EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 9.

MR. LOUIS MEYER with MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH

PRESENTS

THE REAL THING

A Comedy in Three Acts, adapted from the French of "La Prise de Berg-op-Zoom," by

SACHA GUITRY.

CHARLES HERIO		MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Dr. Duval	(His Friend)	MR. T. WEGUELIN
Leo Vannaire		MR. GEORGE BEALBY
Henri Vidal	(Leo's Brother-in-law)	MR. SPENCER TREVOR
Paul Rocher		MR. MAX LEEDS
Emile	(Butler at Vannaire's)	MR. CHAS. DALY
George	(Herio's Clerk)	MR. CLAUDE EDMONDS
Suzanne Vidal	(Vannaire's Sister)	MISS MARY MACKENZIE
Lulu	(A Model)	MISS DOROTHY MINTO
Marie	(Maid at Vannaire's)	MISS PHYLLIS THATCHER
PAULETTE VANNAIRE	(Leo's Wife)	MISS PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY

ACT I. Drawing Room at the Vannaire's.

ACT II. Charles Herio's Office.

ACT III. Same as Act I.

The Play produced under the direction of MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

Scenery by JOHNSTON. Costumes and Hats by VIOLA, Albemarle St., W.

First Matinee Wednesday, September 3rd, at 2.45.
And every following Wednesday and Saturday.

Preceded by (on August 29th at 8, subsequent Evenings at 8.30, Matinees at 2.15),

R. B. SALISBURY'S

"ENTERTAINERS"

Spend a half-hour in the Nursery.

Written and Produced by R. B. SALISBURY.

Original Music by George Buchanan, Dick Henty and Norah Blaney.

Norah Blaney	Alfred Weste
Phoebe Hodgson	Peter Lyle
Phyllis Sinclair	R. B. Salisbury

Business Manager	JOSE G. LEVY
Musical Director...	ALBERT FOX
Stage Manager	FRANCIS SERLE
Assistant Stage Manager	CLAUDE EDMUNDS
General Manager	BERNARD HISHIN, Strand Theatre, W.C.

3724
1913

Why have the dramatists got a down on the police? In America, to judge from the most recent imported samples of that country's dramatic art, the policeman, to misquote Gilbert, is nothing that he ought to be, and everything he oughtn't, oh! To our own playwrights the Scotland Yard official is always fair game. He obeerfully makes an ass of himself (on the stage) in order that the gifted amateur may get the laugh of him, or that the gentleman cracksman may parade his cuteness. When the Censor is abolished and the police are the sole mentors of our morals they will probably get some of their own back. And now here is France joining in the pursuit of the policeman. In fact, the Policeman's Pursuit—not the pursuit of the policeman, that is quite another thing, though it sounds much the same—would have been a far more appropriate title than for the adaptation from Sacha Guitry's "La Prise de Berg-op-Zoom," offered at the Garrick on Friday. (May I say, in parenthesis, that I borrow the word "offered" from America because it is much more applicable to some plays than "presented." "Presented" implies acceptance; "offered," not necessarily.) One can scarcely imagine anything less real than "The Real Thing." It has not a real person or a real emotion in it from beginning to end. It is just a flimsy medley of farce, comedy, and burlesque-drama, and I do not want to stop and ask myself what it would be like without Mr. Allan Aynesworth as the Pursuing Policeman.

"The Real Thing"

* * *

Understand, Mr. Aynesworth is no ordinary policeman. He is a full-blown Commissioner. Moreover, it is no criminal he is pursuing. It is a woman. He loves her, and is determined to win her. The fact that she is married doesn't matter in the least. A servant of the State, he abuses his public position to serve his private purpose. His myrmidons pry into her life. They photograph her at every turn. They incessantly cross-examine the servants and tradespeople, until her husband's guilty conscience smites him, and he begins to think that, in consequence of an early morning escapade, trouble is brewing. Through the information he thus acquires, Commissioner Charles is able to make the running very hard. Where Paulette dines, he dines; where she supe, he supe. Does she visit the theatre or the opera, he is there in the next box. It becomes intolerable. At last the brazen bobby invades her very flat. How dare he, an absolute stranger, declare his love. Her husband shall be told, and he will thrash the impudent invader, the would-be serpent on the domestic hearth. No matter, the heroic Charles will even suffer blows for his beloved. He retires while Paulette consults her husband, and he makes up his mind what to do. The husband, a preposterous person out of prehistorio farce, hasn't got a mind to make up, so Mr. George Bealby, who plays the part, gives us some impression of Mr. Weedon Grossmith suffering from brain-storms.

* * *

The next day Paulette calls in the Commissioner of Police for her district to persuade him to forgo any further inquiries into her husband's paccadilloes. Of course it is Charles, her unknown admirer. He was expecting her, but she never expected to see him, though she had picked up the card he left, and apparently never looked at the name and address. (Oh! Mr. Guitry, have women no curiosity?) In the best scene, the only scene of any quality in the play, Charles essays

To Carry Her Heart by Storm.

How perfectly Mr. Aynesworth played it! From mood to mood he passed with swift and sure transitions. Now laughing, now in earnest, now pseudo-passionate, now mock-heroic, with moments of real tenderness; now skirmishing, now attacking in force, and all leading up to Charles's declaration of constant devotion. Paulette's early defiance vanished, her resistance swiftly weakened, soon she surrendered unconditionally in his arms. And the enemy held undisputed sway over the fortress of her heart. Berg-op-Zoom, in spite of its boasted impregnability, had capitulated with ridiculous ease. Of course it was all outrageously immoral, but in the clash of battle, in the study of tactics and strategy, one lost sight of the moral aspect.

* * *

> and when the curtain fell last night the applause of one part of the audience was mingled with a good deal of hissing from the pit.

* *

THE COURT.

MESSRS. GREIG AND ROSMER'S SEASON.

In some respects the short season of three weeks started most promisingly by Messrs. Algernon Greig and Milton Rosmer at the Court on Saturday evening, August 30, might almost be described as a joint outcome of the Manchester and Liverpool Repertory Theatres. Thus Mr. Greig and Miss Estelle Winwood, one of the members of the combined company received so encouragingly in Sloane Square on Saturday, have done excellent work at Liverpool; whilst their present comrades, Mr. Rosmer and Miss Irene Rooke, have long been prominent among Miss Horniman's stage supporters. Lately, indeed, on the return of one of her companies from across the Atlantic they were seen at this theatre in the parts of Dick Gurvil and Nan Hardwick in John Masefield's painful yet beautifully poetical play now rightly described in full as The Tragedy of Nan, and the marked successes they made in these rôles at the Court, May 22, 23, and 24, were repeated there emphatically on Saturday. In London the Masefield tragedy, which is not without some affinity in sombre horror to the same author's gruesome other study of West Country crime, The Campden Wonder, has hitherto been played chiefly at special performances or matinées. It should, therefore, have no difficulty in drawing audiences both thronged and thrilled during its present run of three weeks in a regular evening bill.

Lillah McCarthy & Granville Barker's Season

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager ... SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

Lillah McCarthy — Granville Barker

Monday, September 1st, 1913, and Every Evening at 8.15

The Harlequinade

Contrived by DION CLAYTON CALTHROP & GRANVILLE BARKER

Music by MORTON STEPHENSON

Miss Alice Whistler ...	CATHLEEN NESBITT
Her Uncle Edward ...	ARTHUR WHITBY
Harlequin ...	DONALD CALTHROP
Columbine ...	SHEILA HAYES
Clown ...	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Pantaloon ...	H. O. NICHOLSON
A Hero ...	LEON QUARTERMAINE
A Villain ...	HERBERT HEWETSON
A Philosopher ...	RALPH HUTTON

The Decoration of the Play by DION CLAYTON CALTHROP.

INTERVAL OF 15 MINUTES.

Androcles and the Lion

A Fable Play by BERNARD SHAW

The Emperor ...	LEON QUARTERMAINE
The Captain ...	BEN WEBSTER
Androcles ...	O. P. HEGGIE
The Lion ...	EDWARD SILLWARD
Lentulus ...	DONALD CALTHROP
Metellus ...	HESKETH PEARSON
Ferrovius ...	ALFRED BRYDONE
Spintho ...	J. F. OUTRAM
Centurion ...	H. O. NICHOLSON
The Editor ...	HERBERT HEWETSON
The Call Boy ...	NEVILLE GARTSIDE
Secutor ...	ALLAN JEAYES
Retiarius ...	J. P. TURNBULL
The Menagerie Keeper ...	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
The Slave Driver ...	RALPH HUTTON
Megaera ...	CLARE GREET
Lavinia ...	LILLAH McCARTHY

Christians, Courtiers, Pages, Gladiators, etc.:
ROSEMARY CRAIG, GLADYS ALWYN, PAMELA DERRICK, ANGELA COLENSO, VERA TSCHAIKOWSKY, MARY ROSS SHORE; Messrs. TEMPLETON, KILBY, TUCKER WARBURTON, JEROME, MADGEWICK, ALFREE, BUSH, CAMPBELL BROWN, VAL GURNEY, COLLINS, BEAMISH, W. MOORE, F. BRUNTON, F. COURTLEY, S. BUSH.

The Decoration of the Play by ALBERT ROTHENSTEIN.

Both Plays produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

The Management owes many thanks to VICTOR MACLURE for painting the Scenery; to Mrs. OWEN and Mr. SAVAGE for making the Dresses, to R. & G. MANNING PIKE for painting many of them; to Mr. CLARKSON for Wigs; to Mr. GAMBA for Shoes; to WILLIE WARDE for valuable help in "The Harlequinade," and indeed to many others that it is impossible to mention.

MATINEE Every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause, and to exclude children in arms or any persons whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Box-Office (Mr. E. ARNOLD) Open Daily 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 3903 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Private Boxes, £4 4s. Stalls, 10/6 Dress Circle, 7/6 Upper Circle, 5/- & 4/- Unreserved: Pit, 2/6 Gallery, 1/-

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3) Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4) Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. (5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Acting Manager, Stage Manager, Musical Director, General Manager — For LILLAH MCCARTHY and GRANVILLE BARKER — HOWARD LESLIE, OSWALD MARSHALL, GEOFFREY TOYE, A. S. PIGOTT

General Manager (for SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER) — C. T. H'T HELMSLEY

Prefatory Note to The Harlequinade

HARLEQUIN, arlequin, arlecchino, English, French, Italian, call him what you will, dances on to the stage, his mask down, his head in a black cloth, his spangled coat glittering. In his hand is the magic wand.

Then Columbine, dear little dove, pirouettes on to the stage—a puff-away creature, a veritable sylph, so light, so poised upon wings that she seems ever ready to fly away.

A tremendous shout of "Here we are again!" and Clown with Pantaloon come into the picture. Were some old Roman peasant to come upon the earth and find himself in the theatre, he would rub his eyes and echo the Clown's remark, "Here we are again."

At first he would be confused by the dress of Columbine, so Early Victorian it is; then by the Elizabethan dress of Clown and Pantaloon. Harlequin, in a vague way, would be more familiar. Our Roman's mind would travel back until there came before him a picture. A rough amphitheatre in a chalk pit, the green of the hill behind, a religious festival, other actors, different dresses. Suddenly it comes back to him—Harlequin, of course! There before his backward-looking eyes is an actor dressed to represent Mercury—there is the shaven head, the darkened face, the unshod flat feet, the patched coat. Harlequin's wand takes the place of the caduceus.

Now for Columbine, that flashing, dancing spark of life, hovering always near the god, Psyche, the Soul. And Clown; surely that arbitrary make-up is familiar that peculiar big mouth, that lined cheek. In a flash he remembers the mask of Comedy, Momus. Pantaloon evades him until his chattering, aged jesting recalls another part of the old mystery play: Charon, who rowed Psyche over the Styx. How do they come to be here, metamorphosed?

It was the fashion in Elizabethan England to admire everything Italian; Italian was the Court language, Italian was the Court manner; so that a happy idea occurred, I suspect, to Tarlton, the great Fool of this time, Fool to Elizabeth, to introduce an Italian comedy company into England just as they had them in France. Now in France, where a Harlequin company was playing successfully, not in pantomime but in improvisation—except for Harlequin, always a character eloquent only in gesture—they saw and delighted in the Italian method, and could follow the humour of the Italian Scaramouch and Scapin. In England we were and are of different temperament, and the Italian subtleties failed. Tarlton took the character of Clown, made him English, dressed him, as evidence shows, in an exaggerated trunk-doublet and ruff, made his hair into comic likeness of the fashion of the day, love-lock sticking up and tied with ribbon, and so made a huge hit, with Columbine as a neat maid, and Harlequin, ruff round his neck, spangles and wand, as a magic invisible being more like Mercury than ever.

"Sometimes I have seen Tarlton play the clowne, and use no other breeches than such sloppes or slivings as many gentlemen now wear." WRIGHT, 1601.

The Italian comedians were expelled from France in 1697 by Louis XIV., but were welcomed back to the Hôtel de Bourgogne on April 25th, 1718, Columbine then playing as a female Harlequin, an Arlequinne. From France the vogue again spread to us, and we find Rich, the actor, playing Harlequin at Lincoln's Inn Fields in 1723, the play being Harlequin Dr Faustus.

We had in 1702, Penkethman of Drury Lane as Harlequin, and the fame of Harlequin was growing from 1688 to 1725, to culminate with the renowned Harbequin Rich, who is the most famous of all English Harlequins.

From Rich's first performance of Harlequin that character dominated all others in pantomime. He produced Harlequin Jack Sheppard in 1724, and from then on came a series of favourite plays in this character.

Cibber Booth, at St. Bartholomew's Fair, boasted an Arlequin and Arlequinne Dance in 1733; and in the same year Mr. Hippisley, of Covent Garden, played Scapin in Fielding's translation of Molière's play. So the Italian Comedy obtained a new and vigorous life in England.

In 1739 Hallam was a great Harlequin, and Mrs. Phillips a renowned Columbine. David Garrick brought out a speaking Harlequin, played by Woodward in a play called Queen Mab, which ran forty nights, and competed so hard against Rich's Harlequinade that he was shown in a caricature dated 1750 as the dying Harlequin.

In 1796 Richardson rented the Harlequin Public House, near the stage door of Drury Lane Theatre; and later, after he had given it up, he started the celebrated Richardson's Show, where, in 1807, the Harlequinade cast shows:

Harlequin	Mr. Riley (later by Mr. Carey)	Clown	Mr. Bergeman
Pantaloon	Mr. Green	Columbine	Mrs. Wilmot (later by Mrs. Carey)

The most difficult feat ever asked of a Columbine was asked of Miss Parker, one of the celebrated Columbines of Covent Garden Theatre, for she was required, by the management, to play up to an elephant which was introduced into the Harlequinade Harlequin and Padmanaba in 1811, at the cost of nine hundred guineas.

To give a mere list of names would be tedious, but if Rich was the most celebrated of English Harlequins, so Grimaldi (senior) was of world-wide reputation as a great Clown. Barnes well known as Pantaloon, and the Columbines were as many as they were beautiful.

(The Harlequin Set: Elston Rivers.)

D. C. C.

Prefatory Note to Androcles and the Lion

THE version of the old story of Androcles and the Lion to be played to-night at the St. James's Theatre is not hampered by a pedantic retention of the details as given by Aulus Gellius. His Androcles was called Androclus, and Androclus was neither a Greek nor a tailor nor a Christian, but a Roman slave who ran away from the cruelties of his master and was later on captured and condemned to be devoured by wild beasts in the arena. But it happened that during his flight he had taken refuge in a cave; and into this cave came a lion who had a thorn in his paw which Androclus extracted. It was to this very lion that Androclus was afterwards thrown in the arena; and the lion, instead of eating him, caressed him. The story figured in natural histories like those of Aelian and was found to please children, in whose story books it has appeared ever since. Nobody believes it; though everybody believes much more improbable stories. It would be incredible of some lions just as the action of Androclus would be incredible of some men. But there are lions and lions, just as there are men and men. The author of the present version has petted a full-grown lion and had his advances received with much more cordiality than he could expect from most St. Bernard dogs. He conceives the lion of Androclus to have been just such a fearless and amiable creature. He conceives Androclus as having that fellow feeling for animals which it becomes the most highly evolved of animals to have (Man is your real king of beasts) and which enables some men to handle bees without being stung and snakes without being bitten. Given such a pair, there is nothing incredible in the story except the theatrical coincidence of the meeting of the two in the arena. Such coincidences are privileged on the stage, and are the special delight of this particular author. And really, when one considers how many men met lions in the arena from first to last, it is not too much to ask you to believe that just for once they turned out to be old friends.

If the author is asked why he has made Androcles a Christian, he can only ask why, not. St. Francis preached to the birds as to his "little brothers", and St. Francis was a Christian. St. Anthony preached to the fishes, who probably understood at least as much of his sermon as a modern fashionable congregation would have done; and St. Anthony was a Christian. Depend on it, Androcles had that root of the religious matter in him which made all religious free to him except the religion of hunting and killing. That is, the religion of the English country house.

But the twentieth-century Christian need not regard the Christianity of the early Christian martyrs as having much to do with his safe and eminently respectable Sunday profession of faith. Christians in those days were neither safe nor respectable. What is more, some of the most eminent Christians were by no means fond of the average Christians of their time. The author once asked an old Owenite Socialist why he had given up Socialism. He replied that after preaching it for some years he had noticed that it seemed to have a very bad effect on the moral character of those who gave themselves up to its propaganda. The same may be said of all persecuted creeds. A doctrine may be true and important, and its persecutors may be altogether in the wrong; but this makes the position of the man who is persecuted for propagating it all the more morbid. One sane man in a lunatic asylum can no more keep his normal health and temper than one lunatic in a conseil de prudhommes. Add to this consideration the fact that all movements which attack the existing state of society attract both the people who are not good enough for the world and the people for whom the world is not good enough; so that the saint is always embarrassed by finding that the dynamiter and the assassin, the thief and the libertine, make common cause with him; and you will not be surprised to learn, if you do not know it already, that early Christians like Saint Augustine have a good many stories to tell of Christians who thoroughly deserved their evil reputation. The character of Spintho in the present play is by no means a malicious invention of the author's. Indeed had he gone on to exhibit Spintho as having taken the precaution to marry an orthodox Roman in order to shirk the Christian obligation to practise Communism, and as ostentatiously giving the lady black eyes to show how his conjugal duties revolted his ascetic nature, there would have been warrant for that, too, and worse, in the records of the Fathers of the Church.

In representing a Roman centurion and a Roman captain (a pure invention) as corresponding to a British sergeant and a British company officer, some violence may or may not have been done to the petty accuracies of military history. Centurions were much chaffed in Rome as being mostly thick-booted vulgar persons, whacking their men with vinewood cudgels, and out of place in refined society; and the nearest thing to a modern captain as far as rank was concerned was probably not much more of a patrician. The patrician soldier was not a professional soldier: he commanded armies or adorned Senates or governed Provinces as part of the natural pursuits of a patrician. But the relation of patrician officer to plebeian routineer existed as it exists to-day; and whether my captain should have been called something else, or my Centurion a Decurion, does not trouble me any more than the old controversy as to whether the audience turned their thumbs up or down when they wanted a defeated gladiator slain.

In short, if you demand my authorities for this and that, I must reply that only those who have never hunted up the authorities as I have believe that there is any authority who is not contradicted flatly by some other authority. Marshal Junot, reproached for having no respect for ancestry, said that he was an ancestor himself. In the same spirit I point out that the authorities on the story of Androcles and on the history of the early Christain martyrs are the people who have written about them; and now that I, too, have written about them, I take my place as the latest authority on the subject, and ask you to respect me accordingly.

G. B. S.

Photo by Alvin Langdon Coburn

MR. BERNARD SHAW

J. Miles & Co. Ltd., 68-70, Wardour St., W.

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1913.

Of course it is the lion's evening. Was ever ast so fortunate? We do not mean in getting thorn pulled out of his paw by Androcles; mean in being the one character in the ole range of Shavian drama who never talks. o he is a modish lion, for when the thorn out he joins Androcles in dancing the Tango. And you haven't danced with me for years!" rieks the indignant Mrs. Androcles after her volving husband. He is kind to animals and derstands them—all save the female of his n species. He is a tailor, with a manner ildlike and bland. What with his love of imals and his general air of melancholy signation, you feel that he has fed upon the rings of Mr. Galsworthy—till his casual mark that "there's a bright side to erything" shatters that illusion. And, lking of novelists, a wag said last ght that the lion looked very much e Mr. Hall Caine. That perhaps is nother reason why it was the lion's evening. y and by the lion is captured and dragged to his den in the circus. Androcles is also ptured and marched in alongside of a very fferent sort of man. This is one Ferrovius, "muscular Christian," as brawny and as ll of fight as Androcles is puny and peaceful. I never," says Androcles, "could dislike y one enough to fight him." Christianity mes easy to him then, but hard, very hard, Ferrovius, with whom turning the other heek is almost akin to self-annihilation. He rns it, however, to the young fop Lentulus. he next moment he proposes to smite Lentulus's heek in order that he, too, may learn to turn e other; all in the way, you see, of kindess. Lentulus, without waiting for the blow, ollapses, and is carried home to his mamma.

The conversation then became general. avinia, a beautiful Christian awaiting martyrom, flirts—in a spiritual sort of way, as Hannah More might have flirted—with the ndsome Captain of the Guard. He would ve her, and offers her marriage. All she has o do is to burn a pinch of incense to the ods. Let her understand by that phrase r own Christian God, if she likes—a Jesuitical ggestion. But she does not like. She tries o explain her état d'âme. She is not seeking the reward of Heaven. Nor can she even explain her idea of God. If that idea, she says, were small enough for us to understand it would be too small a thing to die for. The Captain says she is dying for pride; and if she gave him an effective answer we failed to catch it. But she is not, she says, at every moment a Christian. She might say with the lady in Rosmersholm that there are two sorts of will in us. At times she feels herself merely the natural woman, rejoicing in health and strength and life. Thus she is glad when Ferrovius shows fight. Ferrovius shows fight to such purpose that he slays all the gladiators set against him. He is in an agony of repentance; in the supreme moment he has betrayed his Master. But the Emperor is delighted, and "plumps" for Christianity, the religion which produces these first-rate fighting men. He orders all the surviving gladiators at once to become Christians. Ferrovius shall adorn his Prætorian guard. But stay! says the stage-manager of this circus (there is also a call-boy, very matter of fact, who announces "No. 11, Christians and Gladiators," as a piece of routine), stay! our new lion must have one Christian. Otherwise the public will break up the benches. True, answers the Emperor, and chooses Androcles. Androcles shows how a tailor can die, and speaks modestly of the honour of a tailor. (You wondered why that craft had been chosen for him, and now you know.) When he meets his old friend the lion there is another pas de deux. They both make "lion noises." Androcles has all his work cut out to keep the lion off the Emperor, who, however, presently summons up courage and summons the Court in order that they may see how the Emperor has tamed the lion! Androcles and the lion dance off arm in arm.

All good fun, you see, quite simple, straightforward fun, and not peculiarly and quintessentially Shavian fun. Evidently there are two wills in Mr. Shaw, as in Lavinia; he can sometimes be the mere child of nature and give the propagandism that is in him a rest. That breaks out, however, in a speech of the Captain, who explains that if the Christian women choose to die, instead of going through the form of burning a pinch of incense, theirs is not martyrdom, but suicide. This caught the applause of the suffragettes in the house. Otherwise the "fable play" has nothing "topical" in it. It might have been written at any time. A few years ago it would have been an invaluable antidote to The Sign of the Cross. For the acting, after Mr. Edward Sillward's delightful lion the honours rest with Mr. Heggie's Androcles, a kind of Traddles, and everybody's pet as well as the lion's. Miss McCarthy (Lavinia) and Mr. Brydone (Ferrovius), Mr. Leon Quartermaine (Emperor), and Mr. Ben Webster (Captain) are all pleasant enough; and Miss Clare Greet's termagant wife of Androcles is pleasantly unpleasant.

The Harlequinade has ingenuity and fancy, but is a little too long. It falls to Miss Cathleen Nesbitt, standing in front of the curtain, to explain the play pari passu with the action; and it is not her fault that the commentary rather overloads the text. Text, we say, because it is not all pantomime, though the personages are our old friends Harlequin, Columbine, Clown, and Pantaloon.

There is a scene of the Styx, another of the Italian Renaissance, a third of powder-and-patch England, a fourth of New York, showing the theatre of the future—chiefly gramophones. There is some quite superfluous explanation about Columbine being Psyche and Harlequin being Mercury sent to bring her back to Olympus. A theatre audience is in no mood for these subtleties. Good fantasy, as Walter Bagehot said about good poetry in general, should be "soon over." But no doubt The Harlequinade will play quicker another night.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager · SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN.

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

LOUIS N. PARKER.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I.

THE COAT OF MANY COLOURS. Genesis XXXV; XXXVII.

Scene 1. The Tents of Shechem.
Scene 2. The Wells of Dothan.
Scene 3. Jacob's Tent.

Act II.

THE TEMPTATION. Genesis, XXXIX.

Scene 1. In the House of Potiphar.
Scene 2. Potiphar's Garden.
Scene 3. Zuleika's Room.
Scene 4. In the House of Potiphar.

Act III.

THE DREAMS. Genesis, XXXIX; XL; XLI.

Scene 1. In the Prison.
Scene 2. In Pharaoh's Palace.

Act IV.

THE DELIVERER. Genesis, XLII; XLIII; XLIV; XLIX.

Scene 1. Jacob's Tent.
Scene 2. The Entrance to Joseph's House.
Scene 3. The Pyramid.
Scene 4. In Joseph's House.

The Scenery has been painted by Joseph Harker.
Egyptian and Hebrew Ritual Dances arranged by Espinosa.

The Play Produced by Sir Herbert Tree in conjunction with the Author.

THE MUSIC has been arranged and selected by Adolf Schmid from ancient Hebrew and Egyptian melodies, including the Hebrew Song known as The Penetention Hymn which is believed to have been composed by King David.
In Act II., Scene I., The Bridal Song by Professor Granville Bantock is taken from his Egyptian Songs.

The Costumes have been designed by Percy Macquoid, R.I. and executed by B. J. Simmons & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, W.C. Wigs by W. Clarkson.

FIRST MATINEE, Saturday, September 6th, and every following Wednesday and Saturday at 2.

The full text of Joseph and his Brethren, with illustrations, can be obtained at the Box Office or from the Attendants, price 1/-

Stage Manager—CECIL KING.
Associate Stage Manager—STANLEY BELL.
Musical Director—ADOLF SCHMID.
Chorus Master—ALFRED BELLEW.
General Manager—HENRY DANA.

PRICES :—Reserved Seats : Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s.
Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats : Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
BOX OFFICE (Mr. Potter) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10.
Telephone Gerrard 1777.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2ND AT 7.
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.

JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN.

Israelites :

Jacob		HERBERT TREE
Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah	Sons of Leah	PHILIP MERIVALE, H. A. SAINTSBURY, L. B. HURLEY, HUBERT CARTER
Dan, Naphtali	Sons of Bilhah	HOWARD ROSE, BERNARD STORRS
Gad, Asher	Sons of Zilpah	RICHARD NEVILLE, STANLEY HOWLETT
Issachar, Zebulun	Later Sons of Leah	J. W. MOLLISON, CYRIL SWORDER
Joseph, Benjamin	Sons of Rachel	GEORGE RELPH, ALFRED WILLMORE
Rachel		CYNTHIA BROOKE
Bilhah		FRANCES TORRENS
Zilpah		GEORGINA MILNE
Serah	Daughter of Asher	RHODA SYMONS
A Singer		HILDA ANTONY
Camel Driver		DENNIS WYNDHAM
1st Slave		ALEXANDER SARNER
2nd Slave		VICTOR M. LEWISOHN
3rd Slave		LAURENCE STERNER

Egyptians :

Pharaoh		HENRY VIBART
Potiphar	Captain of Pharaoh's Army	OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Imhotep	Chief Butler to Pharaoh	BASSETT ROE
Serseru	Chief Baker to Pharaoh	ROY BYFORD
Menthu	High Priest of Neith	EDWARD IRWIN
Enenkiret	Captain of the Prison, afterwards Steward to Joseph	HENRY MORRELL
Zuleika	Potiphar's Wife	MAXINE ELLIOTT
Aseñath	Daughter of Menthu	JESSIE WINTER
Wakara	Tiring-Woman to Zuleika	ALICE PHILLIPS
Tamai	Chief Maid-in-Waiting to Zuleika	V. VIVIEN-VIVIEN
Ani		G. F. WEIR
Heru		G. DICKSON-KENWIN
Sebni		CHRIS WALKER
Atha		A. H. GODDARD
Ranofer		A. NICHOLSON TUCKER
Pesbes	A Dwarf	A. LUBIMOFF
Mehtu, Anset, Arilennu, Taherer, Nesta	Wailing Maids	PATRICIA STUART, ESME LEE, JOYCE FRANCIS, LOUISE REGNIS, EFFA MYERS
A Dancer		DELPHINE WYNDHAM

Waters, J.
Plays

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

FIRST BIBLE PLAY.

From all this it must he obvious that no censure on the ground of irreverence is to be thought of. Such minority as there may he who object to any use of Scripture on the stage may complain if they will. The rest of us will find no reasonable sensibility hurt. Mr. Parker has claimed that his is "the first English Biblical play to receive the sanction of the Lord Chamberlain." Some of us have lately seen how a Tudor dramatist would handle the story of Jacob and Esau. Of the naïveté, the frank naturalism of the early religious drama. Mr. Parker's work has, of course, no trace. He could not make his characters men and women of our time, and if the thing were conceivable it would be intolerable. Working in harmony with the modern spirit, he has sought in phrase to preserve the manner of the Bible, as in all the decoration he gives us the ancient world His success is a triumph of pageantry and of something finer still. Of what we are wont to mean by dramatic conflict of will and passion, you may find little that impresses you in "Joseph and his Brethren." But if it is part of the dramatist's art to suggest and make vivid for us the strange forces which may inspire and rule and glorify men, then there is much true drama in the play.

It follows closely enough the story of Genesis. The matter which the Scripture narrative leaves rather vague, the rescue of Joseph from the pit, has a new development. For it is Potiphar's wife who buys the boy, and he is drawn out to the upper air before his brothers' eyes. Later on, when we reach Egypt, a vain sentimental interest is provided for us by the early appearance of Aseneth, and affectionate passages between her and Joseph. Potiphar's wife is vastly elaborated, and is allowed to plot Joseph's murder long after he has become Pharaoh's right hand, with Simeon, the hostage, to serve as the assassin. But on such matters of carpentry it is hardly worth while to linger. Nothing in the play can be separated from its appeal to the eye, and any description of it must be in the nature of a visual impression.

Roberts, J.
Plays

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1913,

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

LOVE AND LAUGHTER

An Original Comic Opera in Three Acts

By FREDERICK FENN and ARTHUR WIMPERIS

(Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS).

Music by

OSCAR STRAUS.

MAGORIA.

Princess Yolande...	(of Magoria)	...Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Zara	(her Maid, a Gipsy)	Miss YVONNE ARNAUD
Queen of Magoria...		Miss AMY AUGARDE
Balbus	(Prince Consort, formerly a Labour Member)	Mr. TOM A. SHALE
Lieutenant Skrydloff		Mr. NELSON KEYS
Schmidt... ...	(the Head Gardener)	Mr. ELIOT SKINNER
First Gardener ...		Mr. IAGO LEWYS
Second Gardener ...		Mr. JOSEPH RITTE
Third Gardener ...		Mr. ROBERT EADIE
First Lady Gardener		...Miss GOOGOO MURRAY

PHANTAZNIA.

Prince Carol ...	(of Phantaznia)	...Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
Grand Duke Boris		Mr. CLAUDE FLEMMING
Hunyadi... ...	(Lord Chamberlain)	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Alfred Harris ...		... Mr. A. W. BASKCOMB
Sergeant		Mr. ARTHUR BALLANCE
First Soldier ...		... Mr. JACK STEPHENS
Second Soldier ...		... Mr. JACK HORNBY
Third Soldier ...		Mr. FRANK MELVILLE
Fourth Soldier ...		... Mr. EWART BAKER
Sentry		... Mr. BARRY CALVERT
Gipsy		Miss DOREEN LANGTON

Foresters, Gipsies, Lady Gardeners, Wedding Guests. Nobility, Generals, Royal Bridesmaids, Heralds, Staff Officials, etc.

Should an encore be demanded and refused it will not be from want of courtesy to the audience, but from a desire on the part of the Management that the piece should conclude in reasonable time on the first night

Act I. .. A Birch Wood on the Phantaznian Frontier at Dawn (McCleery)
Act II. .. .. Garden of the Royal Summer Palace, Magoria (McCleery)
Act III. .. .. Reception Room in the Royal Palace, Phantaznia (Harker)

Time .. .. .. The Present.

There will be an interval of Fifteen minutes between the Acts.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

Musical Director... ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

Miss D'ALROY's Gowns designed by Mr. REVILLE and executed by Messrs. REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912), LTD.
Court Gowns and Headdresses designed by Mr. REVILLE and executed by Messrs. REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912), LTD.
Ladies' Fancy Dresses by Madame BEATRICE RAYMOND, 76 REGENT STREET, W.

Uniforms and Gentlemen's Dresses by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIOBY. Boots and Shoes by A. L. GAMBA & Co.
Flunkeys' Liveries by WALKER & Co., 38 Sackville Street, W. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.
The Pianos used in the Theatre kindly supplied by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co., LIMITED.

The "ST. CECELIA PIPE ORGAN" used in Act III. is by Messrs. THOMAS S. JONES & SON, Marlborough Organ Works, 51 Hanley Road, Finsbury Park, N.

Dances arranged by Miss PHYLLIS BEDDELLS, by kind permission of the Directors of the Empire Theatre, Ltd.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. E. F. SAXON
GENERAL MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:
Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2. Commence 8.20; Matinees 2.30.
Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

ere is, of course, a Princess. Likewise a Prince. llows that there must be a King and Queen. In case, however, the Queen's husband is merely a ce Consort, and one who, strangely enough, had a Labour Member of Magoria (the adjoining inions) previous to his marriage—which circum-s, by the way, continually leads him into very ncerting faux-pas. Then there are a Grand n Boris, a Lord Chamberlain, a Sergeant, Aeroplanist (Alfred Harris by name), and Lieutenant, with an amazing variety of ters, gipsies, lady gardeners, wedding guests, lity, generals, Royal bridesmaids, heralds, staff-ials, and other characters too complicated to tion. The Princess is of one country, the Prince nother. She is all that a Princess is expected to or she is pretty, accomplished, generous, large-ed, dignified, stately, noble, and so forth; but more, for she has a sense of humour, and a reck-thirst for adventure. The Prince's qualities, too, ll they ought to be—an excellent type of the sportsman who will go without his breakfast r than miss potting a bear; he will talk a good about it afterwards, of course, and distribute se to the listening bumpkins. But he, also, has r qualities. He is a Romanticist. He is in love—love—and is very sentimental about it. He will ything, he says, rather than marry the Princess nde—a political arrangement not at all to his . He will abdicate his right of succession—indeed, he does.

THE "GIPSY" PRINCESS.

Thereby hangs this very simple tale. The Grand e Boris, the villain of the piece, wants to marry charming Princess, for he has seen her and ed with her and found her most attractive. He igues with the Lord Chamberlain to put the ce off the proposed alliance, sings a song libel-her beauty, physical and moral, and the roman-Prince capitulates. Of course, the gods do not w this sort of thing to happen. The Prince ply must marry the Princess, or there would be pera. And it is brought about in this wise. The cess happens to be in love with the simple life; much so that she goes to the trouble of disguising lf—as so many others are continually doing—a gipsy, and makes friends with Zara, a real . There is the usual "You mustn't say 'your hness'" in the first act, and the plot evolves h all the familiar creaking. The Prince, natur-, turns up in the wood where her Highness is porting herself as a Romany; neither, of course, ognises the other as an aristocrat of fine manners; y are simply a gipsy girl gipsying, and a peasant nting big game. He, for a Prince, is more than able, and makes love to the pseudo-gipsy with all enthusiasm of a Don Juan; she, for her part, is erous and well behaved—so far, that is, as it is reous and well-behaved to sing without any sort chaperone a duet in the open-air and in a very ely part of the country with a gentleman she had own for only five minutes. But the gentleman's tentions were honourable; hers were strictly in cord with the political tenets of her illustrious mily. All the same, she lost her heart to him at sight, and, indeed, lost it in advance. For ere comes into the saga a magic pool, and Zara, aid to the Princess, reveals the occult powers of that mysterious place. "A maid must stand by the pool alone when the morning sun first touches the water. She must repeat correctly the incantation. Then, if she bends over and looks into the water, she will see the face of her future husband." So says Zara; and the incantation:

Nought of lovers have I known
By the brink I stand alone
In the water give me grace
To behold my husband's face.

was repeated afterwards by the Princess—she had the stage to herself—with such splendid results that the face of the Prince appeared immediately. The Princess, with great presence of mind, controlled her natural alarm at such close proximity, and the Prince most diplomatically said, "I beg your pardon!" After that they were on good terms, and remained so right up to the happy ending.

There were, as in all good "books," certain difficulties to be encountered in evolving the romance in the orthodox manner. It was necessary that the Grand Duke should plot and scheme in such fashion that the Prince should never wed the Princess. But, as we have said, the gods could not tolerate such a thing, and the Grand Duke had to lick the dust eventually, which served him right, for he was not at all an attractive or heroic Duke, and the Prince and Princess were, as we have also said, perfectly nice people. It was necessary, too, that one's attention should be diverted from the working-out of the perfidious Duke's schemes into a tantalising labyrinth of songs and duets and quartets and choruses. This is done so triumphantly that you are only positively certain of one thing, which is, that the disappearing, abdicating Prince turned up at the very last moment, like Young Lochinvar, to claim his bride and send the Duke about his business.

CLEVER MUSIC.

It is, even if it takes long in the telling, a simple story (and this is only a skeleton of it), and it has been put to pretty enough music. We have heard better things of Oscar Straus than this; we have heard music of his with greater skill in it and music of more downright inspiration. But it is "slick" and always to the point, and should therefore serve its purpose admirably. The Overture contains the principal

Duke of York's Theatre.

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

Thursday, September 4th, 1913, at 7.30 (and on subsequent evenings at 8.30),

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE WILL,

A PLAY IN ONE ACT

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

MR. DEVIZES, Senior	MR. O. B. CLARENCE
MR. DEVIZES, Junr.	MR. FRANK DENTON
PHILIP ROSS	MR. SYDNEY VALENTINE
SURTEES	MR. LICHFIELD OWEN
SENNET	MR. CHARLES TREVOR
CREED	MR. JOHN KELT
MRS. ROSS	MISS HELEN HAYE
SCENE	Any Lawyers' Office.

The curtain will fall twice during the play to indicate in each case the passing of a number of years.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY

THE ADORED ONE,

A LEGEND OF THE OLD BAILEY IN THREE ACTS

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

MR. JUSTICE GRIMDYKE	SIR JOHN HARE
SIR ROBERT BACKUS (The Attorney-General) ...	MR. ERIC LEWIS
CAPTAIN RATTRAY, R.N.	MR. GODFREY TEARLE
MR. TOVEY...	MR. FRANK DENTON
MR. LEBETTER	MR. WM. FARREN
RAILWAY GUARD	MR. CHARLES TREVOR
FOREMAN OF JURY	MR. JOHN KELT
JURYMAN	MR. RICHARD HAIGH
LEONORA	MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL
LADY BACKUS	MISS HELEN HAYE
MRS. TOVEY	MISS MARY BARTON
MAID	MISS GLADYS CALTHROP
ACT I.	At the Toveys' in Westminster.
ACTS II. & III.	The Old Bailey.

Ten minutes interval between Acts I. & II., one minute between Acts II. & III.

NOTE.—The Curtain will not be lowered between Acts II. & III.

Scenery by W. HANN & SON. Act I. from designs by DENIS MACKAIL.
Mrs. Campbell's Dresses by MADAME HANDLEY-SEYMOUR.
Miss Helen Haye's by LUCILE, LIMITED.
Miss Barton's by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS.

Both plays produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

General Manager - - - - - W. LESTOCQ.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.
This request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will assist in having it carried out.

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 6s.; Upper Circle, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.
Box Office 10 to 10. Telephones, GERRARD, 312, 313, 314. (Three Lines).

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.
(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.
(3) The Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening will be lowered at least once during the performance to ensure its being in proper working order.
(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.
(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The Toilet Hairbrushes, etc., used in the Cloakrooms in this Theatre are supplied by Messrs. HINDES, Limited, London and Birmingham.

Business Manager - - - - JAMES W. MATHEWS.
Stage Manager - - - - - LICHFIELD OWEN.

THE TIMES

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1913.

Two Barrie plays in one programme; what a prospect of delight this seemed to hold forth! The house was densely packed. Every mouth was watering for the expected feast. It began à merveille. The house was charmed with The Will and called its players before the curtain again and again. In three brief scenes in a lawyer's office it had summed up a whole life-history and shown "the pity of it." You had seen young Philip Ross and his bride shyly explaining to the lawyer how Philip wanted to make his will. He was a mere clerk, with only about twopence-halfpenny to dispose of, but the modest sum he had had been carefully saved. They were just a giggling, blubbering, happy young couple; it did the lawyer good to look at them; and the portrait of Queen Victoria seemed to smile at them benignantly from the mantelpiece. Years passed, and Queen Victoria's portrait had become King Edward's, and the poor young couple had become a rich middle-aged couple. Philip had now £70,000 to dispose of, and Mrs. Philip was in costly furs. They both reeked of material success. Their son was at Harrow, and last week had smoked his first clandestine cigar with a real lord ("they were both sick together"), while their daughter was about to marry some one with a handle to his name. But, under this gilded surface, Philip and his wife had sadly changed for the worse; he was vulgarly purse-proud and she was more concerned about the property to come to her under the will than a loving wife should be. Another interval of years and the portrait on the walls was now King George's. Philip was now Sir Philip and a millionaire. But, with all his wealth, he was a heartbroken man. His wife never benefited by the will over which she was so concerned; death had stepped in and balked her. His son had fled the country in disgrace. His married daughter had "bolted" with her chauffeur. The poor wretch wanted to make yet another will, but had no one to whom he could leave his money! A few words that dropped from the old lawyer, now in his second childhood and superseded by his son, brought home to the other old man, Sir Philip, the failure his life had really been. It was a sad story, very touchingly if a little sentimentally told, and quite beautifully played by Mr. Valentine and Mr. Clarence and Miss Haye. So far the Barrie feast had been of the most toothsome. Then came

"THE ADORED ONE."

A Legend of the Old Bailey, in Three Acts.

By J. M. BARRIE.

Here, too, for a time, throughout, that is to say, the first of the three acts, all went wonderfully well. His first act, indeed, is as characteristic a piece of humour as Sir James Barrie has ever given us. It was practically a single continuous conversation between Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Mr. Godfrey Tearle. Mr. Tearle was an innocent Captain, R.N., just home from the South Seas, and arriving to dine with some friends by accident half an hour early. What ladies were coming? His host went through a catalogue: one lady would be absolutely humourless, another without any notion of a joke, a third a suffragist, a fourth the maternal animal and nothing else, and a fifth a murderess! Let the Captain judge for himself which was which. Enter Mrs. Campbell and the Captain tries to discover which of the ladies she is. In the end he is reduced to utter confusion, for it is evident that she is not one of the ladies but all the lot, including the murderess. It was a delicious scene, the lady all dainty feminine Barrieisms and the gentleman all baffled and bewildered masculine ones. There was an incidental story about a bald head mistaken for a melon that sent the house into convulsions of laughter. But alas! there was also a story about a murder, and that spoiled everything. It let the house down "bump," as the lady in the story let the gentleman down on to the railway line. The lady had thrown the gentleman out of the carriage because he would insist upon keeping the window down, though she explained that her little girl had a cold. Well, that little story might have been as successful perhaps as the other about the melon if it had been, like the other, merely told in conversation. Unfortunately it was made to furnish forth two whole acts of the play. You had the trial of the lady for murder at the Old Bailey, with speeches from the Attorney-General and the Captain, R.N. (who it seemed had long ago been called to the Bar), and rebukes from the Judge, and absurd questions by the jury, and irrelevant evidence from the witness-box. Indeed, the point of this prolonged fooling—we wish we could give it a better name—was that nothing said or done was relevant. The Attorney-General cross-examined his own wife about their conjugal felicity. The prisoner's counsel wooed her in the dock. The Judge ogled her from the bench. She retired with the jury when they considered their verdict. Judge, Attorney-General, and other counsel were kept in order by a police-inspector. This topsy-turvy trial scene might perhaps have been fairly amusing if Gilbert had not done it long ago and done it better. But speculation on the point is idle. In matter of humour the proof of the pudding is in the eating. The house was not amused; and the curtain fell to the accompaniment of groans which drowned the cheers. As we all know Barrie humour is apt to be a ticklish thing; at one moment it is the most delicious thing in the world, at another it seems to be indistinguishable from mere foolishness. Midway in The Adored One it falls suddenly from the delicious phase to the merely foolish. What a pity, after an evening that had begun so well!

TELEPHONE, 2991 GERRARD.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.

September 5th, 1913

Dear Waters,

Sir James has decided that his play "The Adored One" shall now be given in two acts instead of three.

Yours very truly,

Dion Boucicault.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1913.

BARRIE PLAY CHANGE.

IN TWO ACTS INSTEAD OF THREE.

Sir James Barrie's play "The Adored One," which was presented at the Duke of York's Theatre on Thursday evening, is henceforth to be presented in two acts instead of three.

The first act will be given exactly as it was at the first performance, but Acts II. and III. will now be played as one act.

Aldwych
THEATRE

6/9/1913

Orch. Stall

B 7
To be retained

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6TH, 1913, AT 7.30.

A. M. LOADER

WILL PRODUCE

A NEW DRAMA OF LONDON LIFE:

The Ever Open Door

By GEORGE R. SIMS and H. H. HERBERT.

Incidental Music by HERMAN FINCK.

CAST:

Miriam, Lady Dereham	HILDA SPONG
Robbie	RUTH BIDWELL
Maggie	MOYA NUGENT
Lady Orme	JOY CHATWYN
May	JANET ALEXANDER
Sister Lil	DULCIE GREATWICH
Molly Dundon	KATHLEEN O'CONNOR
Sally	NORA NAGEL
Mrs. Johnstone (with Horace)	GWEN TREVITT
Mrs. Sydney	MABEL MULVANY
Father Clement	FREDERICK VICTOR
Lord Dereham	CHARLES WEIR
Hon. Charles Aveling, M.P.	EDWARD JEPHSON
Sergeant Suthers (of the C.I.D.)	STEPHEN ADESON
Jim Dundon	JACK HADDON
Swankey Dottles	ERNEST SELIG
Tom Slatter	HENRY MATTHEWS
Footman	A. WOOD
Martin	J. CHERRY

ACT I.

SCENE I. ...	Lady Dereham's House in Park Lane ...	W. Hann & Son
SCENE II. ...	Hyde Park	W. Hann & Son
SCENE III. ...	Mulberry Court, Westminster	Alfred Craven

ACT II.

SCENE I. ...	The Ever Open Door, Westminster ...	W. Hann & Son
SCENE II. ...	Smith Square, Westminster	Walter Johnstone
SCENE III. ...	The Black Bull, Great Peter Street ...	Walter Johnstone

ACT III.

SCENE I. ...	The Ever Open Door	W. Hann & Son
SCENE II. ...	The Church	W. Hann & Son

ACT IV.

SCENE I. ...	Mulberry Court	Alfred Craven
SCENE II. ...	The Mission Garden	Alfred Craven
SCENE III. ...	Laundry Yard, Westminster	Walter Johnstone
SCENE IV. ...	Sister Miriam's House, Westminster ...	W. Hann & Son

The Play produced by A. M. LOADER under the personal supervision of GEORGE R. SIMS.

Waters, J.
Plays

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY.

"The Ever-Open Door" at the Aldwych.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Mr. George R. Sims, author of many famous melodramas, revived memories of many thrilling successes by his reappearance as an author of a drama of London life last night at the Aldwych Theatre. It is true that he claims to be but part author of "The Ever Open Door," but his collaborater, Mr. H. H. Herbert, is not likely to insist on a full equality or equal honours with such a veteran playwright as Mr. Sims.

The conventions of melodrama provide for many scenes in the unfolding of a plot. Last night's play had twelve, and the story of all that happened previous to the opening of the play itself might well have been used for another romance.

In Lady Dereham's house strange things were discussed. Park-lane did a great crime, and the victims were the beautiful widowed owner of the house, and her son whom she believed dead. The villain never discussed things. He was a silent fellow; and he paid many people to be silent so that he might remain Lord Dereham, and the widow's son, the real peer, should be poor, if honest, and live in a slum.

The story revolved round the poor lad of fourteen who never suspected he was a young nobleman, and it might never have been written had not his lovely, young, and troubled mother resolved to take up slumming and settle down as a "sister" in Father Clement's rescue home—The Ever Open Door—near the Houses of Parliament, Westminster. All round the refuge things were lively of a sort; everyone drank, or burgled, and the good Father Clement took a lot of trouble to prevent the police from arresting his neighbours.

Melodramps tell their stories in a roughly coloured style and sometimes with very curious examples of Cockney accents. It is their recognised right, and in last night's production Mr. Sims and Mr. Herbert revived memories of elder melodrama, with its polished villain, its beautiful heroine, and the tearful as well as much-wronged victim of the villain. There was none of the dreadful haste, the direct action, the breathless life of an American play. Everyone took his or her time to curse, or to pray, and when the end came it was a happy one.

Miss Hilda Spong, Mr. Charles Weir, Mr. Stephen Adeson, and Miss Moya Nugent all rendered excellent service in aiding the authors to secure a very friendly reception from the audience for their play. J. W.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

On MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 8th, at 8,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

ETHEL IRVING

(BY ARRANGEMENT WITH GILBERT PORTEOUS)

IN

Years of Discretion

A New Comedy in Three Acts,

By FREDERICK HATTON and FANNY LOCKE HATTON.

The Play produced under the direction of LOUIS MASSEN.

Ethel Irving's Dresses and Hats by Madame Barolet, Knightsbridge.

Sybil Carlisle's Dresses by Lucile, Ltd.

The Gramophone used in Act II. is a "His Master's Voice" Cabinet Grand.

GENERAL MANAGER ...	For CHARLES FROHMAN	... ...	WM. LESTOCQ
Business Manager		... ...	... Chester-Fox
Stage Manager		... ...	Cyril Cattley

209
1

CHARACTERS.

Christopher Dallas	AUBREY SMITH
Michael Doyle	LIONEL ATWILL
John Strong	PHILIP CUNINGHAM
Ames Thomas	GERALD LAWRENCE
Farrell Howard, Junr.	STAFFORD HILLIARD
Metz	E. W. GARDEN
Mrs. Margaret Brinton	SYBIL CARLISLE
Anna Merkel	DORA SEVENING
Lily Newton	WINIFRED WILLIS
Bessie Newton	ALICE ROSSITER
Maid	KATIE YATES

AND

Mrs. Farrell Howard	ETHEL IRVING

ACT I. .. Mrs. Brinton's Apartments. New York. April.

ACT II. .. Mrs. Howard's Sitting Room at Mrs. Brinton's. One month later.

ACT III. .. The Garden at Mrs. Howard's in Brookline, Massachusetts. Summer.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

A special selection of Music will be rendered by ELIZABETH MEACHAM.

(a) FANTASIE	"Impromptu C sharp Minor"	Chopin
(b) HUNGARIAN DANCE		Brahms
SCHERZO	"B flat Minor"	Chopin
(a) ETUDE	"A flat"	Chopin
(b) SPINNING SONG		Mendelssohn

Grand Piano by J. & P. SCHIEDMAYER supplied by ARCHIBALD RAMSDEN, 103 New Bond St., W.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) open 10 till 10. Telephone: 8722 Gerrard.

Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Treasurer ... ... } For { ... WILLIAM J. DOUGLAS
GENERAL MANAGER ... } GILBERT PORTEOUS { ... CHARLES THORBURN

Waters, J.
Plays

GLOBE THEATRE.

"YEARS OF DISCRETION."

She was a widow of 48, and she had never done anything but keep house. So she coveted the joy of life and sought it by rouge and false hair and tight shoes. She was Miss Ethel Irving, and when you know that there is little more worth telling. For the play owes any sort of interest which it may possess for you to her. First we beheld her a country mouse of a middle-aged widow announcing her imminent transfiguration. She had come to stay with her dear friend, Mrs. Brinton—another widow—in order to enjoy a sham youth. She put on her war paint and immediately became miraculously charming. She was introduced to three men of that devastating fascination only found upon the stage, and two of them fell immediate victims. The third was already claimed by Mrs. Brinton. She also captivated an odd creature who lectured and was otherwise some sort of tame revolutionary.

Very many things happened in the next act. The decorated widow found her panoply greater than she could bear. The shoes were too tight, and more intimate garments equally aggressive. The false hair was too heavy, and her maid would not let her eat enough to support life. She had been flirting vehemently with all her victims, and the revolutionary arrived to ask what she meant by it. Hence a scene in which he reproached her with his mouth full of the cake on which she was snatching a secret lunch.

TWO AND TWO.

Then came the man whose fascination was the most devastating of all, Christopher Dallas. He was accompanied by the other widow's admirer. He set a big gramophone playing a love song, and they arranged themselves, one widow and one admirer, on each side of the instrument, and succumbed to its charms. When we had had enough or more of those two flirtations the subsidiary widow took the two men away, and left her friend free for further experiments with a third.

He was an Irishman, he was highly inflammable. He swiftly became vehement and brutal. Of course, he repented, and the widow was quite sufficiently forgiving. Meanwhile, the tame revolutionary had come up the fire-escape. All the men were thus brought on the scene together. The revolutionary and the Irishman each claimed that he was engaged to her in vain. For she ended the act by consigning herself to the arms of Christopher Dallas.

But there is still one act more for you. It takes you back to the widow's country home, where she has been getting married. The atmosphere was full of gloom. Even drinks concocted by the Irishman could not banish it. To his sympathetic bosom the widow confided the cause of her woe. She could not possibly go on living up to her decorations. She was 48, and felt it. But what was the matter with Christopher? He, too, was heavily dismal. He was left with his bride for reciprocal explanations.

Then she confessed with emotion her desire to get quit of false hair and rouge, to repose again in the calm of middle-age. She could not hope to live up to the ardour of their proposal. She could not possibly go on a whirlin~ honeymoon round the world. She wanted to sit quiet and knit. Which was all for the best, because the devastating Christopher was suffering from just the same complaint—middle-age. He, too, could not be perpetually ardent. He was rheumatic. He felt the cold. His manly figure was not independent of artificial aid. So off she went to take off her false hair and other things, and he subsided into a skull-cap and spectacles. The curtain fell upon them enjoying all the delights of Darby and Joan.

212

209

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

Season under the Direction of .. .. MOSS' EMPIRES, LTD
Managing Director ... ... Mr. FRANK ALLEN.
Assistant to Managing Director ... ... Mr ALBERT P DE COURVILLE.

Wednesday, September 10th, 1913, and Every Evening,

"GIRLS,"

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts.

By CLYDE FITCH.

Characters in order of their appearance

Kate West	Miss DOROTHY FANE
Violet Lansdowne	Miss DAISY THIMM
Lucille Purcell	Miss ESME BERINGER
Pamela Gordon	Miss ENID BELL
The Janitor	Mr. ARTHUR T. LENNARD
The Postman	Mr. ALEX. BROWN
Edgar Holt	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Loot	Mr. H. E. GARDEN
Mr. Sprague	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Willis	VICTOR PIERPOINT
Mrs. Dennett	Miss WINIFRED TURNER
Dennett	Mr. ERNEST LEVERETT
Messenger Boy	CLIFFORD MOLLISON

The Play Produced by Mr. BENRIMO.

ACT I	... ...	THE GIRLS' STUDIO
ACT II	... A fortnight later	... LAW OFFICE OF SPRAGUE & HOLT.
ACT III	... A week later	... ... THE GIRLS' STUDIO.

Time—Early Spring. Place New York

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Raymond"	Thomas
SELECTION	"Girl in the Taxi"	Gruber
SELECTION	"Egyptian Ballet"	Luigini

Scenery Painted by WALTER HANN. Furniture Supplied by OETZMANN & Co. and J. S. LYON.
Costumes by DERENHAM & FREEDMAN. Hats by AUBERIS, LTD. Draperies by MAURICE Typewriters in Act II by ROYAL TYPEWRITING Co.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30. First Matinee Saturday, Sept 13th.

Doors Open at 8 Matinees 2. Commence at 8.30 (Matinees 2.30

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7283.

Business Manager ... ... THOMAS MILLER Stage Manager ... ... ALEX BLAN
Musical Director ... ... ISIDORE SCHWILLER

Waters, J.
Plays

214

Changes at the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Frank Curzon is to be congratulated on the structural alterations that he has had effected in the auditorium of the Prince of Wales Theatre. He has removed all the boxes from both sides of the house on the stalls floor, and it is remarkable what an improvement this change has made in the appearance of the theatre. New comfortable seats, new carpets, and new decorations all combine now to make the Prince of Wales a very charming theatre. It is only a pity that the new play, "Girls," by an American author (the late Clyde Fitch) was not better than it was, but for the judgment that selected this thin piece of theatricality Mr. Curzon is not responsible. He let the theatre until Christmas to the Moss Empires, Ltd., and the offering is the selection of the directors of that variety theatres' company.

A Sentimental Play.

"Girls" is a rather sickly sentimental play about three bachelor girls in a New York flat who apparently eat, sleep, work, and dress in one room. When the play begins they are all out of work, but as it proceeds two get employment as typists and the other gets into a chorus. The humorous humour of the play is that there is a sneer in it at musical comedy. One would have thought that the producers of a play like "Girls" would have hesitated to sneer at anything, let alone a thing so much superior to it in every way as musical comedy. Through the dialogue of the first act the audience learned that the three girls were man-haters, but by the time the last act was nearly over we knew that all changed their point of view, had each in fact angled for a husband, and had each secured one. Clever players like Mr. Sam Sothern, Miss Daisy Thimm, and Miss Enid Bell were wasted on this sort of material.

J. W. T.

Theatre Royal Drury Lane

LIMITED

Managing Director - ARTHUR COLLINS
Business Manager - - SIDNEY SMITH

THURSDAY, SEPT. 11th, 1913, at 7.30, & Every Evening at 8
First Matinee Wednesday, September 17th, and Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2

SEALED ORDERS

A NEW AND ORIGINAL DRAMA
BY
CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS
Incidental Music Composed by J. M. GLOVER

Characters in Act I. Period: 1893.

Mr. C. M. HALLARD	as	John Le Page
Miss MILDRED COTTELL	,,	Ellen Le Page (his Sister)
Miss MARJORIE WALKER	,,	Ruth Le Page (his Daughter)
Mr. ROBERT AYRTON	,,	Mendel Hart
Mr. E. H. KELLY	,,	Bertie Hart
Mr. BRYAN POWLEY	,,	Monty Bevis
Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON	,,	Joe Allan
Mr. HERBERT VYVYAN	,,	Bill Corry
Mr. GEORGE FOREST	,,	Harry Symonds
Mr. HENRY LEADER	,,	Inspector

Characters in Acts II. and III. Period: Present Day.

Mr. HALE HAMILTON	as	Hannibal K. Calhoun ("Cagliostro")
Miss FANNY BROUGH	,,	Mrs. O'Mara
Mr. EDWARD SASS	,,	Admiral Lord Hugh Gaveston, G.C.B.
Miss MADGE FABIAN	,,	Lady Felicia Gaveston (his Wife)
Mr. C. M. HALLARD	,,	Gaston Fournal (formerly known as John Le Page)
Miss MYRTLE TANNEHILL	,,	Ruth Fournal (formerly known as Ruth Le Page)
Mr. LANGHORNE BURTON	,,	Hon. Dennis Willoughby, Edward Hay — Lieutenants H.M.S. "Valiant"
Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY	,,
Mr. GERALD AMES	,,	Cecil Drummond
Miss ALICE CHARTRES	,,	Lady Violet Faux
Mr. JULIAN ROYCE	,,	Baron Kurdmann
Miss VIOLET LEWIS	,,	Lady Owthwaite
Mr. ARTHUR POOLE	,,	Rt. Hon. Ronald Caversham
Mr. LAURENCE CAIRD	,,	Sir John Denshire
Mr. E. H. KELLY	,,	Bertie Hart
Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON	,,	Joe Allan
Mr. E. W. ROYCE	,,	Old Alf

Waters, J.
Plays

Characters in Acts II. and III. continued.

Mr. FRED PEARSE	as	Auctioneer
Mr. DENIER WARREN	,,	Ned Corry
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	,,	Ginger
Mr. A. ROBERTSON	,,	Capt. Pomfret
Mr. C. TOWLE	,,	Admiral Von Rinck
Mr. P. HUGHES	,,	Admiral Don Diego Valdez
Mr. HERBERT WILSON	,,	Sacha
Miss JEAN BLOOMFIELD	,,	Duchess of Farnborough
Mr. ARTHUR LEIGH	,,	Jim Saunders
Mr. EDWIN PALMER	,,	Valet to Calhoun
Mr. R. A. BRANDON	,,	Butler to Gaston Fournal
Mr. H. WATSON	,,	Capt. Trevor-Rawson
Mr. WALTER TEALE	,,	Spriggs Fortescue
Mr. T. RICHARDS	,,	Jean Morny
Mr. L. ASHDOWNE	,,	Stefan
Miss FLORENCE VAUGHAN	,,	Flower Girl

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

Period: Act I., 1893. Acts II. and III., The Present Day.

ACT I.

Scene 1. LE PAGE'S COTTAGE, EPSOM [R. McCleery
Scene 2. OFFICES OF HART & SON, HATTON GARDEN [Bruce Smith

ACT II.

Scene 1. FLOWER SHOW, CHELSEA
Scene 2. Chelsea Embankment
Scene 3. No. 20, Wilton Square [R. McCleery
Scene 4. Bertie Hart's Office, Bond Street
Scene 5. The Admiral's Cabin, H.M.S. "Valiant"
Scene 6. DECK OF THE BATTLESHIP [Bruce Smith

ACT III.

Scene 1. CHRISTIE'S AUCTION ROOMS [R. McCleery
Scene 2. Cagliostro's Rooms, Bond Street [Bruce Smith
Scene 3. Dean Street, Park Lane [R. McCleery
Scene 4. Amherst Downs
Scene 5. Amherst Dene
Scene 6. THE ASCENT. MID-AIR!
Scene 7. THE FACE OF THE WATERS. DAWN! [Bruce Smith Scene 8. Amherst Quay

P.T.O.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1913.

Though the people in Drury Lane autumn drama vary, at any rate externally, and certainly in their uniforms, from year to year, you are pleased to find them in one amiable weakness always unchanged. This year, as in every other year, they have a fancy for carrying on their most private affairs in the most public, indeed the most crowded, places. Of course, you know why they do it. They do it because Drury Lane stage is very big and must show vast areas and immense gatherings; so the plot must needs get itself worked out in spacious and much-frequented localities. But, if you are a really pious devotee of Drury Lane, you would die rather than admit you know this secret. You are ready, on the contrary, to swear that the Chelsea Flower Show is the most natural place in the world for Ambassadors and spies, fashionable ladies who are afraid to tell their husbands about their debts, for moneylenders, Bond-street palmists, and beauty-restorers, all to meet and talk together or about one another behind one another's backs, while a crowd of other ladies and gentlemen in the most expensive clothes stand around silently prodding the flowers or perusing their catalogues. And you declare it is equally natural and right and proper for them all by-and-by to turn up again at Christie's, Ambassadors and spies and released convicts (on the spies' track) bidding blithely against one another for the rarest objets d'art. Nor are you in the least surprised to find the same or very much the same crowd dancing the Tango on the deck of the Admiral's ship Valiant and waltzing round the two big guns until the Admiral shouts, after the manner of Othello, "Silence that dreadful band!" or words to that effect, and proceeds to ask who has stolen his sealed orders. You, of course, know who the thief is, because you saw the Admiral's young wife losing all her money and more at a private gambling-hell in Wilton-square (need one say, raided for your delectation by the police?), but the Admiral does not know, bluff, breezy, unsuspecting sailor that he is, and thinks the culprit is his wife's brother, one of his own lieutenants. (A glimpse of the Spanish Admiral, visiting the ship, unbuttoning his uniform to show that he is an hidalgo and no thief, is a parenthetic ecstasy.)

Then two desperate characters go up in an airship—desperate in other senses than the obvious one of being Drury Lane people absurdly trying to avoid crowds. One of them has done 20 years' hard labour for stealing diamonds, which had been really taken by the other man, and here—up in an airship—is a fine elevated opportunity for revenge. But the airship belongs to a foreign Power, and a detachment of the British Navy brings it down with a shell, so that both men are drowned and the sealed orders which one of them had wrongfully about his person are recovered by the unjustly suspected lieutenant (of the Ball scene) in a steam pinnace.

Waters, J.
Plays

APOLLO THEATRE.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30,

CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production of

NEVER SAY DIE

By W. H. POST.

CHARACTERS.

Dionysius Woodbury	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Hector Walters	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH
Virgil Galesby, M.D.	Mr E. HOLMAN CLARK
Sir John Fraser, M.D.	Mr. JOHN CLULOW
Griggs	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Verchesi	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
Buster	Master REGINALD SHEFFIELD (By arrangement with Mr. CECIL RENWORTH)
Mr. Gibbs	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Servant	Mr. J. R. TOZER
Auction Man	Mr. S. GRENVILLE DARLING
Violet Stevenson	Miss DORIS LYTTON
La Cigale	Miss MARIE GEORGE
The Hon. Mrs. Stevenson	Miss WINIFRED EMERY

Act. I. .. Drawing Room at Mrs. Stevenson's House in Park Lane

Acts II. & III. .. Woodbury's Chambers, King Street, St. James

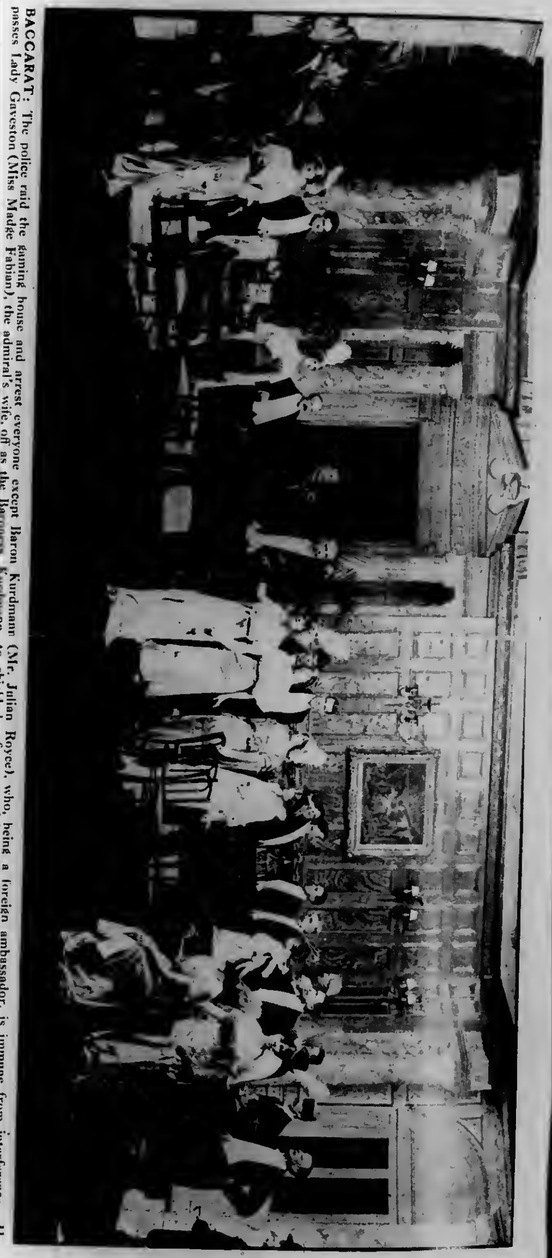
Scenes designed by Mr. ARTHUR DE LISSA, and executed and furnished by FRYERS, LTD., 6 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.

Miss Winifred Emery's Frocks by Miss GRAY, LTD., Brook Street; other Frocks by Madame RAYMOND, Regent Street.



Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

Silver supplied by HENDELES, 155 Balls Pond Road.

Scenery painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Piano supplied by ASCHERBERG, HOPWOOD & CREW, LTD.

APOLLO
THEATRE
13/9/13
Orch. Stall
D 1
To be retained

BACCARAT: The police raid the gaming house and arrest everyone except Baron Kurdmann (Mr. Julian Royce), who, being a foreign ambassador, is immune from interference. He passes Lady Gaveston (Miss Madge Fabian), the admiral's wife, off as the Baroness Kurdmann, and later wreaths the sealed orders from the safe in her husband's cabin on board the flagship.

1913
Waters, J.

Preceded at 7.30 by

THE WIFE TAMER

A One Act Play by J. SACKVILLE MARTIN.

CHARACTERS.

William Broom (Master of a Trawler) ...	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Mrs. Broom (his Wife)	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Capt. Talpin (Master of the Seamew) ...	Mr. LESLIE REA
Florrie (Capt. Broom's Niece) ...	Miss GLADYS MAUDE
Tom Harris (her Fiancé)	Mr. H. J. GIBSON

Scene: The Front Room of William Broom's Cottage. Time: Afternoon.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY MR. CHARLES HAWTREY.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

CZARDAS, No. 6	Michiels
"	Farkas Miska
ENTR'ACTE, "Fairies' Wedding"	E. de Jong
JAPANESE DANCE	C. Thomas
GRACEFUL DANCE, "Henry VIII."	Sullivan
SPANISH DANCES	Desormes

Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. GUY JONES.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.45.

Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	Mr. B CAMPLIN-SMITH
Assist. Stage Manager		Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager ...		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone Gerrard 3213.

General Manager ... ...(For Mr. Tom B. Davis)... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

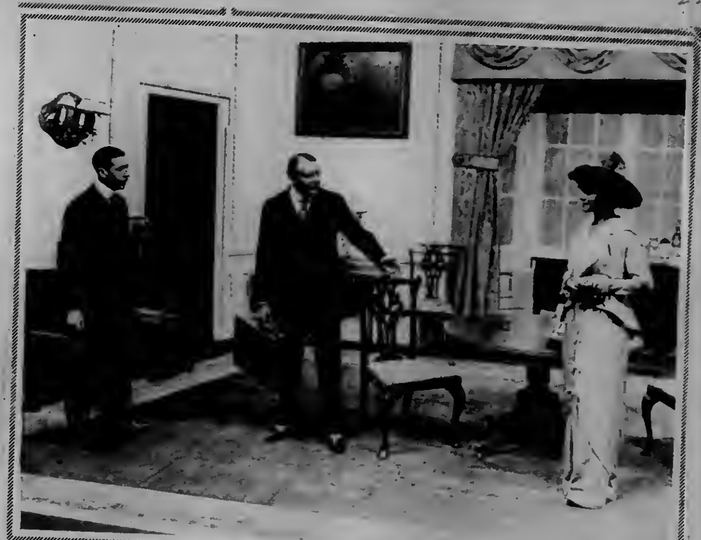
MR. CHARLES HAWTREY'S NEW COMEDY.

Production at the Apollo Theatre Last Night.

"NEVER SAY DIE."

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Dionysius Woodbury .....Mr. Charles Hawtrey
Virgil Galesby, M.D. .....Mr. E. Holman Clark
Griggs .....Mr. A. Vane-Tempest
Violet Stevenson .....Miss Doris Lytton
La Cigale .....Miss Marie George
The Hon. Mrs. Stevenson ...Miss Winifred Emery



It would be no exaggeration to describe last night's new play at the Apollo Theatre as the funniest farce seen in London for some years. That it will be one of the greatest successes that Mr. Charles Hawtrey has ever produced seems at the moment a very safe prediction to make. "Never Say Die" is an American farce in so far that its author, William Post, is an American, but the story is laid in London, and is to all intents and purposes English.

From almost the opening of the first act to the last moment of the last act it is a scream. The situations are funny, the dialogue is deliciously droll, crisp, and fresh, and although the story runs quick there is a welcome freedom from that deadly sense of forcing things that makes the average farce such an exhausting experience to most of us. No description, let it be frankly stated, can give any reasonable notion of the fun of "Never Say Die." The storm of laughter revolves round a rich young man and his valet. The master has been given up by the doctors. He looks healthy enough, but they insist he has not a month to live. What better can he do under the circumstances than endow a girl who is engaged to a friend of his? He will marry her, and at once go away, die, and leave her a rich widow. Then the friend can become the second husband. Unfortunately, instead of dying the newly married becomes strong. He breathes the night air every night, eats and drinks the delightful things the doctors say will kill him, but as he cannot kill himself the friend awaiting for the widow that is to be gets furious. The other, ashamed of his good health, offers to compromise himself so that a divorce may be obtained. All his friends bring each a girl that is to be seen with him. They all arrive together and they, not the intended victim, are compromised.

Comical Situations.

The Apollo Theatre almost shook with laughter, and yet every face on the stage was as serious as if it were a tragedy, for these situations were delightfully comical, and every man and woman on the stage except the charming heroine, was a real character, and so the fun came naturally. Mr. Hawtrey and Mr. Vane Tempest as master and valet were indescribably funny. Mr. Holman Clark as a doctor would make a sick man laugh, and there was a funny boy, and a funny dog, and a funny cook—in fact, everything was funny and just calculated to make the production of "Never Say Die" the greatest popular success in farce seen in London for years. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, taking one of his calls, said he "always believed that if the theatre gave the right plays the public would support it." He is right. The public will go to see this play, but only the first-night audience will see the genial, comical face of the American author as he looked at Mr. Hawtrey and his fellow English audience. He had to stand on the stage a long time last night to hear himself cheered.

J. W.

Dionysius and Violet Mutually Decide to Live Together as Man and Wife and are here seen Leaving for America; the Artist Marries La Cigale

Waters, J.
Plays

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On MONDAY, 15th SEPTEMBER, 1913, at 7.30,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

INTERLOPERS

A Comedy, in Four Acts, by

H. M. HARWOOD.

Peter Ross	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Jack Chisholm	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Mr. Ross	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Amos Thorpe	Mr. MILES MALLESON
Mr. Robertson	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Waiter	Mr. LEONARD NOTCUTT
Servant at Jermyn Street	Mr. ARTHUR BAXENDELL
Iris Mahoney	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
Margaret Chisholm	Miss EVELYN WEEDEN
Isabel Ross	Miss ELIZABETH RISDON
Mrs. Ross	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT
Beatrice Harbord	Miss ELAINE SLEDDALL
Phyllis	Miss LISA STECKER
Maid at Pinner	Miss OLGA WARD
Nurse	Miss DOROTHY DUNDAS

ACT I.	The Chisholms' House at Pinner.
ACT II.	An Hotel on the Lake of Como. (Two months later.)
ACT III.	The Chisholms' House at Pinner. (Ten days later.)
ACT IV.	A Flat in Jermyn Street. (Three months later.)

Produced under the Direction of J. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

PRECEDED BY

THE HARBOUR WATCH

An Original Play, in One Act, by

RUDYARD KIPLING.

Emanuel Pyecroft, R.N.	Mr. LUKE FORSTER
Edward Glass, R.M.L.I.	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
Albert Blashford, R.N.	Mr. LAWFORD DAVIDSON
William Agg	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Corporal Walters, R.M.L.I.	Mr. W. LEMMON WARDE
Jenny Blashford	Miss MARJORIE DAY

Produced under the Direction of FRANK VERNON.

There will be Intervals of Ten minutes each.

The scenery painted by GEORGE SACKMANN.
Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Miss Lewes's Dresses by Mdlle. RACHELLE OSPOVAT, 69 New Bond Street, W.
Miss Weeden's Dresses by HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47 New Bond Street, W.
Hats by M. MICHEL ZAC, 2 Hanover Court, W.
Furs by TAIT & SMALL, 46 Dorset Street, W.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head-dress.

This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by GEO. ROGERS & SONS.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.15

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.
Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

a clever little play by a new author, and, probably, a young author. For an author is probably young in mind at any rate, if not in years, who gives all his good things to his younger people to say, and all his silly things to the elderly. Of course there is no knowing, and the author of Interlopers may be in fact as old as the Patriarch at His Majesty's looks. Still we stick to the probably young, for the play starts with a thesis, and as theses are for the time being "off" it takes the courage of youth to be deliberately out of the fashion. The thesis with which the play starts is like a bit chipped out of the thesis of M. Hervieu's Course du Flambeau. Do we live for our own generation or for the next, for ourselves or for our children? Margaret lives for her children, and thus ceases to live for her husband Jack, who is bored by the children and would still be his wife's lover if she would only spare the time from the nursery. It appears that Jack's mother had been just like that, and his miserable father, on his death-bed, had warned him—in vain—"Never marry a woman with the maternal instinct." Margaret has friends who declare that motherhood is the highest duty of woman and paternity the noblest function of man. Jack, enraged, declares that in these respects women and men are notably inferior to the so-called lower animals. So he runs away with Iris.

And thus you see that the thesis won't hold out, and that the play is really not about parents and children, but about (oh yes, the author must be young!) that old, old situation of the man between two women. One woman is dark and voluptuous, of course, the other fair and domestic, and you wait in confidence for the scene wherein they meet and talk it out. The dark one does most of the talking, with a rich voice and an unusual grace of gesture, for she is played by an actress of distinctly un-English ways, very charming ways, Miss Miriam Lewes. She knows there is not in reality a ha'porth of the Bohemian in Jack, who is unhappy in breaking the Seventh Commandment save in a rigidly British way—that is to say, without deception, without "intrigue," which is a horrid foreign thing. Besides, he really loves Margaret all the time. So Iris gracefully, always gracefully, resigns him to her and departs to seek a less wooden lover, or more probably, lovers. Miss Evelyn Weeden is the wife with the maternal instinct and stiff movements that are a foil to the sinuosities of the voluptuous Iris. She makes a good contrast—and really with the choice of two such women the wooden husband (Mr. Norman Trevor, rather dry, hard, knotty wood) is by no means à plaindre.

But the two luckiest people are Mr. Dennis Eadie and Miss Elizabeth Risdon as Margaret's brother and sister, who have all the bright and amusing things to say—the gentleman all the bright things that will go with common sense and knowledge of the world, and the young lady all the bright things that will go with innocent girlhood that makes a clear distinction between innocence and ignorance. They both say their bright things brightly. Then there is the elderly love of Mr. Harben and the authentic Scotch accent of Mr. Campbell Gullan—altogether a good cast for a play, at any rate good enough to set you wondering what its author's next effort will be like. Interlopers is preceded by Mr. Rudyard Kipling's breezy little naval-and-military anecdote The Harbour Watch, already played in this theatre of afternoons, which is a perfect joy for the sake of Mr. George Tully's tipsy marine.

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1913.

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1913.

MR. JOHN GALSWORTHY'S NEW PLAY.

"THE FUGITIVE" AT THE COURT THEATRE.

George Dedmond	CLAUDE KING
Clare Dedmond	IRENE ROOKE
General Sir Charles Dedmond, K.C.B.	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Lady Dedmond	ALMA MURRAY
Reginald Huntingdon ..	A. EYLTON ALLEN
Edward Fullarton	LESLIE REA
Dorothy Fullarton	ESTELLE WINWOOD
Twisden	J. H. ROBERTS
Haywood	CHARLES GROVES
Malise	MILTON ROSMER
Mrs. Miler	Mrs. A. B. TAPPING

Any one of Mr. Galsworthy's plays might be labelled "General cussedness of things; exhibit No. —." In The Fugitive he shows the general cussedness of things as affecting a wife on strike. Clare, after half-a-dozen years of marriage, finds she can't stand George any longer. He is quite a decent fellow in his way, but his way is not her way. He is all for "good form," she is all for "soul." If he looks out of window and sees the Clock Tower, he wonders if he will be able to make out the time by the clock. The same view reveals to her the immensities and the eternal verities and the mystery of beauty. When Clare goes into a tantrum and wanders for hours up and down the Embankment, George tells smooth society fibs about her absence to the guests who have come in for a little bridge. She returns, more exasperated than ever, and promptly gives it all away. Here is a new variant of our old Mid-Victorian friend, the femme incomprise. In the brave days of yore this misunderstood lady used to elope to Venice with the nearest bachelor, but Clare is not that sort of woman. True, she has picked up a bachelor friend, one Malise, a vague literary gentleman, who doesn't, as honest George complains, "even know how to dress." But Clare doesn't go to Malise for love, but simply for sympathy and advice, and he advises her to make a bolt for freedom, to give her soul a chance. Clare begs George to let her go, but he refuses. It wouldn't be good form: besides, their rows are always followed by a reconciliation. That's the intolerable part of it, says Clare, for the reconciliation involves a physical obligation against which her soul revolts.

So bolt she does—and straight to Malise's rooms, as before merely for sympathy and advice. And now she finds what it means to be a wife on strike. Private detectives haunt Malise's staircase. Family solicitors call to pooh-pooh soul and to point out hard facts. Clare hasn't a penny, and doesn't know how to make one. Malise presses her to stay, but that would be only playing into the hands of George and his friends, who have already assumed that Malise either is or very soon will be Clare's lover. There is no help for it: Clare must go out into "the world" and hunt for work. Poor fugitive!

She gets work in a shop, but still goes on being a fugitive—a fugitive from nasty strange men, attracted by her pretty face. When her husband's people discover her she flings up her job and, of course, bolts back to Malise—for more advice. He makes her some tea and relieves his feelings by shaking his fist at Society. That is about all he can do, for he is very poor, and has just paid a bill by selling his Boccaccio. As it was an English translation, you perceive that this literary gentleman is not so very, very literary. But though he has no Italian he has soul, which is what Clare is out for. Indeed, she finds she has grown to love him, and they agree to live together. Of course, it is not a success. It would never do for anything to be a success in one of Mr. Galsworthy's plays on the general cussedness of things. Divorce proceedings are pending, with a claim for £2,000 damages. Further, Malise's editor sacks him because of the scandal.

So to save Malise Clare leaves him, and is once more a fugitive. But she is now at the end of her tether. She puts on her best gown, spends her last shilling on flowers for her bodice, and with a pathetically timid swagger takes a chair in the little supper-room at "The Gascony." Here she is like the Lady amid the rabble-rout of "Comus." She sits silent and frightened while songs resound, and one festive guest (apparently an amateur) obliges with a solo on the coach-horn. A youngster, quite a pleasant youngster, espies her and offers her supper; then finds out she is a lady and not one of ces dames, and behaves rather nicely about it. But she can go on no longer. A drop of poison in her champagne glass finishes it, and she is left sitting dead there, while the songs and the coach-horn begin again.

As always, Mr. Galsworthy plays fair and presents sides not as sides but as aspects of the general cussedness of things. George is a decent fellow according to his lights; so is the literary gentleman, despite his inability to read Boccaccio in the original. So is the family solicitor, &c., &c., &c. Nobody is to blame and everybody is to blame, and the world simply doesn't know how to treat wives with souls who can't "stick" prosaic husbands. You feel that it is all very sad and bad and mad; and as that is just what Mr. Galsworthy set out to make you feel, he must be acknowledged to have written a successful play. He tells his story wonderfully well. A true artist, he always uses the right word and never a superfluous word. And he is philosopher as well as artist. But for our part, with all our admiration for his work, we cannot help wishing he were sometimes like the philosopher in Boswell, with whom "cheerfulness would come breaking in." Why be always painting the general cussedness of things, and painting it in grisaille? It almost drives us to confess a sneaking sympathy for the gentleman with the coach-horn.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors — The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

Every Evening at 9,

MESSRS. ALGERNON GREIG'S & MILTON ROSMER'S Production

"THE FUGITIVE,"

A New Play, by JOHN GALSWORTHY.

George Dedmond	... ...	CLAUDE KING
Clare Dedmond	... ...	IRENE ROOKE
General Sir Charles Dedmond, K.C.B.		FREDRICK MOYES
Lady Dedmond	... ...	ALMA MURRAY
Reginald Huntingdon	...	A. HYLTON ALLEN
Edward Fullarton	... ...	LESLIE REA
Dorothy Fullarton	...	ESTELLE WINWOOD
Paynter	... ...	FRANK MACRAE
Burney	... ...	DORIS BATEMAN
Twisden	... ...	J. H. ROBERTS
Haywood	... ...	CHARLES GROVES
Malise	... ...	MILTON ROSMER

By kind permission of GRANVILLE BARKER and Miss LILLAH MCCARTHY.

ACT I. Scene - George Dedmond's Flat. Evening

ACT II. Scene - The Rooms of Malise. Morning

Between Acts I. and II., Three Nights elapse: Acts II. & III., Scene 1, Three Months elapse; Act III., Scene 2 and Act IV. Six Months elapse.

Ladies' Dresses in Act IV. by DE BRAITH, 50, South Audley Street. Furniture by J. S. LYON, High Holborn.

Miss Estelle Winwood's dresses by "THELMA," 63, Southampton Row, W.C.

Mrs. Miler	... ...	Mrs. A. B. TAPPING
Porter	... ...	ERIC BARKER
A Messenger Boy	... ...	WALTER COUSINS
Characters in Act II.
A Young Man	... ...	VINCENT CLIVE
Arnaud	... ...	J. H. ROBERTS
Mr. Varley	... ...	CHARLES GROVES
A Languid Lord	... ...	NORMAN YATES
His Companion	... ...	EVE MORE-DUNPHIE
A Blonde Gentleman	... ...	LESLIE REA
A Dark Gentleman	... ...	MONTAGUE WIGAN
Two Ladies with large hats	...	DORIS BATEMAN, GRACE NEWCOMBE

ACT III. Scene 1 - The Rooms of Malise. Late Afternoon
Scene 2 The Rooms of Malise. Early Afternoon

ACT IV. Scene A Small Supper Room at "The Gascony"

Play Produced by MILTON ROSMER.

Preceded at 8.30 by

HENRY J. FRANKLIN with a Player and a Piano.

"THE ROYAL COURT TRIO," under the direction of BRIGATA BUCALOSSI, will play the following Selection of Music:—

OVERTURE	... ...	"Lustspiel"	Keler Bela
	(Before Act II.)
(a) BALLET	... ...	"Coppelia"	Delibe
(b) INTERMEZ	...	"Demoiselle Ch..."	Percy E. Fatcher
	(Before Act III.)
(a) ROMANCE (SOLO VIOLIN)	... ...	... ...	...d'Ambrosio
	Mr. FRANCIS C. THORNE.
(b) SIZILIETTA	... ...	... ...	Franz von Blon
IDYLLE	... ...	"Dawn"	A. E. Wate
	(Before Act IV.)
(a) 'CELLO SOLO	...	"Chant sans Paroles" ...	P. T. Tsch
	Mr. LESLIE BURTON
(b) DESCRIPTIVE PIECE		"A Hunting Scene"	Bonnisse
	After.
	"Thro' the Night Dark Shadows Stealing"		Schuber

Grand Piano exclusively supplied by CRAMERS, New Bond Street.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

Doors Open at 8 (Matinees 2). Commence at 8.30 (Matinees 2.30)

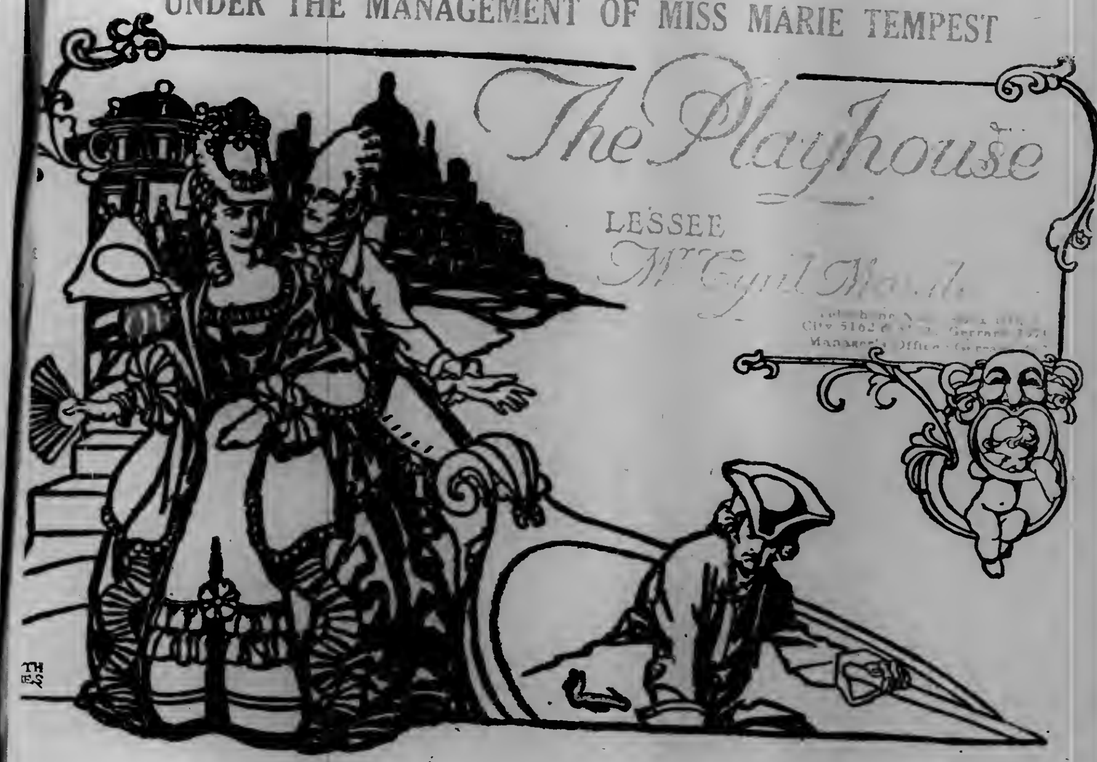
PRICES—BOXES, £1 1s. and £1 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7282.

General Manager ... ... H. E. MALTBY. | For Messrs. Algernon Greig & Milton Rosmer

Business Manager ... ... ARTHUR MILTON. | Stage Managers ... ERIC BARKER and NORMAN YATES

Secretary ... ... MONTAGUE WIGAN

In Preparation.



"ARE YOU THERE?"

A Modern Entertainment with Music, by LEON CAVALLO. Book by ALBERT P. de COURVILLE.

Lyrics by RAY GOETZ and EDGAR WALLACE.

First Performance To-night, Thursday, September 18th, 1913, at 7.30

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF MISS MARIE TEMPEST

MARY GOES FIRST

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

To-night, Thursday, September 18th, 1913, at 7.30
and every following Evening at 8.30

Miss MARIE TEMPEST will present, for the First Time, a New and Original Comedy, in Four Acts, called

MARY GOES FIRST

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES

"Thus it appears that the Honours and Dignities adjudged by the State serve often but to varnish the Stratagems and Pretences wherehy they have been obtained; and the claim to Precedeney is shewn to he the claim of those who have no other claim to our Admiration and Esteem."

Fettleworth's "Credentials of Merit" (1764) Chapter on Titles.

SIR THOMAS DODSWORTH	MR. KENYON MUSGRAVE
RICHARD WHICHELLO	MR. CHARLES V. FRANCE
FELIX GALPIN	MR. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
MR. TADMAN	MR. GEORGE SHELTON
DR. CHESHER	MR. HERBERT ROSS
HARVEY BETTS (one of the Junior Liberal Whips)	MR. RICHARD LLUELLYN
POLLARD	MR. JOHN ALEXANDER
DAKIN	MR. HORTON COOPER
LADY DODSWORTH	MISS HAMLEY CLIFFORD
ELLA SOUTHWOOD	MISS MARGARET BRÜHLING
MRS. TADMAN	MISS CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
MARY (MRS.) WHICHELLO AND	MISS MARIE TEMPEST

The Scene is laid throughout in Felix Galpin's House, St. John's Hill, Warkinstall. (WALTER HANN)

NOTE.—There will be an interval of a few minutes only between Acts III. and IV.

The Play produced by Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE.

The Room furnished by J. WILSON MOORE, 46, South Street, Park Lane, W.
Miss MARIE TEMPEST's Costumes by THE MAISON HAYWARD, 67, New Bond Street, W.: all other Dresses by Madame FRANCIS, 78, Duke Street, Grosvenor Square, W.
Hats by the MAISONS HAYWARD, and LEWIS, 210, Regent Street, W.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

The following Programme of Music will be played:

OVERTURE ...	"Melodious Memories" ...	Finck	ENTR'ACTE	"Nuit Napolitaine"	Dalchatel
			CELESTA SOLO	... "Celestina"	G. Jones
VALSE ...	"Le Bois Enchante"	O. Roberts	VALSE	"Little Grey Home in the West	Lohr
SONG ...	... "Volga" ...	(Russian)
MARCH	"Powder Rag" ...	Birch	VALSE	"Love and Laughter"	Oscar Straus

The "Celesta" and Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W.
The Pianoforte by STEINWAY & SONS, Lower Seymour Street.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT SEPT. 24th
AND EVERY FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY

Stage Manager ... Mr. NORMAN LORING
Musical Director ... Mr. HAROLD R. GRIMSTON

Opera Glasses, by Negretti & Zambra, can be hired from the Attendants at a charge of 6d. for the performance.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management, and all Wines and Spirits are of the best quality. Ices by the Horton Ice Cream Co

No charge is made no Gratuities are allowed

Ladies are respectfully reques ence by kindly removing their Hats

Toilet Table e by Hinde's, Ltd.

Box O Mr. F. SLEAP.

Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Stall Balcony, 5/- Upper Boxes, 2/6 Gallery, 1/ ooked.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY ...rinted on every play bill. (a) The Public can ...(3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the ...working order, (4) Smoking is not permitted ...obstructions, whether permanent or tempora...

...al and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be ...l exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards ...during every performance to insure its being in proper ...Gangways must be kept free from chairs or any other

GENERAL MANAGER

Mr. ALFRED TURNER

Miss Marie Tempest.

Miss Marie Tempest began her tenancy of The Playhouse on Thursday evening by producing Henry Arthur Jones's newest play, "Mary Goes First," before an audience that was astonishingly punctual considering that (for this night only) the curtain was taken up at 7.30. This rule of beginning early on first nights in order to facilitate critics is an excellent one for the Press, and by helping the newspapers theatre managements benefit themselves. But there are times when one cannot help laughing at the other forlorn playgoers turned out of a theatre at ten o'clock, at least an hour too early to think of going to a restaurant for supper, and at least an hour too late to think of ordering dinner.

* * * * *

This new play by Henry Arthur Jones is very light fare. Rightly or wrongly one cannot help thinking that it was written specially for Miss Tempest. Throughout its four acts we see Mrs. Mary Whichello wheedling, coaxing, fascinating, or commandeering her neighbours, friends, and husband. Very charmingly, and very cleverly, too, she does each and all of those things; but we had seen her do the self-same things before, in much the same charming way, in plays that if not just like this one, were in texture not at all unlike it.

* * * * *

In this new play Mary is the much admired wife of a rich manufacturer in a provincial town, and until one of their neighbours got a knighthood, and his wife in consequence became Lady Dodsworth, Mary was first in local society. Mary did not like the change. She laughed, of course, at her rival's appearance and manner, and nearly embroiled the two families in a law-suit by saying that the knight's lady looked like an impropriety. There is some rather bitter and disparaging comment on the acquisition of titles, and the prices paid for them, and the play is not at all intended to show that those who get them deserve them any more than those who do not. This quality had a somewhat unpleasant flavour in an entertainment that was otherwise rather amusing. In every department the comedy was splendidly acted, but special praise is owing to Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, Mr. Charles V. France, Mr. Graham Browne, Mr. George Shelton, Miss Hamley Clifford, and Miss Tempest. The reception accorded the performance was entirely favourable.

J.W. PLAYGOER.

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

WEST STREET (Opposite the Palace Theatre), CAMBRIDGE CIRCUS, W.C.

Proprietors - - - - - - - - - - THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Managing Director - - - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT JAY.
Lessee - - - - - - - - - - Mr. DURRANT SWAN.

ON SATURDAY, SEPT. 20th, 1913, AT 7.30 (FOLLOWING EVENINGS AT 8.15)

MADEMOISELLE FIFI

A Play in One Act dramatised by OSCAR MÉTÉNIER from Guy de Maupassant.

Characters.

Major ———	HERBERT BUNSTON
Captain ———	IVO DAWSON
Lieutenant Anatole	H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Lieutenant Cyril	WILLIAM ARMSTRONG
Lieutenant Willy (nicknamed "Mlle. Fifi")	ROBERT FARQUHARSON
Priest	EDWARD O'NEILL
Sacristan	H. DE LANGE
Orderly	G. CHALMERS COLONA
Pamela	PEGGY TALBOT DANIEL
Blondina	NANCY BLACKWOOD
Amanda	EVELYN WALSH HALL
Eva	VERA GEORGE
AND
Rachel...	LYDIA YAVORSKA

Scene—The Hall of a Castle near a Country Town in a district held by a Foreign Army of Occupation.

Time—The Present.

Followed at 8.15 (following Evenings at 9 o'clock) by

I LOVE YOU!

A Comedy in Three Acts by ROBERTO BRACCO.
English Adaptation by JAMES PARKER.

Characters:

Arthur Van Doorman	W. B. DAVIS
Christopher Milsom	HERBERT BUNSTON
Viscount Withington	IVO DAWSON
Dr. Salvetti	ARTHUR SCOTT-CRAVEN
Philip Head	H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
George Prenderby	ROBERT FARQUHARSON
Pope	MARTIN SANDS
Giles	H. DE LANGE
AND
Sandra, Marchesa di Fontanarosa (Mrs. Van Doorman)	LYDIA YAVORSKA

ACT I. Morning.
ACT II. Evening of the same day.
ACT III. Afternoon of the following day.

Scene—A Cottage on the Norfolk Coast belonging to the Marchesa di Fontanarosa.

The Plays produced by Mr. FRANK COLLINS and Mr. JOHN POLLOCK.

Madame LYDIA YAVORSKA's Dresses in "I Love You!" by PAQUIN, 40 Dover Street, W.
Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN, Coventry Street. Furniture by OETZMANN.
Wigs by GUSTAVE. MAXIM CIGARETTES (28 Shaftesbury Avenue) used on the Stage.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC to be played by THE SINFONIA QUARTETTE under the Leadership of HERR OTTO MACHIG:—

"MADEMOISELLE FIFI"	OVERTURE	"Marche Militaire"	Schubert
	FINALE	"Rhapsodie Hongroise"	Hauser
"I LOVE YOU"	OVERTURE	"Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
	FANTASIE on Italian Airs	Between Acts I and II.—"O Sole Mio."	Puccini
		Between Acts II and III.—Selection from TOSTI's Songs.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

THE TIMES

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1913.

"I LOVE YOU!"

MME. LYDIA YAVORSKA AT THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE.

By ROBERTO BRACCO.
English Adaptation by JAMES PARKER.

Arthur Van Doorman	W. B. DAVIS
Christopher Milsom	HERBERT BUNSTON
Viscount Withington	IVO DAWSON
Dr. Salvetti	ARTHUR SCOTT-CRAVEN
Philip Head	H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
George Prenderby	ROBERT FARQUHARSON
Pope	MARTIN SANDS
Giles	H. DE LANGE
Sandra	LYDIA YAVORSKA

Signor Roberto Bracco may be a very entertaining playwright in his native Italian, which is the best language for talking an infinite deal of nothing in, but in English his verbosity becomes rather tiresome. The simple little anecdote he has to tell, if worth telling at all—a point open to question—might have been better told in fewer words. It is the anecdote of a young grass widow who flirts with a quintet of variously comic gentlemen until the unexpected return of her husband gives her heart more serious agitation. She had thought her love for him was dead, but finds it very much alive. Just to tease him she shuts him out of the room: then relents only to find that he has gone placidly to sleep in a chair. Next day, after taking her revenge for his apparent indifference by giving him what looks like cause for real jealousy of one of the five comic gentlemen, all is forgiven, and the pair are left in one another's arms while the comic quintet look on, chagrined, through the window. As the grass widow, Mme. Lydia Yavorska displays an excess of energy which it is quite exhausting to contemplate. For three acts she is always on the stage, always talking—indeed talks herself hoarse—and accompanying her talk with a variety of gesture, posture, and movement which would furnish forth a whole ballet d'action. She crouches, tiptoes, pirouettes, waves her arms, and generally mimes every possible emotion round the six gentlemen in turn—and always in a tremour of nervous exasperation which in the end communicates itself to the spectator. So intelligent a lady as this actress evidently is ought to be clever enough to take to heart the historic warning about trop de zèle. She mars what might be a charming performance by over-anxiety, over-excitement, over-elaboration.

The
Shaftesbury Theatre

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25TH, 1913, AT 8,

An Original Musical Comedy

THE PEARL GIRL

Book and Lyrics by BASIL HOOD.

Music by HUGO FELIX and HOWARD TALBOT.

Characters

THE DUKE OF TRENT	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
ROBERT JAFFRAY (His Land Agent)	Mr. JACK HULBERT
MR. JECKS (Manager of the Palmyra Pearl Shop)	Mr. LAURI DE FRECE
MR. MUGGERIDGE (Directors of the Palmyra Pearl Company)	Mr. EDGAR STANMORE
MR. BANBURY (Directors of the Palmyra Pearl Company)	Mr. DUNCAN TOVEY
MR. POULTER (Directors of the Palmyra Pearl Company)	Mr. SEBASTIAN SMITH
MR. HOPKINS (Head Assistant at the Shop)	Mr. HARRY RAY
BYLES (Messenger and Odd Man at the Shop)	Mr. ALFRED LESTER
LORD GEORGE MATLOCK (Friends of the Duke)	Mr. REGINALD SHARLAND
CAPTAIN CUNNINGHAM (Friends of the Duke)	Mr. T. BRYCE-WILSON
MR. PRINGLE (A Society Journalist)	Mr. H. V. TOLLEMACHE
JAMES OGILVIE (Chief Officer R.M.S. "Parana")	Mr. RIX CURTIS
HIGGINS (A Derbyshire Rustic)	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
ERNEST (The Duke's Footman)	Mr. REGINALD ANDREWS
DUCHESS OF TRENT (Mother of the Duke)	Miss DOROTHEA TEMPLE
LADY BETTY BIDDULPH (The Duke's Sister)	Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE
LADY CATHARINE WHEELER	Miss SADRÉNE STORRI
MADAME ALVAREZ (Of Argentina)	Miss MARJORIE MAXWELL
MISS MABEL CHEYNE WALKER	Miss JOAN HAY
MRS. BAXTER-BROWNE	Miss ADA BLANCHE
MISS FITZROY (Assistants at the Pearl Shop)	Miss VIOLET BLYTHE
MISS BERESFORD (Assistants at the Pearl Shop)	Miss VIOLET CROMPTON
MIRANDA PEPLOE (Secretary and Typist)	Miss IRIS HOEY

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I.

Scene 1.

"In the Dukeries."

The elaborate change is timed for one minute thirty seconds, but should this be exceeded to-night, the indulgence of the audience is requested.

Scene 2.

Palmyra Pearl Premises, Bond Street, W.

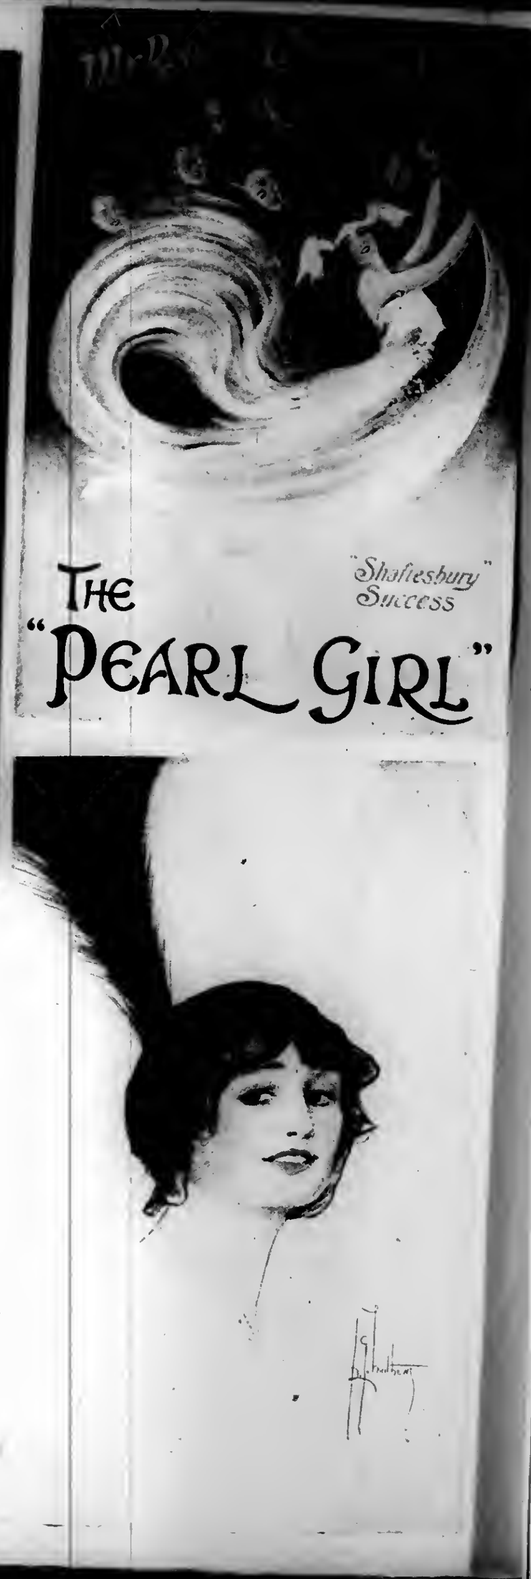
Both Designed and Painted by CONRAD TRITSCHLER.

ACT II.

Hurlelagh.

Painted by R. C. MCCLEERY.

ACT III.



"River Place."

Painted by R. C. MCCLEERY.

The Pearl Girl

HAVE YOU BOOKED YOUR SEAT?
IF NOT — GERRARD-DOUBLE SIX-DOUBLE SIX-DOUBLE QUICK.

Waters, J.
Plays

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Under the Management of

MARK & SYDNEY BLOW.

On SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, at 9 p.m.

MAURICE FARKOA

IN

"THIS WAY MADAM!"

From the French "Aime des Femmes" by Maurice Hennequin and Georges Mitchell.

Adapted by SYDNEY BLOW and DOUGLAS HOARE (Authors of "Oh! I Say!!")

Armand Desroches	(a Dressmaker)	Mr. MAURICE FARKOA
Albert Bonnipard	of the Firm of Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
Louis Faribol		Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
Victor Catiche	(a Financier)	Mr. JOHN TRESAHAR
Pierre	(a Messenger at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.)	Mr. J. N. MORE
Jean	(Servant at Armand Desroches)	Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Lucile Bonnipard	(Wife of Bonnipard)	Miss EDIE GRAHAM
Annette Faribol	(Wife of Faribol)	Miss MAUD CRESSALL
Mariette	(Head Saleswoman at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.)	Miss DIANA DURAND
Finette		Miss DORIS HURLEY
Blanche		Miss DESIREE HESSE
Suzanne	Mannequins at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.	Miss VIOLET ASHTON
Julie		Miss PEGGY DOYLE
Estelle		Miss MOLLIE SEYMOUR
Jeannette		Miss GRETA LEWIS
Madame Banco del Rio de la Plata	(a Client at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.)	Miss KITTY BARLOW
Baronne des Herbettes	(another Client at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.)	Miss DIANA COKTIS
Justine	(Maid at Desroches)	Miss DOROTHY RUNDELL
AND
Marie Ange	(a Typist at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie.)	Miss MABEL SEALBY

(By arrangement with GEORGE EDWARDES, Esq.)

SYNOPSIS.

ACT I. ... Mons. Bonnipard's Office at Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie., at the Rue Mignon
ACT II. ... ... At Bonnipard, Faribol et Cie., Rue de la Paix
ACT III. ... ... Armand Desroches' Flat

Song, sung by Mr. MAURICE FARKOA in the 2nd Act, "JE SAIS QUE VOUS ETES JOLIE," by kind permission of the Directors of the Alhambra.
Dresses by BOUE SŒURS, of 29 Rue de la Paix, Paris, and 29 Coldbill Street, London.
Miss Desiree Hesse's Dresses by CHEZ JACK.
Miss Scalby's Dresses by MAUD MOORE, Bond Street and Sloane Street.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street.

The Play produced by JAMES WELCH.

Preceded at 8.30 p.m. by

"STUFFING"

By GEORGE PASTON.

Mr. Pulley		Mr. HENRY J. FORD
Mrs. Pulley		Miss DOROTHY RUNDELL
Mrs. Lindus		Miss ADIE BOYNE
Johnny	(Mrs. Lindus' Son)	Master REX O'MALLEY

SCENE—Living Room at Pulley's House in Fulham.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 3 P.M.

General Manager ... Mr. MARK BLOW
Business Manager ... Mr. CECIL PAGET
Stage Manager ... Mr. LANCELOT LOWDER
Assistant Stage Manager Mr. MARK TURNER

NOTICE

Ladies in the audience who care to enjoy during the entr'actes that charge of secre and air hitherto regarded as the especial prerogative of the men will find the Rose Square Quartet playing in the Foyer, and are invited to take advantage of this innovation which the Management hopes will meet with their liking.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"THIS WAY, MADAM."

The assistance of a dressmaker is required. She might find something to say about the play. It makes a prolonged parade of frocks, each no doubt the finest work of time. Then it exhibits to your ravished eyes the processes of construction, the building of one frock more about the living model. The atmosphere is all dress stuffs, and pins, and mannequins. So a dressmaker's criticism might be eloquent. Lacking any technical interest in her craft, we have to record a dreary evening.

"This Way, Madam!" was originally a French farce, by MM. Maurice Honnequin and Georges Mitchell. Messrs. Sydney Blow and Douglas Hoare, who have put it into English, leave us wondering why they should have taken that trouble. So far as it has any distinct flavour it is rather unpleasant. Such fun as it contains is of the most obvious. It is, of course, no longer than other farces, but it seemed interminable. There was, however, plenty of applause.

MR. MANTALINI.

The hero is a male dressmaker, as fascinating as Mr. Mantalini. Any number of "fine women, real countesses, and splendid fortunes" adored Armand Desroches. So he assured the success of the firm which he honoured with his services. Catiche, who financed the decaying house of Bonnipard and Faribol, brought him to their shabby premises in the Rue Mignon. He required that they should move to the Rue de la Paix, provide him with magnificence and an orchestra. He always fitted his clients to music. Bonnipard and Faribol, two conventionally farcical old fogies, had, conventionally, yonng and gay wives. Each feared for the other's felicity, but they engaged the fascinator.

In the splendours of the Rue de la Paix all the bewitching mannequins, as well as the "real countesses and splendid fortunes," duly yearned after Armand. He was polite, but cold, to the mannequins, and to the splendid fortunes magnificently rude, so they all loved him all the more. He had so much adulation that he was sick of it. When the typist of the firm scolded him he began to adore her. He made her a dress, weaving yards of one stuff and another about her before our ravished eyes. After that he arranged appointments at his flat with the wives of his employers, Mesdames Bonnipard and Faribol.

It was part of his contract that he should have a holiday every Wednesday. That day he reserved for entertaining ladies. At the business premises of the firm there was a strict order of precedence. Clients who had taken tea with the fascinator were shown into one room, those who had dined with him into another, and so forth.

MANY DOORS.

We have at length arrived at the last act. You have the familiar room of many doors. Ladies calling are handed a plan of the flat to facilitate their escapes in the moment of need. The fair typist, Madame Bonnipard, and Madame Faribol all in succession arrived. The typist demanded that he should flirt violently with the other two and listened behind a door with a bell which she rang if he was not ardent enough to please her. The two ladies left their hats about. Their husbands came, each looking for the other's wife. The hats were pinned on to coat-tails. The ladies successfully fled and the husbands with the hats were hustled off after them, and the fascinator was left to his typist and at last the curtain came down.

Mr. Maurice Farkoa made all that could be expected of the charms of Armand Desroches, and conducted his dressmaking and his affairs of the heart with equal adroitness. Mr. Henry Wenman and Mr. Arthur Chesney played the idiotic husbands with great energy and zeal. Mr. Arthur Hatherton found some fun in the part of a blundering servant. Miss Edie Graham, Miss Maud Cressall, Miss Mabel Sealby, and a number of other ladies wore wonderful frocks to admiration. The farce is preceded by a little play of George Paston's, called "Stuffing," which does not call for notice.

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1913.

"THE NEW DUKE."

NEW FARCE AT THE COMEDY THEATRE.

By Douglas Murray.

Herbert Ansell	Mr. Weedon Grossmith
Major Cleave	Mr. Alfred Drayton
Sir Theodore Doser ..	Mr. Asheton Tonge
Rupert Blaire	Mr. Kenneth Kent
Professor Rex Blind ..	Mr. Leyton Cancellor
Dr. Shaw	Mr. J. H. Brewer
Blake	Mr. Robert Horton
The Dowager Duchess of Chuffam ..	Miss Mary Rorke
Lady Mary Cleave ..	Miss Rosemary Greville
Lady Lesia Ansell ..	Miss Marjorie Russell
Lady Maud Chumley ..	Miss Drucilla Wills
Mrs. Rogers	Miss Mary Brough
Lizzie Rogers	Miss Dorothy Drake

Mr. Weedon Grossmith is a Professor of Eugenics who suddenly tumbles into a Dukedom and, what is more, into the bad graces of the Dowager Duchess, who dislikes his hangdog appearance and is offended by his social awkwardness. She nevertheless purposes to choose a wife for him, lest the Dukedom should become extinct, but he prefers to choose for himself, and his choice, on eugenic principles, is a buxom charwoman's daughter. Presently there are twins—but it is perhaps unnecessary to recount the whole story of a farce par le menu. In truth Mr. Douglas Murray's story is somewhat over-elaborated and not in every detail intelligible. But that made no difference last night to the Comedy audience, who laughed long and boisterously at the grotesque embarrassments of Mr. Grossmith and the rather elementary humours of Miss Mary Brough and Miss Drucilla Wills and Miss Dorothy Drake.

Waters, J.
Plays

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON.

On TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, at 8.30,

THE NEW DUKE

A Farce by DOUGLAS MURRAY.

Herbert Ansell (His Grace the Duke of Chuffam)		Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Major the Hon. Frederick Cleave, C.B.	..	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
Sir Theodore Doser	(a Physician)	Mr. ASHETON TONGE
Rupert Blaire	..	Mr. KENNETH KENT
Professor Rex Blind	(of Belfast University)	Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
Dr. Shaw	(of Belfast University)	Mr. J. H. BREWER
Mr. Hanson	(a Lawyer) ..	Mr. RICHARD FIELDING
Blake	(The Duke's Personal Servant)	Mr. ROBERT HORTON
Grimston	(Groom of the Chambers)	Mr. GEORGE CARLILL
Lambert .. .. .. }	Footmen { ..	Mr. GISSING WALTERS
Pearson .. .. .. }		Mr. GERALD MORRIS
The Dowager Duchess of Chuffam ..	..	.. Miss MARY RORKE
Lady Mary Cleave .. }	her Daughters {	Miss ROSEMARY GREVILLE
Lady Lesia Ansell .. }		Miss MARJORIE RUSSELL
Lady Maud Chumley	..	Miss DRUCILLA WILLS
Nurse Fairmead	..	Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Nurse Morton	..	Miss CECILE ROYSE
Mrs. Rogers	(a Charwoman)	Miss MARY BROUGH
Lizzie Rogers	(her Daughter)	Miss DOROTHY DRAKE

ACTS I. & III. .. The Duke's Private Room in his Town House (Evening)
ACT II. .. .. A Cottage in Kent (Morning)

Six Weeks elapse between Acts I. and II., and Twelve Months between Acts II. and III.

Time .. THE PRESENT.

Scenery by W. T. HEMSLEY.
Ladies' Dresses and Cloaks by SELFRIDGE.

Overture at 8, followed by

THE DULCET TRIO

AND

GUY & GRAHAM, as Cholly M.P. and Dolly M.P.

"The Bond Street Johnnies."

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

Before Act I.	SELECTION, "Oh! Oh! Delphine"	Ivan Caryll
	OVERTURE, "Marinarella"	Julius Fucik
Before Act II.	a. DANCE, "Hindle Wakes"	Walter Morresy
	b. SONG, "Little Grey Home in the West"	Herman Lohr
	c. VALSE, "Eugene Onegin"	Tschaikowsky
Before Act III.	SELECTION, "Pelissiana"	Pelissier

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

General Manager } for Mr. Weedon Grossmith { Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD
Stage Manager ... } ... Mr. DUNCAN DRUCE

Business Manager (for the Comedy Theatre) Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 30
Sole Lessee,
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
30/9/1913
STALL
F16
To be retained

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE NEW DUKE"

To the EDITOR of the PALL MALL GAZETTE.

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to a notice in your paper of "The New Duke," produced by me at the Comedy Theatre last Tuesday.

As the comments of your Dramatic Critic reflect on me personally, I feel obliged to take notice of what in the ordinary way would be considered "fair comment."

I do not know who has constituted your "critic" the arbiter of what is in good taste or what is not, or what is "vulgar" or otherwise, but I do know that my reputation for good taste on the stage rests on a firmer foundation than the hurriedly scribbled opinions of an apparently somewhat inexperienced young man.

If the mere mention of the betterment of the human race is "vulgar," what about the subject of "marriage"? At that rate parents who announce an addition to their families in the usual column in the papers are "indecent" for referring to such a shocking, though natural, event. Personally I have never countenanced or allowed in any theatre controlled by me any wearing of indecent "slit-up skirts," accentuated by conspicuous jewellery worn as garters, or sleeveless bodices, giving an impression of semi-nudity, though such sights are common enough in many West End theatres at the present moment, nor would I allow the disgusting exhibitions indulged in under the name of "Tangoes" and miscalled dancing; but because I have the courage to accept and produce a rather daring and highly original play by a clever, though unknown, author—a play which I challenge any one to prove can do the least harm, or cause the blush of shame to rise to the cheek of innocence—am I to submit to the ridiculous nonsense written by the class of young man to which your dramatic critic belongs?

"The New Duke" treats humorously a subject of interest to men and women alike, and for my part I am content to take the verdict of the public, and in justice to me I trust you will publish this letter.—Yours faithfully,

WEEDON GROSSMITH.

1, Bedford-square, W.C., Oct. 4.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane-square, S.W.
TO-DAY, at 3; TO-NIGHT, at 8.45.
MISS HORNIMAN'S COMPANY.
HINDLE WAKES, by Stanley Houghton. (LAST NIGHT.)
Preceded, at 2.30 and 8.15, by "A Question of Property."

Revived for three weeks Sept 29

E. O. Hoppé

MR. STANLEY HOUGHTON
The author of "Hindle Wakes," who died on December 31, aged 31.

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1913.

ANOTHER BARRIE PLAY.

"HALF-AN-HOUR" AT THE HIPPODROME.

A Play in Three Scenes by J. M. BARRIE.

Mr. Garson	.. ..	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Doctor Brodie	.. ..	Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Hugh Paton	.. ..	Mr. FRANK ESMOND
Mr. Redding	.. ..	Mr. J. WOODALL-BIDDE
Butler	.. ..	Mr. JAMES ENGLISH
Susie	.. ..	Miss GERTRUDE LANG
Mrs. Redding	.. ..	Miss NETTA WESTCOTT
Lady Lilian Garson	..	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH

At a quarter to 8 Mr. Garson goes upstairs to dress for dinner, and his wife, Lady Lilian, hurries to the telephone. There has been one of their usual quarrels, the woman throwing words that scorch like vitriol; the man in a frenzy of rage, and at one moment brought near to striking her. So at last she means to bolt, and telephones to Hugh Paton that she is coming round to him at once. Then she slips her rings and jewelry into a drawer of her husband's desk, together with a note to say what she has done, and is off. She comes in upon Hugh, just as he is packing up for Egypt. Yes, he will be only too delighted to take her as she stands; perhaps there will be time to buy a travelling dress for her at Brindisi. They have only a few minutes to catch their train, and he will run out to call a taxi. A few moments later he is brought back feet foremost—killed by a motor-car. Dr. Brodie, who happened to be passing, breaks the dreadful news as gently as he can to "Mrs. Paton." Then it is at once borne in upon him that this lady is not Mrs. Paton; and all he can do is to tell her that, for her own as well as the dead man's sake, she had better leave the house at once. "But I was going with him," she wails. "You can still go with him" says the Doctor; and the stricken woman creeps out.

Now the Doctor was going to dine for the first time with Mr. Garson, and on arriving tells them of the tragic accident he has witnessed. There was a lady in the case, too—evidently a lady—and Mr. Garson and his friends snigger. But what can have become of Lady Lilian? It is now a quarter past 8, and she is not yet dressed for dinner. At that moment she comes downstairs in full warpaint, and is duly introduced to her husband's friend—Dr. Brodie. She masters her fright and pulls herself together. They tell her about the accident and she listens without fainting. Then she manœuvres to get her note back out of her husband's drawer. Fortunately he has not seen the note, but the jewelry he has found, and for a few seconds he remembers his wife's threat to bolt from him, and suspicion flashes across his mind. But by this time she has got the note back and is safe. Dinner is announced; she braves it out, takes the Doctor's arm as they go into dinner, and . . . tout rentre ici dans l'ordre accoutumé.

What agonies of martyrdom heroically borne have been crammed into that half-hour! It is essence of tragedy double distilled. We have probably no other actress who could come within a mile of Miss Irene Vanbrugh's performance; hers is an unforgettable picture of fragile and dainty womanhood tortured on the rack and in the end not succumbing. Capital, too, Mr. Gwenn's underbred, explosive brute of a husband and Mr. Valentine's grave, silently observant Doctor. Naturally the house (after a preliminary course of comic bicyclists and Scala chorus-singers) was tremendously excited, and called all three again and again. Naturally, too, when you come to think of it, there are no "Barrieisms" in the play—there is no time for them. The whole thing is like a stroke of lightning, and you feel yourself all over, when you come out, rather dazed and unnerved by the shock.

Waters, J.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1st, 1913, at 8
and EVERY EVENING at 8.45

Norman McKinnel & Frederick Whelen

PRESENT A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS,

ENTITLED—

COLLISION

By BRIDGET MACLAGAN.

The People of the Play in the order of their appearance—

Gopi Chand, C.I.D.	...DOUGLAS MUNRO
Colonel Digby, Punjab Commission	NORMAN McKINNEL
Imogen Daunt	ALICE CRAWFORD
Susan Digby, Wife of Colonel Digby ...	... GRACE LANE
Ismail, a Servant	... ERNEST G. COVE
Bobbie Concannon, P.W.C.	... VERNON STEEL
Edward Annandale, I.C.S.	... J. COOKE BERESFORD
Professor Shalieb, F.R.G.S.	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Benjamin Trotter ...	... ... LESLIE CARTER
Kashi Ram Choula, M.D. ...	... MALCOLM CHERRY
A Mahommedan ...	... HAROLD BRADLY
Fulmani	DOROTHY EDWARDS
Mrs. Badri Nath ...	... SUZANNE SHELDON
Rai Sahib Badri Nath, Editor of The Hindustan	E. F. MAYEUR
A Babu	... GEOFFREY GOODHART
A Nautch Girl	... NANCY DENVERS

Hindus, Mahommedans, Musicians.

The action of the Play takes place in the Punjab, between the beginning and the end of March.

ACT I. - Drawing Room in Colonel Digby's Bungalow.

ACT II. - The House of Rai Sahib Badri Nath.
A Week Later.

ACT III. - Colonel Digby's Study.
The Next Day.

ACT IV. - A Camp.
A Fortnight Later

The Play Produced by NORMAN McKINNEL.

The Nautch Dance in Act II. and the Indian Music have been rehearsed under the direction of Professor INAYAT KHAN.
The Song in Act IV. is sung by HAROLD BRADLY.

Miss Alice Crawford's Dresses in Acts I. and II. designed and executed by REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912), Ltd.; in Acts III. and IV. by AIDA WOULFE.
Miss Grace Lane's Dresses in Acts I., II. and III. by HANDLEY SEYMOUR.
The Indian Dresses designed and executed by TOM HESLEWOOD.

Scenery by W. T. HEMSLEY.

Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co. and JAMES S. LYON.

Stage Manager - - - - LEONARD BUTTRESS
Assistant Stage Manager - - - ERNEST CRESFAN

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1913.

Beyond all doubt the Condition of India question is a vastly important question, and most of us in London, especially perhaps the playgoing classes, are wofully ignorant about it, and it would do us all good, Miss Maclagan apparently thinks, to have its points brought home to us in dramatic form. But with the best intentions she has gone the wrong way to work. It is really not helpful to put the various points into screeds of journalese and then to put these screeds into the mouths of a set of players, who have to reel them off with a pretence of being human and individual. What those poor players have to tell us about India may be all very true in substance, but, unfortunately, drama, like all art, is a question not of intellectual but of emotional content, and a question, at the same time, of form. Miss Maclagan seems to have no notion of form, and the emotional content of her play—sandwiched between slabs of ideas about India—is merely silly. There is the Indian doctor who tells us what India really is and how it is appropriately symbolized by its sacred cow and (in a parenthesis) how repulsive are marriages of Hindu and European. And there is the ex-Labour M.P. "rousing" India and accomplishing the miracle of bringing Hindu and Mahommedan into line by the blessed word "strike." And there is the seditious native editor who makes use of the ex-Labour M.P. And there is the young engineer quietly doing his "job." And there is the Commissioner, the strong man, full of oaths and knowing how India must continue to he governed. And they all (except the Commissioner, whose vocabulary is mainly composed of "Damn" and "Hell") talk verbose Press-extracts. Evidently the contriver of these puppets knows Indian life or knows some one who knows it. What the puppets have to say then, even in journalese, is, though quite undramatic, not without interest for the ignorant English listener.

But now for the emotional content. This is supplied by the Commissioner's wife and a certain Miss Daunt and their relations to the Commissioner and the several other men of the play. The Commissioner's wife has nerves. Nerves about the Commissioner, who has a devil of a temper, and nerves about Miss Daunt, who is likely to get them all into trouble. Miss Daunt is your very latest specimen of the révoltée—all for sex equality, the glory of self-development, the hatefulness of "duty," and India for the Indians. At first she flouts the Commissioner and is in league with the ex-Labour M.P. and the seditious Editor. Then she flings her arms round the Commissioner, right under his wife's nose, just for mischief. "Oh, I know," says the wife, "you merely want to exercise power"—thinking, no doubt, of Hedda Gabler. But when the Commissioner, in one of his nasty tempers, flings the ex-Labour M.P. out of the house, the révoltée becomes a sick-nurse and is comparatively tamed—until her mania for "exercising power" breaks out again, when she so fools the young engineer that he loses his job and so vexes the Indian Doctor that he takes himself off to Thibet. In the end the ex-Labour M.P. takes train to Bombay for home and the young engineer gets killed by the seditious Editor, and the Commissioner quiets his nervous wife in his strong arms, and the great Condition of India question, we fear, remains just where it was.

Other questions, less Imperial but more germane to the play presented, also remain unsolved. Why is the Commissioner the slave of those nasty tempers? Is it merely that Mr. Norman McKinnel may show his skill in the quick transition from statuesque calm to the contortions of blind fury? And why do all the men so hotly, and so suddenly, "desire"—it is their own word—Miss Daunt? Is it that we may see the mischief likely to result from the importation of an English révoltée into Anglo-Indian society? Or is it to give Miss Alice Crawford a pretext for pouting and posturing? And why is Mrs. Commissioner always in a state of nervous terror? Is it that Miss Grace Lane may exhibit the grace of a sweet woman in that unstable condition? By the way, that a lady in such physical distress could express herself in long passages of journalese is only to be explained, we suppose, by the peculiarities of the Indian climate. The two most cheerful features of the cast were the Indian Doctor of Mr. Malcolm Cherry, who spoke his harangue so modestly and sincerely that it was quite a pleasure to "sit under" him, and a German savant, played with much gusto by Mr. Michael Sherbrooke. It was this German's function to bring in references to the foreign enemy for ever watching India—a little detail which we mention to show that Miss Maclagan has been conscientiously determined to leave no side of the great Indian question untouched. Unhappily, what she left untouched was the sympathetic interest, the "heart," in the old-fashioned phrase, of the spectator; an omission to which the gallery at the end of the evening drew attention in its usual way.

Waters, J.
Plays

NEW THEATRE
LONDON.

Thursday, October 2nd, 1913, at 8, and every following evening at 8.20; Matinee every Thursday and Saturday at 2.30.

In conjunction with SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and MISS MARY MOORE.

PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

Presents:

THE LAUGHING HUSBAND

A Musical Comedy in Three Acts.

Book by Arthur Wimperis.

Adapted from the German of Julius Brammer and Alfred Grunwald.

Music by Edmund Eysler.

Ottakar Bruckner (a retired confectioner)	COURTICE POUNDS
Hella Bruckner (his wife)	DAISIE IRVING
Andreas Pipelhuber (his friend)	D. J. WILLIAMS
Lucinda (his cousin)	VIOLET GOULD
Dr. Rosenrot (his lawyer)	JAMES BLAKELEY
Count Selztal (a professional Lothario in love with Hella)	GEORGE CARVEY
Herr von Basewitz (a rich Berlin Publisher)	HOWARD STURGE
Etelka (his wife)	MABEL BURNEGE
Lutz Nachtigall (a poetaster in love with Etelka)	EDMUND GOULDING
Hans Zimt (an Architect)	CHARLES CHAMIER
Dolly	GWLADYS GAYNOR
Wiedehopf (Majordomo at Buchenau)	ALFRED BARBER
Jurowitz (a guest)	EDMUND DIGUES
Wiedner (a guest)	OTTO ALEXANDER
Baldrian (Footman)	STEWART PATERSON
Juliette (Typist to Dr. Rosenrot)	VIOLET GRAHAM

Act I. ... Reception Room in Ottakar Bruckner's Flat in Berlin

Act II. ... Shooting Box at Buchenau

Act III. ... A year elapses. In Dr. Rosenrot's Office

Time—The Present

R. C. McCreery.

The Play produced by PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

All ladies' Dresses executed by Madame Beatrice Raymond, 76, Regent Street, W.
All Shooting Costumes and Suits in Act II. executed by Messrs. Burberry's, Haymarket, S.W.
Gentlemen's Morning and Evening Dresses by Messrs. Walker & Co., Sackville Street, W.
...e and Decorations of Act I. by Messrs. Collinsons & Co., 24, Grafton Street, W. Furniture in Acts II. and III. by Messrs. Spillman & Co.
...Miss by Clarkson. Boots and Shoes by Mess s. Gamba, 46, Dean Street. Lighting by Digby.
Dances arranged by Miss Phyllis Beddells, by kind permission of the Empire Theatre, Ltd.

M... Director	JACQUES HEUVAL
A... Manager	H. M. THORBURN
A... Manager	ERNEST BENHAM

For Philip Michael Faraday
For Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore

The Management reserve the right to make any alterations in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unav...idable causes.

Waters, J.
Plays

"The Laughing Husband" is musical comedy of the artistically pretentious kind. At the end of the second act there is a very unreal sentimental scene which never matters at all, because it is about characters in whom the audience have never been tempted to take any serious interest. However, Mr. Courtice Pounds did his share of it in singing and acting very well.

The only trouble about the play from the musical comedy public's point of view was that there was not enough of the fooling. It did not begin at all until the last act (if one may except a rather distressing lady who represented an unattractive old maid in a burlesque of the worst—or only bad—Gilbert tradition). However, when the fun did arrive it was capital. The last act was really good farce, and Mr. James Blakeley, as a perky and nimble little divorce lawyer whose speciality was the effecting of reconciliations, danced about, and pushed people into doors, and dragged people out of other doors, and was generally very amusing. He even made some of the heavy and pedestrian puns sound like wit by not allowing the audience to dwell too long on them.

As for the fashions, there were, of course, plenty, and they were very gorgeous and very extravagant, and quite enough to warn any stylish woman what not to wear, although they are just what most women will make up their minds to put on. The ladies who wore them were all very fascinating, and there were several men who were evidently supposed to be fascinating too, and were certainly quite sure of it themselves. The play, of course, comes from Vienna, as that is the fashionable musical comedy store-shop just now. The names on the programme are consequently German, and an occasional attempt is made to give a touch of Continental atmosphere by a foreign-looking livery or a flopping tie. One of the fascinating men also had a foreign accent, but as he is described on the programme as a "professional Lothario" he is perhaps not intended to be a sympathetic character. However, Mr. Courtice Pounds is obviously and cheerfully English. So are all the ladies, and the leading lady, Miss Daisie Irving, though she can boast no artistic pretensions, has a pleasant and attractive personality.

The music is by Edmund Eysler, and is very charming in the sentimental Viennese way, and on a far higher artistic level than anything else in the production. Observer

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1913.

"The Girl in the Taxi" will finish its season at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday night, and on Thursday evening in next week Mr. Michael Faraday will bring in as its successor, "The Laughing Husband," from the New Theatre. As already announced, he will change the title for this play when it reaches its new home, and yesterday he decided that at the Lyric Theatre it shall be known as "The Girl Who Didn't." The cast, too, is to undergo some changes, among the newcomers being Mr. Tom Shale, Mr. Lionel Mackinder, Mr. C. H. Workman, Miss Amy Augarde, Miss Yvonne Arnaud, and Miss Grace La Rue.

THE LAUGHING HUSBAND

"I'M GOING WITH YOU ON YOUR HONEYMOON."

9724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - - Mr. H. B. IRVING.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4th, 1913, at 7.30, and
EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

THE GRAND SEIGNEUR

A Play in Four Acts,
By EDWARD FERRIS and B. P. MATTHEWS.

Desire, Marquis de la Vallière	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Armand, Duc de Rennes	...Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT
Gaston, Vicomte de St. Croix	... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Captain Tabertean...	...Mr. LEONARD RAYNE
Doctor Dupont	... Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
The Maire	... ... Mr. BEN FIELD
Rougeterre	... Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Lemaitre (a Lawyer)	... Mr. CLAUDE REED
Monsieur de Troyes	... ... Mr. TIM RYLEY
Captain Felix	Mr. C. TREVOR-ROPER
Pierre (a Spy)	... Mr. E. H. RUSTON
Jean	... Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Jacques (a Footman)	... ... Mr. L. OSWELL
Andre	...Mr. HEMSTOCK
Joseph	... Mr. J. CASS
Sergeant	...Mr. W. GRAHAM
Adèle Vernet (afterwards Duchess de Rennes) ...	Miss MARIE LÖHR
Odette (a Parisian Dancer)	... Miss KATE CUTLER
Comtesse Malise	... Miss MAY WHITTY
A Virago	Miss GLADYS FFOLLIOTT
The Maire's Wife	... Miss EDITH RUSSELL
Annette (Adèle's Sister)	...Miss SYBIL JOSÉ

ACT I.	Scene 1.	The Bedchamber of the Marquis de la Vallière.
	Scene 2.	The Same. Three Months later.
ACT II.	..	A Room in an Inn on the road to Rennes.
ACT III.	..	The Chateau de Rennes.
ACT IV.	..	Interior of a Peasant's Cottage.

Scenery by Mr. G. SACKMANN. Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN & Co.
The Costumes worn by Mr. H. B. IRVING, Miss MARIE LÖHR, Miss KATE CUTLER and other Principals, by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Dresses designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral decorations in the Vestibule by FLORA & Co., Savoy Court, W.C.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE, "Robespierre"	... Litolff
SCENES FROM AN IMAGINARY BALLET	...S. Coleridge Taylor
SUITE	Grétry
ALBUMBLATT	Wagner
VALSE TRISTE...	Sibelius

The Incidental Music composed by Mr. CARLTON MASON.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
First Matinee Wednesday, October 8th.

Stage Manager	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Musical Director	Mr. CARLTON MASON
Assistant Stage Manager...	Mr. H. RAE COOKE

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by removing their hats.

Box Office (Mr. R. WEAVER) open daily, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Telephone: 2602 Gerrard. Entrance SAVOY COURT, STRAND.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
First Circle, 5s. and 4s. Unreserved: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

General Manager ... ... Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY

3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1913.

Historians are still vainly trying to find a formula for the French Revolution. Let them go to the Savoy Theatre and they will know at last what the leading characteristic of the Revolution really was: it was the period in which everybody dressed up in everybody else's clothes. People who obstinately wore their own clothes were guillotined, and serve them right. The others, who didn't mind the trifling inconvenience of a misfit, escaped: the survival, you may call it, of the mis-fittest. There were several ways of playing the popular game. If you had a pistol, for instance, nothing was easier than to put it at the head of the gentleman whose clothes you wanted. This was the Marquis's way. He wanted the coat and tricolour sash and plumed hat of the Republican General ("A moi le panache!" as Offenbach's General used to sing), in order that he might escape from durance and (with the magic influence of Robespierre's own signature in the coat pocket) compel the bloodthirsty citizens to do just what he liked. Quick! a pistol to the General's head and the thing was done. So effectually done that the General without his own clothes utterly failed to re-establish his identity and was promptly sent, as the Marquis, to the guillotine, while the Marquis, as the General, saved the life of a brother aristocrat by making him (way No. 2) put on the clothes of a lackey. A third way was the interchange courteous. This was practised by the Duchess and the Dancer. The Dancer's clothes were somewhat scanty, as she had been dancing in the character of Phryne, and she was ashamed to wear them before her husband, even though they were both escaping from imminent death, and even though the husband, being himself at the time in lackey's clothes, would not, you would suppose, have been particular about questions of kit. So she changed clothes with the Duchess, who was also escaping from imminent death with her husband, and the consequence was that the poor Duchess became a Sansculotte in an unexpectedly literal sense, and in that guise was forced to dance a minuet with the Marquis, who thus humbled her because in earlier days she had rejected him for the Duke. But at the end of the dance the Duchess knocked the Marquis senseless with the butt of a pistol, and then the Duke (way No. 4) took the Marquis's (that is to say, of course, the General's) cloak and so made his escape. The Marquis recovered very soon and continued to persecute the Duchess with his addresses, but in the end he repented and let her go to join the Duke, and, being then discovered by the mob for the Marquis that he was, slew several of them and died nobly.

Why are French Revolution plays nearly always absurd? You might as well ask why their players choose so many different ways of mispronouncing "Monsieur." It is a stage tradition, which the authors of The Grand Seigneur orthodoxly hold sacred. And it is a stage tradition which audiences accept with perfect good humour. On Saturday night we all took the great clothes-changing game as somehow an inevitable sequel to the Fall of the Bastille and thoroughly enjoyed it. The circumstance that the leading clothes-thief was Mr. H. B. Irving had no doubt much to do with our enjoyment. For Mr. Irving is prominent among those actors of impressive and romantic personality who can make absurdities not only acceptable but delightful. Indeed, we know no other actor so competent to present the type of grand seigneur with a dash of the absurd in him, and if any one ever has the courage to bring the most brilliant specimen of that type, Meredith's Richmond Roy, on the stage, hero is the man to play it. Miss Marie Löhr plays the persecuted Duchess with graceful charm, even in the trying moment of the minuet preserving her dignity, and Miss Kate Cutler, Mr. Leonard Rayne, and Mr. Claude Reed distinguish themselves in minor parts. There was every sign from the audience of satisfaction with their exciting entertainment, and they would not go away until Mr. Irving had spoken a few words of thanks.

THE
GLOBE
THEATRE
16/10/1913
E
Orch. Stall
G 18
To be retained
No Hats allowed

On Thursday Evening, October 16th, at 8 o'clock
and Every Evening at 8.30.

By Arrangement with Gilbert Porteous.

ETHEL WARWICK

Will present a New and Original Comedy in Four Acts, entitled

"People Like Ourselves"

By ROBERT VANSITTART

Characters.

Sir Joseph Juttle	FREDERICK KERR
Mervyn Juttle	KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lord Walter Sark	GEOFFREY KERR
Señor Don Fernando Laguera	GERALD LAWRENCE
Lord Morecambe	DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Sir George Rawley	ERNEST MAINWARING
The Hon. John Jepson, M.P.	PHILIP CUNINGHAM
James May	OLIVER JOHNSTON
Mander	RICHARD CARFAX
Parsons	EDGAR COYNE
Luis	LESLIE RYECROFT
Lady Juttle	LOTTIE VENNE
Lady Morecambe	MARY O'FARRELL
Lady Sybil Salden	ETHEL TREVOR LLOYD
Princess Torentini	HILDA ANTONY
Vivienne Vavasour	ETHEL WARWICK

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

Acts I. & II. — At Sir Joseph Juttle's House at Queen's Gate
(WALTER HANN & SON, and JULIAN HICKS & HAWES CRAVEN).

Act III. — At Sir Joseph Juttle's House at Mereshy
(W. HARFORD).

Act IV. — At Laguera's Flat in London
(THORNTON-SMITH).

The Play Produced by FREDERICK KERR

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. ANDREW LEVEY will play Selections during the evening.

The Antique Furniture and Curtains supplied entirely by Messrs. W. & E. THORNTON-SMITH, of Soho Square, W.

The design for Act II. was secured by the courtesy of Messrs. LENYGON & CO., Ltd., 31 Old Burlington Street, W.

Miss Ethel Warwick's Habit by BUSVINES, LTD.
and Hat by HERBERT JOHNSON.
Dresses and Hats by THERESE, LTD., 61 New Cavendish Street, W.
Mr. Odlum's and Mr. Johnston's Clothes by JAMES SMART,
12 George Street, Hanover Square, W.
Cigarettes supplied by TROPANI.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

FIRST MATINEE ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25th, at 2.30.

Stage Manager ... ... LESLIE RYECROFT
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... EDGAR J. COYNE
Advertisement Manager ... ...HAROLD HETHERINGTON

BOX OFFICE (MR. A. R. BRITTEN) open 10 till 10.
Telephone: 8722 Gerrard.
Prices:
Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

General Manager - - - - - B. A. MEYER

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1913.

Playgoers are familiar with the scene wherein the hero terrorizes the villain or keeps a whole crowd of cut-throats at bay with an unloaded pistol. By way of novelty, Mr. Vansittart's heroine gets the better of a rogue by flourishing a bottle of smelling-salts in his face and calling it vitriol. This lady performs this and other exploits partly for love of a singularly foolish young man and partly to display her power of managing everything and everybody. An ornament of the musical comedy stage, she is rejected by the foolish young man's still more foolish parents—on general anti-theatrical principles—and determines to take a noble revenge by becoming a kind of Fairy Godmother in their household. They are vulgar snobs; she can and does bring them to some extent acquainted with "smart" society. Their son is an inarticulate ass; by writing speeches for him and cajoling Government Whips she pushes him into Parliament. In the end the foolish parents find the despised actress as indispensable to their own happiness as to their son's; they are understood to be cured of their snobbery, and the young couple are left free to become man and wife.

There was enough applause last night to show that some people found some amusement in People Like Ourselves. And, undeniably, the players put a great deal of hard work into it. It does not appear to us to be an occasion for criticism.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietors: Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessee: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Manager (for Mr. George Edwardes): Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18th, at 8,
And Every Evening at 8.15.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'
NEW PRODUCTION

THE GIRL FROM UTAH

A MUSICAL PLAY IN TWO ACTS.

By JAMES T. TANNER.

Dialogue written in collaboration with PAUL A. RUBENS.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS, PERCY GREENBANK and PAUL A. RUBENS.

Music by SIDNEY JONES and PAUL A. RUBENS.

Stage Production by J. A. E. MALONE.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. CARL KIEFERT

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.;
Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephones—2645 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.

BOX OFFICE (A. P. OXLEY) open from 10 to 10.

2 255

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

. . . Cast of the Play . . .

Lord Amersham		Mr. ALFRED DE MANBY
Policeman P.R. 38		Mr. GEORGE COOPER
Colonel Oldham-Pryce		Mr. DOUGLAS MARRS
Page		Master MICHAEL MATTHEWS
Commissionaire		Mr. DAVID HALLAM
Detective Shooter	of Scotland Yard	Mr. F. W. RUSSELL
Lord Orpington		Mr. HAROLD LATHAM
Archie Tooth		Mr. WILLIAM BAMBRIDGE
Douglas Noel		Mr. HARRY R. DRUMMOND
Bobbie Longshot		Mr. SIDNEY LAINE

Trimmit ... of Brixton Rise ... Mr. EDMUND PAYNE | AND | Sandy Blair ... Leading Man at the Folly Theatre ... Mr. JOSEPH COYNE

Una Trance	The Girl from Utah ...	Miss INA CLAIRE
Clancy	Miss Manners' Maid ...	Miss GRACIE LEIGH
Lady Amersham ...	Lord Amersham's Mother ...	Miss BELLA GRAVES
Miss Mona West ...	Actresses at the Folly Theatre	Miss HEATHER FEATHERSTONE
Miss Sylvia Paget ...		Miss GERTRUDE WHITE
Miss Lydia Savile ...		Miss DOROTHY DEVERE
Miss Alma Cavendish ...		Miss KITTY KENT
Miss Violet Vesey ...		Miss ISOBEL ELSOM
Miss Rosie Jocelyn ...		Miss QUEENIE VINCENT
A Waitress		Miss GLADYS KURTON
Lady Muriel Chepstowe		Miss CYNTHIA MURRAY
Hon. Miss St. Aubyn		Miss VALERIE RICHARDS
Lady Mary Nowell		Miss HELEN RAE
Mrs. Ponsonby		Miss BEATRICE GUIVER

AND

Dora Manners ... Leading Lady at the Folly Theatre ... Miss PHYLLIS DARE

Act I.	Dumpelmeyers	(Ryan)
Act II. Scene I. ...	A Street in Brixton ...	(Terraine)
Scene II. ...	The Mormon's House ...	(Craven)
Scene III. ...	The Arts Ball	(Harker)

Dresses by Miss FISHER, ZIMMERMAN, MICHARD, FIRENZE, MORRIS ANGEL & SON, B. J. SIMMONS & Co., and BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

Dresses designed by COMELLI.

Dances and Chorus Business arranged by WILLIE WARDE and WILL BISHOP.

Acting Manager ... (for Mr. George Edwardes) ... Mr. CHARLTON MANN

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

THE "GIRL FROM UTAH" AT ADELPHI.

ccess of Mr. George Edwardes' Musical Play.

NEW AMERICAN STAR.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Mr. George Edwardes was to the front in with another success last night at Adelphi Theatre. This latest produc- of his, "The Girl from Utah," is an glish musical play—book, music, and ics—and, as usual with his offerings, it s lavishly mounted. It was an evening irresponsible gaiety, and was the occa- n of bringing Mr. Edmund Payne for the st time in his career to the Adelphi eatre and of introducing a charming artist to London in the person of Miss Claire.

"The Girl from Utah" is a dancing sical play. Never before has London n given a musical play so full of dancing. is a whirl of light, charming dances, sical dances, too, by Mr. "Teddy" yne, and just one Tango, from South erica, and a "Boston" from the United tes to add to its international aracter. Londoners will just fall in love th the gaiety of all this movement and cinating tunefulness. The story, too, pels all this delightful frolic, for the behind it is a chase after the girl who e from Utah, and the chasing is done the tripping music of Sidney Jones and ul A. Rubens. The author, James T. ner, has told the story well in this play.

Pretty Women in Wonderful Frocks.

There are two acts to "The Girl from ah," and no stage in London this autumn boast an interior scene as bright and istic as the white shop of Dumpelmeyer, th its spacious windows, its serving nters, and its young and pretty attend- ts. There is a view of the sunny street side, and beyond the open shop doors clock tower of St. James's Palace. who have experience of the manner in ich Mr Edwardes mounts his plays can ess rightly that beauty and taste are ished on this scene, but it is possible to ieve that in this instance he has ex- led his own high standard. Pretty men in wonderful frocks troop into this ous restaurant; society and the stage ke it their rendezvous at tea-time. Miss yllis Dare (as Dora Manners) comes to from the Folly Theatre, where she is the ding lady, to meet her fiancé, Lord ersham; and Mr. Joseph Coyne, the inée idol from the same playhouse, ps in to see all the pretty girls.

There the story gets its start. There ins the delightful entertainment of gs, laughter, and dances, that for many d many a month to come is to amuse owded houses every evening. The very t song of Miss Phyllis Dare's, "The tle Kiss," was a big winner. Mr. Joseph yne's grievance that he would not be per- itted to land in America because he had t a chaperone, sent the house into a roar. ut he was inconsolable, he explained, be- use he could get no tidings anywhere of girl he saw in the return steamer. She as the girl from Utah. We learned her story later, and in the meantime saw that looked very like a caricature of a fat rmon elder arrive to drink tea like the st of the company. That he went out th the wrong hat and disappeared for er more from the story is only a detail, ut that Mr. Edmund Payne, a ham and ef shop owner from Brixton (lost for an afternoon in the West End), should go to umpelmeyer's for a cup of tea and get the rmon's broad-brimmed silk hat instead his own was more than a detail; it was important fact in the comical story. He d not like the new hat. He did not like ving to give all the money he had in his cket for a cup of tea. He said he "felt ke a little fish out of its depth," and to try to square the business he had an altercation with the funniest Irish pageboy seen for years on the stage.

Boy Character Actor.

This little Master Michael Matthews (a boy of fourteen specially imported from Dublin) is a genuine little character actor, and the audience showed that it knew it. Following on the quarrel with the page boy Mr. Payne and Miss Gracie Leigh had a dnet, "We Won't Feel Out of It," that will soon be on every hand and organ. The girl from Utah is played by a newcomer to London—Miss Ina Claire, a fair, charming, simple young American actress with so little American accent that she might have been over there for only a trip. She is certainly an acquisition; judging by her performance last evening, and as to her dancing, well! it must be seen to be appreciated.

J. W.

AS A RUSSIAN DANCER—MR. PAYNE MAKES A GREAT HIT IN THE LAST ACT ("THE ARTS BALL")

Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1913.

MR. PHILLPOTTS'S NEW PLAY.

"THE SHADOW" AT THE COURT THEATRE.

Nanny Coaker	..	Mary Byron
Sarah Dunnybrig	..	Lucy Beaumont
Willes Gay	..	Percy Foster
Thomas Turtle	..	Brember Wills
Elias Waycott	..	Bernard Copping
Hester Dunnybrig	..	Sybil Thorndike
Philip Blanchard	..	Julius Shaw

The Shadow, produced by Miss Horniman's company last night, is a typical piece of Mr. Eden Phillpotts's work. His plays have all the characteristics of his novels, except the massive descriptions which some of us regard as the best thing his novels offer. The Shadow is a tale of passion and crime on or near Dartmoor. The characters are humble folk, full of homely wisdom or folly, and wonderfully eloquent in expressing it. Philip Blanchard, the passionate butcher of this play, and the real murderer of crafty and cruel old Jacob Waycott, is only a plain man, but he holds views on life (which he has learned to spell, so to speak, with a capital L), the completeness and force of which would not discredit many a young Londoner who has dipped into Nietzsche and Shaw; and he expresses them with more force and fluency than can many more refined philosophers. But you forgive the man because he is, indeed, a tremendous lover of life and of his wife Hester, a woman cast, physically and mentally, in the big mould which Mr. Phillpotts likes to describe. And when the murdered man's nephew, gentle, timid Elias Waycott, has been arrested for the murder and condemned, this great lover of life resolves to confess and blow his brains out before he can be arrested. But Elias Waycott, knowing the truth about the murder, had determined to die that Hester, whom he too loved, might not be robbed of her happiness and husband; and he committed suicide, after making a confession, in prison. And so it fell to Hester to draw her husband back from a death he did not fear to the more difficult and painful duty of accepting life at another man's hands.

The weakness of the play, setting aside the suspicious self-comprehension and eloquence of the chief characters, lies in the conduct of the fable, which is filled out to the needful length by episodic discourses by the members of the "comic relief"—the doleful butcher, Willes Gay, the garrulous mother, Sarah Dunnybrig, and the oracular post-master, Thomas Turtle. Comic relief is a severe test for any dramatist, and Mr. Eden Phillpotts's comic relief, in spite of clever playing by Miss Lucy Beaumont and Mr. Brember Wills, seemed more tedious than most. Both Mr. Shaw and Miss Sybil Thorndike played the leading parts with power, and in Miss Thorndike's case with something more.

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

WEST STREET (Opposite the Palace Theatre), CAMBRIDGE CIRCUS, W.C.

Proprietors - - - - - - - - - - - - THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Managing Director - - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT JAY.
Lessee - - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. DURRANT SWAN

On TUESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 21st, 1913, at 7.30, and EVERY EVENING at 8,

A DAUGHTER OF FRANCE

A Play in Four Acts by
PIERRE BERTON and CONSTANCE ELIZABETH MAUD.

Sir Archie McGregor	ARTHUR SCOTT CRAVEN
Colonel Farquharson	HERBERT BUNSTON
Alan Farquharson	DOUGLAS IMBERT
Duncan (butler)	CHALMERS COLONA
Todd (gardener)	WILLIAM ARMSTRONG
Fergus (piper)	W. ROSS
Doctor	CYRIL TURNER
Waiter	GILBERT CHALMERS
Lady McGregor (Archie's Mother)	ELSPETH DUDGEON
Marjorie McGregor	LOLA DUNCAN
Kirstie McGregor	ETHEL GANNON
Mrs. Duff	NANCY BLACKWOOD
Adèle	JOAN PEREIRA
Jack (Son of Sir Archie McGregor)	LISA STECKER
AND
Jeanne de Clairvaux	LYDIA YAVORSKA

ACT I.	The Drawing Room at Dundrum.
ACT II.	In the Grounds at Dundrum.
ACT III.	A Hotel at Southampton.
ACT IV.	A Cottage in the Isle of Skye.

Time—The Present.

One year elapses between Acts I. and II.; Three months between Acts II. and III.; and Five years between Acts III. and IV.

Madame Lydia Yavorska's dresses by PAQUIN LTD., of 40 Dover Street, W.

The Play produced by Mr. FRANK COLLINS.

SCOTTISH MELODIES played by THE SINFONIA QUARTETTE under the Leadership of HERR OTTO MACHTIG.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.
FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, 25th OCTOBER.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 11s. 6d. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d.
BOX OFFICE (Mr. L. A. GROTH) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone 2890 REGENT.
Doors open half an hour before the commencement of the Play.

Acting Manager ...	For Madame LYDIA YAVORSKA	...	Mr. PETER PENDENNIS
Stage Director ...		...	Mr. FRANK COLLINS
Stage Manager...		...	Mr. WILLIAM ARMSTRONG

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1913.

Considering the ancient intimacy between the Scots and the French, and the almost innumerable intermarriages between the people of the two nations, is not a good Highland family the last family in the world likely to be prejudiced against a French bride for its head? Yet the McGregors, from the high-nosed and vicious old Dowager down to the gardener and the groom, made up their minds, before Sir Archie brought his Jeanne to Dundrum, that she would be impossible, and did their best to make life impossible for her when she came. They all behaved more like Lancashire weavers or tradesfolk of the Five Towns than what they professed to be. Perhaps there was a little—a very little—excuse for them. Jeanne did for five minutes forget that she was a well-bred Frenchwoman. Not many well-bred Frenchwomen, we believe, would pull their (slit) skirts to the knee and dance a reel with a total stranger before they had been half an hour in their husband's ancestral home.

That total stranger, young Alan Farquharson, was to be the cause of further trouble to Jeanne. Her only intellectual companion in the wilds of Dundrum, he went too far, and losing his head poured out his passion. Jeanne said she would love him, in effect, like a sister, and kissed him good-bye. It will take no perspicacity to guess that that kiss was observed by the Dowager. It will be a little harder to believe that Sir Archie, on being told of the episode by his mother, promptly decided that his wife was "guilty"; and high-spirited Jeanne ran away from Dundrum. Ultimately, of course, he found her again; and with her their five-year-old son; but a good deal had to be gone through first, including a remarkable policeman-and-clown act in and out of the doors of the waiting-room at a hotel in Southampton, whither all the characters had been drawn by the "long arm" (whatever the mathematical chances against such a meeting, the theatrical chances are at least a hundred to one).

Cut to two-thirds of its length, and accepted just as a field for the display of Mme. Lydia Yavorska's talent, the play might be all very well; but the authors have been a little too careful to leave nothing to the imagination of the audience. Everything is worked out to exhaustion, heavily, laboriously, and something too seriously for the character of the ideas.

Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Lessees and Managers - - - - - - - A. & S. GATTI

THURSDAY, 23rd OCTOBER, 1913,

and Every Evening at 8.15

Norman McKinnel & Frederick Whelen

present the following programme:

GERTRUDE ROLFFS & ANTON DRESSLER

of Munich,

In a selection of Dramatic Songs composed by ANTON DRESSLER.

I.	The Song of the Sixteenth Century Soldier
II.	Mother Josephine	ANTON DRESSLER
III.	Henry, Mary and Bobby	GERTRUDE ROLFFS
IV.	Nought do I care	GERTRUDE ROLFFS
V.	The Song of Misery	ANTON DRESSLER
VI.	Ich und Du	GERTRUDE ROLFFS
	... ... GERTRUDE ROLFFS and ANTON DRESSLER

Between Sunset and Dawn

A Play, in Four Scenes, by HERMON OULD.

The people of the play in the order of their appearance:

Mrs. Harris	ADA KING
Jim Harris	NORMAN McKINNEL
An Old Man	ERNEST G. COVE
Curly Tom	HAROLD BRADLY
Liz Higgins	MAY BLAYNEY
A Respectable Woman	FLORENCE HARWOOD
Bill Higgins	EDMOND BREON
Mrs. Higgins	ALICE MANSFIELD
Mrs. Lansdowne	ETHEL MARRYAT

Scene I. Kitchen of Mrs. Harris' Doss House in South London. 7 p.m.
Scene II. ... ... The same. Midnight
Scene III. Kitchen at Bill Higgins' House at Deptford. 12 30 a.m.
Scene IV. ... ... As Scenes I. and II. 2 a.m.

The Green Cockatoo

A Grotesque, in One Act, by ARTHUR SCHNITZLER.
Translated by PENELOPE WHEELER.

The people of the play in the order of their appearance :

Grasset (Philosopher)	EDWARD RIGBY
Lebrêt (Tailor)	HAROLD BRADLY
Prosper (Innkeeper, formerly Theatre Manager)	A. G. POULTON
	(By courtesy of Granville Barker and Lillah McCarthy)
Inspector of Police	E. CRESFAN
Grain (Ruffian)	J. COOKE BERESFORD
Scaevola	ERNEST G. COVE
Jules	DOUGLAS MUNRO
Henry	NORMAN McKINNEL
Léocadie (Henry's Wife) ...	MARY CLARE
François, Vicomte de Nogeant	EDMOND BREON
Albin, Chevalier de la Trémouille ...	E. EVAN THOMAS
Michette	MIÈLE MAUND
Flipotte	HILDA DAVIES
Emile, Duc de Cadignan ...	MALCOLM CHERRY
Guillaume	ARTHUR CLEAVE
The Marquis de Lansac	E. F. MAYEUR
Séverine (his Wife)	SARAH BROOKE
Rollin (Poet)	HENRY HARGREAVES
Georgette	LOUISE REGNIS
Balthazar	LESLIE CARTER
Stephen	GEOFFREY GOODHART
Maurice	GORDON BAILEY

Aristocrats and Citizens of Paris.

Scene: "The Green Cockatoo," an underground tavern in Paris.
Time: July 14, 1789.

The Two Plays Produced by NORMAN McKINNEL.

Scenery by CHARLES SHARP.

The Costumes in "The Green Cockatoo" by L. & H. NATHAN.
Wigs by L. GUSTAVE

Stage Manager - - - - - LEONARD BUTTRESS
Assistant Stage Manager - - - - ERNEST CRESFAN

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD of the ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality Neapolitan Ices. Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co.

MATINEE every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY, at 2.15

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s Upper Circle. 4s Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 1.45 and 7 45 Commence at 2.15 and 8.15
Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.
Box Office, (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

"Between Sunset and Dawn."

If Hermon Ould, the new author discovered by Messrs. Norman McKinnel and Frederick Whelen, can improve on his first play "Between Sunset and Dawn," produced at the Vandeville Theatre on Thursday evening, he will be an acquisition to the theatre. He has a sense of character such as is rarely found in a man's first play, and his method of conducting a scene is true and direct. This first play of his is a story of poor lives in the East End, and three of its four scenes take place in a common lodging-house owned by a wretched old termagant and her brutal-looking son. The play is a cruel exposition, faithful enough, of the almost animal relationship of men and women, and it ends in tragedy. The author made a grievous and quite unnecessary mistake in ending his story with a murder, but experience will no doubt teach him that the pictures he would put on the stage need be none the less convincing because they contain no horrors.

One-Act Drama.

The second play on the Vandeville programme was Arthur Schnitzler's ambitious one-act drama, first produced in London by the Incorporated Stage Society, entitled "The Green Cockatoo." It takes its name from a tavern which in the early days of the French Revolution kept a company of actors to thrill aristocratic patrons with imaginary deeds of crime. The real tragedy of the Revolution came suddenly one day to turn the jest into something more than comedy, and it is that moment of startling surprise for the aristocratic patrons that forms the author's story. The curious play was well acted by all concerned, but in that piece, as in the first, Mr. Norman McKinnel won most of the honours. Other players who did well in one or other of the two pieces were Miss Ada King, Mr. Edward Rigby, and Mr. Malcolm Cherry. J. W.

A PLEBEIAN ROMEO AND JULIET AT THE VAUDEVILLE
Mr. McKinnel and Miss May Blayney in "Between Sunset and Dawn."

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager ... SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

Lillah McCarthy Granville Barker

Wednesday, October 29th, 1913, and Every Evening at 8.30

THE WITCH

A Play in Four Acts

By H. WIERS-JENSSEN

English Version by JOHN MASEFIELD

The Play produced by GRANVILLE BARKER

Persons of the Play in the order of their appearance.

Merete Beyer	JANET ACHURCH
Bente	CLARE GREET
Anne Pedersdotter	LILLAH McCARTHY
Jorund	ROSEMARY CRAIG
David	H. O. NICHOLSON
Herlofs-Marte	VERA TSCHAIKOWSKY
Martin	DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY
Absolon Beyer	J. D. BEVERIDGE
The Officer of the Guard	HERBERT HEWETSON
A Guard	ALLAN JEAYES
Master Jorgan	J. F. OUTRAM
Master Klaus	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Master Laurentius	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Master Johannes	ARTHUR WHITBY
Bishop Schelderup	RALPH HUTTON

The action takes place at Bergen in the Sixteenth Century, the first three Acts in Absolon's house, and the last in the Cathedral.

INTERVALS:

After Act I., 15 minutes; after Act II., 5 minutes: after Act III., 8 minutes.

Acting Manager, Stage Manager, General Manager } For LILLAH McCARTHY and GRANVILLE BARKER { HOWARD LESLIE, OSWALD MARSHALL, A. S. PIGOTT

General Manager (for SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER) C. T. H'T HELMSLEY

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1913.

The Witch is a play not likely to be very ccessful with the general public, for the general blic does not like gloom unrelieved. And gloom of The Witch is all but wholly uneved. We catch a gleam of sunny human otion when the elderly priest, Absolon yer, welcomes home his son—that precise d ingenuous young Magister Theologiae—from ttenberg. In the second act there is a good ze of hearty fun, when Master Johannes gets nk at Absolon Beyer's table, and quarrels h Master Laurentius. Drunkenness is not ny; but behind the drunkenness of Master hannes lies the warm sentiment of the aversensual man, whether priested or not, o regrets the kindly comfort of the faith and cannot breathe the coldness and terness of the new. But after Mr. Arthur hitby had made every one laugh by his h performance of drunken Johannes there s nothing but gloom.

Yet it was a gloom (as those will remember ho saw the play at the Court Theatre years
o) full of colour, woven of many shades of ht and dark. The story is not merely rrible; it was not written, as many tragic ays are now written, merely to thrill an dience by showing life in as ugly a guise possible. It touches the pity. It rouses mpathy with these poor, fluttering people, ught in the grip of a cruel and bitter age, d of a religion that was not yet grown to the ture of mercy. They are all so pitiably raid, these witch-finders and witch-torturers d witch-burners. Dread of the power of atan eats into the lives of all, till they cannot ll their private hatreds from their duty to od, and even the accused are frightened into elieving themselves possessed. That age saw witch in Beyer's young wife, Anne Peders-otter; to-day we should see only an un-appy girl who never had a chance. She was ought, when very young, by the doting priest, nd the price he paid was his silence bout her mother's supposed dealings with atan. She lived in a house full of hate and eglect, until her stepson came home, and then he boy and girl, now man and woman, renewed heir childish love. Given the hint of witch-raft, she believes that she is a witch—that atan, working in her, called Martin to her side t dead of night, when we know that it was nly passion; that Satan, working in her, illed her husband at her wish, when we know hat it was only the shock of the truth hurled t him by a rebellious and overtried girl. No onder that in the end she went mad, and when called upon to swear her innocence on er husband's coffin could do nothing but gibber confession of guilt. And the priests and the people took her and burned her, praising God—
o great is the power of an idea.

We do not see her burned, but from the first ct, when they hunt and capture another poor retch, old Herlofs Marte, to the last, when priests and mourners are gathered in the church round the coffin of Absolon Beyer, the play is full of impressive scenes and fierce passions.

It has been very finely staged, and is very finely acted. We are inclined to think that Miss Lillah McCarthy has done nothing so good as this Anne Pedersdotter. She suggests most queerly and creepily the growth in her of the idea of Satanic power, and she makes excellent use of a deadly kind of quietness. Mr. Dennis Neilson-Terry does very well as Martin, that passionate, innocent youth; and Mr. Nigel Playfair, Mr. Arthur Whitby, Miss Vera Tschaikowsky (whose playing of Herlofs Marte is unsparingly ghastly) and others make their mark. And Mr. Beveridge as Absolon Beyer gives as fine a performance as any that we remember to have had from him. But there is one figure that is more likely to haunt the dreams than any; and that is the wonderful, terrible old grandmother played by Miss Janet Achurch. It was Merete Beyer who denounced Anne Pedersdotter as a witch; but it was Merete Beyer also who passionately loved her son Absolon, and pleaded with her grandson Martin to be wise in time. A wonderful, terrible old woman, and superbly played by Miss Achurch. Her eyes, her voice, her hands, her raw humour, her fierce devotion, her cruelty, and her slyness leave an impression that refuses to be shaken off.

Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29th, 1913, and EVERY EVENING at 7-45.

MATINEES at 2-30
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS

OUIDA'S FAMOUS WORK

Under Two Flags

Music by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
Mechanical and other Effects by TOM REES and WILLIAM CRISP
Play Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Hon. Bertie Cecil, a Lifeguardsman ...	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Louis Victor, Corporal of Chasseurs ...
Berkeley Cecil, Bertie's younger brother...	Mr. FRANK HARVEY
Marquis of Rockingham, his friend ..	Mr. FREDERICK C. LEISTER
Rake Flanagan, a servant	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Willon, groom	Mr. H. G. WRIGHT
Ben Davis, turf agent	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Ezra Baroni, moneylender	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Marshal Le Brun, Commander of Division in Africa	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Fagotin, Ragache } Chasseurs	Mr. MAURICE SMITH
Colonel Chateauroy, the Black Hawk ..	Mr. B. ELTON
Captain Chauvrelon	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Tata	Mr. NORMAN LEYLAND
Ilderim, Arab chief	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Abdul, Mamond } Arabs	Mr. ALBERT WARD
Zorilda, wife of Arab chieftain	Mr. H. WILLS
Princess Venetia Corona	Mr. GEORGE BATES
Lady Guinevere	Miss DEBORAH NANSEN
	Miss GRACE DENBEIGH-RUSSELL
	Miss PHYLLIS DAILLEY

AND

Cigarette, Vivandiere of the Chasseurs ... Miss TITTELL-BRUNE
Zouaves, Turkos, Chasseurs, Arabs, Servants, &c.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

ACT 1. Scene 1. ... ... The Hotel Continental
Beauty of the Brigades.
Scene 2. ... ... Outside the Stables
The Painted Bit.
Scene 3. ... ... The Hotel Continental
Love à la Mode. For a Woman's Sake.

ACT 2. Scene ... ... Outside the Barracks, Algiers
With the French Army. The Vivandiere. The Favourite of the Regiment.
The English Guardsman under the Flag of France. The Cross of Honour.

ACT 3. Scene 1. ... ... An Oasis in the Desert
The Death of Rake.
Scene 2. ... ... Tent in the French Camp
The Wounded Soldier. The Love of Two Women.
Tableau. The Ride for Life through the Perils of the Desert

ACT 4. Scene 1. ... ... The Court Martial
The Sentence.
Scene 2. ... ... The Tent
For the Man she loves.
Scene 3. ... ... A Mountain Pass
Cigarette finds a Friend.
Scene 4. ... ... The French Camp
In the midst of her Army. THE LAST CALL.

Costumes and Wigs by J. HYMAN & CO., 19 Leicester Square, W.C.
Miss Denbeigh-Russell's Hats by MIRETTE, 104 Wardour Street, W.

The Orchestra, under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

1. OVERTURE - "The Race after Fortune" - - Suppé
2. SELECTION - - "The Girl on the Film" - - Albert Sirmay
3. DANCE INTERMEZZO - "Twilight" - - Sullivan-Brooke
(Published by B. Feldman & Co.)
4. VALSE - - - "So Gay" - - Sullivan-Brooke
(Published by Leonard & Co.)

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1913.

NEW LYCEUM PLAY.

OUIDA'S HERO IN "UNDER TWO FLAGS."

The Hon. Bertie Cecil of the Life Guards, the hero of Ouida's novel "Under Two Flags," in spite of his fifty years' existence in print as an Adonis and a soldier, still retains his popularity. There was a crowded audience for him at the Lyceum Theatre last evening, an audience evidently so familiar with the book that it could supply the unavoidable gaps left in the acting version by the anonymous author.

Yet, it was something of a feat of memory to piece together the rosy romance of the beautiful guardsman who underwent shame and exile to save his brother's honour. It would require, however, something more than imagination to convince a susceptible admirer of Ouida's style and story that "Beauty," to give him his pet name, was quite as melancholy in the romance as he appeared to be on the stage. He was more than "shy but willing." No one could come near him without compelling him to confess something he had never done It was an awful weakness for a hero, and had he not had the good fortune to possess many good friends he might have remained for ever in Africa, instead of coming back to England for a good name, a title, wealth, and a wife.

Miss Tittel Brune as Cigarette in "Under Two Flags."

J. W.

1919
Waters, J.
Plays

STRAND
THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

November 1st at 7-30.

Subsequent Evenings at 8-15.

"THE JONESES"

A Comedy of Welsh Life, in Three Acts.

Written by

LAURENCE COWEN.

John Thomas Jones, Landlord, Penlanfawr Inn ... Mr. CADWALADER JONES

Elizabeth Ann Jones, his Wife ... Miss NANCY ROBERTS

Plantagenet Jones, a visitor from England ... Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS

David Morgan Jones, a Solicitor ... Mr. H. WEST GWYNNE

Eleazer Lewis Jones, Pen-llechog Farm ... Mr. TOM OWEN

Myfanwy Jones, his Daughter ... Miss ELEANOR DANIELS

Jane Ellen Evans, his Housekeeper ... Miss LILIAN MASON

Moses Llewellyn Watkin, his Manservant ... Mr. TED HOPKINS

Nance Ellen Davies, his Maidservant ... Miss MAY HOPKINS

Rev. Daniel Thomas, Vicar of Llynwllanwllyn ... Mr. HARDING THOMAS

Captain Owen Thomas, his Son, of the "Mary Ann" schooner ... Mr. R. A. HOPKINS

Thomas Christmas Jenkins	of Llyn-wllan-wllyn	Mr. ALEC THOMAS
William Glyndwr Morris		Mr. WILLIAM MORGAN
Hugh Tredegar Williams		Mr. GARETH HUGHES

ACT I. ... ... PENLAN-FAWR INN, LLYNWLLANWLLYN.

ACT II. ... PEN-LLECHOG FARM, LLYNWLLANWLLYN.
Three weeks later.

ACT III. ... ... One week later. SAME AS ACT II.

The Play produced by THE AUTHOR.

Scenery by FRANCIS H. BULL. Costumes by C. & W. MAY.
(Some of the Costumes supplied by residents in Wales, to whom the Management are indebted).

NOTE.—The attention of the audience is drawn to the words of the Welsh National Anthem, which appears in the Programme.

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. John Ansell.

WELSH FOLK SONGS		Arr. by John Ansell
DANCE INTERMEZZO	"Laughing Eyes" ...	Herman Finck
MORCEAN ...	"Nuit Napolitaine" ...	Henri Duchatel
INTERMEZZO ...	"In Autumn" ...	John Ansell
SELECTION ..	"The Reminiscences of Wales"	Fred Godfrey

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd. London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinee on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-15.

Business Manager ... ... BERNARD HISHIN.
Stage Manager ... ... MAURICE EDMONDS
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... GARETH HUGHES

"THE JONESES."

Last night the Strand Theatre presented, under the auspices of Mr. Louis Meyer, a three-act comedy of Welsh village life of sixty years ago, by Mr. Laurence Cowen, entitled "The Joneses." Anyone who has carefully read the advance notices of the entertainment must know that in the author's opinion the play is a faithful representation of Welsh life, but such of the audience as had not the advantage of living in Wales sixty years ago must be content to rely on the author's assurance to that effect. Whether or not the production of this play last evening will lead, as a chronicler or two said it would, to the founding of a Welsh National Theatre, it is not for us to say, but a gentle hint to the effect that puns are not solely a Welsh product may have a calming effect on the enthusiasm of the author's many friends.

The play, it must frankly be said, concerns itself with very slight affairs, the chief interest being centred on the doings of a "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" style of individual from neighbouring England, who makes an incursion into Wales and launches a scheme for making a non-intoxicant whisky. By the time the adventurer's true character is made clear to his dupes the story ends with a general chorus by the happy inhabitants of the Welsh village, where prayers are preferred to potions.

The company, with one exception, are Welsh, and most excellent, natural actors all of them were. In particular, however, mention must be made of Mr. Ted Hopkins and Mr. R. A. Hopkins. The play had a friendly reception.

J. W.

Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

Saturday, November 1st and Every Evening at 8.15

'ARE YOU THERE?'

A Farcical Musical Play in two acts.

Music by LEONCAVALLO. Book by ALBERT P. DE COURVILLE.

Lyrics by EDGAR WALLACE. Produced by NED WAYBURN.

CAST.

Percy Pellett	(Manager of Telephone Exchange)	LAWRENCE GROSSMITH
Gordon Grey	(an Under Secretary of State)	... ALEC FRASER
Antonio	(Head Waiter at Casino)	... ... ERIC ROPER
Bertie Carlton	(a Modern Waiter at Casino)	LAWFORD DAVIDSON
Commissionaire at Exchange ...	... ...	ALEC JOHNSTONE
Viscount Guineas	... ...	FRANCIS E. VANE
Carlo	... ...	WILLIAM THOMAS
A Customer at the Casino ...	(another Waiter)	HAROLD TREADAWAY
Another Customer	... ...	... RONALD GRAHAM
Gregory Lester	... ...	BILLY ARLINGTON
Miss Bing	(a Millionaire, alias Tom Topper)	VERONICA BRADY
Mafalda Malatesta ...	(Manageress of "Hullo Girls")	CARMEN TURIA
Maud Waring ...	(Chaperone to Maud Waring)	DOROTHY FANE
Winifred Miller ...	... ...	...MADGE MELBOURNE
Miss Norah Hammersmith)	(formerly of the Telephone Exchange)	WINIFRED WEST
Miss Gladys Keosington)	... (Supervisors at Telephone Exchange)	MARJORIE DUNBAR
Miss London Wall	(an Operator)	... HELEN BELTRAMO
Miss Gerrard	(a Typist)	VIOLET LEICESTER
Miss Mayfair	... ...	OLIVE HORNER
Miss Wimbledon	... ...	SOPHIE FOX
Miss Hopp	... ...	CISSIE MOORE
A Loafer	... ...	ARTHUR BOURNE
1st Keeper	... ...	ERNEST SHANNON
2nd Keeper	... ...	... HARRY DENCH
Mr. Record	... ...	LAWFORD DAVIDSON
Mr. Nott Wright	... ...	... ERIC ROPER
Grand Vizier	... ...	... ALEC JOHNSTONE
Sylvia Lester	AND	... SHIRLEY KELLOGG

Act. I.—Telephone Exchange, London (Alfred Terraine).

Act. II.—Foyer of the Casino, Nice (Carnival Time) (E. H. Ryan).

All the "effects" incidental to the performance, "colour schemes," "stage lighting," "properties," "groupings," "evolutions," "dances," etc., invented by NED WAYBURN.

PERSONNEL OF CHORUS.

Misses Dorothy O'Neil, Winifred Izard, Irene Millard, Marcia Willard, Marjorie Dunbar, Mirabel Hillier, Winifred West, Frances Finlay, Evie Hampton, Poppy Chitcott, Pat Bevan, Edith Fraser, Marguerite Fogelev, Esme Mannette, Violet Leicester, Poppy McNally, Gypsy Gordon, Nora Browne.

Misses Olive Horner, Flora Hayden, May Dodson, Amy Broadwood, Elsie Pace, Phyllis Haynes, Madge Broadwood, Marie Perrard, Lola Cameron, Sophie Fox, Cissie Moore, Audrey Thorpe, Helen Beltramo, Zara Castille, Marie Leonard, Hettie Bullen, Cynthia Hland, Doris Woodger.

Messrs. Victor Wright, Jack Killick, Harry Dench, Charles Tuthill, Malcolm Mortimer, Stanley Dalton, William Thomas, Arthur Bourne, Ronald Graham, Gerald George, Walter Heal, Frederick Hawkins, Herbert Fenwick, Harold Treadaway, John Boys, Ernest Shannon.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15. First Matinee, Wednesday, Nov. 5th

Business Manager ... THOMAS MILLER. | Stage Manager ... HARRY HALL.

Musical Director ... JULIAN JONES. | Chorus Master ... MYLES HOLD.

SCENE IN LONDON THEATRE LAST NIGHT

Manager Shouted Down for Criticising Audience.

"ARE YOU THERE?"

New Musical Play Booed at Prince of Wales's.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

The scene which followed the fall of the curtain at the Prince of Wales's Theatre last night was unlike anything that had been seen or heard in a London theatre for many years.

Applause was drowned in booing, and when Mr. de Courville, the manager responsible for the production, tried to make a speech, he was shouted down. Several times he commenced, only to be told by the gallery to "shut up" and "take it away," and that his show was "rotten." Eventually Miss Shirley Kellogg gained a hearing for him by the naive admission: "I think we have all done our best!"—to which sentiment, obviously, no exception could be taken.

Mr. de Courville did not, however, make good use of his opportunity. He expressed regret if he had offended any blasé person by providing something new in the way of entertainment; and his supercilious criticism and self-satisfaction was so resented that his speech came to a stop. Altogether a very regrettable episode.

Meaningless Libretto

Of the play, written by Mr. de Courville, with music by Leoncavallo, it is almost unnecessary to speak. The book is chaotic and meaningless; the music, with the possible exception of one number, "Roses," sung with great spirit by Miss Kellogg, is altogether unworthy of the composer. With the poorest material, Mr. Lawrence Grossmith, Mr. Alec Fraser, and others struggled gallantly against the overpowering dulness which pervaded the evening.

It should be added that all the effects, the colour schemes, stage lighting, evolutions, dances, etc., have been invented by Mr. Ned Wayburn. He is evidently a producer with a taste for noise, garish colourings, and mechanical chorus effects. He is the apostle of the obvious, from whom our native producers have nothing to learn.

With the greatest sense of impartiality the conductor took encores for all the numbers, but even his loyalty to the composer did not explain what Leoncavallo was doing in that galley.

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.20,

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY PRESENTS November 1

THE GIRL IN THE TAXI

A Musical Play in Three Acts

By FREDFRICK FENN and ARTHUR WIMPERIS.

Adapted by GEORG OKONKOWSKI from the original of M.M. ANTONY MARS and DESVALLIÈRES,

Music by JEAN GILBERT.

Baron Dauvray (A newly elected Member of the Academy)		Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Baroness Delphine Dauvray (His Wife)		Miss AMY AUGARDE
Jacqueline (Their Daughter)		Miss DAISY BINDLEY
Hubert (Their Son)		Mr. F. POPE STAMPER
Rene (Their Nephew, Lieutenant)		Mr. MORANT WEBER
Mariette (Their Housemaid)		Miss DOROTHY DURAND
Monsieur Pomarel (A Perfume Manufacturer of Tours)		Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Suzanne (His Wife)		Miss YVONNE ARNAUD
Professor Charcot		Mr. MOFFAT JOHNSTON
Rose		Miss CECILY STUCKEY
Alexis (Head Waiter of the Jeunesse Doree)		Mr. FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Emile, Felix, Tina	Waiters	Mr. GEORGE CARROLL, Mr. EWART BAKER
Mimi, Phyrnette, Irma, Fraisette, Charlotte, Celeste	Stars of the Jeunesse Doree	Miss WINSOME RUSSELL, Miss DOREEN LANGTON, Miss LORNA DELLA, Miss CLAUDIA GUILLOT, Miss CHRISTINE FERRIS, Miss GOOGOO MURRAY
Godet, Paillasson, Vivarell	Habitues of the Jeunesse Doree	Miss COSSIE GODFREY, Mr. STANLEY BRIGHTMAN, Mr. ALBERT DUDLEY, Mr. ARTHUR BALLANCE

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1913.

"JANE CLEGG" AT THE COURT THEATRE.

Miss Horniman revived at the Court Theatre last night Mr. St. John Ervine's play Jane Clegg, which was seen at a few isolated performances earlier in the year. It was rather disappointing to find that there was not a larger audience, for Jane Clegg is one of those intensely interesting little dramas of everyday middle-class life of which Manchester has given us so many specimens of late. As in Hindle Wakes, so here it is the struggle of the woman that holds the attention of the onlooker. One bothers little about the miserably weak husband—liar, thief, and adulterer in turn. He is the merest pawn in the author's game save that his very weakness intensifies the battle of the dour, determined wife to adhere to her decision that the husband's departure for Canada with the other woman will be the best step for all concerned. Happily the company is the same as on the last occasion, and the acting is admirable in every way. Miss Sybil Thorndike as the wife, Mr. Bernard Copping as the husband, Mr. Eliot Makeham as the bookmaker, and Mr. Ernest Haines as the cashier, all contribute delightful character studies, while Miss Clare Greet's performance as the husband's mother, ready to forgive anything and everything on the slightest excuse, remains a perfect gem of comedy.

It is quite another aspect of the maternal instinct that is dealt with in Mr. Calderon's gruesome little Russian play, The Little Stone House, which precedes Jane Clegg, and which tells of a mother who, having saved 400 roubles to erect a memorial to her son, hands him over to the authorities when she finds that he is not dead, but a convict escaping from Siberia. As played by Mr. Russell Thorndike, Miss Muriel Platt, and the others, it proved greatly to the liking of last night's audience.

first performance in London May 19

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 3rd, 1913, and EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Mr. TOM B. DAVIS

WILL PRESENT

A PLACE IN THE SUN

A Play in Three Acts by CYRIL HARCOURT.

Dick Blair ..	(A Novelist) ..	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Sir John Capel, Bart. ..	.. ..	Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Stuart Capel ..	(His Son) ..	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Arthur Blagden ..	.. ..	Mr. CYRIL HARCOURT
Parsons ..	(A Butler) ..	Mr. GISSING WALTERS
Marjorie Capel ..	.. ..	Miss JEAN CAVENDISH
Rose Blair ..	.. ..	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Agnes ..	(A Maid) ..	Miss IVY WILLIAMS
Mrs. Moutrie ..	.. ..	Miss VANE FEATHERSTON

ACT I. Afternoon .. .. Dick Blair's Flat
ACT II. The Morning of the next day. Sir John Capel's House in London
ACT III. Midnight .. .. Same as Act I.

The Author acknowledges his indebtedness to a book (now out of Print) by Mr. HERBERT FLOWERDEW for certain incidents introduced with his permission in the Play.

The Play produced for Mr. TOM B. DAVIS by Mr. Norman Page.

The Dresses worn by Miss Cavendish by MACHINKA, Dover Street, W.
Hats by ZYROTET CIE., Hanover Sq., W. Cloak in Act III. by REVILLE & ROSSITER, Hanover Sq., W.
Gowns worn by Miss Vane Featherston, Miss Williams, and Miss Ellen O'Malley by Mesdames BROWNING & CECIL, South Audley Street, Grosvenor Square.

Preceded at 8.15 by

THE THIRTEENTH

An Episode of Country Life by EDWARD RIGBY and PHYLLIS AUSTIN.

Thomas Lingham ..	.. ..	Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
	(By permission of Messrs. NORMAN MCKINNEL and FREDERICK WHELEN)
Polly Lingham ..	(His Daughter) ..	Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD
George Ansell ..	(Polly's "young man") ..	Mr. J. COOKE BERESFORD
	(By permission of Messrs. NORMAN MCKINNEL and FREDERICK WHELEN)
The Stranger ..	.. ..	Mr. WALTER GAY
Mr. Johnson ..	.. ..	Mr. REGINALD BESANT

Scene—A Cottage in Kent.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

Before Act I.	OVERTURE, "Lurline"	Wallace
	"Petite Suite de Concert"	Coleridge Taylor
Before Act II.	a. "Entry of the Boyards"	John Halvorsen
	b. "Love in Arcady"	Haydn Wood
	c. "Graceful Dance"	Herbert E. Haines
Before Act III.	SELECTION, "The Marriage Market"	Victor Jacobi

Stage Manager ... ... } For TOM B. DAVIS { ... LAWRENCE WHITE
General Manager ... ... } For TOM B. DAVIS { ... A. C. BELSEY

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Business Manager (for the Comedy Theatre) Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 3
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
3/11/1913
STALL H19
To be retained

3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. Cyril Harcourt's new play (let us say at once that it was very well received last night, and seems likely to succeed) hovers quaintly between the old and the new. There is Dick Blair, a novelist, who tries to force a marriage between his sister, Rose, and her seducer, Stuart Capel. He is old; he dates from before Man and Superman and Hindle Wakes—and the novelists usually like to think themselves ahead of their age! There is the "waster." Stuart Capel, who knows he is a waster, and knows why he is a waster, and makes no pretensions to be anything else than a waster, and can talk beautifully about it all. He is new; he dates at the earliest from the Hankin era. His victim, Rose, is old. She was born long before the days of John Tanner or Janet de Mullin, for the coming of a fatherless child is to her a prospect of horror, to be cut short in the river were not courage to seek. The waster's father, old Sir John Capel, the representative of the "idle rich" system which has made the waster what he is, is as old as the drama or the hills. He is the aristocratic parent who forbids his son's marriage with a farmer's daughter (however polished and eminent her brother may have become as a novelist) on pain of cutting off the entail and the rest of it. But the waster's sister, Marjorie, is very new—so soon, that is, as the savage quarrel between Blair and her menfolk over Rose has made her anything at all. Having been secretly in love with Blair for seven years (as he with her), she attempts to right the wrong by smirching her own reputation and seeing what her father will say then. So, quite coolly and new-womanishly, she comes by night to Blair's rooms demanding to be compromised. And the end of it is that they are all very comfortably paired off. The waster determines to be a waster no more, but to marry and work to support his bride. The father relents and blesses the proposed marriage between his daughter and the novelist. That is old, very old indeed.

The result of the jumble of old and new is that neither side and none of the characters seems quite possible. It is not a case of square opposition between two schools of thought on conduct and convention; it is rather an uncertainty in the author's point of view. For all that, Mr. Harcourt has made out of these people a play that is cleverly contrived, kept going by plenty of "strong" scenes, and here and there quite amusingly worded.

It is well acted on the whole. Mr. Loraine almost necessarily looks more like a man of action than a writer, and he certainly had lost all trace of the farm; but he knows well how to keep things going and to work up situations. Mr. Lyston Lyle was admirably made up as Sir John; the angry stupidity of his eyes was lifelike. Mr. Reginald Owen gave an extremely clever performance of the very difficult part of the waster; and Mr. Cyril Harcourt, the author, made something impressively real out of another "old" part—the brilliant man of letters, who is soured by early poverty and is secretly rather proud of being a drunkard. Miss Ellen O'Malley did very well in her one scene, and Miss Vane Featherston was delightful as a dear, elderly adorer of young Mr. Blair. The production by Mr. Norman Page was excellent.

The play was preceded by The Thirteenth, an amusing but sad little play about an old cottager and his old furniture. Mr. Edward Rigby (part author of the play with Miss Phyllis Austin) gave a first-rate performance of the old man, and Miss Esmé Hubbard was very good as his buxom daughter.

Marjorie Capel, in order to force her father's consent to her brother-making Rose Blair "an honest woman," deliberately compromises herself by going to Blair's rooms, with her father and brother follow her. The pictures are by Foulsham and Banfield.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY, 4th NOVEMBER, 1913, at 8,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

THE PURSUIT OF PAMELA

By C. B. FERNALD.

Alan Greame	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Peter Dodder	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
John Dodder	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Doctor Joyce	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
Fah-Ni	Mr. AZOOMA SHEKO
Haranobu	Mr. J. Z. COBY
Janet	Miss OLGA WARD
Ume San	Miss AYA YAMADA
Nurse Tracey	Miss EVE BALFOUR
Pamela	Miss GLADYS COOPER

(By arrangement with Mr. Seymour Hicks.)

Kanaka Porters, Japanese and Chinese Servants, &c., &c.

The Play produced under the direction of J. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

ACT I.	The Shore at Waikiki	HONOLULU
ACT II.	An Inn at Tsuboyama	JAPAN
ACT III.	A House overlooking the Harbour	HONG KONG
ACT IV.	A Private Sanitarium, Alberta (Three years later).	CANADA

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1913.

Could Mr. Fernald keep it up? That was the question during his gaily fantastical first act, in which Pamela tries to explain in Honolulu to her shipboard friend Alan Greame that she is not really a widow. Five seconds after the marriage service was over the elderly stranger who had become her husband tried to kiss her. So she ran away. Pamela was young, completely innocent, and American (which means that her way was to go straight for what she wanted and see what happened); and she wanted her friend Alan Greame to stay with her. Alan was English and a man of the world. Much against the grain, he tried to explain to this charming child that these things are not done. Her reputation would suffer. "My reputation for what?" asks Pamela. But Alan is stern with himself and her. She must go back to her husband and he to his poultry farm in the wilderness. Mr. Fernald kept it up pretty well in the second act. Pamela has not gone back to her husband nor Alan to his poultry farm. They meet again in Japan; and this time the pretty game has turned to earnest. Pamela knows more clearly now what it is that she wants when (in all the beauty of a summer night in Japan and under the influence of his adoration and just a thimbleful too much sherry) she asks him to stay with her. And when Alan, who has been drinking water, refuses, she turns on him with scorn. She thought he was brave and strong; she finds he is feeble and cowardly.

Mr. Fernald does not keep it up in the third act. It is not amusing—unless the amorous doddering of old Peter Dodder, Pamela's husband's brother, were amusing. And it rouses little emotion, because at the close Mr. Fernald has patently given his story a twist in order to secure what the actors term "the sympathy" for his rather weak-kneed hero and gain matter for a fourth act. Pamela and Alan Greame have met once more, this time at Hong-kong. Pamela's husband has tracked her down. Alan Greame would whisk her away under the old man's mean and beady eyes; but it is Pamela, who has thought much and read much since we last saw her, who now realizes the gravity of running away with another man. That was unlike Pamela, even after her treatment by Greame. And it is Greame who now turns with scorn on Pamela for a faintheart and a deceiver—Greame who had taken every opportunity of dinning prudence into her ears! Mr. Fernald may have intended a savage criticism of men; if so, he set it in such a manner as to make it look like a flagrant piece of dramatic trickery. And in Act IV. he keeps it up even less than before. Alan has performed deeds of heroic valour in the northern ice, and is now lying near death in a hospital in Canada. Thither comes Pamela. We know that sick men cannot stand sudden shocks of joy; but to us, who had guessed that Pamela was now a widow, the happy ending we had expected seemed unduly deferred by her cautious approaches. A few mild sounds of disapproval at the fall of the curtain hinted that there were others who felt likewise.

By Arrangement with Gertrude Kingston

KENELM FOSS presents:

"MAGIC"

A Fantastic Comedy, in Three Acts and a Prelude, By

G. K. CHESTERTON

The Stranger	FRANKLIN DYALL
Patricia Carleon	Miss GRACE CROFT
Rev. Cyril Smith	O. P. HEGGIE
Hastings (the Duke's Secretary)	FRANK RANDELL
Doctor Grimthorpe	WILLIAM FARREN
The Duke	FRED LEWIS
Morris Carleon	LYONEL WATTS.

The Action of the Prelude takes place on a Hill-top, and that of the Play in the Duke's Drawing Room.

Preceded at 8.30 By

"GEMINAE"

A Farce, in One Act, by GEORGE CALDERON.

Alexander, a noble and romantic Scotsman.		THOMAS SIDNEY
Charles, his friend		GUY LEIGH-PEMBERTON
A Waiter		A. E. WALKER
Rose	Twins	Miss HELEN BROWN
Violet	Twins	Miss FAITH CELLI

Scene - A Private Sitting Room in an Edinburgh Hotel.

Both Plays produced by KENELM FOSS.

Business Manager	Henry Langley
Stage Manager	William Armstrong
Musical Director	Edward Jones

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

LITTLE THEATRE
SOLE PROPRIETRESS GERTRUDE KINGSTON

Under the Management of KENELM FOSS.

Magic

by

G·K·CHESTERTON

Friday
NOVEMBER 7th, 1913

The Author of "Magic."

"He sees the wonder, mystery and utility of common everyday things, just as a child does, and he is not afraid of proclaiming his delight to the whole world."

Romance and Reality.

By HOLBROOK JACKSON.

In his speech at the fall of the curtain on Friday night Mr. G. K. Chesterton told his audience that his play was amateurish, but that he was quite sure of his opinions. To both assertions we felt inclined to reply: "Of course!" Eminent essayists do not suddenly write plays that are not amateurish: that is for people with no ideas, or for people who have learned how to express ideas in the most dramatic way. There are many things in "Magic" which are amateurish—most flagrantly, perhaps, those silly political jokes: not even new jokes—with which Mr. Chesterton does his best to spoil a Duke whose associations of ideas are almost as delightfully odd as those of Mr. Shandy himself. On the other hand, the conduct of the story as a whole is not amateurish. Mr. Chesterton leaves us at the end of his second act wondering what he would be at, and how it can all end. And then in his third he takes us by the throat to show us. We do not know how better a professional could do it.

As to the opinions, again "Of course!" Everything that he writes—even "Father Brown"—Mr. Chesterton writes with the same intention—to show us the fallibility of human reason, the necessity of faith. In "Magic" he wants to assure us once more that he, Mr. G. K. Chesterton, believes that there is a God and that there are Devils. He cannot prove that there are, of course. Nothing can prove it, least of all a work of art, the function of which is not to prove anything. But by means of the stage he can ventilate, can "toss," as Bacon said, his opinion more freely, can impress it on us more forcibly than in any other form of which men who write are capable. And though he does not prove anything, that last act of his is sure to set certain people doing what they call thinking. They will be people of excitable nervous systems. That is the way with the drama. When it pretends to attack the mind, it is creeping in through the emotions and the nerves. In that last act we all could feel that there was a Devil in the Duke's drawing-room. The author and the actors make us feel it, though none of the characters on the stage believed in Devils. It was a horrible feeling. We were almost glad of that shockingly amateurish flash of lightning in which there returned the only man who could drive the Thing away.

The Duke believed in nothing and disbelieved in nothing; he was all for compromise. Dr. Grimthorpe believed in science; the Reverend Mr. Smith was the type of clergyman who does not believe in his own religion, but objects to anyone else attacking it. Then there were the Duke's young Irish wards, Patricia, who at the first had not lost her childish belief in fairies, and Morris, who is a cockahoop young atheist, fresh from a big business in America. Into this circle comes a queer creature—the Stranger. Patricia believes him to be a fairy; the rest take him as merely what he allows them to see in him, a man and a conjurer. Belief or disbelief? Science or faith? The questions get tossed among the company, until a quarrel with young Morris leads the Stranger to do things which no mere conjurer could do. Then out comes the truth. He is no fairy. He is a man and a conjurer, but not a mere conjurer. He has learned to deal with Devils, and now only God can wash him clean of their loathsome contact. And in the third act the Devil is in the room. The Duke and the Doctor and the Duke's secretary are jumpy and savage. The clergyman shrieks "In God's name, go!" which, being merely a cry of terror, of course has no effect. Then, in that shockingly amateurish flash of lightning, back comes the Stranger, fresh from prayer in the garden; and the Devil flees at his word. And the fairy-story that had been in progress between the Stranger and Patricia ends, quite improbably but very agreeably, by coming true in love.

From the charming little prologue, in which Patricia first meets the Stranger, to the close, the play is gratefully unlike ordinary plays. Here and there it has Shawlike tricks, though Mr. Chesterton employs them for the sake of his plot and not out of mere wilfulness. And here and there it is tiresome. But it is alive and clever and amusing. It has an impressive third act, and the sense of mystery is preserved all through. The natural feeling that Mr. Franklin Dyall was not fantastic enough as the Stranger was proved to be unwarranted when we learned what, in truth, this being was and what he had done; and his performance was telling and true. Miss Grace Croft's newly acquired trick of standing in ugly positions could not conceal the sensitiveness and vitality of her playing of Patricia; neither she nor any other actress could put any spirit into the nonsense Patricia has to talk to the Stranger about cooking and darning. Mr. Heggie plays excellently in the first act, where the clergyman has a sparring match with the doctor, and quotes his passage from the Book of Job impressively. Mr. Farren is the very man for the part of the doctor; Mr. Fred Lewis had little difficulty in doing justice to the oddness of the Duke; and Mr. Lyonel Watts gave a better picture of a boy in a rage than we have ever seen before.

"Magic" is preceded by "Geminae," an unremarkable one-act farce by Mr. George Calderon, in which Miss Faith Celli and Miss Helen Brown looked very pretty and succeeded in looking very much alike.

Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1913.

"THE THREE WAYFARERS."

e Hangman	.. ..	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
othy Somers	.. ..	Mr. FRANK RANDELL
eph Somers	.. ..	Mr. MILES MALLESON
e Constable	.. ..	Mr. THOMAS SIDNEY
e Shepherd	.. ..	Mr. HUGH TABBERER
Magistrate	.. ..	Mr. A. E. WALKER
nkey	.. ..	Mr. GUY LEIGH-PEMBERTON
ent Player	.. ..	Mr. LEONARD TROLLOPE
Oldest Inhabitant	..	Mr. ARTHUR BACHNER
Fiddler	.. ..	Miss JANET HOPE
Shepherd's Wife	..	Miss HILDA SIMS
Damsel	.. ..	Miss FAITH CELLI
Young Girl	.. ..	Miss NORAH HILL

is piquant to find plays by Mr. Hardy and Chesterton on the same bill, for they are two osophers who will never agree—indeed, one of has recently said as much with considerable city. Mr. Chesterton declares himself an optiand Mr. Hardy is declared by other people to pessimist. That is the root of the disagreement, when Mr. Chesterton sees that the first character The Three Wayfarers, which was produced in front Magic last night, is called "The Hangman," ill probably say that he might have expected it. The Three Wayfarers is in form a little vignette of lish country life at the period immediately wing the same author's play of The Dynasts, and gh it is described as "a legendary trifle," it is a weighted by the quintessence of Mr. Hardy's us. The scene is a shepherd's cottage in a y part of Wessex on the eve of a christening. neighbours are making merry and dancing the first wayfarer arrives, a pale and haggard g man whom we should guess to be the escaped with the help of Mr. Randell's splendid actven if he did not reveal it in a clumsy "aside." has hardly time to efface himself in the chimneyer when the second wayfarer (Mr. Franklin Dyall) urs, a fine old English figure of horror, with a lying number of capes to his coat and an ugly bag in his hand. He is on his way to town for to-morrow's execution, and, seathimself at the elbow of his prey, he e to bawl the terrible songs of his trade, presently drags the halter out of his bag. Meanthe third wayfarer looks in. He is the brother condemned man, and flies as soon as he perceives Naturally, therefore, when the big guns begin gnal the escape every one rushes out in pursuit e wrong man. This is the chance taken by the ive to make good his escape. But before he goes s to suffer a practical demonstration of an execuby the drunken hangman. A delightful old strate (Mr. A. E. Walker) now hurries in with a key, but finds his bird has flown, whereupon the rupted dance is resumed by the peasants.

e get in this brief sketch a great deal of the best Mr. Hardy. There is, first, as in The Dynasts, a rellous resuscitation of vanished social types: amateur constable, relying, like the "specials" "Pickwick," on the mystic virtue of his staff; amateur magistrate, administering his district a fussy schoolmaster; and the all-too professional gman, with his jovial eye to "perquisites." re is also the real Hardy note of horror—the or which touches the imagination, never the horror ch racks the nerves. Finally, in the zest with h the villagers resume their interrupted rejoicings he end of the nightmare, and in their ejaculation is not every day a baby is born in this house," e is a fresh hopefulness born of devotion to the and faith in the enduring life of the countryside. this touch at the end of the play even the optimism

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

On TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, at 8, and

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

Norman McKinnel & Frederick Whelen

PRESENT

GREAT CATHERINE

"Great Catherine, whom the world still adores."—Byron.

A thumbnail sketch of Russian court life in the XVIII. century.

IN FOUR SCENES,

By BERNARD SHAW.

Varinka	MIRIAM LEWES
Prince Patiomkin	NORMAN McKINNEL
A Cossack Serjeant	J. COOKE BERESFORD
Captain Edstaston (Light Dragoons)	EDMOND BREON
Naryshkin (Chamberlain)	EUGENE MAYEUR
The Empress Catherine II.	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
The Princess Dashkoff	ANNIE HILL
Claire	DOROTHY MASSINGHAM

Period: 1776. Place: St. Petersburgh.

Scene I.	The Introduction.	Prince Patiomkin's chancery in the Palace
Scene II	The Petit Lever	The Empress's Bedchamber
Scene III.	The Arrest	A Garden
Scene IV.	The Torture.	A recess in the great ballroom of the Palace

The Scenery painted by WALTER HANN & SON, from Designs by VICTOR MACCLURE.

The Costumes, other than that of the Empress Catherine, by L. & H. NATHAN.

The Costume of the Empress Catherine in Scene IV., from Design by PERCY ANDERSON.

Wigs by L. GUSTAVE.

Preceded by

Between Sunset and Dawn

If Bernard Shaw is not at his best in his latest play, "Great Catherine," produced at the Vandeville Theatre, he yet can fairly claim that it was found vastly entertaining by the overwhelming majority of the audience on Tuesday evening. I have rarely heard heartier laughter in any theatre than that which followed many of the episodes and witticisms of this little historical farce, and a play that can produce such an effect as that is by no means the waste material that some would have us believe it to be. The author humorously describes this four-scene farce, which plays a little over an hour, as "a thumbnail sketch of Russian Court life in the eighteenth century," and if instead of Bernard Shaw's name appearing as author we had been told it was written some years ago by W. S. Gilbert I am quite prepared to believe it might have been lauded as a masterpiece.

"Great Catherine."

"Great Catherine" opens with a scene in which a young officer from England presents letters to Prince Patromkin and begs for an audience with his Imperial mistress, the Empress Catherine. It is no more than a farcical episode in which we see an uncouth chief Minister half drunk taking a rise out of a young soldier, who has neither intelligence nor sense of humour. In the second scene Catherine, surrounded by the ladies of the bedchamber, arises for the day, and, having humorously complained that her exalted position in life gives her no opportunity of getting as much out of life as the people of her Court, dismisses all of them (except the Englishman) with a threat that she will have them knouted if they do not hurry off. Later on she makes love to the young soldier, but his attempt to escape having failed, Catherine expresses a regret, not that she could not have him as a lover, but that she could not keep him as a curiosity for her museum. All this made excellent fooling, for it was wittily written and splendidly acted by everybody concerned, but most particularly by Mr. Norman McKinnel and Miss Gertrude Kingston. No one with a sense of humour can fail to find good entertainment in this new farce by Bernard Shaw

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

QUEEN'S
Theatre

Wednesday

19/11/1913

Orch. Stall

C 6

This to be retained

On WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, and EVERY EVENING at 9 o'clock.
MATINEE SATURDAY at 2.30.

HUBERT HARBEN'S SEASON.

IF WE HAD ONLY KNOWN

A Play in Three Acts by INGLIS ALLEN.

Robert Vale	MALCOLM CHERRY	Bobs	JOYCE ROBEY
Dr. L'Estrange ...	RUDGE HARDING	Myra Vale	MARY JERROLD
Edward Vaughan Thompson	ARTHUR CLEAVE	Mrs. Moody	MADGE McINTOSH
Reggie Moody	P. PERCEVAL CLARK	Mrs. Vaughan Thompson	AIMÉE de BURGH
A Loafer	GEORGE DESMOND	Meeks	JEAN CADELL

ACT I. ... ... Morning Room in Robert Vale's House in Kensington
ACT II. ... ... Robert Vale's Studio—Several Months later
ACT III. ... ... Same as Act I.—Several Years later

Miss Mary Jerrold's Dresses by Mrs. CALEB PORTER, Brompton Road, S.W.
Miss Vince de Burgh's by NEWEL & JOHNSON, 18 Baker Street, S.W.
Furniture by J. S. LYON, 112 High Holborn, W.C.

Preceded at 8.30 by

Mr. WARWICK PRICE

(By arrangement with Mac-Kelvne & Devanh.)

PARODIES AND PLEASANTRIES AT THE PIANO.

The Play produced by HUBERT HARBEN.

Programme of Music by the Moss-Squire Céleste Orchestra.

BEFORE CURTAIN RAISER.

(a) MARCH, "The Man of the Moment" ... Squire
(b) LYCUS IS from "Samson and Delilah" ... Saint-Saens
(c) MORCEAU, "Un peu d'Amour" ... Silesu

BEFORE ACT II.

(a) HUNGARIAN FANTASIE, "Heute Kau ... Hirsch
(b) SONG, "You made me Love you" ... Monckton

BEFORE ACT II.

(a) TEMPLE BELLS, } From the Indian Love Lyrics of
(b) KASHMIRE SONG, } Amy Woodforde Finden
(c) THE LAKE ARE WAKE }
(d) CELESTE SOLO, "Moon Madrigal" ... Wilhite

BEFORE ACT III

(a) VALSE, "Tres Jolie" ... ... Hall
(b) CZARDAS, "Zigeunerweisen" ... ... Sarasate
(Solo Violin [HAROLD MOSS.])
CLARIA for Strings and Celeste, "Le Cygne" ... Saint-Saens
(Solo Violoncello [H. SQUIRE])

EXTRA NUMBERS.

HUMORESKI ... Dvorak ... SERENADE

Musical Organ and Celeste by the MUSETTE ORGAN CO., 80 Wigmore Street, W.

"You made me Love you," by arrangement with FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.
"Moon Madrigal," by arrangement with the JOHN CHURCH CO.

General Manager ... ... For Mr. Hubert Harben ... ... Mr. ARTHUR WHITTAKER
Stage Manager ... ... Mr. GEORGE DESMOND

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

General Manager ... ... For Queen's Theatre ... ... Mr. MARK BLOW
Business Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL PAGET

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1913.

For two acts Mr. Vale was the unluckiest man alive. When he quarrelled with his wife about nothing at all and left for Paris (Paris ! What oh ! as his flippant brother-in-law remarked) he declared he would never, never return until she wrote him a letter; and of course the all-important letter was given to a lazy servant girl to post, who gave it to a loafer who never, never posted it. Worse luck still, on the very night Mr. Vale returned home a wicked married lady asked him to kiss her just as his mother-in-law came into the room to tell him that his wife, upstairs, was every moment expecting her confinement. Worst luck of all, he had a friend (in the medical profession) who devoted his whole time to investigating the domestic troubles of his friends and making edifying reflections on the folly of their conduct. Whenever any event happened in the Vale household (including the baby) the doctor was always there, expatiating on the obvious and generally improving the occasion. He was, of course, the first man to hear the new-born infant's cry, and, as he had once been a father himself, his sympathetic rapture at the sound was overpowering. What with the new baby and the effusive doctor, poor Mr. Vale quite broke down.

But in the third act he became the luckiest man alive. No more domestic quarrels, because of baby, now a bouncing boy. To be sure, the boy bounced down the area, but the doctor entered in the nick of time to assure the distracted parents that their boy had only harmlessly bumped his head. At the same time a telegram arrived to give Mr. Vale (who, by the way, was an artist) the commission for a set of cathedral frescoes which would make him a rich man ever afterwards. This innocent work—which was first presented to the public at an afternoon performance some time ago—evidently gave many people last night complete satisfaction.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH
Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - LOUIS MEYER

TO-NIGHT at 8.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30.

Matinees, Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.

THE GARRICK THEATRE

22/11/13

Orch. Stall

K

LOUIS MEYER

PRESENTS

A New Three Act Farce, entitled

"WHO'S THE LADY"

From the French "MADAME LA PRÉSIDENTE," by MM. HENNEQUIN and VEBER.

Adapted by JOSÉ G. LEVY.

Cyprien Gaudet	FARREN SOUTAR
M. Tricointe	E. DAGNALL
Marius	ARTHUR HATHERTON
Bienassis	FRANK COLLINS
Octave Rosamund	CHAS. TROODE
Poche	FRED EASTMAN
Pinglet	MAX LEEDS
Moulaine	ERNEST HOLLWAY
Bouquet	HERBERT E. MAULE
Dominique	GEO. EAST
Francois	H. V. SURREY
Gobette	JEAN AYLWIN
Mdme. Tricointe	MILLIE HYLTON
Denise	FAY COMPTON
Sophie	VIOLET GOULD
Angeline	MINNIE TERRY
Juliette	PHYLLIS THATCHER

ACT I. Sitting Room at Tricointe's House, at Gray.
(A small provincial Town in France)

ACT II. Private Office of the Minister of Justice, Paris.

ACT III. Vestibule of the Hotel de la Paix, Paris.

Time—The Present.

The Play produced by E. DAGNALL.

Scenery by JOHNSTON. Gowns and Hats by VIOLA, Albemarle St., W.

Business Manager	JOSÉ G. LEVY
Musical Director	ALBERT FOX
Stage Manager	CLAUDE EDMONDS
General Manager	BERNARD HISHIN, Strand Theatre, W.C.

Box Office (MR. C. R. STUBBS) 10 to 10.
Telephone Gerrard 9513.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle 5s. and 4s.
Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d. Gallery (unreserved), 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 and 2.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to t whom they, in th

We have said that it is "very French." Let us leave it at that, so that those who are afraid of it may remember that they are not obliged to go and see it. The story begins in the provinces, where Gobette, the actress, is planted by some wags in the house of virtuous old M. Tricointe, the Judge, Mme. Tricointe having just left for Paris; and when M. Tricointe is visited by Gaudet, the Minister of Justice, in the course of a tour of inspection into the morals of the Bench and Bar, he is forced to pass Gobette off as his wife. Then the Minister falls in love with Gobette, and we find her visiting him in his office in Paris, and the real Mme. Tricointe there too, and the husband, and the Minister's discarded love, and the Minister's secretary; and anyone with any knowledge of farce and of the clever ways of MM. Hennequin and Veber can imagine what a glorious muddle and what a succession of ridiculous situations everybody gets into. The third act has its surprises, too, and lets the fun down much less than do most third acts of farces. There were giggles and squeals and shouts of laughter all along, and every sign of satisfaction at the fall of the curtain. Mr. Levy has done his work of adaptation skilfully.

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THE REFEREE.
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1913.

PARSONS AND PLAYS.

HECKLING THE CENSOR.

MISDIRECTED INTERFERENCE.

WHAT was it Talleyrand said? "Surtout point de zèle." When that witty, wise, wily, wicked, worldly man said "above everything, no zeal," it only meant that he saw the folly of overdoing it, as we may see it now in the too zealous efforts of the clergy—and of the newspapers, which really ought to know better—to decry certain public entertainments to which they are, with more or less reason, taking all sorts of objections. I do not know any better means of making a "succès de scandale" than this sort of advertisement, and, if the clergy do not know it, I am confident that the journalists know very well that they are simply attracting attention to the very thing from which they pretend to divert it. There are people who like to be "shocked," and what is "shocking" is not necessarily offensive enough to call for the interference of the police or even for the intervention of the Censor.

* * *

Only recently there was a great outcry against a certain performance at a music-hall, and what was the result? The result was that the house was more crowded than ever. The effect of the outcry raised by the clergy and the Press together, I repeat, was that bigger audiences than ever were attracted to the music-hall in question, for many people were curious to see what it was that had scandalised the right reverend and wrong reverend gentlemen who had not seen but only heard of the performance which they condemned in such righteous terms. However, a success of this kind, I believe, does not make for permanent success, and managers of theatres and music-halls may take my word for it that this sort of thing keeps away just as many people as it attracts. Only—and "there's the rub"—the people who keep away are not so easily enticed back again; and the people who like something spicy won't come again if they can't get what they are looking for; and so that, in the natural course of events, is how things soon redress themselves.

* * *

Now, there is no donht that there has been of late years a certain relaxation of the austerities of public manners; it is not altogether an unwelcome change; and I am confident that the Censor will see to it that things are not allowed to go too far, as the saying is, in the theatre or the music-hall. It is absurd to argue, as Mr. Bernard Shaw does, that the bishops or their flocks are not compelled to go to the theatre or the music-hall any more than he is obliged to go to church. This is to confound the issne. It is not the people who object to gross impropriety who have to be kept away from any theatre or music-hall, if there be any where such entertainment may be found, but it is just the very people who do like such entertainment who have to be more particularly considered. One may stay away, as Mr. Shaw argues, from places of amusement or places of worship. But the point he misses is that the depraved taste of certain people should not be encouraged—shall I say, beyond a certain extent? It is all very well to argue that theatres and music-halls do not exist for the edification of little boys and girls; but among men and women there may be vicious old men or young women who may find in the public discussion of certain subjects which a cold-blooded author may tackle with perfect freedom and sincerity a great deal more, or a great deal less, than other people. You have to consider that it takes all kinds of people to make an audience, and that of itself is enough to justify the office of the Censor. In Berlin, for instance, there are at the present day places of amusement which, it is frankly admitted, are not for young people, just as it was, in the old days, at the Palais Royal Théâtre in Paris. Once let that be understood, and the degradation of public manners is, to a certain extent, and only to a certain extent, restricted. But I do not believe there is yet in London, as there is in Berlin to-day, and as there used to be in Paris, a public to make this sort of thing pay in the long run. At any rate, it is to the public interest that it should be kept under control, not by public opinion, not by the police, but by the constituted authority of the Censor.

* * *

The clergy and the newspapers between them have been raising a hullabaloo this week over "The Trouble With the Stage," as the Morning Post calls it. It is the old story of the mountain in labour over a mouse. The dramatic critic of the Morning Post makes the most reasonable contribution to the discussion which has been raging in the columns of that newspaper, and in others, during the week. "The Censor must remain," he says; "he must remain to read plays as before, to license them or to refuse a licence. But he must be given the power to discriminate." Isn't he? I agree, as you know, with the critic of the Morning Post that the Censor must remain, but he implies that the power to discriminate is not his. Then I say that it is high time for the Advisory Board, or whatever they call it, to go. Sir Edward Carson, for one, is much too busy, I am sure, with more pressing matters to occupy himself with the business of the theatre. I can understand that the clergy, who are not, as I take it, constant playgoers, may take an exaggerated view of things of the theatre, but I cannot for the life of me believe that the journaliats, who are perhaps more worldly, imagine that they are helping in any way to keep people away from a play by calling attention to it, as it were, at the top of their voices. When the Daily Mail directs attention to the fact that a certain play has been denounced by various critics as "salacious," "sultry," "depraved," "coarse," "unpleasant," and all the rest of it, I wonder whether it is doing more to discourage this sort of thing than to give it the benefit of "bold advertisement." If the play deserved all this slashing (and I do not permit myself to express an opinion upon that point), then all I can say is that it had been better not to have taken so much notice of it. Certainly it is not by writing to the newspapers about such things that the clergy may hope to keep the public out of the theatres and attract them to churches.

* * *

Between them, the clergy and the theatrical profession have been creating quite a storm within the circumscribed area of the proverbial tea-cup. I do not see that anybody is likely to get any immediate benefit from it—always excepting the manager who has produced the play which is the subject of their particular scorn. Miss Gertrude Kingston, joining in the fray, writes to the Morning Post to say—in a rather long-winded sentence—that "if the bishops have any complaint to make against the theatre for fostering a depraved taste among the public"—(What do the bishops know about it?)—"if the managers are defending themselves against the accusation on the ground that they are giving the public what it wants, the real culprit at the bottom of all the mischief is a system that has resolutely prevented anything purposeful and serious from being performed provided that it is true to life"—I pause for breath, and to give you time to reflect—"but has ever been indulgent to plays of questionable manners and morals provided that they aim only at being funny and vulgar." It amuses me to see what a flood of small talk has been let loose by the bishops misdirected interference in the affairs of the theatre.

* * *

Mr. Albert Chevalier writes to the Morning Post to "point out that their Majesties the King and Queen have not yet seen a typical music-hall entertainment," and he goes on to say that if, "having broken the ice by visiting two special variety theatres on two special occasions, when . . ." &c., "they would now and then drop in casually" (I like that!) "to witness the ordinary performances . . . I think it would do much to keep every music-hall programme clear of objectionable matter." Yet another correspondent of the Morning Post, who "gathers" that "certain entertainments now being presented on the stages of the regular theatre are objectionable," is satisfied to say that "whether this is so I cannot say, as I have seen none of these plays myself"—which, it seems to me, is an excellent reason for saying nothing about them. "But," he argues, "if it is so, the remedy is to be found in the abolition of the Censor."

* * *

How, without a Censor, there things could be prevented is more than Sir Arthur Pinero—for it is the words of Sir Arthur Pinero, if you please, that I am quoting—attempts to explain. And so, between you and me (and the Post) I think things will continue to go on just the same.

MORDRED.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

D. Y. T.
25/11/1913
Orch. Stall
F20
No.

TO-NIGHT AT 8,

Subsequent Evenings at 8.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

QUALITY STREET,

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

VALENTINE BROWN	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
ENSIGN BLADES	Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD
LIEUTENANT SPICER	Mr. EDWARD DOUGLAS
RECRUITING SERGEANT	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
	(By arrangement with VEDRENNE and EADIE)
A WATERLOO VETERAN	Mr. CHARLES DALY
MASTER ARTHUR WELLESLEY TOMSON ...	Master RONALD HAMMOND
MISS SUSAN THROSSEL	Miss NINA BOUCICAULT
MISS PHŒBE THROSSEL	Miss CATHLEEN NESBITT
	(By arrangement with LILLAH McCARTHY and GRANVILLE BARKER)
MISS WILLOUGHBY	Miss MARY BARTON
MISS FANNY WILLOUGHBY...	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
MISS HENRIETTA TURNBULL	Miss MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
MISS CHARLOTTE PARRATT...	Miss SUSAN RICHMOND
PATTY	Miss LOUIE POUNDS
HARRIET	Miss DORIS MACINTYRE
ISABELLA	Miss MOYA NUGENT

ACTS I., II. & IV. ... The Blue and White Room in the House of the Misses Throssel in Quality Street.

ACT III. ... ... A Tent at the Officers' Ball.

The Scene is laid in England during the time of the Napoleonic Wars.

Ten Years elapse between Acts I. and II.

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

"Quality Street" Again.

Tuesday was a delightful evening at the Duke of York's Theatre. It is rarely that a play revived after a period of eleven years can still retain its power to fascinate us, but "Quality Street" does. Someone said to Sir James M. Barrie the other day that it might seem old-fashioned. "It seemed old-fashioned when I wrote it," was the answer. This quaintly charming sentimental play, laid in an old-fashioned house, in an old-fashioned, "genteel" street, in an English town at the period when Napoleon was at war with Europe, is exquisite. There is no noise. The two young gentlewomen who live in the house where the romance happens are timid folk. Phœbe and Susan Throssel, the latter satisfied to "mother" her sister Phœbe of twenty years, excited beyond all measure that dashing young Valentine Brown is coming to the house "to say something." What can it be but that he wishes to propose for Phœbe? And the poor young gentlewomen are heartbroken to learn that it is but to say that he has enlisted and is going to the wars.

* * * *

And then ten years of dreary waiting pass, and the poor young women, having somehow lost all their money, eke out an existence by keeping a children's school. But all comes gloriously to a happy end, and if you have seen "Quality Street" you know how it happens, and if you have never seen it you must go now and do so, for London has nothing better to show. Everyone was charmed by Miss Nina Boucicault, and wished that she had been the Phœbe, she looked so young. I liked Miss Louie Pounds, Miss Moya Nugent, Mr. Godfrey Tearle, and Mr. George Tully, because none of them could have been bettered. The audience stayed in the house for ten minutes after the curtain fell on Tuesday to cheer the company and call for the author. But the author was in bed, or in a box; anyhow, he did not appear to take the "call." However, his play charmed us.

J. W.

Garrick Theatre

GARRICK THEATRE, W.C.

LOUIS MEYER presents

WHO
THE

Every Evening at 8-30. Matinees Wed. & Sat., 2-30

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

STRAND
THEATRE
THE 27/11/1913
STALL
H 2
To be retained

STRAND
THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

LOUIS MEYER presents

"Mr. WU"

An Anglo-Chinese Play in Three Acts and Two Tableaux, written by HARRY M. VERNON and HAROLD OWEN.

TIME: THE PRESENT DAY.—The entire action of the Play takes place in China, in and near the City of Hong Kong.

ACT I.

TABLEAU - The outer gates of Mr. Wu's house at Kowloon.
SCENE - The Lotus garden of Mr. Wu's house.

Characters in the order of their appearance:

Ah Sing (Mr. Wu's Head Servant) ... ... Mr. FRANK ROYDE
Servants in Mr. Wu's House ... ... Mr. ARTHUR SEATON, Mr. IVOR SMITH, Mr. CLAUDE BURT, Mr. ALEX BROWN
Chinese Girls, Relatives of Nang Ping ... ... Miss DORRIE MEYER, Miss WINIFRED PHILIPS, Miss DOROTHY TURNER, Miss GLADYS St. CLAIR Nang Ping (Mr. Wu's Daughter) ... ... Miss HILDA BAYLEY
Low Loong (her Cousin) ... ...Miss ETHEL EVANS
Basil Gregory ... ... Mr. EVAN THOMAS
Mrs. Gregory ... ... Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Hilda Gregory (her daughter) ... ... Miss AITHNA GOVER
Ah Wong (her Chinese maid) ... ... Miss MARIAN LIND
Mr. Gregory (Head of the Gregory Steamship Company) ... Mr. LESLIE CARTER
Tom Carruthers (his Secretary) ... ... Mr. MARTYN ROLAND

— AND —

Wu Li Chang (a Mandarin) ... ... Mr. MATHESON LANG

Gardeners, Water Carriers, Sweepers, etc.

ACT II. Three weeks later.

SCENE - Manager's room in the offices of the Gregory Steamship Co. at Hong Kong.

Chinese Clerk... ... ... Mr. CHAS. WEMYSS
The Compradore ... ... Mr. LOUIS ASHMEADE
Murray ... ... Mr. ELDRETT GULSON
Holman (Manager of the G.S.S. Co. in Hong Kong) ... Mr. HARCOURT BEATTY
A Coolie ... ... Mr. FRANK THORNDIKE
Simpson (First Officer of the 'Fee Chow') ... ... Mr. SYDNEY VAUTIER
Coolies, Dock Superintendents, Sikh Policemen, Rickshaw Runners, etc.

ACT III. Three hours later.

SCENE - Room in Mr. Wu's house at Kowloon.
TABLEAU - The outer gates of Mr. Wu's house.

The Play produced by Mr. MATHESON LANG.

Mr. Matheson Lang desires to acknowledge valuable assistance rendered to him by Mr. A. CORBETT-SMITH in arranging details and customs of Chinese Life of the present day in Hong Kong.

"Mr. Wu" at the Savoy.

Mr. Louis Meyer, in order to have the stage of the Strand clear for rehearsals of The Silver King, due on Saturday, removed Mr. Wu to the Savoy on Monday.

31/12/14

STRAND THEATRE. TO-NIGHT at 9. MR. WU. LOUIS MEYER'S Production. MATHESON LANG. LILIAN BRAITHWAITE. MATS. WEDS., 2.45. At 2.15 and 8.30. The Entertainment Will be transferred to the SAVOY THEATRE Aug. 31.

Scenery by FRANCIS H. BULL. Costumes by J. HYMAN and ALDERTON & SONS. Miss Lilian Braithwaite's and Miss Aithna Gover's dresses by Viola, Albermarle St., W.; Miss Braithwaite's evening coat in Act III. made by Madame Mauve, Ltd., 41, South Audley Street, W.

Stage furniture by MAPLE, and OETZMANN. Incidental Music by J. ANSELL.

Preceded at 7.30 by a Fantasy by REGINALD ARKELL, entitled

"COLOMBINE."

Dan'l ... ... Mr. Eldrett Gulson
Nathan'l ... ... Mr. A. Fil'er
Harlequin ... Mr. Frank Royde
Pierrot ... ... Mr. Frank Thorndike
Colombine ... Miss Ethel Evans

SCENE - The South Downs.
Produced by A. E. FILMER. Incidental Music by J. ANSELL.

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. Edmund Maney.

ARCHE DE LA CLOCHE ... ... Delibes
FANTASIE ... ... "Pagliacci" ... ... Leoncavallo
(a) ENTRACTE ... "Secrets" ... ... Auclife
(b) SONG ... "Little Grey Home in the West" ... ... Löhr
(c) SPANISH DANCE "Jota Navarra" ... ... Sarasate
SUITE ... ... "Scenes Pittoresques" ... ... Massenet
1. March 2. Air de Ballet 3. Angelus 4. Fete Bohème.
MARCH ... ..."The Flash of Steel"... ... Woodhouse

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd, London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinee on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-15.

Business Manager ... ... BERNARD HISHIN.
Stage Manager ... ... FRANCIS SERLE
Assistant Stage Managers ... ARTHUR SEATON & MAURICE EDMONDS

Box Office (Mr. JOHN C. BROWN) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Prices:—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d.
Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Last Row, 6s.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s.
Gallery (unreserved), 1s.
Doors Open 7-45. Matinees 1-45. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

Mr. Wu."

On Thursday evening Mr. Louis Meyer reopened the Strand Theatre and presented the long-ago-announced Anglo-Chinese play, by Harry M. Vernon and Harold Owen, called "Mr. Wu." This is a curiously weird theatrical drama, in which the chief character, Wu Li-chang, a Chinese mandarin, is credited with a wealth, power and influence that most people would deny to an Emperor. In the first act we find Mr. Wu (the short name by which he is known in the play) returning from a voyage to discover that his only daughter, a girl surrounded by every luxury, has been deceived by the son of an English steamship director, who, accompanied by his family, is on a business visit to Kowloon.

* * * * *

The father of the gay young spark who has been making trouble in the great Chinaman's house, knowing nothing of his son's intrigue, was at a loss to understand the enmity of the mandarin. Nevertheless, he found himself foiled in all his speculations, found his plans fail everywhere, and that his property was being destroyed by some unknown agents. His son, too, had disappeared (captured by his enemy), and when at last the English director did discover who his foe was he found that he was no match for the inscrutable Eastern. Against his inclination he allowed his wife to make an appeal to Mr. Wu, and she, in the hope that it might lead to the recovery of her son, allowed herself to be persuaded into visiting the strange house where the young man lay a prisoner.

* * * * *

In the sinister-looking interior of the house the strong scene of the drama is enacted, and those who love a theatrical thrill will find plenty of it in the struggle of the mother to escape from the barred apartments of Mr. Wu's prison dwelling. It was all very much to the liking of the first night audience, which called loudly (but ineffectually) for the authors and cheered Mr. Matheson Lang to the echo for a singularly fine performance as Mr. Wu. I understand that a good deal of the dialogue was to be cut after the first performance. Its inordinate length made the second act drag. So the shortening process will make this play a much better, if a briefer, one.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

The Playhouse

NORTHUMBERLAND AVENUE.

LESSEE - - - - MR. CYRIL MAUDE

Special Matinee
28/11/13

Orch. Stall

E 70

To be retained

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

By arrangement with Madame LYDIA YAVORSKA

WEST STREET (Opposite the Palace Theatre), CAMBRIDGE CIRCUS, W.C.

Proprietors - - - - - - - - - THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Managing Director - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT JAY.
Lessee - - - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. DURRANT SWAN.

The Marriage of Columbine

A Comedy in Four Acts by

HAROLD CHAPIN.

Scaramouche	(A Clown of repute) -	Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Columbine - - - -		Miss LILIAN CAVANAGH
Tommy -	(Their Son) -	Master CHARLES WADE
Mr. George Salamandro - -		Mr. H. K. AYLIFF
	(By kind permission of Miss Lillah McCarthy and Mr. Granville Barker)
Mrs. La Bolaro - - -		Miss AGNES THOMAS
	(By kind permission of Mr. Frederick Harrison)
Alfred Scott -	(A local Printer) -	Mr. CHARLES KING
Jessie Poole -	(His Fiancée) - -	Miss BEATRICE YALDWYN
Bob	Servants at "The George"	Mr. JOHN ALEXANDER
Annie		Miss JOAN BLAIR
Mrs. Jollings - - -		Miss BLANCHE STANLEY

The action of the Play takes place in Dunchester, an old and respectable town.

Time - - - - The End of the 19th Century.

Miss Cavanagh's Dresses by Miss FRANCIS, 78 Duke Street, Grosvenor Square.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1913.

MISS TEMPEST'S SECRET.

STAGE DEBUT OF HER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

For one special matinée at the Playhouse yesterday Miss Marie Tempest presented a four-act comedy, "The Marriage of Columbine," by Mr. Harold Chapin, which, except for a Sunday evening performance by The Playactors' Society, was new to London. Miss Tempest took no part in yesterday's performance beyond watching it from a box. For this occasion she chose to play the silent and unseen part of Fairy Godmother by giving a formal début to a young actress, Miss Lilian Kavanagh.

To those few who were in the secret and knew that the girl with the wistful Irish face acting for the first time in London was the wife of Miss Tempest's only son the explanation of the greater actress's rapt attention and anxiety were explained. If the work Miss Kavanagh did yesterday pleased Miss Tempest nearly as much as it did the rest of the audience she had good reason to be content, and she evidently was content and happy, for when the girl had to come forward to be cheered Miss Tempest stood beside her holding her hand and looking very pleased.

MISS KAVANAGH AS COLUMBINE.
[Foulsham and Banfield.

This "Marriage of Columbine" has no involved plot, the folks who appear in it are simple, kindly people—just a circus clown in his lodgings on tour and with him his young wife, with her soft voice and gentle movements, and wavy black hair. Then there came one day a man who preached at Columbine, and told her she lived a life of sin. Columbine, fearing she was, as he said, accursed, went out of her home. It looked for a moment or two as if the author was inclined for tragedy. Fortunately it was not so, for his great, strong clown came after poor Columbine and dragged her from the arms of the other and took her home again to make her happy for evermore.

A simple little domestic drama, yet for all its freshness unlikely ever to become a great commercial success. It served admirably, however, to bring out a charming debutante.

J. W.

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1913.

The audience at the Playhouse on Friday afternoon may have been excused for not knowing exactly where they were, in a manner of speaking, for Miss Marie Tempest, who had arranged to produce at the Ambassadors Theatre, suddenly changed the venue, as the lawyers say, and, although the programme stated that the performance took place at the Ambassadors, it was at the Playhouse that it came off. Mr. James Waters, who looks after the records of the theatre so assiduously, must make a note of that.

"The Marriage of Columbine"

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

279

AMBASSADORS THEATRE,

WEST STREET (Opposite the Palace Theatre), CAMBRIDGE CIRCUS, W.C.

Lessees ... THE AMBASSADORS THEATRE, Ltd.
Director ... MR. DURRANT SWAN

On MONDAY, DECEMBER 1st, 1913, at 7.30, and FOLLOWING EVENINGS at 8.

ANNA KARENINA

A Play in Four Acts by JOHN POLLOCK from Tolstoy's Novel.

Characters of the Play in the order in which they appear.

Prince Cherbatsky	LEONARD SHEPHERD
Princess Cherbatsky	CONSTANCE GRAYSON
Princess Dolly Oblonsky (their daughter)	MARY GREY
Anna Karenina ...	LYDIA YAVORSKA
Prince Stiva Oblonsky (Dolly's husband)	ARTHUR SCOTT CRAVEN
Footman at the Cherbatsky's	EDWARD LYTTLETON
Constantine Levin	CHARLES DORAN
Countess Nordstone	MARGARET DUNBAR
Princess Kitty Cherbatsky (Dolly's youngest sister)	DORIS NORMAN TREVOR
Count Alexis Vronsky	NORMAN TREVOR
Prince Yashvin	BASIL RYDER
Captain Petritsky ...	W. WILD MOORE
Count Alexander Vronsky (Alexis' elder brother)	A. B. IMESON
Count Vronsky's English Trainer)	EDWARD VICTOR
Princess Tverskaya ...	MOIRA CREEGAN
Countess Lydia Ivanovna ...	MARGARET MARSHALL
Princess Miagkaya ...	ETHEL CANNON
His Excellency Mr. Karenin	HERBERT BUNSTON
Count Sintiavin ...	JOHN BURTON
Vronushka ...	ELSPETH DUDGEON
Serge Alexeyevitch ...	LISA STECKER
Footman at the Oblonsky's	RALPH KENT
Kapitonytch ...	VICTOR WILTSHIRE
General Prince Serpoukhovsky	LEONARD SHEPHERD

ACT I. ... The small Drawing Room at Prince Cherbatsky's, Moscow.
ACT II. Scene 1 ... Princess Tverskaya's Box at the Races at Krasnoe Selo, near St. Petersburg
Scene 2 ... Anna's Drawing Room in the Karenin's Villa at Peterhof
ACT III. ... Prince Stiva Oblonsky's Flat on the Quai Anglais, St. Petersburg ACT IV. ... In the Grounds of Anna Vronsky's House on the railway near Moscow.

There will be a Short Interval of Ten Minutes between each Act, and between Scenes 1 & 2 of Act II. a Short Interval during which the Audience are requested to keep their seats.

Madame Lydia Yavorska's Dresses by PAQUIN, 10 Dover Street, W.; and her Hats by LEWIS, Paris. Wigs by GUSTAVE.

The Ballet in Act I. arranged by M. Fokine of the Imperial Russian Ballet with the kind advice of Madame LYDIA KYASHT of the Empire Theatre.

The Scene of Act I. painted by Mr. KING ALEXANDER, of Acts II. & III. by Mr. BRUCE SMITH.

THE SINFONIA QUARTETTE under the Leadership of HERR OTTO MACHIG will play a Selection of Russian Music from Tchaikovsky, Rimsky Korsikoff, Glinka, and others.

MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager ... Mr. PETER PENDENNIS
Secretary ... Mr. F. W. HILL
Stage Manager ... Mr. A. B. IMESON
Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. ARTHUR JOHNSON

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a proscenium screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"ANNA KARENINA."

There is no good reason why Tolstoy's reputation as a novelist should suffer because the play made by Mr. John Pollock from "Anna Karenina," and presented by Mme. Lydia Yavorska at the Ambassadors Theatre last evening, seemed interminable.

The fascinating woman occupies but a small part of the story and with the exception of Count Alexis, for whom she left her husband, none of the people in the play arouses the slightest interest. Anna's tears, whims, and unreasonable jealousy are not particularly interesting, and last evening their volume made the audience smile. A good laugh or two in the play would have relieved its tedium.

There was a friendly reception for Mme. Yavorska when the play was over, and also for Mr. Norman Trevor, who succeeded in giving a sense of reality to the very indifferent part of the admirer of the unfortunate heroine.

J. W.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1913.

"Anna Karenina," with Mme. Lydia Yavorska in the title-rôle, was transferred from the Ambassadors Theatre to the Scala Theatre yesterday.

April 13. 1914

300

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1913.

IBSEN'S "THE WILD DUCK."

PRODUCTION AT ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

Translated by WILLIAM ARCHER.

Werle	HERBERT HEWETSON
Gregers Werle	E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Old Ekdal	H. O. NICHOLSON
Hialmar Ekdal ..	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Gina Ekdal	CLARE GREET
Hedvig	GLADYS WILES
Mrs. Sörby	EVELYN WEEDEN
Relling	BALLIOL HOLLOWAY
Molvik	NEVILLE GARTSIDE
Graberg	J. P. TURNBULL
Pettersen	ALLAN JEAYES

Ibsen one nowadays gets so little of—he has become already the classic of high renown and the equally high shelf—that the occasional revival, when it does happen, happens as a real and lucky windfall. If you do not recapture your first fine careless rapture over him you get perhaps what is better, the sense of quiet, rich enjoyment; you taste him as a fine wine improved by age, like Old Werle's Tokay. The Wild Duck, you find, has distinctly mellowed. You have no longer need to fuss and dispute about its "symbolism," partly because its symbolism has by this time been explained and popularized, instead of striking you as it did at first as a weird novelty, and partly, too, because symbolism now "dates" a work of art and lends it the added interest of an historical document. And as an historical document, a chapter in the spiritual biography of Ibsen, this Wild Duck has its further, and peculiar, significance in the "return" of Ibsen "upon himself" in the character of Gregers Werle, the fanatic who wrecks human happiness with his "claims of the ideal." Evidently Ibsen must have revelled in this satiric presentation of much that he had himself preached and anticipated with an almost mischievous glee the consequent bewilderment of his too ardent disciples. But need he have "rubbed it in" quite so hard? You ask this, because the man shows on the stage, under the glare of the lights, as almost a monomaniac, fit for the strait-waistcoat, and exasperates you, as you watch him, almost beyond bearing. Even upon the actor the monstrosity of the character has its effect. Mr. Harcourt Williams last night seemed—in the language of the police-court reporters—to feel his position acutely. On the other hand, Mr. Leon Quartermaine, the Hialmar Ekdal, seemed to feel his almost too gaily. He gave a clever picture of the sentimental poseur, who "pays himself with words," with many a reminiscence of Micawber ("caught young," say) and Harold Skimpole, but he had, too much, the air of delighting in the picture himself, of enjoying the humour of his own character. There were several good things in the rest of the cast—notably the bluff-breezy Relling of Mr. Baliol Holloway, the "fruity" Werle of Mr. Herbert Hewetson (why, by the way, was he made up like the famous deceased proprietor of an emporium in Westbourne-grove?), and the battered Old Ekdal of Mr. H. O. Nicholson. Then there was Miss Clare Greet, to be as terre à terre as Gina should be, but a little less comely and winsome, perhaps, than Gina very well might be, and a quite charming Hedvig in Miss Gladys Wiles. One or two of the performers were by no means word-perfect—a shortcoming inseparable, perhaps, from the rapid changes of a "repertory" enterprise—but an unfortunate shortcoming in an Ibsen play.

THE TIMES

ENGINEERING SUPPLEMENT.

LONDON, DECEMBER 3, 1913.

"LE MARIAGE FORCÉ."

MOLIÈRE'S PLAY AT THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

Sganarelle	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Geronimo	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Alcantor	RALPH HUTTON
Alcidas	DONALD CALTHROP
Lycaste	H. PEARSON
Pancrace	ARTHUR WHITBY
Marphurius	HERBERT HEWETSON
Dorimène	EVELYN WEEDEN
Gipsies	GLADYS WILES ELENOR LOVEDAY

"Of course I know Latin," said M. Jourdain when asked the question, "but proceed as though I didn't." Of course every one knows all about Le Mariage Forcé, but it will perhaps be well, nevertheless, to proceed as though they didn't. It was written as a ballet for the Carnival of 1664, set to music by Lulli, and Louis XIV. played a small part in it. Four years later Molière turned it into a one-act comedy. There are not wanting traces of the earlier in the later "state": e.g., Sganarelle in the comedy talks of visiting the "great magician," but nothing comes of it: the magician was an actual personage in the ballet, who had simply been dropped out. Turned into English, the comedy of course suffers a further change, but as it is in simple prose no great harm is done. The translator (or the Censor) has fought shy of one word, of which Molière was very fond. And Sganarelle's catalogue of his lady's charms has been a little cut down. That is all.

Sganarelle is wondering, like Panurge, whether he is wise to marry. What, at 52 years of age! says his friend Geronimo, and laughs in his face. (To be 50, in Molière's time, was to be a pantaloon with one foot in the grave.) When Dorimène, the lady of his choice, tells him she is marrying him to enjoy life and have complete independence, he begins to have misgivings. He applies for counsel to his two neighbours. learned philosophers both, but Pancrace, the Aristotelian, cannot listen to him because of his rage with a miscreant who has actually talked of "the form of a hat" instead of "the figure of a hat," while Marphurius, the Pyrrhonist, tells him that things are only appearances and that it is all one whether he marries or not. When he asks a couple of gipsy fortune-tellers whether as a married man he will be—what the translator has not translated—they laugh enigmatically; but a conversation he overhears between Dorimène and her lover leaves him in little doubt. He determines then to back out of his bargain, but Dorimène has a brother Alcidas, whose manners are of the most courtly but like those of the brothers who brought the Chevalier de Grammont back from Dover to marry their sister, peremptory. Fight or marry, is the choice Alcidas offers, and as Sganarelle cannot fight he elects—helped to his decision by thwackings—to marry. With its mixture of buffoonery, satire of pedants, and bitterness about matrimony, Le Mariage Forcé is typically Molièresque, and it was played in the right spirit last night by Mr. Nigel Playfair as Sganarelle, Mr. Arthur Whitby and Mr. Herbert Hewetson as the pair of philosophers, and Mr. Donald Calthrop as Alcidas. The Molière play was followed last night by Mr. Masefield's Nan, with Miss Lillah McCarthy in her old part and playing it as beautifully as ever.

303

THE GLOBE
THEATR.

6/12/1913
E
Orch. Stall
G 18
To be retained
No Hats allowed

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th, at 8. and EVERY EVENING at 8.30.

By Arrangement with Ethel Warwick and Gilbert Porteous

ALAN CAMPBELL

PRESENTS

"THE NIGHT HAWK"

By LECHMERE WORRALL & BERNARD MERIVALE.

Characters of the Play

The Hon James Daubenay	KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lady Mary Wynne	EILEEN MUNRO
Cynthia Constantine	MARJORY UNETT
Arthur Scudamore	ROLAND CUNNINGHAM
Jacob Banister	J FISHER WHITE
Mrs. Banister	LUCIE MILNER
Ruth Banister	JANE COOPER
Joe Barbage	EDMUND GOULDING
Polly	STAFFORD HILLIARD
Judge	HAMPTON GORDON
Madame Leoville	MADGE HAINES
Eve Montreson	MARY AGATE
Sally Sinclair	PEARL AUFRERE
Cave Clarice	GRACE NEWCOMBE
Billy Blake	LANCE GEORGE
Polly Piggott	LILLIAN CLARKE
Mary Pope	CICELY DEBENHAM

Act I — Daubenay's Flat in London. Evening.
Act II — Jacob Banister's House in East Brenton. One o'clock next morning.
Act III — Outside Banister's House. Afternoon 3 weeks later.
Act IV — Same as Act I. One week later.

The Play Produced by KENNETH DOUGLAS.

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. ANDREW LEVEY will play the following Selections during the evening:

SELECTION, "Gipsy Love" ... Lehar
SONG, "Je sais que vous êtes jolie" ... Lohr
OVERTURE, "Chout Kovana" (Ballet) ... Czibulka

BEFORE ACT II

SELECTION, "Keep Smiling" ... Caryll

BEFORE ACT III

TANGOS, (a) "Irresistible" (Argentine) ... Lopez
(b) "Sunrise" Valse ... Zucca

BEFORE ACT IV

PETIT CARACTERISTIQUE, "Le Cygne" ... Saint-Saëns
TANGO ARGENTINE, "Seduction" ... Arndt
MARCH, "The King" ... Jessel

Scenery painted by JULIAN HICKS from the designs by DENIS MACKAIL
Dresses by LUCILE, Ltd., and HANDLEY SEYMOUR, 47 & 48 New Bond Street, W.
Furniture by LIBERMANN & Co., Ltd.
Motor Hats by CARL, Ltd., 11 Conduit Street, W.
The Gramophone used in Act I. is supplied by The VELVET GRAMOPHONE COMPANY, Ltd., and is a "His Master's Voice" Table Grand.
The Plate used in this Production supplied by Messrs. MAPPIN & WEBB, Ltd.
Wigs by CLARKSON

FIRST MATINEE ON SATURDAY NEXT, DEC. 13th. AT 2.30.

Stage Manager — NORMAN [illegible]
Assistant Stage Manager — JAMES [illegible]
Advertising Manager — HAROLD HUTCHINSON
Treasurer — R. F. L. [illegible]

BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) open [illegible]
Telephone: 8722 Gerrard.

PRICES:
Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 3s. 1s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

General Manager - - - - - B. A. MEYER

Waters, J.
Plays

304

THE TIMES

MONDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1913.

It is the duty of criticism to recognize good intentions, however ineffectually they may have been carried out. There is a welcome attempt in The Night Hawk to express some old truths freshly, but the attempt has fallen short of complete success because the expression is too faint or, as people say, too "sketchy." These old truths are truths about regeneration. Truth No. 1: country air and the discipline of plain living and hard work may make a man of what was only a man-about-town. Daubenay, who has been turning night into day, living in his evening clothes, fooling at night clubs, and generally playing the waster, becomes through an accident the prisoner of a farmer, a martinet believing in divine inspiration, who makes him work for his food and bullies him for the good of his soul. Truth No. 2: to love an unsophisticated girl may be for the over-sophisticated a liberal education. Daubenay falls in love with the farmer's innocent daughter, learns to see the folly of the life he has been leading with the aid of her pure young eyes, and in her love finds his salvation. Of course these two truths are "older than any history that is written in any book," and none the worse for that.

Of the first there is a standing literary example in the Meredithian tale of the God-fearing and waster-regenerating Captain Jasper Welsh—an example which inevitably comes to the mind, and inevitably to the dramatists' disadvantage, for it shows, by comparison, how inadequately they have treated their farmer, Jacob Banister, how crudely they have presented him. Captain Welsh, with all his eccentricities, you can understand and love; Farmer Banister, with the same eccentricities, exhibited without redeeming touches, without real humanity, only disgusts. The second truth loses in point by the dramatists' rather unfortunate efforts to complicate the character of the farmer's daughter. To make her a picture of innocence shining out against a background of vicious folly was not enough for them; they must needs show her hankering after folly herself. Her first sip of champagne leads her to ask with childlike greediness for more; she would fain go dancing with the "night hawks," the band of noisy demireps that Daubenay has gathered about him; and at last she runs away from the farm, puts on the flamboyant "night-hawk" costume, and practically throws herself into Daubenay's arms. It is all because she is so touchingly innocent, the authors will say; but there is a point at which innocence ceases to be touching and becomes niaiserie. Perhaps, too, you are to add the influence of heredity, for the girl proves to be in the end the daughter of a too notorious mother. But this suggestion, which seems to be thrown in as an afterthought, only teases.

Thus you find in The Night Hawk the makings of a good play rather than a good play made.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA."

REVIVAL AT THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

Dec 6

By Bernard Shaw.

Sir Patrick Cullen ..	J. D. Beveridge
Sir Ralph Bloomfield Bonnington	Arthur Whitby
Sir Colenso Ridgeon ..	Ben Webster
Cutler Walpole	Nigel Playfair
Leo Schutzmacher ..	Michael Sherbrooke
Dr. Blenkinsop	Leon Quartermaine
Louis Dubedat	Dennis Neilson-Terry
Redpenny	J. Patrick Turnbull
The Newspaper Man ..	Neville Gartside
The Exhibition Secretary	H. Pearson
The Waiter	G. Jerome
Jennifer	Lillah McCarthy
Emmy	Clare Greet
Minnie Tinwell ..	Ross Johnson

The revival of The Doctor's Dilemma on Saturday night was welcomed with enormous enthusiasm. In fact, the evident popularity of this play throws some doubt on a theory, which is sometimes heard nowadays, to the effect that the drama of physical horror is superannuated. Clearly that kind of drama has only to be brought up to date in form to prove as fascinating as ever. Just as, in an age of judicial torture, spectators watched with fearful joy the putting out of Gloster's eyes, so we, in our own age, listen with equally fearful glee to Cutler Walpole's threat to extirpate the "nuciform sac" from all our population. We shudder deliciously when the three physicians huddle together, like the witches in Macbeth, to murmur of ptomaines, anti-toxins, tuberculosis, and phagocytes, and, after seeing the artist Dubedat done to slow death before our eyes by an eminent doctor, we leave the theatre, feeling, as did the hero of "Three Men in a Boat" after he had read the medical encyclopædia, the preliminary symptoms of all the diseases known to science.

To undergo these sensations is the first of the undoubted pleasures given us by The Doctor's Dilemma, and the second is to experience, when an eminent Court physician is portrayed as a bungling charlatan, exactly what our ancestors did when it was first suggested that a monarch might do wrong or a pontiff be led into error. The third, meanwhile, is to rock with laughter at the triumphant satire of the dialogue, and the fourth to treasure up its occasional jewels of blinding common sense. Thus occupied one has hardly adequate time to consider the dilemma itself—which is whether a doctor should assume the functions of ultimate justice, and regulate the care he gives his patients according to their relative moral, social, and artistic value, or whether, as the foolish old "B. B." suggests, he should regard them impartially as sections of the battlefield upon which disease and health are contending.

Among the performances which were new in the present revival two stood out with especial eminence, and secured an immediate verdict from the audience. One of these was Mr. J. D. Beveridge's rendering of the lovable old sceptic Sir Patrick Cullen, an impersonation with an indefinable grandeur about it, and the other was Mr. Arthur Whitby's playing of "B. B.," Sir Ralph Bloomfield Bonnington, one of the ripest pieces of humour which can be imagined. It seems unavoidable, however, in repertory work for the actors to be to some extent imperfect in their words. It is unfair, perhaps, to blame them for it, but the fact might well be taken into consideration when the merits of the repertory system are being estimated.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1913.

LONDON OPERA HOUSE.

CLOSED "UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE."

DRAMATIC DECISION.

A CIRCUS FAILURE.

With dramatic suddenness, the directors of the London Opera House Company, Limited, decided at the end of Saturday night's performance of the Society Circus to shut down the theatre. The following notice was exhibited on a board inside the stage door:—

Owing to a lack of public support, the run of the Society Circus will cease after Saturday, November 29, evening performance, and the theatre will remain closed until further notice.

Bills on the outside of the house advertising the Society Circus were blotted out and no advertisements for the coming week's entertainment appeared in the Sunday papers. A concert organised by the Sunday League was held last night, but none of the directors or managers of the London Opera House was apparently in the building.

The news of the closing down was received with consternation by the theatre's employees, some 300 of whom will be thrown out of work. The Amalgamated Musicians' Union is understood to be holding a meeting this morning to discuss the position of its members.

The record of the London Opera House has been a disastrous one financially. His first seven months in the London Opera House cost Mr. Hammerstein £45,000, he said. Yet he announced his intention of beginning again in the following November.

With the cheers of a great assembly ringing in his ears he sailed for New York, but there he thought better of his promise and that same November M. Ferdinand Akoun signed a contract to pay a rental of £12,000 a year for ten years, his scheme being to produce operettas, spectacular shows, pictures, and variety turns.

M. Akoun, however, severed his connection with the house early last February, and a lease was then taken by Mr. Clement Hobson, who formed a company known as the London Opera House, Limited. On the board of directors was Mr. L. A. V. Stanley, a grandson of the first and last Lord Taunton.

On May 28 last the theatre was sold by Mr. Oscar Hammerstein to Mr. Stanley, who has since directed the policy of the company of which he became chairman. The revue "Come Over Here" ran for 264 nights, and on November 5 Mr. Stanley said that he had engaged a circus to open on the 17th and that this circus, together with a company of midgets, would fill the bill until the turn of the New Year. After this Mr. Stanley promised a season of English opera by Mr. Thomas Beecham.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 14,

INSULT TO THE KING & QUEEN.

Harangued at the Opera Last Night.

WILD SCENE.

Interrupter Fights with the Ushers.

Last night Suffragettes took advautage of the presence of the King and Queen, who had returned earlier in the day from Chatsworth, to create an unprecedented and disgraceful scene at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, during the performance of "Joan of Arc." The disturbance was apparently intended as a protest against the rearrest of Mrs. Pankhurst at Dover a few hours before upon her return to England from Paris, where she had been on a visit to her daughter. The moment the curtain was lowered at the close of the first act three women in evening dress who were in a box opposite to that occupied by their Majesties stood up and displayed a banner bearing the words, "Women are being tortured in your Majesties' prisons." Then one of the women began to address some words to the King, beginning, "Your Majesty, I speak on behalf of Mrs. Pankhurst." Amid loud cries of indignation from all parts of the house, and hissing, and shouts of "Put them out," the three women protested against the torture inflicted upon women by order of the Government, and urged his Majesty to put an end to the present state of affairs by bringing pressure to bear upon the Government to give women the vote.

Thousands of Leaflets.

As they spoke leaflets came fluttering down from all parts of the gallery to the stalls. They came in showers and must have numbered thousands. On the leaflets were the words:

Men and women. Has it struck you that there are two kinds of justice here in England? A man who offends against the law for his principles is allowed to go free. Women who do the same thing are treated as criminals and tortured in prisons. Do you wonder that women are militant?

In spite of loud outcries and hisses and every indicatfon of disapproval, the women did not cease to shout in the direction of the royal box, and soon the audience were clamouring for the women to be put out. The King and Queen paid no attention to them, his Majesty continuing to gaze in the direction of the stage. About five minutes elapsed before the women were ejected.

This did not end the trouble, however, for as the three women were leaving the house shouts were heard proceeding from the gallery, and young women stood up and began to address themselves to the King and Queen. Attendants were quickly on the scene, but it was only with considerable difficulty that the interrupters were removed, one young woman, who had evidently studied the art of self-defence, putting up a stiff fight with the men who attempted to eject her. Much indignation was expressed at the conduct of the women, and it took the audience some little time to settle down.

W. D.

GARRICK THEATRE, W.C.
LOUIS MEYER presents

Every Evening at 8-30. Matinees Wed. & Sat., 2-30

VAUDEVILLE
THEATRE, STRAND, W.C.

BERNARD SHAW'S
GREAT CATHERINE

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16th, 1913, and

Every Evening at 8

Norman McKinnel & Frederick Whelen

PRESENT

Robina in Search of a Husband

An Absurd Play in Four Acts.

By JEROME K. JEROME.

The People of the Play in the order of their appearance:—

"The Doctor"	ERNEST G. COVE
Mrs. Mulberry	JEANNIE THOMAS
Dolove, a villager	F. J. RORKE
Kate Gamlett	WINIFRED BEECH
Robina Penniciucque	ROWENA JEROME
Lord Rathbone	HAROLD CHAPIN
A Postboy	F. ST. AUBYN
Horace Greenleaf	RICHARD EVANS
The Hon. Susan Raffleton	LILLIAN OGILVY WILLIAMS
Amos Jordan	EDMOND BREON
Inspector Flanelly-Jones	W. O. BILLINGTON
Jollyboy, a Policeman	CHRIS SIMPSON

Scene	At the sign of "The Dovecot"
Act I.	Thursday afternoon
Act II.	Friday mid-day
Act III.	Saturday afternoon
Act IV.	Saturday midnight

Time: The Present.

Miss Jerome's Dresses by Mrs. CALEB PORTER.

The Play produced under the direction of the Author.

An "Absurd Play."

Although there is no reason why Messrs. McKinnel and Whelan should not produce very light plays during their tenancy of the Vaudeville Theatre, it came as a surprise, I think, to the majority of the audience to find them presenting so artless a play as "Robina in Search of a Husband." The author of this blend of farce and sentiment is Jerome K. Jerome, and on the programme he describes it as "an absurd play in four acts." No one could quarrel with his description, for it is an "absurd play," and the general level of the acting inspired by it was far from high. Previous to being brought to London the piece had been toured in the country, and doubtless with success. The plot concerns two American girls in England who had been schoolfellows. One of them became suddenly very poor because she had lost her money in some speculation. The other was still rich, but like the girl in sentimental plays wanted to be loved for herself.

Robina's Inspiration.

From such material sprang the play. The poor American girl took a situation as a maid-of-all-work in an English country inn. The rich American girl by pure chance came alone to stay at the inn. She recognised her old schoolmate, and learned that in addition to losing her father and a home she had lost her husband on her wedding day. Poor Kate. Then rich Robina spun a romance of being pursued by a real live lord, and to prove that he was still after her she opened a telegram to the landlord from the nobleman saying he would arrive that evening. Robina had a streak of inspiration; she would change clothes with Kate, pretend to be the "slavey," and see how the amorous lord would act. Of course, when he did arrive he fell in love with Kate, and after three acts he discovered she was the girl he had married somewhere or sometime, when he was only a poor sailor lad in no expectation of falling in for a fortune and a title. Such was the story, and it seemed a very long one. The author's daughter, Miss Rowena Jerome played the part of Robina and gave promise of doing much better when she has more experience. At moments she is good, but the performance altogether is very uneven. The play had a friendly reception

J. W.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager ... SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

REPERTORY SEASON

Lillah McCarthy Granville Barker

This Evening at 8.15: Matinee, Saturday, December 20th, at 2.30

The Death of Tintagiles

A Play, in Five Scenes,

By MAURICE MAETERLINCK

Translated by ALFRED SUTRO

Tintagiles		ODETTE GOIMBAULT
Ygraine	Sisters of Tintagiles	LILLAH McCARTHY
Bellangère		VERA TSCHAIKOWSKY
Aglovale		H. O. NICHOLSON
Three Servants of the Queen		HERBERT HEWETSON BALIOL HOLLOWAY ALLAN JEAYES

The Music composed by VAUGHAN WILLIAMS. The Dresses designed by CHARLES RICKETTS.

INTERVAL 12 MINUTES.

The Silver Box

By JOHN GALSWORTHY

John Barthwick, M.P.	ARTHUR WHITBY
Mrs. Barthwick	ESMÉ BERINGER
Jack Barthwick	DONALD CALTHROP
Mr. Roper	RALPH HUTTON
Jones	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Mrs. Jones	IRENE ROOKE
Marlow	HESKETH PEARSON
Wheeler	JANET ROSS JOHNSON
Mrs. Seddon	FLORENCE HARCOURT
Snow	ALLAN JEAYES
A Police Magistrate	HERBERT HEWETSON
An Unknown Lady	SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Livens	H. O. NICHOLSON
The Relieving Officer	R. C. HARCOURT
The Magistrate's Clerk	J. F. OUTRAM
The Usher	G. JEROME
A Policeman	W. TEMPLETON

Act I. Scene 1 ... The Barthwicks' Dining-room. Night

Scenes 2 and 3 " " The next Morning

Between the Scenes the Curtain will fall for One Minute only.

Act II. Scene 1 The Jones' Lodgings, Merthyr Street. At half-past Two

The Curtain will fall for Two Minutes only.

Scene 2 ... The Barthwicks' Dining-room The same Evening

INTERVAL 10 MINUTES.

Act III. ... ... A London Police Court, At One o'clock

The Plays produced by GRANVILLE BARKER

With the indulgence of the Audience no calls will be taken by the Actors until the end of the Plays.

St. James's Theatre

E

17/12/13

Stall

F126

To be retained

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1913.

A MAETERLINCK TRAGEDY.

MISS McCARTHY IN "THE DEATH OF TINTAGILES."

M. Maurice Maeterlinck's play in five scenes, "The Death of Tintagiles," missed the full sense of the tragedy that lies in its swift and continuous action when it was presented at St. James's Theatre last evening. The whispering men and women seemed lost in it. The very draperies that took the place of painted scenes created a sense of space in which men and women moved without quite getting the effects of a tragedy in the making.

The story of the island castle, inhabited by a queen that none but her immediate servants in the great tower had ever seen, was weird enough. An old woman this, silent and implacable, who made war by assassins on the men of her family, so that her reign should not be endangered. She was a weird figure to imagine, but the author revealed no more of her than the power she displayed when she had within her toils the young brother of one of her victims.

Through those hurrying scenes of the legend we saw the plot working to its end—the destined victim, feebly fought for by those who loved him, seized by the stranglers, and done to death on the other side of an iron door, on which his distracted sister idly beat her hands.

It was a little ghastly, at moments impressive, but never as great as we felt it might have been. Perhaps the theatre was too large for it. It seemed as if it were so, yet Miss McCarthy was the one member of the cast who seemed able to interpret her part with power and make us forget that it was all acting.

M. Maeterlinck's play, which occupies the stage for about forty minutes, was followed by Mr. John Galsworthy's little masterpiece, "The Silver Box." It was admirably acted.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Licensee ALFRED BUTT.

On WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17th, 1913, at 8 o'clock, and Every Evening thereafter at 8.30.
FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20th.

MR. HALE HAMILTON

IN

THE FORTUNE HUNTER

By WINCHELL SMITH, Author of "Brewster's Millions."

(By arrangement with CYRIL MAUDE.)

A Comedy in Four Acts.

CAST.

Nathaniel Duncan ...	Mr. HALE HAMILTON
Henry Kellogg ...	Mr. WILLIAM BOYD DAVIS
George Burnham ...	Mr. G. MAYOR-COOKE
James Long ...	Mr. BRYAN G. POWLEY
Lawrence Miller ...	Mr. LAWRENCE PHILLIPS
Willie Bartlett ...	Mr. NORMAN YATES
Robbins ...	Mr. ROBERT AYRTON
Newsboy ...	Mr. JOHN A. WEYMOUTH

VILLAGE CHARACTERS.

Sam Graham ... (the Chemist)	Mr. FORREST ROBINSON
Mr. Lockwood ... (the Banker)	Mr. GEORGE TRAILL
Roland Barnett ... (the Bank Clerk)	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
Tracey Tanner ... (the Liveryman's Son)	Mr. C. DENIER WARREN
Pete Willing ... (the Deputy Sheriff)	Mr. FRED FORREST
Charles Sperry ... (a Commercial Traveller)	Mr. ARTHUR BRANDON
Watty ... (the Tailor)	Mr. E. W. ROYCE
Herman ... (the Errand Boy)	Mr. GEORGE SPELLVIN
Betty Graham ... (the Chemist's Daughter)	Miss MYRTLE TANNEHILL
Josie Lockwood ... (the Banker's Daughter)	Miss CLARA MACKIN
Angie Tucker ... (the Friend of Josie)	Miss CLARA COOPER

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES.

ACT I.	Henry Kellogg's Apartment; Time—July.
ACT II.	Sam Graham's Shop, Radville; Time—September.
ACT III.	Same as Act II.; Time—May.
ACT IV.	Grounds of the Graham home; Time—Same Evening as Act III.

Production by J. H. BENRIMO.

Scenery painted by WALTER HANN. Scenery built by H. THOMPSON & SONS.
The Chemist Shops in Acts II. and III. arranged by BOOTS CASH CHEMISTS, 182 Regent Street, W.
The Soda Fountain in Act III. arranged by CONSOL AUTOMATIC AERATORS, Limited, 23 Paul Street, Finsbury, E.C.
The Cash Register in Act III. supplied by the NATIONAL CASH REGISTER Co. Tottenham Court Road.
The Ladies' Cloak Room has been furnished with Toilet Accessories by BOOTS CASH CHEMISTS, 182 Regent Street, W.
Furniture in Act I. supplied by Messrs. OETZMANN Limited, Hampstead Road.

ORCHESTRA under the direction of HAROLD MOSS.

TANGO TEAS—A Play. MATINEES DAILY AT 3.30.

At which the following Artistes will appear:

Mr. GENE HODGKINS and Miss HAMMOND, the originators of the London Tango Craze.
THE MASQUES. DRUMMOND and Miss KATHLEEN DAWES.
(By kind permission of GEORGE EDWARDES, Esq.)
SASCHA PIALON, Imperial Russian Dancer, assisted by VERA ALCOTT. Pianist, TONY CASTLE.
Dress Parade of the Latest Parisian Dresses arranged by NIGEL, Ltd., 41 New Bond Street, W.
The Moss-Squire Septett, conducted by HAROLD MOSS, Esq., will play for the Tango Dances.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL PAGET | Stage Manager ... ... BRYAN G. POWLEY

"The Fortune Hunter." J.W.

If you like American plays you will like "The Fortune Hunter" at the Queen's Theatre. It is very funny in parts, and it is very American. The American language, which we all now understand more or less, is a never failing joy to those who understand it, and personally I must confess I would rather hear a countryman called a "yap" than hear him called a yokel. I love, too, the way in which sentiment gets knocked down by some farcical device ornamented by American language; but I must confess I do not like the bits where sentiment comes along in full carnival costume and obscures every other "issue," including the fun, the village pump, and the farmhouse. Now, "The Fortune Hunter," as I have already said, is very funny, but it is not funny all through. Sentiment comes in too often and in too large quantities. And oh, if only good Mr. Author, Winchell Smith, would hack out some of it and let us have more of the "yaps" I'll go again to see "The Fortune Hunter." The American players in the cast are really good—I mean clever—and particularly so are Mr. Forrest Robinson and Mr. Hale Hamilton. There was much applause on Wednesday night.

about a month later

CHEAPER SEATS.

Mr. Hale Hamilton had his largest audience on Saturday for "The Fortune Hunter" at the Queen's Theatre, following a reduction of prices. He said:

"It occurs to me that managers presenting bright, wholesome, amusing plays should advertise their attractions as holiday fare and so get their share of the holiday business. I have determined for the rest of the holiday season to charge popular prices at the Queen's Theatre, and so compete with the regular holiday plays. Therefore a 2s. pit, cheaper circle and balcony, and 7s. 6d. instead of half a guinea stalls will be my policy for 'The Fortune Hunter.' Business is good and there is no necessity to reduce prices, except that I want the young people to see the play."

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18th, 1913, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY SUBSEQUENT EVENING at 8.15,

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

THE GIRL WHO DIDN'T

A Musical Play in Three Acts

By ARTHUR WIMPERIS.

Adapted from the German of JULIUS KRAMMER and ALFRED GRUNWALD.

Music by

EDMUND EYSLER.

Characters in the order in which they appear.

Lucinda	Miss AMY AUGARDE
Hans Zimt	Mr. MORANT WEBER
Dolly	Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR
Hella Bruckner	Miss GRACE LA RUE
Herr von Basewitz (a Rich Berlin Publisher) ..	Mr. D. J. WILLIAMS
Baldrian (a Footman)	Mr. IAGO LLEWYS
Count Selztal	Mr. F. POPE STAMPER
Etelka Basewitz	Miss YVONNE ARNAUD
Lutz Nachtigall (a Poetaster in love with Etelka)	Mr. LIONEL MACKINDER
Ottakar Bruckner	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Pipelhuber	Mr. TOM A. SHALE
Wiedehopf (Majordomo at Buchenau)	Mr. ELIOT SKINNER
Dr. Rosenrot (a Lawyer)	Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Juliette (Typist to Dr. Rosenrot)	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM

The Lyric Theatre reopens to-night with a new version of "The Laughing Husband," which is being transferred from the New Theatre with its title altered to "The Girl Who Didn't." There are many newcomers to the cast, among them being Miss Yvonne Arnaud and Miss Grace La Rue. It is nearly eight years since the London run of a musical comedy has been interrupted to allow for revision of the piece and a change in its title. The manager to do this was Mr. George Edwardes, who, not being satisfied with "The Little Cherub," produced by him at the Prince of Wales Theatre in January 1906, altered the title—after a five months' run—to that of "A Girl on the Stage."

One wonders why "The Little Cherub" failed. Three of the small parts in that piece were played by Miss Zena Dare, Miss Gabrielle Ray, and Miss Lily Elsie.

"The Girl Who Didn't."

Those who were present at the first performance of "The Laughing Husband" at the New Theatre last October noticed a few changes in it when, with the title changed to "The Girl Who Didn't," it was transferred to the Lyric Theatre on Thursday evening. For one thing it now possesses American rag-time songs, and although it may be a matter of opinion, whether or not they improve this German musical play they do certainly suit the artist for whom they were introduced—namely, Miss Grace La Rue. One of her new coon songs did "surely" make the hit of the evening on Thursday, whereas when the play was running at the New Theatre the great big success of the play was made by Mr. Courtice Pounds with a German "wine" song. Alas, Mr. Pounds is not in the cast of the altered version, but there are many newcomers—many newcomers who are undoubtedly clever, but none with just his temperament and gift. The performance went well with Thursday's audience, very well indeed, for fortunately the grip which is so often taken out of Continental musical pieces has been retained in this. One of its best features is the wit of its dialogue, and one of its best memories the charm of Miss Yvonne Arnaud. J. W.

Act I. A Reception Room in Ottakar Bruckner's Flat in Berlin (Joseph Harker)

Act II. .. .. Bruckner's Country House at Buckenau (Walter Hann)
(A Year elapses between Acts II. and III.)

Act III. .. .. In Dr. Rosenrot's Office (R. C. McCleery)

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

Musical Director... ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

The four extra numbers, viz. :—"Mushrooms," "The Tango Dream," "When I was a Little Girl," and "Because I'm a Girl," written and composed by Miss ELSA MAXWELL.

Dresses worn by Miss Grace La Rue made by LUCILLE.

All Dresses, Head-Dresses and Hats worn by Miss Yvonne Arnaud, Miss Amy Augarde, and Miss Gaynor, and all Dresses for the Chorus Ladies in Act I. and the Afternoon Dresses in Act II., designed and executed by REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912), Ltd.

The Dresses in Act III. by Madame BEATRICE RAYMOND, 76 Regent Street, W.

Motor Coats in Act I. and Shooting Costumes and Shooting Suits in Act II. executed by Messrs. BURBERRYS, Haymarket, S.W. Hats in Act III. by MAISON LEWIS.

Gentlemen's Morning and Evening Dresses by Messrs. WALKER & Co., Sackville Street, W.

Furniture in Acts I. and II. by OETZMANN; in Act III. by Messrs. SPILLMAN & Co.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.

The "Steck" Piano used on the Stage kindly supplied by THE ORCHESTRELLE Co., Æolean Hall, New Bond Street.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. E. F. SAXON

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2. Commence 8.15; Matinees 2.30.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

B-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays.

MATINEES ONLY commencing FRIDAY, Dec. 19th, and EVERY AFTERNOON (excepting Saturdays).

By Arrangement with Alan Campbell

BERTRAM FORSYTH

PRESENTS

A Fairy Phantasy, entitled

"The Shepherdess Without a Heart"

Play by BERTRAM FORSYTH.
Music by FRANKLIN HARVEY.

MORTAL FOLK:

Kasper Peterkin	...	... E. W. GARDEN
Martha (his Wife)	...	FLORENCE HAYDON
Pip	their Grandchildren	... CHRIS. SAINT-EVE
Pippen		... GLORIA GOLD
Pippinette		... HERMA HILAIR
Old Simon (their Landlord)		... ERNEST COCKBURN
Nathaniel Piper (a Rent Collector)		... CYRIL CATTLEY

FAERIE FOLK:

Dreams	... ...	... BERTRAM FORSYTH
Cuckoo	... ...	... MERCIA CAMERON
Bonzo (a Clockwork Bear)		... HARRY HILLIARD
Little Brown (the House Mouse)		... VIOLA PARRY
Mrs. Little Brown (his Wife)		... JOAN DILLA
Pixie	their Children	MAI DEACON
Trixie		NORA EDWARDS
Blotch (that Image of Naughtiness)		... BERTRAM FORSYTH
Old Old (of the Grandfather Clock)		... KENNETH DENNYS
Pa Stork	... ...	HARRY HILLIARD
Ma Stork (his Wife)	... ...	DORIS HARDY
Freda	their Children	MAI DEACON
Olaf		NORA EDWARDS
Grizel	the Cats	CHARLES WAREHAM
Malkin		JAMES MUMMERY
Snow Boy	... ...	VIOLA PARRY
Snow Girl	... ...	DORIS HARDY
Fuel ...	... ...	... ERIC BASS
The Voice	... ...	... ...
Mother Goose ...	... ...	... JOAN DILLA
Father Christmas	...	... MOFFAT JOHNSTON
Christie (the Chimney Sweep)	...	BASIL SYDNEY
Christoel (the Dresden Shepherdess)		EVANGELINE HILLIARD

SOLDIERS, &c.:—Hilda Aubrey, Vera Ashfold, Dorothy Cartwright, Lilian Clarke, Phyllis Cooper, Gladys Fancourt, Milly Honig, Dorothy Singleton, Gwynne Wentworth.

Firstly - - - Within the Four Walls
Secondly - - - The Wonderful World Outside
Thirdly - - - Back again within the Four Walls

The Scenes are laid:-

THE QUARTETTE.

Marguerite Morton (Soloist). Rachélle Jerichower.
Aileen Elchen. Renée Gordon.

The Play produced by the Author and STAFFORD HILLIARD

Bertram Forsyth wishes to thank Cyril Cattley and Andrew Levey for their valuable assistance.

Dances arranged by LOUIS D'EGVILLE.

Orchestra under the direction of ANDREW LEVEY.

Scenery, Costumes, Furniture and Ornaments designed by GERALD FORSYTH.
Costumes executed by TOM HESELWOOD.
Scenery painted by WALTER JOHNSTONE. Wigs by CLARKSON
Electric Effects by T. J. DIGBY. Organ by MUSTEL.

Stage Manager ... ... CYRIL CATTLEY
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... ERIC BASS
Organist and Sub-Conductor ... LEONARD HEMMANS
Advertising Manager ... ... HAROLD HETHERINGTON

BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) open 10 till 10.
Telephone: 8722 Gerrard.

PRICES:
Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

General Manager - - - - - - B. A. MEYER

A Welcome Newcomer.

The fairy play entitled "The Shepherdess Without a Heart" (produced for matinées throughout the holidays, at the Globe Theatre on Friday, has simplicity, charm, and humour to recommend it. It is presented in three pretty scenes, and is full of quaint little touches and incidents that make it very entertaining for big people as well as children. The author, Bertram Forsyth, plays a part in it, and in addition to having some very charming young people in the company, there are Mr. E. W. Garden and Miss Florence Haydon to give it the help of their delightful and mature acting.

J.W.

THE GLOBE
THEATRE

19/12/1913
M
Orch. Stall
E15

To be retained.

3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1913
AT 7-45 AND
EVERY EVENING, AT 7-45

MATINEES, Boxing Day, Dec. 26 till Sat. Jan. 3 afterwards every Wed. & Sat. at 2-30

WALTER HOWARD'S SEASON

PRESENTING

ANNIE SAKER and ALFRED PAUMIER

IN THE NEW ROMANTIC PLAY IN FOUR ACTS,

ENTITLED:

The STORY of the ROSARY

By WALTER HOWARD.

Author of "Her Love Against the World," "The Lifeguardsman," "Prince and the Beggar Maid," "The Midnight Wedding," etc., etc.

Paul Romain ...	Captains in the Red Dragoons	ALFRED PAUMIER
Philip Romain ...		J. GRAEME CAMPBELL
Colonel Hildebrand	... ...	... JOHN NESBIT
Lieutenant Peterkin	of the Red Dragoons ...	GEORGE DESMOND
Lieutenant Hillstein		HUGH SELWYN
Trooper Smutz ...		...ARTHUR TERRY
Karl Larose ...	... ...	WALTER HOWARD
Prince von Sabran	... ...	E. W. THOMAS
Winkelstein ...	("Uncle") ...	PHILIP GORDON
Father Theodore...	... ...	J. W. EVELYN
Wilhemina	(Mina, the Colonel's Daughter)	... MAY DALLAS
The Mother Superior	... ...	AGNES KNIGHTS
Una Hillstein ...	... ...	MILLICENT HALLATT
Venetia von Sabran	... ...	ANNIE SAKER

Officers, Troopers, etc., of the Red Dragoons.

D-16
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

ACT 1, Scene 1 ...	THE BARRACKS OF THE RED DRAGOONS
Scene 2	The Officers' Quarters
ACT 2, Scene 1	THE CHURCH OF THE CONVENT
Scene 2	The Dragoons' Bivouac
ACT 3, Scene 1	THE PRIEST'S GARDEN
Scene 2	The Colonel's Home
Scene 3	Library at the Prince von Sabran's
ACT 4, Scene 1	THE COLONEL'S HOME
Scene 2	Mess Room of the Dragoons
Scene 3	Outside the Convent Church
Scene 4	The Priest's Garden

Incidental Music by G. Edward Jones. Scenery and effects by H. O. Richardson and Assistants. The Military Uniforms by Merris Angel and Son. The Nun's Dresses by Nathan's. Miss Annie Saker's Dresses by Madame Southwood, Albemarle Street, W. Wigs by Clarkson.

The Play produced by the Author.

Stage Director - - - - - - - - - - W. H. HALLATT

"THE STORY OF THE ROSARY."

Success of Romantic Military Play Last Night at the Prince's Theatre.

No form of stage play has a stronger hold on the great London public than melodrama, so it was not surprising to find the Princes Theatre filled to its utmost capacity last evening for the first performance in London of Walter Howard's "Story of the Rosary." A drama by this author presented in a large and comfortable theatre, and at popular prices, too, combined to make an irresistible attraction. There was no disappointment about it either. The play is good melodrama. Much better, in fact, than even those who love that class of play expect to see, and if it betrayed but little resemblance to life there is no necessity to quarrel with it. Who that goes to a theatre for melodrama expects or wants it to be anything like life as we see it every day?

Walter Howard, instead of real life, presents a military romance. The background is supposed to be an Austrian garrison town, and the hero is a captain in the Red Dragoons preparing to start for a war. How he marries a princess an hour before he goes out with his regiment and carries with him (to preserve him against danger) a rosary placed around his neck by the woman he loves furnishes the early part of the story. There was the enmity of a rival, too, to put new complications about his life, but being melodrama the hero of it had, of course, untold difficulties to solve, and in this instance he had perhaps more than the usual share, for he was not only left for dead on the field of battle, but when he did recover his enemies took him to some unknown land and put him to work in a mine. Few heroes go through so much as that. All thie time, too, while he was away, his wife waited in a convent, and had the gallant, stout-hearted fellow not got home on the night he did Venetia would have taken the veil of a nun never to leave the convent again. It was a fine end to a tempestuous dramn, a drama filled with many incidents to amuse and interest, and in every sense calculated to etimulate the audience and win their sympathy for a gallant hero and his princess.

Mr. Howard, who is manager as well as nuther, also acts in the play, and right well he acts. Besides staging his play very effectivcly he has got around him an usually good company. At the close of the play there were enthusiastic cheers for everybody, and the author-manager, although he said he could not make a speech, actually did so.

J. W

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

December 20

Every Afternoon and Evening at 2.30 and 8.45,

Mr. BRANDON THOMAS'S COMPANY

in the Famous Comedy

"Charley's Aunt."

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Col. Sir Francis Chesney, Bart., Late Indian Service		Mr. J. R. CRAUFORD
Stephen Spettigue, Solicitor, Oxford		Mr. JAMES E. PAGE
Jack Chesney	Undergraduates at St. Olde's College	Mr. GEOFFREY KERR
Charles Wykeham		Mr. GEOFFREY GILBEY
Lord Fancourt Babberley		Mr. PERCY CRAWFORD
Brassett, a College Scout		Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez from Brazil		...Miss ADA FERRAR
Kitty Verdun, Spettigue's Ward		Miss AMY BRANDON-THOMAS
Amy Spettigue, Spettigue's Niece		Miss GLADYS TOFT
Ela Delahay, an Orphan		Miss PAULINE HUGEN

ACT I. ... ... Jack Chesney's Rooms in College.

"When Pious Frauds are dispensations."—Hudibras.

ACT II. ... ... Garden outside Jack Chesney's Rooms.

"While there's Tea there's Hope."—Pinero.

ACT III. ... ... Drawing Room in Spettigue's House.

"Dinner lubricates Business."—Boswell.

Preceded each Evening by "MARUSA," An Episode in the Russo-Japanese War.

By BRANDON THOMAS. Music by EDWARD JONES.

General Sakovski ... (Commanding the Russian Division of the right flank at the Battle of Heikoutai)		Capt. Loyama ... (A Japanese Officer) ...	Mr. JAMES NEVILLE
		Auguste Lowemeyer (Marusa's Agent)	Mr. H. McKENZIE ROGAN
Capt. Rudivitch ... (His Aide-de-Camp) ..	Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON	The General's Orderley ... ... AND	Mr. PERCY ROGERS
Major Shojoro ... (A Japanese Officer) ...	Mr. ROBERTSON HARE	Marusa ... ... (A Dancer) ...	Miss VIVIAN VANNA
Two Sentries 5th Siberian Rifles, Japanese Soldiers, &c.

Scene—Interior of Bomb-proof Shelter in the Russian Lines.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

MORNING.—The Orchestra will be Directed by Mr. VERDI FAWCETT.

1. Selection ... ... "College Songs" ... ... J. L. Ivimey
   Introducing—1, Carmen—Etonese. 2, Wanderlied University. 3, Songs—Harrow. 4, Ducker, Harrow. 5, Eton Boating Song. 6, Left, Right—Harrow. 7, Forty Years on—Harrow. 8, Willow, the King University. 9, Io Triomphe. 10, Floreat—Rugby. 11, Old Towler—University. 12, Dulce Domum—Winchester. 13, John Peel—University. 14, There is a Tavern—Yale. 15, Upidee—Harvard. 16, Carmen Heriodum—Wellington.

2. a. Brazilian Tango "El Irresistible" ... ... Logatti
   b. Dance of ... "The Grasshoppers" ... ... Ernest Bucalossi
   c. Two Step ... "The Popinjay" ... ... Dora Coombs

3. Melodious Memories ... ... Herman Finck

EVENING.—The Orchestra will be Directed by Mr. EDWARD JONES.

1. Prelude ... ... "Marusa" ... ... Edward Jones
2. Selection ... "College Songs" ... ... J. L. Ivimey
3. a. Brazilian Tango "El Irresistible" ... ... Logatti
   b. Dance of ... "The Grasshoppers" ... ... Ernest Bucalossi
   c. Two Step ... "The Popinjay" ... ... Dora Coombs
4. Melodious Memories ... ... Herman Finck

General Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL BARTH
Acting Manager ... ... Mr. G. W. BOTELL } For Mr. Brandon Thomas

Stage Managers ... ... Mr. W. BANNISTER, Mr. McKENZIE ROGAN

Costumes by Maison Cottin, 14, New Burlington Street, W. Hats by Mirette and Maison Lewis.
Uniforms, &c., by Clarkson. Furniture by Messrs. Wolfe & Hollander. Cigarettes Supplied by Abdulla & Co., Ltd., 168, Bond Street, W.

COMEDY THEATRE,

W.

By Arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

Mr. H. BERNHARDT

PRESENTS

ALICE IN WONDERLAND

A Musical Dream Play in Two Acts,

Founded on Lewis Carroll's delightful stories "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass."

Book by SAVILE CLARKE. Music by WALTER SLAUGHTER.

ACT I.—"ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND."

The Mad Hatter	C. HAYDEN COFFIN	The Second Lobster	COLETTE BRETTEL
The Mock Turtle	JAMES HARCOURT	The First Fairy	NANCY MERCER
The Gryphon	CLIVE CURRIE	The Second Fairy	VERA GOODING
The March Hare	ECCA VAN LEER	The King of Hearts	POWIS PINDER
The White Rabbit	MADGE MOON	The Queen of Hearts	ANNIE HUGHES
The Caterpillar	ALBERT E. BENNETT	The Knave of Hearts	WILFRID STEPHENS
The Duchess	BESSIE ARMYTAGE	The Executioner	CHARLES HERSEE
The Cook	ELEANOR SCOTT	The Bunny	RITA GRIFFITHS
The Cheshire Cat	TESSIE PARKE	The Oyster Shell	CONNIE BROWNING
The Dormouse	AUDREY TREVELYAN	AND
The First Lobster	ARLETTE RAVENNA	Alice	LITTLE CORA GOFFIN

ACT II.—"THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS."

The Mad Hatter	C. HAYDEN COFFIN	Tweedledum	CLIVE CURRIE
The White Queen	ANNIE HUGHES	Carpenter	CLIVE CURRIE
The White King	WILFRID STEPHENS	Humpty Dumpty	CHARLES HERSEE
The Lily	MAUD ROLANDA	The Lion	ALEC HART
The Rose	ELEANOR NAINBY	The Unicorn	ALEXIA MADGE
The Red Queen	BESSIE ARMYTAGE	The Walrus	POWIS PINDER
The Red King	ALBERT E. BENNETT	Youth	BY HIMSELF
The First Oyster	TINY PASSOW	Jabberwock
The Second Oyster	VIOLET FAUCHEUX	and
Tweedledee	JAMES HARCOURT	Alice	LITTLE CORA GOFFIN

SPECIAL DANCERS.—Lobsters, Housemaids, Fairies:—Misses Nester Watkins, Sheila Dawn, Cynthia Goode, Doreen Richardson, Ivy Lloyd Dresden.

Rabbits, Oysters and Reporters:—Misses Nora Howard, Iris Goode, Carmena, Marjorie Roselle, Ella Victoria, Beryl Heanley.

Chessman, Humpty Dumpty Guards:—Misses Raven Wing, Maud Henson, Elsa Davis, Peggy Jordain, Kathleen Fletcher, Rose Berngarten, Bertha Lee, Beatrice Bellamy, Pauline Robinson, Nora Cotes, Gertrude Parke. Isolde le Roy, Amber Rex, Mabel Hassell, Leila Mackenzie, Margaret Edwards and Sylvia Cecil.

ACT I. ...	Scene 1	... ...	A Forest in Spring (Alice falls asleep).
ACT II. ...	Scene 2	... ...	A Glade in Wonderland.
	Scene 1	... ...	Through the Looking Glass.
	Scene 2	... ...	The Garden of Flowers.
	Scene 3	... ...	A Sea Shore.
	Scene 4	... ...	The Banqueting Hall.
	Scene 5	... ...	The Forest again as Act. I. (Alice awakes).

The Dance Intermezzo entitled 'Mr. Jollyboy," by Marjorie Slaughter, played during the Interval, can be obtained at the Theatre. Published by Frank Howard, 8 Exeter Street, Strand, W.C.

The Oyster Song sung by Mr. Coffin in Act II. especially composed for this production. Words by A. Horsepool. Music by Marjorie Slaughter.

Followed by A HARLEQUINADE (in Shadow).

The Play produced by LYNN NORGATE.

The Dances arranged by RUBY GINNER.

Stage Manager ...
Chorus Master ...	(For Mr. H. Bernhardt)	CHARLES HERSEE
		ALBERT E. BENNETT

Dresses by W. Clarkson. Scenery by Leolyn Hart.

Musical Director ...
Stage Manager ...	HERBERT E. HAINES
Business Manager	LAWRENCE WHITE
	LEONARD LILLIES

3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, :: W.C.

Proprietors ... ... Mr. & Mrs. FRANK WYATT
Sole Lessee and Manager ... CHARLES FROHMAN

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, 1913, at 2 o'clock.

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

AND EVERY DAY ONWARDS.

PETER PAN OR, THE BOY WHO WOULDN'T GROW UP

By J. M. BARRIE

The Music Composed and Arranged by JOHN CROOK

Peter Pan	... ...	PAULINE CHASE
Jas. Hook	... ...	GODFREY TEARLE
Mr. Darling	... ...	BASIL FOSTER
Mrs. Darling	... ...	NINA SEVENING
Wendy Moira Angela Darling	... ...	MARY GLYNNE
John Napoleon Darling	... ...	ALFRED WILLMORE
Michael Nicholas Darling	... ...	REGGIE SHEFFIELD
Nana	... ...	EDWARD SILLWARD
Tinker Bell	... ...	JANE WREN
Tootles	Members of Peter's Band	GERTRUDE LANG
Nibs		MARJORIE GRAHAM
Slightly		NOEL COWARD
Curly		PRUDENCE BOURCHIER
First Twin		DORIS McINTYRE
Second Twin		JOAN COULTHURST
Smee		GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey	Pirates	CHARLES TREVOR
Cookson		CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins		JAMES PRIOR
Cecco		WILLIAM LUFF
Jukes		JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler		JOHN KELT
		Messrs. A. STEVENSON, S SPENCER and W. HARBERD
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	HUMPHREY WARDEN
Tiger Lily		MARGARET FRASER
Braves, ANNA WALDEN, ALMA DUDLEY, MARGARET KING, GLADYS BRENDA, ETHEL WELLESLEY, TONIE EDGAR-BRUCE
Mermaid	... ...	DORA SEVENING
Baby Mermaid	... ...	MOYA NUGENT
Liza	... (Author of the Play) ...	MOYA NUGENT
Crocodile	... ...	D. BUCKLEY and F. W. CECIL
Ostrich	... ...	GORDON CARR

Pack of Wolves—E. GRATA, A. BROCKNOR H. KENT, A. WILLMER, F. MILLER, GORDON CARR

Act I.	The Nursery
Act II. Scene	The Never, Never, Never Land
Scene	The House we built for Wendy
Act III.	Marooner's Rock, or the Mermaid's Lagoon
	(Showing an average ten minutes in Peter's Life)
Act IV.	Our Early Days
Act V.	Our Home under the Ground
Scene 1.	Home, Sweet Home
Scene 2.	The Pirate Ship
Scene 3.	A last glimpse of the Redskins
Scene 4.	The Nursery
Scene 5.	Outside the House
	The Tree Tops

The Play produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT

The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.
The Flying Machines supplied and worked by G. KIRBY.
Stage Mechanist, H. THOMPSON.
Electrician, A. EARNSHAW.
Property Master, W. BERDICK.
Miss NINA SEVENING'S Costumes by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR and Miss MARY GLYNNE'S by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

CHARLES FROHMAN Presents

QUALITY STREET

A Comedy in Four Acts, by J. M. BARRIE

Miss NINA BOUCICAULT, Miss CATHLEEN NESBITT

By arrangement with Lillah McCarthy and Granville Barker

Mr. GODFREY TEARLE, Etc.

General Manager ... ...
Stage Manager ... FRANK SAKER | Musical Director ... JOHN CROOK

W. LESTOCQ

JAMES W. MATHEWS

D. Y. T.
23/12/1913
M
Orch. Stall
E19
No

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1913.

PETER PAN, 10.

SIR JAMES BARRIE IN A BOX WITH CHILDREN.

"Peter Pan" came back to the Duke of York's Theatre yesterday afternoon, as it was his tenth appearance there, he is now nine years old in stage history. Time, however, has played no tricks with Peter. He is still as youthful as ever, and yesterday many of the friends who first made his acquaintance in the Christmas holidays of 1904 were again present to welcome him.

Sir James M. Barrie, Peter's dramatic father, was one of the spectators. He has been "Peter" every year during those London visits, but yesterday whenever the curtain was up, and the lights were low he was to be discovered standing up in the shadows of a box peeping at the performance over the heads of your children.

This reception of all the people in this adventure of the boy who wouldn't grow up was enthusiastic. Every principal character had a cheering welcome, even the light that represented Tinker Bell. There was applause, too, for Peter's shadow, wild cheers for the dog Nana, a little cheer for the crocodile, and a very storm of applause for the desperate, most bloodthirsty, and best beloved pirate that ever kidnapped children, and the laughing ferocious Smee, impersonated, as he has been every year, by Mr. George Shelton.

J. W.

3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

"HULLO, TANGO!"

A HIPPODROME REVUE

Written by MAX PEMBERTON and ALBERT P. DE COURVILLE (Authors of "Hullo, Ragtime!").
Music by LOUIS A. HIRSCH (Composer of "Hullo, Ragtime!"
Lyrics by GEORGE ARTHURS.
Costumes specially designed by LEON BAKST.

CAST:

Ethel Levey
Shirley Kellogg
Julia James
Teddie Gerrard
Isabell D'Armond
Madge Melbourne
Harry Tate — Irene Vivien
George W. Monroe — Eileen McCarthy
Harry E. Fisher
Frank Carter
Morris Harvey
Gerald Kirby
Jamieson Dodds
Eric Roper
Lawford Davidson
Little Ganty

Scene 1—The Fourteen Hundred Club
" 2—The Golf Links
" 3—Exterior of "The Ladies' Paradise"
" 4—"The Ladies' Paradise"
" 5—At Hendon
" 6—Exterior of Olympia
" 7—The International Horse Show
" 8—Exterior of a Cafe in the Bois de Bologne, Paris
" 9—Pavillion Armenonville, Paris

Auxiliary Costumes designed by MARCEL, Executed by PAQUIN, JAYS, REDFERN, ZIMMERMANN, RICHARD SOEURS, MARY FISHER, ALIAS, SIMMONS, HUBERT FENN and SWANN & EDGAR. The whole of Miss Kellogg's dresses specially designed and made by LUCILLE. Footwear and Hosiery by H. & M. RAYNE. Wigs by GUSTAVE. Properties by J. A. FRASER. Gentlemens' Hats supplied by SCOTTS, LTD. Hosiery by G. L. ARCHER (opposite The Hippodrome).

The Alterations, Re-decoration and Re-furnishing of the Theatre carried out by HAMPTON & SONS, Pall Mall, London, from Designs and under the Supervision of T. DUNCAN RHIND, Edinburgh.

LONDON HIPPODROME.
Tues.
Dec. 23
Orchestra Stall
28

Musical Numbers

1. Opening Chorus - - Ensemble
2. "Get Out and Get Under" - GERALD KIRBY and Chorus
3. "London Town" - - SHIRLEY KELLOGG and Chorus
4. "The Tango Girl" - - ETHEL LEVEY and Chorus
5. "The Dapper Little Flapper" - - - FRANK CARTER and Chorus
6. "What am I going to do to make You Love Me?" - SHIRLEY KELLOGG and GERALD KIRBY
7. "Come on Over Here" - ETHEL LEVEY and Chorus
8. "Don't Ask Me to be Good when I'm Away from Home" FRANK CARTER, ISABELL D'ARMOND and Chorus
9. "There's an Aeroplane Air about You" - - - ETHEL LEVEY and HARRY TATE
10. "The Horse-show Girl" - JULIA JAMES and Chorus
11. "The Hunting Song" - Beauty Chorus
12. "Let Me Mark Your Card" LITTLE GANTY
13. "Arab Love Song" - - JAMIESON DODDS
14. "The Flower Garden Ball" SHIRLEY KELLOGG and Chorus
15. "Peg o' My Heart" - - ETHEL LEVEY and JAMIESON DODDS
16. "Be-bee" - - - TEDDIE GERRARD, MADGE MELBOURNE, GERALD KIRBY & FRANK CARTER
17. "Who's the Lady?" - - SHIRLEY KELLOGG and Chorus
18. "Melinda's Wedding Day" ETHEL LEVEY, FRANK CARTER and Chorus
19. "The March of Progress" - SHIRLEY KELLOGG and Chorus

FINALE.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

TWICE DAILY, at 2 and 7-30.

THE LYCEUM CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME,

BABES IN THE WOOD

Written by NEWMAN MAURICE. Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music specially composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, WILLIAM HOBBS, J. SOAMES, and LYCEUM STUDIO. Mechanical and other effects by THOMAS REES.

Properties by WILLIAM CRISP. Electrical and other effects by JOHN WATERS

Custumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.

The Ballets invented and arranged by MDLLE. ROSA.

Characters:

Marmaduke, the Squire's Son	Mr. Harry Weldon
Squire Snatchall	Mr. Fred Ingram
Stopum and Copum	Woodhouse & Wells
The Good Fairy	Miss Ivy Moore
Robin Black Breast	Miss Elsie Farman
Spirit of Flowers	Miss Grannie Pickford
Tommy Tucker	Master Sydney
The Squire's Chef	Zellini
John, William, Henry ... The Squire's Servants	The Three Comerfords
The Sheriff	Miss Olive Plant
and
Maid Marian, The Squire's Ward ...	Miss Daisy James
Rob and Plunder } The Bold Robbers ...	Alexandre and Hughes
Baron Goodheart, The Father of the Babes	Mr. Percy Baverstock
Mr. Mortarboard, of The Village School	Mr. Henry G. Wright
Mr. Blackboard	Mr. Fred De Vere
Benbow, Archerdean, Miller } Followers of Robin Hood	Miss Flo Edwards, Miss Maggie Lester, Miss Rose Elsworthy
Mrs. Century, The Oldest Inhabitant ...	Mr. Harry Gardner
Dorothy	Miss Florence Rand
Will Scarlett	Miss Florence Sweetman
Winnie and Bertie } The Babes...	Ray and Zack
and
Robin Hood, The Outlaw	Miss Jane Eyre

and numerous others.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

PART 1.

Scene 1	Home of the Fairy Birds
Scene 2	THE VILLAGE OF APPLEDALE
Scene 3	School Room
Scene 4	The Blue Lion
Scene 5	Outside the Squire's Castle
Scene 6	A Room in the Castle
Scene 7	Froggyland
Baby Frogs and Papa Frog - THE THREE COMERFORDS.
Scene 8	A Trip to Fairyland
TABLEAUX	Where Flowers Bloom and Fairies reign Supreme
GRAND BALLET	A Dream of Fairyland

Speciality Dances by the LOTTIE STONE TROUPE.
La Petite Danseuse, GRANNIE PICKFORD.

ROBERT ROBERTY IN LA DANSE MERVEILLEUSE.

Ballet arranged by MDLLE. ROSA. Music composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Interval about Twelve Minutes.

PART 2.

Scene 9	The Room in the Castle Zellini, the Mysterious Chef.
Scene 10	On the Road to the Forest
Scene 11	THE DEPTHS OF THE FOREST
BALLET	The Birds from Far and Near
Scene 12	At the Gates of the Squire's Castle
Scene 13	Another Part of the Forest
Scene 14	THE PALACE

CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE.

The Lyceum Clown	Mr. Harry Gardner
Pantaloon	Mr. Fred De Vere

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

TWICE DAILY at 2 & 7-30.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH
Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - LOUIS MEYER

DECEMBER 26th and DAILY at 2.15 (MATINEES ONLY)

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S PRODUCTION
(3rd YEAR)

WHERE THE RAINBOW ENDS

By CLIFFORD MILLS and JOHN RAMSEY

Music specially composed by Mr. ROGER QUILTER

Characters:

Rosamund Carey	Miss ESME HERSEE
Crispian Carey	Master HAROLD FRENCH
Jim Blunders	Master ERIC RAE
Betty Blunders	Miss ELVIRA HENDERSON
Cubs	Master GUIDO CHIARLETTI
William	Master ROBERT CHAPMAN
Matilda Flint	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Joseph Flint	Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
Schlapps	Mr. HENRY MORRELL (By kind permission of Sir Herbert Tree)
The Genie of the Carpet	Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN (By kind permission of Mr. Alan Campbell)
St. George of England	Mr. REGINALD OWEN (By kind permission of Mr. Tom B. Davis)
The Dragon King	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Dunks	Mr. HUGH OWEN
The Sea Witch	Miss MONA HARRISON
Captain Carey	Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN
Mrs. Carey	Miss IVY WILLIAMS (By kind permission of Mr. Tom B. Davis)
The Slacker	Mr. SYDNEY SHERWOOD
The Slitherslime	Mr. A. CHARLWOOD
Dragon Sentry	Mr. F. DALLAS CAIRNS
Spirit of the Lake	Miss GRACE SEPPINGS
AND
Will o' the Wisp	Miss MAVIS YORKE

Flower Fairies, Dragon Flies, Water Lilies and Rainbow Children :—Iris Witte, Phyllis Goy, Molly Burton, Peggy Foster, Zenia Lynfeld, Dorothy D'Arcy, Nora Robinson, Sybil Harvey, Rosemary Bamber, Dorothy Fenwicke, Joyce Robey, Olga Warneford, Phyllis Simonson, Kathleen Macklow, Grace Turner, Ruth Block, Marjorie Benbow, Gladys Borcham, Saza Putfarcken, Elsie Charpentier, etc.

Elves, Toads, Hyenas, etc. :—John Ekins, Philip Bates, Jack Renshaw, Leonard Churcher, Robert Chapman, Maurice Briar, Wilfred Thorpe, George Woodhouse, Ed. Holton, Freddie Renfree, Walter Leadbetter, Christopher Frere, Teddie Hayward, Charlie Wade, John Proctor.

Dragons :—W. Brown, B. Butler, A. Charlwood, P. Digan, J. Head, George Wyley.

Dances arranged and children trained by MISS ITALIA CONTI.

General Manager (For Mr. Hawtrey) Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD.

MATINEES ONLY

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

Mr. J. Waters

Presence on

's

BOXING-NIGHT

Friday Evening, Dec. 26th, 1913

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK

To witness the Production of

The

Sleeping Beauty
Re-awakened

A FAIRY TALE

BY

GEO. R. SIMS and ARTHUR COLLINS

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

T.R.D.L.
26/12/1913
Retain this and the other which is the Voucher for One Seat only and does not admit to the Theatre
Row E
No. 1
Orchestra Stall

On BOXING-NIGHT, Friday, December 26th, at 7

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY RE-AWAKENED

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	Duke of Monte Blanco
Mr. WILL EVANS	,,	Pompos { Nemo's confidant, formerly Chancellor to Monte Blanco
Mr. WILFRID DOUTHITT	,,	Auriol
Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY	,,	Duke Nemo
Mr. STANLEY LUPINO	,,	Finnykin, a foundling
Mr. ARTHUR POOLE	,,	Jacques, a peasant
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	A Monkey

Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON	as	Princess Marcella (Beauty)
Miss RENÉE MAYER	,,	Puck
Miss GLADYS TREVOR	,,	Zizi, a Dairy Maid
Miss ALICE CHARTRES	,,	Anarchista { Monte Blanco's Second Wife
Miss MAY HANNAM	,,	Jeanne, Jacques' Wife

Mr. WILLIAM GREEN	as	Gaga
Miss CARRIE MURRAY	,,	Beauty's Chaperone
Miss MARIE LOVELL	,,	The Equerry
Miss BARBARA KEPPELL	,,	Goldstick
Miss R. RAYMOND	,,	Silverstick

Fairy Godmothers:

Miss GWEN FOTHERGILL
Miss LILIAN CRIPPS
Miss LILY MARCHEMONT
Miss FLORENCE VAUGHAN
Miss AMY PRESTON
Miss MABEL ROSS

Courtiers:

Mr, E. ARUNDEL
Mr. H. BALDWIN
Mr. L. ASHDOWNE

Witches:

Mr. E. MORGAN
Mr. EDWARDS
Mr. ODNIL

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PART I.

Scene 1. THE WITCHES' DELL

Scene 2. ROOM IN DUKE NEMO'S CASTLE } C. Formilli

Scene 3. THE PRINCESS'S GARDEN

Scene 4. BORDERLAND Bruce Smith

Scene 5. THE PALACE GATES } Joseph Harker

Scene 6. BEAUTY'S DREAM

Scene 7. BEAUTY'S AWAKENING } R. McCleery

PART II.

Scene 1. THE BLUE LAGOON

Scene 2. A MOUNTAIN CHÂLET } Joseph Harker

Scene 3. THE PINE FOREST

Scene 4. IN THE PALACE } Bruce Smith

Scene 5. DUKE OF MONTE BLANCO'S PALACE

HARLEQUINADE:

Scene 1. A STREET

Scene 2. A COUNTRY INN } Bruce Smith

Clown - - WHIMSICAL WALKER

Pantaloon, STEPHEN ASHER
Harlequin, GEORGE RAY
Columbine, JESSIE VOKES
Policeman, W. GREEN
Swell, F. MAYNARD
Shopman, G. EDWARDS

All the Costumes Specially Designed and supervised by COMELLI.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Secretary - R. H. LINDO
Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS
Business Manager - SIDNEY SMITH

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

NEW THEATRE

On Tuesday, December 30, 1913, and every evening at 8.30,

FRANK VERNON

Presents:

The Poor Little Rich Girl

A Play of Fact and Fancy by ELEANOR GATES.

The characters are given in the order of their appearance.

IN FACT.		IN FANCY.
Dancing Master	Mr. CLARENCE BLAKISTON	Ducks and Drakes
German Teacher	Miss MAY LAARHOVEN
French Teacher	Miss PEGGY TANDY
Music Teacher	Miss JOSSET ELLIS
Potter (the Butler)	Mr. GEORGE MALLETT	Snake-in-the-Grass	Miss HELEN HAYE
Miss Royle (the Governess)	Miss FLORENCE LLOYD	Two-Face Thing
Jane (the Nurse)	Miss STEPHANIE BELL	The Poor Little Rich Girl
Gwendolyn	Mr. J. COOKE-BERESFORD	Big Ears
Thomas (the First Footman)	Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN	The Piper
Plumber	Mr. ERNEST HENDRIE	The Man who makes Faces
Organ Grinder	Miss EVELYN WEEDEN	The Bee Woman
Mother	Mr. LIONEL ATWILL	The Money Man
Father	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY	The Hobby Rider
Doctor	Miss HELEN GREEN
First Society Woman	Miss ROSEMARY GREVILLE	They
Second Society Woman	Miss DOROTHY WILLOUGHBY
Third Society Woman	Mr. PERCY MARMONT
First Society Man	Mr. PAUL WYNTER	The Breaker
Second Society Man	Mr. HERBERT JARMAN	Heels over Head
Broker	Mr. FRANK G. DUNN	Live Bear
Policeman	Mr. EDWARD SILLWARD	King's English
Teddy Bear	Mr. EDMUND KENNEDY	Little Bird
	Mr. SIDNEY LEIGHTON

The Play is produced by Mr. FRANK VERNON.

The Scenes are:

ACT I.—FACT. Scene 1—The Hall in Gwendolyn's House. Scene 2—FANCY—The Road to the Tell Tale Forest
ACT II.—FANCY. Scene 1—The Tell Tale Forest. Scene 2—The Land of Lights. Scene 3—Robin Hood's Barn
ACT III.—FACT. Scene 1—Gwendolyn's Nursery. Scene 2—On the Road to Johnnie Blake's

Intervals—After Act I., Ten Minutes. After Act II., Six Minutes.

The Scenery is designed by GEORGE F. KRUGER. The Music by NORMAN O'NEILL.

The Scenery is executed by Mr. G. Sackmann, Mr. Phillip Howden, and Mr. Francis H. Bull.
The Dresses worn by the Society Ladies by Mrs. Gorton, South Molton Street. The dress worn by Miss Haye by Mrs. Caleb Porter.
Furs by Bradley. Special Dresses by Messrs. Nathan and F. C. Labhart. Furniture by Spillmann & Co. Wigs by Clarkson.

On Tuesday evening at the New Theatre the much-paragraphed American play by Miss Eleanor Gates, entitled "The Poor Little Rich Girl" was presented for the first time in London. It is described on the programme as a play of fact and fancy, but it might perhaps have been more correctly described as an American play of sentiment about very little. In its own country it had a very considerable measure of success, and at the New it met with a friendly reception. It is the story of a sad and lonely little girl who is left entirely to the care of servants by a society-loving mother and a money-grubbing father, but unfortunately the situation as the play realises it is not convincingly made out.

Much Ado about a Dream.

The story of the poor little rich girl depends to a very considerable extent on a dream of the little one that follows the taking of a drug administered by a careless nurse. In this sleep vision are enacted the various incidents of the child dream, and we see the people known to her in life taking the fantastic forms of her youthful imagery. It was all very pretty, fanciful, and slight, and the manner of presenting the pictures was, if not wholly original, at any rate fairly effective. The acting of the play was all round quite adequate, Miss Stephanie Bell bringing much charm to the portrayal of the young heroine. Mr. Ernest Hendrie and Mr. Malcolm Cherry were also well cast, and pity it was the former (one of our very best character actors) had not more to do.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1913.

LARGE THEATRE PROFITS.

Managers' Success in Gauging What the Public Wants.

BY OUR THEATRICAL CORRESPONDENT.

For the theatres 1912 was a good year; 1913 has been better. The permanent, recognised, managements of the London theatres have had a prosperous twelve months. The crop of failures that was cultivated was not of their sowing.

"The amateur" manager with a backer—sometimes an individual, sometimes a syndicate—invariably produced failures in 1913, but the men with a knowledge of the theatre and a common-sense estimate of what the public wants have good reason to be satisfied. Women in theatrical management have had a success, maybe two, but that is more than can be claimed by any of the three noblemen who financed London theatrical ventures this year.

One manager who is running a successful play produced by him nine months ago declares that the English drama can be saved only by founding a repertory theatre, and he invites a thousand kind friends to subscribe £25 each annually for three years to enable this to be done. Twelve months ago this same manager took off another play after a run of over 600 performances. If he goes on showing more such examples of the ruin of the English drama he will get unlimited offers of money from friends anxious to share in the profits of long runs.

The theatres trading as limited companies all paid dividends in 1913; so also did the variety theatres. Musical plays are always spoken of by those who know nothing about them as being very easy to produce, and almost always "certain winners." As a fact, they are more difficult to produce than any other class of stage play; and they can lose money, too. One London management lost £16,000 this autumn with musical comedy. Another lost nearly £10,000 in the same period. Each can survive the loss.

The Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1880.

Circulation larger than that of any other Dramatic or Variety paper.

Offices:
16, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.
Telephones: Gerrard 2992 and 5213.
Telegrams: "THE STAGE, LONDON."

LONDON, THURSDAY, FEB. 12, 1914.

REES v. MELVILLE.—ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT.—JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANTS.

The hearing of the action, before Mr. Justice Warrington in the Chancery Division, by Miss Rosemary Rees, claiming damages for alleged infringement of her rights in The Beggar Bride by Messrs. Walter and Frederick Melville in their production of The Beggar Girl's Wedding, was concluded on Thursday last. Mr. R. Younger, K.C., Mr. G. C. Rankin, and Mr. R. G. Finclater, instructed by Messrs. Nordon and Drury, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. P. G. Lawrence, K.C., Mr. H. Terrell, K.C., M.P., and Mr. Macgillivray, instructed by Messrs. Redfern, Hunt, and Co., for the defendants.

Mr. J. B. Mulholland said there was nothing that appealed to him as original in either of the plays in the case.

Mr. G. A. Redford, who for some time was Examiner of Plays, was asked whether, having read the two plays in this action, he found anything original which he had not seen before in the plaintiff's play. Witness replied that there was nothing strikingly original in those plays.

JUDGMENT.

His Lordship, in giving judgment, said the question he had to determine was whether the defendants had performed the plaintiff's work or any substantial part thereof in public. The question was really a question of fact. He thought there was no dispute about the law. He wished only to point out, as Mr. Justice Sargant pointed out in "Corelli v. Gray," that the position of the owner of copyright was not the same as the position of an inventor who had obtained a patent. A patentee had an absolute monopoly of the right to make use of and exercise an invention within certain limits, and if anybody used that invention, though he might have arrived at the result by an independent course of investigation altogether, he was infringing the patent. But in the case of copyright it was not so. It had been admitted over and over again that it was possible for the same result to be arrived at in the case of copyright from independent sources, and in that case the fact that the defendant produced from that independent source something which was like the plaintiff's work would not be an infringement of copyright. He was quite satisfied of the truth of the defendant Mr. Walter Melville's statement that he had not before him at the time he wrote his play, in any material form whatever, the plaintiff's play or any sketch of it. He did not believe that he consciously took the plaintiff's play or any part of it, and he had to decide whether, on the facts, he had taken a substantial part of the play. The two plays, except for one matter, were as different as two plays of that class could well be. His Lordship, having pointed out very material differences in the structure of the plays, passed to what he called the really serious and important part of the plaintiff's case. The plaintiff said not so much that the defendant had performed her play as that he had performed a substantial part of it. What did that come to? The plaintiff's play started off with the idea of a beggar girl marrying a rich young hero. Had the defendant, by taking the story of the marriage of the hero to a beggar girl, which was the fundamental idea of both plays, and performing a play containing that incident, performed a substantial part of the plaintiff's play? His Lordship did not think he had; he thought he had performed his own play. The idea of a beggar girl marrying a rich man was nothing new, and the rest of the incidents surrounding it, and the mode in which it was carried into effect, were most materially different in the plays. In his opinion the defendant had performed his own play, and the materials for it were drawn from his own experience in the profession in which he had been engaged all his life, and from his own powers of invention, sharpened as they must have been by that experience. Though it was quite possible that the fact that he had read and seen performed the plaintiff's play might have been, as he admitted, a part of that experience, it was impossible for his Lordship to come to the conclusion, having read the two plays, that in performing the Beggar Girl's Wedding the defendant performed anything but his own play. It was substantially constructed independently of the plaintiff's play. The plaintiff's case must necessarily fail, and the action must be dismissed with costs, subject to this qualification, that the defendants, in their defence, had set up a case that the plaintiff's play was not a subject of copyright. That case had not been opened, and he did not think there was anything in it. Therefore, in ordering the plaintiff to pay the costs, he excepted the costs in so far as they were increased by that allegation, and these must be paid by the defendants by way of set-off.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

RUNS OF THE SEASON.

CLASSIFIED DIGEST OF THE WEST-END PRODUCTIONS, 1913-14.

Appended is a list of the pieces running at the West-End theatres during the 1913-14 season. The list includes all pieces produced for a run. Pieces performed by play-producing societies, matinée plays, and plays revived on particular occasions are not included, nor are plays intermittently performed in the course of repertory seasons. Plays in one act also are not included. The season is reckoned as starting on August 26 with The Picture of Dorian Grey, but The Barrier—July 17, 1913—and The Beggar Girl's Wedding—August 28—are taken in, as are The Great Adventure, Diplomacy, Within the Law, The Marriage Market, and Oh, I Say! which ran on from the previous season. The plays of the season still running are given separately, and in their case the number of performances is calculated up to next Saturday, August 1.

PIECES WITH CONCLUDED RUNS.

Piece.	Theatre.	First Production	Times Play'd
Diplomacy	Wyndham's and Prince of Wales	March 26, 1913	461
Within the Law	Haymarket	May 24, 1913	427
Marriage Market, The	Daly's	May 17, 1913	413
Oh! I Say!	Criterion	May 28, 1913	398
Pearl Girl, The	Shaftesbury	Sept. 25, 1913	254
Anna Karenina	Ambassadors and Scala	Dec. 1, 1913	233
Girl from Utah, The	Adelphi	Oct. 18, 1913	195
Story of the Rosary, The	Prince's	Dec. 20, 1913	193
Who's the Lady?	Garrick	Nov. 22, 1913	169
Magic	Little	Nov. 7, 1913	168
Magic (2)	Little	May 5, 1914	14
Broadway Jones	Prince of Wales and Lyceum	Feb. 3, 1914	159
Ever-Open Door, The	Aldwych	Sept. 6, 1913	156
Ever-Open Door, The (2)	Aldwych	March 16, 1914	21
Joseph and His Brethren	His Majesty's	Sept. 2, 1913	154
Mary Goes First	Playhouse	Sept. 18, 1913	153
The Pursuit of Pamela	Royalty	Nov. 4, 1913	123
Pair of Silk Stockings, A	Criterion and Prince of Wales's	Feb. 23, 1914	122
Melting Pot, The	Queen's and Comedy	Feb. 7, 1914	120
Sleeping Beauty Re-awakened, The	Drury Lane	Dec. 26, 1913	120
Pygmalion	His Majesty's	April 11, 1914	118
Sealed Orders	Drury Lane	Sept. 11, 1913	115
Never Say Die	Apollo	Sept. 11, 1913	115
After the Girl	Gaiety	Feb. 7, 1914	105
Joy-Ride Lady, The	New and Garrick	Feb. 21, 1914	105
Mam'selle Tralala	Lyric	April 16, 1914	105
Babes in the Wood, The	Lyceum	Feb. 21, 1914	102
Midsummer Night's Dream, A	Savoy	Feb. 6, 1914	99
Grumpy	New	May 13, 1914	92
Place in the Sun, A	Comedy	Nov. 3, 1913	92
Clever Ones, The	Wyndham's	April 23, 1914	91
Real Thing, The	Garrick	Aug. 29, 1913	89
Grand Seigneur, The	Savoy	Oct. 4, 1913	88
Quality Street	Duke of York's	Nov. 25, 1913	88
Adored One, The	Duke of York's	Sept. 4, 1913	83
Helen with the High Hand	Vaudeville	Feb. 17, 1914	83
Barrier, The	Strand	July 17, 1913	81
Darling of the Gods, The	His Majesty's	Jan. 17, 1914	81
Laughing Husband, The (see The Girl Who Didn't)	New	Oct. 2, 1913	78
Beggar Girl's Wedding, The	Lyceum	Aug. 20, 1913	77
Ideal Husband, An	St. James's	May 14, 1914	77
Girl Who Didn't, The	Lyric	Dec. 18, 1913	76
Marriage of Kitty, The	Playhouse	Feb. 24, 1914	75
Lights o' London, The	Aldwych	April 11, 1914	72
Two Virtues, The	St. James's	March 5, 1914	68
Dangerous Age, The	Vaudeville	May 5, 1914	63
Attack, The	St. James's	Jan. 1, 1914	66
Love and Laughter	Lyric	Sept. 3, 1913	65
Things We'd Like to Know	Apollo	March 28, 1914	65
This Way, Madam	Queen's	Sept. 27, 1913	57
Alice in Wonderland	Comedy	Dec. 23	56
Under Two Flags	Lyceum	Oct. 29, 1913	53
Fortune Hunter, The	Queen's	Dec. 17, 1913	53
Androcles and the Lion	St. James's	Sept. 1, 1913	52
Tyranny of Tears, The	Comedy	Feb. 5, 1914	52
Duke of Killicrankie, The	Playhouse and Garrick	June 3, 1914	51
Girl in the Taxi, The	Lyric	Nov. 1, 1913	48
You Made Me Love You	Lyceum	Feb. 25, 1914	45
Sealed Orders (2)	Drury Lane	March 9, 1914	45
Queen's Champion, The	Aldwych	Jan. 3, 1914	43
Plaster Saints	Comedy	May 23, 1914	41
Peter Pan (matinée)	Duke of York's	Jan. 31, 1914	41
Scrap of Paper, A	Criterion	June 16, 1914	40
Belle of Bond Street, The	Adelphi	June 8, 1914	40
Charley's Aunt	Prince of Wales's	Dec. 19, 1913	39
Shepherdess Without a Heart, The	Duke of York's and New	Jan. 31, 1914	37
Scarlet Band, The	Comedy	Aug. 27, 1913	36
Picture of Dorian Gray, The	Vaudeville	Aug. 28, 1913	35
Witch, The	St. James's	Oct. 29, 1913	34
Blue Mouse, The	Criterion	May 12, 1914	34
Interlopers	Royalty	Sept. 15, 1913	33
Peggy and Her Husband	Royalty	Feb. 28, 1914	33
Years of Discretion	Globe	Sept. 8, 1913	31
People Like Ourselves	Globe	Oct. 6, 1913	31
Night Hawk, The	Globe	Dec. 6, 1913	31
New Duke, The	Comedy	Sept. 30, 1913	30
Where the Rainbow Ends (matinees)	Garrick	Dec. 26, 1913	30
Fugitive, The	Court and Prince of Wales's	Sept. 26, 1913	27
Between Sunset and Dawn	Vaudeville	Oct. 13, 1913	26
Wynmartins, The	Playhouse	May 6, 1914	26
Nan	Court	Aug. 30, 1913	25
If We Had Only Known	Queen's	Nov. 19, 1913	25
I Love You	Ambassadors	Sept. 20, 1913	24
Are You There?	Prince of Wales's	Oct. 30, 1913	23
Jonese, The	Strand	Nov. 1, 1913	23
La Dame aux Camélias	Scala	June 22, 1914	22
Robina in Search of a Husband	Vaudeville	Dec. 16, 1913	22
Mary Girl	Vaudeville	Jan. 13, 1914	22
Blindness of Virtue, The	Ambassadors	June 29, 1914	22
Adele	Gaiety	May 30, 1914	20
Big Game, The	New	Aug. 19, 1913	19
Collision	Vaudeville	Oct 1, 1913	19
Daughter of France, A	Ambassadors	Oct. 21, 1913	19
Great Gamble, The	Haymarket	May 21, 1913	19
Brer Rabbit (matinées)	Little	April 11, 1914	19
Poor Little Rich Girl, The	New	Dec. 30, 1913	14
Break the Walls Down	Savoy	May 16, 1914	14
An Indian Summer	Prince of Wales's	June 11, 1914	11
Thank Your Ladyship	Playhouse	Feb. 12, 1914	9
Girls	Prince of Wales's	Sept. 16, 1913	8
Swineherd and the Princess, The	Court	May 18, 1914	8
As It Used to Be	Little	June 9, 1914	8
Account Rendered	Little	April 24, 1914	7
Little Lamb, The	Apollo	May 27, 1914	5

PIECES STILL RUNNING.

Great Adventure, The	Kingsway	March 25, 1913	561
Mr. Wu	Strand	Nov. 27, 1913	273
The Land of Promise	Duke of York's	Feb. 26, 1914	179
Kismet	Globe	March 10, 1914	178
Potash and Perlmutter	Queen's	April 14, 1914	136
My Lady's Dress	Royalty	April 14, 1914	113
The Cinema Star	Shaftesbury	June 4, 1914	59
When Knights Were Bold	Apollo	June 11, 1914	60
Driven	Haymarket	June 17, 1914	52
Heritage of Hate, A	Aldwych	June 27, 1914	36
Belle of New York, The	Lyceum	June 24, 1914	45
Eliza Comes to Stay	Vaudeville	July 6, 1914	32
Sin of David, The	Savoy	July 9, 1914	24
From 9 to 11	Wyndham's	July 14, 1914	21

KINDS OF PIECE.

The pieces may be ranged in the following classes:—

Shakespeare.
Midsummer Night's Dream, A.

Tragedy.
Witch, The.

Poetic Drama.
Sin of David, The.

Religious Drama.
Holy City, The.
Joseph and His Brethren.

Romantic Drama.
Darling of the Gods, The.
Grand Seigneur, The.
Kismet.
Queen's Champion, The.

Fantastic Drama.
Magic.

Drama.
Anna Karenina.
Attack, The.
Between Sunset and Dawn.
Big Game, The.
Blindness of Virtue, The.
Collision.
Diplomacy.
Driven.
Fugitive, The.
Indian Summer, An.
Interlopers.
La Dame Aux Camélias.

D-10
3724
1913
Waters, J.
Plays

Land of Promise, The.
Mary—Girl.
Melting Pot, The.
My Lady's Dress.
Peggy and Her Husband.
Picture of Dorian Gray, The.
Place in the Sun, A
Plaster Saints.

MELODRAMA.

Barrier, The.
Beggar Girl's Wedding, The.
Ever-Open Door, The.
Heritage of Hate, A.
Lights o' London, The.
Mr. Wu.
Scarlet Band, The.
Sealed Orders.
Story of the Rosary, The.
Under Two Flags.
Within the Law.
You Made Me Love You.

COMEDY-DRAMA.

Account Rendered.
Break the Walls Down.
Dangerous Age, The.
Daughter of France, A.
Great Gamble, The.
Grumpy.
If We Had Only Known.
I Love You.
My Lady's Dress.
People Like Ourselves.
Pursuit of Pamela, The.
Scrap of Paper, A.
Years of Discretion.

COMEDY

Adored One, The.
Clever Ones, The.
Duke of Killierankie, The.
Fortune Hunter, The.
Great Adventure, The.
Helen With the High Hand
Ideal Husband, An.
Joneses, The.
Marriage of Kitty, The.
Mary Goes First.
Night Hawk, The.
Pygmalion.
Quality Street.
Real Thing, The.
Robina in Search of a Husband.
Thank Your Ladyship.
Things We'd Like to Know.
Two Virtues, The.
Tyranny of Tears, The.
Wynmartins, The.

LIGHT COMEDY.

Eliza Comes to Stay.
Girls.
Pair of Silk Stockings, A.

FARCE.

Blue Mouse, The.
Broadway Jones.
Little Lamb, The.
Never Say Die.
New Duke, The.
Oh, I Say!
Potash and Perlmutter.
This Way, Madam.
When Knights Were Bold.
Who's the Lady?

EXTRAVAGANZA.

Androcles and the Lion.
From 9 to 11.

FAIRY OR CHILDREN'S PLAY.

Alice in Wonderland.
Brer Rabbit.
Peter Pan.
Poor Little Rich Girl, The Shepherdess Without a Smile, The.
Swineherd and the Princess, The.
Where the Rainbow I

REVUE.

As It Used To Be.

MUSICAL COMEDY.

Adele.
After the Girl.
Are You There?
Belle of Bond Street, The.
Belle of New York, The.
Cinema Star, The.
Girl from Utah, The.
Girl in the Taxi, The.
Joy-Ride Lady, The.
Laughing Husband, The (revised version The Girl Who Didn't).
Love and Laughter.
Mam'selle Tralala.
Marriage Market, The.
Pearl Girl, The.

PANTOMIME.

Babes in the Wood.
Sleeping Beauty Re-awakened, The.

AUTHORSHIP.

NEW PIECES BY BRITISH PLAYWRIGHTS.

Adored One, The.
Account Rendered.
After the Girl.
Androcles and the Lion.
Are You There?
As It Used to Be.
Beggar Girl's Wedding, The.
Between Sunset and Dawn.
Gig Game, The.
Break the Walls Down.
Cinema Star, The.
Clever Ones, The.
Dangerous Age, The.
Daughter of France, A.
Driven.
Ever-Open Door, The.
Fugitive, The.
Girl from Utah, The.
Grand Seigneur, The.
Great Adventure, The.
Great Gamble, The.
Grumpy.
Helen With the High Hand.
Heritage of Hate, A.
Holy City, The.
Indian Summer, An.
Interlopers.
Junoses, The.
Joseph and His Brethren.
Land of Promise, The.
Magic.
Mary—Girl.
Mary Goes First.
Melting Pot, The.
Mr. Wu.
My Lady's Dress.
New Duke, The.
Night Hawk, The.
Pair of Silk Stockings, A.
Pearl Girl, The.
Peggy and Her Husband.
People Like Ourselves.
Place in the Sun, A.
Plaster Saints.
Pursuit of Pamela, The.
Pygmalion.
Queen's Champion, The.
Robina in Search of a Husband.
Sealed Orders.
Shepherdess Without a Heart, The.
Sin of David, The
Story of the Rosary, The.
Thank Your Ladyship.
Things We'd Like to Know.
Two Virtues, The.
Wynmartins, The.
You Made Me Love You.

PLAYS FROM NOVELS, ETC.

Anna Karenina.
Barrier, The.
Brer Rabbit.
Collision.
Picture of Dorian Gray, The.
Poor Little Rich Girl, The.
Under Two Flags.

AMERICAN PIECES.

Adele.
Barrier, The.
Belle of Bond Street, The (American version of The Girl from Kay's).
Broadway Jones.
Fortune Hunter, The.
From 9 to 11.
Girls.
Never Say Die.
Poor Little Rich Girl, The.
Potash and Perlmutter.
Scarlet Band, The.
Within the Law.
Years of Discretion.

ADAPTATIONS FROM FOREIGN PIECES.

Attack, The.
Blue Mouse, The.
Girl in the Taxi, The.
I Love You.
Joy-Ride Lady, The.
Laughing Husband, The.
Little Lamb, The.
Love and Laughter.
Mam'selle Tralala.
Marriage Market, The.
Oh, I Say!
Real Thing, The.
This Way, Madam.
Who's the Lady!

REVIVALS.

Alice in Wonderland.
Belle of Bond Street, The.
Belle of New York, The.
Blindness of Virtue, The.
Charley's Aunt.
Darling of the Gods, The.
Diplomacy.
Duke of Killierankie, The.
Eliza Comes to Stay.
Girl in the Taxi, The.
Ideal Husband, An.
If We Had Only Known.
Kismet.
La Dame aux Camélias.
Lights o' London, The.
Marriage of Kitty, The.
Midsummer Night's Dream, A.
Peter Pan.
Quality Street.
Scrap of Paper, A.
Swineherd and the Princess, The.
Tyranny of Tears, The.
Under Two Flags.
When Knights Were Bold.
Where the Rainbow Ends.
Witch, The.

The Lillah McCarthy-Granville Barker repertory season at the St. James's and the Savoy included revivals of:—

Death of Tintagiles, The.
Doctor's Dilemma, The.
Nan.
Silver Box, The.
Wild Duck, The.
Witch, The.

J73
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Accidents Will Happen
Account Rendered
Acid Drops
Adele
After The Girl
Aladdin
Alice In Wonderland
[illegible]
Belle of Bond Street. The
Belle of New York. The
[illegible]
[illegible]
Bluff King Hal
Break The Walls Down
Broadway Jones
Brer Rabbit and Mr Fox
Bucket-Shops. The
Bunnies as Usual 284 (Revue)
By Jingo [illegible] 263 (Revue)
Canaries

Charley's Aunt 306
Cheer Boys Cheer
Chocolate Soldier. The
Cinderella 31
[illegible] 156
Clemenceau. The 103
Cobbler The 174
Cockalby Bird. The 6, 332
Collection Will Be Made. A 193
[illegible] 257
[illegible] 263
Dame aux Camelias. La 179
Dangerous age. The 119
Darling of The Gods. The 13
David Copperfield 313
Dear Little Wife. A 145
Der Tag 304
Diplomacy 22
District Visitor. The 61
Double Mystery. The 253
Drake 204

13

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Druien 1
Dropping the Baby
Duke of [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Earl and the Girl. The
Even Open Door. The Flags Comes T[illegible]
[illegible]
Flag Lieutenant. The
[illegible]
[illegible]
Glad Eye. The Great Scott
Head First
Helen With the High Hand
Henry IV (part I)
Henry V
[illegible]
Hide and Seek
His House in Order
[illegible]
Ideal Husband. an Impossible Woman. The 224
Indian Summer 165

Jack and the Beanstalk 3
Jay-Rich Lady. The
[illegible]
Ladies Comedy. The
Land of Promise. The Lancaster in Court
[illegible]
Little Lamb. The Little Lord Fauntleroy 325
[illegible]
Magic 17
Mameena 234
Mam'selle Thalala
Man of Ideas. a 285
Man Who Stayed at Home. The 29
[illegible]
Mary-Girl
Melting Pot. The 33
Merchant of Venice. The
Merry-Go-Round. The. 169 (reprint)
[illegible]
Midsummer Night's Dream. a 28
Milestones 273
Miss Hook of Holland 21
Mamma Mamma 197
Music-cure. The 17
My Aunt. 200
My Lady's Dress 99

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Never Say Die
New Clothes The
Nuts and Wine (revue)
On Duty
One Good Turn
On His Majesty's Service
Pair of Silk Stockings. a
Passing Show. The (Revue)
Peggy and Her Husband 5-7
Peg O' My Heart
Peter Pan
Queen of Seventeen
Rosie
Scrap of Paper a 175
Sealed Lips 71
227

Silver King. The
Silver Lining. The 137
Sin of David The 189
Sir Richard's Biography 244
Sleeping Beauty. The 333
274
Sphinx 247
Stolen Secrets 49
Study in Bereavement. a. 195
Supplement. The 151
Thanks for Lady's Hat 42
Things We'd Like To Know 73
Those Who Sit in Judgement 234
Tommy Atkins 20
63
Tyranny of Tears The 27
Valuable Rival. a 133
Wages No Object 244
When Knights Were Bold 167
Woman Alone a 195

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Actors Liberalism	194
~~Apology~~ Apology	100
Authors and critics	141
Barking The Pit	10
Anatole France	41
Bad manners in the theatre
Aristocratic art
Commandments performance	22
censor
G.B. Edwardes & management
Fair, Performances	195 [illegible] 285
Money Making Luck.
Lawrence Irving	3
opera para
'Dividends'	238
Peoples Theatre
London influence
'Stage Cast'
Theatre Council-Stated
Russian Ballet-	187
Shaw. G.B. on the Drama	62
Suffragette disturbances	16.125
War Concerts in France	336
War influences	250. 295. 322. 335.
War Time in Paris	302
Free Gallery	233

Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1913.

NEW CENSOR.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. G. S. STREET.

The Lord Chamberlain has appointed Mr. George S. Street to be joint Reader of Plays with Mr. Ernest A. Bendall, in succession to the late Mr. Charles H. E. Brookfield. The new Reader of Plays starts work in his office at St. James's Palace tomorrow (New Year's Day).

Mr. Street, who is forty-six years old, is the author of several novels and essays, and, in addition to having prepared an edition, with an introduction, of Congreve's comedies, had a three-act play called "Great Friends" produced by the Incorporated Stage Society nine years ago at the Court Theatre. Mr Street is a native of London and was educated at Charterhouse and Oxford. He now, laconically, classifies his recreations as "the ordinary." He has contributed many articles to The Daily Mail, his latest being one in February about the telephone and called "The Jumpy Age." Mr. Ernest A. Bendall was dramatic critic of The Daily Mail before he became a censor.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30 (MATINEES at 2.30)

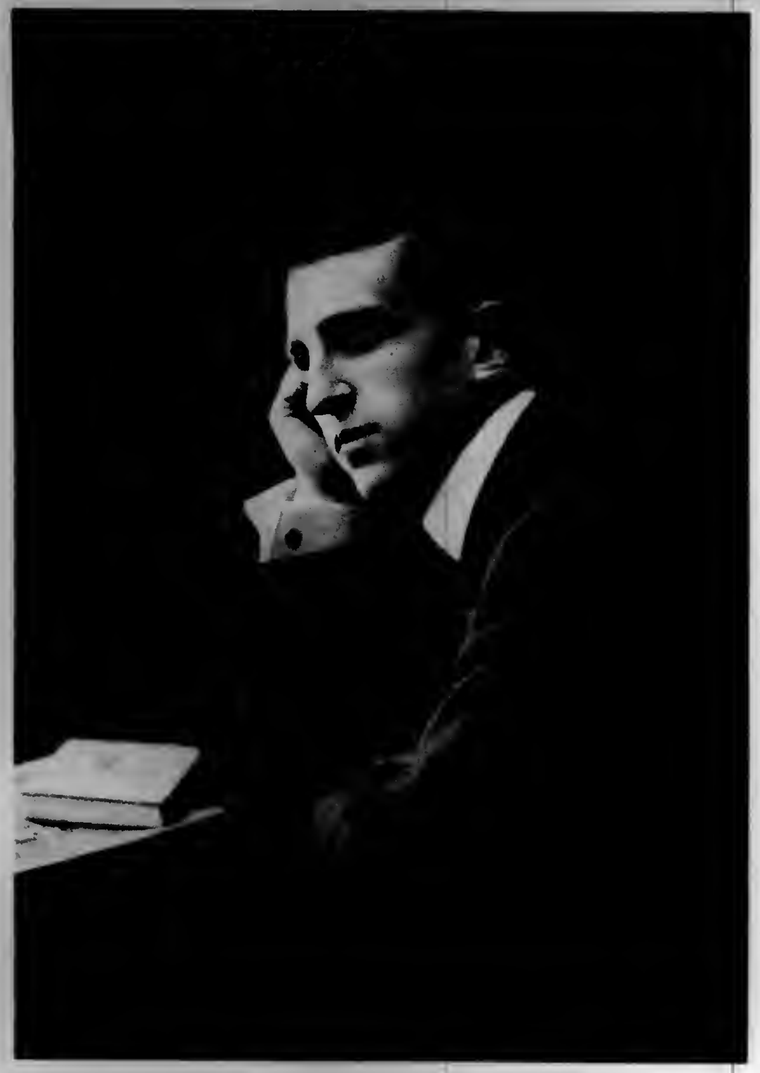
WILL BE ACTED A NEW PLAY, IN THREE ACTS, ENTITLED

THE ATTACK

From the French ("L'Assaut") of HENRY BERNSTEIN

By GEORGE EGERTON

Alexandre Mérital	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Antonin Frépeau	HOLMAN CLARK
Garancier	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Daniel Mérital	PHILIP DESBOROUGH
Julien Mérital	REGINALD MALCOLM
A Servant	J. ADEANE BARLOW
Georgette Mérital	GLADYS STOREY
Renée de Rould	MARTHA HEDMAN



(By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.) Her First Appearance in England

The Scene of the First Act is laid in Mérital's Country House near Dinard, and of the Second and Third Acts in his Study at Blois.

The Scenery painted by G. SACKMANN. The Dresses by Miss ELSPETH PHELPS.

G L48A
STALLS
Jan. 1.
1914
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Re-enter Sir George.

There was a full and representative audience at St. James's Theatre on Thursday evening unanimously delighted to welcome back Sir George Alexander to his own stage. It was a genuine pleasure to see the theatre once more restored to its proper self. The hideous cardboard megaphone-like contrivances that during Mr. Barker and Miss McCarthy's season disfigured the auditorium were happily gone, for Sir George Alexander is no believer in lessening the illusion of the theatre by pouring light from those bucket arrangements across the orchestra to the stage. Happily, too, was gone the illusion-destroying platform in front of the curtain.

* * * * *

Sir George Alexander's new play for the opening of his season is "George Egerton's" version of Henry Bernstein's comedy, called in English "The Attack." It is the story of the leader of a great political party in France who on the threshold of coming into power is assailed in an almost unknown scurrilous journal. The particular charge made against Alexandre Merital was that he had when a very young man stolen four thousand francs from the provincial lawyer in whose office he was then employed. Merital would have ignored the attack, but a great political associate of his, the owner of the party newspaper in Paris, inserted a copy of the story with the comment that their leader would prosecute, and Merital, convinced that his journalistic associate had plotted the whole business to ruin him, unwillingly initiated a prosecution.

A Great Young Actress.

On the morning of the day on which the trial at law was to decide the whole matter of Merital he confessed to the woman who was to become his wife that the charge was true. Thirty years ago he had taken that money. He had not been prosecuted, but let go free that he might work to repay it. How bit by bit he had repaid the debt and won back the respect and esteem of the man who had employed him was told in a scene of indescribable pathos between Merital and the young woman he loved.

Miss Martha Hedman

That scene finished, Merital became once more his strong, hard self, and how he beat his enemies and came back to his home are set out in the thrilling scenes that followed. That this story gripped the audience no one for a moment could doubt. The result was, as it should have been, an enthusiastically received success that must in the first place be credited to Henry Bernstein and in the second to George Egerton, who has given to Sir George Alexander incomparably the best English version of a French play seen in London in the memory of anyone. Apart from being nervous, Sir George Alexander gave a characteristic performance of the political leader, and Mr. Holman Clark, too, was excellent as his shifty friend. The performance of the evening that possessed the greater interest was that given by a newcomer to England—Miss Martha Hedman, who comes from Stockholm, via New York. We have no emotional actress in this country (so young) to approach her, and when she finds herself she will be truly great. J. W.

Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor . . . . Mr. J. H. LEIGH

Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES.

The Children's Theatre Season

DAILY MATINEES

On THURSDAYS, FRIDAYS, AND SATURDAYS.

"THE COCKYOLLY BIRD"

An Adventure

By Mrs. PERCY DEARMER

Music by MARTIN SHAW

REAL PEOPLE.

Kit, a little boy ... ... FAY LILMAR
Lavinia, a nursery maid ... ... IRIS MILLER
Miss Brown, a governess ... ... Miss MARGARET WATSON
Mother, a very nice person ... ... Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Mrs. Prim } two cross nurses ... ... { Miss MARIAN BIRD
Mrs. Prue } { Miss MARION TURNER

TOYS.

Jum Jum, a little black doll ... ... ELSIE GRENVILLE
The Cockyolly Bird, a wooden bird... ... ... DOROTHY MANVILLE
Little Edward, a Teddy bear ... ... ROY LILMAR
Noah, the Owner of the Ark ... ... DOROTHY FINLAYSON
Mrs. Noah, his wife ... ... BIDDY THOMPSON

ANIMALS.

A real Polar Bear ... ... CHARLIE THOMAS
A Little Land Crab ... ... FABIA DRAKE
(By permission of the Academy of Dramatic Art)

JAPANESE

Kissoo, a little girl (afterwards Phœbe) ... ... DORIS PROSSER
Koo Koo, another little girl... ... ... RUTH FRENCH
Li Koo, a third little girl ... ... JOAN CARR
Chee Ki, a little boy ... ... PETER SHAW

PLEASANT CANNIBALS.

The Cannibal King ... ... Mr. HENRY LE GRAND
The Cannibal A.D.C. ... ... ROY LILMAR
The Cannibal Private Secretary ... ... MICHAEL ELAND
The Band ... ... { JESSON ROY
{ SEBASTIAN SHAW

Penguins, Polar Bears, Butterflies, Japanese, Pleasant Cannibals, and Pleasant Cannibal Children:—MARGUERITE FINLAYSON, OLIVE HOGAN, MARGARET EVERITT, CONSTANCE C. ADAMS, LILY BISHOP, LILIAN LAMING, CISSIE SKINNER, COLETTE BISSICKS, MURIEL REINHARDT, PATRICIA IZOD, ERNEST HORDER

ROYAL CO
SLOAN
Proprietor

THE CHILD

Thursday
MATINEE
Jan 1

Stall
No. C 7

This to be retained

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

SCENE I.	The Schoolroom
SCENE II.	The Schoolroom changed
SCENE III.	The North Pole
SCENE IV.	Japan
SCENE V.	A Cannibal Island
SCENE VI.	The Schoolroom again

The Æolian Ladies Orchestra under the direction of Miss ROSABEL WATSON.
The Penguin, Butterfly and Cannibal Dances by ANNIE SPONG'S LITTLE DANCERS.

The Japanese Dance by Miss ELEANOR ELDER.

Scenery and properties designed by PAUL SHELVING.
Scenery painted by LEOLYN HART.
Properties executed by W. H. EDWARDS.
"The Cockyolly Bird" and Noah's Ark figures by JENNIE MOORE.
Animal dresses, and Japanese and Cannibal Wigs by RAYNE.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

The dress worn by Miss Henrietta Watson by ELSPETH PHELPS, 28, Albemarle Street, W.

Children's dresses by MUNRO & MUNRO, 8, Sussex Place, S. Kensington.

The Play is produced by Mrs. PERCY DEARMER.

On MONDAYS, TUESDAYS, and WEDNESDAYS
NETTA SYRETT'S TRIPLE BILL
"THE FAIRY DOLL"
"THE ENCHANTED GARDEN"
"THE STRANGE BOY"
PRECEDED BY
ANNIE SPONG'S LITTLE DANCERS.
SEATS MAY NOW BE BOOKED.

General Manager of the Children's Theatre	Mrs. PERCY DEARMER.
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY ROBERTS.
Stage Manager	Mr. HENRY LE GRAND.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. BRIAN DESMOND

LADIES ARE REQUIRED TO REMOVE THEIR HATS.

General M[illegible] [illegible]IES ANNING

Daily Mail

Daily Net SALE Six Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1914.

"THE COCKYOLLY BIRD."

The second programme of the Children's Theatre season at the Court Theatre—a fairy play by Mrs. Percy Dearmer entitled "The Cockyolly Bird"—was presented for matinées yestesday and in a mild way amused the young people it was written to please.

It is a story of a little boy who, having no great love for his governess, goes to sleep over his lessons and dreams that, accompanied by his toy bird, Teddy bear, and black doll, he travels the world. His adventures are told in a form not designed to excite a juvenile audience too much, and yesterday it was impossible to get rid of the feeling that it might have been better to appeal somewhat more to the intelligence of the children for whom the entertainment was designed. The success of children's plays in other London theatres makes it obvious that children are no mean critics of children's plays.

A word of praise may be given to Miss Fay Lilmar, who plays the little boy, and many words of praise to Miss Doris Prosser in the part of the charming little heroine.

J. W.

EMPIRE THEATRE,
LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.

Manager .. OSCAR BARRETT, Jnr.

THE PREMIER VARIETY THEATRE.
The Cosmopolitan Club and
The Rendezvous of the World.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR.
— Every Evening at Eight.

Musical Director .. FRANK E. TOURS Stage Director SPENCER BARRY.
Treasurer .. JAMES DAVIS.

Floral Decorations by ROBERT GREEN, Ltd., Crawford Street, W.

TO-NIGHT JANUARY 3rd, 1914), FIRST PERFORMANCE OF

5

NUTS AND WINE

An entirely new and original Revue, in Two Acts and Six Scenes,
BY
C. H. BOVILL and P. G. WODEHOUSE.

The Music Composed and Arranged by FRANK E. TOURS.
Additional numbers by GUY JONES and MELVILLE GIDEON.
Staged by JULIAN ALFRED.

The Modern Dresses, Hats, Head-Dresses, and Lingerie, designed and made by PAQUINS, Dover Street, W.

The Costumes of the Syncopatia Rag and the Warders in Act II., Scene I., and the Shop Girls' Costumes in Act II., Scene III., Designed and Supervised by C. WILHELM Properties by P. GRIEVESON. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Machinist, W. SHELDON. Electrician, C. WINTER.
Floral Decorations by ROBT. GREEN, Ltd., and A. & L. UHLMANN.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LAST NIGHT'S NEW REVUE.

"Nuts and Wine" at the Empire even Duller than It Might Have Been.

The Empire Theatre presented a new revue last evening in two acts and six scenes, and the highest praise that can be given it is that the dresses are very pretty. The performance of "Nuts and Wine," as it is called, lasted about three hours, and on several occasions there appeared a possibility of humour making a stay for a few minutes. The hope, however, was always quickly doomed, and scenes of talk that seemed very, very long ended in songs or dances that for the most part were hardly worth doing. For the Empire Theatre, that once gave "Everybody's Doing it," last night's entertainment was not much of an offering, and some of it—that no doubt was intended to be funny—was merely in bad taste.

The music is mostly of the ragtime order—tuneful enough, and for the greater part reminiscent. Mr. Frank Tours, the composer, has been on a long American visit, and doubtless is convinced that London is still in the ragtime craze, but the authors, Messrs. Bovill and Wodehouse, might surely have imitated the composer and got some little spirit into their work. Perhaps the cold weather affected things and made the Empire Revue even duller than it might otherwise have been. Perhaps.

J. W—

Daily Mail

Daily Net SALE Six Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1914.

BOOKING FOR PIT.

TICKETS AT 6.30 P.M. FOR THE ADELPHI.

From to-morrow night Mr. George Edwardes has arranged for playgoers to book numbered and reserved seats in the pit of the Adelphi Theatre, thus doing away with the queue in the narrowest part of the Strand.

The pit has been fitted with comfortable new seats. Tickets will be sold only from 6.30 for the same evening's performance and similarly at 1.30 for matinées. They will be obtainable at the pit box office for the usual half-crown.

The reason of the change is the discomfort of waiting for hours in all weathers. It will now be possible to book and go away from the theatre until the time of the performance.

Daily Mail

The only English morning Newspaper certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1914.

QUEUE FOR PIT BOOKING.

FIRST NIGHT OF THEATRE'S NEW PLAN.

The Adelphi Theatre in the Strand inaugurated yesterday its plan for selling in advance its seats in the pit. The arrangement was to number all the seats and to open a box-office at 6.30 p.m. for their sale for the same evening's performance only. An hour before the box-office was opened a queue had been formed in the Strand, and by 6.25 the number of people waiting was fully 150.

Twenty-five minutes sufficed to sell out the capacity of the pit, which has about 330 seats at 2s. 6d. each, and although the majority of the purchasers bought no more than two seats, a few took four or more. As all the seats were sold, standing room only was available for those who arrived at the usual time. The seats are sold in their numerical order, the first arrivals getting the front row, and so on until the seating space is exhausted. Great care will be taken, the management states, to prevent speculation in tickets, and it is with this object that the pit seats are being sold only after 6.30 p.m. on the day of the performance for which they are dated.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

TUESDAY, JAN. 13th, 1914, at 8.30, and
subsequent Evenings at 9,

Norman McKinnel & Frederick Whelen

PRESENT

MARY-GIRL

A Play, in Four Acts.

By HOPE MERRICK.

The People of the Play in the order of their appearance:—

Mrs. Finch	MARY BROUGH
Mary Sheppard	MAY BLAYNEY
Ezra Sheppard	NORMAN McKINNEL
Cooper Footman	HAROLD BRADLEY
Mrs. Barlow-Brown	HELEN FERRERS
Parlourmaid	MIELL MAUND
Mrs. Quick, Head Nurse	ETHEL TREVOR LLOYD
The Countess of Folkington-Hilda	DOROTHY LANE
George Latimer	CHARLES KENYON
The Earl of Folkington	O. B. CLARENCE
Emily Nursemaid	MARY CLARE
Polly Finch	OLIVE WALTER

ACT I. Living-Room in Ezra's Cottage

Three months pass

ACT II. Mary's Sitting Room at Clitheroe Castle

Nine months pass

ACT III. As Act I.

The curtain is dropped for one minute during Act III to indicate the lapse of four hours

Six months pass

ACT IV. As Act I.

The Play produced by NORMAN McKINNEL

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1914.

You never can tell. Some newspaper had printed a rumour that Mary-Girl dealt with the land question. It turns out to be concerned with wet-nursing. Mary and Ezra were quite happy down at the cottage, she a young mother and he an industrious market-gardener, and both of them zealous Plymouth Brethren, until in an evil hour one of the grand folk up at the castle came down to the cottage to lure Mary away as wet nurse to the newly-born heir of the Folkingtons. Mary (who had had her little dreams of luxury, generally in the form of yellow plush) was tempted by wages of £21 a month and all the pleasures of the table; but jibbed at the condition of separation from her husband for 12 months. Ezra refused point-blank, until it occurred to him that the money would build (for he, too, had had his dreams) a new chapel. So, behold Mary up at the castle, peach (and port) fed, and generally spoiled by luxury, but not spoiled enough not to be virtuously shocked by a flirting couple (how different, said Mary, the ethics of castle and cottage!) or not to yearn, occasionally, for her absent Ezra. Indeed, she gets Ezra up at the castle by a fib; but Ezra, who is constitutionally incapable of distinguishing between fibs and lies, is indignant and would (in the slang of castles) give her away—were it not for the fear of losing the money for the chapel.

When Mary returns from the castle to the cottage, she is another woman—with white hands, a palate unfitted for plain living, and a habit of using for her daily bath (once a week, Ezra thinks, is enough for any woman) the tub required for another kind of "washing up." Worse, her year's absence, you learn, has alienated her own infant's affection from her. Worst of all, she so angers Ezra with her fine-lady fancies that he strikes her, whereupon, after pointing out that he sold her for his chapel so that it is all his fault, she runs away to wicked London. Of course wicked London for a lone woman (in what you may call cottage-and-castle plays) always means one fate; and by and by Mary returns to confess to Ezra that that fate has happened to her. It is all the fault of the chapel, cries Ezra; so he burns the chapel to the ground, and takes Mary once more to his arms. As you see, the play might have for subtitle, A Warning to Wet Nurses.

Mrs. Merrick's pictures of men and women, whether inhabiting cottages or castles, strike us for the most part as fancy sketches; but some of her minor characters, a village gossip, very drolly done by Miss Mary Brough, a nurse (not wet), and a kindly, garrulous, futile Earl, capitally played by Mr. O. B. Clarence, are more human and, as the phrase goes, "observed." Miss May Blayney and Mr. Norman McKinnel are Mary and Ezra, and act as though they really believed in their parts—perhaps on the historically famous principle of credo quia impossibile, though we had not hitherto associated this principle with Plymouth Brethren.

If the purpose of the London theatres is to entertain them it can be said in all fairness that Mrs. Hope Merrick has given the Vaudeville Theatre in "Mary-Girl," a play that will interest and entertain the overwhelming majority of those who may go to see it. It pleased the audience at the first performance on Tuesday evening, and in addition to presenting a story that possessed some elements of novelty it bore throughout its four acts evidence of sincerity and observation. The story is concerned with the lives of Ezra Sheppard and his young wife, a couple of almost fanatically religious peasants, whose quiet existence is disturbed by an offer from the castle to the young woman to go up to the great house and foster-mother the young heir.

* * * *

An offer of £21 a month, for twelve months, with the condition that until the year for which she was engaged had ended Mary should never meet her husband would have been refused even by peasants so poor as these had not Ezra seen in the money to be earned the certainty of being able to build on his plot of land a worthy chapel for faithful worshippers. He was also content to believe that in submitting to a year's separation he was making a sacrifice that would please God. That was how he put it; and so Mary went up to the great house, was given servants to wait on her, was spoiled for the life to which she was destined to return, and all that a whim of the great lady, her mistress, to see how a peasant thus treated would act when sent to her humble home again, might be satisfied.

* * * *

It was not a convincing reason, it is true, and in using such an one the dramatist showed a great weakness. These first two acts were much the best of the four. They contained some elements of surprise. What as the remaining portion of the play was (as might well be guessed) devoted to Mary's inevitable rebellion against the roughness of the home and the husband to which she had to return. Mrs. Merrick eventually ends the story with a reconciliation between the man and the woman, but it was not easy to imagine that the home would ever again be a happy one. In the part of Ezra Mr McKinnel gave a study of a man, at first met with [illegible] and Miss May Blayney, playing, I do not know why, with a Cockney accent, was [illegible] in replying the character of Mary. There was an admirable performance of a village gossip given by Miss Mary Brough, and Mr. O. B. Clarence was exactly as an amiable, simple minded, middle-aged nobleman. J. W.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

His Majesty's Theatre
HAYMARKET.

Sat. Evening
Jan. 17, 1914.

The Darling of the Gods

By David Belasco and John Luther Long.

The period of the Play is 1860.

Zakkuri	(A Minister of State)	HERBERT TREE
Kara	(An Outlaw Prince and Leader of the Samurai)	GEORGE RELPH
Saigon	(Prince of Tosan)	HENRY VIBART
Tanda-Tanji	(Nephew of Zakkuri)	PERCY GOODYER
Hassebe Soyemon	(A Noble)	CYRIL SWORDER
Shusshoo	(Major Domo of the Prince of Tosan)	J. WILLIAM MOLLISON
Inu	(Yosan's Dumb Servant)	PHILIP MERIVALE
Kato	(A Fisher of Carp)	A. E. GEORGE
Kugo	(The Gnarled Back) — (The Six Spies of Zakkuri)	PHILIP OLDHAM
Migaku		B. HUDSON
Kojin	(Gatherer of the Geisha Tattle)	VICTOR M. LEWISOHN
Ato	(The Watcher of the Watchers)	ALEXANDER SARNER
Tcho		R. STUART MARSHALL
Taro		J. ANTHONY SNAITH
The Imperial Messenger		L. B. HURLEY
Crier of the Night Hours		LAURENCE STERNER
It	(Shadow to Zakkuri)	A. E. BURTIE
Banza	(Priest of Band of Samurai)	HENRY MORRELL
Nagoya		ARTHUR MARTIN
Tori	(Samurai)	A. HOUGHTON GODDARD
Korin		A. LUBIMOFF
Bento		ALFRED SAUNDERS
A Runner		A. NICHOLSON TUCKER
A Herald		M. D. STEWART
Yo-San	(Daughter of the Prince of Tosan)	MARIE LÖHR
Setsu	(Yo-San's Maid)	IRENE CLARKE
Rosy Sky	A Dweller in "The City without Nights"	LUCY WILSON
Niji-Onna	(Rosy Sky's Maid)	SUSSIE WATA
Kaede	(A Teacher of Manners)	STELLA St. AUDRIE
Madam Asani	(A Beautiful Geisha)	FRANCES TORRENS
Nu	(A Singing Girl)	ISABEL JEANS

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

THE DARLING OF THE GODS

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

The Observer.

LONDON: SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1914.

THEIR MAJESTIES AT THE THEATRE.

A SUFFRAGETTE DISTURBANCE.

Their Majesties the King and Queen and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales witnessed the performance of "The Darling of the Gods" at His Majesty's Theatre last night.

At the end of the second act a slight disturbance was caused by Suffragettes. Three women at the back of the orchestra stalls got up and shouted "Votes for Women," but within a few seconds they were ejected by the attendants. The audience expressed its indignation at the interruption, and three cheers were given for Queen Mary.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE LIT
JOHN ST
Proprietress ...
KENELM FOSS p
"M

Wednesday
Evening
Jan 28
Stall
No. 1

This to be retained

By Arrangement with GERTRUDE KINGSTON

EVERY EVENING AT 9.

KENELM FOSS presents "MAGIC," A Fantastic Comedy,

In Three Acts and a Prelude, by G. K. CHESTERTON.

The Stranger	HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Patricia Carleon	Miss GRACE CROFT
Rev. Cyril Smith	O. P. HEGGIE
Hastings (the Duke's Secretary)	FRANK RANDELL
Doctor Grimthorpe	WILLIAM FARREN
The Duke	...FRED LEWIS
Morris Carleon	LYONEL WATTS

The Action of the Prelude takes place on a Hill-top, and that of the Play in the Duke's Drawing Room.

The Play produced by KENELM FOSS.

Preceded at 8.30 by

"THE MUSIC-CURE,"

A Piece of Utter Nonsense,
(For the First Time on Any Stage)

Lord Reginald Fitzambey	WILLIAM ARMSTRONG
Doctor Dawkins	FRANK RANDELL
Strega Thundridge	Miss MADGE McINTOSH

PERIOD The Present.
SCENE A Room in the Fitzcarlton Hotel.

Produced by EVERYBODY CONCERNED.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC performed by a String Trio under the direction of EDWARD JONES.

POLONAISE	"Militaire"	Chopin
SUITE	"Tanhauser"	Wagner
DANSE DES MERLITONS VALSE ...	"Casse Noisette"	Tschaikowsky
HUMORESQUE	... ...	Tschaikowsky
CHANSON TRISTE	... ...

Music for the Prelude by EDWARD JONES. Miss Croft's Dresses by GLADYS CARRE, Sloane Street, S.W.

Dialogue for "The Music-Cure" by BERNARD SHAW.

The Furniture supplied by SPILLMAN, St. Martin's Lane, W.C. Miss McIntosh's Dress by Miss MELDON-DEMPSEY.

"MAGIC" is performed with the consent of Mr HUGH ROBINSON.

Copies of the play, published by Martin Secker, can be obtained of the attendants, price in paper covers, one shilling. In cloth, two shillings.

MATINEE every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

PRICES: Private Boxes, £3 3s. 0d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10/6; Stalls, 6/-, 5/- & 4/-; Balcony, 4/- & 2/6; Circle, 1/- (unreserved).

Business Manager ... ... HENRY LANGLEY
Stage Manager ... WILLIAM ARMSTRONG Musical Director ... EDWARD JONES

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1914.

MR. SHAW'S MUSICAL COMEDY.

HEROINE IN AN ACID GREEN WIG.

Mr. Bernard Shaw's first musical comedy was produced at the Little Theatre last evening. It was a very little comedy—one act only—and down among the notes at the foot of the programme, where the names of the firms that supplied the dresses and furniture were to be found, there was a line to say, "Dialogue for 'The Music-Cure' by Bernard Shaw."

The scene of Mr. Shaw's "Music-Cure" is a private room in a London hotel. The characters are three. There is an Under-Secretary of State who had bought shares, and stood up for six days before the committee of inquiry "with the coolness of an iceberg and the cheerfulness of an idiot," and now that all was over he must break down.

"I didn't gamble," he explained to the doctor. "I thought it was a 'cert.' I knew the Army was to be put on vegetarian diet, so, of course, I bought Macaroni shares." But his confidence in his own innocence was of no avail, so his mother (the duchess) sent him a woman in flowing white and black garments to play to him; to play classical things on the piano, and before she began she had to hang the name of the music dealer who lent the piano on the instrument.

She was a wonderful woman to look at. She was like the Diana of a comic opera production, and she wore an acid green wig in great coils that was the admiration of the audience.

Her classical repertory for the piano nearly drove the Under-Secretary out of his mind. He wanted valses and rag-time, and he played them. He defied her to play the concertina. He taught her how. He made love to her. The managers paid her hundreds of pounds for a recital. Would she marry him? He wanted a woman to save him from the sordid occupation of earning a living. That appeal won her love. She wanted slow music to accompany her avowal. He played "You Made Me Love You," and there the joke that kept the audience laughing for half an hour was ended.

It was all splendidly acted by Mr. William Armstrong and Miss Madge McIntosh, and when the author was "called" the manager explained he was at home.

J. W.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Aldwych
THEATRE

31/1/1914

Stall
K 1
To be retained

SATURDAY, JANUARY 31ST, 1914, AT 8.0.

A. M. LOADER

WILL PRODUCE

A ROMANTIC DRAMA IN FOUR ACTS,

ENTITLED:

The Queen's Champion

By GRAHAM HILL and HUBERT ERICSEN.

CAST:

Prince Andreas, of Dalitza (known as Andrew Dalton)	JAMES CAREW
Prince Vaska Claimant to the Throne	CYRIL GRIFFITHS
General Hetzoff Chancellor of Dalitza	JACK HADDON
Count Rostow Member of the Council	ARTHUR ELWYN
Baron Zerbst Governor of Zobinski	SIDNEY YOUNG
Colonel Lanskoi Governor of the City	JAMES HOLLINGDALE
Baron Holstein Prince Vaska's Chamberlain	LAWRENCE LEYTON
Captain Markoff a Traitor	HENRY LE GRAND
Augustus Hawkins Andreas' Servant	SID KEARNS
Valitski	C. J. WALTON
Lomof	ARTHUR SANBACH
Karlovitch (Followers of Prince Vaska)	LIONEL WEST
Larnof	CHRIS OLGA
Betrand	EDMUND SIDNEY
A Sentry	PERCY NOMME
Usher	CECIL MARSHALL
Bruloff (Leaders of the People)	ALBERT CHAPMAN
Veitch	LOUIS LEWIS
Natalie Queen of Dalitza	UNA VENNING
Mena Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen	JOY CHATWYN
Mavra The Queen's Maid	ALICE BOWES
Petroucha (Women of the People)	MAY HALLATT
Avora	HARRISON SHEFFIELD

Officers, Soldiers, Servants, &c.

ACT I.

SCENE I. ... A Room in the State Apartments. (Morning).
SCENE II. .. Library in Prince Vaska's Palace. (Afternoon).
SCENE III. ... The same as Scene I. (Evening).

ACT II.

Reception Room in Prince Vaska's Palace.

ACT III.

SCENE I. ... A Room in Mena's Apartments.
SCENE II. .. A Room in the State Apartments.
SCENE III. The Palace Grounds.
SCENE IV. . Vault in the Palace.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. ... A Room in Baron Holstein's House.
SCENE II. ... A Room in the State Apartments overlooking the Palace Square.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY AT THE ALDWYCH.

Stirring Story of "The Queen's Champion."

CHARMING PRINCESS.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

Prince Andreas, of Dalitza (known as Andrew Dalton) ..... James Carew.
Prince Vaska (Claimant to the Throne) Cyril Gramtus.
General Hetzoff (Chancellor of Dalitza) Jack Haddon
Baron Zerbst (Governor of Zobinski) Sidney Young.
Baron Holstein (Prince Vaska's Chamberlain) Lawrence Leyton.
Natalie (Queen of Dalitza) ..... Una Venning.
Alena (Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen) Joy Chatwyn.

Memories of other melodramas hang around the story of "The Queen's Champion," by Graham Hill and Hubert Ericsen, produced last evening by Mr. Loader at the Aldwych Theatre. Melodramas concerning the romances of royal personages in imaginary kingdoms where there is a dispute over the succession to the throne have ever a family likeness, so no fault need be found with last night's play because of that relationship. "The Queen's Champion" has for one thing a very charming heroine in the princess claiming the throne of Daditza, and a lovely specimen of a melodramatic villain in the bad cousin, wicked enough to try to get her out of the way.

No Ordinary Villain.

Prince Vaska is no ordinary villain. He seemed last night to take neither joy nor sorrow in the crimes that fate insisted he should commit. He just arranged a murder or a kidnapping with as little ceremony as he might have done if going out to see a League football match. Crime came as naturally to him as going to an office does to the ordinary innocent citizen, and for that reason it was a real pleasure to see him at work. Of course, when Andrew Dalton, a wealthy Canadian, arrived in this principality in Eastern Europe he guessed what manner of man Prince Vaska was, and, having seen the charming lady that wicked fellow was plotting to ruin, he just stepped in and joined her army, and seemed inclined to slay her enemy at the first pop.

Cabled for £5,000,000.

He decided first, however, to cable to Ottawa for five million pounds sterling so as to provide the Princess with money for her starving people and back pay for her army. The bad Prince knew about the money, and, of course, tried to take it from the train, but he just missed it and the people were saved from starvation. Another time, too, a strange thing happened. The bad Prince was deported, but something went wrong with the deportation. He substituted another man for himself and hid himself above all places in the royal palace in the apartments of his accomplice, the Princess's lady-in-waiting, who was a fine type of villainess for a military melodrama. Between them they kidnapped the Queen's champion and put him in a dungeon, and the Queen came and cut his cords and he with his brave sword hacked many soldiers to death. After that he proved to the Princess that although a Canadian born he was the rightful heir to the throne of Dalitza, and she was so glad that she allowed him to hug her. And there ended the romance of Prince and Princess, most excellently acted by Mr. James Carew and Miss Una Venning. The audience was well pleased with the fare and called for the authors.

J.W.

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1914.

THE KING'S PLAYERS.

'DIPLOMACY' AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

SECOND PERFORMANCE AFTER 21 YEARS.

The King and Queen, accompanied by Princess Mary, the Princess Royal, and Princess Maud, and other members of the Royal Family, were present in the Waterloo Chamber at Windsor Castle last night for the "command" performance of Sardou's great work "Diplomacy," by Mr. Gerald du Maurier and the members of Mr. Frank Curzon's company from Wyndham's Theatre. It is nearly twenty-one years since "Diplomacy" had its former "command" performance before Queen Victoria at Balmoral, and it is thirty-six years since the play was first presented in London. It was revived at Wyndham's Theatre last March, and has lost none of the freshness of its story of the outraged husband and humbled wife.

Just before nine o'clock their Majesties and the members of the Royal Family entered the Waterloo Chamber and took their seats in the chairs immediately facing the stage. The rest of the audience was composed of members of the royal household, officers of the Windsor garrison, and about 150 specially invited Windsor residents. In the gallery were several royal servants.

A BRILLIANT PICTURE.

As the curtain rose the Waterloo Chamber presented a brilliant picture, the flowers and palms from the royal conservatories, which were banked around the stage, making a charming setting.

The cast was as follows:

Henry Beauclerc ..... Mr. Gerald du Maurier.
Julian Beauclerc ..... Mr. Owen Nares.
Algernon Fairfax ..... Mr. A. E. Matthews.
Count Orloff ..... Mr. Arthur Wontner.
Baron Stein ..... Mr. Norman Forbes.
Markham ..... Mr. H. Laurent.
Shephard ..... Mr. Algernon West.
Antoine ..... Mr. Frederick Culley.
Lady Henry Fairfax ..... Lady Tree.
Marquise de Rio-Zarès ..... Miss Annie Schletter.
Countess Zicka ..... Miss Ellis Jeffreys.
Mion ..... Miss Malise Sheridan.
Dora ..... Miss Marie Doro.

The acting of Miss Marie Doro and Mr. Gerald du Maurier was much enjoyed by the audience, which was very appreciative. At the conclusion of the performance just before midnight the King congratulated Mr. du Maurier on the admirable performance.

On the arrival of the members of the company at the castle at seven o'clock they were entertained at dinner in the Audience Chamber, being waited on by the King's servants, and after the performance they had supper in the same state apartment, being afterwards driven to the Great Western station, and leaving Windsor by special train at about 1.30 a.m.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE LIT
JOHN S.
Proprietress

Spec:
THREE NE

Tuesday
Matinee
Feb 3

MAT

Stall
No. C 7

This to be retained

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd, 1914, at 2.45

"ONE GOOD TURN,"

A Nightmare in One Act,

By MARTIN SWAYNE AND EILLE NORWOOD.

George Sanderson ... EILLE NORWOOD
James Bray ... JAMES BERRY
Mrs. Loring ... BARBARA EVEREST

SCENE—A Bedroom. TIME—3 a.m.

GWEN JOHN presents

"THE LADIES' COMEDY."

By MAURICE HEWLETT.

Eugenio ... WILLIAM ARMSTRONG
Grumio ... A. E. WALKER
Fabrizio ... EVERARD VANDERLIP
Drusio ... WILLIAM STACK
Officer ... ANDREW GILL
Isotta ... EDITH EVANS
Donna Camilla ... GWEN JOHN
Countess Galeotto ... HAIDEE GUNN

SCENE—Venice. TIME—1700.

Produced by A. E. FILMER.

"RAHAB."

A Dramatic Episode, by KENELM FOSS.

The Woman ... RUTH MACKAY
Her Maid ... ADA MARIUS
A Visitor ... BASIL HOLLOWAY

SCENE—The Woman's Flat. TIME—11 a.m.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

FIRST MOVEMENT ... "Petite Suite" ... Coleridge Taylor
(a) GAVOTTE ... Rameau
(b) MINUET ... Boccherini
VALSE ... "Triste" ... Sibelius

These Artistes appear by permission of the respective Managements: Messrs. Frank Curzon and Gerald du Maurier, Frederick Harrison, F. M. Faraday, Sir Herbert Tree, Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie, and Louis Meyer.

Stage Manager ... NOEL GROOME.

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1914.

DRAMA IN BRIEF.

Three one-act plays made up the programme presented for a special matinée at the Little Theatre yesterday.

The programme began with a "spoof" play by Mr. Martin Swayne and Mr. Eille Norwood, called "One Good Turn," the ingredients of which are simple. A man wakes up from a drunken sleep to find himself locked in a strange room with what is apparently a dead man. The inmates of the place charge him with murder. He agrees to pay £1,000 to be set free. When he has gone we learn that he was duped by two very shady characters, who drugged him and prepared the "crime."

The second play, in three short scenes, was called "The Ladies' Comedy." Its author is Mr. Maurice Hewlett. It is a comedy of errors; period, 1700; scene, Venice. It exploits a man masquerading as a woman and a yonng woman masquerading as a man. They were fortunate in finding in Venice people who were easily deceived by disguises. The audience yesterday was content with being mildly amused.

The last item on the programme was called "Rahab." The three characters in it were a woman of pleasure, her maid, and a Salvation Army captain. He came to kill the woman because she had ruined his son and sent him out to commit suicide. He told her to prepare to die. She feigned indifference to death and won over the old man so that he threw away the knife. Then she laughed and told him she had tricked him. That brought about the end. He strangled her, and his cry as the curtain fell was, "Now I can never meet my son in Heaven."

J. W.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON.

To-night, Tuesday. February 3rd, 1914, at 8.30

SEYMOUR HICKS & ELLALINE TERRISS

IN

"Broadway Jones"

A new Farcical Play in Four Acts by George M. Cohan.

Broadway Jones	Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS
Jones' friend	Mr. THOMAS MEIGHAN
Consolidated Chewing Gum Co.	Mr. WILLIAM HOGG
	Mr. C. C. BUCKSTONE
Jones' servant	Mr. HARRY LAURI
	Mr. CHARLES LEWIN
	Mr. JOHN J. HOOKER
	Mr. STANLEY FERRETT
	Mr. ARTHUR JENNER
(Secretary)	Mr. LEWIS COKER
(Stenographer)	Mr. H. W. KIMBER
	Mr. C. SIDDONS KEMBLE
	Miss ELIZABETH WATSON
	Miss ADELA MEASOR
(Cashier)	Miss ZOË GORDON
	Miss CONSTANCE LITTELL
AND	Miss JOAN CHALLIS
	Miss ELLALINE TERRISS

May Tracey, Lee Maxwell, Sylvia Grey, Joan Beryll, Ivy Cain, Malvina Longfellow, Doris Lessing, Dora Fraser, Messrs. Eric Lugg, Ralph Le Cornu, Hamilton Jackson.

Act I. Broadway Jones' Flat in New York
Act II. At Judge Slotswood's
Act III. The Offices of the Jones' Gum Factory.
Act IV. Martin's Restaurant, New York

The Play produced by Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS.

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30. First Matinee, Saturday next at 2.30.

EDWARD JONES, Stage Manager ... HARRY UDPH

Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7[illegible]

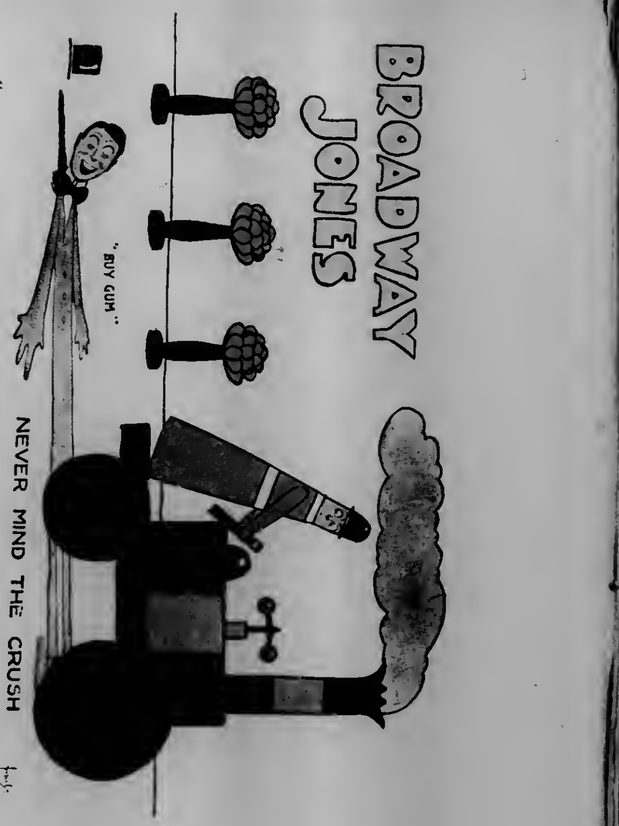
Business Manager ... For Seymour Hicks & Ellaline Terriss ... FRANK BOOR
Business Manager ... For Frank Curzon ... T. B. VAUGHAN

The new play called "Broadway Jones," by the American author, George M. Cohan, which Mr. Seymour Hicks, by arrangement with Mr. Frank Curzon, produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Tuesday evening, began really well. It was good American farce in the first act, and one can only gasp and wonder why the story of the young fellow in debt getting engaged to a comic widow was dropped there, and an entirely new one about a stupid simpleton being drilled and bullied by every man and woman he met should have been substituted. The hero, if so stupid and purposeless a fellow can be called a hero, is, when the curtain goes up on Act I., discovered arriving home drunk in the early hours of the morning at his elaborately furnished New York home. Outside the house the friends from whom he has just parted are heard serenading him with the "Wedding March," and young Jones—of reputed fabulous wealth, and only twenty-five years old—goes to bed too tipsy to tell his butler what it all meant.

* * * * *

The above little scene took about five minutes to act, the curtain was dropped for a moment or two to mark the lapse of some hours, and when taken up again the morning sun was shining through the sitting-room windows, and Robert Wallace was there to learn from Jones the events of the night before. Jones was in talking humour and told a lot. When a mere child his father died, leaving him £50,000. When he became a youth his daily dream was to get to New York. He talked so much of it that the villagers at home nicknamed him Broadway Jones. Then he sold the chewing gum factory left him by his father, and went to New York to "live." He flung his money about and lived with the smart set. Now all his money was gone. No one believed it, so he had unlimited credit, and owed £12,000.

* * * * *



That was why the previous night he accepted the comic rich widow's proposal of marriage. He would go through with it, and as the widow arrived there and then to see her "boy" on the first morning of their engagement the fun began. His friend and the widow fought like cat and dog, and Broadway shouted and rushed about, but he was not funny. The widow and his friend did the laughter making. Mr. Hicks had a part as an American that did not fit him very well, and I thought he made the mistake of overplaying it all the time. It did not matter much, however, for the other two held him up so to speak, and the business went with a roar. Unfortunately, the fun ended with that act. The rest of the story was devoted to Broadway's luck in being bequeathed another fortune and the gum factory he had once sold.

* * * * *

Sentiment from that moment pervaded everything. Broadway became a dull fellow, who evidently could not see further than his nose; for he put his face bang up against the faces of those he talked to. He fell in love with a country maiden, and when she followed him to New York to warn him about business affairs, she went in evening dress to a New York restaurant, that looked like a musical comedy restaurant, and Broadway became engaged to her. There it ended, causing a regret that the promise of the first act was never kept. The friend and the widow were played splendidly by Mr. Thomas Meighan, and Miss Elizabeth Watson, but in my opinion neither Mr. Hicks nor Miss Ellaline Terriss had suitable or effective parts to act. J.W.

American Farce at the Lyceum.

Melville melodrama gives place for a time to bustling American farce at the Lyceum, to which house last night Mr. Seymour Hicks, with Miss Ellaline Terriss and their company, transferred bag and baggage, George M. Cohan's successful piece, Broadway Jones, which has been running at the Prince of Wales's for a couple of months. Mr. Hicks, with his broad methods, should find ampler elbow-room on the more spacious stage of the Lyceum, where, no doubt, Broadway Jones will prove a popular Easter haliday attraction. This is quite a new departure at Messrs. Melville's house. April 8

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

On THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5th, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

WILL PRESENT

THE TYRANNY OF TEARS

A Comedy in Four Acts by C. HADDON CHAMBERS.

Mr. Parbury	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Mr. George Gunning	Mr. FRED KERR
Colonel Armitage (Mrs. Parbury's Father) ..	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Mrs. Parbury	Miss ETHEL IRVING
Miss Hyacinth Woodward	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Evans (Mr. Parbury's Butler)	Mr. ERIC COWLEY
Caroline (Mrs. Parbury's Maid)	Miss ISOLDE LE ROY

Act I.	.. Mr. Parbury's Study at Hampstead. Afternoon	(Alfred Craven)
Act II.	.. .. ..The Same. Evening
Act III.	.. .. ..The Garden. Next Morning	(R. C. McCleery)
Act IV.	.. .. ..The Study. Early Afternoon

Miss Ethel Irving's Dresses by BAROLET, 51 Knightsbridge, S.W.
Miss Evelyn D'Alroy's Dresses and Hats designed by Mr. REVILLE, and executed by REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912) LTD., 15/16 Hanover Square, W.
Furniture by SPILLMAN.
Floral Decorations in Act III. by A. & L. UHLMANN.

The Play Produced under the Direction of the Author.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE, "Romantique" ...	Keler Bela
a. "Graceful Dance" ...	Haines
b. "Slavonic Dance" ...	Dvorak
c. "Je sais que vous" ...	Christine
SELECTION, "The Pearl Girl" ...	Felix Talbot
a. "Forest Whispers" ...	Czibulka
b. "Hearts and Flowers" ...	Czibulka
c. "A Village Fete" ...	Michiels

Stage Manager ... ... LAURENCE WHITE

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: P... £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7... First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: I...atre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager .. .. LEONARD LILLIES

Extract from the Rules made by Manager of the Theatre must be prin... of the performance by all exit and e... proof screen to the proscenium openin... its being in proper working order. ... passages and staircases must be kep... temporary ...—The name of the actual and responsible ... The Public can leave the Theatre at the end ... open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fire... ast once during every performance to ensure ...ted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, ... other obstructions, whether permanent or

COMEDY THEATRE 5
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
5/2/1914
STALL
E18

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.) Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... ... H. B. IRVING.

Lillah McCarthy Granville Barker

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 6th, at 7 p.m., and every following Evening at 8 p.m.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

A Midsummer Night's Dream

Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Theseus	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Hippolyta...	EVELYN HOPE
Egeus	RALPH HUTTON
Hermia	LAURA COWIE
Lysander	E. LON SWINLEY
Helena	LILLAH McCARTHY
Demetrius	GUY RATHBONE
Philostrate	HERBERT HEWETSON
Quince	ARTHUR WHITBY
Snug	NEVILLE GARTSIDE
Bottom	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Flute	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Snout	STRATTON RODNEY
Starveling...	H. O. NICHOLSON
Oberon	DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY
Titania	CHRISTINE SILVER
Puck	DONALD CALTHROP
A Fairy	GEORGE BURROWS
Pease-Blossom	ODETTE GOLMBAULT
Cobweb	MARJORIE COULSON
Moth	EILEEN JOWETT
Mustard-Seed	SHEILA O'BRIEN

Attendant on Titania—	Attendant on Oberon	Attendant on Theseus—
Olive Alexander, Elsie Averill, Gladys Blume, Margot Brigden, Margaret Dean, Jean Gregor, Winifred Tapping, Valentine Savage, Gladys Wiles, Gerald Jerome, Horace Taylor.	Eileen Desmond Deane, Olive Elton, Iris Fraser Foss.	Dorothy Warren, Beatrice Drury, Elaine Temple, Monona Thow, Mary Rossshore, Angela Colenso, Sybil Graham, Tomara Richards.
	D. Cooper, Alex. Fortescue, M. Hogan, P. Madgewick, M. Neville, C. Stock, E. Warburton, H. Woodward.	Cecil Bixner, E. C. Francis, Charles Melling, Eric Messiter, J. H. Moore, Edmund Phelps, C. Shepherd Smith, G. West, H. P. Templeton.

The Decoration of the Play by NORMAN WILKINSON.

The Music and Dances by CECIL SHARP.

The Management owes many thanks to VICTOR MACLURE for painting the Scenery; to Miss DOROTHY CARLTON SMYTH, Mrs. OWEN and Mr. SAVAGE for making the Dresses, to R. & G. MANNING PIKE for painting many of them; to Mr. CLARKSON for Wigs; to Mr. GAMBA for Shoes; and indeed to many others that it is impossible to mention.

There will be one interval of 5 minutes and one interval of 15 minutes.

With the indulgence of the Audience, no calls will be taken by the Actors until the end of the Play.

Acting Manager	For LILLAH McCARTHY and GRANVILLE BARKER	...	... HOWARD LESLIE
Stage Manager		...	OSWALD MARSHALL
Musical Director		...	MORTON STEPHENSON
General Manager		....	... A. S. PIGOTT

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1914.

Is it Titania's Indian boy that has given Mr. Barker his notion of Orientalizing Shakespeare's fairies? Or is it Bakst? Anyhow, they look like Cambodian idols and posture like Nijinsky in Le Dieu Bleu. But the most startling thing about them is that they are all gold—gold hair, gold faces, gold to the tips of their toes. A golden Oberon is flouted by a golden Titania. Peas-Blossom and Cobweb and Moth and Mustard-Seed are golden children—the only children among these fairies—three in flakes of gold and the fourth in golden baggy trousers out of Sumurûn. The rest are "golden lads and lasses," who, some of them, dance old romping, obviously English, dances, while the others, the Cambodian idols, fall into stiff postures in corners. One with a scimitar stalks like the black marionette, with his scimitar, in Petrouchka. Evidently the Russian ballet, which has transformed so much in London, has transmogrified Shakespeare. The golden fairies chase one another through the wood in single file or lie prone on a low green mound, grouped round Titania, under great shafts of green mounting to the sky, against a purple background. This colour-effect, the heavy mass of old gold against the purple and the green, is wonderfully beautiful. In the end the golden fairies play hide-and-seek round the columns of Theseus's palace. Gradually their numbers dwindle. At last only one, a girl, is left—the last patch of gold to fade from the sight, and to leave on the mind the strange, new impression of the play as golden, a "golden book of spirit and sense." Who is the magician who invented these golden fairies? Is it Mr. Barker or Mr. Norman Wilkinson? One might perhaps have had misgivings about the thing in advance, a fear of tawdriness, dreadful associations with the golden image in Kensington-gardens. But the thing turns out to have been an inspiration, something to strike us all with wonder and delight. As soon as you see the thing you know that Mendelssohn would never do. For our part, we should have welcomed Stravinsky. But Mr. Cecil Sharp has given us old English folk-music, rather dolorous, always piano, more quaint than tuneful. Well, somehow or other, as the Americans say, it "goes." It goes quite well with the gold.

A Patch of Scarlet.

On the gold is one single patch of scarlet. This is Puck, with a baggy wig and baggy breeches, a hobgoblin. He—Puck is this time really a he—is Mr. Donald Calthrop, gyrating, sitting at Oberon's feet cross-legged, tumbling head over heels, or, like a mischievous boy, putting finger to nose behind Bottom's back. A most uncanny Puck, this scarlet patch.

As for Theseus and Hippolyta and their train, we do not know where their dresses come from. We can only make shots. Is it from the mural decorations of Minos's palace unearthed in Crete? But some of them seem Byzantine and suggest a Ravenna fresco. All, men and women alike, wear "peg-top" trousers, tight at the ankle. But in the last scene, at the performance of Pyramus and Thisbe, they, so to speak, put on their evening clothes—flowing Greek robes. So clad, they recline on couches in the very front of the stage (Mr. Barker's now familiar "apron stage") while the performance of Quince and his fellows takes place on the palace steps in the rear. This, again, is a novel arrangement and an admirable. Quince (Mr. Whitby) is impayable, Bottom (Mr. Playfair) immense, Flute (Mr. Quartermaine) deliciously absurd as Thisbe. And then the "Bergamask" dance! It never came out of Bergamo, but is right Warwickshire, the acme of the clumsy grotesque with vigorous kickings in that part of the anatomy meant for kicks. Perhaps the best thing in the performance, however, was the behaviour of the audience; Theseus's courtly lead in the applause, the whispered comments of Demetrius and Lysander, the lively interest of the courtiers. It was all alive, this scene, all at the high-watermark of excitement.

As always in A Midsummer Night, the difficulty is with the bewitched quartet of lovers. The difficulty is that they are often in imminent danger of becoming bores. If they escape being bores, they may be said to have succeeded. We are not sure that the men did altogether escape: but the ladies, Miss McCarthy and Miss Cowie, were more lucky. Miss McCarthy hardly shows at her best in a flaxen wig, but no doubt she must needs be contrasted with Miss Cowie's brunette. The quarrel of the two girls gives, as always, a tremendous "lift" to this part of the play. Miss Cowie makes a surprisingly intense vixen—an anticipation of Carmen.

The Golden Oberon.

But it is not of these one thinks in the end. The mind goes back to the golden fairies, and one's memories of this production must always be golden memories. The golden Oberon, Mr. Dennis Neilson-Terry, is a figure of slim, noble, and Giorgionesque beauty. His movements are grace itself. His voice, with the familiar family timbre, is the very voice for some of the most beautiful lines Shakespeare ever wrote. This Oberon, for the first time, dominates not only the scene, but the whole play, informs it with graciousness and majesty (fairy majesty, golden majesty) and exquisite rhythmic beauty. Miss Christine Silver's Titania is a delicate, fragile pendant to the Oberon. The little golden child-fairies are delightfully childish even in their stiff Cambodian-idol attitudes. There was a great outhurst of enthusiasm—pent up in silent absorption during the evening—at the fall of the curtain. Mr. Barker, standing amid his golden fairies, seemed to be thinking that silence, too, has been said to be golden: but he was compelled, nevertheless, to utter a word of thanks. If only he can keep it up! If only he can run through all Shakespeare in the spirit of daring artistic adventure with which he has turned the fairy-land of A Midsummer Night into gold.

Asked by an interviewer why his fairies had gold faces, Mr. Granville Barker said: "I gilded their faces chiefly to differentiate them from the ordinary human beings of the play. Shakespeare thought of his fairies as mysterious beings from the Far East; and I recollected that the East dresses all its immortals in gold—the Eastern statues of the gods are golden. And I think that gold is a natural symbol for beautiful, immortal things; I believe children think of fairyland as a golden place, and Blake signifies immortality by gold. As for stage decoration, it must not be realistic, at all events. You can't make a forest on the stage that looks like a real forest; so you make a symbol of a forest as well as you can. My wood in the 'Dream' is made of long dark green strips of curtain, painted with symbols of trees, rather than with trees; and I think that the effect is good; the imagination is stimulated, not depressed.'"

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1914.

A SHAKESPEARE NIGHTMARE.

MR. BARKER'S IDEAS.

TITANIA WITH A GILT FACE.

FAIRIES WITH CRIMSON EYEBROWS.

The revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Savoy Theatre last night forms a middle term between Futurism and the sixteenth century stage convention.

Mr. Granville Barker adheres to the apron stage, lit from the front, and the white rectangular proscenium. But Mr. Normau Wilkinson, who is again responsible for the "decoration," has somewhat moderated his artistic transports, though many of his effects are still sufficiently daring.

The godlike Theseus wears the now familiar cracker crown, but does not wear it long. Dainty Miss Laura Cowie as Hermia, in grass green with a couple of red roses as the complementary note of colour, looks like a pretty Tartar maiden. Miss Lillah McCarthy, however, as the love-sick Helena, is quite Athenian save for her flaxen hair worn à la Gretchen. The lovers Lysander and Demetrius show a distinct Japanese influence in their costume.

A CUBIST CITY.

The clowns are properly more Elizabethan, though Bottom's doublet and hose are Dutch; but none the more in keeping with a light pink wall, over which we get a glimpse of some Cubist city. Among them Mr. Arthur Whitby, as Quince, appeared an intellectual in disguise, while as sweet bully Bottom, Mr. Nigel Playfair roared you as gently as any sucking dove, and entirely missed the mock-heroic tone of this distinguished amateur, being, strangely enough, funnier when wearing the ass's head.

After these hempen homespuns have arranged their tedious brief scene to be played before the duke, there came the first interval, acts being abjured.

The first woodland scene was a truly marvellous picture of a magician's heaven over shadowy indigo trees. And then came the real wonder of the evening. Oberon and Titania, with their attendant fairies, were dressed from top to toe in gold bronze, their faces gilt and eyebrows picked out with crimson. In shimmering robes and quaint Indian headdresses they moved with shuffling gait and made weird mechanical gestures, looking for all the world like an odd lot of brass ornaments that had come to life.

In contrast with the other immortals Puck was clad in a rococo dress of bright red. His fair wig was somewhat in the style of Struwwelpeter and he seemed to be more nearly allied to Hans Andersen's fairies than those of Shakespeare. Nevertheless, Mr. Donald Calthrop made this merry elf a whimsical, nimble-footed creature whom one could not help liking.

Quite a pretty effect of lighting was obtained in a grassy bank surrounded by rather flimsy tree-stems. Here the fairy gold is deposited and there is much primitive dancing to soft music. Possibly, however, because the decoration so often distracts the attention, the tragi-comic love story tended for once to send one into the everyday land of dreams.

One would, indeed, prefer the Teutonic heaviness of Reinhardt to the unbridled fantasy of Mr. Barker and his merry men. But this was evidently not the opinion of his kind friends in front, whose enthusiasm at the end knew no bounds. Yielding to their entreaties, Mr. Barker made a brief speech in which he paid a well-deserved compliment to the company. For one and all had worked hard in spite of having been made for the most part to look a trifle ridiculous. It would, in fact, be a treat to see them play "the dream" in a less overpowering setting.

The present attitude of the Savoy producers reminds one of the lines in Buckingham's "Rehearsal":

——"fellows that scorn to imitate Nature, but are given altogether to elevate and surprise."

Hazlitt a hundred years ago found this delightful poem converted into a dull pantomime at Covent Garden. And then, as now, it was the scenery that did it.

G. M.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LEON QUARTERMAINE—FLUTE

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

QUEEN'S THEATRE,
Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Mr. GASTON MAYER
PRESENTS
"THE MELTING POT"
BY
ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Mendel Quixano	...	Mr. HUGH TABBERER
Baron Revendal	...	Mr. EDWARD SASS
Quincy Davenport, Jr.	...	Mr. P. PERCEVAL CLARK
Herr Pappelmeister	...	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Vera Revendal	...	Miss PHYLLIS RELPH
Baroness Revendal	...	Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Frau Quixano	...	Miss INEZ BENSUSAN
Kathleen O'Reilly	...	Miss E. NOLAN O'CONNOR
Settlement Servant	...	Miss M. STEWART
	and
David Quixano	...	Mr. WALKER WHITESIDE

(His original part, as played by him in America continuously for three years)

Produced by NORMAN PAGE

Synopsis of Scenes

ACT I. The Quixano's living room in New York, at (5 o'clock of a February afternoon).

ACT II. The same (on an afternoon in March).

ACT III. Miss Revendal's room at the Settlement House (on an afternoon in April).

ACT IV. The Roof-Garden of the Settlement House (on the evening of the Fourth of July).

On SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7th, at 8 p.m.

Mr. Israel Zangwill's play "The Melting Pot" was transferred from the Queen's Theatre to the Comedy Theatre yesterday.

"THE MELTING POT."

26/1

BY ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

David Quixano	Harold Chapin
Mendel Quixano	Hugh Tabberer
Baron Revendal	H. Lawrence Leyton
Quincy Davenport, Jun.	P. Perceval Clark
Herr Pappelmeister	Clifton Alderson
Vera Revendal	Phyllis Relph
Baroness Revendal	Gillian Scaife
Frau Quixano	Inez Bensusan
Kathleen O'Reilly	E. Nolan O'Connor
Settlement Servant	Ruth Parrott

"The Melting Pot," which the Play Actors produced last week, is the kind of play of which one thinks more kindly a few days after seeing it than during the performance. Its merits have then had time to emerge. And its merits are not slight. There are the attractive glimpses of Jewish life and custom, persisting from ancient days into the most modern of civilisations. Old Frau Quixano, with her tears and her laughter turned on to order at the bidding of tradition, yet sincere because the tradition is in her blood, is as interesting a survival as could be. Again, the author is scrupulously fair both to Jew and to Gentile, giving us the good points of both sides, yet not concealing the stubborn inadaptability of the Jew nor the haughty prejudice of the Gentile. There are little points, too, like the character of that vividly presented Irish maid-servant, so forcibly acted by Miss O'Connor, and the shakiness of the halfway house between old and new inhabited by Mendel Quixano (a part very well and truly played by Mr. Hugh Tabberer), which stand out more the more one thinks over the play.

And there is, of course, the main idea—the idea that the United States are the melting-pot, "the crucible of God," in which all the old prejudices and hatreds and evils of Europe are to be refined into the gold of a single new nation. To anyone who knows anything of modern Chicago or New York, it may seem an idea ridiculously impossible of realisation; yet it is good to think of anyone holding it.

Mr. Zangwill puts it into the enthusiastic head of his young musical genius, David Quixano. David was in many ways a very un-Jewish Jew. When Quincy Davenport, the young millionaire, offered to have David's symphony performed by his private orchestra, David refused this splendid opportunity of spoiling the Gentile; he flatly and angrily refused, partly because Davenport, instead of feeding the hungry, had squandered his money on "freak" entertainments, mainly because Davenport was ashamed of being an American and liked to play at being a European. Nevertheless, Mr. Zangwill pulls David through in the end. Although the boy finds that Vera Revendal's father is the very man who ordered, far away in Kishineff, the massacre of his mother and sister and friends in a pogrom, he also finds Vera's love and his own strong enough to kill the past that has all but unsettled his reason. Mr. Zangwill seems to mean that David was right in his great idea. We hope that it is so. If he is holding David up all the time to mockery it is a cruel thing to do.

It would also make the play a thoroughly insincere and bad piece of work, instead of what we believe it to be, a fine piece of work marred by excess. Its merits need time to emerge. At the hearing, and for hours afterwards, one is deafened, battered, crushed, swamped by David. When David is telling Kathleen O'Reilly of old Frau Quixano's loneliness in this strange new world he is charming. But his addresses to the American flag, his ravings about the massacre at Kishineff, his harangues on the United States—but for good manners one would clap hands to one's ears. Hyde Park is the place for him, not the little Court Theatre. It is all natural enough, no doubt. David would very likely behave so; David would very likely express himself in that language. But drama (we believe that it has been observed before) is not nature. It is nature refined in the melting pot of art, which reduces bulk in order to intensify quality. Reduced by three-fourths, David might have been sterling stuff. It was, of course, an extraordinarily difficult part to act. We can imagine Mr. H. V. Esmond a few years ago making a beautiful thing of it. But we believe it must be better in the reading than in any acting that Mr. Zangwill is likely to get for it. Miss Phyllis Relph did well as Vera, and Mr. Lawrence Leyton as Baron Revendal; and Mr. Clifton Alderson was excellent as the old German musician with his umbrella.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER ... MR GEORGE EDWARDES

TO-NIGHT, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7TH, 1914; AT 8.

For the First Time.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION.

"After the Girl,"

A "Revusical Comedy" in Two Acts and Six Scenes.

Written and Composed by PAUL A. RUBENS.

Lyrics by PERCY GREENBANK and PAUL A. RUBENS

Mr. Pitt ...	(An American Manufacturer from Cincinnatti, U.S.A.)	Mr. LEW HEARN
Mr. Clayton ...	(A Sporting character)	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Bill Dudley	(An ex-Covent Garden Porter, now servant to Charlston)	Mr. WILLIAM STEPHENS
Count Cleves	(In charge of the Sporting department at Amsterdam Exhibition)	Mr. GUY LE FEUVRE
Hon. Eddie Scott ...	(A "Nut")	Mr. W. CECIL
Maurice ...	(Head Waiter at the Cascade Restaurant)	... Mr. A. CAMP
Customs Officers ...	...	Mr. H. JONES Mr. J. REDMOND Mr. M. RAVEN
Gendarmes ...	...	Mr. J. GRANDE Mr. F. RAYNHAM
House Detectives ...		Mr. A. GATER Mr. J. DELANEY
Captain Vadda ...	(A Hungarian Officer) ...	Mr. GEO. GRUNDY
Metzger ...	(A Hungarian Policeman) ...	Mr. M. EWART
Franz ...	(A Hungarian Cymbale Player)	Mr. R. RICHARDS
M. Hammerschlayer ...	(A Theatrical Agent) ...	Mr. W. LEVEAUX
Hans Schmidt ...	(A Stage Door Keeper) ...	Mr. S. PENTON

And

A Number of Visitors to the Little Inn at Scheveningen

Francis Charleston		Mr. CLIFTON CRAWFORD
Doris ...	(Mr. Pitt's Daughter) ...	Miss ISOBEL ELSOM
Elaine ...	(Maid companion to Doris) ...	Miss MABEL SEALBY
Mrs. Pitt ...	Doris's Stepmother, formerly Mr. Pitt's French Cook	MLLE CAUMONT
... ...	(Accomplished Fame of Mr. Pitt) ...	Mme BONITA
... ...	(An American Actress)	Miss MURIEL HUDSON
Lisa ...	(A Dutch Girl, Doris's Friend)	Miss MAGGIE JARVIS
Sophie ...	(A Hungarian Student, Friend of Doris)	Miss MARGARET PAUL
Mrs. Gladys ...	(A French Flower Girl)	Miss ETHEL LAWSON
Anita ...	(An American Girl) ...	Miss F. HADLEY
Mrs. Pitt ...	(A Dutch Market Woman)	Miss JOAN PENROSE
Gaby	(A Hungarian Singing Girl) ...	Miss M. TOMLINS
Jack	(Mrs. Pitt's Children)	Master DAVID ROSE Miss MINNIE KIOSKI
Nellie ...	(Mr. Pitt's other daughter) ...	Miss DOT TEMPLE
Yvonne ...		Miss E. MACKAY
Daisy ...	(Three Hungarian Girls) ...	Miss B. DUNBAR
Margot ...		Miss F. READE

ACT I.—Scene 1.	The Bois, Paris		(F. E. Ryan)
Scene 2.	Customs House, Belgian Frontier	...	(Alfred Cowen)
Scene 3.	Market Place, Amsterdam ...	...	(Hired Terrace.)
ACT II. Scene 1.	Buda Pesth		(J. & Phil Hunter)
Scene 2	"Summer Gardens," Berlin	...	(Alfred Cowen)
Scene 3.	The Carlton Hotel, London ...		(J. & Paul Hunter)

(New Year's Eve.)

The Play Produced by J. A. E. MALONE.

DANCES arranged by WILLIE WARDE and WILL BISHOP.

Costumes designed by COMELLI and executed by LUCILE, LTD.; M. E. FISHER, LTD. FIRENZE; DOUILLET, LTD.; MICHARD SŒURS; B. J. SIMMONS & CO.; MORRIS ANGEL & SON; BURNSHAW & KNIGHTS.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE.

Scenery built by J. BRUNSKILL.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Properties by H. W. ELLIOTT.

Electrical Effects by G. A. APPLEBEE. Machinist, J. SHELDON.

Musical Director ... GUSTAV WANDA

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10

Extracts from the Rules made by the London County Council.

1. The name of the Licensee and the responsible Manager of the Theatre must be posted in every part of the Theatre.

2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all the entrance doors which must open outwards.

3. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be worked at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.

4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.

5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions whether permanent or temporary.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Last night the Gaiety Theatre after having been closed for two months was reopened with a new musical play by Paul A. Rubens, entitled "After the Girl." It was the first time for twenty-eight years that Mr. George Edwardes was not present to witness a play produced there, and there was not a patron of the theatre in the house but felt and regretted his absence. Apart from the regard and esteem that the public has for Mr. Edwardes there is the fact that the musical play as we know it to-day owes its existence to him, and that all the invention and imagination that have gone to the making of it are alone his. His name still stands at the head of the Gaiety Theatre programme as that of responsible manager, but for reasons of health he took no active part in the rehearsing of "After the Girl."

Mr. Rubens, who has written both the play and the music, has made a commendable effort to introduce some change into the form of the entertainment by giving his story in six scenes instead of the two (or occasionally the three) usually regarded as adequate. The change, slight as it was, called for a special effort on the part of the producer. To make these six scenes play quickly, naturally, amusingly, and with the gaiety that one naturally expects at the Gaiety Theatre would perhaps have required the master-hand of Mr. Edwardes himself, and, therefore, while recognising that Mr. Malone, as producer, had many serious difficulties to overcome, it is also but fair to say that he did his work well.

Beautiful River View.

The scenery was good without being striking. However, as there were scenes in Paris, Belgium, Amsterdam, Buda-pest, Berlin, and the Carlton Hotel, London, there was not the same opportunity for one striking set, as in a two-scene play. The best of all—a very picturesque affair, was the river view at Buda-pest. Signor Cornelli's designs for the costumes were—as they always are—simply delightful, and the dances arranged throughout the play by Messrs. Willie Warde and Will Bishop could not have been bettered. Mr. Malone had the help of good lieutenants, and if there was a weakness in the play it sprang from the inadequacy of the schoolgirl's reasons for racing round Europe, and for the whole of the principals pursuing her. We saw her first of all with her father and mother at a restaurant in the Bois at Paris, and to escape being sent back by them to school she "bolted." Where she got the money from to roam the Continent did not transpire. She simply went off, and then followed a sequence of scenes in which all the principals appeared. No doubt in a day or two many faults will be remedied and the chase after the girl made to appear a continuity. The Gaiety-chorus, too, which used to be a household word, or words, ought to have a much more important part in the entertainment than it got last evening, when much of the business was concerned with things that were not sufficiently amusing.

Success of Americans.

One of the most remarkable facts of the performance was the success of four Americans—Mr. Lew Hearn, Mr. Clifton Crawford, Miss Bonita, and Miss Muriel Hudson. The last mentioned, it is true, had not much to do, but she carried with great confidence some wonderful costumes and sang "Lovely Budapest" with much charm. Mr. Rubens has unquestionably written a whole lot of delightfully tuneful numbers for the play, and Miss M. Tomlins, who only appeared once in the evening to sing one of these songs, called "The Danube" is good enough to make the heroine of another Gaiety piece. Be that as it may, she gets but one number to sing. Another player who made the most of his opportunities was Mr. Lew Hearn, who evoked roars of laughter with his quaintly expressed agony when chasing his daughter from city to city, and the scenes between him and Miss Bonita were the best fun of the evening. The new leading man, Mr. Clifton Crawford, with his quaint Broadway manner—a loose-limbed young fellow with an engagingly unaffected manner—is a welcome addition to the London stage. Last night the audience took to him, and never seemed surprised that he was playing a young Englishman, who sang:

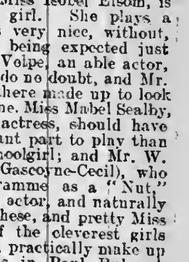
"I feel as rich as a man could be—Mallaby Deeley could not buy me, and he swung out the chorus, that had "Whoopsy Daisy" for its "war-cry," with a spirit that was infectious. Yes, the American element was well to the front last night, and for the first time in history New York has captured our Gaiety.

Pretty Fairhaired Heroine.

The new heroine, Miss Isobel Elsom, is a pretty fair-haired girl. She plays a schoolgirl, and looks very nice, without, perhaps, much more being expected just now. Mr. Frederick Volpe, an able actor, will be given more to do no doubt, and Mr. William Stephens is there made up to look like Mr. Edmund Payne. Miss Mabel Sealby, a dainty and clever actress, should have a much more important part to play than that of maid to a schoolgirl; and Mr. W. Cecil (son of Lord Gascoyne-Cecil), who figured on the programme as a "Nut," made his début as an actor, and naturally appeared nervous. These, and pretty Miss Ethel Lawson, one of the cleverest girls at the Gaiety Theatre, practically make up the list of principals in Paul Rubens's tuneful play. It is certainly a lively, hustling, Anglo-American musical comedy—English in book and music, but American by reason of the success of the American artists. One word more, to correct the error of forgetting to include Mlle. Caumont amongst those who helped to the evening's success. There was a unanimously enthusiastic reception for the play and the players, and at the finish everyone was called and applauded.

J.W



Daily Mail

Daily Net SALE Six Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1914.

MR. CECIL AT THE GAIETY.

The Gaiety Theatre is busy rehearsing the new musical play, "After the Girl," by Mr. Paul Rubens, to be produced at the end of the month. Mr. Randle Gascoyne-Cecil, eldest son of the Rev. Lord William Gascoyne-Cecil and grandson of the late Lord Salisbury, will have the small part of a young English "blood" travelling on the Continent. Yesterday he was learning the dance work with the chorus. Speaking of his choice of profession he said he had not taken it up without due consideration. "It struck me that with experience I might make a success. At all events I will try hard. Since I have joined the Gaiety company I find myself even more interested than I was before, and I am prepared to learn." Mr. Cecil has a very simple manner with much charm. His part will not compel him to sacrifice his moustache.

MR. R. GASCOYNE-CECIL

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

4 Paramount

"AFTER THE GIRL" AT THE GAIETY
Doris (the girl) and her sweetheart Freddy.

Off to Amsterdam
A gendarme (Mr. F. Raynham), Emma (Miss Mabel Sealby), Doris (Miss Isobel Elsom), and a gendarme (Mr. J. Grande)

THE PLAYHOUSE

Thursday

12/2/1914

Orch. Stall

F 16

This to be retained

To-night, Thursday, February 12th, 1914, at 8.30
Miss MARIE TEMPEST will present a New and Original Comedy, in Three Acts, called

By NORREYS CONNELL

HORNIMAN	(Butler)	MR. KENYON MUSGRAVE
SEMPILL		MR. GRAHAM BROWNE
HIGGINBOTHAM		MR. HENRY LUDLOW
EVANS		MR. ANEW McMASTER
THE EARL OF HAVANT		MR. O. B. CLARENCE
LORD GEORGE LACKLAND		MR. BEN WEBSTER
MRS. TAVISTOCK		MISS KATE SERGEANTSON
LADY SOPHIA FLETE	(The Earl of Havant's only surviving child)	MISS MARIE TEMPEST

Scene: The Drawing-Room of Lady Sophia Flete in her father the Earl of Havant's House, overlooking St. James's Park. The Room dates from the Reign of George III.
Time: Shortly before noon, on three successive days, the third, fourth and fifth of June in our day.

The Play produced by Mr. HAROLD CHAPIN.

Miss MARIE TEMPEST'S Costumes by THE MAISON HAYWARD, 67, New Bond Street, W.
The Negligé in Act I. by MAISON LUCILE, Hanover Square.
Miss SERGEANTSON'S Costumes by MAISON LUCILE.
Hats by the MAISONS LEWIS and HAYWARD.
Furniture by Messrs. DRUCE & Co., Baker Street, and COWTAN & SON, Oxford Street.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by a Fable, in One Act, called

By HAROLD CHAPIN

ZEE OL	(the Patriarch)	MR. HORTON COOPER
NAN TU	(the Prophet)	MR. MAURICE ELVEY
CHEEKOO		MR. NORMAN LORING
DATH		MR. HENRY LUDLOW
NALI		MISS LILIAN CAVANAGH
DOO OY		MISS BEATRICE YALDWYN
TAEERA		MISS NANCY MONRO

Scene:—A sheltered hollow on the plains of Scythia, where men have digged a well.
Time:—A pleasant evening ten thousand years ago, followed by a sunny morning some days later.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. NORMAN LORING
Musical Director - - - - - - - - Mr. HAROLD GRIMSTON

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

QUITE apart from the tragic realism of Strindberg's "Miss Julie," the love of a fine lady for her footman can be treated farcically or fantastically—that is to say, either in the manner of Fielding's "Joseph Andrews" or Barrie's "Admirable Crichton." In the first instance the broad burlesque of the manner mitigates the coarseness of the matter. In the second the author's imagination and ingenuity veil any sociological problems that might thrust themselves into view, and besides, in the last act, the real question is very neatly avoided. Now, Mr. Norreys Connell has tried the naturalistic manner of treating the same theme. His play which Miss Marie Tempest presented at the Playhouse, on Thursday, is neither farce nor fantasy, at any rate, not intentionally or essentially. Wildly improbable as the story is, and by turns it is farce, high comedy, and melodrama, there can be little doubt that Mr. Connell intends the affair between Lady Sophia Flete and Sempill, her footman, to be taken seriously. While reserving to himself the right to shape their ends, he yet presents to us this sprightly spinster and her adoring and adored servant as credible human beings capable, at any rate, of rough-hewing their own destinies. And though they stand revealed in the intermittent limelight of a spasmodic wit, these two characters, in their reciprocal relationship, and acted as they are by Miss Tempest and Mr. Graham Browne in the most natural manner possible, do not leave a very pleasant impression on one's mind.

"Thank Your Ladyship,"

* * *

Evidently the old idea that servants were automata prevailed in Lord Havant's household: but from the moment that Lady Sophia became conscious of the man in the automaton Semoill, she so teased, tantalised, and tormented the poor fellow that to call her a coquette is only to use the word as for a more vulgarly expressive but quite unprintable one. What is more, even though she felt entitled to test to breaking-point the strength of Sempill's fidelity and love by tormenting him beyond all reason herself, it was sheer brutality which exposed him to the insults and assaults of the caddish lordling whose advances she seemed half-inclined to encourage. It was not surprising that Sempill, in spite of the inscrutable stoicism of the perfect servant, ran away. The wonder was that he came back to be the victim of such a vixen, not because he saw the advertisement which her now repentant ladyship put in the Times, but because he couldn't keep away from her. He left with a broken heart, he returned to get a broken head from the cane of the caddish lordling, the haughtiest villain that ever contaminated the air of a drawing-room comedy with melodramatic protestations and fulminations.

A Polite Synonym

* * *

Quite as preposterous in their way as the melodramatic machinations of Lord George Lackland (a sort of modernised and vulgarised Joseph Surface in his taste for sentiment) were the farcical characteristics of the Earl of Havant, Lady Sophy Flete's father. You may, perhaps, notice in passing the author's attempt to give an eighteenth-century air to his play by suggesting the condition and attributes of his characters in their nomenclature. Lord Havant was who called himself a "die-hard," was cowed by his amazingly autocratic butler, and had "Lloyd George" on the place where his brain should have been. Throughout the play the author, borrowing a wearisome wheeze from the music-halls, allows this grotesque old peer to harp on the iniquities of the Chancellor, and it is typical of the curiously unballasted quality of the piece that Lord Havant gives his paternal blessing on the union of his daughter and her footman because he is supposed to believe that the excellent Sempill has felled to earth and put to rout not Lord George, but Lloyd George.

An Amiable Lunatic

* * *

The Incorporated Stage Society.

Founded 1899. Incorporated 1904.

AU PETIT BONHEUR.

A Comedy in One Act,

BY

ANATOLE FRANCE.

Translated by ASHLEY DUKES.

The Play produced by ALLAN WADE and the Translator.

THE PEOPLE OF THE PLAY IN THE ORDER OF THEIR APPEARANCE.

MADAME DE SESCOURT, Germaine.....MIRIAM LEWES

MADAME LAVERNE, Cécile.....MADGE McINTOSH

FRANÇOIS.....CHARLES MAUNSELL

NALÈGE.....CLAUDE KING

PAUL CHAMBRY.....MALCOLM CHERRY

A Drawing-room in Paris. 1895.

THE INCORPORATED STAGE SOCIETY.

MONDAY,
16-2-14.

Stalls

F 3

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

43

THE COMEDY OF THE MAN WHO MARRIED A DUMB WIFE.

In Two Acts,

BY

ANATOLE FRANCE.

Translated by ASHLEY DUKES.

The Play produced by the Translator and ALLAN WADE.

THE PEOPLE OF THE PLAY IN THE ORDER OF THEIR APPEARANCE.

GILLES DE BOISCOURTIER.....GEOFFREY DOUGLAS
ALIZON.....SHEILA CAMDEN
MASTER ADAM FUMÉE, BARRISTER.....A. S. HOMEWOOD
LÉONARD BOTAL, JUDGE.....RUDGE HARDING
CATHERINE BOTAL.....MAIRE O'NEILL
A BLIND MAN.....J. BOWATER VERNON
MASTER SIMON COLLINE, PHYSICIAN.....EDWARD RIGBY
MASTER JEAN MAUGIER, SURGEON.....BALIOL HOLLOWAY
MASTER SERAPHIN DULAURIER, APOTHECARY.....GEDGE TWYMAN
MLLE. DE LA GARANDIÉRE.....JOAN BENNETT
LACKEY.....CHARLES MAUNSELL

Paris: The House of Léonard Botal. The Middle Age.

The Council desire to express thanks to Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON, who has kindly lent the Haymarket Theatre for this production.

Some of the artists appear by kind permission of THE ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ART, Mr. KENELM FOSS, and Miss LILLAH MCCARTHY and Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER.

STAGE MANAGER ... ... VAL CUTHBERT.

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1914.

M. FRANCE'S FRENCH COMEDY.

The reputation of M. Anatole France can survive the crude representation of his two short plays given at a special performance at the Haymarket Theatre yesterday by the Incorporated Stage Society.

The first, a one-act piece called "Au Petit Bonheur," is a long-winded conversation evidently intended to show that a woman prefers a rake to a bore. Being a translation, it had neither a French nor an English atmosphere, but was merely artificial. It was "ladled out" with a deliberate monotony that made the forty-five minutes devoted to the performance seem very much longer.

The second piece, "The Comedy of the Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," is an amusing story of a judge who, regretting that his wife was dumb, accepted the services of a doctor to have her voice restored. From that moment there was no peace or quiet in his home. Finding that nothing would stop her talking, the judge consented to be made deaf. His happy face when this had been done proved the wisdom of his choice of a remedy.

Mr. Ashley Dukes has contented himself with making translations of the two plays. It might have been better had he allowed himself more scope and made adaptations. Mr. Rudge Harding and Miss Maire O'Neill secured the acting honours as the judge and wife in the second piece. J. W.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

On TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 17th, 1914,

At 8 o'clock

And EVERY SUBSEQUENT EVENING at 8.30

By Arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

NORMAN McKINNEL & FREDERICK WHELEN

WILL PRESENT

HELEN WITH THE HIGH HAND

By RICHARD PRYCE

Adapted from ARNOLD BENNETT'S Novel.

The People of the Play in the order of their appearance:—

James Ollerenshaw	NORMAN McKINNEL
A Gardener	J. COOKE BERESFORD
Mrs. Prockter	ROSINA FILIPPI
Emanuel Prockter	HENRY HARGREAVES
Helen Rathbone	NANCY PRICE
Mrs. Butt	AGNES HILL
Andrew Wilbram	NORMAN TREVOR
Georgina	MARY CLARE
Lilian Swetnam	MIÈLE MAUND
Footman	ERNEST CRESFAN
Assistant	C. PHILLIPS

Stage Manager — LEONARD BUTTRESS

Assistant Stage Manager — ERNEST CRESFAN

IN the play made from Arnold Bennett's novel "Helen with the High Hand," produced by Messrs. McKinnel and Whelen at the Vaudeville Theatre on Tuesday evening, there are to be found the elements of a fairly good story. There is nothing subtle to be found in a line of it. There is no thrill, no convincing relation to real life, nothing except what is unreal and theatrical, and yet for all that it attracts one and amuses because of its well-acted central character, James Ollerenshaw, and the make-believe inhabitants of a country town to be seen around him. James Ollerenshaw is the real attraction of the play.

* * * * *

Helen may have been the heroine of the novel; here in the stage version she is only one of the chorus about him. I dare say the dramatist intended this should be so; anyhow, it worked out that way, and never for one moment in any of the three acts did I imagine that the old man was being hoodwinked by Helen's high-handed ways or her cajoling. It appeared to me that the old man wanted a companion in his house and he took Helen because she amused him. That it suited her to live with her great-uncle so as to be near the young man she loved was a matter that never interested the old fellow. This fact weakened the interest of the play very much, but it did not prevent its making good entertainment for an evening. Mr. Norman McKinnel gave an excellent performance as the old man, Mr. Norman Trevor did all that actor could do with the part of the man that Helen wanted, and in Miss Mièle Maund the managers have got a very good-looking and charming young actress. The reception of the play was good. J. W.

ACT I. Scene 1. — The Terrace above the Bowling Green in Bursley Park

Scene 2. — Interior of Ollerenshaw's House

ACT II. — The same room from a different aspect

ACT III. — Interior of Wilbram Hall

TIME — THE PRESENT

The Play produced by NORMAN McKINNEL

The Scenery painted by WALTER HANN

Miss Nancy Price's dresses by Madame HAYWARD, 67, New Bond Street, W.

Miss Rosina Filippi and Miss Mièle Maund's dresses by Miss GRAY, Ltd., 9, Brook Street, W.

Hats by Madame ELSIE, 33, New Bond Street, W.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co.

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD of the ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, FEB. 21st, at 2.30.

PRICE OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s 6d. Balcony, 7s 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s

Doors open at 7.30. Commence at 8.

Box Office (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Business Manager (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) MR. HERBERT CLARK

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

NEW THEATRE

E
21/2/1914

Orch. Stall
K 177
RIGHT
To be retained

On Saturday, February 21st, 1914, at 8, and every Evening at 8.15.

DURRANT SWAN

presents a New Musical Production in 3 Acts

From the German "Das Veilchen" by Jean Kren and Alfred Schönfeld (founded on a French farce by Georges Berr and Pierre Decourcelle)

THE JOY-RIDE LADY

English Version by ARTHUR ANDERSON and HARTLEY CARRICK.

Music by JEAN GILBERT.

Edouard Morny	(A Young French Banker)	Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
Paul Bonnet	(His Friend and Partner)	Mr. LAWRENCE GROSSMITH
Max Somossy	(From Budapest)	Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Gustav Loti	(Manager of "The Widows' Club")	Mr. GEORGE LESTOCQ
Henri Tourenville	(A Young Author)	Mr. LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Pierre Duval	(A Young Officer)	Mr. BERNARD MEREFIELD
Emile	(A Chauffeur)	Mr. A. S. BARBER
Potiche	(A Manservant at Fifi's)	Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Fifi du Barry	(A Young Widow)	Miss THELMA RAYE
Valerie de Brys	(Fifi's Sister)	Miss ENID SASS
Madame de Brys	(Fifi's Mother)	Miss AIDA JENOURE
Prisca von Erdödy	(Somossy's Niece)	Miss SYBIL ARUNDALE
Fleurette du Verdier	(Secretary of "The Widows' Club")	Miss JULIA JAMES
Felice	(Maid to Fifi)	Miss PATRICIA CLIVE
Yvonne		Miss FLORENCE STEVENTON
Louise	(Friends of Valerie)	Miss BARBARA CONRAD
Natalie		Miss FRANCES YERNON
Babette		Miss DOLLY KAHN
Nanon		Miss MARJORY RUSSELL

The Joy-Ride Dancers: Misses Mavis Elton, Hilda D'Anvers, Dorothy Buckstone and Chrissie Maude.

Visitors, Guests, Attendants, etc.

ACT I .. .. Fifi's House in Paris (Afternoon)
ACT II .. .. .. The Grotto Salon at the Widows' Club (Midnight)
ACT III. .. .. The same as Act I. (The following Morning)

The Play produced by SYDNEY ELLISON.

Scenery by Fraser & Davies.

Dresses to this Play designed and executed by Alexandra, 47, Baker Street, W. Ladies' Habits by Boyd Cooper, 9, Gt. Marlborough St.
Hats, Headdresses and Ladies' Riding Hats specially designed and executed by Harry H. Sanby, 65, Conduit Street, W.
Gentlemen's Hats by Henry Heath, Ltd., 105 to 109, Oxford Street, W.
Wigs by Clarkson. Furniture by Oetzmann & Co., Ltd., Euston Road, W.

Musical Director	Mr. GEORGE W. BYNG
Stage Manager	Mr. H. RAE COOK
Acting Manager (for Mr. Swan)	Mr. C. EGERTON RICHICK
Acting Manager (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore	Mr. ERNEST BELCHAM

NIGHT CLUB SCENE IN NEW PLAY.

Last Night's Production of "The Joy-Ride Lady."

TUNEFUL MUSIC.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

The musical play, "The Joy-Ride Lady," presented by Mr. Durrant Swan at the New Theatre last evening, bristles with innuendoes which it will be pleasanter to charge to the original German version than to the two authors who prepared the English libretto. Messrs. Arthur Anderson and Hartley Carrick have had no easy task to try to make the atmosphere of this new German musical piece pass for a wholesome one, and if the second act, "the grotto salon at the Widows' Club (midnight)," was not intended to present a very mixed set of people—to say the least of them—it is hard to know what it was intended to present. The authors were not out in this play to strain sentiment to the breaking point. Their leading character, a young widow, rejoiced in the name of Fifi. She had a gay and handsome young suitor who broke off their engagement when he learned from her that a strange man—whom she mistook for her husband—followed her into a cab one night as she was leaving a fancy-dress ball, and kissed her. He was more indignant than the hero of any melodrama. So the match was off. He insulted her, called her the Joy-Ride Lady, and sang a song about it. He was very particular, as became a gentleman who used another man's name when he did not want another girl he flirted with to know his real one.

The Widows' Club.

It is easy to understand therefore that when he met Fifi again after midnight in a night club (the Widows' Club) he would talk to her, renew the engagement, and give her a ring. After that episode complications once more disturbed the harmony. The widow had only been kissed by one man. Three men came forward to confess to the crime, and then Fifi discovered Edouard (her fiancée) was himself the real culprit. None of them were too particular in that club, with private rooms on every side and women members who dressed like freaks. So the old love was on once more. It was all very confused even for a musical comedy with a night club for its chief scene.

The Audience Pleased.

There was endless talk. Some doubtful witticisms, mixed with funny lines. The audience evidently liked most of them well. They laughed heartily. They roared when the hero and his best man friend called each other "dirty dogs." Nobody dissented, because mixed up with all that night club scene, and the scene in the drawing-room of Fifi's house, which everyone appeared free to enter, there were some really tuneful numbers. A valse song, a ballad or two, and some concerted numbers that all went to justify the reputation of the popular German composer, whose theatre name is Jean Gilbert. More justice might easily have been done to his music. Perhaps the nervous excitement of a first performance handicapped the singers at times. Anyhow the company was not all round at its best. The play is adequately staged. Apart from a few freak costumes—of which there is not too much—the dresses are pretty, to match the girls who wear them. The entertainment pleased the audience. Everyone took a call. Mr. Durrant Swan and Sir Charles Wyndham came along after authors, composer, and stage manager had bowed; and they, too, bowed to the audience, and to the ladies of the company, and to each other.

J. W.

NEW THEATRE, ST. MARTINS LANE, W.C.
Every Evening at 8.15 :: Matinees Saturday at 2.30

A NEW MUSICAL PRODUCTION
Music by JEAN GILBERT (Composer of "The Girl in the Taxi")

Another Change.

"Who's the Lady?" finished its London run at the Garrick Theatre on Friday night and was succeeded last evening by the musical play called "The Joy Ride Lady," transferred from the New Theatre. Another play that has just finished its run was "A Midsummer Night's Dream," withdrawn by Mr. Granville Barker from the Savoy Theatre last evening. A new piece, called "Break Down the Walls" will be produced there next Saturday. W.D. May 10

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Monday, February 23rd, at 8.30 p.m, and every evening afterwards at 9.

ALLAN AYNESWORTH and BRONSON ALBERY present

A Comedy in Three Acts entitled:

A Pair of Silk Stockings

By CYRIL HARCOURT.

Major Bagnal	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Sam Thornhill	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Sir John Gower	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
Mr. Macintyre	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Mr. Brook	Mr. ARTHUR NICHOLAS
Morgan (a Butler)	Mr. LEONARD MENTZ
Wilson (Police Inspector)	Mr. FRANK G. BAYLY
A Tramp	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Lady Penelope Gower	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Molly Thornhill	Miss ENID BELL
Irene Maitland	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Pamela Bristowe	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Angela Bruce	Miss ANN CLEAVER
Parker (a Maid)	Miss DOROTHY MACMILLAN

Acts I and III. .. .. Lounge Hall in Lady Gower's Country House
Act II. .. .. A Bedroom in the same

The Play produced by Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

Gowns &c., worn by the Misses Venne, Bell, O'Malley, Hemingway, and Cleaver, designed and made by Lucile, Ltd., 23, Hanover Square, W. Furniture and Decorations by Messrs. Keeble, Ltd., 447, Oxford Street, W. Golf Jackets by Messrs. Debenham & Freebody, Wigmore Street, W. Miss Doris Harbo Mayson Lewis. Scenery by Durant. Spinet-Piano by Rogers & Co. Berners Street, W. Cigarettes by Abdulla.

Preceded at 8 o clock, and every evening afterwards at 8.30, by a Play in One Act, entitled:

STATE SECRETS

By HARRY GRAHAM

Sir Henry Trevor (Assistant Under-Secretary)	Mr. FRANK G. BAYLY
Hon. Reginald Somerset	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Arthur Harris	Mr. ARTHUR NICHOLAS
Clark (Office Keeper)	Mr. LEONARD MENTZ
Alias	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS

Scene – A Room in the Foreign Office, Whitehall.

Business Manager	Mr. Cecil Paget
Stage Manager	Mr. Harry Barford
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. Bertram Phillips

Business Manager (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) .. .. Mr. Cecil Breton

CRITERION
THEATRE
Feb 23
E
—
Orchestra Stall
C 53

It made a pleasant trifle. We never laughed more than was quite comfortable. The action was not vastly interesting. The wit never became dazzling. Yet at the end we had to thank Mr. Cyril Harcourt for an agreeable evening. With "A Pair of Silk Stockings" he probably had no higher aim. Characters and incidents are wholly of the stage, and even in the glamour of the stage some of them have an air of being put in to fill up time. Still, we laughed often, and sometimes heartily. For most of the fun and the best of the fun we have to thank Miss Lottie Venne and Mr. Sam Sothern, as well as the author. Miss Venne had little that was very comical in her part, but, as usual, she made many things sound exquisitely ludicrous. Her views on matrimony and merino nightgowns and the standard of virtue requisite in housemaids, though not in themselves masterpieces of fun, became quite irresistible. Mr. Sothern was rather better served by the author. He had something of a character to play, an amiable, blundering duffer of a man. Also he had some priceless things to say. His arrangements and derangements of slang were extensive and peculiar, and delivered with the most aptly doleful manner they roused on occasion storms of laughter. For the rest, Mr. Harcourt has at times a pleasant freshness of phrase. He can give you some verbal surprises, and in general he writes neat and natural dialogue. The incidents for the most part belong to farce, and the exceptions, some passages of theatrical sentiment, were not valuable. But in the moments of tedium you may solace yourself by the contemplation of comely ladies and wonderful frocks and other garments.

THEATRICALS.

It all happens in a country house, where they are expecting burglars. You meet a good many people more or less concerned with the plot, but it is essentially quite simple. Sam Thornhill had been divorced by his wife, but was innocent of anything worse than idiocy, and continued to love her. Major Bagnal, who had once loved and lost Mrs. Thornhill, was engaged to a sweet young thing of nineteen. These people and others were at Lady Gower's house rehearsing for amateur theatricals, in which Sam was to play Eccles. The rehearsal was not too funny. Bagnal was catching the last train to town. Then Mrs. Thornhill arrived, uninvited, unexpected, with a tale of a broken-down car. She had to be put up for the night, and the only room was the one which Bagnal was temporarily vacating. Sam, who was dying to explain his innocence and be reconciled, was recommended by a shrewd young person of thirty-two to go to his wife's room. And that was the first act.

Sam went in the wig and beard and clothes of Eccles and hid himself in the cupboard. Mrs. Thornhill arrived with attendant ladies, and there was undressing and conversation about nightgowns, and at last she put the lights out and got into bed. Then, naturally, Bagnal came in through the window. Of course, he had missed his train, and, of course, he knew nothing of the new inmate of his room.

SENTIMENT.

The lady got out of bed again and sentiment followed. Bagnal had once loved her "fondly, madly," and was still ready to do so on the slightest provocation. He wanted a kiss as a farewell or anything else. Then they heard sounds, and in the cupboard was discovered Sam. They did not recognise him in Eccles's beard. They tied up his head in something and his arms with something else and his feet with Mrs. Sam's stockings and bundled him into the bath-room. Upon which Bagnal's fiancée arrived to ask Mrs. Sam's pardon for having been rude. She saw Bagnal and believed the worst. The compromised two tried to exculpate themselves by displaying their burglar. But when they opened the bath-room door the burglar was flown. So the indignant fiancée renounced Bagnal for ever, and that was the second act.

In the morning Lady Gower, like the fiancée, resolved to be shocked. A policeman brought in a tramp as the burglar, but Mrs. Sam and Bagnal declined to identify him. How were their reputations to be cleared? The shrewd young person talked solemnly to the suspicious fiancée, and prepared her to take Bagnal again to her arms. Sam at last secured an interview with his wife, protested his perpetual innocence and affection, confessed that he was the burglar, and in proof produced the silk stockings on his own legs. And that was the last act.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE PLAYHOUSE

Tuesday

24/2/1914

Orch. Stall

E 8

This to be retained

To-night, Tuesday, February 24th, 1914, and Every Evening, at 9

Miss MARIE TEMPEST will present (by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman) a Comedy, in Three Acts, called

THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY

From the French of Madame Fred de Grèsac and M. François de Croisset

ADAPTED BY
COSMO GORDON LENNOX

SIR REGINALD BELSIZE	MR. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
JOHN TRAVERS	MR. BEN WEBSTER
HAMPTON	MR. O. B. CLARENCE
NORBURY	MR. JOHN ALEXANDER
MADAME DE SEMIANO	MISS HILDA MOORE
ROSALIE	MISS KATE SERGEANTSON
MISS KATHERINE SILVERTON	MISS MARIE TEMPEST

Act I. John Travers' Office, Lincoln's Inn
Acts II. & III. Lady Belsize's Villa on the Lake of Geneva

(A year is supposed to have elapsed between Acts II. & III.)

Miss MARIE TEMPEST's Costumes by THE MAISONS HAYWARD and LUCILE.
Miss HILDA MOORE'S Costumes by MAISON LUCILE.
Hats by the MAISONS LEWIS and HAYWARD.
The Furniture by Messrs. DRUCE & Co., Baker Street.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8.30 o'clock by

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Wednesday, February 25th, at 7-45, and Nightly at 7-45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS, AT 2-30

ENTIRELY NEW AND ORIGINAL DRAMA.

YOU MADE ME LOVE YOU

Written by PERCY GORDON HOLMES.
Play presented and produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Incidental Music by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE. Music of Song "You made Me Love You," by kind permission of Francis Day & Hunter.

Characters:

James Dennison (The Man who resembles a Notorious Crook)	MR. HENRY LONSDALE
Maurice Courtney (His Cousin)	MR. FREDK. LEISTER
Malcolm Hearne (A Lawyer)	MR. FRED MORGAN
Bertie Collingwood (One of the White Hand Gang)	MR. AUSTIN MELFORD
Silas Jordon ... (Members of the Gang)	MR. H. G. WRIGHT
Stunty ... ... (Members of the Gang)	MR. FRED INGRAM
Nibbler ... ... (Members of the Gang)	MR. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Dickey Stringer... (Members of the Gang)	MR. FRED DE VERE
Mrs. Groom (Housekeeper)	MISS FLORENCE RADCLIFFE
Elsie Deighton	MISS SYBIL HARE
John Harrison (A Detective)	MR. CHARLES KENYON
Coralie (The Crook's Wife	MISS DAISY CORDELL
Hiram P. James (From the States)	MR. J. T. MACMILLAN
Mrs. James (His Wife)	MISS BLANCHE STANLEY
Sloane .. (Of the Criminal Investigation Department)	MR. RONALD ADAIR
Dawson (Of the Criminal Investigation Department)	... MR. P. SMITH
Morgan (Of the Criminal Investigation Department)	... MR. CULLEN
Inspector Martin	MR. NORMAN LAYLAND
Jarvis	... MR. H. WILLS
Mary	MISS NELLIE MANLEY
Sadie James (The American's Daughter) ...	... MISS EVA DARE
and
Iris Cavanagh	MISS VIOLET GRAHAM

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1914.

"YOU MADE ME LOVE YOU."

NEW MELVILLE MELODRAMA AT THE LYCEUM.

There was a simple tale behind all the exciting incidents that went to the making of the newest melodrama, "You Made Me Love You," presented by the Messrs. Melville at the Lyceum Theatre last evening. But the author, Mr. Percy Gordon Holmes, gave us one very nasty jar by omitting to provide someone on the stage to sing the popular song that gives a title to the play.

Mr. H. Sullivan Brooke, in the orchestra, wove the familiar strains through the incidental music and the gallery made just the faintest attempt to sing the air, but those efforts did not wholly compensate. We wanted the wicked solicitor who kept back the will to sing.

It must not be supposed that Jim Dennison, the hero of the unvarnished tale, was an ordinary hero. Jim had been to America, and when he returned to Goring-on-Thames to inherit his father's property he found that it had all been left to his wicked cousin. His sole consolation was that the girl he had left behind refused to marry him now that he was poor. It was a poor return for the loss of his money, but Jim was a devil-may-care fellow, and falling in with the suggestion that he was the very image of an absent notorious "crook" he took up his job and led the gang in search of plunder.

JIM AND THE DETECTIVE.

His social position gave Jim an unfair advantage over the police. He went to dancing parties, took the greatest detective—who was a personal friend—about in his motor-car, and was on the best of terms with high life in Goring-on-Thames and shady life in London suburbs. But he nearly came to grief when he refused to take over the wife of the man he resembled. Jim could not do that. He was gentle where the fair sex was concerned, and when the wicked solicitor was murdered by Jim's wicked cousin and Jim at last came into his own, the lady who lost her husband gave up hope of securing Jim for a second.

There the romance ended, with a distinct promise of the hero finding a wife in a cottage close by Goring. It was all very simple and true in the best terms of melodrama, and was set out before us in just the right spirit by its leading actor, Mr. Henry Lonsdale, and a most capable company, prominent in which were Mr. Fred Morgan, Mr. Frederick Leister, Mr. Austin Melford, and Miss Violet Graham.

The evening ended with much cheering. The managers appeared on the stage and smiled. The author raised his hand and said "Good-night" and "Thanks," and across a hedge of floral tributes—as on the last night of a pantomime—the ladies of the company looked well content and happy.

J. W.

Miss VIOLET GRAHAM as Iris Cavanagh.
[Claude Harris.

ACT 1, Scene 1 ... ... WOODCROFT, CORING
The Prodigal's Return. Love and Money.

Scene 2 ... ... OUTSIDE THE LEATHERN BOTTLE
The Man who bears a striking likeness to a Notorious Crook.

Scene 3 ... ... THE HOUSE IN JERMYN STREET
The Outcast finds new friends.

ACT 2, Scene 1 THE DETECTIVE'S ROOMS IN HALF MOON STREET
The College Chums.

Scene 2 ... ... GARDEN OF MELTON CLOSE, CORING
The Crook at Work. The New Love.

ACT 3, Scene 1 ... ... A ROOM AT WOODCROFT
The Missing Jewels. A Clue. Was it for Love?

Scene 2 ... ... THE HOUSE AT DENMARK HILL
Life's made up of surprises. The White Hand meets with one.

ACT 4, Scene 1 ... ... THE HOUSE AT DENMARK HILL
Another surprise.

Scene 2 ... ... MR. HEARNE'S OFFICE
The Burglary.

Scene 3 ... ... WOODCROFT, CORING
He is my Husband. "There's no one else but you will do."

Scenery by H. K. Browne, W. D. Hobbs and Lyceum Studio.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

1. OVERTURE—"Banditenstreiche" - - Suppé
2. (a) WALTZ—"Desperation" - - H. Sullivan-Brooke
   (b) ENTRACTE—"You made me Love You" - Monaco
3. SUITE—"Ballet Egyptien" - - - - Luigini
4. SELECTION—"Cavalleria Rusticana" - - - Mascagni

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances.

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Thursday, February 26th, 1914.

This Evening at 8 o'clock and on subsequent Evenings at 8.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE LAND OF PROMISE,

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

W. S. MAUGHAM.

NORAH MARSH	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
EDWARD MARSH	Mr. C. V. FRANCE
GERTRUDE MARSH	Miss MARION ASHWORTH
FRANK TAYLOR	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
REGINALD HORNBY	Mr. BASIL S. FOSTER
BENJAMIN TROTTER	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
	(By arrangement with VEDRENNE & EADIE).
SIDNEY SHARP	Mr. J. WOODALL-BIRDE
EMMA SHARP	Miss MARY RORKE
JAMES WICKHAM	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
DOROTHY WICKHAM	Miss NETTA WESTCOTT
AGNES PRINGLE	Miss LENA HALLIDAY
CLEMENT WYNNE	Mr. CHARLES GOODWIN
KATE	Miss MARION CHRISTIE MURRAY

ACT I. ... ... The Drawing-Room of the late Miss Wickham's House at Tunbridge Wells.

ACT II. ... The Kitchen of Edward Marsh's Farm at Dyer, Manitoba.

ACT III. ... ... Frank Taylor's Shack at Prentice, Manitoba.

ACT IV. ... ... The Same.

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

D. Y. T.

—

26/2/1914

--

Orch. Stall

F21

No.

"The Land of Promise."

"Back to the Land" is the policy put forward by W. Somerset Maugham in his new four-act play "The Land of Promise," presented by Mr. Charles Frohman at the Duke of York's Theatre on Thursday evening. The story begins in a rather pleasantly satirical manner in the drawing-room of a house at Tunbridge Wells, to which the relatives of a deceased maiden lady return from the funeral very much agitated as to the disposal of their aunt's money. The old lady had, much to their disgust, in her lifetime promised to leave her young salaried companion an annuity of three hundred pounds, but to their relief the lawyer informed them that no will making such a bequest could be discovered. In her bitter disappointment the poor girl who had slaved for the old woman for ten years railed against the degrading existence of the gentlewoman compelled to earn her livelihood as an ill-paid companion, and rather than seek another such situation she went to join her brother farming in Manitoba.

* * * * *

In the second act Norah was at the farm in the Far West, secretly rebelling against the tyranny of her brother's rough Canadian-born wife. In her despair she determined to get away from a house where her presence was slowly bringing trouble, and, reckless of the consequences, offered to go as woman-help to the lonely log hut of a rough young fellow who had just acquired a grant of land. "You will marry me?" and her trembling answer being "Yes," she went away. The scene on the night of the pair's arrival at the cold, dark, almost empty log cabin was strong to the extent of being brutal. The man, determined to be master, and regarding her as not much more than his slave, did not ask her to do anything. He commanded her. She rebelled, she struck him, she attempted to shoot him, she tried to escape out into the frozen night on the dark prairie. And he struck her, and told her she was a woman and he was a man, and out there the strongest was the master. Then, holding the oil lamp above his head, he ordered the trembling woman into the other room. Her cry had no effect, and on that scene, as brutally strong as has been witnessed in a theatre, the third act ended. Act IV. comes as something of an anticlimax. The scene was the log cabin made sunny, bright, and comfortable by the woman's hand, and the man at the head of the house was a tamed, clean, civil-spoken fellow. It was a difficult part to play, that of the woman, very difficult, and Miss Irene Vanbrugh triumphed in it. Mr. Godfrey Tearle played the man well: a rough, unimaginative sort of fellow. He made him real. The reception of the play was more than friendly, and Mr. Basil Foster, in the part of a careless young Englishman, shared largely in the success.

J. W.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On SATURDAY, 28th FEBRUARY, 1914,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

PEGGY AND HER HUSBAND

BY

JOSEPH KEATING.

Mr. Rodney Carlish	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Mr. Charles Traffyn	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Mr. Theodore Storry	Mr. THOMAS WEGUELIN
Mr. James Welford	Mr. CHARLES LASCELLES
Mrs. Rodney Carlish (Peggy) ...	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Miss Hattie Deverill	Miss EILEEN CLANFORD
Miss Mabel Dayle (Mibbs) ...	Miss VIOLET EARDLEY
Mrs. Theodore Storry	Miss HAMLEY-CLIFFORD
Miss Marion Ilbert	Miss JEAN CADELL
Fulton	Miss NELLY GRIFFEN
A Maid	Miss MARJORIE HUME

The action of the First Act takes place at the Carlishs' House in the early Spring, that of the Second and Third Acts at Mrs. Carlish's House in the following Autumn.

Produced under the Direction of J. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

PRECEDED AT 8 O'CLOCK BY

ACID DROPS

A Play in One Act by

G. E. JENNINGS.

Mrs. Price - - - - - -	Miss BERYL MERCER
Mrs. Taylor - - - - -	Miss EDITH EVANS
Mrs. Dent - - - - -	Miss ROSE YULE
Alice - - - - - -	Miss ADELA WEEKES
Mrs. Gilbert - - - - -	Miss BETTY WARD
Flora Cavan - - - - -	Miss GLADYS YOUNG
The Rev. Noel Cuthbertson - - -	Mr. LAWFORD DAVIDSON

Scene: In a Workhouse.

Produced under the Direction of HERBERT CHOWN.

The Scenery painted by GEORGE SACKMANN.
Furniture by DRUCE & Co., Baker Street. Wigs by CLARKSON.
The Billiard Table and Accessories by BURROUGHES & WATTS, LTD., Soho Square, W.
The Dresses worn by Miss Cooper, Miss Clanford and Miss Eardley, by OSPOVAT, 69 New Bond Street, W.; other Dresses by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Hats by MICHEE ZAC.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head-dress.

This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by GEO. ROGERS & SONS.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.
Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager - - - - -	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager - - - - -	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY.

Friendly Reception For "Peggy and Her Husband" at the Royalty.

BY OUR DRAMATIC CRITIC.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie's new programme at the Royalty Theatre last evening has the merit of an entertainment that frankly claims to interest an audience without attempting to instruct it. It began with a quaintly amusing one-act play —a play of types in the female ward of a workhouse—called "Acid Drops," and in the twenty odd minutes of its performance the clever people engaged to interpret the humour of the author drew more laughter from the audience than has been done by any short play produced this season. Miss G. E. Jennings, the author of this trifle, hardly makes an attempt to tell a story. There is a vague suggestion of sentimentality in the reminiscences of a very old woman lying in one of the beds of the ward, but that goes for nothing, and the real purpose and success of the skit lies in the humour and jealousies of the workhouse inmates so admirably represented by the three clever actresses, Miss Beryl Mercer, Miss Edith Evans, and Miss Adela Weekes. So much did the affair amuse the house that before the longer play of the evening was produced the audience had to be informed that Miss Jennings was not in the house.

The three-act play that followed is at its best when the less serious side of Mr. Joseph Keating's story is being enacted. "Peggy and Her Husband" takes its title from a young married couple very much in love with each other, and the play is but a lovers' quarrel: Rodney, the husband, had been surprised into promising to help a girl friend of his wife's out of a monetary difficulty, and Peggy came into the room at the moment when the young woman was expressing her thanks by kissing him. Result—a home broken up: Peggy gone off in disgust to live with her sister: Rodney, miserable, trying to forget things by six months of globe trotting. When he came back, Peggy's sister smuggled him into the house and concealed him in a wardrobe in his wife's dressing-room. Peggy came along, removed some of her garments, and going to the wardrobe for a dressing-gown discovered her prodigal husband. There was an awful shindy. Peggy protested. Rodney pleaded. "You have no right to come into my room when I'm not dressed," she cried. "Let's be on equal terms," said the artful husband, taking off his coat.

"You made love to every woman you met," added Mistress Peggy, and the penitent humbly admitted that for all his flirtations before he married he would "frankly plead 'the Gaming Act!'" Of course Peggy could not hold out against the importunities of so persistent and penitent a husband, and next day she agreed to forgive him. Thus ended a play that has much wit in its lines to recommend it. It has excellent performances, too, by Mr. Eadie and Mr. Hubert Harben to help it, and most of all it has beautiful Miss Gladys Cooper to bring to it a very great deal of charm. The reception accorded the performance was most friendly.

J.W.

APOLLO THEATRE.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.50,

CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production of

NEVER SAY DIE

By W. H. POST.

Preceded at 8.20 by

THE QUOD WRANGLE

A Farcical Comedy in One Act by OLIPHANT DOWN.

Bill Jenks	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Snippy	Mr. FRANC STONEY
A Butcher	Mr. HUGH GIBSON
A Policeman	Mr. LESLIE REA
Miss Ormerod	Miss GLADYS MAUDE
Boy	Master STANLEY BURTON

Scene:—A Tenement Room.

APOLLO
THEATRE
3/3/14
Orch. Stall
E2
To be retained

On Tuesday it was preceded by a whimsical trifle, a so-called farcical comedy, with title punningly and misleadingly suggestive of 'Varsity life, from the pen of Oliphant Down. This author has hitherto chosen more or less fantastic themes, as in The Maker of Dreams, brought out at the Vaudeville, August 31, 1912, and in The Dream Child, performed at the Gaiety, Manchester, April 28 last year. There is nothing connected with a quadrangle in The Quod Wrangle, the scene of which is laid in a tenement room, and the motive of which is the frustrated desire of a loafer, with Socialistic views, to be sent to "quod." After robbing his young son, a newspaper boy, of the few coppers he has earned, Bill Jenks begins complaining of the cold, which makes him less than ever inclined to work, to his unusually spruce and neat pal Snippy. The latter owns that, in order to escape the cold and have regular meals of a sort, he had got himself in quod for "pinching" a pair of boots and a hat. Why should not Bill manage the same by running off with a piece of meat from a neighbouring butcher's? Even if he were not "copped" he would still "have the meat." Fortified by this specious advice, Jenks snatches up a piece of meat, and is duly pursued by the butcher, and caught by a policeman. He would have enjoyed the comforts of "a Government hotel" for ten days or upwards, had it not been for the officious interference of Miss Ormerod, a Suffragette, selling a Woman's paper, who had knocked the same constable about the night before. She is the chief participant in the "wrangle" that ensues, for she first tries to stop the butcher from prosecuting by paying him for the meat or threatening to have his shop boycotted, and then she offers the policeman a sovereign to let Jenks escape, after, following Snippy's evil counsel again, he had knocked off the officer's helmet. Finally, Miss Ormerod, in her zeal to help Jenks, promises him honest work, the carrying of her paper's boards for 14 hours a day, and, adding insult to injury, induces the friendly butcher to give him a bath, like Burns in Passers-By. So the lazy loafer does not go to prison after all, and, for stealing the meat, gets tedious work and a cold bath. The piece, which, if rather far-fetched, is amusing in a mild way, was played capably by Miss Gladys Maude, bright, voluble, and assertive as the Suffragette, Messrs. Tarver and Stoney, as the quod-wanting pals, and Messrs. Rea and Gibson, as policeman and butcher.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor - - - - Mr. J. H. LEIGH
Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

EDYTH OLIVE ARTHUR APPLIN

—o—

THURSDAY & FRIDAY, MAR. 5th & 6th, at 2.45

FOR THE FIRST TIME

"The District Visitor"

(A Satire on Maeterlinck's "THE BLUE BIRD.")

By the late RICHARD MIDDLETON.

Dorothy	EDYTH OLIVE
Phillip	FRANK RANDELL (By kind permission of Mr. KENELM FOSS)
The District Visitor	ARTHUR APPLIN

"THE DISTRICT VISITOR."

A note on the programme of the late Mr. Richard Middleton's one-act play, "The District Visitor," produced at a matinée yesterday at the Court Theatre, described the piece as a satire on M. Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird."

The resemblance is not easy to trace, nor is it made clear why the married couple, Dorothy and Philip, after a wordy triumph over the District Visitor "Death," should turn on the gas in their mean lodgings and die together. They did not talk like a man and woman who could find, or bring, happiness anywhere. Such material gave clever Miss Edyth Olive no worthy acting opportunities.

J. W.

The Observer.

LONDON: SUNDAY, MARCH 1, 1914.

MR. G. B. SHAW'S HINTS TO DRAMATISTS.

CIRCUS AS A GUIDE TO TECHNIQUE.

GOSPEL OF COINCIDENCE.

Mr Bernard Shaw, lecturing on "The Nature of Drama," at Oxford, last night, said the earliest form of drama would be found in full operation to-day if they went to a circus. Here there was necessarily unity of time and place. He seriously advised those who wanted to write plays to watch the unity of time and place at the circus.

They had peculiarly good opportunities in a university to study the technique of their trade, because every college master really provided them with a sort of ready-made ring-master. (Laughter.) Upon meeting the head of the college they might engage him in conversation. They might exercise their ingenuity so that whatever he happened to say they might put a wrong construction upon it. They could misunderstand him as much as possible, so that when he asked a question they could give him obviously the reply he did not intend to have.

THE SECRET OF COMEDY.

If they saw another member of the college passing let them get up a quarrel and ask the master to preside at the combat, which they would suppose was dialectic at first and finally pugilistic. If they did this they would be really laying the foundations of any skill they would be capable of attaining as a comedian. (Laughter.) They would find that this was the technique of Aristophanes and of Molière, the great masters of comedy. Coming nearer to our time, they would find that it was his own technique. (Laughter.)

It was extremely gratifying to find that Mr. G. K. Chesterton, in "Magic," had quite intuitively observed unity of time and place, and his play might be performed in a circus. The unity of time and place imposed on them certain other conditions. It imposed in them that stupid writers on the subject of the drama called the "abuse of coincidence." No really thoughtful man supposed that a drama could be written without coincidences, and when they heard a man talking about the childishness of dramas in which there were coincidences he advised them to look at him in a calm and fatherly way and say in a solemn voice, "My friend, all life consists of coincidences."

PLAYS MUST BE IMPROBABLE.

The fact that they were listening to him was a coincidence, and it might be one they would tell to their grandchildren, or, on the other hand, one which when they went home at the end of term they would carefully conceal from their parents. (Laughter and cheers.) They would not only be boring their audience by doing something superfluous and unnecessary if they tried to make these coincidences appear plausible. The greatest constructive craftsmen of the theatre were men most reckless on the subject of coincidences.

He quoted as an example of the oldest drama the "Œdipus" of Sophocles, which became famous as a masterpiece of coincidence. Then their play must necessarily be improbable. It would not be a picture of real life, because if real life were dramatic there would be no need to have drama.

He next discussed the real object and real sense of drama—the thing that made it possible to raise drama to the highest form of art that existed among men. Life as it occurred was an extraordinary, unmeaning, puzzling, bewildering, absurd sort of thing. They saw a number of events happening, and they did not know the relation between them. The reason why the dramatist could take a few people and put them on a stage and produce something more interesting and instructive than life was because he revealed the connection between these happenings and the chain of causation emotionally affecting the actions that people had on one another, and he was able to produce certain excitements by the fact that he made the audience more and more conscious of what was happening.

VANISHED DISTINCTIONS.

Drama had now developed to such a point that they might mix every element of it—music, tragedy, comedy—not only successively, but at the same time. That was the reason why when that lecture was suggested and he was asked to do "Comedy" or "Farce," and was told that his friend John Masefield was going to do "Tragedy," he was compelled to say that he could not do that, and to add that these distinctions did not any longer exist, and that he would have to deal with the whole thing finally integrated into one of the most extraordinary arts which existed and which any man could practice.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

EVERY EVENING at 8.30 (MATINEES at 2.30)

WILL BE ACTED

THE TWO VIRTUES

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

By ALFRED SUTRO

Jeffery Panton	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Claude Jervoise	HERBERT WARING
Baylis	GEORGE BISHOP
Mrs. Guildford	MARTHA HEDMAN (By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN)
Lady Milligan	HENRIETTA WATSON
Mrs. Jervoise	ATHENE SEYLER
Alice Exern	RHODA SYMONS
Mary	MARY LANE

The Time is the Present.

The Action of the Play passes in Jeffery Panton's House on Campden Hill and Mrs. Guildford's in Chelsea.

The Scenery Painted by G. SACKMAN.

The New Act-Drop designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I., and Painted by JOSEPH HARKER.

Dresses by BAROLET. Hats by ELSIE. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Reclining Chair used in Act I. kindly lent by J. FOOT & SON, 171, New Bond Street.

G 1248
STALLS
Mar. 5.
1914
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS HALF

It is difficult to find anything to say about Mr. Sutro's new play. The only quality you could find in it was an absence of any significant quality. At the fall of the curtain you were left wondering how a playwright who has done such work as Mr. Sutro came to write "The Two Virtues." Not that there were any startling faults of plan or taste or execution. If there had been some one definite blunder we should have been more interested. What puzzled and bewildered was the pervading vapidity. How could Mr. Sutro contrive to be so completely uninteresting?

In his other plays, though we might sometimes think them rather of the stage in method and manner, rich rather in good points than in plot, he has always amused us or at worst held our attention. But last night, even to listen required conscious effort, and the moments of amusement were dolefully rare. What was wrong? It seemed that the play as a whole suffered from some general weakness of power, as if its author had not cared to work it out vigorously. The machinery ran smoothly enough, and turned out quantities of dialogue and cleverly finished, but hardly any of this neat conversation had the power to amuse, and none of it availed to interest us in the characters or the action. Just once or twice we caught a glimpse of reality or of caricature near enough to reality to be amusing. There was a poet who boasted that Swinburne might die while he would be immortal, and he for some moments was comical. There were two stupid, vulgar women, who, without being much like life, quarrelled and snarled at each other in rather a funny fashion. But these were rare gleams of light in some hours of mist. One of the few occasions on which a character became sympathetic was when the shadowy heroine expressed a hope that the next world might be more amusing. Some experience of the world in which Mr. Sutro condemned her to live enable us to understand her feelings very thoroughly.

THE HISTORIAN.

"The Two Virtues" of the title are, we believe, chastity and charity. Both of these and not only the first, it seemed that Mr. Sutro wished to say, ought to be found in a woman. Perfect agreement with that sentiment did not appear to us what it or the title had to do with the play. The hero was Jeffery Panton, who had inherited vast wealth and had been for many years of more writing a "History of Humanities." It seemed to be a comprehensive work including something about Grimm's Law, a theorem not very closely related to history. He had been jilted years before the play began, and when first found remained devoted to the false lady, with her portrait in his study and a glove and a rose of hers under a glass case. He was still devoted to her chiefly because he never saw her. There was some possibility of amusing irony here, most of which Mr. Sutro showed no wish to evade him. More than once, indeed, he seemed to miss chances offered by his scheme. The lady had married a young poet, and she came back to Jeffery to ask him to save her from her poet's philandering. The fellow had entangled himself with a Mrs. Guildford, a lady who was not respectable, and it was his silly wife's idea that Jeffery should go to Mrs. Guildford, and induce her to make an end of the affair.

In the second act Jeffery went, and after much bewildering talk between Mrs. Guildford and her companion, which only made Mrs. Guildford more obscure to us, after an amusing interlude with the poet's conceit, we had Jeffery discovering that Mrs. Guildford was an ardent student of history, a kindred soul. So he engaged her as his secretary, and the third act showed them in an amiable, industrious alliance. Then Jeffery's stupid, vulgar sister, and the poet's stupid, vulgar wife stormed the study. They had been investigating Mrs. Guildford's past; they had discovered that it included a divorce and several subsequent connections capable of the worst interpretation, and it was their resolve to tell the tale to Jeffery in Mrs. Guildford's presence.

CHASTITY AND CHARITY.

Observe the moral lesson. The two vulgar women possessing chastity without charity made themselves detestable in accusing the woman who was otherwise endowed. The scene, perhaps not intrinsically incredible, was not convincing. They drove Mrs. Guildford out of the house and then proceeded to quarrel between themselves, in which they were quite amusing. Jeffery came back from seeing Mrs. Guildford out and proclaimed his intention of marrying her. In the next act, he went to see her with a special license, and after some rather slow farce about a proposal embraced her, which was the end.

The characters, seldom interesting and never real, offer little opportunities, even for stage effect. Sir George Alexander did contrive to give something of a genial humanity to the vague outlines of the historian. He carried off many insignificant things with a lightness of touch and a gaiety which were invaluable. He put some expression into a good deal of incident, which, apart from the actor's work, was merely dull. Miss Martha Hedman had a pretty way with her as the nebulous Mrs. Guildford, but it was impossible to understand the woman or to feel any concern about her. Miss Henrietta Watson, as the objectionable and healthy sister, was duly irritating and obtuse, and Miss Athene Seyler played the sheer folly of the poet's wife with a gushing air and a touch of the minx that were cleverly managed. Mr. Herbert Waring found a good deal of fun in the poses of the poet. The audience received the play amiably, but with no warmth.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

SPECIAL NOTICE

The curtain will rise punctually at 8 o'clock.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER hopes that all who honour him by being present on this occasion may find it convenient to be seated at this hour, as late comers disturb the Audience and distress the Actors concerned in the performance.

CHASTITY and Charity, you will remember, are the two virtues indicated by the title of Mr. Sutro's new comedy now running at the St. James's. To these have been added recently two more, two, I might add, which are more relevant to the play than those chosen of the author, and these are Celerity and Brevity. The latter we know is the soul of wit, and Mr. Sutro's play stands or falls by its wit; the former is the soul of success in a play in which what has to be told matters nothing but the way in which it is told matters everything. "An April Day," my colleague PELLINORE called on its original production, "rather dull, with intermittent gleams of sunshine." Since the première the barometer has risen steadily. Those virtuous anti-cyclones—I hope that is the right technical meteorological term—Celerity and Brevity, have done much to disperse the gloom, and now we have an almost cloudless sky. I say almost, because I think we could do with still a little more Brevity. The opening of each act except the first has been cut, that of the third act most substantially, but I feel we might have even less of Mrs. Guildford's companion, and I think that M. Thiers might go altogether. I suppose imaginative Lamartine must stay if only as a cock-shy for the austerely accurate Panton.

"The Two Virtues"

* * *

The few interpolations that have been made are not, to my mind, so valuable as the excisions. Lines have been written in to Sir George Alexander's part to show, rather crudely, that Panton is really not a fool at all, but that his supposed folly is just a clever disguise for his real wisdom. This sudden illumination of the character late in the play is very arbitrary, and, personally, I prefer its original ambiguity. Besides, it does away with the pleasant speculation as to whether a man is as big a fool when he knows he's a fool as when he doesn't know it. Or, to put it another way, is a man who knows he's a fool and glories in his folly as big a fool as a man who doesn't know he's a fool and fancies his wisdom? On account of this new twist which the author has given to the character of Panton, Sir George necessarily has slightly altered his reading of the part. If I may put it so, and his inflections are more frequently ironical. As he consequently plays more briskly, it may be that these changes are, after all, indirectly to the benefit of the play. Another distinct gain is the increased brightness of Miss Martha Hedman's acting; though nothing could make her temperamentally the right woman for the part of Mrs. Guildford as I understand (or misunderstand) the character.

His Tongue is More Often in His Cheek

Rebecca * * * March 22 1914

GLOBE
Theatre

Tuesday

10/3/1914

Orch. Stall

D 1

This to be retained

EVERY EVENING at 8
Matinees, Wednesday & Saturday at 2.15.

OSCAR ASCHE and LILY BRAYTON
IN

KISMET

By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

MEN.

Hajj	OSCAR ASCHE
The Muezzin	JAMES PLINGE
The Iman Mahmud	GEORGE SKILLAN
A Mufti	LIONEL WEST
The Guide, Nasir	ARTHUR GRENVILLE
The Sheik, Jawan	CALEB PORTER
The Beggar, Kasim	R. F. ANSON
Amru, Zayd Shopkeepers	FERNLEY BISSHOPP, GEORGE D. TRELOAR
Amru's Apprentice	JOHN FLANAGAN
Zayd's Apprentice	ROY ROYSTON
Sweetseller	HAYFORD HOBBS
A Blind Man	GEORGE FORD
A Chinaman	E. BODNEY
Water Carrier	F. KURTZMANN
A Juggler	A. NORWOOD
The Captain of the Watch	ALEXANDER ONSLOW
The Caliph Abdulla	FREDERIC WORLOCK
The Wazir Abu Bakr	H. R. HIGNETT
The Wazir Mansur	HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Kafur (Mansur's Sworder)	NORMAN HARLE
Afife (Mansur's Secretary)	J. FRITZ RUSSELL
An Attendant on Mansur	F. WARLIKER
The Chamberlain of the Caliph	G. FERRIER
A Herald of the Caliph	GEORGE LEE
The Gaoler, Kutayt	C. LATER

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

WOMEN.

Marsinah (Hajj's Daughter)	LILY BRAYTON
Narjis (her Nurse)	BESSIE MAJOR
An Old Woman	FLORENCE M. ALLEN
The Almah (a Dancer)	NANCY DENVERS
Miskah (a Slave)	MURIEL ASHWYNNE
Two Women of the Bazaar	MAUD WINGFIELD
	MYRA CHRISTIANSEN
Kut-al-Kulub...	SUZANNE SHELDON

Misses Allen, Bourchier, L. O'Donohoe, A. O'Donohoe, Ellam, Keys, E. Mullock, D. Mullock, Nicholson, Nash, Paul, Rivers, Thorpe.

Messieurs. Alexander, Bodney. Bourne, Bushra, Colt, Craven, Curtis, Davis, Edwards, Florent, Gale, Hay, Jones. Keene, Kurtzmann, Norwood, Pearse, Reynolds, Ronald, St. Ord, Smith, Walsh, Warliker, West.

BEFORE THE CURTAIN.

The Man	PENDERELL PRICE
The Woman	LILIAN BIRTLES
The Story Teller	H. R. HIGNETT
The Snake Charmer	H. A. SELDEN
The Dancer	NANCY DENVERS

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT I. (Morning):

Scene 1.—A Street before the Mosque of the Carpenters.
Scene 2.—The Suk (Bazaar Street) of the Tailors.
Scene 3.—The Courtyard of a Poor House.

ACT II. (Afternoon):

Scene 1.—A Hall in the Wazir Mansur's Mansion.
Scene 2. The Same.
Scene 3.—The Courtyard of a Poor House.
Scene 4.—The Diwan (Audience Hall) of the Caliph's Palace.
Scene 5.—The Prison of the Palace.

(Evening):

ACT III.—The Hammam of Mansur's Mansion.

EPILOGUE.—A Street before the Mosque of the Carpenters.

The Scene is laid in the Baghdad of the Arabian Nights.
The Action takes place from Morning till Night.

The Play produced by OSCAR ASCHE.

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Costumes designed by PERCY ANDERSON and executed by SIMMONS & MISS MINNIE CHAMPION.

Musical Director: CHRISTOPHER WILSON. Stage Manager: J. FRITZ RUSSELL.
Assist. Stage Managers: GEORGE SKILLAN, JOHN FLANAGAN. Chief Machinist: M. J. COVERDALE
General Manager: CARL F. LEVEL. Business Manager: ARTHUR PENLEY.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

69

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

EVERY EVENING at 9.

By Arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

NORMAN McKINNEL & FREDERICK WHELEN

PRESENT

HELEN WITH THE HIGH HAND

Preceded at 8.15 by

THE REST CURE

A New Play in One Act, by G. E. JENNINGS.

Muriel	PHYLLIS STUCKEY
Alice Palmer (Dark Cat)	DORA GREGORY
May Williams (Fair Cat)	MARY CLARE
Olive Reed	DORIS NORMAN TREVOR
AND
Clarence Reed	OTHO STUART

SCENE A Room in a Nursing Home.

Vaudeville. March 16

"THE REST CURE."

A NEW PLAY IN ONE ACT. BY G. E. JENNINGS.

Muriel	Phyllis Stuckey
Alice Palmer (Dark Cat)	Dora Gregory
May Williams (Fair Cat)	Mary Clare
Olive Reed	Doris Norman Trevor
Clarence Reed	Otho Stuart

Miss Jennings has the happiest knack of writing one-act plays; and she shows it in "The Rest Cure" perhaps even more neatly and freshly than in "Acid Drops," which was produced the other day at the Royalty. She relies very much upon what she actually sees; but she sees humorously, and puts down sharply. She has a keen sense of the comic in human nature, and does not stop short at externals, for she has the true humorist's joy in character. To wind up this play about a nursing home, she brings in, of course, the almost farcical business of the lost trousers and their recovery by Muriel, the general servant. But the fun of the thing lies deeper than the trousers, or the parrot on the window-sill, or any of the other external troubles which make Clarence Reed's brief rest-cure so acute a misery to himself and so keen a joy to the audience. It lies in the application of such things to a man of Reed's selfish and exacting nature, and in the exaltation of Muriel, the jolly little drudge, who can see clean through nurses and patients and all, and gloat over the comic truth of them in her shrewd and wholesome little mind.

A few hours in such a nursing home as this were enough to cure Clarence Reed of "nerves," and we were delighted to think that Muriel went with him to take service in his house. She will be a great comfort to poor harassed Mrs. Reed, and will keep Clarence in order through fear of her candour and clear sight. Miss Phyllis Stuckey did justice to Muriel, and that means that she acted with brains and charm, and Mr. Otho Stuart was thoroughly amusing as the nervous sham. As to the nurses, Miss Dora Gregory's melancholy and Miss Mary Clare's brisk chatter were done to the life, and the whole play is delightful. Miss Jennings has found her feet now, and it is time that she tried a full-length comedy.

76

Aldwych. March 16

"THE EVER OPEN DOOR."

BY GEO. R. SIMS AND H. H. HERBERT.

"The Ever Open Door" was by no means done with when previous engegements compelled Mr. Loader to put on "The Queen's Champion"; and "The Queen's Champion" having served its turn and delighted a good many spectators, "The Ever Open Door" has been restored to the stage of the Aldwych, where it was greeted on Monday with a very hearty reception. The cast remains much the same; and Miss Hilda Spong as Lady Dereham, Mr. Frederick Victor as Father Clement, clever Miss Ruth Bidwell as the boy, Robbie, and Miss Kathleen O'Connor as Molly Dundon have resumed their old parts. So has Mr. Ernest Selig, who continues to delight the audience as Swankey Dottles, and Mr. R. P. Lamb has taken up with great success the part of Mr. Aveling, M.P.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of Mrs J. Waters's

Presence on

Thursday Evening, Mar. 19, 1914

At 7.45 o'clock

WHEN WILL BE RESUMED THE RUN OF THE SUCCESSFUL DRAMA

SEALED ORDERS

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON.

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

Drury Lane.

"SEALED ORDERS."

BY CECIL RALEIGH AND HENRY HAMILTON.

With naval affairs and spy-scares very much in men's minds, the revival of "Sealed Orders" comes at a favourable moment. Messrs. Raleigh and Hamilton are masters at spinning plots. Without any disrespect, we may say that their position is very much like that of the serial-writer who is asked to build his story round pictures already in hand. They must rope in everything that is going on at the moment; and the way they do it is remarkable. The plot is complicated, but perfectly easy to follow; and, as scene follows scene, nothing appears to be dragged in just because the picture had to be used up somehow. The reception on Thursday evening was enthusiastic and well deserved. The cast still includes Miss Fanny Brough, the unique, the inimitable; and Mr. C. M. Hallard, who is taking early but admirably to middle-aged men; charming Miss Madge Fabian; suave and terrible Mr. Julian Royce; gallant Mr. Langhorne Burton and other favourites. And Mr. Kenneth Douglas with his light staccato touch will make a telling figure of Cagliostro when he has caught the pitch of the house. The scenery and costumes and the mechanical wonders of the production need no mention: they are renowned enough already.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.15,

CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production of

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO KNOW

A Light Comedy in Three Acts.

By MONCKTON HOFFE.

CHARACTERS.

Richard Gilder	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Brabazon Todd	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
Lord Glandeville	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Arthur Wade	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH
Colonel Apthorp	Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Frank Gedge	Mr. RICHARD CAREAN
Gascoigne	Mr. HUGH GIBSON
Mrs. George Orple	Miss HELEN HAYE
Dorothy Gedge	Miss DOROTHY MINTO

APOLLO THEATRE
28/3/14
Orch. Stall
D
To be retained

ACT I. The Offices of Wilberforce Brothers, Turf Commission Agents, 428 Ryder Street, St. James's.
TIME. A Monday late in May.

ACT II. The Offices of the Lotus Publishing Company, 428 Ryder Street, St. James's.
(A year has elapsed.)

ACT III. Richard Gilder's Flat in Town.
The following evening.

Scenes designed by ARTHUR DE LISSA. Decorated and painted by ERVERS, Ltd., 6 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.
Bricks by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 17 New Bond street, W.
Hats and Cloaks by ANN TALBOT, Ltd., 5 George Street, Hanover Square.
Scenery painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN. W. by CLARKSON.
Piano supplied by ASCHERBERG, HOPWOOD & CREW, Ltd.

Preceded at 7.45 by

THE QUOD WRANGLE

By Our Dramatic Critic.

English acting such as the audience at the Apollo Theatre last evening witnessed need not fear comparison with any acting to be seen anywhere in a play the sole purpose of which is to amuse and entertain. Monckton Hoffe, the author of this new three-act light comedy produced by Mr. Charles Hawtrey, has no pretentious theme to present for discussion. He is out frankly to amuse, and in that purpose he succeeded. He understands too—a thing that all dramatic authors do not—the peculiarities of the characters he sets upon the stage, and the technicalities of the business in which we see them employed. The title of Monckton Hoffe's play, "Things We'd Like to Know," is suggested by the heading to an imaginary "society" paper that made a feature of asking awkward questions. The four "industrious" and impecunious men about town in this play whom we saw attempting, without success, to run a starting-price betting office thought it a horrible shame that their want of financial resources should be made the subject of the newspaper's gossip. But the "nuts" were, to say the least of it, a most resourceful confederacy, and played with a skill that was the best of good fun—the "confidence trick" on a nobleman that came through their way.

Sport, Finance, and Art.

It will be explained that this sentimental and artistic aspirations was the possession of enormous wealth, and that one of the impecunious men about town sharing the small profits and risks of the betting business was by nature a poet. He had abandoned the profession of verse because there was no sale, but when the peer who insisted on patronising art came the way of the industrious four the poetic Richard put forward himself and his friends as a group of men who mixed sport with finance and art, and that they were at that very moment preparing to launch on the world the wonderful poetic works of an unknown girl. The girl, as a matter of fact, was no other than their pretty typist, and it mattered not a jot that she knew not the difference between prose and verse—for Richard Gilder was to supply the poems. The peer, let it be said, fell an easy prey. He accepted the publishing scheme. The part of the girl was supposed to have written verses read everywhere. She became famous. The peer fell in love with her. The new publisher got enormous business and lots money, and everybody—most of all these comical scoundrels so cunningly was as happy as the day was long. At last, sick of the false success she was, the girl told the peer the truth. He, determined that his name should not be the laughing stock of England, closed out of the business, and Dick married the girl who loved the truth.

Mr. Hawtrey's Speech.

The story might as it is, and improbable because it is no more than farce is exceedingly entertaining just because the characters are drawn from life, and most splendidly acted. Mr. Hawtrey is always delightful, but last night everyone was good. Mr. Lyston Lyne gave a performance of a shrewd old colonel that was masterly, one, in fact, of the best hits of character seen for a long time, and others who took with him prominent part in the evening's acting honours were Miss Helen Haye, Mr. Henry Wenman, and Mr. A. Vane-Tempest. It was the business, and the form of the details, and the amusing dialogue that combined to wholly amuse the audience through the evening. There were insistent calls for the company, for the author, too, and to add an extra friendly note to the finish Mr. Hawtrey broke his rule and made a speech.

J. W.

1911
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1914.

THEATRE "SLUMP."

INFLUENCE OF LENT.

The theatres and music-halls of London are experiencing a very quiet time just now, but their managers are quite philosophically contenting themselves with the reflection that Lent has in every year affected their attendances very badly.

Notwithstanding the falling off in attendances—which becomes more marked each week as Easter is approached—six or seven out of the twenty-five plays now being given are playing to almost the capacity of the houses at which they are billed. Several plays the receipts of which have recently fallen off are experiencing only a temporary drop, but there are others playing monotonously each week to heavy losses that are in a position from which there can be no hope of redemption.

These and some of the music-halls that are showing a weekly loss of from £300 to £800 are the particular sufferers through the annual Lenten "slump." The music-hall managers make allowances for quiet periods in their business, but the speculator in a play production is very often gambling on the single chance, and just now some of them are being very hard hit.

Easter once over, London Theatreland always experiences a welcome return of the playgoers, and at the moment nine houses are getting ready new programmes to tempt them.

THE BUCKET SHOP.

A Play in Four Acts,

BY

FRANK HARRIS.

The Play produced by NORMAN PAGE.

THE PEOPLE OF THE PLAY IN THE ORDER OF THEIR APPEARANCE.

MAGUIRE	JAMES SKEA
LEAH JOSEPHS	GILLIAN SCAIFE
JOHN GRETTON	FRANKLYN ROBERTS
GEORGE TREVOR	P. PERCEVAL CLARK
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON	H. B. TABBERER
LADY BRITTON	FRANCES WETHERALL
MR. WHEELWRIGHT	MATTHEW BOULTON
MRS. LONGDEN	ANNIE HILL
LORD FREDERICK ATHOL	ATHOL STEWART
SPENCER GRETTON	EDMUND S. PHELPS
IRENE GRETTON	JUNE VAN BUSKIRK
MISS DALBY	MIELE MAUND
KATE TREVOR	VERA CUNNINGHAM
BLAKE HATTON	LEWIS COKER
STANLEY WILLIAMS	J. PARISH ROBERTSON
SERGEANT JONES	ALLAN JEAYES
OFFICIAL RECEIVER	C. HERBERT HEWETSON

1914
Waters, J
Plays

77

The Aldwych Theatre,

On 5th April, 1914,

At EIGHT o'clock.

Doors Open Seven-thirty o'clock.

On 6th April, 1914,

At TWO-THIRTY o'clock.

Doors Open Two o'clock.

ACT I. Gretton's Place of Business in Waterloo Place.

ACTS II. and III. The same.

The curtain will fall for a few minutes during Act III. to indicate the lapse of time.

ACT IV. A Room in Bankruptcy Buildings, Carey Street.

Some of the artists appear by kind permission of Mr. OSCAR ASCHE and Miss LILY BRAYTON, Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN, Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS, Mr. WALTER HOWARD, Miss LILLAH MCCARTHY and Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER, Mr. NORMAN MCKINNEL and Mr. FREDERICK WHELEN, and Mr. GASTON MEYER.

STAGE MANAGER ... ... VAL CUTHBERT.

75

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, APRIL 7, 1914.

"THE BUCKET SHOP."

DRAMA OF A "BUBBLE FINANCIER."

The Incorporated Stage Society has a predilection for shocking us. And there was a hush yesterday afternoon during one scene in Mr. Frank Harris's new play "The Bucket Shop" at the Aldwych Theatre when the bubble financier gave a display of love-making that compelled a comparison between plays of the new school and those of, say, six months ago.

One-man plays usually are not convincing. "The Bucket Shop" comes in that category. John Gretton, the stock and share king who cheated Peers and widows indiscriminately, was a picturesque villain. He robbed nearly everyone. Those he could not rob he bribed, but when the markets went against him and he refused to buy an enemy's silence angry customers came into his office and, in addition to breaking the furniture, very nearly broke the financier's head. Gretton, being no ordinary man, went on making money. Incidentally he made love.

The two women he favoured most were his chief lady clerk and a girl who wanted to go on the stage. He admitted that "passion makes idiots of us all," so when the financial smash arrived—he came through the bankruptcy court richer than ever—he transferred all his affections to the money market.

This drama, for it is good old drama, was excellently played. Miss Gillian Scaife was excellent. So was Miss Vera Cunningham, and an Australian actor, Mr. Norman McKeown, was super-excellent as the man of money. He would have made us believe in the financier's existence if only we could have believed in the existence of the titled folk and widows he robbed.

THE INCORPORATED STAGE SOCIETY.

MONDAY.
~~30.3.14.~~
6.4.14.

Stalls

F 3

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LITTLE THEATRE,

ADELPHI, W.C.

Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose seats for your representative for the first performance of

"Brer Rabbit and Mr. Fox"

SATURDAY, APRIL 11th, at 2.30, and Every Afternoon except Saturdays

"Brer Rabbit and Mr. Fox"

A MUSICAL FROLIC

Words by Mrs. PERCY DEARMER. Music by MARTIN SHAW.

CAST.

Uncle Remus	FRANK G. DUNN
John	JESSON ROY
Mary	JOAN CARR
Brer Bear	HARRY HILLIARD
Brer Fox	STANLEY ROBERTS
Brer Rabbit	MARJORIE COULSON
Brer Tarrypin	FABIA DRAKE
Brer Bull Frog	HARRY HILLIARD
King Deer	ARTHUR CLEAVE
King Deer's Daughter	FAY LILMAR
Mr. Frog (King Deer's Chamberlain)	ROY LILMAR
Miss Goose	DOROTHY FINLAYSON
Mr. Man	HARRY ALEXANDER
Miss Meadows	EVANGELINE HILLIARD
Miss Motts	DORIS HARDY
Miss Nancy	DAVINE ST. CLAIR
Miss Lucy	DOROTHY KING
Sindy Ann	EVELYN ALTHAUS
Miss Janey	DORIS PROSSER
Rab	RUTH FRENCH
Tobe	MOLLY O'SHAUN
Molly Cottontail	EILEEN WINDRIDGE
Bob Bunny	BEATRICE NORLEDGE
and
Mr. Kildee	C. HAYDEN COFFIN

Scene I. Brer Rabbit's Wood.
Scene II. Outside the House of Mr. Man.
Scene III. Brer Rabbit's Home.
Scene IV. Brer Rabbit's Wood.

LITTLE THEATRE.

"BRER RABBIT AND MR. FOX."

Frolicsome Folklore.

AGAIN "Uncle Remus" has been dramatised—this time by Mrs. Percy Dearmer, and Miss Gertrude Kingston presented Mrs. Dearmer's "Brer Rabbit and Mr. Fox" at the Little Theatre yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Dearmer has contrived to retain the quaint plantation humour and philosophic spirit of Mr. Chandler Harris's book, although of necessity she has been forced to rearrange her material to a great extent. The "Message" of Brer Rabbit is, in effect, a glorification of the triumph of the small over the great, of the weak over the strong. The various episodes illustrate contests of brains versus brute strength, and it is brains that come out on top every time. Old Uncle Remus acts as a sort of Chorus. He sits on the stage between two children and explains to them why the animals behave as they do. The children become very excited over the machinations of Mr. Fox, and are duly appreciative when he is vanquished by cute Brer Rabbit. The old negro himself enjoys it quite as much as the children, and laughs gleefully at Mr. Fox's downfall and utters quaint morsels of philosophy thereon.

81

Aldwych
THEATRE

11/4/1914

Stall

F19
To be retained

SATURDAY, APRIL 11TH, AT 7.45, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8, MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AT 2.30

McLEOD LOADER

PRESENTS

GEORGE R. SIMS' GREAT DRAMA:

The Lights o' London

CAST:

Squire Armytage	RICHARD NORTON
Harold Armytage	LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Clifford Armytage	FRANK TENNANT
Marks	LEONARD CALVERT
Seth Preene	JAMES PRIOR
Mr. Skeffington	RICHARD NEVILLE
Jarvis	MAITLAND MARLER
Shakespeare Jarvis	RUTH BIDWELL
Jim	ERNEST DISNEY
Inspector of Police	ALBERT CHAPMAN
Sergeant of Police	GEORGE AUBREY
Cutts	CHARLES H. MORTIMER
Waters	CHRIS. R. OLGAR
P.C. Lanson	C. SAUNDERS
P.C. Riley	GEORGE BARRAN
Mr. Brown	RUPERT J. GILES
Man in Park	ARTHUR DOLLARD
Trotters	ALEXANDER OAKLEY
Philosopher Jack	JACK BIXION
Joey	JACK FROST
A Coster	ALFRED BRAYLE
Percy de Vere, Esquire	EDMUND SYDNEY
Porter at the Casual Ward	ANTHONY NEVILLE
Bess Armytage	JESSIE WINTER
Hetty Preene	JANET ALEXANDER
Mrs. Jarvis	AMY FANCHETTE
Janet	ROSE HERSEE
Annie	ISABEL OHMEAD
Sal	NORAH ROY
Tottie	MABEL MALVANEY

Villagers, Costers, Policemen, &c.

Modern Plays

82

ACT I.

SCENE I. Armytage Hall.

(Three years are supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II.)

ACT II.

SCENE I. The Armytage Arms.
SCENE II. The Road to London.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Outside the Borough Police Station.
SCENE II. No. 7 Boston Street, Borough.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The Hawthorns, St. John's Wood.
SCENE II. Outside the Casual Ward.
SCENE III. The Slips, Regent's Park.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The Borough, Saturday Night.
SCENE II. Interior of Boston Street Police Station.

The Play produced by McLEOD LOADER under the personal supervision of the Author.

Scenery, Acts I. and II., by WALTER HANN & SON.
" " III., IV. and V., by WALTER JOHNSTONE.

Costumes and Uniforms by HYMAN, Leicester Square.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE ... "The Queen's Champion" ... Harold Howell

Music selected from the following:—

"Die Felsurmuhle"	Reissiger
"Chaconne"	Durand
"Ruy Blas"	Mendelssohn
"La Boheme"	Puccini
"Iolanthe"	Sullivan
"Fledermaus"	Strauss
"Bohemian Girl"	Balfe
"Oberon"	Weber

Etc., Etc.

Musical Director - - - THOMAS PARKER

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1914.

"THE LIGHTS O' LONDON."

MR. GEORGE R. SIMS'S 33-YEAR-OLD MELODRAMA AGAIN.

Thirty-three years ago Mr. George R. Sims wrote the famous melodrama, "The Lights o' London." The late Mr. Wilson Barrett produced it with enormous success in the old Princess's Theatre, Oxford-street, and ten years later revived it with equally gratifying results at the old Olympic Theatre. In the Aldwych Theatre on Saturday evening "The Lights o' London" made its third appearance and was acclaimed by an audience that filled every corner of the theatre.

How the audience enjoyed the story of the wrongly-convicted heir; his escape from gaol; his rescue on the Portsmouth-road; his meeting with his young wife; and his second escape! The great scene was at night by the Regent's Canal in winter time; the hunted husband with the lovely heroine; the duel on the bridge between their two deadly enemies; the splash of a body in the water; and the hero's rescue of his enemy, to make him a friend.

Mr. Sims has only had to bring in a word or two, or a reference, to make the melodrama up to date. J. W.

1914
Matera,
Plays

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

PYGMALION

A ROMANCE IN FIVE ACTS

BY

BERNARD SHAW.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Saturday, April 11th at 8.

(Subsequent Evenings at 8.30).

PYGMALION

A Romance in Five Acts,

By BERNARD SHAW

Henry Higgins	HERBERT TREE
Colonel Pickering	PHILIP MERIVALE
Freddy Eynsford-Hill	ALGERNON GREIG
Alfred Doolittle	EDMUND GURNEY
A Bystander	ROY BYFORD
Another One	ALEXANDER SARNER
Eliza Doolittle	MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL
Mrs. Eynsford-Hill	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Miss Eynsford-Hill	MARGARET BUSSÉ
Mrs. Higgins	ROSAMOND MAYNE-YOUNG
Mrs. Pearce	GERALDINE OLLIFFE
Parlourmaid	IRENE DELISSE

ACT I.

The Portico of Inigo Jones's Church of St. Paul in Covent Garden, 11.15 p.m.

ACTS II. & IV.

Professor Higgins' Phonetic Laboratory, Wimpole Street.

ACTS III. & V.

The Drawing Room in Mrs. Higgins' flat overlooking the river in Chelsea.

Act II. is on the morrow of Act I., and Act V. on the morrow of Act IV.

Some months elapse between Acts II. and III., and again between Acts III. and IV.

Period: The Present.

The Scenery by ALFRED E. CRAVEN. Acts III. & V. from designs by DENIS MACKAIL.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE ... ... "Opéra Bouffe"	Herman Finck
THREE ENGLISH DANCES	Roger Quilter
(a) SELENGER'S ROUND FROM OLD ENGLISH DANCES	Granville Bantock
(b) VALSE ROMANTIQUE	Sibelius
(a) TRÄUME	Richard Wagner
(b) VALSE INTERMEZZO	Oscar Eve
MOCK MORRIS AND SHEPHERD'S HEY	Percy A. Grainger

Mrs. Patrick Campbell's Dresses by HANDLEY SEYMOUR. Other Dresses by Miss LEVERICK.

Perruquier—W. CLARKSON.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

Special Theatre Edition of 'Thoughts and Afterthoughts," by Herbert Beerbohm Tree, can be obtained at the Box Office or from the Attendants, Price 1/-

STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL. MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER—ALFRED BELLEW. ASSISTANT PRODUCER—BASIL DEAN.
GENERAL MANAGER ... HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d, Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
BOX OFFICE (MR. POTTER) OPEN DAILY 10 to 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

PYGMALION

BY G BERNARD SHAW

HERBERT TREE — Mrs PATRICK CAMPBELL

Mon. Tues. Thurs. Fri. Mats. Wed. Sat. Saturdays

Sir Herbert Tree—the Modern Pygmalion

Here seen as Henry Higgins, the professor of phonetics

Mr. Bernard Shaw has laid it down as an axiom that loud laughter in the theatre is a bad habit. Sir Herbert Tree, on the other hand, finds it essential to the actor's art. Both, no doubt, were satisfied at His Majesty's Theatre last night, for, while the audience at moments rocked with laughter, there were long intervals in which they sat silent. Whether this was out of respect for the author or not, remains a secret.

In his new play, which he labels "romantic," Mr. Shaw has seized upon a genuinely comic idea. His Pygmalion, Henry Higgins, is a professor of phonetics—a mouth in manners and over-free in his language—who can "place" any man within six miles of his birthplace by his accent. In pursuit of his hobby he is taking notes during a very realistic thunderstorm under the portico of St. Paul's Church, Covent Garden, when he meets Colonel Pickering, a student of Indian dialects, and wagers that he will pass off Eliza Doolittle, a flower girl from Lisson-grove, as a duchess after six months of his tuition. The first act, full of wit and observation, finishes with Eliza driving off triumphantly in a taxi.

A Happy Creation.

Here, as has been said, is all the essence of a comedy. But the wheels of the successive four acts revolve very, very slowly, and too often the creaking of the machinery is heard. All Mr. Shaw's characters talk at minute length, and while, occasionally, they say witty things, too often they merely embroider the obvious at tedious length. The education of Eliza is a slow, a very slow, process, and requires endless explanations. Her father, Alfred Doolittle, a dustman, one of the undeserving poor, as he labels himself, who is willing to sell his daughter for five pounds, but who would have asked fifty if he had thought there was anything dishonourable in the transaction, is one of Mr. Shaw's happiest creations. "His natural gift of sentimental rhetoric," which is "due to the Welsh strain in him, and which also accounts for his moral laxity and his dishonesty," is a happy touch. But he, like all the rest, talks far too much.

Less happy are the Lyn-ford Hills, mother, daughter, and son—"Lad's Gerr"—but they, with Higgins's mother, serve as a suburban background for Eliza to shock when, in her chrysalis stage, she lapses into her native expressiveness and, when asked whether she is going to walk home, retorts "not b—— likely." Mrs. Patrick Campbell played this scene of comedy superbly and brought out the word with a richness of expression that brought down the house. The effort of Miss Lyn-ford Hill to repeat the expression as the latest small-talk was not so successful. So that the Cockney Galatea had been eminently entertaining—but in her butterfly stage passed off as a duchess at an ambassador's garden party and qualified for elevation as a lady's maid which, as Higgins sagely remarks, "requires better English," she was not so successful. Indeed, she occasionally verged on boredom. For she developed a heart and a desire to be cared for, and Mr. Shaw's sentiment does not ring true. However, after a series of scenes between Eliza and Higgins of alternate bullying and wheedlings, the curtain rises on the hope that she will return to his and Pickering's menage—whence she has fled after throwing his slippers in his face—and, perhaps, eventually, marry him. For she has proved indispensable to his selfish comfort, and, in his own way, he cares for her.

A Deluge of Words.

If the latter part of this odd and unconvincing play lacked the entertainment of the earlier portion it was nevertheless very warmly received by the audience. Of Mrs. Campbell's Eliza it must be said that she was far more convincing as a duchess than as the flower girl. Her speech as the latter was mincing and affected and lacked the full freedom of the Cockney, while her movements were curiously uncharacteristic. Sir Herbert Tree obviously revelled in the part of the professor of phonetics, but was swamped by the deluge of words under which the author inundated him. Mr. Edmund Gurney gave an excellent performance of the dustman, and Mr. Philip Merivale did all that could be done with the colourless part of the Colonel.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

AMERICAN farce has further reason to boast, since the production of "Potash and Perlmutter" at the Queen's Theatre on Tuesday evening, that it leaves our writers of farce and adapters of French farce very, very much in the shade with the latest specimen of that Montagnon fabric. Labels his work as a comedy, but we prefer to call it a farce because it is farcical, and, as there is a capital evening's entertainment to be got out of it, the author need not quarrel with our description. Potash and Perlmutter" adds a much-wanted new entertainment to the attenuated list of amusing plays without music showing in London up against at almost every street corner in the West End some man or other who saw the play in New York and was just sure that most people are agreed that a high value need not be placed on the judgment of those gentry when it can boast that they turned down a good thing.

Genuine Fun.

"Potash and Perlmutter" is by no means a good play, but it certainly is a jolly good entertainment. It gets roars of laughter—happens—but always because of what that are said. There are twenty-one characters in the farce, and three of them, Mr. Abe Potash, Mr. Perlmutter (his partner in a New York wholesale clothing manufactory), and Mrs. Potash are the people that win our laughter, our admiration, and our applause. The other people do not matter. They are only concerned in the machinery of making an attempt to get a sentimental background given by these two splendid character comedians acting the parts of struggling Jewish men in the cloak business. They make you laugh, and they can really make you cry. In their prosperity they are always quarrelling. They adore one another, but they never cease bickering. Then when a calamity comes—because of their generosity, other a little loss, and love each other a little more. If I could say about you what is in my mind, I'd be arrested." says Potash in the palmy days to Perlmutter; and when the calamity appears imminent and they are taking stock, Potash refuses to put his partner's motor-car on the list of their possessions. "I motor-car, he said, "is not an asset; it's a liability. There is heaps of funny dialogue throughout the play, and the delightful American players—Mr. Robert Leonard, Mr. Augustus Yorke, and Miss Matilda Cottrelly—to give it point. Fortunately for us they are hardly ever off the stage. You they are off for a moment you miss them badly.

J. W.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15, 1914.

A couple of American-German Jewish partners in a ready-made dressmaking business somewhere "down town" in New York, always wrangling in almost unintelligible English, might seem beforehand to offer rather unpromising material for mirth. But the fact is the house was in fits of laughter over this pair throughout the evening—over this pair, their lingo, their grimaces, their constant recrimination, their real underlying affection for one another, the fundamental human nature of them beneath a superficial uncouthness. They "defrayed the expenses," as the French say, of the evening, for the play which served to exhibit them was in itself quite negligible. Indeed, it seems odd that an author able to shape out whether from observation or imagination, so much "character" as has gone to the making of this pair should be, apparently, so little able to invent some plausible accompanying "fable."

But let the silly story pass: Potash and Perlmutter is not worth seeing just for the sake of its eponymous heroes. Mr. Augustus Yorke is Potash and Mr. Robert Leonard is Perlmutter, and our affections all for Potash, dejected and sad at the next we plump for the triumphant Perlmutter. Perhaps Potash merits just a shade more of your sympathy than Perlmutter, because he is a "family man," indeed a model husband and father, whereas Perlmutter is a mere family bachelor; but after all we don't know, too, that Mrs. Perlmutter is found to have a heart, Jewish type is cleverly played by Miss Matilda Cottrelly. The others of the cast are also authentically and Mr. Yorke's is the fun, and they should on no account be missed by playgoers in search of a new laugh.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

(Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ALFRED BUTT, 25 Marlborough Place, W).

TUESDAY, APRIL 14th, 1914, & Every Evening thereafter at 8.15. Matinees: Wednesdays & Saturdays at 2.30.

Messrs. GEORGE GROSSMITH & EDWARD LAURILLARD

PRESENT

POTASH & PERLMUTTER

A Comedy in Three Acts by MONTAGUE GLASS.

Mawruss Perlmutter	Partners in the Firm of Potash and Perlmutter	Mr. ROBERT LEONARD
Abe Potash		Mr. AUGUSTUS YORKE
Marks Pasinsky	(Buyer) ...	Mr. CHARLES DICKSON
Henry D. Feldman ...	(Solicitor) ...	Mr. EDGAR ELLWANGER
Boris Andrieff	(Book-keeper) ...	Mr. ERNEST MILTON
Mozart Rahiner	(Salesmnn) ...	Mr. EZRA MATTHEWS
Stenerman	(Capitalist) ...	Mr. GEORGE HUMPHERY
Senator Murphy	(Politicinn) ...	Mr. FRANKLIN HANNA
The Mysterious One ...	(Book Agent) ...	Mr. H. DE LANGE
Sydney	(Office Boy) ...	Master GREENBERG

The Production Staged by LEE KOHLMAR.

Act 1. Establishment of Potash & Perlmutter.
Act 2. Potash & Perlmutter's New Establishment. Fifth Avenue, New York. Three Weeks Later.
Act 3. Potash's Home at Lexington Avenue, New York. Next Day.

FIRST MATINEE: Saturday, April 18th, at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
BOX OFFICE (MR. UNDERWOOD) open 10 till 10.
'Phone 9437 Gerrard (2 lines).

The Impatient One	(Express Man) ...	Mr. WEISER
Tergusson, Farrell	(United States' Deputy Marshals) ...	Mr. CHARLES RUSS, Mr. WILLIAMS
Ruth Goldman	(Designer) ...	Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
Mrs. Potash	(Abe's Wife) ...	Miss MATILDA COTTRELLY
Miss Cohen ...	(Stenographer) ...	Miss JULIA BRUNS
Irma Potash ...	(Abe's Daughter) ...	Miss ELISE MARTIN
Miss Le Vin, Miss O'Brien, Miss Nelson	(Models) ...	Miss BLANCHE STOCKER, Miss GERTRUDE BIRCH, Miss NANCY MORE
Katie	(Maid)	Miss DAISY LINNELL

Scenery by HUGO BARUCH & Co., Shaftesbury Avenue, W.
Furniture by JAMES S. LYON, High Holborn.
Gowns by LUCILE LTD., MADAME RAYMOND, THE HANOVER DRESS COMPANY, and DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Costumes by MORRIS ANGEL & SON.
Typewriters by THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER COMPANY, LTD.
American Water Coolers from GREAT BEAR SPRING WATER COMPANY, New York, U.S.A.

Business Manager	Mr. ERNEST H. COLLINS.
Stage Manager	Mr. H. DE LANGE.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. CHARLES RUSS.
Orchestra under the direction of	M. S. FERICESCU.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBUPY AVENUE. V.

Every Evening at 8.15

Wednesday, Saturday at 2.30

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER

A Character Comedy, in Three Acts, by MONTAGUE GLASS

Daily Mail

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1915.

After a run of 664 performances "Potash and Perlmutter" will end its London season at the Queen's Theatre on Saturday night. Here is a remarkable instance of a new management producing a play by an unfamiliar author, and presenting it with a company of which the three leading players were never heard of before in London. The title meant nothing to the London public. The short stories of the American author, Mr. Montague Glass, on which the play was founded were unknown here. They had helped its success in America, but London was given the stage version without any preliminary recommendation and gave its approval the first night. If it had all been as good as the first act it might have run another year. The thing to note, however, is that a genuinely amusing human play will succeed in London whether or not the author and players are known.

"Bunty Pulls the Strings" was another instance of this. London knew nothing of the Scots author and company that came to town in that comedy in the midsummer of 1911, and stayed at the Haymarket Theatre for a run of 618 performances. Curiously enough, "Bunty" played to indifferent business for the first three weeks. That was partly due to the long, hot days; then suddenly the demand for seats overwhelmed the box-office and "Bunty" was the talk of the town. "Potash and Perlmutter" was a success from eleven o'clock on the night it was first played here, four months before the war began. And, by the by, Messrs. Robert Leonard and Augustus Yorke, who have taken the name parts here throughout that long run, are going to remain in England, and will next month produce in a variety theatre a new Hebrew dialect sketch written specially for them.

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Sole Director ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 16th, 1914, at 8

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

MAM'SELLE TRALALA

A Musical Play in Three Acts.

Book by ARTHUR WIMPERIS and HARTLEY CARRICK.
From the German of GEORG OKONKOWSKI and LEO LEIPZIGER.

Music by JEAN GILBERT.

Bruno Richard (Manufacturer of the famous Chocolate Richard)		Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Madame Richard	(his Wife) ...	... Miss AMY AUGARDE
Claire	(his Daughter) ...	... Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR
Pierre Delacour	(his Manager) ...	... Mr. MORANT WEBER
Georges Dieudonne	... ...	... Mr. F. POPE STAMPER
Philippe Michel	(a Lottery Agent) ...	... Mr. CHARLES TREVOR
Aristide Volnay	(a Clerk) ...	... Mr. ERNEST HENDRIE
Max	(Waiter) ...	... Mr. TOM A. SHALE
Filine, Adele, Nanette, Celeste	Employees at Richard's	Miss DOREEN LANGTON, Miss LORNA DELLA, Miss PHYLLIS ALLEN, Miss MARGOT KELLY
Messenger		... Mr. A. LYNN
Susette, Babette, Rosette, Fouchette	Dancers at "The Little Mouse"	Miss ALMA HUGHES, Miss DOROTHY DURAND, Miss LILY BLYTHE, Miss VIOLET CAMERON
Guillaume, Francois, Narcisse, Edouard	Waiters at "The Little Mouse"	Mr. STANLEY BRIGHTMAN, Mr. ELIOT SKINNER, Mr. LOUIS RUSSELL, Mr. CLAUDE RENSHAW
Henri, Fraisette	Clients of "The Little Mouse"	Mr. FRANK MELVILLE, Miss ALMA LEE
Tina, Mimi	Mannequins at Madame Fleuriot's	Miss MAISIE BURLINGHAM, Miss MAY MORTON
Madame Fleuriot		... Miss FRANCES TORRENS
Noisette (known as "Tralala")	AND	... Miss YVONNE ARNAUD

Should an encore be demanded and refused it will not be from want of courtesy to the audience, but from a desire on the part of the Management that the piece should conclude in reasonable time on the first night

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Act I. .. .. General Office at the Maison Richard

Act II. .. .. "The Little Mouse" Restaurant

Act III. .. .. Showroom at Madame Fleuriot's

Time—The Present. Place—Paris.

Musical Director... ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

All Gowns and Hats worn by Miss Yvonne Arnaud, Miss Amy Augarde, and Miss Gaynor by Mr. REVILLE, 15 Hanover Square. All Evening Gowns and Head-Dresses in Act II., and the "Model" Dress in Act III. by Mr. REVILLE, of REVILLE & ROSSITER (1912), Ltd., 15 Hanover Square

Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY., Boots and Shoes by A. L. GAMBA & Co.

Gentlemen's Modern Dress by WALKER & Co., 38 Sackville Street, W.

Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill, Modern Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

The Scenery, Fancy Costumes, Properties and Furniture by BARUCH & Co., London, New York, Vienna, Berlin.

All Modern Dresses in Act III. designed and executed by BEATRICE RAYMOND, 76 Regent St., W.

Dances arranged by ESPINOSA.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. A. MAYNARD

Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. E. F. SAXON

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2. Commence 8.20; Matinees 2.30
Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

"Mam'selle Tralala."

Mr. Michael P. Faraday presented his new musical play "Mam'selle Tralala" at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday evening, and a very tuneful, light-hearted affair the audience found it. The mounting, or dressing, of the piece is not as generous or as tasteful as London usually gets, but the play surmounted the handicap by reason of its amusing dialogue, its tuneful numbers, and the excellence of the stage management.

The Lottery Ticket.

The story told in "Mam'selle Tralala" is mainly concerned with the adventures of a very funny and fat chocolate manufacturer who conceals from his wife that he had been married and divorced before she met him. He succeeded in this until he learned that twenty thousand pounds in a lottery was won by a ticket given to the child of his first marriage (who was put out to nurse), and that the difficulty of discovering the lost prize-winner could not be overcome without letting his living wife know all about his past. Now, as he was somewhat gay in company and knew half Paris, it can be understood that his entry into a restaurant stirred matters up, and this gave the reason for Act II. taking place in a café. Mr. James Blakeley was the ideal actor for such a part, and partnered by Miss Amy Augarde the fun was fast enough. Details are not necessary to give a fair idea of the play. Musical comedy does not always require explanations. Suffice it to say that Jean Gilbert's music was tuneful, Arthur Wimperis's dialogue was witty, and Miss Yvonne Arnaud made a delightful heroine. J.W

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE REFEREE.
SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1914.

Last Monday there was made at the Royal Victoria Hall (or old "Vic"), Waterloo-road, what may be called, I assume, the first London experiment with what is labelled as

"The People's Theatre"

—that is to say, an attempt to present certain Shakespearean and other masterpieces, real or otherwise, at "popular" prices. The prices at the "Vic" are "popular" enough in all conscience, for the gallery seats range from twopence to threepence, the pit from fourpence to sixpence, the stalls from one shilling to two shillings, and the balcony from ninepence to a shilling. For "the nobility and gentry of the Waterloo-road and its immediate neighbonring vicinity" there are private boxes from one guinea down to six-and-sixpence. And these may be booked at Rayne's, the costumiers, hard by.

* * *

In starting proceedings at the People's Theatre, Miss Rosina Filippi (the directress thereof) presented to a holiday audience "The Merchant of Venice." Considering that the beauty of the weather made an irresistible call to the open, there was a very fair attendance. Although even this most easily understandable of Shakespeare's plays —now read in so many schools, County Council and otherwise —seemed caviare to a good many present, still it went well on the whole. The Shylock of Mr. Bertram Forsyth (author of the fairy play called "The Shepherdess Without a Heart") gave general satisfaction. So did the Portia of Miss Jeannette Sherwin and the Launcelot Gobbo of Miss Mercia Cameron. I note that some seem to regard a girl-Gobbo as quite a new thing. There have, however, been other Shakespearean examples. Why, not long ago, in Mr. Poel's revival of "Troilus and Cressida," even the scurrilous and deformed Thersites was played by a lady; and, besides that, look what a lot of lady Hamlets we have had! Why, I saw several such at the old "Vic" when that I was and a little tiny boy.

* * *

I am afraid that a little more definiteness of announcement is needed with regard to this "People's Theatre," which, of course, can scarcely afford to advertise much. The local posters and the day-bills announce broadly that performances will be given every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday for four weeks. But last Wednesday there was no performance—only a Police Fête—at the "Vic." In fact, after Monday's "Merchant" there was "nothing doing" till Friday, when "The School for Scandal" was presented. Sheridan's comedy seemed to be regarded with mixed feelings. The shilling stallites scattered about the floor for the most part emulated the Short Faced Gentleman in the Spectator and "distinguished themselves by a profound silence." The fourpenny and sixpenny pittites didn't cuthese overmuch. The couple of dozen and a half of ninepenny dress-circle folk, about half of whom brought along opera-glasses, and even big field-glasses, sat mumchance. In fact,

Only the Twopenny Gallery Understood the Play.

Anyhow, they were the only auditors who laughed and applauded in the proper places or did anything to encourage the really clever company concerned. Some of the impersonations were excellent, notably Mr. Campbell Cargill's Sir Peter Teazle; the Charles and Joseph Surface of Mr. Charles Adair and Mr. Wilfred Fletcher respectively; Mr. J. A. Smith's Moses, and Miss Marjorie Paterson's Lady Teazle. Among the other players great credit is due to Mr. John Odlum, as honest Rowley; Mr. Richard Coke, as Sir Oliver; and Mr. D. Christie Murray, who doubled the parts of Trip and Mr. Surface's Servant with noteworthy neatness alertness, and repose. "The School for Scandal" ended with the Screen Scene and then it was 11.15.

* * *

"The Merchant of Venice" and "The School for Scandal" will be repeated on certain dates. The other two plays for the four weeks' season are "Romeo and Juliet" and Mr. Shaw's "Candida." The last-named play will be given twice—that is, on Monday, May 4, and Friday, May 8. I am rather anxious to see how the "Cut" will receive "Candida."

* * *

SUNDAY THEATRES.

SIR H. TREE ON A GREAT STEP FORWARD.

At a well-attended meeting at Drury Lane Theatre yesterday afternoon it was decided to form a "People's Theatre Society" on the basis of a shilling subscription. During the discussion, in which Sir Herbert Tree, Sir George Alexander, and Bishop Welldon took part, there was an interesting interchange of ideas as to the advisability of opening theatres on Sundays. Sir William Treloar, who presided, announced that the proposal to establish a people's theatre, the main features of which have already been described in The Times, has the sympathy of Queen Alexandra. Among those present were :—

Sir John Hare, Sir James Crichton-Browne, Mr. William Poel, Mr. Edward Compton, and Miss Rosina Filippi. A letter was read from Mr. Henry Arthur Jones heartily supporting the proposal, but adding that if the masses were to be drawn to the theatre it must be by plays that were not above their comprehension.

Sir Herbert Tree moved that a People's Theatre Society be instituted on the basis of a shilling subscription. He said that the powers that were did not yet recognize what a potent factor the playhouse was in shaping the minds of the people. That was proved in the matter of the employment of children. Nobody who knew anything about children in the theatre could have two opinions as to their happiness, and yet they were threatened with legislation which might abolish A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Blue Bird, Alice in Wonderland, and the pantomimes. It was an astounding thing that to please a few Nonconformists who did not go to the theatre these children should be thrown to the wolves. A love of the theatre was implanted in every child. The picture theatre had opened up a new world to children, and it was for those children the people's theatre should cater. It would be economically impossible for a West-end theatre to give an entertainment at the popular prices demanded by a people's theatre. In Berlin the New People's Theatre Society was in its 24th year with a membership of 50,000. There had been 826 performances of 48 different plays, as well as 10 symphony concerts and many lectures. If the theatres were opened on Sundays it would be the greatest step forward the stage had ever made. If it was ungodly to open theatres on Sundays it was surely equally ungodly to open music-halls and picture theatres.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., who seconded the resolution, urged that the trade unions should be asked to cooperate. There was no day in the week better suited for a popular theatre than Sunday.

Bishop Welldon, supporting the resolution, said that while he did not take the strict view as to the prohibition of theatrical performances on Sunday, he thought it would be a mistake to mix up that great movement with any deliberate policy of opening theatres and other places of amusement on Sunday. There was such a thing as religious opinion in this country, and it was not easy to get over it.

Sir George Alexander said that the West-end theatrical managers had not at any time, until perhaps now, wished to have the theatres open on Sundays, but the wish had been forced upon them by the competition of the picture theatres and the Sunday concerts.

After three suffragists had been ejected the resolution was carried unanimously.

Times 25/4/14

The Palace Theatre

:: Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W. ::

The Premier Variety Theatre of Europe

Every Evening at 8. Matinee, Wednesday & Saturday at 2.

PROGRAMME

Monday, April 20th, 1914.

ALFRED BUTT PRESENTS

THE PASSING SHOW

Book and Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS. Mise en Scene by P. L. FLERS
Music Composed and Arranged by HERMAN FINCK
Staged by GUS SOHLKE

SCENERY BY AMABLE, BRUCE SMITH, G. SACKMAN AND RONSIN
DRESSES BY PASCAUD, SUZANNE, ALIAS, CLARKSON, MORRIS ANGEL
HATS BY GEORGETTE

Cast

THE CHARACTERS APPEAR IN THE ORDER NAMED

Prologue

The Showman ... ... Mr. Arthur Playfair

Scene I ... ... THE WORLD'S BAZAAR ... Bruce Smith

The Showman ... ... Mr. Arthur Playfair
The Hon. Lettice Hardup ... Miss Foolt
Rolls Royce ... ... Mr. Claw Smith
Speakwell ... ... Mr. Lewis Sydney
Moses Fitzhaggis ... ... Mr. Eadie
Comte de Selincourt, ...
The Gaiety ... Miss Marjorie Cassidy
Michaelis ... ... Mr. Nelson Keys
Topping Spindler ... ... Mr. Graham
Larry Hoarder ... ... Mr. Jack Christie
Berkeley Mayfair ... ... Mr. Berry
Daisy De Cree ... ... Miss Fairfax
Sam Weller ... ... Mr. Hayes
Gilbert the Filbert ... Mr. Basil Hallam
Kitty O'Hara... ... ... Miss Elsie Janis
Alfred Lester ... ... Mr. Nelson Keys

A Travesty

Shopwell ... ... Miss Dickie Thorpe
... ... Miss Elsie Janis
... ... Mr. Arthur Playfair
... ... Mr. Basil Hallam
Granville Barker ... ... Mr. Nelson Keys
Titania ... ... Miss Florence Sweetman
Puck ... ... Miss Winifred Pelevanti
Shakespeare ... ... Mr. Lewis Sydney

Danse Persanne

Mr. Graham, Mr. Douglas, Eight Palace Girls and Mlle. Regine Flory

George Graves ... ... Mr. Nelson Keys

A Military Maid ... ... Miss Clara Beck

The Wanderer ... ... Mr. Jack Christie

Plays

THE REFEREE.
SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1914.

Last Monday there was made at the Royal Victoria Hall (or old "Vic"), Waterloo-road, what may be called, I assume, the first London experiment with what is labelled as

"The People's Theatre"

—that is to say, an attempt to present certain Shakespearean and other masterpieces, real or otherwise, at "popular" prices. The prices at the "Vic" are "popular" enough in all conscience, for the gallery seats range from twopence to threepence, the pit from fourpence to sixpence, the stalls from one shilling to two shillings, and the balcony from ninepence to a shilling. For "the nobility and gentry of the Waterloo-road and its immediate neighbouring vicinity" there are private boxes from one guinea down to six-and-sixpence. And these may be booked at Rayne's, the costumiers, hard by.

* * *

In starting proceedings at the People's Theatre, Miss Rosina Filippi (the directress thereof) presented to a holiday audience "The Merchant of Venice." Considering that the beauty of the weather made an irresistible call to the open, there was a very fair attendance. Although even this most easily understandable of Shakespeare's plays —now read in so many schools, County Council and otherwise —seemed caviare to a good many present, still it went well on the whole. The Shylock of Mr. Bertram Forsyth (author of the fairy play called "The Shepherdess Without a Heart") gave general satisfaction. So did the Portia of Miss Jeannette Sherwin and the Launcelot Gobbo of Miss Mercia Cameron. I note that some seem to regard a girl-Gobbo as quite a new thing. There have, however, been other Shakespearean examples. Why, not long ago, in Mr. Poel's revival of "Troilus and Cressida," even the scurrilous and deformed Thersites was played by a lady; and, besides that, look what a lot of lady Hamlets we have had! Why, I saw several such at the old "Vic" when that I was and a little tiny boy.

* * *

I am afraid that a little more definiteness of announcement is needed with regard to this "People's Theatre," which, of course, can scarcely afford to advertise much. The local posters and the day-bills announce broadly that performances will be given every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday for four weeks. But last Wednesday there was no performance—only a Police Fête—at the "Vic." In fact, after Monday's "Merchant" there was "nothing doing" till Friday, when "The School for Scandal" was presented. Sheridan's comedy seemed to be regarded with mixed feelings. The shilling stallites scattered about the floor for the most part emulated the Short Faced Gentleman in the Spectator and "distinguished themselves by a profound silence." The fourpenny and sixpenny pittites didn't enthuse overmuch. The couple of dozen and a half of ninepenny dress-circle folk, about half of whom brought along opera-glasses, and even big field-glasses, sat mumchance. In fact,

Only the Twopenny Gallery Understood the Play.

Anyhow, they were the only auditors who laughed and applauded in the proper places or did anything to encourage the really clever company concerned. Some of the impersonations were excellent, notably Mr. Campbell Cargill's Sir Peter Teazle; the Charles and Joseph Surface of Mr. Charles Adair and Mr. Wilfred Fletcher respectively; Mr. J. A. Smith's Moses, and Miss Marjorie Paterson's Lady Teazle. Among the other players great credit is due to Mr. John Odlum, as honest Rowley; Mr. Richard Coke, as Sir Oliver; and Mr. D. Christie Murray, who doubled the parts of Trip and Mr. Surface's Servant with noteworthy neatness alertness, and repose. "The School for Scandal" ended with the Screen Scene and then it was 11.15.

* * *

"The Merchant of Venice" and "The School for Scandal" will be repeated on certain dates. The other two plays for the four weeks' season are "Romeo and Juliet" and Mr. Shaw's "Candida." The last-named play will be given twice—that is, on Monday, May 4, and Friday, May 8. I am rather anxious to see how the "Cut" will receive "Candida."

* * *

SUNDAY THEATRES.

SIR H. TREE ON A GREAT STEP FORWARD.

At a well-attended meeting at Drury Lane Theatre yesterday afternoon it was decided to form a "People's Theatre Society" on the basis of a shilling subscription. During the discussion, in which Sir Herbert Tree, Sir George Alexander, and Bishop Welldon took part, there was an interesting interchange of ideas as to the advisability of opening theatres on Sundays. Sir William Treloar, who presided, announced that the proposal to establish a people's theatre, the main features of which have already been described in The Times, has the sympathy of Queen Alexandra. Among those present were :—

Sir John Hare, Sir James Crichton-Browne, Mr. William Poel, Mr. Edward Compton, and Miss Rosina Filippi. A letter was read from Mr. Henry Arthur Jones heartily supporting the proposal, but adding that if the masses were to be drawn to the theatre it must be by plays that were not above their comprehension.

SIR HERBERT TREE moved that a People's Theatre Society be instituted on the basis of a shilling subscription. He said that the powers that were did not yet recognize what a potent factor the playhouse was in shaping the minds of the people. That was proved in the matter of the employment of children. Nobody who knew anything about children in the theatre could have two opinions as to their happiness, and yet they were threatened with legislation which might abolish A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Blue Bird, Alice in Wonderland, and the pantomimes. It was an astounding thing that to please a few Nonconformists who did not go to the theatre these children should be thrown to the wolves. A love of the theatre was implanted in every child. The picture theatre had opened up a new world to children and it was for those children the people's theatre should cater. It would be economically impossible for a West-end theatre to give an entertainment at the popular prices demanded by a people's theatre. In Berlin the New People's Theatre Society was in its 24th year with a membership of 50,000. There had been 826 performances of 48 different plays, as well as 10 symphony concerts and many lectures. If the theatres were opened on Sundays it would be the greatest step forward the stage had ever made. If it was ungodly to open theatres on Sundays it was surely equally ungodly to open music-halls and picture theatres.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR, M.P., who seconded the resolution, urged that the trade unions should be asked to cooperate. There was no day in the week better suited for a popular theatre than Sunday.

BISHOP WELLDON, supporting the resolution, said that while he did not take the strict view as to the prohibition of theatrical performances on Sunday, he thought it would be a mistake to mix up that great movement with any deliberate policy of opening theatres and other places of amusement on Sunday. There was such a thing as religious opinion in this country, and it was not easy to get over it.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER said that the West-end theatrical managers had not at any time, until perhaps now, wished to have the theatres open on Sundays, but the wish had been forced upon them by the competition of the picture theatres and the Sunday concerts.

After three suffragists had been ejected the resolution was carried unanimously.

Times 25/4/14

The Palace Theatre

:: Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W. ::

The Premier Variety Theatre of Europe

Every Evening at 8. Matinee, Wednesday & Saturday at 2.

PROGRAMME

Monday, April 20th, 1914.

ALFRED BUTT PRESENTS

THE PASSING SHOW

Book and Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS. Mise en Scene by P. L. FLERS
Music Composed and Arranged by HERMAN FINCK
Staged by GUS SOHLKE

SCENERY BY AMABLE, BRUCE SMITH, G. SACKMAN AND RONSIN
DRESSES BY PASCAUD, SUZANNE, ALIAS, CLARKSON, MORRIS ANGEL
HATS BY GEORGETTE

Cast

THE CHARACTERS APPEAR IN THE ORDER NAMED

Prologue

The Showman ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR

Scene I ... ... THE WORLD'S BAZAAR ... Bruce Smith

The Showman ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
The Hon. Lettice Hardup ... Miss POOLE
Ms Royce ... ... Mr. CLAY SMITH
Speakwell ... ... Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY
Moses Fitzhaggis ... ... Mr. EADIE rou de Selincourt, } Miss MARJORIE CASSIDY the Gaiety ... }
Michaelis ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS

Topping Spindler ... ... Mr. GRAHAM
Larry Hoarder ... ... Mr. JACK CHRISTIE
Berkeley Mayfair ... ... Mr. BERRY
Daisy De Cree ... ... Miss FAIRFAX
Sam Weller ... ... Mr. HAYES
Gilbert the Filbert ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Kitty O'Hara... ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
Alfred Lester ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS

A Travesty

hopwell ... ... Miss DICKIE THORPE
a ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
ler ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM

Granville Barker ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Titania ... ... Miss FLORENCE SWEETMAN
Puck ... ... Miss WINIFRED DELEVANTI
Shakespeare ... ... Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY

Danse Persanne

Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. DOUGLAS, EIGHT PALACE GIRLS and Mlle. REGINE FLORY

George Graves ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
A Military Maid ... ... Miss CLARA BECK
The Wanderer ... ... Mr. JACK CHRISTIE

Waters, J.
Plays

Scene II ... SALLE DES TAPISSERIES ANCIENNES ... Amable

Lords and Ladies—

The Misses FAIRFAX, WATTS, PEAKE, THORPE, DONALDSON, STORIA, DANTE
Messrs. BERRY, VANE, GOW, WEBB, JONES

Dances by—

The Misses WHARTON, DOLAN, CAIRNS, WHITING, LORRAINE, McSPIRIT, GREY, SHAW, PITMAN, CHANDLER, JORDAN, PACEY, DESMOND, SWEETENHAM, THOMPSON, NICHOLSON.

Scene III THE STAGE DOOR OF THE HILARITY THEATRE G. Sackman

The Stage Hands Mr. GRAHAM and Mr. DOUGLAS
The Stage Door Keeper ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
The Fireman ... ... Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY
Mrs. Grinsmith ... Miss FLORENCE SWEETMAN
A Messenger ... ... Mr. A. FAIRLEY
A Dresser ... ... Miss CLARE GREET
Kitty O'Hara ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
Gilbert the Filbert ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM

Musical Numbers—

Dance ... ... Mr. GRAHAM and Mr. DOUGLAS
Song..." Florrie was a Flapper"...Miss ELSIE JANIS.

Interval of Ten minutes

Song ... ... "The Lyre Bird and the Jay"
Mr. CLAY SMITH, Miss WINIFRED DELEVANTI, Miss MARJORIE CASSIDY.

Scene IV ... LE CARNAVAL DE VENISE D'ANTAN ... Ronsin

Mr. Punch ... ... Miss MILDRED STOKES
Mrs. Punch ... ... Miss MARION PEAKE
Punchinellos ... The Misses DANTE, WOOTON, MOORE, HAYES

Crispin ... ... Miss DICKIE THORPE
Boulton ... ... Mr. EADIE
Crispinettes The Misses CHARTERIS, FAIRFAX, DONALDSON, HOLT, ALLEN

Song ... "Ciribiribin" ... Mr. EADIE

The Blonde ... ... Miss CONNIE AMOR
The Brunette ... ... Miss MARJORIE CASSIDY
The Beau ... ... Mr. BERRY
Song ... "Blonde et Brune" ... Mr. JONES

Scaramouche ... ... Mr. VICTOR
Columbine ... ... Miss MARY MITCHELL
Harlequin ... Miss WINIFRED DELEVANTI

Pierrot ... ... Miss FLORENCE SWEETMAN
Pierette ... ... Miss LOTTIE WATTS
Pierrots ... ... The SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS

La Marchande de Masques

"Scene Mimée et Dansée" arranged by Mlle. BEAUVAIS and GEORGES WAGUE
To Music by SAINT SAENS—LEONCAVALLO—CHANTRIER, ETC.
(a) La Colère—(b) Le Pantin—(c) La Jalousie—(d) L'Avarice—(e) La Folie
La Marchande—Mlle. REGINE FLORY

Scene V ... ... THE GASWORKS ... ... G. Sackman

John Redmond ... ... Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY
Asquith ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Lloyd George ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Winston Churchill ... ... Mr. JACK CHRISTIE
Lord Willoughby de Broke ... Mr DESGUES
Mill-by Dilly ... ... Mr. A. LAUNDY
Duke of Southerland ... ... Mr. FROST
Party Government ... ... Mr. DESPARD
Balfour ... ... Mr. F. PARR
Falconer ... ... Mr. NEILSON
Lord Robert Cecil ... ... Mr. RAY
Masterman ... ... Mr. VICTOR
Lawson Hart ... ... Mr. WEBB
John Burns ... ... Mr. GRAHAM
Holden ... ... Mr. DOUGLAS
Lansdown ... ... Mr. WARNE
Yokel ... ... Mr. HAYES
Austen Chamberlain ... ... Mr. STEVENSON
Lord Curzon ... ... Mr. EADIE
Carson ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
F. E. Smith ... ... Mr. G. SHELLOR
Bonar Law ... ... Mr. CLAY SMITH
John Bull ... ... Mr. IAGO LEWIS

Musical Numbers—

Entrée and Pas-de-Quatre ... Tricks of the Trade ...

The Management are indebted to "John Bull" Newspaper and Mr. Frank Holland for material assistance in this realization of their famous poster.

Scene VI ... THE GARDEN OF THE VILLA MARIE ANTOINETTE AT DEAUVILLE ... ... G. Sackman

Lady Highbrow ... ... Miss CLARE GREET
Mlle. Debris ... ... Mlle. REGINE FLORY
The Showman ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Gilbert the Filbert ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Kitty O'Hara ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
Spanish Dancers ... ... The GOMEZ TRIO

Musical Numbers—

Absinthe Frappée ... ... CHORUS

Entree des Belles Parisiennes

Song ... ... "C'est l'Amour que Passe" Mlle. REGINE FLORY
Dance ... ... Le Vrai Pericon ... Mlle. REGINE FLORY and M. MARQUIS

Some Impressions
by Miss ELSIE JANIS

Danses Espagnoles ... ... The GOMEZ TRIO
"You're here and I'm here" ... Miss ELSIE JANIS and Mr. BASIL HALLAM

FINALE

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, APRIL 21, 1914.

Five minutes respite

The Palace Theatre presented for the first time last evening a new spectacular entertainment, "The Passing Show."

Mr. Butt does not call it a revue, yet it possesses in full measure all the best qualities of that kind of production. It has a suggestion of plot. It is topical. It is irresponsible. The author, Mr. Arthur Wimperis, has followed the plan of constructing this novel stage play in seven scenes, and so devising two of them that the spoken word is unnecessary.

Mr. Herman Finck, who has composed and arranged all the music, has see.. to it that the score shall compensate in those two scenes for the merry patter of the players. Very possibly those novel sets, one a wonderful Tapestry Salon, the other described as a Venetian Carnival—the most exquisitely beautiful examples of stage-mounting and stage-management that can be remembered—would alone be sufficie.. to draw all London. A great picture-frame that occupies the whole of the upper part of the stage forms the background to the Tapestry Salon, and in the picture beautiful women exquisitely draped take the place of painted figures.

CARNIVAL IN ROSE-PINK GARDEN.

The scene of the carnival in Olden Venice is beautifully conceived. If it has been inspired by the creators of the Russian Ballet, M. P. L. Flers (who is responsible for the mise-en-scène) has done something in every sense worthy of that school. It is a rose-pink garden with paths of red and yellow tiles. A garden in the sunshine that fades gradually into night, and to the words and music of a Barcarolle from a singer in the shadow lovers come and go until a fantastic girl, who carries the masks of all the emotions, dances and swoons, and then . . . complete darkness for a moment, and back we are whirled to the frivolity of the modern revue.

Some of the contrasts in "The Passing Show" are very clever. The stage-management is wonderful and the actors display a prodigality of talent. Even in the writing and staging of the opening episode, The World's Bazaar, there is fantasy to soften some of the topical hits at people and things. There is a political skit. Then is a dance in the moonlight by Mlle. Regine Flory, with gilded living figures carrying scarves of pale-gold silk to make a background, a marching song, Spanish dancers, and clever Mr. Arthur Playfair dominating those topical episodes. And there is a charming newcomer from the United States with a genius for musical stage plays and imitations, with all sorts of clever, fascinating artistry—Miss Elsie Janis, who has already captured her own country before essaying to captivate ours.

This revue, for, notwithstanding Mr. Butt's reticence, it is a revue, satirises the drama as freely as it does the policy of the Government and the Opposition. It leaps at "A Midsummer Night's Dream," takes "Hullo, Tango," at the London Hippodrome, to task one moment, the Old Net the next. The young "Bloods" of the West End, the girls of the chorus, and the leading actors, are all taken off in a spirit of good fun by a company of clever young actors and very beautiful young women.

And here must be given a word of praise to Mr. Basil Hallam, Miss Clara Beck, Mr. Lewis Sydney, and Mr. Nelson Keys. They were each of them excellent, and they shared in the ovation given to Mr. Playfair, Mlle. Flory, and Miss Janis, and to the composer, Mr. Finck, and the author Mr. Wimperis.

J. W.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

MY LADY'S DRESS

By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

ACT I.—THE MATERIAL.

Scene 1 .. .. Anne's Boudoir.

John	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Anne	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Leonie	Miss JANET ROSS

Scene 2 .. .. A Peasant's House, Italy.

Peo	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Nina	Miss GLADYS COOPER
La Grisa	Miss BERYL MERCER
Gioann	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Scene 3 .. .. .. A Workroom, Lyons, France.

Nicolas	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Annette	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Père Simon	Mr. ARTHUR BAXENDELL
Joanny	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Rondier	Mr. DORIAN FISHER

ACT II.—THE TRIMMING.

Scene 1 .. .. A Garden. Holland, 1650.

Antje	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Moeder Kaatje	Miss EDITH EVANS
Mynheer Cornelis	*Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Jonkheer Ian Van der Bom	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Scene 2 .. .. A Room, Whitechapel, London.

Annie	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Mrs. Moss	Miss BERYL MERCER
Liza	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
Jack	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Scene 3 .. .. .. A Trapper's Stockade, Siberia.

Louka	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Yermak	Mr. DORIAN FISHER
Anna	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Ivan	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

ACT III.—THE MAKING.

Scene 1 .. .. "Jacquelin's," New Bond Street.

Anne	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Sir Charles	*Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Mrs. Collisson	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
Lady Appleby	Miss ELIZABETH KIRBY
Hon. Peter Withers	Mr. DAVID DARRELL
Miss Sylvia, Miss Madeleine } Saleswomen	Miss EDITH EVANS, Miss ADELA WEEKES
A Fitter	Miss WILMA LEYMAN
Messaline, Trottinette, Psyche, Rosamund } Mannequins	Miss GLADYS BARNETT, Miss MARJORIE HUME, Miss WINIFRED ELLICE, Miss BARBARA NEVILLE
Jacquelin	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Buttons	Mr. EDWARD AYRES
Anita	Miss GLADYS COOPER

Scene 2 .. .. The other side of the Curtain.

Jacquelin	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Anita	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Messaline	Miss GLADYS BARNETT
Trottinette	Miss MARJORIE HUME
Psyche	Miss WINIFRED ELLICE
Rosamund	Miss BARBARA NEVILLE
Miss Sylvia	Miss EDITH EVANS

Scene 3 .. .. .. Anne's Boudoir.

Anne	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Leonie	Miss JANET ROSS
John	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Produced under the Direction of FRANK VERNON.

ROYALTY
THEATRE

MY LADY'S DRESS

April 21st
1914

Orch. Stall
Ten Shillings & Sixpence

Row D

No. 1

TO RIGHT

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1914.

"MY LADY'S DRESS."

AN APOLOGY.

MESSRS. VEDRENNE and EADIE, the producers of the above play, in the name of themselves and of the Author of the Play, beg to inform the public that the 1st and 2nd Scenes of the third Act, entitled "Jacquelin's," New Bond-street, were so named in entire ignorance of the fact that a Madame Jacqueline for many years carried on business as a Court Dressmaker and Corsetiere in New Bond-street, and at the present day continues to carry on that business in partnership under the firm style of "Jacqueline and Louisette," of New Bond-street.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie need hardly point out that the scene was not and could not be intended to have any reference whatsoever to the business of Jacqueline and Louisette, of New Bond-street, or to Madame Jacqueline herself, seeing that Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie had no knowledge of their existence.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie deeply regret and sincerely APOLOGIZE for any annoyance and pain inadvertently occasioned to Madame Jacqueline by the selection of the name of the scenes, and they trust that the continuance of such annoyance will be rendered impossible by the alteration which they have now made in the name of the scene from "New Bond-street" to "Dover-street" and from "Jacquelin" to "Jacotin" in the name of the Proprietor of the business.

Waters, J.
Plays

IN the new play by Edward Knoblauch, "My Lady's Dress," presented by Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie at the Royalty Theatre on Tuesday evening there is much variety. It is in three acts, with three scenes in each act, and each of these nine scenes is in itself a fairly complete one-act play. For the purpose of this play an inner proscenium has been built on the stage, and on this smaller stage, which has a curtain of its own, the little drama in nine scenes is enacted. The story that requires this elaborate mechanism begins in a lady's boudoir late in the afternoon. Anne is a handsome, popular young society woman, and (although John, her husband, does not wholly approve of the means) she has been flirting with wicked old Sir Charles in order to secure through his undisputed influence an important post for her husband. John on this particular afternoon criticised her extravagance. Her new gown to dazzle Sir Charles was horribly expensive, and her argument that the silk, fur, and lace of which it was composed had put money in the pockets of the deserving poor convinced him nothing at all. Woman-like, however she cajoled him into silence. Said she had a headache, must take a powder, and have a sleep, and it is the dream she experiences in that sleep that we see reconstructed in seven of the eight scenes that follow.

Dressmaking.

In all these dream episodes both Anne and her husband appear in various guises. The first scene is the cottage of a poor Italian silkworm farmer. Anne is the girl who is going to marry him, and here we are shown the misfortunes that arise from her weakness of character. Her flirtation with another man brings about his revenge on her wedding day. He destroys the silkworms and condemns her to a life of poverty. Here it may be mentioned that each episode is linked in some manner with the material and shaping of the dress that Anne's extravagance had required. We are shown in another scene the misery of the poor silk weaver and his wife, Anne herself waiting on the consumptive, almost too weak to work the loom, and the silk being made is the very piece employed in the making of her dress. Then follows a charming episode in the purchase of the lace, but the reason for this scene is not so apparent. Siberia, where the fur for the dress has been procured, furnishes one more painful but not very effective incident, and then we get to the best and much the most amusing part of the dream story—the shop and the workshop in New Bond-street where Anne buys her clothes. These scenes are very effectively contrived, written, and acted, and they certainly will justify a visit to the Royalty Theatre to see "My Lady's Dress."

MORALS OF MANNEQUINS.

DRESSMAKER'S DEFENCE OF GIRL EMPLOYEES.

"I want you to be nice to Sir Charles."

That is what the fashionable dressmaker whispers in the ear of his prettiest showgirl in the third act of "My Lady's Dress," Mr. Edward Knoblauch's new play at the Royalty Theatre. Sir Charles, a roystering old reprobate, is hanging about the showroom while certain of his friends are being "tried on." He takes a fancy to the "mannequin" who is displaying a ninety-guinea frock, and asks her to have supper with him. She will not even answer.

Then the dressmaker, an utterly contemptible creature (played very cleverly and repulsively by Mr. Dennis Eadie), abuses her roundly for not "being nice" to a man of influence in the fashionable world, a man who can be so useful to him as Sir Charles. He has promised she shall go home early to a sick mother, but, to pay her out, he tells her she must stay till nine o'clock. He even declares his disbelief in her mother's illness and suggests in the most insulting way that she has an appointment with a man.

Goaded beyond control by his brutality, she stabs him with a pair of scissors. He falls dead.

Naturally the suggestion that dressmakers encourage their "mannequins" who show off dresses to lead irregular lives in the interests of business is resented by the leading firms in the West End.

"RIDICULOUS" CHARGE.

"It is too ridiculous" was the comment of M. Larunnet, the manager of Redfern's. "I have had experience in Paris as well as in London and I can tell you that no firm would dream of attracting custom by such means. Mannequins are treated well, on the whole very well. Here and there they may suffer from rudeness or spite. Now and then they enter into relations unsanctioned by the Church or the law. But that happens, does it not, among all classes and in all employments?

Daily Mail 23 April 14

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 1914.

"MY LADY'S DRESS."

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie, who are presenting Mr. Edward Knoblauch's new play "My Lady's Dress" at the Royalty Theatre, were willing to admit yesterday that the dress attraction of the production brings to the theatre a great number of ladies who take little or no interest in plays as plays.

"A comedy in which there are nine scenes with as many varieties of costume to be worn by Miss Gladys Cooper and myself is evidently very interesting to feminine minds for reasons outside the actual drama," said Mr. Dennis Eadie, "but, we have wondered, do they ever think of our astonishing feats as quick-change artists, or of the still more serious side of the play . . . the tragedy and comedy that are sometimes knit into the making of a lady's dress?"

D.M. April 29

ROYALTY THEATRE

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30
MATINEES THURSDAYS & SATURDAYS AT 2.30

ROYALTY THEATRE
DEAN STREET, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

MY LADY'S DRESS
By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH
Every Evening at 8.30
Matinees: Thursdays and Saturdays at 2.30

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.
Sole Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 23rd, 1914, at 8.30 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING at 9,

"THE CLEVER ONES"

A Comedy, in Three Acts, by ALFRED SUTRO.

Characters:

Wilfrid Callender	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Peter Marrable	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
David Effick	Mr. HOLMAN CLARK
Hannibal Pipkin	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Harold Marrable	Mr. ALGERNON WEST
Thompson	Mr. A. HARDING STEERMAN
Brown	Mr. TALBOT HOMEWOOD
Martin	Mr. ALAN TROTTER
James	Mr. G. C. BROWNE
Rose Effick	Miss MARIE LÖHR
Doris Marrable	Miss NINA SEVENING
Mrs. Marrable (Irene)	Miss FLORENCE HAYDON
Athene Settle	Miss MARGARET WATSON
Mrs. Small	Miss MARY BROUGH

The action passee in the drawing room of Mrs. Marrable's house in Hampstead, and in David Effick's sitting room in the Higginson Building, Bethnal Green Road.

The Play produced by Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER.

The Scenes have been designed by Mr. GRAHAM ROBERTSON.
The Scenery made and painted by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Marie Löhr's Hats and Gowns designed and made by Misses F. J. & L. WILSON, 17 Hanover Square, W.; the other Gowns designed and made by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47 New Bond Street, W.
Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., LTD., Hampstead Road, N.W. Wigs by CLARKSON.
The Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by THE CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

Preceded at 8 o'clock, and Every Evening at 8.15 by

THE QUAINTS

Written and produced by R. BRIGHTEN SALISBURY. Music by DICK HENTY.

GWILLIAM EVANS, HARRY CLARK, DICK HENTY | AGNES CROXTON, DOROTHY FROSTICK and R. BRIGHTEN SALISBURY.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1. MARCH, "Gaily through the World" ... ... Allan Macbeth
2. OVERTURE, "Opéra Bouffe" ... ... Herman Finck
3. a. SONG, "Where My Caravan" ... ... Löhr
   b. VALSE PASSIONE, "Caresse d'Avril" ... ... D. de Groot
4. SELECTION, "After the Girl" ... ... Paul Rubens

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL
Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1914.

Isn't Mr. Sutro a little hard on Girton? He seems to present Doris Marrable as a typical product of that respectable seminary for young ladies, whereas Doris Marrable is, in truth, a typical product of the comic stage. How well do playgoers—at any rate playgoers old enough to remember the "middle period" of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones—know that silly "advanced" girl, who patronizes silly papa, has idiotic "views" about marriage, and prattles the babble of anarchism! Why, then, drag in Girton? Apparently the comic stage (oh! the dear old comic stage!) counts upon a laugh over certain actual names. It used to be "Tooting"; now it is "Girton." And it has its stock-occupations for laughter, too. It used to be soap-boiling; now it is selling hops. Miss Marrable's papa is a hop-merchant and therefore at once recognized as a plain philistine, who cannot be expected to spell Kropotkin. And after real place-names and real occupations, some laughter can be wrung out of invented names. Somebody in this play is named Hannibal Pipkin. Oh! the dear old comic stage!

Never mind. Mr. Sutro's point is that Miss Marrable with her silly velleities towards anarchism can only be won by an Anarchist, and that a quite ordinary man like Wilfrid Callender ("£5,000 a year, Harrow, Oxford, all that kind of thing," is his description of himself), perceiving this, would pretend to be an Anarchist in order to gain the girl's affections. Imagine the disgust of the hop-merchant. But you had, still better, see it, for the hop-merchant is Mr. Gwenn, who is always vastly amusing as the infuriated philistine. And Mr. Gerald Du Maurier, converted into an Anarchist by the simple process of ruffling his hair, does his best to be amusing, too, and very often succeeds.

By and by there is a comic tea-party in Bethnal Green, given by an old gentleman, who is apparently a real Anarchist. Apparently, for he is a very vague old gentleman, as played by Mr. Holman Clark, and indicates his anarchism by little else than shaking hands with the charwoman, who grins and bears it. She is Miss Mary Brough and very droll. The vague old gentleman has a daughter (Miss Marie Löhr), who really loves the sham Anarchist Wilfrid and who pretends to be a housemaid in order—well, we fancy it is in order she may decide if Miss Marrable is good enough as a bride for her beloved. So they mainly go on cutting bread and butter. When tea is over Rose, the sham housemaid, has decided that Miss Marrable won't suit her beloved sham Anarchist Wilfrid, and will, if only the sham Anarchist persists in his sham Anarchism, betray her unfitness. Miss Marrable does. Heartily sick of Anarchism and slumming in Bethnal Green, she declares she cannot marry Wilfrid. As Wilfrid has just then discovered that Rose really loves him and he really loves Rose, all ends as happily as the comic stage requires.

Let it be faithfully recorded that there was a great deal of very hearty laughter last night. Mr. Gwenn got most of it, and Mr. du Maurier was a good second. And there were many playgoers—hyper-gelasts, George Meredith would have called them—who shrieked with laughter over dear, comfortable Miss Florence Haydon (wife to the hop-merchant), and even over the alleged real Anarchist (of course he was Pipkin, presented by Mr. Benedict. Yes, on the whole, it was an evening of laughter. "Kropotkin," as a comic effect, was a succès fou. The humour of thick tea-cups and salt butter in Bethnal Green, the humour of drinking barley-water when you prefer port, the humour of changing yourself into an Anarchist by combing your hair over your brow—not one of these tit-bits but was joyously appreciated. Such is still the magic of the comic stage.

STARING AT CELEBRITIES.

A glaring instance of bad manners was seen in the stalls of Wyndham's Theatre on Thursday evening at the first night of "The Clever Ones," when half the people in two rows turned round and sat staring at Mr. Winston Churchill, who was present with his mother, Lady Randolph Churchill.

Again, while Mr. Churchill was chatting with the Lord Chief Justice (whose brother-in-law, Mr. Sutro, was the author of the play) in the vestibule between the acts, several people with uncontrollable curiosity stood close to them to stare.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN STREET, STRAND, W.C.

SOLE PROPRIETRESS: GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Kenelm Foss Season

FRIDAY, APRIL 24th, 1914, at 8,

FIRST PERFORMANCE OF

"Account Rendered,"

A Sort-of-a-Comedy in Four Acts. By ROBERT ELSON.

AND

"Dusk."

A Dream. By ROBERT VANSITTART.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24TH, AND NIGHTLY, AT 8.30.

KENELM FOSS presents

"Account Rendered."

A Sort-of-a-Comedy in Four Acts, by ROBERT ELSON.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

D. Q. Gershon, M.P.	JAMES CAREW
Pauline Delarey	Miss ELSIE MARGETSON
Bobby Youlgrave	RONALD SQUIRE
Lady Mary Burjoice	Miss RUTH MACKAY
Henson	SHAYLE GARDNER
Rt. Hon. Franklin Burjoice, M.P.	THOMAS WEGUELIN
Mrs. Burjoice (his mother)	Miss ELAINE SLEDDALL
Jane Burjoice (his sister)	Miss JEAN CADELL
Mrs. Calthrop	Miss BARBARA EVEREST
Charles Ledbury	ROLAND PERTWEE
Percy Davison, M.P. (Burjoice's Parliamentary Secretary)	MILES MALLESON
Rt. Hon. Roger Paxton, M.P. (the Prime Minister)	FRED LEWIS

The action of Act One and Three passes in the Small Drawing Room of Burjoice's house in London; that of Act Two in the Garden of his country house at Colbourne, Hants.; that of Act Four in the Breakfast Room at St. James' Square.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY KENELM FOSS.

The decors. of the play designed by the Producer and VICTOR MACCLURE. The ladies' dresses throughout designed by Miss YOLANDE MAY, and executed by KATE ALLEN, Little Sussex Place. The riding habit in Act Four by GUTERBOCK, Hanover Street.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Preceded by the Oriental Fantasy

"Dusk"

A dream by ROBERT VANSITTART (Author of "Cap and Bells.")

Staged by KENELM FOSS. Decors. by VICTOR MacCLURE. Music by EDWARD JONES.

Characters:

The Child Bride	Miss ALICE BOWES
The Sardar	SHAYLE GARDNER
The Ferengi	ROLAND PERTWEE
The Slave Philosopher	FRED LEWIS
A Eunuch	MILES MALLESON
A Singer	MONTAGUE SYRETT
A Dancer	Miss MURIEL GIBB
A Messenger	A. E. WALKER
Master of Ceremonies	ARTHUR BACHNER

Warriors and Attendants—RODERICK KING, GEORGE RONALD and the Misses ALICE LEIGH, BRENDA MONTESOLE, CONNIE DENE, SYLVIA FAUSSETT-BAKER.

Scene. Persia. Before the Sardar's Palace. Period 1740.

Costumes by B. J. Simmons & Co. The Child Bride's dress by Katé Allen.

The Producer is much indebted to Mr. E. F. Gye for valuable suggestions as to Persian Costumes and Manners.

Programme of Music.

Ballet Music, "La Source"	Delibes
English Dances	R. Quilter
Moment Musicale	Schubert
Serenade	Leoncavallo
Prelude	Bach - Gounod

Matinees (both plays Every Saturday at 2.30.

Business Manager	Henry Langley.
Stage Manger (For Kenelm Foss)	Noel Groom.
Musical Director	Edward Jones.

Producer's Foreword to "Account Rendered."

Of the many anachronisms of our out-of-date British Theatre, the two most obvious are our systems of (1) Stage Lighting, and (2) Stage Decoration.

Of Stage Lighting it is not necessary to say much here, if only because the Little Theatre, alone among London playhouses, is not too proud to take hints as regards its electric installation from its Continental sisters; but a word on the decorations is made necessary by the method used this evening in presenting "ACCOUNT RENDERED." It may possibly be remembered that in "MAGIC" I solicited adverse criticism by two (if no more) eccentricities of decoration. The Prelude on a Hill-top was presented with the artificial coloring and decorative unreality of a Japanese print; while in the play itself I deliberately broke the restfulness of the Hall of an English Manor house with shimmering esoteric curtains that instantly became the most vital factor in the pictorial scheme. The instance will serve for my entire method. My conception of the duty of a producer is to take the real message of the author (whether he himself knows what it is or no), and to convey it (in spite of themselves) to the audience, either with the aid of, or in defiance of the actors. In the effort to achieve this humble end the decorations obviously plays a considerable part.

In other productions of mine—"RUTHERFORD AND SON" and "DAMAGED GOODS" for example—no such deviations from the normal as those I have mentioned were necessary. They demanded straight-forward and realistic treatment (decoratively at any rate) and received it. Notwithstanding, I did not in these plays lose sight of the fact that even realistic stage-setting should only be a background for acting. I never forgot that here in London, as in other capitals, the worst acting is invariably found where most money is spent on scenery.

To-night's play, however, does demand "queer" treatment. Just as when I staged Tchekhof's "THE CHERRY ORCHARD," I was careful to make the stage picture suggest, subtly, a pastel, as befitting the queer, melancholic, super-sensitive, slightly-bloodless irony of the dramatist: just as to-night, in Vansittart's "DUSK," I attempt to re-create the heady, woolly-outlined, ecstasy of a hachish dream: so, because "ACCOUNT RENDERED" is a satire, and a satire not only on modern manners, but upon the ancient situations of drawing-room melodrama—because, in two words, it is both whimsical and new—I am presenting this Sort-of-a-Comedy in a whimsical and new manner. And if this new setting should set a fashion, as genuinely new things have a way of doing, no one will be more pleased than I. I have no higher ambition than to control the one English theatre which does not take the line of least resistance, but can be relied upon by playgoers to take always the brave course, and present new plays by new authors, played by new players who have not yet had their chance, the whole presented in the newest way, the stage-setting appropriate, non-imitative, on the next, and not the last-but-one, decorative design, the women's clothes in the fashion of next year, and not of the year before last. It might even happen that in time to come a theatre like that of which I speak might aspire to the prerogative of musical comedy, and set the fashion in female beauty!

KENELM FOSS.

Waters, J.
Plays

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1914.

What fun if politics were really what they are represented in plays! Here, for instance, is a play of political life, which represents a remarkably portly Prime Minister giving away State secrets to the Colonial Secretary's wife, who runs the Colonial Secretary—that is, not only writes his speeches for him and even prepares his answers to Parliamentary questions (which must be a blessed relief to the permanent staff of the C.O.), but provides him with schemes and policies. The schemes and policies the lady gets from useful men-friends, whom she rewards mainly by invitations to dinner, but one of the friends—an Opposition M.P. by the way—asks for a different sort of reward. The lady answers "Certainly not!" which seems concise and decisive, but there is still a good deal of trouble over this exigent Opposition M.P. before the play ends. But how much more amusing the so-called game of politics would be if it were really like that, and also if great political personages and their wives were really like the representations given of them by Mr. Fred Lewis and Mr. Thomas Weguelin and Mr. James Carew and Miss Ruth Mackay!

Mr. Elson's dream of politics as they might be was preceded by another dream-play, Dusk, by Mr. Robert Vansittart, wherein Persians of volcanic passions talked not very audible verse behind a gauze curtain, and one of these, a "child bride," was tied up in a sack and thrown into the river for flirting with a travelling Ferengi—who declared, over and over again, that he lived for "woman, woman, woman." Mr. Kenelm Foss, the manager, explains in the playbill that in the "production" of this work he "attempts to re-create the heady, woolly-outlined, ecstasy of a hachish dream." He is to be congratulated on the triumphant success of his attempt. "Woolly" is certainly the right word.

THE

PALL MALL GAZETTE,

Monday, October 18, 1915.

Editorial Offices: 12 and 14, Newton Street, W.C.
Telephone - - 4306 GERRARD (Four Lines).
Telegraphic Address: Palmagas, London.

"ACCOUNT RENDERED."

END OF ACTION OVER POLITICAL-FUTURIST PLAY.

Judgment for the defendant was given today in the action—heard before Mr. Justice Ridley and a special jury in the King's Bench Division—brought by Mr. Kenelm Frederick Foss, producer of stage plays against Mr. Robert Elson, author of "Account Rendered," claiming damages for alleged breach of contract in the financing of this and other plays at the Little Theatre.

"Account Rendered" was described as a political satire in a Futurist setting, and Mr. James Carew, husband of Miss Ellen Terry, was cast for the leading part. It was alleged that Mr. Elson had failed to find £500 as agreed for the staging of his play.

The defence was that it was a condition precedent that Mr. Foss should secure another £1,200. That £1,200, it was contended, was not forthcoming.

Some further evidence, taken on commission, was read, and the jury, after hearing counsel, found for the defendant. Judgment was entered accordingly, with costs. The counter-claim was struck out, without costs.

GAIETY THEATRE

Manager - - - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Every Evening at 8. Matinee, Every Saturday at 2,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' Production,

"AFTER THE GIRL,"

A "Revusical Comedy" in Two Acts and Six Scenes,

Written and Composed by PAUL A. RUBENS.

Lyrics by PERCY GREENBANK and PAUL A. RUBENS.

Mr Pitt ...	(A Manufacturer from Cincinnatti, U.S.A.) ...	... Mr. SHAUN GLENVILLE
Mr. Clayton	(A Sporting character) ...	... Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Count Cleves (In charge of the Sporting department at Amsterdam Exhibition)		Mr. GUY LE FEUVRE
Hon. Eddie Stone	(A "Nut")	Mr. Randle Cecil
Maurice...	(Head Waiter at the Cascade Restaurant) ...	Mr. A. Camp
French Porter		Mr. G. S. Tomlin
Customs Officers		Mr. H. Jones Mr. J. Redmond Mr. M. Raven
Gendarmes		Mr. J. Grande Mr. F. Raynham
House Decorators		Mr. A. Gater Mr. J. Delaney
Captain Valda	(A Hungarian Officer)	Mr. Geo. Grundy
Marton	(A Hungarian Policeman)	Mr. M. Ewart
Franz	(A Hungarian Cymbale Player)... ...	Mr. R. Richards
M. Hammermayer	(A Theatrical Agent)	Mr. W. Leveaux
Hans Schmidt	(A Stage Door Keeper)	Mr. S. Penton
Freddy Charlston	(A Young Man who has done a little bit of everything) AND	Mr. CLIFTON CRAWFORD
Bill Dabsley	(An ex-Covent Garden Porter, now servant to Charlston)	Mr. WILL EVANS
Mrs. Pitt ...	(Doris's Stepmother, formerly Mr. Pitt's French Cook)	MLLE CAUMONT
Emma ...	... (Maid-companion to Doris)	... Miss MABEL SEALBY
Fay ...	... ... (An Actress) ...	Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Betty ...	... (A Dutch Girl Doris's School Friend)	... Miss MAGGIE JARVIS
Julita ...	... (A Hungarian School Friend of Doris)	... Miss DAISY ELLISTON
Ninette ...	... ... (A French Flower Girl) ...	Miss ETHEL LAWSON
Miss Hoyt ...	... ... (An American Girl)	Miss F. Hadley
Thekla ...	... (A Dutch Market Woman) ...	Miss Joan Penrose
Martcha ...	... (A Hungarian Singing Girl) ...	... Miss Margot Tomlins
Gaga Googoo	... ... (Mrs. Pitt's Children) ...	Master David Rose Miss Minnie Kioski
Norah ...	... (Mr. Pitt's other daughter) ...	... Miss Dot Temple
Aranka Paula Margit	... ... (Three Hungarian Girls) ...	Miss Yvonne Fitzroy Miss B. Dunbar Miss Daisy Waller
Doris	AND ... (Mr. Pitt's Daughter) ...	Miss EMMY WEHLEN

ACT I.—Scene 1. The Bois, Paris ... ... (T. E. Ryan)
Scene 2. Customs House, Belgian Frontier (Alfred Craven)
Scene 3. Market Place, Amsterdam (Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. Scene 1. Buda Pesth ... (J. & Phil Harker)
Scene 2 "Summer Gardens," Berlin (Alfred Craven)
Scene 3. The Carlton Hotel, London (J. & Phil Harker)
(New Year's Eve.)

The Play Produced by J. A. E. MALONE.

DANCES arranged by WILLIE WARDE and WILL BISHOP.

Costumes designed by COMELLI and executed by M. E. FISHER, LTD.; FIRENZE; MICHARD SŒURS; B. J. SIMMONS & CO., MORRIS ANGEL & SON,; BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS. Modern Dresses worn by Mesdames Wehlen, Bruguen, Sealby, Jarvis, also Mlle. Caumont's in Act I. and Act II., Scene 3, designed and made by LUCILE, LTD., 23 Hanover Square, W. Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE.

Musical Director ... Mr. GUSTAV WANDA. | Stage Director ... Mr. WILL BISHOP.

Extract from the Lord Chamberlain's Regulations:—The safety curtain fitted in the proscenium opening must be lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order.

G. HARMSWORTH & CO., PRINTERS, 168 DRURY LANE, LONDON.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

GAIETY THEATRE,

Manager - - - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

April 22nd, 1914.

DEAR SIR,

Since its first production considerable changes have been made in the cast of "After the Girl," and new numbers have been added, and Mr. George Edwardes would be grateful if you would be good enough to send your representative to see what is largely a new company.

The new comers include Miss EMMY WEHLEN, and Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN, both of whom are well and favourably known to Gaiety audiences; Mr. WILL EVANS who comes to us with a great reputation from Pantomime, and Mr. SHAUN GLENVILLE.

I enclose voucher for Stall for Saturday evening next, the 25th inst. Should you or your representative be unable to be present would you kindly return ticket in enclosed envelope and oblige,

Yours faithfully,

W. H. DAWES.

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1914.

FRONT PIT SEATS 4s.

BOOKING FOR THE BEAUTIFUL NEW HAYMARKET.

The Haymarket Theatre, with its new and very beautiful scheme of decoration completed, was on view yesterday to Mr. Frederick Harrison's friends. The auditorium for beauty and elegance is now unrivalled among the London theatres, and on seeing the improvements and decorations one finds it difficult to realise that the work was accomplished without a single performance being interrupted during the fifteen months the contractors' men were in the theatre.

The pit is now more luxurious and charmingly furnished and decorated than the stalls in most London theatres. From to-day onwards pit seats may be booked on the day of the performance. Mr. Harrison, however, makes another change in fixing the price for the two front rows at 4s.

Waters, J.
Plays

The Alhambra Theatre

LEICESTER SQUARE, W.C.

The New Alhambra
THEATRE

MAY 4
1914
FAUTEUIL
D 5

Retain this portion which is the voucher for seat only and does not admit to the Theatre

Dear Sir,

The pleasure of your Company is requested on Monday, May 4 1914 to witness the First Performance of the New Revue

"Not Likely!"

Should it be inconvenient for you to be present, I shall esteem it a favour if you will kindly return the enclosed vouchers, when I shall have much pleasure in sending you tickets for any evening more convenient.

Yours faithfully,

ANDRE CHARLOT

Managing Director.

Mr. ANDRE CHARLOT

presents

"Not Likely!"

A NEW REVUE
In Two Acts and Ten Scenes
by
GEO. GROSSMITH & COSMO GORDON-LENNOX

Produced by GEORGE GROSSMITH & ANDRE CHARLOT

New and Exclusive numbers by
H. CHRISTINE, MELVILLE GIDEON, ELSA MAXWELL, CECIL MACKLIN, WILLY REDSTONE and HARRY TIERNEY

Additional Lyrics by ROBERT THARP and DOUGLAS STUART

Dances and Ensembles by J. W. JACKSON

Costumes Designed and Supervised by GEORGE DE FEURE
Executed by Mrs. STEVENS

Scenery by
RONSIN, MARC-HENRI and LAVERDET and by A. E. CRAVEN

Modern Dresses by REDFERN Ltd., and by Mme. THELMA.

Hats and Head-dresses by MAISON LEWIS

Stage Production by HERBERT BRYAN

FOURTH SCENE

SPRING

A Dance Idyll
Music by
CLAUDE DEBUSSY
Choregraphie by LOUIS AVELINE

LAST SCENE

THE NOT LIKELY CLUB

Modern Dresses and Costumes by PAUL POIRET
Scenery from a Model by MARTINE

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

The Cast of

"Not Likely!"

will include:

ROBERT HALE

JACK DESMOND DOUGLAS STUART ARTHUR LYNCH

CLYDE COOK

ALFRED AUSTIN

JACK MORRISON

ELIA ATTANASIO

FRANK LESLIE ADRIEN LAMY EDMUND PAYNE, Junr.

and GEORGE GROSSMITH

MAURICE and FLORENCE WALTON

LEE WHITE

HILDA DICK MARGERY WOLLASTON ANGELA HOPE

TEDDIE GERARD

PHYLLIS MONKMAN

CARLOTTA MOSSETTI

EILEEN MOLYNEUX

PERIL DE BAUSCHE DAISY MERCER ROSA SULLIVAN and CONNIE EDISS

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1914.

"NOT LIKELY."

DANCING THE FEATURE OF NEW ALHAMBRA REVUE.

Each new revue presented in the West End has its characteristic features, and the new one, "Not Likely," which unfolded itself at the Alhambra last night, might justifiably claim to specialise in dancing.

To say that the revue unfolds itself is no misdescription, for it secures variety of environment with glimpses of Deauville, the doors of Daly's Theatre, "Lobster-square," New York, and an all-night supper-club, where the society, if mixed, is fond of dancing. There is no attempt to suggest any connection between the scenes, nor could a Bond-street palmist of the most abnormal imagination trace the history of any of the characters who, starting at Deauville, go through the evening's racket till a very beautiful scene at a night club ends their labour.

The scenery is varied, the women are lovely, young, and numerous, and their costumes of infinite variety and in most cases quite sufficient. Heading the company are many popular and clever principals—Mr. Robert Hale with his genius for travesties, Miss Connie Ediss, and Mr. George Grossmith—the beau ideal of the stage man-about-town who is at home everywhere and always prepared to say so in song. Plot under these conditions is not necessary. "Not Likely" gets along without it. It is a series of turns with attractive environment, and if one sought for an excuse quite critical it is that there is too much dancing and not enough fun.

WORK OF SEVEN COMPOSERS.

The slight faults are, however, such as can easily be remedied, for Mr. George Grossmith is resourceful, Miss Ediss is a genuine comedienne, and Mr. Hale is inimitable. Besides these principals there are others—Mr. Jack Morrison, Miss Phyllis Monkman, Miss Lee White, and Miss Teddie Gerard—to mention a few—who help effectually to give charm and variety to an entertainment that has the qualities that win popularity.

In a very elaborate and extravagant production such as "Not Likely" undoubtedly is there are many attractive incidents and cleverly planned features designed to attract the eye, and several of these—particularly the "sloping path" in the second act, up and down which a chorus of fifty pretty girls danced—stirred the audience to enthusiasm. The whirlwind of dancing, too, with which the entertainment ended was finely carried out—a splendid feast of movement and colour.

The authors are Mr. George Grossmith and Mr. Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, and the music has been contributed by seven composers, including Claude Debussy.

J. W.

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1914.

NEW TESTAMENT PLAY.

BARABBAS AS THE LOVER OF MARY MAGDALENE.

Barabbas	C. M. Hallard
Peter	Norman McKeown
John	Frank Randell
Judas	Sydney Valentine
Lazarus	Cassels Cobb
Zacharias	Norman Page
Caiaphas	H. K. Ayliff
Habakkuk	Edwin Greenwood
Micah	J. Patrick Turnbull
Pilate	H. Hewetson
Calchol	Allan Jeayes
Marcus	Matthew Boulton
Silenus	Edward Rigby
Mary Magdalene	Nancy Price
Martha	Madge McIntosh
Miriam	Prunella Page
Hebe	Amy Lamborn

Miss Nancy Price gave at the Comedy Theatre yesterday the first of her series of morning performances of The Holy City, a New Testament drama by Mr. Thomas W. Broadhurst. The play was richly and picturesquely mounted, and accompanied by music composed by Mr. Norman O'Neil, and by singing by the members of the choirs of three London Roman Catholic churches.

The author has identified Mary, the sister of Lazarus, with Mary Magdalene, and the first act shows her house at Magdala, where, during her unregenerate days, she is entertaining a gay throng with wine and dancers, among the guests being the uninvited Barabbas, who has ventured thither, though a price is set on his head, because he wishes to make Mary his lawful wife. Her refusal of his offer is very shortly followed by her conversion; and in the next act we see her return to her home repentant. It is during this act, and in the house of Lazarus, that she breaks the box of precious ointment, and it is here, too (though both these events take place off the stage), that there occurs one of the incidents of the Last Supper.

The third act shows the portico of the Hall of Judgment, with Mary Magdalene making an impassioned speech before Pilate, the release of Barabbas, the denial by Peter, and other incidents of the story. Act IV. takes place at the house of Lazarus during the Crucifixion, and includes the remorse of Judas, followed quickly by his suicide in sight of those on the stage, and also the partial conversion of Barabbas. In Act V. the characters on the stage see the stone rolled away from the tomb, and Mary Magdalene reports the vision of the risen Saviour.

Were it permissible to apply the usual canons of criticism, it might be pointed out that, in spite of the author's free adaptation of the Gospel story, the absence from the play of the chief character in that story necessitates a good deal more of narration and report than is compatible with dramatic effect. But it is more to the purpose to record that the play was both written and acted with entire reverence. The Judas of Mr. Valentine, the Mary Magdalene of Miss Nancy Price, the Barabbas of Mr. Hallard, and the Caiaphas of Mr. H. K. Ayliff were among the most prominent parts.

KEY.
PECIAL MATINEES at 2.30. TO-DAY. TO-MOR-
D SATURDAY. THURSDAY. May 21. THE AMBLE, by Jerome K. Jerome.
THE HOLY CITY.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

LITTLE THEATRE.

:: JOHN STREET, STRAND, W.C. ::

Sole Proprietress . . GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

KENELM FOSS' SEASON.

May 1st, 1914.

Dear Sir,

The playgoing public having concurred with the many unfavourable critiques of "Account Rendered," I have no alternative but to accept, (although still unconvinced), the general verdict on that play, and my production of it. Consequently it will be replaced on Tuesday next, the 5th inst. at 8.45 by a revival, (for a limited number of performances), of G. K. Chesterton's which will be followed on that occasion, and at each subsequent performance, by Robert Vansittart's duly cut and modified in accordance with the suggestions made by the Press.

The full cast and particulars of both plays will be found overleaf.

In sending you the enclosed ticket for that evening, I am hoping that your representative may find it possible to attend, but should he be unable to do so, I should be glad if you would kindly have the voucher returned as early as possible.

Faithfully yours,

KENELM FOSS.

TUESDAY, MAY 5th at 8.45

(And for a limited number of performances).

KENELM FOSS revives

A Fantastic Comedy, in Three Acts and a Prelude,

By G. K. CHESTERTON.

Characters in the order of their appearance

The Stranger	HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Patricia Carleon	Miss GRACE CROFT
Rev. Cyril Smith	DUNCAN YARROW
Dr. Grimthorpe	WILLIAM FARREN
Hastings (the Duke's Secretary) ...	ROLAND PERTWEE
The Duke	FRED LEWIS
Morris Carleon	LYONEL WATTS

The action of the Prelude takes place on a hill-top: that of the Play proper in the Duke's drawing room.

The Play produced by KENELM FOSS.

Followed at each performance by—

An Oriental Fantasy.

By ROBERT VANSITTART (Author of "Cap and Bells")

Staged by KENELM FOSS. Decor by VICTOR MACCLURE.

Music by EDWARD JONES.

The Child Bride	Miss ALICE BOWES
The Sardar	SHAYLE GARDENER
The Ferengi	ROLAND PERTWEE
The Slave Philosopher	FRED LEWIS
An Eunuch	MILES MALLESON
A Singer	MONTAGUE SYRETT
A Dancer	Miss MURIEL GIBB
A Messenger	A. E. WALKER
Master of Ceremonies	ARTHUR BACHNER

Warriors and Attendants :—Roderick King, Tom Ronald and the Misses Alice Leigh, Brenda Montesole, Connie Dene, Sylvia Fausset-Baker.

Scene ... Persia. Before the Sardar's Palace. Period 1740.

MATINEES—Wed. May 6th. Sat. May 9th, Wed. May 13th at 2.30

The Producer is much indebted to Mr. E. F. GYE for valuable suggestions as to Persian Costumes and manners.

Business Manager } For KENELM FOSS { HENRY LANGLEY
Stage Manager } { NOEL GROOM
Musical Director } { EDWARD JONES

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

On Tuesday, May 5th, at 8.30,

By Arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

EVA MOORE and H. V. ESMOND

PRESENT

THE DANGEROUS AGE

A NEW PLAY IN THREE ACTS, BY

H. V. ESMOND.

Betty Dunbar		EVA MOORE
Bill	her two Sons	REGINALD GRASDORFF
Jack		ROY ROYSTON
Ethel		ESTELLE DESPA
Mrs. Hunter, the Cook		CONSTANCE GROVES
Mary, the Housemaid		KITTY LOFTING
Dolly Palgraive		SYBIL WESTMACOTT
Marquis of Murdon		LESLIE J. BANKS
Dr. Wade		G. DICKSON-KENWIN
Effingham		ERNEST CRESFAN
Sir Egbert Englefield		H. V. ESMOND

The Scenery Acts I. and II. by GEORGE R. HEMSLEY. Act III. by CHARLES SHAW.

Miss Eva Moore's dresses by MADAME KAISLER, 18, High Street, Notting Hill Gate.

ACT I.		Corner of the Wood near the Manor.
ACT II.	Scene 1.	(Fifteen minutes later). The Hall of the Manor.
	Scene 2.	(Eleven o'clock next morning). The Same.
ACT III.		(Ten days later). A Room at the Manor.

Business Manager (for EVA MOORE & H. V. ESMOND) E. L. FURST
Stage Manager LESLIE J. BANKS
Assistant Stage Manager ERNEST CRESFAN

Waters, J.
Plays

THERE is something so pleasantly sentimental in the atmosphere of "The Dangerous Age," presented at the Vaudeville Theatre on Tuesday evening, that even the scene of passionate conflict between the two sisters towards the end of the piece fails very seriously to disturb it for more than a moment. The dangerous age, as the author, H. V. Esmond, has it, is in a woman about forty, and his heroine, Betty Dunbar, a widow of that age, "breaks the traces" in accordance with the tradition, and gets found out. The particular young man in her case for whom she remained away a night from home was only twenty-three, so it will at once be understood that the lady was silly as well as sentimental.

Betty's Reform.

The mild tragedy of Betty's escapade was that when she returned from town next day she learned that the younger of her two boys had fallen from a tree and hurt himself. By the time, however, that the child had been nursed back to health by herself Betty had grown to abhor the memory of her escapade and her partner in it. Therefore, when her sister (who owned all the family wealth) tried to force her to marry the youth, Betty kicked, and, getting much moral support from an old and sentimental friend, who always wanted her, she defied her relative's wishes and gave her hand to the older man, who was more than willing to admit that her single lapse was due to her years. This story, without being exciting, is sufficiently well told to hold up the interest continuously. It was well acted, too, not only by the author, Mr. H. V. Esmond, and his wife (Miss Eva Moore), but also by Miss Estelle Despa as her strong-minded sister, and by Mr. Leslie J. Banks as an impecunious young jeer who frankly told the lady he wished to marry her for her money. The reception of the piece by a full house could not have been more friendly.

J.W.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

On Tuesday, May 5th, at 8.30,

By Arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

EVA MOORE and H. V. ESMOND

PRESENT

THE DANGEROUS AGE

A NEW PLAY IN THREE ACTS, BY

H. V. ESMOND.

Betty Dunbar	EVA MOORE
Bill } her two Sons	REGINALD GRASDORFF
Jack }	ROY ROYSTON
Ethel	ESTELLE DESPA
Mrs. Hunter, the Cook	CONSTANCE GROVES
Mary, the Housemaid	KITTY LOFTING
Dolly Palgraive	SYBIL WESTMACOTT
Marquis of Murdon	LESLIE J. BANKS
Dr. Wade	G. DICKSON-KENWIN
Effingham	ERNEST CRESFAN
Sir Egbert Englefield	H. V. ESMOND

The Scenery: Acts I. and II. by GEORGE R. HEMSLEY; Act III. by CHARLES SHARP.

Miss Eva Moore's dresses by MADAME KAISLER, 18, High Street, Notting Hill Gate.

ACT I.		Corner of the Wood near the Manor.
ACT II.	Scene 1.	(Fifteen minutes later). The Hall of the Manor.
	Scene 2.	(Eleven o'clock next morning). The Same.
ACT III.		(Ten days later). A Room at the Manor.

Business Manager (for EVA MOORE & H. V. ESMOND) E. L. FURST
Stage Manager - - - - - LESLIE J. BANKS
Assistant Stage Manager - - - ERNEST CRESFAN

Plays

128

THERE is something so pleasantly sentimental in the atmosphere of "The Dangerous Age," presented at the Vaudeville Theatre on Tuesday evening, that even the scene of passionate conflict between the two sisters towards the end of the piece fails very seriously to disturb it for more than a moment. The dangerous age, as the author, H. V. Esmond, has it, is in a woman about forty, and his heroine, Betty Dunbar, a widow of that age, "breaks the traces" in accordance with the tradition, and gets found out. The particular young man in her case for whom she remained away a night from home was only twenty-three, so it will at once be understood that the lady was silly as well as sentimental.

Betty's Reform.

The mild tragedy of Betty's escapade was that when she returned from town next day she learned that the younger of her two boys had fallen from a tree and hurt himself. By the time, however, that the child had been nursed back to health by herself Betty had grown to abhor the memory of her escapade and her partner in it. Therefore, when her sister (who owned all the family wealth) tried to force her to marry the youth, Betty kicked, and, getting much moral support from an old and sentimental friend, who always wanted her, she defied her relative's wishes and gave her hand to the older man, who was more than willing to admit that her single lapse was due to her years. This story, without being exciting, is sufficiently well told to hold up the interest continuously. It was well acted, too, not only by the author, Mr. H. V. Esmond, and his wife (Miss Eva Moore), but also by Miss Estelle Despa as her strong-minded sister, and by Mr. Leslie J. Banks as an impecunious young peer who frankly told the lady he wished to marry her for her money. The reception of the piece by a full house could not have been more friendly. J.W.

Plays

THE PLAYHOUSE

Wednesday

6/5/1914

Orch. Stall

E 16

This to be retained

To night, Wednesday, May 6th, at 8 o'clock

Miss MARIE TEMPEST will produce, for the First Time, a New and Original Comedy, in Four Acts, called

By RICHARD HENRY POWELL

WILLIAM CARINGTON	MR. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
EDMUND SAKER	MR. FRANKLIN DYALL
THE EARL OF WYNMARTEN	MR. O. B. CLARENCE
ADRIAN HARPER	MR. GUY NEWALL
MACKENZIE	MR. HORTON COOPER
FOOTMAN	MR. CYRIL DERINGTON-TURNER
PARKER	MR. WARWICK WELLINGTON
MATTHEWS	MR. NORMAN LORING
THE COUNTESS OF WYNMARTEN	MISS MARIE TEMPEST
THE DOWAGER COUNTESS OF WYNMARTEN	MISS AGNES THOMAS
JANET AMERY	MISS LILIAN CAVANAGH
LOUISE	MISS KATE SERJEANTSON
MISS WILLS	MISS BARBARA HANNAY

Acts I. & III. The Drawing-room of Eleanor's House, 306, Belgrave Square
Act II. Room of a flat in Jermyn Street lent to Carington Act IV. Office of Messrs. Wilberforce, Saker & Co.

Time: THE PRESENT

Stage Manager — Mr. NORMAN LORING
Musical Director — Mr. HAROLD GRIMSTON

Miss Marie Tempest presented a new play by a new author at the Playhouse on Wednesday evening. The author's name is Richard Henry Powell, and his play, which is called "The Wynmartens," is concerned mainly with the social exploits of the young widowed Countess of Wynmarten, who was struggling to emancipate herself from the terrorism of an aristocratic old mother-in-law with a genius for making people unhappy. The story was good enough while the old woman was in sight. Her hard face, her hard smile, her biting tongue had the obvious traits of the cruel old aristocrat, and in all the scenes where she appeared and simply freezes her acquaintances there was no little fascination. For the rest the play was dull and unconvincing. I refused, for example, to believe that the young countess was kissed against her will at the door of her London house at midnight by the youth called Harper. He did not look as if he would dare to say boo to a goose. The countess said he saw her home to her door and there seized her and kissed her. The moment we saw him we doubted it. But all London—so said the play—said he did.

Two awful gossips of her acquaintance saw the "accident" and recounted the details in every drawing-room and club in London. What nice drawing-rooms and clubs there must surely be in London.

A Fine Actress.

Of course, the old countess heard of the escapade, and her daughter-in-law was made to feel pretty unhappy over it, not as a revenge she schemed to punish the old woman by another little scandal. And what, after all, did she plot? She kept a young fellow who was fond of her actually kept him out late at night. In order that she could not get back into her own house she omitted to take a latch-key, and also deliberately cut the bell-wire before going out, so that the servants could not be warned of her arrival home. . . . All that trouble in order that her only resource would be to go to mother-in-law for a test, and disturb the house, and perhaps cause a scandal. We were told it did cause a scandal. But we failed to see why. The young man who stayed out late lost his job because his employers did not like him to do such an obvious thing. In the end, of course, the young countess got him his job back, and she married him too. That social side of the story was very feeble. The real interest of the evening was centred in Miss Agnes Thomas as the old woman. We can be grateful to the author for that interest. For a new actress it was something of an achievement, for Miss Thomas it was a big success. Like Mr. O. B. Clarence, who makes the most of every chance he gets, there is a word of praise for his interpretation of the part of a silly Peer. Nothing else in the play matters. The young countess and her friends, followers, and acquaintances were not seriously interesting. A pity that Lilian Cavanagh had not something to do with the story!

J. W.

TELEPHONE
7482 GERRARD
(TWO LINES)

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE,
COVENTRY STREET, W.

ON MONDAY, MAY 11TH,
ALLAN AYNESWORTH and BRONSON ALBERY
PRESENT
A Comedy in Three Acts, entitled
"A PAIR OF SILK STOCKINGS,"
By CYRIL HARCOURT.

Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in One Act, entitled
"A VALUABLE RIVAL,"
By NEIL F. GRANT.

Alexander Jameson - - - -	Mr. J. B. GORDON
Maggie Jameson (his Daughter) -	Miss DOROTHY MacMILLAN
William Bain - - - -	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY

SCENE A Sitting Room in Mr. Alexander Jameson's House

Daily Mail

The only English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1914.

A JOURNALISTIC PLAYLET.

"A Pair of Silk Stockings" was transferred to the Prince of Wales Theatre last evening from the Criterion Theatre, and to add a fresh interest a new one-act piece by Mr. Neil F. Grant was presented in front of it. "A Valuable Rival" is the story of the editor of a newspaper in a small Scottish town, who, rather than lose the rivalry of another local paper, destroys evidence that might have compelled his friend the enemy to clear out. The author is a sub-editor on a London morning journal, and his play gives promise of more ambitious work as a dramatist.

J.W.

Plays

Admit One to BOX 104

Royal Opera Covent Garden

STATE PERFORMANCE

By Command of
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
In Honour of the Visit of
THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING & QUEEN OF DENMARK

Monday, May 11th, 1914

Plays

125

ROYAL OPERA
COVENT GARDEN

STATE PERFORMANCE

BY COMMAND
OF
HIS MAJESTY THE KING

IN HONOUR OF THE VISIT OF

THEIR MAJESTIES
THE KING AND QUEEN
OF DENMARK

MONDAY, MAY 11, 1914

ADMIT ONE TO

BOX 104

Retain this ticket, which is to be taken for Seat
No. as at a Statement at the Theatre.

LEVEL DRESS

ENTRANCE IN FLORAL STREET.

A REMARKABLE feature about the Gala performance at Covent Garden on Monday was the smoothness with which the whole function went from start to finish. Even the descent of Suffragette literature seemed to form part of the proceedings, and the sight of Mr. Willie Clarkson with his arms round a struggling Suffragette in the front row of the balcony stalls appeared to be regarded as a picturesque episode. As a spectacle, this Gala did not present quite such a dazzling array of dresses and precious stones as at the Coronation Gala celebration; but this was to be expected. The floral decorations of the house, however, were lighter in character and more graceful, with consequent increase of the festive appearance, and when the bejewelled audience rose and turned to the Royal box to welcome the King and his guests, the sight stamped itself on the memory. The changes effected in the vestibule and saloon were equally astonishing, yet, visiting the house twenty hours after, not even the petal of a rose was visible. It was as though the geni of Aladdin'a Lamp had been evoked. One reason of the efficiency is, doubtless, that it was the eighth Gala that Mr. Neil Forsyth had superintended; but the completeness of the Syndicate's arrangements and the alertness of the staff approached the wonderful and merited the highest praise.

* * * Rebecca

Gala Performance at the Opera.

The gala performance given in honour of the King and Queen of Denmark at Covent Garden on Monday evening was, as is usually the case with like celebrations, a most brilliant affair from every point of view, notwithstanding the fact that a number of Suffragettes created a scene during an interval, and had to be ejected. The Royal party included the King and Queen of Denmark, King George, the Queen, Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, the Duchess of Albany, the Princess Royal, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Princess Victoria, and Princess Henry of Battenberg, and, of course, many Ministers and diplomats were also in attendance. The huge auditorium presented a beautiful spectacle, being decorated with many coloured roses, hanging in dainty festoons, in gilt baskets, and entwined round pillars; and in the centre of the proscenium curtain the Danish and British flags were wrought in flowers, with a laurel wreath between them. At the extreme corners of the proscenium were also large golden cornucopias holding crimson roses, while festoons of yellow roses stretched out to the Imperial crown, picked out in gold, red, and white above. The programme included the first act of La Tosca, with Louise Edvina, Martinelli, Scotti, and others in the cast; the first act of La Bohème, in which Melba sang the principal feminine rôle; and act two, scene two, of Aida, with Mme. Kirkby Lunn, Destinn, Johannes Fonss, and Johannes Scenbach in the past, and Karina as première danseuse. Giogio Polacco, Albert Coates, and Arthur Nikisch were the conductors. Stage

122

TUESDAY, MAY 12th, at 8.30, following Evenings at 9.

A Farce in Three Acts, entitled:

THE BLUE MOUSE

By ALEXANDER ENGEL and JULIAN HORST.

Adapted by ROY HORNIMAN

Sir Henry Dowse	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
George Barker	Mr. PERCY HUTCHISON
Captain Montague	Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Mr. Butterfield	Mr. F. G. THURSTANS
Samuel	Mr. EDWARD BONFIELD
Gingold	Mr AUBREY MATHER
Matthew	Mr. JAMES ROWLANDS
Clerk	Mr. LEWIS SLODEN
Wibbs	Mr. KEVAN BERNARD
Mr. James	Mr. E. ASHLEY MARVIN
First Policeman	Mr. W. WEST
Second Policeman	Mr. CLARENCE HART
Lady Dowse	Miss MARY GRIFFITHS
Clarissa	Miss SYBIL DE BRAY
Mary	Miss ELSIE STRANACK
Rose	Miss CECILY DEBENHAM
Kitty Vernon	AND Miss MADGE LESSING

Guests, etc., Misses Ivy Clemo, Maun Ewin, Barbara Terry, Wretha Joyce, Gwen Linley, Marion Lockey, Joan Marshall, Lilian Perrit, Annie Waldon; Messrs J. Palmer Grey, Cecil Laugham, Charles Price.

The Play produced for Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM and Miss MARY MOORE by Mr. PERCY HUTCHISON

Act I.	Office of the Golden Sand Importation Co —Walter Johnson
Act II	Kitty Vernon's Boudoir at Marple Mansion—Walter Hann
Act III	George Barker's House at St. John's Wood—Walter Johnson

All dresses in "The Blue Mouse" with the exception of Miss Madge Lessing's in Act I. by Alexandra, 47, Baker Street, W.
Gown worn by Miss Madge Lessing in Act I. by Raville & Rossiter, 1912, Ltd., 15, Hanover Square, W.
Hats by Michee Zac, 2, Hanover Court, Hanover Street, W.

Preceded at 8 (following Evenings at 8.30) by a Play in One Act.

"HIDE AND SEEK"

By MILES MALLESON

Dr. Hunter	Mr EDWARD BONFIELD	Peter	Miss IVY EDWARDS
Mrs. Hunter	Miss GWEN LINLEY	Bob	Mr. AUBREY MATHER
Miss Gladys Hunter	Miss ELSIE STRANACK	Miss Gates	Miss ANNIE WALDON
Annie	Miss CECILY DEBENHAM	First Stranger	Mr. ALFRED WILTSHIRE
Maid	Miss MAUN EWIN	Second Stranger	Mr. E. ASHLEY-MARVIN
Quentin	Miss WINIFRED SPURGE

Produced by Mr. NORMAN PAGE

Scene:—Dr. Hunter's Study. Late at Night.

Matinees of both Plays Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30, commencing Saturday, May 16th.

Business Manager	Mr. ERNEST BENHAM
Acting Manager	Mr. OTHO HAZLEWOOD
Stage Manager	Mr. ALFRED WILTSHIRE
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. GERALD SAFFERY

CRITERION THEATRE

May 12

E

Orchestra Stall

C 53

The·BLUE·MOUSE

OLD-FASHIONED farce of the confusion class made its appearance at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday evening under the title of "The Blue Mouse." Years and years ago Paris used to send us entertaining plays of this sort, and as this "Blue Mouse" is stated to have made a success years ago in America, and before that in Germany, we may be justified in imagining that it owed its origin to some French idea. Many of us found it trivial and tiresome at the Criterion Theatre, and were much relieved when the performance came to an end. The action of the play arises out of that ancient story of the young married man who, being aware that his silly and susceptible old employer favoured young men with pretty wives, palmed off on the old roué as his wife a none too particular damsel known in Bohemia as the Blue Mouse. Out of that stale and unsavoury joke there were evolved several silly intrigues that were supposed to be funny, because the confusion of men and morals was forced to the point of nonsense.

"The Blue Mouse."

Three acts of "The Blue Mouse" left most of us wondering where the fun came in, and I think most of us sympathised with Mr. Eric Lewis and Mr. Owen Roughwood for the material given them as actors to deal with. There was some applause when the curtain fell. There was no dissent anywhere, but only half the audience remained long enough in the theatre to see someone, who we supposed was one of the German authors, bowing seriously to an emptying house. Then Sir Charles Wyndham appeared on the stage and wrung this gentleman's hand, after which he made a speech, and said he felt highly honoured to see us in his theatre, and that although he was not himself playing a part he hoped in a couple of months to come before the public again in a play. The authors of "The Blue Mouse" are Alexander Engel and Julian Horst, of the German Fatherland, and the adaptor is Roy Horniman, who has before now written original plays for Sir Charles Wyndham and other managers.

J. W.

NEW THEATRE

E
13/5/1914

Orch. Stall
K 191
LEFT
To be retained

To-night, Wednesday, May 13th, at 8.30,

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE

will produce, for the first time in London, a New and Original Play in Four Acts, called:

"GRUMPY"

By

HORACE HODGES and T. WIGNEY PERCYVAL.

Mr. Andrew Bullivant (Grumpy)	... Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
Mr. Ernest Heron (his Nephew)	... Mr. EDWARD COMBEMERE
Ruddock (his Valet)	...Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
Mr. Jarvis...	...Mr. MONTAGU LOVE
Mr. Isaac Wolfe	...Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Dr. Maclaren	Mr. HUNTER NESBITT
Keble	...Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
Merridew	Mr. JAMES DALE
Dawson	Mr. O. HYTTON
Virginia Bullivant (Mr. Bullivant's Granddaughter) ...	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
Mrs. Maclaren	Miss MARGARET SWALLOW
Susan	Miss MAUD ANDREW

Acts I. and II.	..The Library at Mr. Bullivant's (Bruce Smith)
Act III.	..Mr. Jarvis's Rooms in London ..
Act I.	..The Library at Mr. Bullivant's ..

The Costumes worn by Miss Margery Maude by OSPOVAT, 69, New Bond Street. Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Manager	for	.. .. .. Mr. ALFRED TURNER
Stage Manager	Mr. Cyril Maude	.. .. .. Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
Business Manager	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	.. Mr. CECIL BRETON

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1914.

Mr. Cyril Maude's talent for playing eccentric old gentlemen has long been a delight to Londoners, so long, indeed, that many of them in enjoying the delight have had time to become old gentlemen themselves. It seems that Mr. Maude has lately been giving American audiences a share of this delight, and he has brought the vehicle of this gift, a play called Grumpy, back with him to London. Is there any need to describe a play with such a title? Can't you see it a mile off, affording opportunities at every turn for Mr. Maude to be what the title indicates and at the same time to be all sorts of other things, astute things, amiable things, odd things? Can't you hear Mr. Maude's way of snoring in his chair and yelling at valets and footmen? Can't you see his queer old soft hat and stuck on his head by his faithful body-servant, and can't you imagine his queer old soft heart, so readily moved by wayward young slips of granddaughters and the like?

But there is one thing you could never guess, and must go to the play itself to find out. Would you believe it? This grumpy old gentleman is not merely grumpy: he was also, in his day, the cleverest criminal lawyer of them all. What luck then, when a priceless diamond is stolen, it should be stolen in "Grumpy's" house, so that his old detective faculties should awake again and remorselessly track out the criminal. And what further luck that one of the maids should have tied up a camellia with a hair, instead of string—as the poet sings—for without this single hair it is to be feared that old "Grumpy" would never have spotted the criminal.

> And beauty draws us by a single hair,

You see the little play is as innocently artless a composition as dramatic backgrounds for eccentric character-parts are apt to be. But nobody marks them, all eyes being fixed on Mr. Maude and the innumerable details with which he fills out his comic picture of a testy old gentleman. They are quite elaborate, the details, and the whole character is a thing of rich drollery, and in short everybody is glad to see Mr. Maude back again in London doing what we have all been accustomed to seeing him do and doing it better than ever. And Miss Margery Maude is with him, fresh and bright and cheerful, and so is that favourite grotesque, Mr. Lennox Pawle. Needless to say that Grumpy was received by the house last night with every token of unalloyed gratification.

Success of "Grumpy."

Mr. Cyril Maude got a whole-hearted success at the New Theatre on Wednesday evening with his play (new to London) called "Grumpy." From start to finish its success was assured, and although the second of the four acts is too long it is not wanting in interesting action. The success of this play in America might have led some to expect a masterpiece, but although it is by no means that, the authors—Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyval—can claim to have written a rattling good detective drama, in which the chief character is a very old gentleman living in the country, who in his day was the greatest criminal lawyer in London.

An Idolised Despot.

The scene of the play is the house in the country where the old man and his charming granddaughter reside, and there Grumpy, as she calls him, is the idolised despot of the household. The old man's amusing eccentricities, his outbursts, his kindnesses, his little exasperations, and his sudden return to good humour, were delightfully acted by Mr. Maude. The real instincts of the old criminal lawyer were to be awakened rudely enough one morning when it was discovered that overnight a robbery with violence had been perpetrated in his home. Then arose the real drama, which was the purpose of the play; the tracking down by the old man of the villain who had robbed his nephew in the middle of the night, and was planning to rob him of his granddaughter. It made a delightfully exciting, theatrical drama, and, of course, it ended happily for everyone but the villain. It was worth going a long way to see, and it was worth hearing the storm of cheers that greeted a splendid piece of stagecraft at the end of the third act, where the villain thought he had evaded the chase of the old man. How we cheered when we wre shown it was only a trick of the lawyer to make still more sure of his prey.

J. W.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE,

KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.

May 8th, 1914.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER requests the honour of your presence on Thursday next, May 14th, at 8.30 p.m. punctually, to witness the Revival of

AN IDEAL HUSBAND

A Play in Four Acts

BY OSCAR WILDE

If unable to be present, kindly return the ticket to

E. ARNOLD,
BOX OFFICE

"An Ideal Husband."

Everything seemed to point to a success at St. James's Theatre on Thursday evening, when Sir George Alexander revived Oscar Wilde's four-act play, "An Ideal Husband." It is delightfully theatrical almost as much so as "Diplomacy," and if you cannot sympathise with, or believe very much in, the two central characters, Sir Robert and Lady Chiltern, you can at least regard them as curiosities of drama. I am afraid I found their utter insincerity very tiresome. With the villainess of the piece, Mrs. Cheveley, played with a good deal of skill by Miss Hilda Moore, very much in the Mrs. Patrick Campbell manner, and her determined foe, Viscount Goring, played with neat touch by Sir George Alexander, one felt in good play company: all the incidents they were concerned with were a sheer joy, and wiped away at once the effects of the utterly unsympathetic passages in which the Chilterns were concerned. I do not agree with a remark I heard that the play was a picture of the time. I think the man who made it might as well have said it was a time-table. Oscar Wilde was out to write an entertaining comedy, and there is no doubt he succeeded. J. W.

"AN IDEAL HUSBAND" REVIVED.

On Thursday evening, May 14, 1914, was revided at the St. James's Oscar Wilde's four-act play entitled:—

An Ideal Husband

The Earl of Caversham, K.G. ..... Mr. Alfred Bishop
Viscount Goring ..... Sir George Alexander
Sir Robert Chiltern, Bart. .. Mr. Arthur Wontner
Vicomte de Nanjac ..... Mr. J. S. Russell
Mr. Montford ..... Mr. George Bishop
Phipps ..... Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds
Mason ..... Mr. A. Glascodine
Brook ..... Mr. Walter C. Randolph Rose
James ..... Mr. Guy Dawson
Harold ..... Mr. W. Coats Bush
Lady Chiltern ..... Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry
Lady Markby ..... Miss Henrietta Watson
The Countess of Basildon ..... Miss Elizabeth Chesney
Mrs. Marchmont ..... Miss Muriel Barnby
Miss Mabel Chiltern ..... Miss Amy Brandon-Thomas
Mrs. Cheveley ..... Miss Hilda Moore

Act one.—At Sir Robert Chiltern's House in Grosvenor Square. Act two.—Morning-room in Sir Robert Chiltern's House. Act three.—A Sitting Room in Lord Goring's House in Curzon Street. Act four.—Same as act two. Time, the present. Place, London.

It was a delightful experience at the St. James's on Thursday evening to renew acquaintance with Oscar Wilde's brilliant play An Ideal Husband. The piece, of course, is but gilded melodrama, and extremely artificial gilded melodrama at that, but woven round its Sardouesque plot there is much of the charm of that refinement of language and aristocracy of thought of which Wilde was so supreme and eloquent a master. The well-cut epigrams that captured audiences nearly twenty years ago—the piece was originally seen at the Haymarket in 1895, and afterwards transferred to the Criterion in April of that year—were accounted very modern, not to say revolutionary, in those far-off times, and it is almost something of a shock to realise that, while they are still eminently acceptable and stimulating they come upon contemporary ears with a certain chastened and subdued effect—as if, let us say, the sprightly god Hermes had suddenly become conscious of a twinge of middle-aged gout! Wilde's painstaking and sympathetic literary executor, Robert Ross, has modernised the dialogue of the play in a certain superficial sense. That is to say, there are now references to Eugenics instead of the higher education of women, motor-cars instead of carriages, Nile Dam shares instead of Panama shares, golf instead of Scottish novels, and so forth; and while some other sub-editing has been necessary the general tenor of the whole piece has been preserved in faithful fashion. An Ideal Husband, in fact, bears the test of revival almost as well as does Diplomacy, and there should be large audiences at the St. James's a while it is in the bill. After all, there is only one Oscar Wilde, and his individual literary art will always be undisputed.

There is no need to go over the plot of An Ideal Husband upon the present occasion. A disillusioned wife, the youthful crime of a brilliant politician, and a blackmailing adventuress are its principal stock in trade, and there are many opportunities in it for fine if necessarily restrained acting. That interesting young actress, Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry, plays Lady Chiltern, the part originally created by her mother, Miss Julia Neilson, with infinite care and judgment, and has many fine moments. She is probably at her best in the emotional scene at the end of the second act, and her earlier suggestions of the rather Puritanical wife are gracefully conceived. Sir George Alexander plays as only Sir George Alexander can the flippant raisonneur, Viscount Goring (originally played by Mr. Charles Hawtrey), and wears a half-moon moustache, the mild ferocity of which would do credit to a German subaltern! Viscount Goring is a butterfly person who would probably turn an epigram on his mother's grave, and Sir George gives him just the right touch of elegant trifling. Mr. Arthur Wontner, on the other hand, is a splendidly sincere and incisive Sir Robert Chiltern, and his present performance is one of the very best things he has yet done. Miss Hilda Moore, who follows Miss Florence West as Mrs. Cheveley, the adventuress, achieves one of the acting successes of the evening; while there can be nothing but the highest praise for Miss Henrietta Watson's delightfully flippant Lady Markby, a part in which Miss Fanny Brough and Miss Vane Featherston were wont to shine. Then there are also the admirable performances of Mr. Alfred Bishop, who plays his original character, the Earl of Caversham, with customary finish; Miss Elizabeth Chesney as the Countess of Basildon, Miss Muriel Barnby as Mrs. Marchmont, and Miss Amy Brandon-Thomas as an arch and captivating Mabel Chiltern, the carefully selected cast being ably completed by Mr. J. S. Russell as the Vicomte de Nanjac, Mr. George Bishop as Mr Montford, Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds as Phipps, Mr. A. Glascodine as Mason, and Mr. Walter C. Randolph Rose. Mr. Guy Dawson, and Mr. W. Coats Bush as footmen. The fine scenery has been supplied by Walter Hann and G. Sackmann, and the resplendent gowns of the ladies, it goes almost without saying, are the very latest thing as far as elegance and fashion are concerned.

FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1914.

It is an entirely natural thing for Sir George Alexander to revive An Ideal Husband. The play is theatrically effective, and its effects are such those that the St. James's can render better than any other playhouse. It gives scope for handsome gowns, rich interiers, and that general air de la bonne compagnie which Sir George breathes naturally himself and can skilfully impart—shall we say by artificial respiration?—to others. You have thus, sitting comfortably in your stall, all the sensation of assisting at some particularly "smart" party. All the ladies look of the highest fashion and all the gentlemen only just a shade too aristocratic to be the real article. Your sense of your social importance is enhanced. That is a miracle the St. James's is peculiarly good at working. Merely by paying at the box-office you get, or rather, what is perhaps even better than getting, you have the illusion of getting—oh joy!—into "Society."

Nevertheless there is something the matter with An Ideal Husband. It leaves you cold. You associate with under-secretaries, half the peerage, K.G.'s, ladies in tiaras, and yet you are left cold. The air is positively thick with epigrams, repartees, paradoxes, and still you are quite cold. What is the matter? Is it the very excess of these epigrams, these "Oscarisms," that give you a tinge of melancholy at the thought of how much younger you were when such things were in fashion? No, for the play has obviously been revised and half its wittieisms have been cut out, and many of those that remain must—in spite of the people who nowadays sneer at Wilde's wit—in all fairness be declared to be quite good. Is it the artless artifice of the plot, with its creaking mechanical apparatus of stolen bracelets and compromising letters, borrowed (one of the devices, indeed, coming straight out of Les Pattes de Mouche) from Sardou? No again, because playgoers still really like these Sardou devices; witness the recent success of Diplomacy.

The matter with An Ideal Husband is what French studio slang calls le Poncif. That phrase alludes of course to the transfer of a drawing by "pouncing" from a set pattern; figuratively, it means those elements of a play which the playwright has not really felt, but only supplied because they are what he supposes the public would like him to have felt. The Chilterns, Sir Robert of the fine sentiments and his wife of the lofty ideals, are both "pounced." Their talk about the supremacy of love, true love, in this world might be true in other circumstances and on other lips. On theirs it is sheer rhetoric. Rhetoric, Sir Robert's speech about the gospel of power! Rhetoric, Lady Chiltern's praise of her husband for his purification of public life! With all their nobility and magnanimity and high-flown language the man is a stick and the woman a doll. Thus at the very heart of the play, over its hero and heroine, the people set forth to engage your anxieties and your sympathies, you are left cold. In vain Mr. Wontner pleads and vibrates with passion; in vain Miss Neilson-Terry looks majestic or hatters violently at the door out of which her husband has flung. You are all the time at zero.

The adventuress warms you up a little. You see, you know her. She is an old familiar friend; you have the—always festive—sentiment of "Auld Lang Syne." And when, just after having one blackmailing letter extorted from her, she "sneaks" another, you are delighted; she is triumphantly burlesquing her own type! Miss Hilda Moore, too, looks wonderfully well in Venetian red and is just the glittering, sneering, vampire-like thing that you expect. Brava, bravissima, the adventuress! And Sir George is, of course, thoroughly at home as the good-natured, flippant Viscount—with the best possible moral principles judiciously allowed to peep out from his frivolity, for the edification of his erring friends. Sir George is quite happy, and so are we. So is Mr. Alfred Bishop, as his indignant parent, the good old English gentleman, one of the olden time. So is Miss Henrietta Watson as a lady with an extra share of Oscarisms, delivered just in the right innocent manner. And Miss Amy Brandon-Thomas makes a pleasant young lady to match with the Viscount, though (we suggest diffidently) she has been a little misguided in one of her hats.

We repeat: a quite natural revival for the St. James's. The crowd at Lady Chiltern's is just the sort of crowd to get a long paragraph in the "social column" next morning. There is an interior with red curtains which is alone worth a visit to the play. The audience was, on the whole, we think, pleasantly excited and amused; but oh le poncif!

SAVOY THEATRE,
STRAND.

May 12th, 1914.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by the Management to forward you the enclosed ticket for the use of your Dramatic Critic, on Saturday evening, May 16th, at 8, to the first performance of

"Break the Walls Down"

BY

Mrs. ALEXANDER GROSS

Preceded by

"Accidents will 'appen"

BY

VERNON BELL.

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, I shall be obliged if you will kindly return the ticket to me as soon as possible.

Yours faithfully,

A. S. PIGOTT.

"Break the Walls Down"

A NEW PLAY IN THREE ACTS

BY

Mrs. ALEXANDER GROSS

Madge Beufre	IRENE McLEOD
Mrs. Patrick Beufre	MADGE McINTOSH
Mr. Patrick Beufre	CHARLES ROCK.
Perkins	JOYCE FRANCIS
Smiles	CLIVE CURRIE
Girl	JOAN FALLON.
Mr. Townsend	EWAN BROOK
Mr. Hogan	W. G. FAY
Mr. Bigton	JAMES HARCOURT
Mr. Playfair	NORMAN McKEOWN
Miss Black	CYBEL WYNNE
Miss Decies	MARTHE VIGO
Mr. Karpat	IVAN BERLYN
Mr. Mallory Ditton	BERNARD STOORS
Mrs. Mallory Ditton	BARBARA EVEREST
Mr. Matthews	J. HENRY TWYFORD
Mr. Monopenny	S. GRANVILLE DARLING
Mr. Mosenthal	J. HENRY
Mr. Bolton	BRYAN G. POWLEY
Mr. Owers	EDGAR PAYNE

Preceded by

"Accidents will 'appen"

A NEW COCKNEY PLAY

BY

VERNON BELL

Chauffeur	IVAN BERLYN
Boy	MADGE PARKE
Policeman	BRYAN G. POWLEY
Flo Spratt	ESMÉ HUBBARD

Both plays produced by MADGE McINTOSH

THE TIMES

MONDAY, MAY 18, 1914.

We felt sorry for poor Mr. Beufre. He was more stupid and boorish than most conventional men, with old-fashioned views about his womenfolk; but he was more than fairly punished by being preached at in private by his daughter, and made a fool of in public by his wife. So far as the propaganda of this propagandist play is concerned, it seemed to us a pity that views held and practised in real life by many very charming women should be handed over in the drama to such disagreeable women as Mrs. Beufre and her daughter Madge. So far as dramatic art is concerned, neither the play itself nor its presentation calls for notice.

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY.

"Break the Wal's Down" at the Savoy Theatre.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

The "walls" which Mrs. Alexander Gross, the author of the new play which was produced at the Savoy Theatre last night, is anxious to break down are the walls of reserve which grow up between husband and wife in their business as apart from their domestic relations. Mr. Renfre is a merchant with antediluvian ideas of a woman's place in the world—in fact, the typical woman writer's idea of a man. He is, in fact, such a prig that it is little wonder that his business affairs go wrong. Further, he is so wrapped up in himself that he has no idea that his wife is a highly successful dressmaker earning £5,000 a year. Consequently, when his suspicions are aroused by her frequent absences from home, he can only jump to the worst conclusions. He therefore forces his way into the modiste's shop and creates a rather ludicrous scene with his wife and her Hungarian designer at the very moment when she is coming to the rescue of his tottering business.

However, it all comes right in the end. But the play has the defects of its qualities—there is so much talk of business that the real issue between husband and wife is fatally obscured. Moreover, the author is at present working in a medium of which she has not acquired the essential technique. Some of her characterisation is excellent and much of her dialogue is pointed and easy, but she relies so much on the telephone as a means of explaining what is going on.

Miss Madge McIntosh acted naturally as Mrs. Renfre, and Mr. Charles Rock, when his memory did not fail him, was as strenuous as the husband. The best of the acting, however, came from Mr. W. G. Day, a comic Irish detective, Mr. Clive Currie as a man taking an inventory for a bill of sale, and Mr. Bernard Storrs, as a stuttering visitor to the modiste's.

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, MAY 21st, 1914, AT 8.15

(SUBSEQUENT PERFORMANCES AT 9.)

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

The Great Gamble

A Comedy in Three Acts,

By JEROME K. JEROME.

Robin	J. V. BRYANT
Elsa	HILDA BAILEY
The Colonel	EDMUND MAURICE
The Business Man	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
The Business Man's Wife	SARAH BROOKE
The Herr Professor	STANLEY COOKE
The Frau Professor	ALICE BEET
The Minor Poet	H. HEWETSON
The Minor Poet's Wife	CONSTANCE ROBERTSON
The Baron	LEON QUARTERMAINE
The Princess	RUTH MACKAY
The Widow	ELLEN SNOW
The Widow's only Daughter	MARJORIE DORE
Madame	CICELY HAMILTON
Someone that Nobody saw (and)	MATTIE BLOCK

Scene—An Ancient Grove. Time—A day in Spring.

Act I.—Sunlight. Act II.—Twilight. Act III.—Moonlight.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Thursday
Evening
May 21

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No. J 20

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

PRECEDED AT 7.45 (SUBSEQUENT PERFORMANCES AT 8.30) BY

THE SILVER LINING

A Comedy in One Act, by WILFRED T. COLEBY.

Mrs. Parrott	... FLORENCE LLOYD
Alfred, her Son	.... NORMAN PAGE
Lottie, her Daughter	... BETTY BELLAIRS
Charlie Royden	... J. SEAFIELD GRANT
Rev. Cuthbert Bence (Rector of St. Chad's, Lower Chelsea)	JOHN HOWELL

Scene—Mrs. Parrott's Sitting-Room.

Scenery by JOSEPH AND PHIL HARKER.

Miss Sarah Brooke's dresses by MADAME HANDLEY SEYMOUR.

Other dresses by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY, and ANNE TALBOT, LTD.

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Mr. Leon Quartermaine and Mr. Hewetson appear by arrangement with MISS LILLAH MCCARTHY and MR. GRANVILLE BARKER.

Stage Manager, CHARLES LA TROBE.

Musical Director, NORMAN O'NEILL.

MATINEES—EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
(FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27th.)

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.
Reserved Seats from 2s. 6d. Telephone—Regent 6030.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

The request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Theatre is cleansed throughout daily by the "OTOVACUM TURBINE" VACUUM CLEANER.

Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

Plays

Two in One.

In the new play by Jerome K. Jerome, presented by Mr. Frederick Harrison at the Haymarket Theatre on Thursday evening with the title of "The Great Gamble," there are two distinct stories, one being a very sentimental affair, the other an undisguised farce. The scene which serves throughout the three acts for the two stories in this one play is a cleared space in a German forest, and, of course, there is—but out of sight—a pleasant inn near by where beer, or breakfast can be obtained. The sentimental portion of the play begins with a love scene between charming eighteen-year-old Elsa from the inn and gallant young Robin, an American student from a neighbouring university. The moment Robin told the girl that the greatness of their mutual love made him "almost afraid," we felt that the sentimental department of the piece was to be devoted to calf-love of a very harmless type. Innocuous as it was, it was still a pleasure to know that it was not to intrude too much on the larger and farcical features of "The Great Gamble."

Mild Farce.

Most of the incidents of the lighter side of Mr. Jerome's play are amusing in a mild fashion, but the general effect is to produce an impression that we had seen it all before and seen it better done. There is an amorous old colonel who has bolted from London, taking with him the wife of a friend. We learn that his punishment arrived soon, the lady telling him before the train reached Dover that she did not love him and was sorry she left her husband. No wonder that when the colonel (by pure chance) met all his friends in the forest that he gave details of how she never ceased crying since she left her home, and how he, to preserve her reputation, was spending his nights in bathrooms. After that explanation the husband, in search of his missing wife, arrived on the scene. The real state of affairs was explained by the men, and he agreed to take her back, but the women, furious that they had no part in the settlement, upset the proposal, and set everyone by the ears. It was farcical, of course, but it brought about preparations for an absurd duel, and in good time the author restored harmony among the familiar figures of his play, and all ended happily. There was a mixed reception for the piece from the gallery. The other portions of the house were friendly enough.

PLAYGOER.

1394

Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1914.

"THE SWINEHERD AND THE PRINCESS."

The Swineherd and the Princess, the fantasy by Alfred England and Otto David which was produced at the Court Theatre last night, is quite a charming version of the old fairy tale, and, with some sorely needed compression and a little strengthening of the comedy scenes, it would be just the thing for a Christmas play.

Miss Muriel Henderson made a prettily demure Princess, and sang nicely except for nervousness, though she might with advantage throw a little more vivacity into her acting. The Prince, who disguises himself as a swineherd in order to win the love of the Princess, was admirably played by Mr. Harry Hilliard, who invested the part with gaiety and real feeling. The King, represented as a musical maniac, was impersonated by Mr. Dennis Drew, a singer with a really fine voice, and Mr. J. H. Brewer, the producer of the play, contributed a slight but clever study of an addle-pated old major-domo. The best thing about the performance, however, was the music composed by Mr. Cart St. Amory, which seemed to strike exactly the right note on every occasion when it was heard.

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1914.

£66,000 FOR 2 THEATRES.

MR. ALFRED BUTT'S PURCHASE.

The Queen's Theatre and the Globe Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, together with the shop between them, were bought yesterday by Mr. Alfred Butt at the Estate Auction Rooms, Hanover-square, for £66,000. The property is leasehold from the governors of Christ's Hospital, to whom a rent of £7,300 has to be paid. The auctioneer's estimate of the rent from the property was £18,500. Another theatrical manager was Mr. Butt's keenest rival in the bidding.

Mr. Butt's interest will be confined to leasing the theatres to other managers.

MR. BUTT'S DIRECTORSHIPS.

Mr. Alfred Butt is a man of many activities in the music-hall world. The following are some of his appointments:—

Managing director of the Palace Theatre and the Empire, London.

Managing director and chairman of the Victoria Palace Theatre, London.

Director of the Variety Theatres Controlling Company, which includes music-halls in Manchester, Glasgow, and many other towns, as well as the Alhambra Theatre, in Paris. Mr. Butt is also building a large modern cosmopolitan music-hall in Paris.

THE COURT.

"THE SWINEHERD AND THE PRINCESS."

For the whole of this week (for six evening performances and two matinées), beginning May 18, the Court is in the possession of that well-known character comedian, Mr. J. H. Brewer, who is presenting a revised and considerably altered version of The Swineherd and the Princess. Acknowledgment of indebtedness to Hans Christian Andersen was duly made when this piece, then styled "a musical tale," made its appearance among the Christmas entertainments of 1901, at the Royalty, on December 19 of that year. The charming and, at times, genuinely humorous music of Carl St. Amory remains as before the most praiseworthy feature of what is now termed "a fantasy," with no mention made of Andersen, with a new collaborator assigned to Alfred England in Otto David, in lieu of Avalon Collard, and with Sidney Cubitt named as writer of the "additional lyrics." Although some of the comic business has been changed, notably in the omission of the former collapsible bed and kitchen scenes, the main outlines of the story are retained; and it must be said that, as before, the plot is much too thin to be beaten out over three acts, and that the piece, as a whole, is decidedly lacking in action, and might indeed be compressed, so as to play within the hour. The dialogue is pretty full of puns and playing upon words, various musical terms being thus introduced; and a good deal of fun is got out of the King being "a music-maniac," ever seeking after a new melody with which to complete the score of his opera, and at last catching this in the lively dance at first played on the pipe by the Prince, disguised as a swineherd, and finally acknowledged by the latter to come from his "National dance music." More, too, seems to be made than before of the character of the so-called Minor Domo (as opposed to the Major Domo), whom the King vainly endeavours to marry to the fully revealed Prince Augustin, when Princess Ernestine refuses steadfastly to wed him, as she is still pining for his other self, the Swineherd, to whom she had promised a hundred kisses for his magic singing kettle, giving forth snatches of the familiar "Lieber Augustin."

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager
SIR HERBERT TREE

▼

The Silver King

By
HENRY ARTHUR JONES and the late HENRY HERMAN

Under the direction of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

▼

In the presence of

Their Majesties The King and Queen

FRIDAY, MAY 22nd
1914

At 2.30 o'clock will be acted

The Silver King

By Henry Arthur Jones and the late Henry Herman

"I held it truth, with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."
TENNYSON.

Wilfred Denver		H. B. Irving
Daniel Jaikes		J. D. Beveridge
Frank Selwyn		Owen Nares
Geoffrey Ware		Herbert Waring
Samuel Baxter	(a Detective)	Henry Ainley
Capt. Herbert Skinner	(The Spider)	E. S. Willard
Henry Corkett	(Geoffrey Ware's Clerk)	Gerald du Maurier (His original character)
Eliah Coombe	(a Marine Store Dealer)	Ambrose Manning
Cripps	(a Locksmith)	C. M. Lowne
Mr. Parkyn	(a Parish Clerk)	John Beauchamp
Binks Brownson	Tradesmen	Alfred Bishop (His original character) Eric Lewis
Bilcher Teddy	(Betting Men)	G. P. Huntley E. M. Robson
Tubbs	(Proprietor of "The Wheatsheaf")	H. de Solla
Gaffer Pottle		Herbert Tree (His original character)
Tipsy Passenger		Charles Hawtrey
Cabman		Frederick Ross
Leaker		Sydney Valentine
Servant		Robert Loraine
Servant		Matheson Lang
Detective		Frederick Kerr
Detective		Dennis Eadie
Railway Inspector		George Alexander
Porter		Murray Carson
Newsboy		Seymour Hicks (His original character)
A Passenger		Weedon Grossmith
First Rustic		Harry Paulton
Second Rustic		Frank Hill

Cast—(continued)

Nellie Denver	Lillah McCarthy
Cissy Denver	Renée Mayer
Ned Denver	Violet Marley
Olive Skinner	Marie Löhr
Tabitha Durden	Florence Haydon
School-children	Nancy Pawley, Moya Nugent
Susy	Gladys Cooper
Mrs. Gamage	Henrietta Watson
Lady Passenger	Ellis Jeffreys
Another Lady Passenger	Carlotta Addison

The following Artists will also appear:

William Abingdon, Clifton Alderson, Oscar Asche, John Astley, H. K. Ayliffe, Robert Ayrton, James Berry, W. H. Berry, George Bishop, Acton Bond, E. H. Brooke, J. V. Bryant, Benedict Butler, Roy Byford, Francis Chamier, Harold Chapin, Holman Clark, Perceval Clark, C. Hayden Coffin, Lewis Coker, Ralf le Cornu, Ernest Cresfan, Frederic Culley, Val Cuthbert, E. Dagnall, E. Degges, Clarence Derwent, Francis J. Duguid, James Eastman, Archibald Forbes, Basil Foster, Warburton Gamble, Charles Garry, A. E. George, Algernon Greig, Fred Grove, Edmund Gurney, Henry Hargreaves, F. Harvey, Arthur Hatherton, Baliol Holloway, Dickson Kenwin, H. W. Kimber, Claude King, Henri Laurent, Howard Leslie, Erig Lugg, Oswald Marshall, Rosamond Mayne-Young, Charles Maunsell, Philip Merivale, Edward Morgan, Nellie Mortyne, Stuart Musgrove, Norman V. Norman, George Owen, Reginald Owen, Sydney Pease, Stanley Perrett, G. Brydon Phillips, Arthur Poole, A. G. Poulton, George Pownell, E. Vivian Reynolds, J. Fritz Russell, Edward Sass, Farren Soutar, E. Lyall Swete, Ion Swinley, Norman Trevor, Charles la Trobe, Gedge Twyman, Allan Wade, C. D. Warren, Thomas Weguelin, Algernon West, Arthur Whitby, Walker Whiteside.

The Play rehearsed on this occasion by
E. S. Willard and Ambrose Manning

Costumes by B. J. Simmons Wigs by Clarkson
Furniture by D. L. Isaacs

Stage Managers - Stanley Bell, S. T. Pease, A. Bellew

General Manager - Henry Dana

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1914.

THE INSULT TO THE KING.

INTERRUPTIONS AT THE CHARITY MATINEE.

Some disturbance was created by militant suffragists at the special matinée of The Silver King at His Majesty's Theatre, which was attended by the King and Queen. Scarcely had the curtain risen on the first scene than a woman stood up in the stalls and addressed the King loudly as "Russian Tsar." When she had been removed, a second woman managed, with the assistance of a third, to clamber from the stalls on to the prompt side of the stage, just below the Royal box; and she had succeeded in beginning a speech when she was lifted bodily in a strong arm and taken out of sight. A fourth woman, who kept interrupting the performance, was found to be chained to her stall: and from upstairs there came a hubbub and some showers of leaflets. And then at last the nuisance had spent itself.

The first intimation to the crowds waiting outside the theatre that anything unusual was occurring within was the appearance of a woman being forcibly ejected by two policemen. She crossed Charles-street to the accompaniment of considerable booing from the crowd, which, however, did not attempt to molest her until she turned to address some remarks to those standing near. This was the signal for a rush in her direction, but she was at once seized by two constables, who led her off in the direction of Vine-street. A few moments later, a second woman was ejected from the theatre. She had lost the greater portion of her blouse, and she showed generally considerable signs of rough handling. She walked away towards Waterloo-place with a large part of the crowd following and jeering.

The two women who were arrested appeared later in the day at Marlborough-street Police Court and were charged with creating a disturbance. Both refused to give their names. One was fined 21s. with the alternative of 14 days' imprisonment, and the other was bound over.

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MR. GASTON MAYER'S SEASON.

SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 23rd, AT 7.45; FOLLOWING EVENINGS AT 8.30.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL'S

PLASTER SAINTS

A High Comedy in Three Movements.

Characters.

Rev. Dr. Rodney Vaughan (a leading Provincial Minister) ..	EDWARD SASS
Sir John Archmundham, Bart. (Lay Head of the Congregation)	CLIFTON ALDERSON
John Archmundham, M.D., D.Sc., M.A. (his Son) ..	HAROLD CHAPIN
Purvis (the Minister's Manservant)	H. K. AYLIFF
Hannah Vaughan (the Minister's Wife)	GRACE LANE
Elsie Vaughan (their Daughter)	ERNITA LASCELLES
Amy Archmundham (the Baronet's Daughter) ..	GILLIAN SCAIFE
Mrs. Morrow (a Widow in reduced circumstances)	INEZ BENSUSAN
The Hon. Mrs. Anon (a Lady from London) ..	GWENDOLINE HAY

The Action passes in the Minister's Study at Midstoke, between Tea and Dinner, in the beginning of October, 1912.

The Song "I Arise from Dreams of Thee," by C. K. SALAMAN, sung in Act II., is published by Messrs. EDWIN ASHDOWN, Ltd., 19 Hanover Square, W.

PRODUCED BY HAROLD CHAPIN.

Miss Gillian Scaife's Gown by Madame HARCOURT, Westbourne Grove, W.; Hat by Madame DE BOSDARI, 37 Sloane Street.
Miss Gwendoline Hay's Gown in Act I. by ELIZABETH GORTON, 20 South Molton Street, W.
Furniture by J. S. LYON, 112 High Holborn, W.C.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

ORCHESTRA under the direction of HAROLD MOSS.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager	EDWARD BROADLEY
Assistant Stage Manager...	J. PATRICK TURNBULL

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office: Mr. W. BUSHELL.

Business Manager .. .. EDWARD LYTTON

"PLASTER SAINTS."

Mr. Israel Zangwill's Comedy Last Night.

By OUR DRAMATIC CRITIC.

Mr. Israel Zangwill's new play, "Plaster Saints," presented last evening at the Comedy Theatre, although it possesses little dramatic interest, can boast of a considerable amount of amusing writing to compensate for lack of incident. Mr Zangwill is apparently impatient of convention in religious economy, and so by means of one of his characters, a provincial minister with a narrow-minded wife, who adores him, he scourges with many speeches men and women who have not sufficient courage to free themselves entirely from the conventions of religion and the provincial society in which they have been brought up. Three acts devoted to the history of two provincial families who, in spite of their religious zeal, manage to emulate their humbler neighbours in originating a scandal of their own, can sometimes provide too much of a good thing, even when—as happens in this instance—it is an elderly clerical gentleman with grown-up children who wrongs the pretty typist.

Mr. Edward Sass.

Wife and Husband's Typist.

Mr. Zangwill's chief Plaster Saint in this play, the Rev. Dr. Rodney Vaughan, whatever his private opinion may have been of his treatment of the girl who typed his sermons, had no intention of letting his wife or neighbours know what a fellow he was, and when he could no longer conceal the facts from his gentle but prying spouse he was well prepared to advance arguments in favour of silence. Being a religious woman, we were led to believe that her convictions were all on the side of compelling her husband to desert her and be divorced; so that he should marry the other. But after two acts devoted mainly to propositions of a futile order—during which we were informed that the typist had married a rising young author—who showed a disposition also to shower affection on the clergyman's unrecognised offspring—the play came to an end with everyone apparently content with the changes that Providence, and the author, had made or suggested.

Mr. Edward Sass had many opportunities for eloquence and used them successfully as the preacher. Miss Grace Lane, looking very charming had not a very grateful part as the exacting wife, but Miss Ernita Lascelles got a delightful little part as an ingénue, and in a scene with her young admirer was so good that we wished Mr. Zangwill would write a love story and leave the "Aunt Sally game" to those who are not as clever as he is.

J.W.

At the end of the evening some of audience called for the author, others for "lights." Mr. Chapin explained that Mr. Zangwill was not in the house. A voice from the gallery expressed approval of the statement.

Reference

COMEDY THEATRE 23

Sole Lessee Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

23/5/1914

STALL

H17

To be Retained

MONDAY, MAY 25, 1914.

According to the Rev. Dr. Rodney Vaughan, there are London circles where grave subjects are treated with levity, and he thinks these circles should be rebuked. Even at the risk of incurring the reverend gentleman's rebuke we decline to take either himself or his family and friends quite so seriously as they take themselves. Indeed, we have our doubts about any of them being real live people and rather suspect them of being merely component parts of a "problem play." There may be spiritual directors of the Nonconformist conscience, revered by all as saints, who have seduced their shorthand writer. There may be matrons who conceive it their duty to insist on divorce in order that their husbands may make honest women of their paramours. There may be Puritan baronets who hold it would be contamination for their daughter to wed the brother of a seduced woman, but withdraw their objection when the woman gets a husband. Individually these queer people may exist, but we find it difficult to swallow them in one lump.

Nor do we think that any reverend sinner, trying to cover up his tracks, would have been quite so clumsy a liar as Dr. Vaughan. He gave it away all the time; and the only wonder is how an interfering, managing, persistent woman like Mrs. Rodney could have been so long, if we may use an expression of levity, in tumbling to it. When at last she did, she remembered her Hawthorne and her Ibsen and her Henry Arthur Jones, and told the guilty one he must confess. But he pointed out, to her perplexity, that confession would spoil his future usefulness in truly Christian circles and, further, declared his conviction that repentant sinners make the best pastors. Then the pair executed a chassé-croisé, the husband being converted to the idea of confession and the wife being turned dead against it by the discovery that their daughter was in love with the Puritan baronet's son. Finally, the husband decided not to confess but to resign the ministry and henceforth to take his share of moral crusades in the ranks. This seemed a happy solution to everybody, except the Puritan baronet, who, poor man, was left in the dark.

Of course, in a play of this kind they all quote the Scriptures at one another. The minister, having a professional advantage, gets in Saul, David, St. Paul, St. Francis, and Tolstoy. The baronet romps in with Milton. A young D.Sc. contributes allusions to heredity and the Mendelian theory. The poor wife, ill-used, out-argued, and preached at by her vociferously repentant husband, is a pathetic figure, very sympathetically played by Miss Grace Lane. Mr. Sass, as the minister, evidently takes a hearty, full-blooded, and orotund delight in his state of repentance from sin. Miss Gillian Scaife, an admirable actress as she proved herself the other day in Tchekoff, gets no chance here. Mr. Clifton Alderson nobly does his best to behave as though the Puritan baronet had not been invented for the sake of the problem. The audience on Saturday night gave the play a friendly reception. And if, as is unhappily possible, there should be any London circles where so grave a subject is treated with levity, Mr. Zangwill will no doubt be quite equal to rebuking them.

"PLASTER SAINTS."

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—As owing to the general Press accounts of "Plaster Saints," my new play at the Comedy Theatre, I have received a number of letters of abuse, may I say briefly that my play attacks neither the Church of England nor any sect, but was in fact originally suggested by certain cases in the United States in which distinguished divines of exceptional eloquence were involved in scandals which they strenuously denied?

Supposing that the scandal was true—and surely it was true in at least one instance—a fascinating dramatic problem arises which I have tried to solve. That is all. And at a moment when everybody is reading "The Love Letters of Parnell" the supplementary problem as to whether a moral slip should destroy a great career is assuredly apposite. I trust that the commendation my play has received from some of my most eminent Christian contemporaries will serve to reassure my abusive correspondents as to the real intention and significance of the work, which contains nothing whatever to wound Christian feeling.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30,

PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY'S

PRODUCTION OF

THE LITTLE LAMB

A Farce in Three Acts.

BY

ARTHUR WIMPERIS and HARTLEY CARRICK.

From the German of

FRANZ ARNOLD and ERNST BACH.

Characters in the order in which they appear.

Yvonne Dubonnet (Daughter of Max Dubonnet)	MABEL BURNEGE
Mariette (Dubonnet's Maid)	MOLLIE TERRAINE
Madame Dubonnet (Wife of Max Dubonnet)	HELEN HAYE
Mimi Barribal (Daughter of Théophile Barribal)	LAURA COWIE
Théophile Barribal (Brother-in-law of Dubonnet)	LOUIS CALVERT
Victor Vichy (Brother Artist and Friend of Dubonnet)	LEON M. LION
Max Dubonnet (Head of Musical Instrument Manufactory)	ARTHUR WHITBY
Jacques Fontaine	RUDGE HARDING
Henri Lefèbre (Son of Rose and Lefèbre)	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Rose Delbosc (Landlady)	ROBERT HORTON
[illegible]	STANLEY TURNBULL
[illegible]	KATE BISHOP

ACT I. Room in Max Dubonnet's House

ACT II. The Same. The next day

ACT III. The Same. Ten minutes later

[illegible] by Arthur de Lissa [illegible] Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain's Office [illegible] Square, W.

[illegible] Produced by Mr. Rudolf and Mr. Ernest Rudolf at Rosslyn Theatre, 1912. Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, W.

[illegible] Stage Directed by George R. Hemley. Wigs by Clarkson.

APOLLO
THEATRE
27/5/14
Orch. Stall
To be retained

Preceded at 8 by

A DEAR LITTLE WIFE

A Japanese Comedy in One Act by Gerald Dunn.

Hagiya	LEON M. LION
Sugiha (Hagiya's Wife)	MOLLIE TERRAINE
Takeji (Their Child)	W. ABINGDON

The Scene is laid in Japan at the Present Day.

Staged by Joseph Harker. Costumes by L. & H. Nathan.

BOTH PLAYS PRODUCED BY MR. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

J. W.

Our debt to Germany has not been heavily increased by the latest importation from that country—a farce called "The Little Lamb," produced on Wednesday evening at the Apollo Theatre. It is only fair, however, to say that the audience laughed loud and long, and it is more than likely that if all the performances given were as good as the best of them Mr. Faraday might have had a very big success. The play, however, is not a really good farce; some of it is absolutely absurd without being funny, and several times during the evening, when a good deal of humour might have been got out of the incidents, many of the people on the stage failed to make the best of the situation.

Who Laughed.

The scene of the play is a French town at a moment when several of the worthy citizens bear that the consequences of a youthful escapade with a dancer who appeared in the local theatre twenty-five years earlier is likely to be made known to their families and their fellow citizens. For twenty-five years three of these gentlemen had without the others' knowledge been paying an allowance to the dancer's solicitor for the support and education of a boy that each of them believed to be his son, and when a young man came to their town at the opening of the story the terror-stricken fathers fell into the farcical error of believing that the dull-looking fellow was the dancer's son come to seek retribution. This delusion served to keep the play going for three acts, and might have easily been made more entertaining than it was. The amusement some of us got out of the evening consisted in seeing how many people laughed with the entertainment; and, also, we had the satisfaction of being able to see more Miss Mabel Russell looking like a stage-boy, and pretty Miss Ivy Hoey laughing in the orchestra stalls.

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

ON SATURDAY EVENING, May 30th, 1914, at 8.30,

Mr. JOSEPH P. BICKERTON, Junr., presents

(By arrangement with Mr GEORGE EDWARDES).

"ADELE,"

A Musical Comedy in Three Acts.

Book by PAUL HERVE Music by JEAN BRIQUET

English Version prepared by
ADOLF PHILIPP and EDWARD A. PAULTON

Baron Charles de Chantilly		HAL FORDE
Robert Friebur	(Alfred's Son)	CRAUFURD KENT
Henri Parmaceau	(A Provision Merchant)	WILLIAM DANFORTH
Alfred Friebur	(Henri's Business Rival)	DALLAS WELFORD
Jacques	(The Baron's Valet)	RALPH NAIRN
Louis Paprieot	(The Bailiff)	LAWRENCE KNAPP
Gaston Neuilly		E. H. BARLAB
Armond Cartouche		HENRY WARD
Francois		CHARLES FRYE
Pierre		EDWARD WOOSTER
Julian		H MORTON CARLTON
Adele	(Parmaceau's Daughter)	CAROLYN THOMSON
Mme. Myrianne de Neuville	(A Widow)	GEORGIA CAINE
Babiole	(Maid to Adele)	AMPARITO FARRAR
Violette		GRACE WALTON
Germaine		MARMET ADAMS
Fleurette		MADELINE HOWARD
Gabrielle		PEGGY MacFALL
Faustine		JANE WARRINGTON
Therese		ESTELLE RICHMOND
Pauline		EDNA ALLING
Georgette		JANE HALL
Helene		ANNA VANE
Annette		EDNA BRODERICK

ACT I. ... ... Bachelor apartment of the Baron Charles de Chantilly, Paris.

ACT II. ... ... Adele's boudoir. Trouville.

ACT III. ... ... Garden surrounding the hotel. Trouville.

Orchestra under the direction of ARTHUR WELD

Ladies Costumes by HENRI BENDEL, of New York

The actual Company and entire production from the Longacre Theatre, New York.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.

(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

(3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.

(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.

(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1914.

"ADELE" AT THE GAIETY.

MIXED PICKLES AMERICAN MUSICAL FARCE.

The American manager who, by arrangement with the directors, presented the new musical play "Adelo" at the Gaiety Theatre on Saturday evening has the courage of his opinions and gave the patrons of that popular house (or those who were there in place of them) an entertainment that had no pretensions—except for a couple of the musical numbers—to be compared with the delightfully danced, acted, and sung musical plays of the famous series stage-managed by Mr. George Edwardes from 1885 to 1913.

The programme describes "Adele" as a musical comedy in three acts by Mr. Paul Herve, with music by Mr. Jean Briquet. A man in the theatre on Saturday evening said he liked it because it had a plot. That may have been the cause of the "booing" at the end of the evening. If so, it must be chronicled that a very slight thing caused the trouble. The plot has to do with a young man (titled) and a young woman (father in trade) who married only to please their relatives and remained married to please themselves. The play takes its title from the young woman, whose father bought her a title, and the amusing interludes—which were funnier than the love-making—were provided by the father of Adele and his rival in trade, who also happened to be the father of Adele's unsuccessful suitor.

HUMOUR OF CANNING.

The subtle humour of the play depended upon the fact that Adele's father, a sardine and smoked-eel canner, hated another fellow who bottled pickles. The regret of the former was that he could not "tin" his fat enemy; the regret of the other was that when he went away for the sea bathing he forgot his opera glasses. That was the extent to which the humours of the play stretched.

The heroine had a pretty reminiscent song called "Adele," which she sang very prettily, but oh! so often, and the chorus (limited to ten ladies) took up the melody whenever the principals revoked. There was no dancing of any account. What was done was very indifferent. The company seems for London a surprisingly small one, and of its principals Miss Carolyn Thomson was easily first. Mr. William Danforth and Mr. Dallas Welford, the comedians impersonating the two manufacturers whose ambitions were to make mixed condiments of the other fellow, are even droller than the author had visions of.

J. W.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Wednesday

3/6/1914

Orch. Stall

E 16

This to be retained

To-night, Wednesday, June 3rd, 1914, at 8.30

Miss MARIE TEMPEST will present a Farcical Romance, in Three Acts, called

By ROBERT MARSHALL

IAN DOUGLAS MacBAYNE	(Duke of Killicrankie)	MR. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
MR. HENRY PITT-WELBY, M.P.		MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH
MR. AMBROSE HICKS		MR. NORMAN LORING
ALEXANDER MacBAYNE	(Caretaker at Crag-o'North)	MR. JOHN KELT
BUTLER		MR. HORTON COOPER
FOOTMAN		MR. CYRIL DERINGTON TURNER
THE COUNTESS OF PANGBOURNE		MISS KATE SERJEANTSON
LADY HENRIETTA ADDISON	(her Daughter)	MISS MARIE TEMPEST
MRS. MULHOLLAND		MISS MARIE ILLINGTON
MRS. MacBAYNE	(Housekeeper at Crag-o'North)	MISS FLORENCE HARWOOD

Act I. The Library at Glencoe House
Act II. Crag-o'North, Fortronald, N.B.
Act III. The Gateway, Crag-o'North

Period: TO-DAY

Miss MARIE TEMPEST's Dresses by Madame HAYWARD, 67 & 68, New Bond Street.
Miss MARIE ILLINGTON's Dresses by HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47, New Bond Street.
Hats by MAISONS LEWIS and HAYWARD
Miss MARIE TEMPEST's Tea Gown in Act II. and Miss KATE SERJEANTSON's Dresses by LUCILE LTD., Hanover Square.
Furniture by DRUCE & Co., Baker Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by STEINWAY & SONS, Lower Seymour Street.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by

In his Humour and Music at the Piano.

153

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1914.

"DUKE OF KILLICRANKIE."

MISS MARIE TEMPEST IN JOYOUS FARCE.

After an interval of ten years since its original production at the Criterion Theatre the late Captain Robert Marshall's farcical romance "The Duke of Killicrankie" was revived last evening—this time at the Playhouse by Miss Marie Tempest. And it was a wonder and a joy to find this play of delightful memories as fresh, as crisp, as charming, and as amusing as if it had been written only last week and was being given to us now only for the first time.

Never for one instant did the interest flag, never was there a line superfluous, never did the wit seem out of place. This farcical romance of a young duke holding as prisoner in his Scottish castle till he won her love, the young woman to whom he had appealed in vain in town is a sheer delight, for the humour arises out of the incidents, and the dialogue is witty, unforced, and natural.

The play pretends to do no more than amuse, but it justifies its pretension artistically, and acted as it was last evening it provides an entertainment that should serve to attract audiences for many a week to come to the Playhouse. On its original production ten years ago it ran for ten months. The cast at that time included Miss Marie Illington, Mr. Graham Browne, and Mr. Weedon Grossmith. We saw those clever people again last evening, better than ever it seemed, and Miss Marie Tempest had joined them in the part that Miss Eva Moore had played in other days.

J. W.

154

ROYAL COURT THEATRE

Proprietor - - - - - - - - - - Mr. J. H. Leigh
Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. Leigh and Mr. R. T. E. Neeves

THE IRISH PLAYERS

From the Abbey Theatre, Dublin

Thursday, Friday & Saturday Evenings & Saturday Matinee, June 4th, 5th & 6th.

FIRST PRODUCTION OF

THE SUPPLANTER

A Play in Three Acts

BY

J. BERNARD McCARTHY.

Produced by Lennox Robinson.

Ellie Cassidy	EITHNE MAGEE
Mrs. Keegan, her Aunt	EILEEN O'DOHERTY
Widow Flynn	ANN COPPINGER
John O'Connor	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Phil Keegan	FRED O'DONOVAN
Pad Saunders	PHILIP GUIRY

SCENE .. Kitchen of Mrs. Keegan's Farmhouse in County Cork.

Six months elapse between Acts I and II. and three between Acts II. and III.

Directors of the Irish National Theatre Co. Ltd.	W. B. Yeats Lady Gregory
Manager	Lennox Robinson
Business Manager	A. P. Wilson
Stage Manager	U. Wright
Assistant Stage Manager	J. F. Barlow

Manager (for Mr. J. H. Leigh and Mr. R. T. E. Neeves): Mr. JAMES ANNING.

156

LESSEE AND MANAGER
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Shaftesbury Theatre

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE
LONDON W.

Proprietors
The Representatives of the late Mr. JOHN LANCASTER

THURSDAY, JUNE 11th, 1911, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.15.

The Musical Farcical Comedy

THE CINEMA STAR

From the German Operette, "Kino Koenigin"

By GEORG OKONKOWSKI and JULIUS FREUND

English Version by JACK HULBERT

Lyrics from the German by HARRY GRAHAM

MUSIC BY JEAN GILBERT

Characters

JOSIAH CLUTTERBUCK	(An Eminent Moralist)	Mr. LAURI DE FRECE
VICTOR DE BRETT	(A Film Actor)	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
BILLY	(Stage Manager of Film Company)	Mr. JACK HULBERT
LORD CLARENCE WENTWORTH		Mr. H. V. TOLLEMACHE
FREDDY	(An Old Actor)	Mr. LIONEL RIGNOLD
CROCKER	(His Friend)	Mr. GEORGE HESTOR
CONSTABLE		Mr. AMBROSE MANNING
CABBY and OLD FLOWER WOMAN		Mr. GEORGE ELTON
HEAD WAITER and DR. PUNNETT		Mr. SEBASTIAN SMITH
MR. PHIPPS	(Guests)	Mr. EDGAR STANMORE
MR. CURWEN		Mr. GUY BUCKLAND
LOUISE	(The Film Princess)	Miss DOROTHY WARD
CISSIE	(Film Actresses)	Miss FAY COMPTON
MAUD		Miss EVELEEN FLORENCE
MISS EMDEN	(Guests)	Miss VIOLET BLYTHE
MISS MARROD		Miss MOLLIE HANBURY
MISS GIBBS		Miss LILIAN GILBERT
MISS CHALMERS		Miss GWEN HUGHES
[illegible] CLUTTERBUCK		Miss SUSIE VAUGHAN
[illegible]YLLIS	(Her Daughter)	Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE

Musical Numbers

ACT I.

1. OVERTURE
2. OPENING CHORUS "We've come as Friends or near Relations"
3. DUET (Phyllis and Victor) "Fate is wise"
   (A curtain will drop to mark an elapse of two hours
4. CHORUS "Why are all the lights still out?"
5. DUET (Phyllis and Victor) "Slip-slip"
6. SONG (Louise) "The Picture Palace Queen"
7. FINALE

ACT II.

8. OPENING CHORUS
9. SONG (Cissie and Chorus) "Be careful" Lyrics by Percy Greenbank
10. SONG (Victor and Chorus) "Girls"
11. DUET (Phyllis and Victor) "Forgive and Forget"
12. DUET (Louise and Josiah) "Oh, Louisa"
13. FINALE

ACT III.

14. OPENING CHORUS Lyrics by Percy Greenbank Music by Arthur Wood
15. OCTETTE OF MEN "Don't cry"
16. TRIO (Louise, Cissie, Victor) "Angels"
17. QUARTETTE (Louise, Victor, [illegible]) "Money"
18. SONG (Phyllis) "[illegible]" Lyrics by Percy Greenbank Music by Arthur Wood
19. SONG (Billy and Chorus) "In the Night"
20. FINALE

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1914.

"THE SUPPLANTER."

POSTMAN AUTHOR'S POIGNANT TRAGEDY.

The poignant story of "The Supplanter," presented for the first time at the Court Theatre last evening by the Irish Players from the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, appealed strongly to the audience. It was more than a creditable piece of work for a young author to have constructed out of the simple materials to be found in a small farming community a play in which not only fierce passions but also considerable development of character were to be found.

All the events of the tragedy are enacted within the narrow limits of an Irish farmhouse where the marriage of the widow brings about a fierce conflict between her son and the man that she brought into the home and placed above him.

Mr. J. Bernard McCarthy, the author of the play, who was not present last night, is stated to be a postman in the part of the country in which he has laid his story, and at no moment throughout the three acts has he allowed a just sense of the proportion of things to be lost sight of. There is entire absence of theatricality in his work. The story progresses naturally to the inevitable crime that the stepfather forces the boy in his resentment to commit, and in that small family dragged down to ruin by slain and slayer we could see the simple, helpless types of men and women, not the actors.

J. W.

Waters, J
Plays

The Cinema Star.

On Thursday evening at the Shafteshury Theatre Mr. Robert Courtneidge presented a new musical comedy adapted from the German, "Kino Koenigen," with music by the German composer, Jean Gilbert. In America, where this play made a success last winter, it was called "The Queen of the Movies," but Mr. Courtneidge has chosen the much prettier title for his version of "The Cinema Star." The play is in three acts; the first is in a London hotel, the second in a cinema rehearsal theatre at Hampstead, the third is the exterior of a picture palace.

The Plot.

In some respects a likeness can be traced between this musical play and "The Girl on the Film," produced at the Gaiety Theatre last year, and both pieces were originally presented in Germany about the same time. In both plays a girl of good family falls in love with a cinema actor, but whereas at the Gaiety the courtship was treated with a light hand and the other incidents were treated on funny lines, here at the Shaftesbury Theatre there is quite a set of complications in which the girl's father and many other people are involved. The main purpose of the plot is, however, to provide opportunities for comedians, singers, dancers, costumiers, and scenic artists, and here, as in other musical comedies, all that has been very effectively done. The general level of the entertainment is good No one stands out above the others to dwarf them. All work hard, and all look very happy at their work. Mr. Lauri de Frece is the principal comedian, and principal ladies are Miss Dorothy Ward, Miss Fay Compton, and Miss Cicely Courtneidge.

Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. G. Edwardes, 6 Park Square, Regents Park, N.W.

Proprietors: Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessee: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Manager (for Mr. George Edwardes): Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

On MONDAY, JUNE 8th at 8,

and Every Evening at 8.15.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.

Sam Bernard

IN

The Belle of Bond Street

(The American Version of "THE GIRL FROM KAYS")

A MUSICAL PLAY in Three Acts.

(By arrangement with Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES

And THE SHUBERT THEATRICAL COMPANY.)

Stage Production by JULIAN ALFRED.

Musical Director ... ... MR. GUSTAV WANDA.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.;
Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (MR. OXLEY) open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephones—945 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.

. . . Cast of the Play . . .

Max Hoggenheimer		Mr. SAM BERNARD
Harry Gordon		Mr. MARTIN BROWN
The Hon. Percy Fitzthistle		Mr. PERCY AMES
Theodore Quench, K.C.		Mr. JERE McAULIFFE
Mr. Chalmers		Mr. WALTER LEVEAUX
Joseph	(The Hall Porter) ...	Mr. GRAFTON WILLIAMS
Jack Richley		Mr. SAMMY LEE
James	... (The Butler)	Mr. DOUGLAS MARRS
Pepper	(The Head Waiter) ...	Mr. DAVE JONES
Norah Chalmers	... (The Bride)	Miss MABEL SEALBY
Ellen	... (The Maid)	Miss RUBY NORTON
Mrs. Chalmers...	(Norah's Mother) ...	Miss RITA PRESANO
Miss Slender		Miss CAROL ORR
Winnie Harborough	(The Belle of Bond Street)	Miss INA CLAIRE

The Girls from Bond Street—

Nancy	Harriet Laidy
Hilda	Billie DeHon
Sybil	Heather Featherstone
Clara	Edith Offutt
Mary	Marian George
Clothilde	Ida Prosser
Cora	Lou Wilson
Mabel	Marie Maury

The Bridesmaids

Rhoda	Helen Colville
Ella	Dora Alexander
Maud	Trixie Hillier
Gertrude	Nina Brunton
Olive	Elsie Scott-
Joan	Valeria Richards
Belle	Marie Kappey
Gladys	Helen Rae
Elsie	Beatrice Burnham
Sarah	Elenor Dell

Society Ladies:— Misses Gertrude White, Roma Adams, Flora Allen, Cynthia Murray Dorothy De Vere, Chloe O'Hara.

Hot Box Girls:— Gladys Miles, Ethel Lawson, Queenie Vincent, Daisy Weller, May Hennessy, Dorothy Godfrey, Ruby Latham, Ina Mason, Peggy Kurton, Della Hunt, Daisy Virginia, Muroff Allo.

Gentlemen Guests:—Llewellyn Thomas, F. Raynham, Sidney Roberts, Philip Arnold, Stewart Savill, Sidney Bambridge, Hallam Bentley, Leslie Dawson, Sidney Laine, Harold Latham, Gordon Bennett.

Act I. ... ... The Sitting Room in Mr. Chalmer's Villa, Kensington

Act II. ... ... His Majesty's Hotel, Flacton-on-Sea

Act III. ... ... Corridor of the Savoy Hotel, London

Miss Ina Claire's and Miss Mabel Sealby's dresses designed and made by LUCILE, LTD. 23 Hanover Square, W. Modern Gowns by JOSEPH, Fifth Avenue, New York. Miss Claire's hats designed and made by ZYROT ET CIE. Miss Sealby's hats by MICHEE ZAC.

"OH! YOU MOON" and "IMITATIONS" in Act III. written and composed by MISS ELSA MAXWELL.

Acting Manager } for Mr. George Edwardes { Mr. CHARLTON MANN
Stage Manager } for Mr. George Edwardes { Mr. R. BRENNAN

THE American colony in London was well represented at the Adelphi Theatre on Monday evening, when Shubert Brothers, of New York, presented a company of English and American artists, chiefly American, in an Americanised version of "The Girl from Kays," called in its latest guise "The Belle of Bond Street." This version was put together in New York some time ago in order to be used as a vehicle for Mlle. Gaby Deslys, but although that piquant and clever little actress was not a member of the company at the Adelphi Theatre the other night, she had a private box for herself from which she smiled on the entertainment.

A Comparison.

On its production at the Apollo Theatre on November 15, 1902, "The Girl from Kays" had the advantage of a cast that included Miss Ethel Irving, Miss Marie Illington, Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Letty Lind, Mr. Louis Bradfield, Mr. Fred Emney, and Mr. Willie Edouin, and to be quite frank I was not much impressed by the international company now selected to take their places. It has, however, to be admitted that "The Belle of Bond Street" is more of a go-as-you-please entertainment than a musical play. It has freak dances, freak costumes, and freak songs, the most remarkable of the latter being one which has a refrain about "Rip Van Winkle's Rent when Rip was not at home." Mr. Sam Bernard, who takes the part originated by Willie Edouin, is a clever eccentric comedian who in this instance speaks English according to the American stage-manner of imitating naturalised German Jews. He is also a good dancer. But he never came near Willie Edouin's creation of the rich, vulgar, yet kindly and lonely fellow that they called Hoggenheimer. I did not like Miss Ina Claire half as well as Miss Ethel Irving, and why the management put on a scene wherein she had to give imitations after the manner of Miss Elsie Janis at the Palace Theatre, I cannot imagine. Does it mean that theatres are to begin and copy the music-halls? J. W.

Just Missed It.

There is something to amuse in the introductory business of the strange entertainment called "As It Used to Be," presented for the first time at the Little Theatre on Tuesday evening. Mr. Bertram Forsyth's scheme is to present a number of fragments of old plays given, as he conceives they were given, in old London theatres between 1750 and 1810. The stage has its entrance doors on either side of the curtain, and chairs placed without them for actors representing the wealthy patrons who purchased such seats. Before the actual performance began we had one of the players come on, taper in hand, to light the floats, followed by the appearance at the harpsichord of a young musician to represent the Young Mozart. Mr. Forsyth spoke a prologue then, and through the gangway in the auditorium led a short procession to represent a royal personage and his suite who, for the rest of the evening, remained seated near the stage. Short snatches of plays, intended in all cases to be very funny, were acted, but although the idea had humour in it its interpretation fell rather flat, because few were prepared to accept those actors' estimate of the old-time players, and in no case did they display the humour they thought they did.

AS IT USED TO BE.

MOZART.

Mozart appeared at the Little Theatre (Haymarket) on Feb. 12th, 1765. He played on the Harpsichord. 'All the overtures were of the boy's own composition.'

DOUGLAS.

This beautiful tragedy, written by the Rev. John Home, was produced at Covent Garden Theatre in 1757. The author was disgracefully dispelled the Kirk of Scotland and deprived of all his Church preferments for having written one of the first dramatic poems which graced the British stage!'

THE YOUNG ROSCIUS.

Better known as Master Betty. The finest example of infant precocity in the annals of the English stage. It is known that Pitt once adjourned the House of Commons that the members might go and see Master Betty perform. Everybody in the land, from the King and Queen, downwards, vied with each other to do him honour. During the 5 years of his popularity he amassed a great fortune and retired from the stage.

His re-appearance as a grown man was a signal failure.

"ROMEO" COATES.

This interesting and bizarre gentleman drew all London by his remarkable performances of 'Romeo.'

Although possessing no shred of dramatic ability, this 'amateur of fashion,' nevertheless captivated the audience by the grotesque rendering of the part.

His death-scene was so ludicious that the audience insisted upon its being repeated, and, had not Juliet risen from her tomb and objected, he would probably have continued to 'die' throughout the night!

HAMLET.

This is an attempt to realize the conditions of the stage when David Garrick was in his prime. The episodes depicted lay claim to historical accuracy.

THE BEGGAR'S OPERA.

'The Beggar's Opera,' which was written by John Gay, was the outcome of a chance remark of the famous Dean Swift, who one day suggested to the author that it would be amusing to do a 'Newgate Pastoral.' Gay caught at the idea, and shortly afterwards, in 1726, 'The Beggar's Opera' was produced. Its success was instantaneous, and it had the, then, unprecedented run of 63 nights, so that even in those days musical comedy was a thing to conjure with. It afterwards captivated the provinces, and remained a standing dish in the traffic of the stage for more than a hundred years.

PROGRAMME.

On TUESDAY, JUNE 9th, 1914, and every Evening at a quarter before 9 p.m.

1. THE YOUNG MOZART (impersonated by IVOR NOVELLO) will play an overture on the Harpsichord.

2. The Arrival of "A ROYAL PERSONAGE," (impersonated by KENNETH DENNYS) and his suite (impersonated by GROSVENOR NORTH and RALEIGH KING) conducted to their seats by the Leading Actor of the theatre, Mr. John Philip Kemble (impersonated by BERTRAM FORSYTH) bearing a branched candelabrum.

3. BERTRAM FORSYTH as John Philip Kemble will speak the

Prologue

(Specially written for this occasion by Arthur Scott Craven).

4. An Act of a Tragedy, called

Douglas

In which Master Betty, otherwise THE INFANT ROSCIUS (impersonated by Della Pointer) will appear as Norval

Supported by:
Mrs. Siddons (impersonated by MARJORIE PATTERSON) as Lady Randolph
Mr. Kemble (.. .. BERTRAM FORSYTH) as Lord Randolph
Mr. Palmer (.. .. ALAN BRETT) as Glenalvon
Miss Collins (.. .. SYBILLE GEOFFRIES) as Anna

AN INTERVAL OF 8 MINUTES.

IVOR NOVELLO will play the Harpsichord.

5. A Scene from a Tragedy called

Romeo and Juliet

In which Mr. "ROMEO" COATES, an amateur of fashion (impersonated by NIGEL PLAYFAIR) will appear as Romeo.

Supported by: Miss HILLIARD as Juliet.
Mr. BRETT as Paris.
Mr. HILLIARD as Balthasar.

The Royal Personage and Suite will be conducted to the Green Room

AN INTERVAL OF 8 MINUTES.

IVOR NOVELLO will play a selection of Songs by David Garrick on the Harpsichord.

6. A Scene from a Tragedy called

Hamlet

In which DAVID GARRICK (impersonated by BERTRAM FORSYTH) will appear as Hamlet.

Supported by:
Mrs. Abington (impersonated by BEATRICE SMITH) as The Queen
Mr. Mills (.. .. STAFFORD HILLIARD) as The Ghost

Playgoers of the period who will occupy seats on the stage:
The Widow Bolsover (impersonated by JOAN DILLA)
Sir Barnably Boastful (.. .. ALAN BRETT)
Lord Englefield (.. .. MOFFAT JOHNSTON)
Charlotte (his niece) (.. .. SYBILLE GEOFFRIES)
The Orange Girl (.. .. DORIS HARDY)

INTERVAL OF 10 MINUTES.

IVOR NOVELLO will play a selection of Old English Songs on the Harpsichord.

7. The Piece to conclude with an Act of a Musical Entertainment called

The Beggar's Opera

In which EVANGELINE HILLIARD will appear as Polly Peachum

(This being her first appearance in this part, she will be introduced to the audience by the leading actor of the theatre).

She will be supported by:
HANNAH JONES as Mrs. Peachum
MOFFAT JOHNSON as Peachum
LAURENCE LEONARD as Captain Macheath

The Epilogue will be spoken by BERTRAM FORSYTH

VIVAT REX!

The Scene has been designed by GERALD FORSYTH. The Costumes are by B. J. SIMMONS & Co. The Scenery painted by WALTER JOHNSTONE.

The Harpsichord has been kindly lent by DANIEL MAYER, Esq.

The Cloak worn by Mr. Forsyth belonged to Macready, and the Sword used in "Hamlet" belonged to Kean. The Harpsichord, kindly lent by Daniel Mayer Esq., was bought by Napoleon for the Empress Marie Louise.

Bertram Forsyth wishes to express his thanks to MOFFAT JOHNSTON for his valuable assistance in the reproduction of all the old stage movements and technique.

Stage Manager ... ... STAFFORD HILLIARD.

MATINEE—Thursday and Saturday, at 3 o'clock.

Little Theatre
9/6/1914
STALL
D 2
This to be retained

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1914.

MONEY-MAKING IN THE THEATRES.

THE ELEMENT OF LUCK.

By JAMES WATERS.

Theatre Land of London is now experiencing the last phases of the season, for the calendar of the play producer, the actor, and the dramatist sets down September as the first month of the new year.

And that great stay-at-home London, that real lover of the theatre, that knows its playhouse, and the players that its applause has made rich and famous, is content also to regard these summer months as the end of things, and so leaves Theatre Land to other people from the country.

But Theatre Land in June is yet wonderfully interesting notwithstanding that those who dwell near London the year round affect to regard the long days as a close season. They want the autumn and winter for playgoing, when the short days draw the curtains about the great city to make a fitting background for the glow of the red-light drama.

In the measure of the amusements that the theatres offer there is little, if any, difference between this season of the year and the autumn. The difference is to be found in character. In the autumn London goes out at night to see the new plays the managers have announced in August. When the days are long, and people have to get into the theatres before the daylight has begun to disappear in the yellow haze about the street-lamps, your genuine Londoner good-naturedly feels superior and affects to believe that there is nothing new to be seen, and so goes home.

* * * * *

He is wrong. Play Land takes new shades of colour in June. Who can forget the sight of that great road from Knightsbridge that enters the region of the theatres and restaurants, by Piccadilly . . . . London in the glory of the sunset, when wealth and fashion ride into that quarter where the great artists of the drama, of the opera, and variety are billed to appear in nigh two score theatres?

One can see a great drama in that living picture on any of these fine nights in June. And, just think of it, the rivalry, the efforts, the inspiration, the money that have been set in motion to attract that crowd each evening to Theatre Land.

London draws the talent of the world to its stage. No other city can compare with it in its cosmopolitan character. Covent Garden has its three distinct companies in the early summer, German, Italian, French, and at the head of each company are singers of every nationality, European and American, bearing names the most famous in the singing world. Light-hearted folk, too, these are. Meet them in the morning when they stroll down to the theatre—when they talk of the hot days of July and August, and the cool retreat, a tiny cottage, built or borrowed, near the sky, up on a mountain side in the Alps or the Pyrenees. Those great singers have more of the simplicity of youth in their manner, more capacity for happiness, than any other class of artist that appears on the stage of a theatre.

And look at the luck that has carried many of them to fortune. Signor Caruso, running away from home to avoid becoming a mechanical engineer, now getting five hundred pounds every night he sings. Mr. John McCormack too, has had luck. One day seven years ago, almost friendless in London, he attended a voice trial at a certain "musical play" theatre. It is the foremost of its kind in Europe, and he wanted to get there. The manager was away. His stage manager heard the young singer, and without artistic perception offered him two pounds a week for chorus work, but as that stage manager refused him the work of understudying he walked out. Now he can get his two hundred pounds for every concert he cares to give in America, and in England and Italy he ranks among the greatest singers of the day. But, surely some unforeseen chance sometimes helps to bring fame or fortune to those engaged in the art or enterprise of the theatre.

* * * * *

Take "My Lady's Dress," for instance, playing at the Royalty Theatre. The advance booking of seats did not amount to ten pounds after the curtain was taken up on the first night. Now the house sells out to its utmost capacity at every performance. His Majesty's Theatre, too, one of the largest houses presenting plays in the West End, has no seats to sell to late arrivals, and here the great advertisement that drew the town's attention had its origin in the staggering surprise of hearing a woman innocently using a word, or a phrase, very much in favour with dustmen invited to pay more for beer than they consider right and fair.

What of Drury Lane Theatre just now? Russians on the stage, singing in Russian, a language that not one per cent. of the audience understands. An understanding of the sung words is, apparently, quite unnecessary in opera. Few who go to Covent Garden could tell whether the language of the opera was French, German, or Italian. "You leave your intelligence in the cloakroom," someone said (or said something like it), "when you go to the Opera." And Sir Joseph Beecham, who has spent tens of thousands in presenting opera in London, suddenly exchanged German for Russian last year, and now at Drury Lane Theatre enjoys the luxury of giving the public something he likes without losing the money he expected the enterprise would cost him.

* * * * *

Up in Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, at the Scala Theatre, a Russian actress, the wife of a Russian prince, has been presenting plays. About a mile towards the east in Drury-lane, at the Middlesex Music Hall, by Clare Market, a company from the Bataclan Theatre, Paris, reinforced constantly by new stars of the Paris variety stage, has been giving revues in French for more than twelve months past, and the little gentlemen and ladies of the neighbourhood—too young to go to school, but just old enough to risk their lives every hour of the day and evening in the street—have now ceased to gaze in wonder at the coronets on the dazzling limousines that draw up at the house which in other days was "the good old Mo."

And "Potash and Perlmutter" is another signal example of London's readiness to give a whole-hearted welcome to strangers who come here with an attractive entertainment. Before its production at the Queen's Theatre, London had never heard of the authors of this human and amusing story of two humble New York Jews in the wholesale clothing business. Now that story fills the theatre to the doors every night!

The luck of plays and players is a curious thing. At the New Theatre, in St. Martin's-lane, Mr. Cyril Maude is playing every night with the confidence of an actor-manager who knows that the "House Full" boards are telling only the simple truth to passers-by. His play "Grumpy" was a lucky find. He happened one day to tell Mr. Dion Boucicault that he wanted a play very badly. "Do you know of one?" he asked. Mr. Boucicault after a while remembered that he had sent a drama to New York to Mr. Charles Frohman, who wanted one for one of his star actors over there. The star actor did not like it. So the piece was returned. That was "Grumpy." Mr. Maude read it. He took it to New York last winter, and an unfashionable theatre was packed for 200 consecutive performances with the best audiences the Empire city can boast of. He will resume the run with it over there after the London season, when the great heat is exhausted in America, and, according to estimates of experts, Mr. Maude will get three years' business with this one play in America and make enough money to build a cathedral, should his ambition soar in that direction.

1012
Waters, J.
Plays

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors The Executors of the late Mr EDGAR BRUCE

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Thursday, June 11th, at 8.15.

ALLAN AYNESWORTH and BRONSON ALBERY

A Comedy in Four Acts entitled

"An Indian Summer."

By JYTTIE HORLICK.

[illegible]	Mr ALLAN AYNESWORTH
[illegible]	Miss EDYTHE GOODALL
[illegible]	Mr DONALD CALTHROP
[illegible]	Miss DOROTHY MINTO
[illegible]	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
[illegible]	Mr SAM SOTHERN
[illegible]	Miss DOROTHY FANE
[illegible]	Miss DOROTHY McNEILL
Butler to Sir Nigel	Mr [illegible]RAM PHILLIPS
[illegible]	Mr AUSTIN TREMAN

ACT I Morning Room in Nigel Parry's House in the country

ACT II Study in Sir Nigel's Flat in Whitehall

ACT III The Hall of Vivian's Country House in Devonshire

ACT IV Ursula's Boudoir in Lady Parry's House near London

[illegible] Sir Nigel [illegible] Act I and II

The Play produced by Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

[illegible]

"AN INDIAN SUMMER" 8.45. "A VALUABLE RIVAL" 8.15

First Matinee Wednesday, June 17th, and Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

The J. H. SQUIRE Celeste Sextette will play the following Music

[illegible]

THE TIMES.

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1914.

Helen was a wife of high principles, which did not prevent her from rummaging through her husband's letters so soon as his back was turned. Of course she found the fatal letter that told her "everything," and Nigel, when taxed, denied nothing. So Helen determined to separate from him. Some ten years elapsed, and then Helen (the other lady, it appears, being dead) called on Nigel, now Sir Nigel, to discuss their son Vivian's infatuation for a young actress, Miss Ursula. Helen's high principles included an objection to the stage, and the boy's infatuation must be stopped. Unfortunately the young people had that very morning got married and taken Sir Nigel into their confidence, because he was so good and so kind. In fact, Sir Nigel simply wandered about, being good and kind all his time, with a romantic air of melancholy thrown in to make him all the more interesting. Helen made a wry face over the marriage, but, to show that she too could be generous, presented the happy pair with her house in Bryanston-square, while good and kind papa promised a sufficient allowance to keep it up.

Later they were all down in the country and Ursula was "expecting," as the matrons say, and Sir Nigel went on wandering about, being good and kind and romantically melancholy in a beautiful summer suit. But silly Vivian had left a loaded pistol lying about, and of course foolish Ursula played with it and shot herself, while Vivian was away. Everybody promised to fib about the accident, so as to spare Vivian's feelings; but Helen found out about the pistol and, still as high-principled as ever, insisted on telling Vivian, not knowing that it was his naughty, naughty carelessness that was really the cause of the mischief. So Vivian was told, and Helen was stricken with remorse at finding what she had done, and confessed that from first to last she had simply hated Ursula out of jealousy. Thereupon there was some abnormal kissing, and Sir Nigel looked more good and kind than ever, and evidently all was forgiven and they were all going to live happily ever afterwards.

This remarkable work had a remarkably friendly reception from last night's audience. They seemed to be quite content to see poor Miss Edyth Goodall going about a martyr to high principles and a monumental vocabulary. (She told her husband she had "secured" a luncheon basket, and by and by, in an emotional crisis, discoursed of "environment.") They admired Mr. Aynesworth's dignified bearing and nice summer clothes and his amiable weakness for blue eyelids. They laughed heartily at Mr. Sam Sothern with nothing at all to do. All this was wonderfully good-humoured and "sporting" of them. After all, whatever nasty cynics may say, first night audiences can be quite sweet, when they like. Indeed, there was every excuse for sweetness over the charming performance of Miss Ellen O'Malley as everybody's sympathetic friend, and of Miss Dorothy Minto as naughty, wilful, winning little Ursula.

1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Sole Lessee and Manager,
TOM B. DAVIS.

Telephone 3243 Gerrard

APOLLO THEATRE,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE,
LONDON, W.

June 9th, 1914.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by Mr. TOM B. DAVIS to enclose herewith vouchers for Thursday Evening, June 11th, 1914.

WHEN

JAMES WELCH

WILL REVIVE

When Knights Were Bold

By CHARLES MARLOWE

The Curtain will rise at 8.30.

In the event of you, or your representative being unable to be present, will you kindly return the Voucher at your early convenience to

Yours truly,

A. C. BELSEY,

Manager for Tom B. Davis.

JAMES WELCH'S

REVIVAL OF

When Knights Were Bold

Sir Guy de Vere	Mr. JAMES WELCH
Isaac Isaacson	C. F. LLOYD
Hon. Charles Widdicombe	GEORGE DESMOND
Rev. Peter Pottlebury, D.D.	COLIN JOHNSTONE
Sir Brian Ballymote	DENIS J. HOGAN
Wittle	STANLEY YOURKE
Barker	GEORGE CHILD
A Herald	HERBERT RANSON
Lady Rowena Eggington	Miss ISLA GLYNN
Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave	MABEL YOUNGE
Miss Sara Isaacson	MURIEL KIDNER
Lady Millicent Eggington	PEGGIE KENNEDY
Lady Marjorie Eggington	QUEENIE THOMAS
Kate Pottlebury	STEPHANIE BELL
Alice Barker	VIOLET GRAHAM

Act I.	.	The Knight's Room, Beechwood Towers 1906
Act II.	.	The Battlements, 1196.
Act III.	.	The Knight's Room, 1906.

Success Revived.

At the Apollo Theatre on Thursday evening the play "When Knights Were Bold" was revived, with Mr. James Welch in his original part. He was the only member of the cast that appeared in the original production at Wyndham's Theatre on January 29, 1907, but as it is really a one-part play that change of company is not an important fact. By the by, that year, 1907, was a famous one for long runs, plays that got them: Think of "Merry Widow," "Miss Hook of Holland," "When Knights Were Bold," "The Girls of Gettenburg," "Brewster's Millions," "The Mollusc," and "Lady Froderick." They all made heaps of money, and the shortest run exceeded 300 performances.

J. W.

3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Empire Theatre

Programme

PROGRAMME.

THURSDAY, JUNE 11th, 1914

OVERTURE "Parisian Belles"

1 The Gomez Trio,
Spanish Dancers

2 SELECTION [illegible]

3 "THE MERRY-GO-ROUND"

[illegible]

Cast.

Act I

Offices of Venus, Limited

WELLINGTON CROSS
LAURIE ARNOLD
DOROTHY MONKMAN
PEGGY RAE
PEGGY ROSS Messenger

SUPPLIES OF ICE

DAPHNE GLENN
TOM SMITH
[illegible] DOVE

Musical Numbers

Tick, Tack, to the Tape — WELLINGTON CROSS
Love — DAPHNE GLENN
Put your Hats on, Girls — WELLINGTON CROSS

Scene 2 Reception Room at a Dressmakers' Establishment

Sackman

FASHIONS

Maid — WELLINGTON CROSS
A Dressmaker — NORAH MAY
A Customer ... ... — PHYLLIS BEDELLS

Models: Debutante, Lou Owen; Golf Girl, Eva Goddard; Tennis Girl, Nina Raymond; Futurists, Marjorie Sargent and Diana Dering; Riding Girls, L. Carleton and Amy Elliott.

Dance des Modes ... — PHYLLIS BEDELLS

POSES

The Tickler Pearl Girl — NORAH BAYES
A Photographer ... ... — HARRY ROXBURY
M. De Trop ... ... — M. MORTON

The Mind-Your-Back Girls: Misses Bennett, Elliott, Owen, Daniel, Hanbury, Heath, Howard, Vernon, Crawley, Carleton

Musical Numbers

Song "How Long Have You Been Married" NORAH BAYES

Song "Mind Your Backs" NORAH BAYES and CHORUS

3724
1014
Waters, J.
Plays

Scene 3

The Edge of the World

SACKMAN

Presented by I. ROUSBY and M. TEUBER

A Creation of Hyperfuturistic Impressions and Strange Phenomena in Living & Combating Colours

[illegible] HERMAN FINCK

Scene 4

The Green Park

ARTHUR TERRAINE

A BIT OLD FASHIONED

LOIS JOSEPHINE
WELLINGTON CROSS

THE GREAT UNWASHED

JAMES GODDEN
RENE KOVAL
VIOLET LEACH

BEATING THE BAND

HARRY ROXBURY
JAMES GODDEN
A. H. MAJILTON
C. ALEXANDER
ERNEST VINCENT
HARRY CLARKE

Racegoers, Bandsmen, &c

Musical Numbers

"There She Goes" — NORAH BAYES

"Martial Music" — HARRY CLARKE

MY LITTLE COTTAGE

NORAH BAYES

LES ENFANTS TERRIBLES

RENE KOVAL
HARRY ROXBURY
M. MORTON

Musical Numbers

"Mary" — CROSS and JOSEPHINE
"Don't Know, Don't Care" — JAMES GODDEN and RENE KOVAL
"My Little Cottage" — NORAH BAYES
"The Infant Prodigies" — RENE KOVAL, HARRY ROXBURY and M. MORTON

Scene 5

A Fête at the Palais Royale in 1796

ARTHUR

Danse des Culottes — PHYLLIS BEDELLS and A. H. MAJILTON
Song — "Plaisir d'Amour" — MARY MASSART

Act II.

A Racecourse Lawn

SACKMAN

THE TOUT ON THE FIELD

DOROTHY MONKMAN
J. A. JARMAN
HUGHIE E. WRIGHT
BLAIR HEADSWORTH
WILL ROGERS

"THERE SHE GOES"

NORAH BAYES

Scene 1

A Punter
Her Turf Adviser
A Bookmaker
His Clerk
A Busker

A Lady Punter

Scene 2

Song ...

Scene 3

Le Vrai Chic

Les Faux Chics

Scene 4

Men
Girls

Two Tramps
Second Tramp
The Passing Show

First Bandsman
Second Bandsman
Third Bandsman
A Racecourse Official
A Waiter
The Bandmaster

Song

Song

The Wanderer

Master Asquith
Peter Pan
Wilky Ferrero

Song
Duet

Song

Trio

In the Days of the Fan

DAPHNE GLENN

Le Vrai et le Faux Chic

(After Seas)

Mlle. MARY MASSART
JAMES GODDEN
HARRY ROXBURY
RENE KOVAL
HUGHIE E. WRIGHT
M. MORTON
HARRY CLARKE

Scene 4

The Garden of Flowers

ROSSIN

(a.) Valse — "Czibulka" — ALEXANDRA BALACHOWA and MICHAEL MORDKIN

(b.) Two Tarantulas — Glazounow — ALEXANDRA BALACHOWA

(c.) Arrow Dance — Tschaikowsky — MICHAEL MORDKIN

(d.) The Blind Violinist — Scott — ALEXANDRA BALACHOWA and MICHAEL MORDKIN

Scene 5

The Courtyard, Savoy Hotel

[illegible] SMITH

AMERICANS IN LONDON

CROSS & JOSEPHINE
ERNEST VINCENT

"NO PLACE TO GO"

HUGHIE E. WRIGHT
G. SACKVILLE TOMLIN
VIOLET LEACH
H. TURNBULL

WALTZ

NORAH BAYES
M. MORTON

Musical Numbers

"Dixie" — CROSS & JOSEPHINE
"All Dressed Up" — HUGHIE E. WRIGHT
"Waltz" — NORAH BAYES

Two Visitors
A Waiter

A Gentleman All Dressed Up
A Member of Murray's
A Show Lady
A Detective

A Savoyite
M. De Trop

Song
Song
Song

Scene 6

The Mosaic Ball

[illegible] WESLEY
PHYLLIS BEDELLS
PHYLLIS BEDELLS
M. MORTON
KATHLEEN WALKER
ALEXANDRA BALACHOWA
MICHAEL MORDKIN

A RAGTIME DRAMA

HARRY CLARKE
NORAH BAYES

The Host
A Guest

Dance

M. De Trop
His Partner

Dance — Bachmann

The Lover
The Girl

Musical Numbers

Dance — PHYLLIS BEDELLS
Dance — M. MORTON and KATHLEEN WALKER
Bacchanale — Glazounow — ALEXANDRA BALACHOWA and MICHAEL MORDKIN
Scena — NORAH BAYES
The Mosaic Glide — NORAH BAYES and HARRY CLARKE

D-10
3724
101
Moore.
Plays

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

"THE MERRY-GO-ROUND."

FEAST OF SCENERY AND DANCES AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE.

No descriptive phrase can give an adequate notion of the fanciful entertainment presented at the Empire Theatre last evening by Mr. Alfred Butt. He calls it "The Merry-Go-Round." There is no attempt at a plot: therefore he does not call it a musical play. It is not very much concerned with current events, nor with public men and women, therefore he does not call it a revue. Its main features are a succession of wondertully beautiful scenes, of beautiful women, of famous dancers, and a general effect of artistic fancy.

Of the twelve scenes there are seven of merit, and most of these indicate the artistic influence of the French stage, due, of course, to M. P. L. Flers, who invented the mise-en-scène. Each scene serves its turn to make an appropriate background for the dancers, the singers, and other artists. Were never a soul to appear in front of them some of the scenes would by their own beauty provide sufficient attraction.

WONDERFUL ILLUSION.

"The Edge of the World" conjures up a moonlit sea, changes to the bed of the ocean, shows a riot of dissolving colours, and ends with a dayhreak effect of peace on a calm sea. It is wonderful illusion, a strange contrast to the glory of a fête at the Palais Royal, 1796, which follows it.

One of the smaller and prettier offerings of "The Merry-Go-Round" is a scene in French grey and pink with just a fragment of a ballet of fans to give it movement, followed by a curiously comical representation in life and colour of a fashion caricature, after the manner of Sem. There is a garden of flowers also that will delight all that see it—a green field with wild flowers in the fold of the tree-girt hills, and M. Michael Mordkin and Mlle. Batachowa dancing there to complete the attraction. And as if the feast of pictures had not been sufficiently varied and wonderful, Mr. Butt presented for the finale a perfect setting described as a Mosaic Ball.

Besides M. Mordkin and Mlle. Balachowa, Miss Phyllis Bedells was there to charm her English admirers. Paris sent over M. Morton and Mlle. Mary Massart. Miss I. Josephine from New York danced and sang well, and Miss Norah Bayes, of American fame, made her London début. J. W.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE

Proprietor .. .. Mr. J. H. Leigh
Under the Joint Management of Mr. J. H. Leigh and Mr. R. T. E. Neeves

THE IRISH PLAYERS

Monday, Tuesday & Wednesday Evenings, June 15th, 16th & 17th at 8.30. Matinee Wednesday at 2.30

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON OF

"THE COBBLER"

A PLAY IN ONE ACT BY A. PATRICK WILSON.
(Produced by the Author).

A COBBLER	A. PATRICK WILSON
A PLOUGHMAN	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
A FARMER	H. E. HUTCHINSON
A VILLAGE GOSSIP	KATHLEEN DRAGO
A SCHOOL-MASTER	PHILIP GUIRY
A SCHOOL-BOY	FELIX HUGHES
SCENE	The Cobbler's Shop in an Antrim Village

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON OF

"THE CANAVANS"

A FOLK-HISTORY PLAY IN THREE ACTS BY LADY GREGORY.

THE WIDOW GREELY	EITHNE MAGEE
THE WIDOW DEENY	KATHLEEN DRAGO
PETER CANAVAN (The Miller) ..	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
ANTONY CANAVAN (His Brother) ..	PHILIP GUIRY
CAPTAIN HEADLEY (His Cousin) ..	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
SCENE. Acts I and III ..	The Mill Room at Scartana
Act II.	A Room at the Castle.

Amusing Irish Play.

Lady Gregory's three-act folk-history play, "The Canavans," presented by the Irish Players at the Court Theatre on Monday, was a comical business that showed us an impossible but very enjoyable episode in the life of an Irish miller in the days of Queen Elizabeth. The piece owed much of its success to the ability of Mr. Arthur Sinclair, the first comedian of the company.

3724
1014
Theatr. Plays

On TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, at 9 p.m.

Miss NANCY PRICE and Mr. LYN HARDING

present

"A SCRAP OF PAPER"

By VICTORIEN SARDOU. Adapted by FREDERICK FENN.

Francis Lightly	..	Mr. LYN HARDING
Lord Icebrook	..	Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
Professor Horatio Titmouse	..	Mr. H. O. NICHOLSON
	(By kind permission of Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER and Miss LILIAN MCCARTHY)
Sydney Wynne	(his Ward) ..	Mr. JACK HOBBS
Percival	(Servant to Lord Icebrook) ..	Mr. OSWALD MARSHALL
James	(Francis Lightly's Servant) ..	Mr. PETER P. MILLAR
Lucy, Lady Icebrook	..	Miss MARGARET HALSTAN
Susan Lawless	..	Miss NANCY PRICE
Barbara Merivale	..	Miss MIELE MAUND
Zenobia Titmouse	..	Miss ANNIE ESMOND
Mrs. Berry	..	Miss ANNIE HILL
Pauline	(Maid to Lady Icebrook) ..	Miss ROWENA JEROME

Act I. .. The Drawing Room at Leverstoke Manor
Act II. .. The Museum-wing in Professor Titmouse's House
Act III. .. .. Conservatory at Leverstoke Manor

TIME—THE EARLY "SIXTIES."

Furniture supplied by J. S. Lyon. The Mummy used in Act II is of English Manufacture.

Preceded at 8.30 p.m. by a One-Act Drama, entitled

"THE RECEIPT"

By ANTON MOROV.

Ossip	.. (an Innkeeper) ..	Mr. LYN HARDING
Matka	(his wife) ..	Miss NANCY PRICE
Philka	(their son) ..	Mr. MATTHEW BOULTON
Ephraim	..	Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE

SCENE .. The Landing of an Inn in a small Polish Town

The Play produced by Mr. NORMAN PAGE.

First Matinee (of both Plays) Wednesday, June 24, at 2.30.

Business Manager .. Mr. OSWALD R. DAWSON
Stage Manager .. Mr. OSWALD MARSHALL
Assistant Stage Manager .. Mr. PETER P. MILLAR

Nea CRITERION THEATRE to this Theatre, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.

June 16
E
Orchestra Stall
D 73

Interesting Revival.

There is no reason for finding fault with "A Scrap of Paper," revived at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday evening, because in some respects it bears an old-fashioned air. That old-fashionedness is one of the greatest attractions of the revival, much more, indeed, than the clockwork regularity with which the story works its way to an end. Mr. Lyn Harding carried the play along in a manner that showed the possession of exceptional stage personality and ability. Miss Margaret Halstan looked very beautiful, and played the part of Lucy Lady Icebrook with distinction. J. W.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
Wednesday
Evening
June 17
Orchestra Stl 10/6
No J 21
This to be retained
This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17TH, 1914, AT 8.30
(Subsequent Evenings at 9.0),

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

Driven

A New Play in Four Acts,
By E. TEMPLE THURSTON.

J. N. Staffurth, M.P.	....	C. AUBREY SMITH
Captain Furness	....	OWEN NARES
	(By arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie)
Sir William Medlicott, M.D.	....	E. LYALL SWETE
A. F. Maudslay, M.D.	....	CYRIL HARCOURT
Passby-Evans, M.D.	....	JOHN HOWELL
Usher	....	REGINALD BACH
Diana Staffurth	....	ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Barbara Cullen	....	RUTH MACKAY
Holton	....	CONSTANCE CONNELLY
A Maid	....	MAUD E. BELL

Time—The Present.

Act I.—The Drawing Room in Staffurth's House, Lowndes Square. October. 4.30 p.m.

Act II.—The Same, six months later.

Act III.—Scene 1.—Captain Furness's Room in St. James's. The same evening—11.30 p.m.

Scene 2.—The Same. The next morning—10.30 a.m.

The curtain will fall for a few seconds between Scenes 1. and II to mark the passage of time.

Act IV.—Same as Act I. A few minutes anterior to the conclusion of Act III.

The Play produced for FREDERICK HARRISON by E. LYALL SWETE.

D-10
3724
1014
Theatre. Plays

THE Haymarket Theatre is so elegant and comfortable that the author who is so fortunate as to have a play produced there by Mr. Frederick Harrison must always be accounted to have an extra chance or two secured in his favour. I think E. Temple Thurston, whose new four-act comedy "Driven" was produced there on Wednesday, was fortunate, for the audience was on good terms with itself and accepted his drama in the most friendly way. "Driven" is by no manner of means a very good play, but it has some good points. The good points are, however, wholly theatrical. It would be impossible to imagine any people doing in life what the characters in this play do. Not one of them is real, so when Diana Staffurth plays eavesdropper and overhears the doctors tell her husband that she has no more than two years to live, we give the statement no weight whatever, for the doctors act, talk, and generally conduct themselves like the comic doctors of opera bouffe. It makes good entertainment, but it knocks the bottom out of all pretensions to accept the story seriously.

A Stage Dog.

Diana takes the opinion of the doctors with a tragic moan. She makes up her mind at once that her husband will not tell her the awful news, already known to her. He will treat her like a child. And he does. And then, Diana, with this imaginary grievance against the husband she loves and is loved by, swears she will "live," and ten minutes later we find her at the piano singing a neurotic song, while a youthful-looking captain hangs across the instrument drinking in her words. A tragic separation follows—the youthful captain must go out to the Gold Coast to quell that awful rebellion, kept alive through all ages for dramatists who must have such a situation. In this case nothing comes of it. That's the worst of "Driven." Situations arise and nothing comes of them. So it happens all through the play, which if it had been written in the easy, witty manner of "Never Say Die," might have been the best light comedy in London. As it is, there is much that is good in it. Only somehow there was little to surprise us at the end, for we all guessed that Diana would be cured—we never heard what her illness was—that the young captain would turn out a poor lot, and that the heroine and her husband would be reconciled. Diana looked too young and charming altogether for that deadly dull husband, but at the end of the story he made her a present of a tiny Pekinese terrier, and when we saw the "doglet" on the stage drinking milk from a saucer there was much applause and some calls for the author. Miss Alexandra Carlisle acted delightfully. Mr. Owen Nares made the very most of the young captain, and Mr. E. Lyall Swete as a comic doctor was exquisitely funny. There was more to laugh at than cry about in "Driven." S.M.

Sole Lessee and Manager,
TOM B. DAVIS.

Telephone 3243 Gerrard

APOLLO THEATRE,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE,
LONDON, W.

June 18th, 1914.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by Mr. TOM B. DAVIS to enclose herewith voucher for

Friday Evening, June 19th, 1914

WHEN

JAMES WELCH

Will Produce a New One Act Play entitled

Head First

By ARTHUR ECKERSLEY

The Curtain will rise at 8.15.

To be followed at 8.45 by

When Knights Were Bold

Head First

Peter Mansell	GEORGE DESMOND
Dr. Binyon	STANLEY YOURKE
Bush (Peter's Servant)	J. H. KERSLEY
Miss Tremaine (Peter's Aunt)	MABEL YOUNGE
Evelyn Blake	VIOLET GRAHAM
Miss Wood (Miss Tremaine's Companion)	MARGUERITE BELLONA

Scene — Peter Mansell's Flat, London

On Friday Mr. Welch prefaced the gay farce with a new first piece, "Head First," by Mr. Arthur Eckersley. "Head First" makes the audience laugh almost as much as "When Knights Were Bold." Out of the adventures of a young man who is expecting a visit from the unknown girl he has been ordered to marry, and a young lady who has lost her memory but turns out to be the expected visitor, Mr. Eckersley has constructed a boisterous little farce, gaily written; and it is very gaily and briskly acted by Mr. George Desmond and Miss Violet Graham as the principals, Mr. Stanley Yourke as a doctor, and others.

5-10
3724
1914
Theatre. Programmes
Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

"LA DAME AUX CAMÉLIAS."

REVIVAL OF DUMAS'S PLAY AT THE SCALA.

Marguérite Gautier	Lydia Yavorska
Olympe	Dorothy Ilma
Saint-Gaudens	Fred Lewis
Prudence	Joan Pereira
Gaston Rieux	Joseph O'Dowd
Armand Duval	Ambrose Flower
Comte de Giray	Frank Darch
Georges Duval	Franklyn Dyall

La Dame aux Camélias is a famous old play, full of memories of great performances—a great play for actresses, who must necessarily be tempted by its various and violent emotions, and who like, each in her turn, to see what she can do to put life into these unrelated, uncharacterized passions. If the actress is great enough she will put character and dignity into them, turning them from the raw material provided by the author into an individual work of art.

This is not the first time, we understand, that Mme. Lydia Yavorska has tried her hand at the raw material. Marguérite Gautier figures in the strikingly long list of her "principal parts," printed in the programme; and anyone who knows her powers and her style will realize that she is not the actress to spare herself in the forcible delineation of the part's emotions. Indeed, her third act (the scene with Duval père and her departure from the cottage) gave the opportunity for more tears and cries than we have ever seen or heard in a single act before.

The production is, on the whole, remarkable for vigour rather than for efficiency; but an exception must be made of the excellent performance of Duval père by Mr. Franklyn Dyall.

LYCEUM THEATRE

180

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... . WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

June 24

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2-30

WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE present

J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S COMPANY in the Popular Musical Play June 24

THE BELLE OF NEW YORK

Characters:

Ichabod Bronson (President of the Young Men's Rescue League and Anti-Cigarette Society of Cohoes)	Mr. M. R. Morand
Harry Bronson (his Son, a Young Spendthrift)	Mr. Herbert St. John
Karl Von Pumpernick (a Polite Lunatic) ...	Mr. Laurence Caird
"Doc" Snifkins (the Father of the Queen of Comic Opera)	Mr. John Sanger
"Blinky Bill" McQuirk (a Mixed-Ale Pugilist)	Mr. Johnnie Schofield, Junr.
Kenneth Mugg (Low Comedian of the Cora Angelique Comic Opera Company) ...	Mr. Walter Uridge
Count Ratsi Tattatoo / Count Patsi Tattatoo (Twin Portuguese Brothers)	Mr. Ernest Gifford / Mr. T. O'Brien
Mr. Twiddles (Harry Bronson's Private Secretary)	Mr. Arthur Lawrence
Mr. Snooper (a Newspaper Reporter) ...	... Mr. Lionel Law
Mr. Peeper (a Photographer)...	Mr. T. D. Macdonald
William (a Butler)	...Mr. Walter Albert
Cora Angelique (a Queen of Comic Opera)	Miss Dorothy Craske
Mamie Clancy (a Pell Street Girl)	... Miss May Ronayne
Kissie Fitzgarter (a Music Hall Dancer) ...	... Miss Lily Gullick
Betty "the Bat"	Miss Bessie Middleton
Pansy Pinns	... Miss Olive Noble
Myrtle Mince	... Miss Dorothy Vint
Birdie Seed	Miss Phyllis Grosvenor
Gladys Glee	... Miss Raie Denton
Dorothy June	... Miss Lilly Brame
Marjory May	... Miss Enid South
Fifi Fricot (a Little Parisienne)	... Miss Julia James

Cora's Bridesmaids and

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. LESLIE HUGHES

Drummer Boys	Miss Winnie Goodwin / Miss Dora Grey
Fricot (Harry Bronson's Chef)	Mr. Tom Macfarlane
A Railway Porter	Mr. Thos. Dixon
Violet Grey (A Salvation Lassie)	Miss Dorothea Clarke

Housemaids, Dancers, Broadway Girls, Guests, Purity Brigade, &c.

ACT 1, Scene 1 THE DINING ROOM OF HARRY BRONSON'S HOUSE ON RIVERSIDE DRIVE, NEW YORK.

Scene 2 ... THE CONSERVATORY OF HARRY BRONSON'S HOUSE.

Scene 3 PELL STREET, NEW YORK, ON THE CHINESE NEW YEAR'S EVE.

ACT 2, Scene 1 FULLER'S CANDY STORE, BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Scene 2 THE INTERIOR OF THE GRAND CENTRAL STATION, NEW YORK.

Scene 3 ON THE LAWN OF THE CASINO AT NARRAGANSETT PIER.

The Play produced by Mr. B. J. PATERSON, under the personal direction of Mr. J. BANNISTER HOWARD.

The Lyceum Orchestra under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

3724
1914
Plays

15

Another Revival.

Another revival of the week was "The Belle of New York," at the Lyceum Theatre, where the famous old tunes of that success of sixteen years ago were warmly welcomed again by an audience willing to accept everything as being for the best. There is no pretence to give the revival an extravagant setting, but even at the Shaftesbury Theatre in 1898 the management did not expend much money on costumes or scenery. The success was secured then because "The Belle of New York" was a genuine novelty. The comedians were young, clever, and resourceful. The ladies playing parts were charming, the chorus was a delight, and Miss Edna May was glorious. No wonder it made a success such as Americans call "a ten strike." I think this revival will win out at the Lyceum because of memories, but in some of the spaces of the evening we sadly missed those American favourites of sixteen years ago.

Miss Edna May's Delight.

Miss Edna May witnessed the performance one evening at the Lyceum, and declared it to be "perfectly sweet." It was really wonderful, she said, after all these years to find all the old business introduced by the new players.

J.W.

THEATRES.

31/8

ALDWYCH.
On and after MONDAY NEXT, the wonderful success,
BELLE OF NEW YORK
(the same company and production as now playing elsewhere), will be TRANSFERRED to the ALDWYCH THEATRE, EVERY EVENING at 8. MAT. WED. and SAT., at 2.30. Popular Prices, 5s. to 6d. Tele., Gerr. 2815. Box-office now open.

Aldwych
THEATRE

27/6/1914

Orch. Stall

B 8
To be retained

SATURDAY, JUNE 27th, 1914, at 8.

A Heritage of Hate

Dramatized by ARTHUR SHIRLEY from CHARLES GARVICE'S Novel of the same title.

CAST:

Rath Rayne, the Man of the Island	SAM LIVESEY
Ben, his Faithful Friend	BY HIMSELF
Lord Hatherley, a County Magistrate	CYRIL GRIER
Ralph Bannister, afterwards Earl of Ratton	FRANK TENNANT
Edward Bryan, an English Gentleman	FRANK G. CARIELLO
Silas Workley, a ne'er do-weel	FRANK WOODVILLE
Jim Spavins, a ne'er-do-work	BILLIE OWEN
Mr. Bulpit, a Lawyer	FRED TERRIS
Inspector Ward, of the County Police	ALBERT CHAPMAN
Magistrate's Clerk	LESLIE GRAY
Court Usher	ALFRED BRAYLE
Jenkins	C. STEPHEN GEARY
Davies, Head Gamekeeper	HENRY A. MATHER
Robertson	TOM HALSTEAD
Williams Gamekeepers	SIDNEY BALE
Lady Mary Hatherley, in love with Bryan	DULCE MUSGRAVE
	(By Permission Mr. Granville Barker)
Nita Bannister, Ralph's Wife	MAUD LINDEN
Mrs. Mordaunt, Stella's Mother	AGNES DAVIDSON
Mrs. Maguire, a Lodging House Keeper	AMY FANCHETTE
Sarah Spavins, Jim's Better Half	EDITH GIDDENS
Stella Mordaunt, the Girl of the Island	MOLLY MALIM

163

ACT I.

SCENE I. Top Floor of a Tenement House in Lambeth.
The Actor. The Earl. The Deserted Wife.

SCENE II. Street in Lambeth.

SCENE III. The Island of Refuge.
The Storm. The Shipwreck. The Dawn. The Meeting. The Heritage of Hate.

ACT II.

(Three Months Later).

SCENE I. Ratton Hall.
The New Earl. The Unwelcome Visitor. The Compact.

SCENE II. The Island of Refuge.
The Stranger. The Quarrel. The Parting. The Island of Loneliness. The Dawn of Love.

ACT III.

(Six Months Later)

SCENE I. he Glade, Ratton Wood.
The Wife. The Husband. The Murder. The Accusation. The Silent Witness. The Arrest. The Escape.

SCENE II. Street in Lambeth.

SCENE III. Nita's Lodgings in Lambeth.
The Letter. The Departure. The Discovery. The Tin Box.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Police Court, Ratton.
The Magistrate's Enquiry. The Unexpected Witness. The Dead Speaks. Murder will out. The Retribution.

SCENE II. Country Lane, Ratton.

SCENE III. Ratton Hall.
The Re-union. The Pleading. The Heritage of Love.

The Play produced by SAM LIVESEY.
STAGE MANAGER - - - GEO. E. CARLETON.

Plays

GARVICE NOVEL AS PLAY.

Last Night's Production of "The Heritage of Hate" at the Aldwych.

By Our Dramatic Critic.

There is a quality of disarming innocence about the whole business of the drama called "The Heritage of Hate," presented at the Aldwych Theatre last evening, that renders criticism quite unnecessary. As an entertainment it is anything but dull. Theatrically it is just as good as some other melodramas that depend on unreal sentiment, lurid thrills, and low comedy. The villain usurping the place of the beautiful hero who is the real heir to a title and estates is an old friend of the theatre, and that same villain made another bold show last night.

Everybody who knows Mr. Charles Garvice, the popular novelist, through his books is aware that he sets out his stories with plenty of incident, detail, and description. The difficulties in the way of presenting one of his romances effectively on the stage must be very great. Last evening's production of Mr. Arthur Shirley's version of "The Heritage of Hate" was a proof of the difficulty. Three hours of a stage play could not convince us about that earldom given for the asking almost to a young man who claimed he was the heir. And then that island in the tropics! Where bears, panthers, seals, and an English sheep dog shared the solitude with the Apollo-like hero who never saw a woman, nor a white man, and was wholly unconscious that at home in England wealth and honours awaited him. It was a splendid idea for a novel, but we failed to take it seriously with make-up and scenery. The wreck destroyed all hope of illusion. The fair waif washed ashore was a bold coincidence. The taming of the Adam on the island was dull work. But eventually maid and islander got home to England—different routes of course, and when that hero cleared himself of a charge of murder, he won the title, he won the maid, and incidentally also, let it be said, he won the applause of the audience.

J W.

AMBASSADORS THEATRE

(Opposite the Palace Theatre)

West Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.

Proprietors - - AMBASSADORS THEATRE. Ltd.
Managing Director - - Mr. HERBERT JAY

Mr. MARCUS DRAPER'S SEASON

June 26th, 1914.

Mr MARCUS DRAPER requests the honour of your presence on THURSDAY EVENING, JULY 2nd, at 8.30 o'clock.

to witness the Performance of the play in Four Acts, entitled

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE,"

By COSMO HAMILTON

Thursday Evening, July 2nd, 1914, at 9 o'clock

Mr. MARCUS DRAPER

PRESENTS

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE,"

By COSMO HAMILTON.

Characters:

The Reverend Henry Pemberton -	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS By Arrangement with Sir Herbert Tree
The Hon. Archibald Graham -	Mr. MARCUS DRAPER
Collins - -	Mr. ROLAND BACHNER
Mrs. Pemberton - -	Miss BARBARA EVEREST
Mrs Simmons -	Miss MARY BRONTON
Mary Ann - -	Miss EVA LEONARD BOYNE
Connie - -	Miss FOLLIE EMERY
Elsie Pemberton - -	Miss DOROTHY HANSON

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

By arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

On Monday Evening, July 6th, 1914, at 9 o'clock

Miss EVA MOORE and Mr. H. V. ESMOND will present a Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

Eliza Comes to Stay

By H. V. ESMOND

The Honble. Sandy Verral - - - - - -	H. V. ESMOND
Alexander Stoop Verral - - - - - - -	FRED GROVE
Montague Jordon - - - - - - - -	ERIC LEWIS
Herbert (A Valet) - - - - - - - -	ARTHUR HAMBLING
Lady Pennybroke - - - - - - - -	ESTELLE DESPA
Vera Laurence - - - - - - - - -	SYBIL WESTMACOTT
Mrs. Allaway - - - - - - - - -	CONSTANCE GROVES
Eliza - - - - - - - - - -	EVA MOORE

Acts I., II. and III. - - Breakfast Room in the Honble. Sandy Verral's Flat in London.

Preceded at 8.15 by

A Play, in One Act, entitled

By G. E. JENNINGS

Muriel - - - - - - - - -	AVICE SCHOLTZ
Alice Palmer (Dark Cat) - - - - - -	DORA GREGORY
May Williams (Fair Cat) - - - - - -	KITTY LOFTING
Olive Reed - - - - - - - -	SYBIL WESTMACOTT
Clarence Reed - - - - - - - -	LESLIE J. BANKS

Scene - - - - - - - - A Room in a Nursing Home

Business Manager (for Eva Moore and H. V. Esmond) - E. L. FURST
Stage Manager - - - - - LESLIE J. BANKS

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1914.

THE NEW RUSSIAN BALLET.

CONVENTIONS IN DANCING.

M. FOKINE'S PRINCIPLES AND AIMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir,—I am extremely grateful to the English Press for the attention which it has given to the "Russian Ballet," now appearing at Drury Lane Theatre, but at the same time I should like to point out certain misconceptions which exist as to the history of that ballet and the principles on which it is founded.

The misconceptions are these, that some mistake this new school of art, which has arisen only during the last seven years, for the traditional ballet which continues to exist in the Imperial theatres of St. Petersburg and Moscow, and others mistake it for a development of the principles of Isadora Duncan, while as a matter of fact the new Russian ballet is sharply differentiated by its principles both from the older ballet and from the art of that great dancer.

THE OLD CONVENTIONS.

The older ballet developed the form of so-called "classical dancing," consciously preferring to every other form the artificial form of dancing on the point of the toe, with the feet turned out, in short bodices, with the figure tightly laced in stays, and with a strictly-established system of steps, gestures, and attitudes. Miss Duncan rejected the ballet and established an entirely opposite form of her own. She introduced natural dancing, in which the body of the dancer was liberated not only from stays and satin slippers, but also from the dance-steps of the ballet. She founded her dancing on natural movements and on the most natural of all dance-forms—namely, the dancing of the ancient Greeks.

The new ballet, which also rejects the conventions of the older ballet, cannot nevertheless be regarded as a follower of Miss Duncan. Every form of dancing is good in so far as it expresses the content or subject with which the dance deals; and that form is the most natural which is most suited to the purpose of the dancer. It would be equally unnatural to represent a Greek Bacchic dance with ballet-steps on the point of the toes, or to represent a characteristic Spanish national dance by running and jumping in a Greek tunic and falling into attitudes copied from paintings on ancient Greek vases. No one form of dancing should be accepted once and for all. Borrowing its subjects from the most various historical periods, the ballet must create forms corresponding to the various periods represented. I am not speaking of ethnographical or archæological exactitude, but of the correspondence of the style of the dancing and gestures with the style of the periods represented. In the course of the ages man has repeatedly changed his plastic language and expressed his joys and sorrows and all his emotions under a great variety of forms, often of extreme beauty. For man is infinitely various, and the manifold expressiveness of his gestures cannot be reduced to a single formula.

The art of the older ballet turned its back on life and on all the other arts and shut itself up in a narrow circle of traditions. According to the old method of producing a ballet, the ballet master composed his dances by combining certain well-established movements and poses, and for his mimetic scenes he used a conventional system of gesticulation, and endeavoured by gestures of the dancers' hands according to established rules to convey the plot of the ballet to the spectator.

THE NEW IDEAS.

In the new ballet, on the other hand, the dramatic action is expressed by dances and mimetic in which the whole body plays a part. In order to create a stylistic picture the ballet master of the new school has to study, in the first place, the national dances of the nation represented, dances differing immensely from nation to nation, and often expressing the spirit of a whole race; and, in the second, the art and literature of the period in which the scene is laid. The new ballet, while recognizing the excellence both of the older ballet and of the dancing of Isadora Duncan in every case where they are suitable to the subject to be treated, refuses to accept any one form as final and exclusive.

If we look at the best productions of sculptural and pictorial art from the point of view of a choreographer of the old school thoroughly versed in the rules of traditional gesticulation and of dancing with the toes turned out we shall find that the marble gods of Greece stood in entirely wrong attitudes; not one of them turned his toes out or held his hands in the positions required by the rules of ballet dancing. Equally faulty from the old-fashioned ballet master's point of view are the majestic statues of Michael Angelo and the expressive figures in the paintings of the Renaissance, to say nothing of the creations of Raphael and of all modern art from Rodin down. If we are to be true to the rules of the older ballet we must turn our backs on the treasures of beauty accumulated by the genius of mankind during thousands of years, and declare them all to be wrong.

If we look from the point of view of the natural dancing of Miss Duncan, the fantastic attitudes of the statues which adorn the temples of India, the severely beautiful figures of ancient Egypt, Assyria, and Babylon, the poetic miniatures of Persia, the water-colours of Japan and China, the art of prehistoric Greece, of the popular chap-books and broadsides of Russia all alike are far removed from the natural movements of man, and cannot be reconciled with any theory of free and natural dancing. And yet they contain an immense store of beauty, an immense variety of taste, and are clear expressions of the character and ideals of the various nations which produced them. Have we any right to reject all this variety for the sake of adherence to a single formula? No.

THE FIVE PRINCIPLES.

Not to form combinations of ready-made and established dance-steps, but to create in each case a new form corresponding to the subject, the most expressive form possible for the representation of the period and the character of the nation represented—that is the first rule of the new ballet.

The second rule is that dancing and mimetic gesture have no meaning in a ballet unless they serve as an expression of its dramatic action, and they must not be used as a mere divertissement or entertainment, having no connexion with the scheme of the whole ballet.

The third rule is that the new ballet admits the use of conventional gesture only where it is required by the style of the ballet, and in all other cases endeavours to replace gestures of the hands by mimetic of the whole body. Man can be and should be expressive from head to foot.

The fourth rule is the expressiveness of groups and of ensemble dancing. In the older ballet the dancers were ranged in groups only for the purpose of ornament, and the ballet master was not concerned with the expression of any sentiment in groups of characters or in ensemble dances. The new ballet, on the other hand, in developing the principle of expressiveness, advances from the expressiveness of the face to the expressiveness of the whole body, and from the expressiveness of the individual body to the expressiveness of a group of bodies and the expressiveness of the combined swaying of a crowd.

The fifth rule is the alliance of dancing with the arts. The new ballet, refusing to be the slave either of music or of scenic decoration, but recognizing the alliance of the arts only on the condition of complete equality, allows perfect freedom both to the scenic artist and to the musician. In contradistinction to the older ballet it does not demand "ballet music" of the composer as an accompaniment to dancing; it accepts music of every kind, provided only that it is good and expressive. It does not demand of the scenic artist that he should array the ballerinas in short skirts and satin slippers. It does not impose any specific "ballet" conditions on the composer or the creative artist, but gives complete liberty to their creative powers.

These are the chief rules of the new ballet. Its ideals have not yet been fully realized, its purpose has at any rate been declared plainly enough to split not only the public and the press, but also the members of the St. Petersburg ballet, into two opposing groups, and has led to the establishment of that "Russian Ballet" which visits all foreign countries and is often mistaken for the traditional Russian ballet which still continues its existence in Moscow and St. Petersburg.

No artist can tell to what extent his work is the result of the influence of others and to what extent it is his own. I cannot, therefore, judge to what extent the influence of the old traditions is preserved in the new ballet and how much the new ideals of Miss Duncan are reflected in it. In accordance with the principles of the new ballet which I have set out above, in composing the ballets which (together with the old ballet, Le Lac des Cygnes) constitute the repertory of the "Russian Ballet" at Drury Lane I was not only under the influence of the artists of the historical periods represented, but deliberately sought that influence. When I composed an ancient Greek ballet I studied the artists of ancient Greece; when I produced Le Coq d'Or I studied the old Russian chap-books and broadsides; and when I produced Schehérazade, Cleopatra, Le Spectre de la Rose, and the Polovtsian dances in Prince Igor, in each case I made use of different materials appropriate to the ballet in hand.

Yours faithfully,

MICHEL FOKINE.

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - - Mr. H. B. IRVING

THURSDAY, JULY 9th, 1914, at 8.30.

THE SIN OF DAVID

A Play in Three Acts,

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

Sir Hubert Lisle	Commander of the Parliamentary Forces in the Fenland	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Hubert ...	(Child of Lisle and Miriam in Act III.)	Miss SYBIL JOSÉ
Colonel Mardyke	Of the Parliamentary Army. Owner of Rushland House, the Headquarters of the Army	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Cotton		Mr. F. D. DAVISS
Finch		Mr. BASIL RATHBONE
Marsh		Mr. PERCY WALSH
Crablove		Mr. DAVID DOUGLAS
Iron		Mr. CLAUDE BEERBOHM
Joyce	(A Lieutenant)	Mr. A. B. IMESON
A Doctor		Mr. ERNEST H. RUSTON
Ratcliffe	(Servant of Mardyke, afterwards of Lisle)	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Messenger		Mr. J. KILLNER
A Soldier		Mr. LESLIE OSWELL
Miriam	(Wife of Mardyke, afterwards of Lisle)	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
Martha	(Sister to Mardyke)	Miss MARIE LINDEN
A Nurse		Miss LOUISE REGNIS
A Serving Woman		Miss MAY HOLLAND

ACT I. Scene ... ... Hall of Rushland House
Time—Summer of 1643, the first year of the War Noontide.

ACT II. Scene ... ... The Same
Time Three weeks later—Night.

ACT III. Scene ... A room in a house on the outskirts of the town of Wakefield.
Time—A few years later.

The change of light in the middle of this Act is intended to indicate the passing of one night.

The Music for "The Sin of David" and the Song in Act II. composed by Mr. CARLTON MASON.

FOLLOWED BY

"THE VAN DYCK"

A Comedy-Farce in One Act,
By COSMO GORDON LENNOX.

Arthur Blair Woldingham	Mr. H. B. IRVING
John Peters	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Dr. Porter	Mr. LESLIE OSWELL

Scene—A Sitting-room in a Flat.

Programme of Music.

PRELUDE, "Sin of David"	Carlton Mason
IMAGINARY BALLET	Coleridge-Taylor
1 SARABANDE ESPAGNOLE ...	... Massenet
2 DANCE BOHEME	... B. Godard
3 ENTR'ACTE, "Sin of David"	Carlton Mason
MARCH, "Gladiator's Farewell"	... Blankenburg

MATINEE OF BOTH PLAYS EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3.

Stage Manager	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Musical Director	Mr. CARLTON MASON
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. LESLIE OSWELL

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by removing their hats.

Box Office (Mr. R. WEAVER) open daily, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Telephone: 2602 Gerrard. Entrance SAVOY COURT, STRAND.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d
First Circle, 5s. and 4s. Unreserved: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

General Manager ... ... Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

A New Drama.

The new play, "The Sin of David," presented by Mr. H. B. Irving at the Savoy Theatre on Thursday evening, is yet another drama with the Parliamentary wars for a background, and very stern soldiers of the best stage stuff doing very foolish things in the name of love. It is another instance of the eternal triangle, two men and a woman, and here we have Mr. H. B. Irving as one stern soldier sending another to his death because he covets his wife. He gets her too, and then the years pass and the child of this union dies, bringing to the parents who once were passionate lovers a sense of their great crime in the past. Mr. Henry Vibart and Miss Miriam Lewis shared with Mr. Irving in the acting of this drama and helped to secure for it a most friendly reception. The author, Stephen Phillips, has written this play in blank verse, and has done it well. J. W.

D-10
3724
1014
Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

LEICESTER SQUARE Underground Station is next door to this Theatre.

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER.

On TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 14th, 1914, at 8.30 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING at 9,

ALLAN AYNESWORTH and BRONSON ALBERY

PRESENT

"FROM 9 TO 11"

A New Play in Three Acts, by WALTER HACKETT.

Cast:

Lawson (Butler at the Howards')	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Arthur Drayton	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Richard Carstairs	Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Henry Poynter	Mr. ROBERT AYRTON
Jack Howard	Mr. PATRIC CURWEN
Police Sergeant	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Stevens	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Alice Howard	Miss LETTICE FAIRFAX
Evelyn Marshall	Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Susan Smith (Maid at the Howards')	Miss EDYTH GOODALL

(By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE & EADIE)

The Entire Action takes place in the living room of the Howards' Country House, "Sunnymeade."

The Play produced by ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

Scenery by GEORGE R. HEMSLEY.
Miss Fairfax and Miss Thomas's Dresses by MINA BIDDULPH, 51 Maddox Street, W.
Furniture by KEEBLE, Ltd., 417 Oxford Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Champagne by MOET & CHANDON. Cigarettes by ABDULLA.
Grand Pianoforte by MURDOCH & MURDOCH.

Preceded at 8 o'clock and every Evening at 8.30 by a Play in One Act, entitled

"A VALUABLE RIVAL"

By NEIL F. GRANT.

Alexander Jameson	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Maggie Jameson	Miss DOROTHY MacMILLAN
William Bain	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY

Scene—A Sitting-room in Alexander Jameson's House.

The Play produced by ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT AT 2.30,
AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The J. H. SQUIRE SEXTETTE will play:—

1. OVERTURE, "Huldigungsmarch"	Greig
2. (a) FANTAISIE BRILLANTE, "Hejre Kati"	Hubay
(b) MORCEAU, "Le Cygne"	Saint-Saens
(c) REVERIE, "Aubadine"	Chaminade
3. (a) CELESTE SOLO, "Moon Madrigal" (Soloist Miss JUDITH COOPER)	Willeby
(b) FRUHLINGSRAUCHEN	Sinding
4. (a) SERENADE	Pierne
(c) L'EXTASE (Celeste Obligato)	Louis Ganne

Business Manager ... } For ALLAN AYNESWORTH and BRONSON ALBERY { ... CECIL PAGET
Stage Manager ... } { ... HARRY BARFORD

Business Manager ... (For FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER) ... HERBERT JAY

ERE was a rumour about in Wyndham's Theatre on Tuesday evening that the new play entitled "From ," being there and then performed first time, possessed some resemo "Seven Keys to Baldpate," which Mr. Charles Hawtrey's autumn at the Apollo Theatre on September rankly, I must say, "I hope not." lays are by American authors, and ays to some extent spoof the audi "From 9 to 11," apart from Mr. Allan orth's fine performance, was dull was not unconsciously funny, and he end came and we were given to and that we had been witnessing the of a story told by one of the characthe prologue, most of us were not tly interested to care what it entertainment opens in a scene reng a lounge in a country mansion, London jeweller is impatiently askladv of the house to give him back thousand pound diamond necklace got from him on appro. a week Now as the necklace had been to raise money for a few days the id not hand it over; but, knowing husband had released the jewelwas on his way home with it, she ly safe. When, however, she got e to say that his car had broken the road and he would be two te, she was soon at her wits' end ut of the jeweller. Eventually in her romancing uncle to help he, after a tiresomely noisy scene woman, consented to do his best. you will be interested to learn, the tradesman a long story. The "blacked out" for a moment, and n the burglary drama which at the evening we learned was the romancing uncle told to the ween the hours of 9 and 11. It ly entertaining, and, apart from r. Aynesworth an opportunity to versatile, as a detective, a thief, ler, presented no very interestre. The author, Walter Hackett, American, and he seemed very the friendly reception accorded himself, and Mr. Aynesworth. fancy, however, that we shall resemblance between this piece ven Keys" to Baldpate," which play-representation of a story. y different story, and one that ally learn has been written in where the action takes place. J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - LOUIS MEYER

EVERY EVENING at 9.

Matinees—WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 3.

Miss MARIE TEMPEST

WILL PRESENT

A Farcical Romance, in Three Acts, called

The DUKE of KILLICRANKIE

Preceded at 8.30 by

A Farce in One Act, Entitled:

"A COLLECTION WILL BE MADE"

BY

ARTHUR ECKERSLEY.

The Rev. Cuthbert Cheese	... MR. GUY NEWALL
Count Martel	... MR. NORMAN LORING
Paul Roget	... MR. ARCHIBALD FORBES
Colonel Anstruther	... MR. HORTON COOPER
Proprietor of Hotel	... MR. JOHN ALEXANDER
Waiter	... MR. CYRIL DERINGTON TURNER
Boy	... MR. SYDNEY LINNIT
Mrs. Anstruther	... MISS LILIAN CARANAGH
Hon. Miss Murchiston	... MISS SARAH JENNINGS

A Hotel on the Italian Riviera.
Time: The Present.

Mr Arthur Eckersley, whose one act play was added to the bill at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday, has written what is rather a rarity nowadays, a good little farce that keeps the audience amused from start to finish. He has contrived a funny imbroglio, the chief figure in which is a very simple curate, whose congregation has made a collection so that he may have a holiday abroad. At a smart hotel on the Riviera he literally falls among thieves, but they do not, as usual, fleece him. On the contrary, he is mistaken for a well-known detective in clerical disguise, and no less than four people thrust large sums of money upon him in their anxiety to escape his attentions.

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1914.

MISS GLADYS COOPER.

UNFOUNDED RUMOURS OF DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS.

SOLICITORS' STATEMENT.

We have received the letter which appears below from Messrs. Herbert Smith,

MISS GLADYS COOPER.
[Foulsham & Banfield.

Goss, King, and Gregory, solicitors to Mr. Herbert and Mrs. Buckmaster (Miss Gladys Cooper).

To the Editor of "The Daily Mail."

SIR,—We have been consulted by Mr. Herbert Buckmaster and his wife—known in the dramatic profession as Miss Gladys Cooper—with reference to baseless statements which have been widely circulated to the effect that divorce proceedings are pending, or contemplated, either by Mr. Buckmaster against his wife or by Mrs. Buckmaster against her husband. The statements in question are absolutely false, and convey a cruel and utterly groundless aspersion upon our clients. Moreover, they have caused Mr. and Mrs. Buckmaster the greatest pain and annoyance.

We are instructed to take immediate proceedings against any person who can be shown to have taken part in originating or circulating the cruel reports in question, and a writ has been already issued against a weekly journal which has recently given currency to them.

HERBERT SMITH, GOSS, KING, AND GREGORY.

62, London-wall, London, E.C., July 16, 1914.

Miss Gladys Cooper is to-day generally regarded as the most beautiful woman of the London stage, and her popularity and drawing powers are enormous. She is appearing in the leading part in Mr. Edward Knoblauch's play "My Lady's Dress" at the Royalty Theatre, this being the third play in which she has appeared for Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie since she went under their management in the ingénue part in "Milestones."

THE

LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN ST., STRAND, W.C.

Sole Proprietress: GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Telephone: CITY 4927.

Dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in informing you of the production, for Three Performances only, of a New Play in Three Acts, by Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD, entitled

"A WOMAN ALONE,"

Preceded by a New Play in One Act, entitled

"A STUDY IN BEREAVEMENT."

By E. S. P. HAYNES.

The Plays will be presented on:

FRIDAY, JULY 17th, at 8.30 p.m.,
TUESDAY, JULY 21st, at 2.30 p.m.,
THURSDAY, JULY 23rd, at 2.30 p.m.

I enclose herewith a Seat for the use of yourself or representative to witness the First Performance, and, in the event of your being unable to attend, the return of the Ticket will much oblige.

Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM FOSS,
Business Manager.

JULY 14th, 1914.
Cast overleaf.

LITTLE THEATRE.

FOR THREE PERFORMANCES ONLY.

On the Evening of the 17th JULY at 8.30, and Two Matinees on JULY 21st and 23rd at 2.30.

"A WOMAN ALONE"

By MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

Richard Bowden	THOMAS WEGUELIN
Henry Langton	HUBERT HARBEN
Jack Percival	FRANK DARCH
Sir Horace Taylor	N. N. WIMBUSH
Algy Carstairs	FRANK FORBES-ROBERTSON
Hesketh	A. E. WALKER
A Visitor	W. D. FAZAN
Bertram	MARSH DUNN
Widhurst	BERTRAM MURRAY
Blanche Bowden	Miss LILLEMOR HALVORSEN
Millicent Percival	Miss FAITH CELLI
Mrs. Vynor	Miss AVICE SCHOLTZ
Countess Augusta	Miss RITA TOMPKINS
Mrs. Martin	Miss JANET HOPE

The Play produced by LEWIS CASSON, and Presented by the courtesy of the Editor of The Nineteenth Century and After.

"A WOMAN ALONE" will be preceded at each performance by

"A STUDY IN BEREAVEMENT"

By E. S. P. HAYNES.

John Matheson	W. D. FAZAN
Dr. Julius Treadwell	NOEL SPENCER
The Rev. Percy Fulton	A. E. WALKER
Ebenezer Binks, Esq. (Solicitor)	FRANK FORBES-ROBERTSON
Mrs. Cardew	Miss RITA TOMPKINS
Miss Alice Cardew	Miss DOROTHY ILMA
Miss Elvira Cardew	Miss ESTELLE GREVILLE
Miss Molesworth	Miss IRIS FRASER FOSS
Miss Honiton	Miss KATHLEEN KERR
Miss Boles	Miss JANET HOPE

SATURDAY, JULY 18, 1914.

Mrs. W. K. Clifford's A Woman Alone represents just one more phase of that war of the sexes which haunts the literary imagination.

Richard Bowden, we are assured, is a man of superior talents, but he is at the same time an idler, an egotist, and more than a bit of a bully. His wife Blanche is a romantic Austrian lady, who loves great causes and would like to see her husband play a noble part, with herself in the background regulating the limelight. She knows very well that most men could afford to let their partners take a more intelligent interest in their work, and she also loves to fancy that the nature of woman has been transformed within the last 30 years by education. Richard meets her statement of these claims with abominable rudeness, and so, as they find each other intolerable they agree to separate.

The next act shows us an hotel at Innsbruck. Blanche has asked to meet Richard, who fatuously imagines he will get a reconciliation, if not an apology. He only gets a request not to insult her by sending her money, and a very trying lecture on the place of woman, which does not end except on the very verge of a suffrage debate. Fortunately the last act shows Blanche to have become more tractable. She is sick of the admiration of minor poets, and she is horribly lonely and depressed. She has come to perceive, like Mr. A. F. Benson's undergraduate had, that "sentiment goes for something," and when she hears that Richard is staying next door she writes a pathetic little note, which would make even the brutal man of feminist fancies blush at its abjectness. She need not have been so apologetic. A reconciliation was assuredly prudent, but with a husband like hers it assumed the proportions of heroism.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.
TELEPHONE: 9437 GERRARD (TWO LINES)

DEAR SIR,

I have the honour to advise you that, by arrangement with Messrs. GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD, a Special Series of J. T. GREIN'S Independent Matinees will be given at the above Theatre on July 21st, 23rd, 24th, at 2.30 o'clock of

ALFRED SUTRO'S VERSION
OF
MAETERLINCK'S FAMOUS PLAY

"MONNA VANNA"

(LICENSED BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN)

I have pleasure in sending herewith Voucher for the use of your Dramatic Critic for the first of such Matinees on Tuesday, the 21st July. Should your representative be unable to attend, will you kindly return the Ticket enclosed at your earliest convenience?

Yours faithfully,

ERNEST H. COLLINS,
Business Manager.

For particulars of Cast, etc., see over.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

ALFRED SUTRO'S VERSION
OF
MAETERLINCK'S FAMOUS PLAY

"MONNA VANNA"

(LICENSED BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN)

Cast:

Guido Colonna	(Commander of the Pisan Garrison)	NORMAN McKINNEL
Marco Colonna	(Guido's Father)	J. FISHER-WHITE
Prinzevalle	(General in pay of Florence)	LIONEL ATWILL
Borso, Torello	Guido's Lieutenants	MONTAGU LOVE (By kind permission of Mr. CYRIL MAUDE); HOWARD STURGE
Trivulzio	(Commissioner of the Florentine Republic)	IVAN BERLYN
Vedio	(Secretary to Prinzevalle)	NORMAN HARLE (By kind permission of Mr. OSCAR ASCHE and Miss LILY BRAYTON)
Giovanna, Monna Vanna	(Guido's Wife)	CONSTANCE COLLIER

The First and Third Acts take place in Pisa.

The Second outside the City.

Period - The end of the Fifteenth Century.

The Play produced by LEON M. LION.

199

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1914.

Mr. J. T. Grein and his Independent Players have every reason to congratulate themselves. On July 14 they gave, at the Haymarket Theatre, a very fine performance of Ibsen's Ghosts, licensed for the first time, and yesterday they gave, at the Queen's Theatre, the first of three matinées of Maeterlinck's Monna Vanna—also licensed for the first time. Queen Alexandra, in whose honour all were presented with wild roses, the Dowager Empress of Russia, and a large, distinguished, and enthusiastic audience witnessed the performance.

It is difficult to appreciate the grounds on which a licence has so long been refused for a beautiful play. To save the besieged and starving Pisans, Vanna, their captain's wife, goes alone at night, and clad only in her mantle, to the tent of Prinzivalle, commander of the Florentine forces—to find that he has long loved her with a "great, unique, unrealizable love" and that she has nothing to fear from him. It is a scene in which the rarer love triumphs over the ordinary, and there was nothing yesterday to which the least objection could be taken from the point of view of the censor. It was played simply—too simply in fact. Miss Constance Collier, as Vanna, showed too little consciousness of the strain of her ordeal and broke out too readily into frank recognition of her old playmate; and Mr. Lionel Atwill never imported to Prinzivalle the ascendancy of character, the magnetism of a supreme love, which raises the scene to real beauty. There was little tensity; it became rather a quiet talk about old times, and its finest moment was at the end when Prinzivalle learns that he is proclaimed traitor to Florence and Vanna bids him come with her to Florence.

In the more obviously emotional scenes of the last act when Guido, her husband, refuses to believe her Miss Collier rose to a higher level; her despairing attempts to make Guido understand and her final surrender to the inevitable, the lie which alone he will take for truth, were finely portrayed. But, as we said when Monna Vanna was privately produced on June 1, 1911, it is "a contest between great, beautiful things and little, mean things," and yesterday, as then, the little, mean things told more forcibly. Mr. Norman McKinnel, as Guido, was the dominating character of the production. He, who regards the condition as loathsome, will not hear of its fulfilment, and later is possessed only with the desire to wash away the stain upon his honour in the blood of Prinzivalle, commanded yesterday through the restraint and power of Mr. McKinnel's acting a sympathy which spoilt the balance of the play. The scene in the tent did not stand out, as in the hands of a great actor and actress it should, as a wonderful and ennobling hour. Marco, Guido's father and Vanna's councillor and supporter, was very finely played by Mr. Fisher White, and one of the best pieces of acting of the afternoon was shown by Mr. Ivan Berlyn as the Florentine Commissioner, who puts Florence before all; but he is a side-issue, and not even Mr. Fisher White could quite overcome the difficulties of the long Maeterlinckian reasonings of Marco.

It was, therefore, an interesting rather than a great performance. Guido's two lieutenants, Borso (Mr. Montagu Love) and Torello (Mr. Howard Sturge) were unnecessarily emotionless, and the crowd was individually well-intentioned rather than homogeneously effective. The scene in the tent, too, would have gained vastly in effect if Monna Vanna's mantle had been less elaborate and glittering and the flare less distracting. The play, which is given in Mr. Sutro's translation and produced by Mr. Leon M. Lion, will be repeated to-morrow and on Friday.

M. Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna" will be put into the evening bill at the Lyric Theatre for four weeks beginning on Monday next.

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 2, 1914.

* * *

Speaking of plays recently "released," as one might say, by the Lord Chamberlain, I have before me a kind of a "throwaway" syllabus, setting forth the reasons given by the members of Mr. Grein's company as to

Why They Played in "Monna Vanna."

Miss Constance Collier thinks "it is a great step in the progress of the drama in England." Mr. Norman McKinnel says: "I am appearing in 'Monna Vanna' because it is worth while." Mr. Fisher White's reason is "because I am glad to be connected with a performance that celebrates the emancipation of this play from the Censor's ban." Mr. Lionel Atwill says, "because the play is really splendid and Prinzevalli is the best part I have ever played." Mr. Montagne Love's reason is that he considers it "one of the finest masterpieces of our time." Finally, Mr. Grein declares that he presented "Monna Vanna" "because it is of universal fame and educational value; because it contains a great ethical idea; because it will go down to the classics," and so on, and so forth. Now what I like about the actors' reasons is that not one of them is sordid enough to say "because I was offered an engagement at a good salary." But what is "the great ethical idea," Mr. Grein? Is it that the heroine, after all her much-paraded "purity," arranges to leave her husband and to go off with the man who bargained that she should go to his tent at midnight with nothing, but a mantle on? Like our old "ethical" friend Brutus, I pause for a reply! Meanwhile "Monna Vanna" goes into the evening bill at the Lyric, starting to-morrow night.

* * *

CRITERION THEATRE.

PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.

TELEPHONE 3365 REGENT

DEAR SIR,

ON SATURDAY, AUGUST 1ST,

Messrs. ALLAN AYNESWORTH & BRONSON ALBERY

WILL REVIVE

"A PAIR OF SILK STOCKINGS

BY CYRIL HARCOURT.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY A NEW AND ORIGINAL COMEDY, IN ONE ACT, ENTITLED

A VALUABLE RIVAL.

BY NEIL F. GRANT

I HAVE PLEASURE IN ENCLOSING HEREWITH VOUCHERS FOR THE USE OF YOUR DRAMATIC CRITIC. SHOULD YOUR REPRESENTATIVE BE UNABLE TO ATTEND, WOULD YOU KINDLY RETURN ME THE TICKETS AT YOUR EARLIEST CONVENIENCE.

I AM,

YOURS FAITHFULLY,

CECIL PAGET,

BUSINESS MANAGER

PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

EVERY EVENING, AT 7.45

MATINEES,
WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2-30

WILLIAM GIFFARD'S SEASON

PRESENTING

THE ROMANTIC DRAMA IN FOUR ACTS,

ENTITLED:

QUEEN AT SEVENTEEN

By J. A. CAMPBELL.

Maurice, Prince of Carpathia	Mr. NORMAN LEYLAND
Baron Streslau, Prime Minister of Danubia ...	Mr. FRANK STONE
General Von Hapsburg, Commander of the Danubian Army ...	Mr FREDK. ARTHUR ELLIS
Lieut. Erneste von Hapsburg, his Son ...	Mr. HENRY C. HEWITT
Lieut. Otto Felson, Friend of Erneste von Hapsburg	Mr. ERIC FANE
Eugene von Tarlitz, Minister of the Interior for Danubia	Mr. DUDLEY VICTOR
Michael von Hanz, Minister of Police ...	Mr. SYDNEY C. KEARNS
Count de Pasthov, Secretary of State ...	Mr. WILFRED FLETCHER
Stefan, Groom in Waiting	Mr. C. S. KEMBLE
Dr. Kurntz, Court Physician	Mr. HENRY WINN
Captain Marklin, of the Danubian Army ...	Mr. BASIL SYDNEY
Captain Helbron ,, ,,	Mr. ARTHUR EWART
Sergeant Bruenter ,, ,,	Mr. ALBERT E. ALLEN
Captain Volgat, Aide-de-Camp to Carpathia ...	Mr. A. R. FOLDER
Captain Dwina ,, ,,	Mr. BEVAN KEMPE
Simon, a Woodcutter in the Forest	Mr. CECIL TRESILIAN
Caspar Jessen, a Cadet	Master PERCY DYER
Bruno, Attendant at the Convent ...	Mr. HERBERT STANTON
The Lady Rosella, of the Danubian Court ...	Miss VERA CORNISH
The Lady Rotha	Miss DOROTHY EDWARDS
Elsa, Simon's Daughter	Miss DOROTHY RADFORD
Mother Superior of the Convent ...	Mrs. F. MARRIOT WATSON
A Drummer Boy	Master JACK ROOKE
A Sentry	Mr. LIONEL SCOTT
A Cardinal	Mr. P. A. THOMPSON
A Priest	Mr. CAMPBELL FLETCHER
Army Doctor	Mr. REGINALD HAMILTON
and
The Princess Maritza, afterwards Queen of Danubia	Miss JEAN CAVENDISH

Soldiers, Court Ladies and Gentlemen.

ACT 1.	Scene 1.	Simon's Hut in the Forest of Blitz.
	Scene 2.	Exterior of the Convent.
	Scene 3.	Another part of the Convent.
	Scene 4.	Ante-Chamber in the Palace.
	Scene 5	Stone Hall of the Palace.
	"The Coming of the Queen."
ACT 2.	... ...	Council Room in the Palace.
	"The Wonder of the Queen."
ACT 3.	Scene 1	The Royal Chapel.
	Scene 2	A Street by the West Bridge.
	Scene 3	Tent on the Battle-field.
	"The Prayer of the Queen."
ACT 4.	Scene 1	The Royal Gardens.
	Scene 2	Audience Chamber of the Palace.
	Scene 3	Throne Room of the Palace.
	"The Love of the Queen."

Advance Manager and Press Representative ...	For Mr. WILLIAM GIFFARD.	Mr. WALTER HENDERSON.
Stage Manager		Mr. BASIL SYDNEY.
Assistant Acting Manager		Mr. E. MONTAGU HOGAN.
Acting Manager ...		Mr. HERBERT CARTER.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. ARTHUR WORKMAN, will play the following Selections:—

1. MARCH ...	"The Gladiators' Farewell"	...	Blankenhay.
2. OVERTURE ...	... "Queen at Seventeen"		Arthur Workman.
3. TWO STEP ...	"All Aboard for Dixie"	...	William Penn.
4. INTERMEZZO ...	"Indian Summer"	...	Neil Moret.
5. VALSE DE CONCERT	"The Greradiers" ...	...	Waldteufel.
6. ENTR'ACTE ...	... "Demoiselle Chic"	...	Percy Fletcher.
7. ONE STEP ...	... "You're here, I'm here"	...	Jerome D. Kern.

Solo Organist and Pianist .. MR. GEORGE MARTIN.

Daily Mail

The first English morning Journal certifying the exact number of copies actually sold daily.

MONDAY, AUGUST 3, 1914.

"QUEEN AT SEVENTEEN."

MILITARY DRAMA AT THE PRINCES THEATRE.

The military drama called "Queen at Seventeen," which we were privileged to witness at the Princes Theatre on Saturday evening, is of the popular brand originated and encouraged by "The Prisoner of Zenda." It is but fair to Mr. Anthony Hope Hawkins to say that "Queen at Seventeen" is not a bit like his fascinating drama. It is just a poor relation.

The locale of this latest version of an oft-tried subject is, of course, a principality in the Balkans. Even for the purpose of the drama likely names for Balkan States must now be very nearly exhausted. In this new play, by Mr. J. A. Campbell, the events occur in Danubia, but Carpathia and Alsatia are also more or less to blame for the incidents of the story, which begins with the midnight flight of a princess from a convent in order that she may become a queen, and ends with her marriage to the gallant young officer who protected her, beat off the traditional enemy, and made her subjects love her more than ever.

It was no trifling task to give life to an old story such as this; but there was a plucky company for the work, with an exceptionally good actor, Mr. Henry C. Hewitt, for hero, and Miss Jean Cavendish for heroine. These and Mrs. F. Marriott Watson took the chief acting honours, while in the lighter parts Mr. Eric Fane and Miss Vera Cornish were the most successful.

It was a curious mixture, and the audience applauded it; and the author showed himself and appeared impressed. So all was well.

J. W.

QUEEN AT SEVENTEEN

By J. A. CAMPBELL

THE WOUNDED MESSENGER

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19th AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

DRAKE.

Francis Drake - - - - - - - - - - HERBERT TREE
(His First Appearance in this Character)

Queen Elizabeth - - - - - - - - - PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
(Her Original Character)

Lord Burleigh	ARTHUR WHITBY
Lord Howard of Effingham	J. W. MOLLISON
Christopher Hatton	ROHAN CLENSY
Sir Walter Raleigh	SIDNEY DENTON (His Original Character)
John Doughty	CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
Thomas Doughty	PHILIP MERIVALE
Don Guerau D'Espes	W. GAYER MACKAY (His Original Character)
Don Pedro Zubiaur	ALGERNON GREIG
Don Bernardino de Mendoza	DIGBY STROUS
Don Pedro de Valdez	DENNIS WYNDHAM
Sir George Sydenham	HENRY MORRELL
Le Sieur de Marchaumont	ARTHUR V. WEBSTER. (His Original Character)
Sir John Hawkins	JULIAN CROSS (His Original Character)
Martin Frobisher	WILL JAXONE
John Wynter	ALEXANDER SARNER
John Chester	VERNON CRABTREE
Captain John Thomas	FREDERICK JAMES
Thomas Fenner	GEORGE F. WEIR
Tom Moone	MURRAY CARSON
Gregory	HENRY BYATT
Brewer	CHARLES DORAN
Lady Lennox	ROSAMOND MAYNE-YOUNG
Mother Moone	MARY BROUGH

Bright	ROY BYFORD (His Original Character)
Fleming	HOWARD ROSE (His Original Character)
Rev. Francis Fletcher	BEN FIELD (His Original Character)
Pedro	A. B. IMESON
Diego	DEERING WELLS
Mr. Vicary	A. HOUGHTON GODDARD
Mr. Charles	W. J. KEMP
Mr. Caube	MARK NICHOLLS
Cooke	LESLIE RYECROFT
William Hawkins	JAMES STEWART
Yole	STANLEY B. MARSH
Potter	ARCHIBALD FORBES (His Original Character)
Bewes	CHARLES BISHOP
Doidge	WILLIAM PRINGLE
Menhennick	D. N. JENSON
Beckerleg	DAN SEYMOUR
Courtenay	ARTHUR CHICKEN
Haberdasher	A. THORNLEY
Pikeman	GEORGE LAUNDY (His Original Character)
Balladmonger	A. DEWER
Dame Sydenham	STELLA ST. AUDRIE (Her Original Character)
Elizabeth Sydenham	AMY BRANDON-THOMAS

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.

STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL. MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER—ALFRED BELLEW. ASSISTANT PRODUCER—BASIL DEAN.
GENERAL MANAGER—HENRY DANA.

POPULAR PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls and Balcony Stalls, 5s. Balcony, 3s. Upper Circle 2s. 6d. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit 1/6. Gallery 6d.

BOX OFFICE (MR. POTTER) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777

* * *

Many hundreds being unable to gain admission at every performance of "Drake," Sir Herbert Tree has decided to given an additional matinée every Saturday, commencing this week. It was originally intended by Sir Herbert Tree that profits arising from the performances of "Drake" should be sent to the Prince of Wales's Fund to be ear-marked for the benefit of members of the theatrical profession who might suffer in consequence of the war. As the committee of the National Relief Fund has decided that it will not be practicable to allocate contributions to any particular class, Sir Herbert has arranged to send any profits from "Drake" to the special committee which is being formed, with Sir Squire Bancroft at its head, for the purpose of helping those of the theatrical profession who suffer by the war.

"Drake."

It is a matter of interest, especially to those who may be watching the experiment of cheap prices in the West End, to note that every bookable seat for the first two performances of Drake, revived last night at His Majesty's, was sold a couple of days ago. In the course of a short chat on Tuesday anent the effect of the War on theatrical conditions, Sir Herbert Tree expressed himself thus:—"If the War goes well, theatres will do well; if the War goes badly . . . ."

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

By Arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

On Wednesday Evening, August 26th, 1914, at 8.45 p.m.

Messrs. MARK and SYDNEY BLOW

WILL PRESENT

"MY AUNT"

By SYDNEY BLOW and DOUGLAS HOARE

Adapted from PAUL GAVAULT'S "Ma Tante d'Honfleur"

Mr. Aubrey Braxton	...	A. W. BASKCOMB
Mr. Tarbolton	...	HARRY FRANKISS
Mr. Leslie Tarbolton (his Son)	...	POPE STAMPER
Dr. Sweette	...	ERNEST HENDRIE
Anthony (Aubrey's Manservant)	...	FRANK DENTON
Simpson	...	ALFRED RIVERS
Suzanne Grancier	...	YVONNE GARRICKE
Mrs. Tarbolton	...	MOLLIE LOWELL
Mrs. Montague	...	MADGE SAUNDERS
Miss Rayner	...	VIOLET GOULD
Bryant	...	KATHLEEN GOWER
	AND
Mrs. Martingale ("My Aunt")	...	LOTTIE VENNE

ACT I. Aubrey Braxton's Flat, Gordon Mansions, W.C.

ACT II. At the Tarbolton's, Budleigh Salterton.

ACT III. Another Room at the Tarbolton's, Budleigh Salterton.

Preceded at 8.15 by

"LAUGHTER IN COURT"

By JOHN KENDALL

His Worship	...	SAM WILKINSON
His Guest	...	HARRY FRANKISS
His Visitor	...	H. E. GARDEN
His Manservant	...	ALFRED RIVERS

SCENE. His Worship's Residence, on the edge of a retired Common in the neighbourhood of London.

The Plays produced by E. DAGNALL

General Manager	MARK BLOW
Stage Manager	ALBERT RIVERS

207

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE
STRAND

Phone: Gerrard 3815

By arrangement with Messrs A & S. GATTI

Nightly at 9 p.m. Matinées Wednesday and Saturday, 3 p.m. Preceded at 8.30 and 2.30 p.m. by "LAUGHTER IN COURT."

In ordinary times we do not think "My Aunt" would have roused much laughter, though at the Vaudeville on Wednesday evening people were evidently very glad to have something to laugh at. It is a French farce, very much on the familiar lines; and in transposing it into English the adapters have been even less careful than most adapters to join their flats.

The first act seemed to us the best. It was delightful to see Miss Lottie Venne as the kindly aunt from Exeter who thinks it perfectly right that a young man should go the pace a little, and is only anxious that he should not get landed by some designing female. Nothing could have been more attractive than the mixture of discretion and delight and jealousy and shocked propriety with which she tripped out of her nephew's flat on finding that there was another lady apparently spending the night there. The lady, as it happened, was only Miss Rayner, a journalist from Camberwell, whose designs on Aubrey Braxton were not in the least those suspected by Mrs. Martingale; but it was great fun to see Mr. A. W. Baskcomb growing limper and limper and sadder and sadder under the increasing demands of this woman and of the pair of squabbling lovers, Leslie Tarbolton and Suzanne Grancier. From this beginning the play runs its harmless course with plenty of the usual complications.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,
CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.
Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

LEICESTER SQUARE Underground Station is next door to this Theatre.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On TUESDAY, 1st SEPTEMBER, 1914, at 8, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

"OUTCAST"

A Play in Four Acts, by HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.

Characters.

Geoffrey	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Hugh	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Tony	Mr. GEOFFREY KERR
Taylor	Mr. JULES SHAW
Miriam	Miss ETHEL LEVEY
Valentine	Miss GRACE LANE
Nelly	Miss UNA VENNING
Maid	Miss MAUD BUCHANAN

ACT I.	Geoffrey's Flat in Piccadilly (3 months pass)
ACT II.	Same as Act I. (15 months pass)
ACT III.	Miriam's Maisonette (3 weeks pass)
ACT IV.	Same as Act I.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Levey's Dresses by LUCILLE, LTD., 23 Hanover Square, W.;
the other Dresses by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47 New Bond Street, W.
Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., LTD., Hampstead Road, N.W.
The Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by THE CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	a. MILITARY MARCH	"Pomp and Circumstance"	Edward Elgar
	b. "THE BOHEMIANS"	of Puccini	Arrd. by Charles Godfrey, Junr.
2.	a. "DRAKE'S DRUM"	(Songs of the Times)	C. Villiers Stanford
	b. "ON THE MARCH"		Herbert Oliver
3.	a. ONE-STEP TROT	"Mrs. Rip Van Winkle"	Fischer-Walker
	b. GRACEFUL DANCE	"Yellow Jasmine"	Frederick Cowen
4.	a. PRELUDE		Rachmaninoff
	b. BALLET	"Coppélia"	Délibes

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... W. T. LOVELL
Business Manager ... HERBERT JAY

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

Geoffrey has no idea of marriage, but kindly offers to let Miriam be seen dining in his company at the Savoy grill-room. Heartfelt gratitude of Miriam. Geoffrey makes money in the City and behaves very nicely to Miriam, buying her grand pianos and the most expensive Paris frocks, but still she is not happy, always having that eye on marriage. Then Geoffrey, suddenly learning that Valentino has left her husband, finds that he stills loves her madly and that Miriam is a bit of a bore. So he casts her off (promising a handsome settlement) and makes an assignation with Valentine, who is now ready to fall into his arms. Every time the fall is, however, just about to be brought off, there is a ring at the bell which, brings an inopportune laugh from the audience. Of course, it is Miriam, come to return Geoffrey's cheque. She declares, sadly but firmly, that she is going away (to the streets or perhaps the river) and will leave an undisturbed field for the Geoffrey-Valentine embraces which her ringing had frustrated. Then she faints and Valentine is so affected by the sad spectacle that she declares her intention of returning to her deserted husband. Geoffrey, also an instantaneously reformed character, bids her farewell for ever and offers Miriam the marriage which she coveted. But Miriam has just been reading the marriage service for the first time, and has persuaded herself that matrimony should be the exclusive privilege of good women. She therefore nobly refuses Geoffrey's offer; she will go on living with him (always in a domestic pot au feu sort of way) as his mistress.

It is a somewhat unlikely tale, made plausible by some exceedingly natural acting by Mr. Du Maurier and Miss Ethel Levey. Of course, the part of Miriam has been written expressly for Miss Levey, who, like many another lady who has achieved a reputation with song and dance in the "variety" theatres, is ambitious of success on the more orthodox stage. Well, last night must have gratified her ambition to the full. Her rich and resonant voice serves her as well for the expression of emotion, whether womanly tenderness or jealous fury, as for the rendering of ragtime songs. She can be quiet, too, and simple; in short, is an actress thoroughly competent for such a part as Miriam. It is true that you occasionally watched her heels with some misgiving—especially when the soda-water drenched her hat. You half-expected to see the Miss Ethel Levey of the Hippodrome bursting through. But no such catastrophe happened; the lady held herself well in hand, and fitted herself with perfect restraint and propriety into the artistic picture. As for Mr. Du Maurier, he cannot help being natural—natural when stupefied with drugs, natural when interrupted in his amours by the door-bell, natural when offering to marry his mistress out of a sense of duty. With these two were Mr. Wontner as a solemn (Oh! so solemn!) friend, Mr. Geoffrey Kerr as a gay (boyishly and delightfully gay) friend, and Miss Grace Lane, who bravely struggled with the ungrateful part of Valentine.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

NIGHTLY at 7-45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS, AT 2-30

WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE present

THE GREAT DRAMA,

TOMMY ATKINS

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN LANDECK.

The Play produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Harold Wilson (Curate of St. Barnabas')		... Mr. Henry Lonsdale
Stephen Raymond (Army Agent and Churchwarden),		Mr. C. F. Collings
Ebenezer Skindle (Organist and Choirmaster)		Mr. Herbert Williams
Captain Richard Maitland	42nd Foot	... Mr. Fred Morgan
Capt. Bob Sparrow	42nd Foot	Mr. Wingold Lawrence
Colour-Sergt. Paddy Mollov	42nd Foot	... Mr. Maitland Marler
Perkins (Sexton)		.. Mr. George Aston
Col. Hardwicke		...Mr. Frank Elsworthy
Sir Simon Redgrave, J.P. ..		Mr. Walter Pemberton
Private Harris		.. Mr. Raymond Wood
Private Mason		... Mr. Frank Lister
Josiah		... Mr. H. G. Wright
Ahmed (an Arab Chief)		... Mr. Percy Baverstock
Jack (Drummer Boy)		... Master Jack Rooke
Thomas Trotman (a Yokel) ..		... Master H. Merica
Rose Selwyn (Col. Hardwicke's Ward)		Miss Florence Radcliffe
Elsie Wilson (Harold's Sister)		... Miss Sybil Sparkes
Martha (Village Gossip)		Miss Cissy Farrell
Margaret Maitland (Richard's Wife) ..		Miss Lillian Hallows
Kate Perkins (Ruth's Maid)		... ... Miss Eva Dare
AND
Ruth (Raymond's Daughter)		... Miss Jessie Winter

And a Crowd of Auxiliaries, including full Military Band, Soldiers, Choristers, Nursing Sisters, Arabs, Bridesmaids and Villagers.

General Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

Waters, J.
Plays

ACT I.

Scene 1 .. .. GARDEN OF STEPHEN RAYMOND'S HOUSE
Scene 2 ... ... EXTERIOR OF THE CITADEL

ACT II.

Three months later—Xmas Eve.

Scene 1 ... ... JUSTICE ROOM AT SIR SIMON'S
Scene 2 ... ... RIVERDALE GLEN Scene 3 .. .. VILLAGE SCHOOL ROOM
Scene 4 .. . ... EXTERIOR OF BARMINSTER CHURCH

ACT III.

Scene 1 .. .. OUTSIDE THE "KING'S HEAD"
Scene 2 . ... A LANE
Scene 3 ... THE CASTLE RUINS AT THE HEAD OF THE CLIFF
Scene 4 .. .. THE SCHOOL ROOM
Scene 5 .. .. INTERIOR OF BARMINSTER CHURCH

ACT IV.

Scene 1 ... ... THE MALAKI FORT
Scene 2 .. .. THE SECRET PASSAGE
Scene 3 ... . THE ENTRENCHMENTS

SCENERY by H. K. Browne, T. Pilbeam and Lyceum Studio.
UNIFORMS, ETC., by W. Clarkson, Wardour Street, W.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:

1. OVERTURE... ... "England Expects" ... H. Sullivan-Brooke
2. SELECTION... ... ... "Iolanthe" .. .. Sullivan
3. A NAUTICAL OVERTURE "Plymouth Hoe" ... ... John Ansell
4. (a) ONE-STEP ... "Fluffy Pets" ... ... Gilbert
   (b) WALTZ... "When Night is Brightest" H. Sullivan-Brooke

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

Proprietors ... ... MR & MRS. FRANK WYATT

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1914,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE LITTLE MINISTER,

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

213

This Evening at 8 o'clock.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE LITTLE MINISTER,

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

The Earl of Rintoul	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Rev. Gavin Dishart	Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
Captain Halliwell	Mr. LIONEL ATWILL
Thomas Whamond	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Snecky Hobart	Mr. M. R. MORAND
Silva Tosh	Mr. W. H. BROUGHAM
Andrew Mealmaker	Mr. J. B. GORDON
Rob Dow	Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN
Micah Dow	Master DOUGLAS MACMILLAN
Joe Cruickshanks	Mr. FRANCIS J. DUGUID
Sergeant Davidson	Mr. FREDERICK LEISTER
Thwaites	Mr. G. GOODWIN
Nanny Webster	Miss SARA ALLGOOD
Félice	Mademoiselle COLLETTE DORIGNY
Jean	Miss JEAN CADELL

AND

Lady Babbie (Lord Rintoul's Daughter) ...	Miss MARIE LÖHR

ACT I.	Caddam Woods.
ACT II.—Scene 1.	Nanny's Cottage.
Scene 2.	The Manse Garden.
ACT III.	Rintoul Castle.
ACT IV.	The Manse Garden.

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

1914
Waters. J.
Plays

THE TIMES

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

As with many an other parti-coloured play, so with The Little Minister, it is the heavier hues that have faded, while the lighter have stood fast.

The dour "releegiousness" of the Thrums Elders, their tragic horror of his goings-on with the supposed "Egeeptian" wench, the ferocity of their behaviour, the divinity that hedges the "Meenister" himself, the aristocratic hauteur of the Earl, the ugly vindictiveness of the Captain—it is impossible now to take any of these things seriously. Nay, simply don't believe a word of them. Was there ever such an atmosphere, were there ever such people, in any Thrums in the world? Or are they just early Barrieisms, common objects of "kailyard" fiction, features of an imaginary Scotland for English consumption? Fortunately there are other Barrieisms than these—bits of sheer light-hearted fun and bits of genuine, not merely local, human nature—the [illegible] and high courage and rich temperament of the little minister, the teasing, caressing, in the end irresistible fascination of Lady Babbie, and the quaint humour of the Elders in their moments of secular distraction. It is by these gayer elements that the play is kept live and sweet.

[illegible] young actor, Mr. Donald Calthrop, [illegible] only the other day, still has [illegible] of Puck about him in the clerical [illegible] of the Rev. Gavin Dishart—just [illegible] to add to the delight of the part. A [illegible] performance this, and one that [illegible] ordeal successfully won through for [illegible] an ordeal to compete with the [illegible] in theatrical memories, of [illegible] in the part. Enough that Mr. [illegible] makes a new and quite charming [illegible] so does Miss Marie Löhr of [illegible] an adventure, this one, out of [illegible] skipping, tripping, dancing, [illegible]. The very acting, and the very [illegible] playgoers' minds a little ease [illegible] heavy burden of the real day.

215

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - LOUIS MEYER

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

Matinees—WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2.30.

"BLUFF KING HAL"

A Comedy in Four Acts,

By LOUIS N. PARKER.

King Henry VIII.	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Edward, Prince of Wales	Donald Buckley
Sir Thomas Seymour	Baliol Holloway
Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester	Herbert Bunston
Sir Thomas Wriothesley, Lord Chancellor	Cecil Humphreys
Eustache Chappuys, French Ambassador	Roland Pertwee
The Duke of Najera	Christopher Steele
Dr. Butts	Cyril Sworder
An Officer	W. S. Hartford
Signor Vendramin, a Venetian Gentleman	Clifford Heatherley
William Morice, Gentleman Usher	Ray Raymond
Fitton	John Liege
The Princess Mary	Mina Leonesi
The Princess Elizabeth	Kathleen Jones
Lady Jane Grey, her Cousin	Odette Goimbault
Lady Herbert	Enid Rose
Lady Tyrwhit	Mary Dibley
Anne Askew	Alice Lonnon
Mistress Barbara	Betty Linley
AND
Katharine Parr	VIOLET VANBRUGH

The Earl of Surrey		I. Solney
Lord Oxford		Robin Cuff
William Parr, Marquess of Northampton		M. Summers
Sir William Herbert		R. J. Tippett
Sir Robert Tyrwhit		Eric Fowler
Sir Nicholas Throckmorton		John C. Rice
Sir George Blagge		B. D. Wood
1st Spanish Gentleman	Attending on the Duke of Najera	W. S. Beard
2nd Spanish Gentleman		Cyril Raymond
A Chaplain		Wilfred Herbert
1st Secretary		Howard Douglas
2nd Secretary		Matthew Lawrence
A Page		Osmond Willson
The Countess of Rutland		Madeline Bellew
Lady Strickland		Alice Stuart
Lady Suffolk		Sarah Brindly
Lady Margaret Douglas		Mary Fowler
Lady Katharine Willoughby		Margaret Ost
Lady Margaret Neville		Isolde Le Roy
Mistress Aglionby		E. Bingham Hall
Mistress Ashley		K. Bingham Hall
1st Venetian Dancer		Gladys Preston
2nd Venetian Dancer		Monica Mellor
Lord Dudley, Page to Queen Katharine		René Waller

The Shade of Katharine of Arragon	Patricia Manners
The Shade of Anne Boleyn	Belle Lind
The Shade of Jane Seymour	Louie Barnes
The Wraith of Anne of Cleves	Olive Temple
The Shade of Katharine Howard	Winifred Bateman

Halberdiers, Huntsmen, Minstrels, Servitors, etc.

Act I. A Gallery in the Palace at Greenwich.

Act II.—Scene 1. The Queen's Bower and a Corridor in the Palace at Westminster.

Scene 2. The Throne Room at Westminster.

Act III.—Scene 1. The Queen's Bower, Westminster.

Scene 2. The Throne Room.

Act IV. The Gardens at Hampton Court.

Period: 1543 to 1546.

There will be an Interval of 10 minutes between Acts I. and II.; 5 minutes between Acts II. & III; 12 minutes between Acts III. & IV.

The Scenery, Properties and Costumes designed by HUGO RUMBOLD.

Incidental Music composed and arranged by Albert Fox.
Music of the Royal Dance composed by Louis N. Parker.
Dances invented by Clifford Heatherley.
Costumes carried out by B. J. Simmons & Co. Wigs by Fox.
The Scenery painted by Hugo Rumbold, Arthur Pullinger and Cecil Cornforth.

Souvenir of "Bluff King Hal" with Eight Illustrations, arranged and written by Austin Brereton, Price 6d.

The New Act Drop representing The Encampment of King Henry VIII. at Marquison, July 1544, painted by Hugo Rumbold from an old engraving.

General Manager	For Arthur Bourchier	William Burchill
Assistant Stage Managers		Claude Edmonds, Clifford Heatherley
Musical Manager		Albert Fox

Business Manager for Garrick Renters, Ltd. ... José G. Levy

Box Office (C. R. Stubbs) 10 to 10.

Telephone Gerrard 9513.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle 5s. and 4s.
Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d. Gallery (unreserved), 1s.
Doors open at 7.45 and 2.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

The Management reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary. This Theatre is Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Mr. Herbert Sleath.

217
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

Bluff King Hal wished it to be generally understood by the Court that the pain in his toe was not the gout. Nicknames were another little weakness of his. The Spanish Envoy was "spindleshanks"; the Bishop of Winchester and the Lord Chancellor were "blackbirds." Whenever he wished to cut short an argument he said basta. And, even when over 50, he was an impetuous wooer. Did not M. Paul Bourget once write a story to prove that "Page do l'amour" was 53? He must have been thinking of Bluff King Hal, who was just verging on that age when he married Katharine Parr. Katharine was contemplating marriage with Sir Thomas Seymour, but when the King was so pressing of course he had to have his way. A good and faithful wife to the King was Katharine, but unfortunately Sir Thomas kept hanging about protesting his passion, and the "blackbirds"—the Bishop and the Chancellor—overheard him. This was just the sort of scandal they wanted, for they hated Queen Katharine for her heretical tendencies. Not that Bluff King Hal cared a straw about them, but the fact is he was jealous of Sir Thomas, and the "blackbirds" knew how to turn his jealousy to account. By showing him Sir Thomas's glove in the Queen's bower they worked him into a frenzy, and got him to sign a warrant committing Katharine to the Tower.

Thereupon all the lights went out and dim figures tormented the King. Needless to say, they were the ghosts of his dead wives, who so terrified him that he forgot even his magic basta. Worse than that, his living wife argued with him to his face about what Matthew Arnold used to call the Protestantism of the Protestant religion, and Henricus Fidei Defensor flew into a violent rage. This was the moment for the "blackbirds" to execute their warrant. Guard, arrest the Queen and convey her to the Tower! But it so happened that the King had just learned that Katharine had given the loathed Seymour his final congé. Further, he was at that moment hiding behind a tree listening to the horrid names (Nero, Caligula, &c.) that the "blackbirds" were calling him between themselves. So he tore up the warrant, hugged the Queen, and sent the "blackbirds" to the Tower instead.

It is all, you see, in Mr. Parker's usual style. He is no more afraid than Shakespeare was to deal freely with history. The ghosts, too, are Shakespearian. So is the Queen's bidding the courtiers "a kind good-night." But the rest is unadulterated Parker. Let it be said, in extenuation, that his play had to be "written round" Mr. Bourchier as Bluff King Hal—no mean circumference. After all, Mr. Bourchier is quite amusing, admirably made up, and revelling in the traditional beefiness and brutishness of Henry as Giant Blunderbore. And Miss Violet Vanbrugh skilfully uses every chance of showing Katharine as a woman of quick wit, sharp tongue, and sweet nature. It is not her fault that the Protestantism of the Protestant religion hardly gets over the footlights. Then there is a tart little Princess Elizabeth delightfully done by Miss Kathleen Nesbitt, and a clever little pedant of a Prince Edward by Master Donald Buckley. Several others of the long cast might be singled out for praise, but, as Bluff King Hal would say, basta!

CARRICK THEATRE

ARTHUR BOURCHIER

AND

VIOLET VANBRUGH

IN

Bluff King Hal

by LOUIS N. PARKER

BLUFF KING HAL

Historical Facts

AUTHOR'S NOTE

BEG to state that this play follows history closely, almost meticulously. The story of Henry and Katharine is a ready-made scenario, and has been waiting nearly four hundred years for a playwright to find it. Kate was to have married Seymour, but the King wrecked her from him. Seymour haunted the court after the marriage, and by so doing placed Kate's life in jeopardy. Henry was 53 years old when he married Kate, and he was gouty. He used to rest his leg on her lap. Protestantism was in its infancy and was heresy. The King, Mary, Elizabeth, and Kate until after she had married Henry) were all devout Catholics. Gardiner proposed the compromise in the treaty with the Emperor just as I have described it. Henry loved rough speech and rough practical jokes. "Let Seymour summer" is exactly what he would have said. He was lavish with nicknames, as was Elizabeth after him. The end of his address to Nancy is a textual quotation. The kissing, the stately dance, and the Venetian dance all took place on the occasion of Nancy's visit. Wriothesley was a great scoundrel, and did with his own hand turn the rack on which Ann Askew lay stretched. Katharine had the courage to argue with Henry on religious questions; she saved Cambridge from confiscation by argument; and the King in his rage at her daring, used the very words I have put in his mouth. Gardiner and Wriothesley insulted the Queen, poisoned the King's mind against her, aroused his jealousy, sent her sister, Lady Tyrwhit, and her friends and servants to the Tower, and persuaded the King to sign her death-warrant. Wriothesley lost that document; it fell into Katharine's hands, and she and Henry—Henry glued to his chair by sickness, and Katharine prone at his feet—had just such a scene as I have presented. Gardiner and Wriothesley were dismissed in the identical words I have used, and the soldiers, brought on by them to arrest the Queen, took them both into custody—as in the play.

As a matter of fact "Bluff King Hal" could be used as a textbook for the study of what appears to be a little known episode in the life of Henry.

I will be quite frank. I have no evidence that the ghosts of dead Queens appeared to Henry. On the other hand, I have no evidence to the contrary. If they did not, they ought to have. It is stated that one of them walks at Hampton Court to the present day. They were much more likely to walk then, as they were fresher. Particular care is taken to distinguish in the programme between the ghosts of the dead and the wraith of the living.

I might have extended the list of accuracies indefinitely, but, as Henry says, "Basta!" which means, Enough.

LOUIS N. PARKER.

Garrick Theatre,

September 4th, 1914.

The Haycock Cadle Co., Camberwell, S.E.

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

Lessee and Manager ... LOUIS MEYER

Saturday, September 5th, at 8.

LOUIS MEYER revives

"THE SILVER KING"

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES and HENRY HERMAN.

Wilfred Denver	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Captain Herbert Skinner (the Spider) ...	Mr. JULIAN ROYCE
Henry Corkett (Geoffry Ware's Clerk)	Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY
Elijah Coombe (a Marine Store Dealer)	Mr. AMBROSE MANNING
Cripps (a Locksmith)	Mr. EDWARD IRWIN
Daniel Jaikes	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Samuel Baxter (a Detective)	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Geoffry Ware	Mr. ROBERT MINSTER
Frank Selwyn	Mr. RICHARD NEVILLE
Tubbs (Proprietor of "The Wheatsheaf")	Mr. GEO. MARTIN
Binks	Mr. ELDRETT GULSON
Brownson (Tradesmen	Mr. JOHN SARGEANT
Mr. Parkyn (a Parish Clerk)	Mr. JOHN BEAUCHAMP
Gailor Pottle	Mr. T. F. NYE
Leaker	Mr. A. E. MAYNE
Railway Inspector	Mr. ARTHUR SEATON
Bilcher (Betting Men	Mr. FORMAN TIDD
Teddy)	Mr. THOS. MURRAY
Detective (Act II)	Mr. F. WARWICK
Cabman	Mr. WALTER PLINGE
Tipsy Passenger ...	Mr. ALFRED H. PHILLIPS
Railway Porter	Mr. PERCY MARLOW
Detective (Act V)	Mr. S. O. PERCIVAL
Mrs. Gamage	Miss VIOLA FINNEY
Tabitha Durden	Miss EMILY SPILLER
Olive Skinner	MRS. LESLIE FABER
Barmaid	Miss PEGGY MAULE
Lady Passenger	Miss MARIAM CHESTER
Old Lady Passenger	Miss CECILA WILMAN
Susie	Miss EILEEN GERARD
Ned Denver	Miss VIOLET MARLEY
Cissie Denver	Miss RENEE MAYER
	(By permission of Mr. Arthur Collins)
Nellie Denver	Miss EDYTH GOODALL
	(By arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie)

School Children, Railway Officials, Detectives, etc.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT I.

Scene I. The Skittle Alley of "The Wheatsheaf" Clerkenwell.
II. Clerkenwell Close
III. 114, Hatton Garden.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1914.

Obviously The Silver King dates back a good deal. It belongs to a time when even in melodrama the heroes were expected to make "speeches" and entirely irrelevant comic people were expected to intervene periodically, just as printed jokes are said to be exchanged by Chinese mandarins in the intervals of a serious conversation. In short, it is more long-winded and more discursive than the present-day model.

But these things are, after all, only skin-deep. The essence of the play is as good and effective as ever. To substitute for the old falsely-accused hero of melodrama a hero who was driven by circumstances to mistake himself for a villain was a master-stroke. So was the invention of the gentleman-burglar, who has had so numerous a progeny in our own day. For these delights one willingly overlooks the worm-eaten melodramatic baggage of beauty-in-distress, faithful family retainer, disguises, voix du sang, and so forth. (Not that the pit and gallery overlook them, by any means; contrariwise, they enjoy them abundantly, and not without tears.)

The one real fault of the play is that there is just a little too much of it. When the playgoer of to-day is out for incident, he is in no mood for rhetoric, and the hero's soliloquies, apostrophes, and prolixities of remorse only just escape being felt as longueurs. They do escape it, however, thanks to the energy and sincerity of Mr. Irving, who takes as much pains to interpret Wilfred Denver as though he were interpreting Hamlet—like the conscientious artist that he is. Miss Edyth Goodall as beauty-in-distress makes the most of the meagre opportunity such a part affords her fine talent. Mr. Julian Royce is a capital Spider, and there is some good robust comic business from Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Forrester Harvey, and Mr. Ambrose Manning. The Strand audience on Saturday night gave the revival the heartiest of welcomes.

ACT II. Scene I. Room in Denver's House.
II. A London Railway Station.
III. Exterior of "The Chequers."
IV. Room in "The Chequers."

ACT III. Scene I. Skinner's Villa near Bromley.
II. Nellie Denver's House (Winter).

ACT IV. Scene I. Library at the Lawn, Kensington Park Gardens.
II. The Grange, Gardenhurst.
NOTE—The curtain will be lowered for four minutes between Scene II. and III. to allow for the heavy change of scenes.
III. Outside Black Brake Wharf, Rotherhithe.
IV. Black Brake Wharf, Rotherhithe.

ACT V. Scene I. Skinner's Villa.
II. The Grange, Gardenhurst.

Three years and six months elapse between Acts II. and III. Six months elapse between Acts III. and IV.

The Play produced by AMBROSE MANNING.

Scenery by Francis H. Bull and A. Pullinger. Mechanics by Pullinger and Pimm. Electrical Effects by P. Sheridan. Costumes by B. & G. Simmons. Miss Goodall's dresses by

Incidental Music by MICHAEL CONNELLY

Programme of Music under the Direction of Mr. Henry Gibson

1	OVERTURE ...	"Mirella"	Gounod
2	SUITE ...	"Three Irish Pictures" ...	John Ansell
3	SELECTION ...	"Merrie England" ...	Edward German
4	Chanson de Matin Scrillana	... ...	Edward Elgar
5	MARCH ...	"Boys of the Old Brigade" ...	Odoardo Barri

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd, London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Matinee on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-30.

General Manager ... ... BERNARD HISHIN
Acting Manager ... ... NORMAN T. NICHOLLS.
Stage Manager ... ... SIDNEY T PEASE
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... ARTHUR SEATON.

Box Office (Mr. JOHN C. BROWN) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Prices:—Private Boxes, £4 4s.. £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d.
Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Last Row, 6s.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d.
Gallery (unreserved), 1s.
Doors Open 8. Matinees 1-45. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

LYRIC THEATRE

Licensee ... ... Mr. EDWARD C. ENGELBACH.
Manager ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15,

A Comic Opera in Three Acts, entitled

...THE...

CHOCOLATE SOLDIER

With apologies to Mr. BERNARD SHAW for an unauthorised parody on one of his Comedies.

Characters in the Opera in the order in which they appear:—

Nadina ..	(Daughter of Col. Popoff) ..	Miss MARGARET ISMAY
Aurelia ..	(Wife of Col. Popoff) ..	Miss AMY AUGARDE
Mascha ..	(Aurelia's Cousin) ..	Miss MABEL BURNEGE
Bumerli ..	(Lieut. in the Servian Army) ..	Mr. DEREK OLDHAM
Massakroff ..	(Capt. in the Bulgarian Army) ..	Mr. LEMPRIERE PRINGLE
Stephan ..	(Servant to Col. Popoff) ..	Mr. ELIOT SKINNER
Mernosk ..	... .	Miss CHRISTINE FERRIS
Jecko ..	.. .. ..	Mr. FRANK MELVILLE
Laska ..	.. .. ..	Miss PHYLLIS ALLEN
Marinska ..	.. .. ..	Miss LORNA DELLA
Poski ..	.. .. ..	Mr. EDMUND DIGUES
Mernitz ..	.. .. ..	Mr. OTTO ALEXANDER
Katinka ..	(Housemaid to Col. Popoff) ..	Miss RENE CAREW
Alexius Sparidoff	(Major in the Bulgarian Army) ..	Mr. ROLAND CUNNINGHAM
Casimir Popoff	(Col. in the Bulgarian Army) ..	Mr. TOM A. SHALE

Officers, Soldiers and Flag-bearers in the Bulgarian Army, Townspeople, Peasants, &c.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

Scenery by McCLEERY. Costumes by NATHAN.
Dances arranged by Mdlle. ROSA. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY.

Stage Manager ... . Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL WOODINGS

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets or any kind of head dress.
This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The principal artists, chorus, orchestra and staff both before and behind the curtain are accepting only a minimum amount of salary during the run of "The Chocolate Soldier." Any profit derived therefrom will be handed over to the Belgian Relief Fund, but the Management have guaranteed that in any event a sum of at least 25 guineas per week during the run of the revival will be handed to the Fund whether a profit is made or not. The following have agreed to act as an Honorary Committee for the purpose of auditing the Accounts:—Mr. E. Chapman, Director of and representing the Ciryl Theatrical Syndicate, Ltd.; Mr. H. Hackett, Chartered Accountant; Mr. R. J. Watson, Manager, London and South Western Bank, Charing Cross; Mr. E. Fladgate, Solicitor to the West End Managers' Association.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

NEAREST TUBE STATION, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £1 1s. to £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 6s. Balcony Stalls, 4s.
Upper Circle, 3s. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 6d.

Doors open at 8 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.15; Matinees at 2.30.
Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

GENERAL MANAGER ... ... Mr. ALAN FENN
ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

YOU have not seen

The CHOCOLATE SOLDIER !!!

Our "arms" are aching now to embrace you.

"The Chocolate Soldier,"

LYRIC THEATRE.

Every Evening, 8-15. Matinee, Wednesday and Saturday, 2-30.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Tuesday
Evening

Sept. 8

Orchestra Stl 7/6

No. J 22

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8TH, 1914, AT 8 O'CLOCK

(SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8.30).

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

The Impossible Woman

A Comedy in Four Acts,

By C. HADDON CHAMBERS.

(Founded on Anne Douglas Sedgwick's (Mrs. Basil de Selincourt) Novel "Tante")

Madame Mercedes Okraska ("Tante")	LILLAH MCCARTHY
Gregory Jardine	GODFREY TEARLE
Franz Lippheim	E. HENRY EDWARDS
Claude Drew	MALCOLM CHERRY
Karen Woodruff	HILDA BAYLEY
Mrs. Talcot	MAY WHITTY
Mrs. Forrester	RUTH MACKAY
Miss Scrotton	HELEN HAYE
Vickers	REGINALD BACH
Maid	MAUD E. BELL

Time—The Present.

Act I.—The Drawing Room in Mrs. Forrester's House, London.
Act II.—Gregory Jardine's Study.
Act III.—Music Room in Madame Okraska's Country House.
Act IV.—Sitting-room in a Village Inn.

The Play produced by the Author.

Scenery for Acts I., II. & IV. by JOSEPH and PHIL HARKER. Scene for Act III. by WALTER HANN & SON.

Miss McCARTHY'S Dresses by OSPOVAT. All other Dresses and Hats by PAQUIN, Ltd., 39 Dover Street, W.

Furniture by SPILLMAN'S, St. Martin's Lane.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

Silverware supplied by CHAPPLE & MANTELL, 32 Strand, W.C.

The Weber Grand Pianofortes supplied by THE ORCHESTRELLE CO., Æolian Hall, New Bond Street

Programme of Music.

1.	(a)	Prelude and Entracte ... "Carmen"	Bizet
	(b)	English National Airs	Arr. by N. O'Neill
2.	(a)	Old French Melody	Traditional
	(b)	Valse from "Faust"	Gounod
	(c)	Violin Solo—Adagio	Handel
3.	(a)	Scotch Airs	Traditional
	(b)	Andante	Cyril Scott
4.	(a)	Valse and Polish Songs	Chopin
	(b)	Violin Solo—Berceuse	Jarnefelt

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Stage Manager, CHARLES LA TROBE.

Musical Director, NORMAN O'NEILL.

MATINEES—EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
(First Matinee, SATURDAY, SEPT. 12.)

SPECIAL PRICES FOR THE AUTUMN SEASON.

Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 5s.
Balcony, 4s. Upper Circle, 2s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.
Telephone—Regent 6030, 6031 and 6032.

Nearest Underground Stations—PICCADILLY and TRAFALGAR SQUARE.

The Theatre is cleansed throughout daily by the "OTOVACUM TURBINE" VACUUM CLEANER.

Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914.

impossible, you are to understand, in the ane sense. For, after all, a woman of the ercedes type is not only possible, but so miliar in modern fiction as to seem almost mmonplace. She is a professional pianist some celebrity, queening it among her little oud of silly devotees; she is cabotine to the ery finger-tips, staging scenes throughout life r the pleasure of acting in them; and she is split child, mischievous, and prone to naughty ings. Whenever this type is presented e same problem apparently recurs: ow to show it as a bundle of contradictions et yet woman, apt to be most sincere in the ery midst of a pose, now greedy for fulsome flattery and now thirsting for simple affection, and so forth and so forth—yet carefully o keep the balance of sympathy in its favour? nd it is a question, perhaps, whether this in self not very important type is worth so much effort from so many authors to get it finally and exhaustively "done." About e point, however, there can be no possible estion whatever: "art" or the "artist temperament," as the cant phrase goes, has really nothing to do with the matter. There are as many Mercedes among the philistines as among the rtists. Only, when they are artists, they can unt more surely on getting your sympathy; nd that, no doubt, is why Mercedes plays the iano so divinely that all the other people in e play, whom she has outrageously insulted ne after another, can only sit and listen ntranced.

The occasion which the playwright has chosen for exhibiting this character is the marriage of Mercedes's ward, Karen. They would get on very well, the young couple, if left to themselves, but Mercedes comes between them and makes mischief. Karen is a silly little goose who quarrels with her husband because he does not bow before the idol as she does. By and by her own eyes are opened; she sees that Mercedes is a bit of a humbug and can be very much of a cat. Then the young people are reconciled, and Mercedes, after humiliating herself in vain, has to brazen out her defeat on the keyboard of her piano.

Perhaps the struggle for the affection of Karen would be more imposing if the girl had some marked individuality, if she gave you the clear impression that she was worth fighting about. But no, she is just a silly little goose, though Miss Hilda Bayley does contrive to make her a very dainty and winsome little goose. And Mr. Godfrey Tearle makes, of course, a very manly and handsome husband for her. But you don't care greatly about the young couple, for you know all the time that they are a mere pretext—a pretext for the exhibition of Mercedes. Miss Lillah McCarthy throws herself (throws is the word) into the part with a devil-may-care abandonment, lets her hair fall loose over it, swathes it in Oriental robes, illustrates the type by scratching her head and rubbing her nose—in short, expends on it a tremendous energy and a wealth of detail and, best of all, a strong sense of the intense humour and irony of the thing. A fascinatingly repellent figure she makes of it, which is just, of course, what artistically had to be made of it. There is some good work, too, from some of the others, notably from Miss May Whitty and Miss Helen Haye, Mr. Malcolm Cherry and Mr. Henry Edwards. Evidently the audience liked the play, for they "called" the playwright; evidently also they were a little puzzled by the heroine, a little in doubt whether they were expected to like her or to detest her, or to do both. Well, that is the essence of the character.

APOLLO THEATRE.

Saturday, September 12th, 1914, at 8 p.m.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S

PRODUCTION OF

Seven Keys to Baldpate

A MYSTERY FARCE,

In Two Acts, with Prologue and Epilogue.

By GEO. M. COHAN.

(Founded on the Story of that name by EARL DERR BIGGERS.)

---

30 seconds interval between Prologue and 1st Act.
30 seconds interval between 2nd Act and Epilogue.
12 minutes interval between Acts 1 and 2.

William Hallowell Magee ..	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Characters he meets at Baldpate.
Elijah Quimby	Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
Mrs. Quimby	Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Characters he sees while at work.
John Bland	Mr. FRANK WAKEFIELD
Mary Norton	Miss DORIS LYTTON
Mrs. Rhodes	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Peters (the Hermit of Baldpate)	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
Myra Thornhill	Miss MONA HARRISON
Lou Max	Mr. HERBERT ALEXANDER
Jim Cargan	Mr. D. MAYOR-COOKE
Thos. Haydan	Mr. EDGAR PAYNE
Jiggs Kennedy (Chief of Police of Asquewan Falls)	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
Hal Bentley (the Owner of Baldpate)	Mr. HUGH GIBSON

The Scene is laid in the Hall of Baldpate Inn.

A signal will be given from the Stage by the sounding of a chime of bells one minute before the rise of Curtain.

Miss Doris Lytton's Frock by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR.
Miss Mona Harrison's Frock by Madame ADELE.
Coats and Hats by ANN TAILOR, LTD.
Scenery constructed by JOHN BRUNSKILL and painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN.
Electrical Effects by T. J. DIGBY.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by MAPLE & Co.

The Play produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

MATINEE
Every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	... Mr. B. CAMPLIN-SMITH
Asst. Stage Manager...		Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager ...		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10 'Phone Gerrard 3243.

Nearest Station, PICCADILLY CIRCUS (Tube).

General Manager ... ...(For Mr. Tom B. Davis)... Mr A. C. BELSEY

ST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY.

That Has Made An Immediate Success.

harles Hawtrey presented London, pollo Theatre last evening, with a l entertainment called "Seven Baldpate." It is an American that extraordinary actor-author M. Cohan, who has put humour, and thrills into this "mystery dapted by him from a published someone else. The play is in two h prologue and epilogue, and the tion takes place in the Baldpate midwinter, when that mountain r summer holiday-makers is closed season. Just how an American ets into that hotel and stays there write a novel in twenty-four hours a bet is Mr. Cohan's theme, but a roposition such as that is will pre- iew playgoers for the thrilling and s events that follow when the im- n of the writer allows the one and to the Baldpate Hotel to have six ns.

rrival one by one of the crooks, d reporters keeps up a never-ending fun and excitement. The play normous success last night, and in g of it Mr. George Tully shared the with Mr. Hawtrey. J.W.

Plays

THE LITTLE THEATRE

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, STRAND.

Sole Proprietress - - Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON

IN AID OF THE FUNDS OF THE WAR REFUGEES' COMMITTEE

Mr. S. W. CARROLL requests the pleasure of Mr Ian Walters'

Company to the Private Press Performance of "Forget-Me-Not," on Monday Evening, September 14th, at 8 p.m.

R.S.V.P. (This Ticket will admit.)

Numbered Seat D 2

At 8 p.m.

A NEW VERSION

By BERNARD MERIVALE and FREDK. FENN

OF

FORGET-ME-NOT

BY

HERMAN MERIVALE and F. C. GROVE

CAST

Stephanie, Marquise de Mohrivart	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
Alice Verney	... Miss CICELY STUCKEY
Miss Foley	... Miss HELEN ROUS
Sir Horace Welby ...	... Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Barrato	... Mr. DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY
Prince Malleotti	... Mr. E. H. KELLY
The Marquis de Mohrivart	... Mr. ERNEST A. DOUGLAS
Jacques	... Mr. H. COOPER
Servant at the Verneys ...	... Mr. NORMAN KING

The Play produced by Mr. CYRIL VERNON

Scenery by A. L. LYNDHURST

Dresses by BOUÉ SŒURS

Musical Director ... Mr. CORELLI WINDEATT

ACT I. ... ... De Mohrivart's Gaming House in Paris
ACTS II., III., IV. ... At the Verneys' Villa in Rome

Intervals of Ten Minutes between each Act for such men as you there would not be such women as I." Mr. Ben Webster undertakes, with his accustomed earnestness, the character of Sir Horace Welby. The other parts—all of a lesser calibre—are in capital hands. Indeed, "Forget-Me-Not" is well worth seeing, for its dramatic texture remains strong even if the edges are little frayed. Take note that the profits of these performances will be given to the Belgian Refugees' Fund.

* * *

Speaking of work for war sufferers, I saw a touching example at the Little Theatre. Near me there sat a young and lovely lady most gorgeously gowned. Throughout the play and throughout the intervals she never ceased knitting a soldier's sock. I could not help reflecting that the sacrifice of a single specimen from the Fair Knitter's would have yielded sufficient money to buy some thousands of socks for our heroes. And, indeed, there would still have been sufficient surplus wherewith the fascinating tricoteuse might have bought some sort of dress material to cover her extremely unprotected neck withal. But I dare say she meant well.

Diamond Encrusted Fingers

The modern Woman with a Past, which, so far as the British Drama is concerned, was supposed to come into fashion with Pinero's still best play, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," really started with the late Dion Boucicault's perhaps worst drama, "Formosa," which, by its production at Drury Lane at the end of 1869, aroused such a sensational newspaper correspondence. Eight years later the up-to-date Woman with a Past found further illustration in the character of Stephanie de Mohrivart in Merivale and Grove's drama, which was produced by the now veteran actress Genevieve Ward at the Lyceum and was subsequently played by her in nearly all parts of what Mr. Micawber called "the habitable globe." This drama was revived last Monday at the Little Theatre by Mr. Sydney W. Carroll, who lately toured the play for a brief space in the provinces and the suburbs, anon bringing it to the Coronet. Miss Miriam Lewes again represents powerfully the shady lady who in due course denounces her former paramour in the famous sentence, "If it were not

"Forget-Me-Not,"

LONDON OPERA HOUSE

(One Minute from Holborn Tube Station)

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to CHARLES B. COCHRAN, 13 Old Cavendish Street, W.

DAILY AT 2.30, 7 AND 9 O'CLOCK.

WAR PICTURES by JURY'S IMPERIAL BIOSCOPE.

Miss ESME BERINGER will recite "Erbert the Bank Clerk," and "England's Answer" by Rudyard Kipling.

CONCLUDING WITH

A Military Sketch in Five Scenes by SEYMOUR HICKS and EDWARD KNOBLAUCH, entitled

'ENGLAND EXPECTS'

(Produced by SEYMOUR HICKS).

CAST.

Hon. Eustace Baring ...	... ...	SEYMOUR HICKS
Adolphus	... ...	HARDING COX
A Page Boy	... ...	SIDNEY FITCHIE
Herr Schmidt ...	... (a Bandmaster) ...	HARRY REYNOLDS
Guy		EDGAR J. COYNE
Tommy.	... (Nuts) ...	MONTAGUE TRAVERS
Alky		KEITH WILLIAMS
Reggie		HAROLD PERRY
1st Recruiting Sergt. ...	... ...	H. EVANS
Policeman	... ...	M. M. EAGOTT
Coster Boy	... ...	L. GREVENSON
Tramp	... ...	C. HART
Lady Mary Winthrope	... ...	ISOBEL ELSOM
Coster Girl	... ...	LILY MAXWELL
A Widow	... ...	ELIZABETH WATSON
Noisettes ...	Pat Egan, Jean Challis, Lilian Valerie, Gladys Brenda, May Taverner, Elsie Margetson, &c.

British, French and Belgian Soldiers, Germans, Recruiting Officers, Pipers, Crowds, Band of the Page Guards, etc., etc.

Scene 1. Supper Time at the Empire Hotel, "Slacking!"
" 2. A Street, "Cheering."
" 3. Outside Wellington Barracks, "Enlisting."
" 4. On the Road to Cambrai, "Marching."
" 5. The Trenches, "Fighting."

Incidental Music composed and arranged by EDWARD JONES.

Songs, "Percy Get a Move on" (Words and Music by Dom Pedro De Zulueta); "Your King and Country Want You" (The "Daily Mail" Recruiting Song, written and composed by Paul A. Rubens, Published by Chappell & Co., Ltd.), will be sung by Miss ISOBEL ELSOM.

All receipts and royalties received for the sale of copies will be given to Queen Mary's Fund.

Scenery and Effects by JOHN BELL.

Arms, Accoutrements, Quick Firers, etc., by POTTERTONS.

General Manager (for C. B. Cochran) JOSEPH WILSON.
Assistant Manager CLIVE R. McKEE.
Stage Manager HARRY ULPH.
Orchestra under the direction of EDWARD JONES.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

EXTRACT FROM THE ROYAL WARRANT OF THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 6. The name of the actual and responsible Manager for the time being of every Theatre or other place of entertainment for which a Licence is granted by the Lord Chamberlain shall be painted in large and legible characters outside the Theatre or other place of entertainment, and shall be continuously exhibited during such performances in such a position as to be easily seen by the audience.

.O.H.
KINGSWAY.

Matinee
17/9/1914

"England Expects."
Fauteuils.
B 5
To be retained.

Another Dra...a.

The London Opera House is adding to its experiences this week by staging drama. "It is, however," as the nurse said of the baby, "a very little one," for it plays just over an hour only and makes no attempt to compete with the spectacular productions of Drury Lane Theatre. Mr. Seymour Hicks is part author (with Mr. Edward Knoblauch), and plays the leading rôle—that of a nearly middle-aged aristocrat who suddenly awakes to his country's danger and gets busy. The drama is called "England Expects —." It is in five scenes, and all who find that melodrama inspires their patriotism and expresses their feelings will be well satisfied with this. The play is given three times a day at popular prices and a free gallery. Recitations and the kinema pictures make up a nearly two hours' entertainment. J.W.

G 148A
STALLS
Sept. 19.
1914
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS HALF

EVERY EVENING at 8 (MATINEES at 2)

WILL BE ACTED

THOSE WHO SIT IN JUDGMENT

A NEW PLAY, IN FOUR ACTS, BY

MICHAEL ORME

Michael Trent	(Managing Director of the Beresu Rubber Company)	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Frank Mears	(A Clapworth Solicitor)	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Margaret Mears	(His Wife)	HENRIETTA WATSON
Tom Forbes	(Margaret's Brother)	REGINALD OWEN
Sir Jacob Tukes		FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Lady Tukes		HELEN FERRERS
Dolly Tukes		ROWENA JEROMÉ
Gerald Atkinson		NICHOLAS HANNEN
Joan Atkinson		GERTRUDE LANG
Daniel Wade	(A Trader on the Gold Coast)	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Kuma	(The Beresu Chief)	NORMAN McKEOWN
Kwaku	(Trent's Head Boy)	CYRIL CATTLEY
Ajua	(Kwaku's Daughter)	BABARA HANNAY
Florrie	(Maid at the Mears')	ZOË GORDON

Mr. Robins	JOHN RIDLEY	Shareholders in the Beresu Rubber Company, Ltd.	GUY DAWSON
Mr. Turnbull	SYDNEY HAMILTON		J. ADEANE BARLOW
Mr. Tapping	HENRY TEMPLETON		ERNEST MARTIN
A little old Shareholder	IAN O. WILL		MURIEL BARNBY
A Clergyman	LEWIS FIELDER		MABEL KNOWLES
Mr. Treblett	VICTOR WILTSHIRE		IRENE BARNETT
Commissionaire	W. COATS BUSH		STELLA RHO

Act I. The Drawing-room of the Mears' House—Clapworth Common.
Act II. A Compound on the Outskirts of Beresu, on the Gold Coast. (Ten months later.)
Act III. Same as Act I. (Three months later.)
Act IV. The General Meeting of Shareholders in the Beresu Rubber Company, Ltd., at the Ludgate Hotel. (Three weeks later.)

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER is much indebted to Mr. FRANCIS G. CROWTHER, Secretary for Native Affairs, Gold Coast Colony, for his valuable assistance in connection with the Second Act—the Scene, Native Customs, Costumes, etc.

The Scenery Painted by G. SACKMANN.

THE TIMES

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1914.

Probably by some happy accident rather than by design the author offers in this play an anthology of English prose styles. Style No. 1: the hopelessly illiterate. This is attributed to suburban solicitors and the wives of City knights, who drop their h's and mix up their singulars and plurals in a way more familiar, we confess, to our own ear on the stage than in either the City or the suburbs. It is, in short, not so much a style as a conventional sign by which dramatists indicate that the speakers are thoroughly vulgar persons. Style No. 2: the half-educated or cheap journalese. It is used, we regret to say, by the author's "sympathetic" characters — hero, heroine, and heroine's young brother. Specimens of its choice vocabulary are "sapient" and "adipose"—a really dreadful lingo. Style No. 3: the dithyrambic. This is assigned to the hero, when describing a West African swamp, and we would only say about it that we much prefer the real article by Mr. Conrad. Style No. 4: "nigger English," used by the hero in conversing with the West African natives. This, for all we know, is quite correct, and certainly it vexes us less than Nos. 1, 2, and 3.

And as with the sayings, so with the doings. We swallow the scene on the West Coast much more easily than we do the scenes in the City and the suburbs. It appears from the playbill that the African scene has been supervised by an expert, the Secretary for Native Affairs, Gold Coast Colony; and we can only regret that there was no secretary for City and suburban affairs to advise the author in the home scenes. The natives are as amusing as they are (we must assume) authentic, and they swindle the hero over a rubber concession with a hard cynicism only less thrilling than their musical prelude to the vengeance they propose taking on him for having shot one of their girls by mistake. There is a death from fever, the quandary of a hero dazed by brandy (the quinine has given out) and abandoned by his "boys," and his hairbreadth escape from his enemies—all very weird and "all worry capital." Honours here are easy between "Michael Orme" and the Secretary for Native Affairs, Gold Coast Colony.

But at home, in the City and the suburbs, we feel anywhere but at home. Here the illiterate vulgar, already mentioned, are noisily exuberant, but fail to persuade us that they really exist. A Sir Jacob thanks the hostess for her "well-cooked dinner"; his wife thinks it not so good as the food at the Mansion House. We no more believe in this pair than we believe in their host and hostess—a cad and a femme incomprise—credible enough singly, but quite incredible as husband and wife. By and by the husband lifts his hand against the lady, not in the way of kindness, and she runs away to throw herself at the head of the hero, lately escaped from West Africa, and hitherto platonically in love with her. Let us hope that the lady has money; otherwise she must prove rather an embarrassment to a man who has just been dismissed from the managing directorship of a rubber company at an excited meeting of shareholders. The excited meeting was delightfully excited; if rubber shareholders really behave like that the City must be much better fun than some of us had supposed.

The hero is Sir George Alexander, who (like ourselves) hardly knows what to make of his purple patch à la Conrad, but is very good when dazed somewhere on the Gold Coast. He also seems dazed at the shareholders' meeting, which is being dazed in the wrong place, but that is presumably not so much his fault as the author's. The femme incomprise is Miss Henrietta Watson, restrained, sincere, making every word (even the author's prose style No. 2) tell, distilling every drop of emotion from her part. Mr. Norman McKeown makes a brave thing of the African Chief, and there is some clever acting from Mr. Nigel Playfair, Mr. Reginald Owen, and Mr. Nicholas Hannen. There was hearty applause on Saturday night, and at the end a call for the author, Mrs. J. T. Grein. This is understood to be the lady's first, or first important, play, and on the whole we can join in the congratulations. Evidently she has imagination and a sense of the scenic; by and by she may distinguish more clearly between observed realities and theatrical conventions. Incidentally, she might say goodbye to Style No. 2.

Waters, J.
Plays

THE PLAYHOUSE

Thursday

17/9/1914

Orch Stall

E 19

This to be retained

To-night, Wednesday, September 23rd, at 8.30 (other Evenings at 9)

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present, for the First Time, a New and Original Comedy, in Three Acts, called

YOUNG WISDOM

By RACHEL CROTHERS

MAJOR CLAFFENDEN		MR. FRED KERR
MRS. CLAFFENDEN		MISS LENA HALLIDAY
VICTORIA	(Their Daughters)	MISS MADGE TITHERADGE
GAIL		MISS MARGERY MAUDE
BARRY	(Their Son)	MASTER ERIC RAE
CHRISTOPHER BRUCE		MR. EVAN-THOMAS
PETER GERSHAW		MR. JOHN DEVERELL
MAX NORTON		MR. COWLEY-WRIGHT
JEAN		MR. HENRI LAURENT

Act I. Drawing Room at the Claffendens' in Scotland. An Evening in September.
Act II. Room in an old farm-house. Twelve o'clock the same night. } Bruce Act III. Drawing room at the Claffendens' in Scotland. Four o'clock the next morning. } Smith

The Play Produced by Mr. FRED KERR

Miss MARGERY MAUDE's Dresses by OSROVAL, 60, New Bond Street.
Miss MADGE TITHERADGE's Dresses designed and executed by LUCILE LTD., 23, Hanover Square, W.
Miss LENA HALLIDAY's Dresses by Madame BEATRICE RAYMOND, 76, Regent Street, W.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8 o'clock (other Evenings at 8.30) by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN and Mr. HERBERT CLAYTON'S Company in a Military Musical Incident, called

ON DUTY

Words and Lyrics by HARRY GRATTAN. Incidental Music and Songs by HERMANN E. DAREWSKI

THE OLD SERGEANT		MR. HERBERT CLAYTON
THE BUGLER BOY	(His Son)	MASTER WILFRED THORPE
TROOPER SMITH		MR. C. GORDON SHERRY
TROOPER BENBOW		MR. JOHN MORLEY
TROOPER "HARRY BROWN"		MR. ARTHUR HATHERTON

Scene: An outpost on the Belgian frontier at night.

Produced by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN.

NOTE.—The Artistes appearing in the above Sketch wish it to be announced they much regret they are unable to serve in the British Army owing to all of them being beyond the age limit at present in force.

D-10
3724
1911
Waters, J.
Plays

Miss Rachel Crothers, the American author whose play "Young Wisdom" was produced at The Playhouse on Wednesday evening, has never been in England, but if she had been present the other night she might have been satisfied with the friendly reception accorded her story. It is not one to enthuse about. It is a simple, unpretentious affair about two sisters who get it into their silly young heads that it would be a very modern thing ("striking a blow for woman's liberty," one of them, I think, calls it) to live for a while with the men they are engaged to—to see if their tempers and ideals are sympathetic—before actually marrying them.

A Curious Elopement.

One of the sisters actually abducts the milksop she is engaged to and takes him off on what she calls an elopement the evening before she is to be married from her father's house. Her sister and her young man follow them, and by some curious coincidence they all meet an hour later at the cottage of an utter stranger, a summer visitor painting pictures. This artist of the cottage curiously enough becomes the confidant of all four young people, and as he falls at once in love with the girl engaged to the milksop he brings them all home again "to the place from whence they came," and there, winning the gratitude of everyone for his interference, succeeds in putting the milksop out of court and getting the girl to transfer her affections to him. The company made the most of this material, Mr. John Deverell as the milksop being much the best. Miss Margery Maude made the most of her few chances, and Master Eric Rae, a delightful boy character actor, was immense. W.

The Financial Times

WEDNESDAY, 23rd SEPT., 1914.

GAIETY THEATRE CO.

To the Editor of THE FINANCIAL TIMES.

Sir,—Before the forthcoming meeting on 24th September of the Gaiety shareholders I should like to call attention to certain figures in the balance-sheet recently issued which seem to require explanation. The revenue account shows a profit of £267, but the balance-sheet shows liabilities of £24,000, made up as follows:—

Mortgage of lease	£12,000
Loans and overdraft	7,000
Balance from last year	5,000
	£24,000

and a reserve account of £12,000 has disappeared.

The mortgage for £12,000 was effected on 29th May. Will the directors inform us how and when this money has been disposed of? With regard to the reserve account and balance, when were these sums attached? Did the reserve account exist, and if so, in what form? The amount estimated as the value of acting rights to July, 1913, was £14,500. This item is now brought forward as £26,000. "After the Girl" is the only new piece produced during the year. Is it suggested that the acting rights of this piece are worth £11,500? Information is also desired with reference to the present estimate of £10,000 for acting rights. Of what do these consist? When it becomes necessary to write off in one year £16,000 for depreciation, the shareholders may be incredulous of a value of £10,000 being attached to the remainder. May we have particulars of investments at cost?

With a balance of £28 in hand on 3rd July the directors are respectfully asked how they propose to carry on the theatre and to finance any future productions.

Thanks to the rivalry of the Adelphi Theatre under the control of Mr. George Edwardes what was foreseen has happened. A splendid theatrical property has lost all its value. "Our Miss Gibbs" was the high water mark. Since then Miss Gertie Millar, our favourite star, brings fortune to the Adelphi in "The Quaker Girl." The services of Mr. Tanner and Mr. Monckton, who have put so much money into our pockets, were reserved for the same theatre, and finally our regretted comedian, Mr. Edmund Payne after an interval was also annexed. What other result could we expect?

The directors owe the shareholders an explanation on all these points, and we trust they will have the courtesy to supply it.—I am, &c.,

W. A. VICARS.

The Stage.

LONDON, THURSDAY, OCT. 1, 1914.

The Gaiety Theatre Co., Ltd.

Shareholders in the Gaiety Theatre Company have not had this year the satisfaction of a dividend. In the past few years the dividend, which occasionally rose to 20 per cent., has maintained the average at 15 per cent. The report submitted to the shareholders at the annual general meeting on Thursday last at the Gaiety showed a credit balance on the year's working of £267 6s. 1d. The figures in the revenue account show that during the year £64,344 was derived from entertainments receipts, royalties, profits on tours, etc; £40,090 was spent on stage expenses; £6,019 on management, front of the house and general expenses; £3,057 on rent, rates, and taxes; and £5,523 on advertising and bill-posting.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1914.

The directors of the Theatre Royal Drury Lane report a profit for the year ending June 30 last of £25,016 4s. 5d., and recommend a dividend of 10 per cent. It is hoped that circumstances will permit the annual Christmas entertainment to be produced as usual on Boxing night.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

GLOBE
Theatre

Wednesday
30/9/1914

Orch. Stall
D 1

This to be retained

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1914,
And Every Evening at 8.
Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

MAMEENA

By OSCAR ASCHE.

A Dramatisation of RIDER HAGGARD'S "CHILD OF STORM."

CHARACTERS.

Allan Quatermain	HARCOURT BEATTY
King Mpande	HUBERT CARTER
Prince Umbuyazi	FREDERIC WORLOCK
Prince Cetshwayo	GEORGE D. TRELOAR
Saduka	OSCAR ASCHE
Zikali	HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Umbezi	FRED LEWIS
Masapo	TOM MOWBRAY
Mapita	CALEB PORTER
Messenger	GEORGE SKILLAN
Satoza (servant to Zikali)	JOHN FLANAGAN
Scowl (servant to Allan Quatermain)	KUAMINA ALEXANDER
Princess Nandi	DORA BARTON
Unkomazi	BESSIE MAJOR
Mameena	LILY BRAYTON

Praisers, Warriors, Attendants, Women of the Kraal.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT I.

Scene 1.—The Cave of Zikali the Wizard.
Scene 2.—Unkomazi's Hut in Umbezi's Kraal at Endulinda.
Scene 3.—A month later. Umbezi's Kraal.
Scene 4.—Five weeks later. The same.
Scene 5.—King Mpanda's Kraal, Nodwengu.
Scene 6.—The Wedding.

ACT II.

Scene 1.—Fifteen months later. An Aloe Grove near Nodwengu.
Scene 2.—An Open Space near Nodwengu.

ACT III.

Scene 1.—A year later. Umbezi's Kraal at Enyoni.
Scene 2. Four days later. The same.
Scene 3.—Next morning. The same.

ACT IV.

Scene 1. The Rocks over the Tugela River.

ACT V.

King Mpande's Kraal, Mgomezulu.

The Play produced by OSCAR ASCHE.
Details of Zulu dress and customs under the supervision of JAMES STUART.
The Music by CHRISTOPHER WILSON.
Scenery by JOSEPH and PHIL HARKER.
Wigs and make-up supplied by CLARKSON.
The Costumes and Properties collected in Zululand by JAMES STUART.
Musical Director: CHRISTOPHER WILSON.
Stage Manager: J. FRITZ RUSSELL.
Asst. Stage Manager: JOHN FLANAGAN.
Chief Mechanist: M. J. COVERDALE. Wardrobe Mistress: M. CHAMPION.

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1914.

Though as a play Mameena is naught, as a quasi kinematographic exhibition of Zuluised and Zulu life it is curious and amusing. Not the semi-Anglicized Zululand of to-day, of course, but the old independent Zululand of the day before yesterday, when the noble savage ran wild and flourished his assegai in frantic war-dances. Here are brown skins, nodding plumes, wizards, kraals, impis, native music, and strange gutturals which may, for all the audience knows, be the Zulu language in its classic purity. It is almost a pity that the chiefs speak English, because the English that they speak is the slack and slipshod English of Englishmen without an ear for style. The rich jabbering and grunting and whooping of the common people is, on the whole, distinctly preferable.

What story there is revolves round Mameena, described as "a kind of Zulu Helen of Troy," but really a mere minx, who flirts with white traders and runs from one black husband to another. All the men are supposed to be her helpless victims, and you look to Mameena, therefore, to display the voluptuous fascinations of a grande amoureuse, but Miss Lily Brayton apparently has other views. If the love-making is tamer than you had expected, the quarrelling of the Chiefs leaves nothing to be desired; it is like the gentlemen in "Pickwick," "worry fierce." Quarrelling or wooing, Mr. Oscar Asche is a tremendous figure, and there is brave work from both Mr. Hubert Carter and Mr. Herbert Grimwood. The scenic background is novel and artistic, and the whole "production" ingenious.

D-10
3724
1911
Waters, J.
Plays

"MAMEENA."

All who have read Sir Rider Haggard's "Child of Storm" the romance of which "Mameena" is a dramatization, will remember that, like other works by that distinguished author, the scene is laid in Zululand, a country whose people were, for the first time, formed into a nation by Tshaka early in the nineteenth century.

Tshaka, by far the most famous Zulu and one of the most remarkable men that ever lived, a conquering warrior who has been variously described as the South African Attila or Napoleon, had several brothers. On his assassination in 1828 he was succeeded by one of these, Dingana, who was in his turn, succeeded in 1840 by another, Mpande. During the latter's reign of 32 years the country enjoyed comparative peace. An exception must, however, be made in regard to the year 1856, when intense rivalry between the King's chief sons, Mbuyazi and Cetshwayo, burst into flame, and involved the country in serious civil war. A battle was fought in December of the same year, near the mouth of the Tugela, in which many thousand are said to have been either slain or drowned owing to the river being in full flood. Cetshwayo was victorious. The fate of Mbuyazi remains uncertain, but he is believed to have been either killed or drowned. It is this great conflict, known as the Battle of the Tugela or Ndondakusuka, which forms the historical conclusion to the story. The result of the engagement was that Cetshwayo was not only universally acknowledged to be heir-apparent, but became practically King of the Zulus, whilst his father, Mpande, was obliged to content himself with but a shadow of royal authority.

Even in the days of Mpande, regiments were occasionally sent to attack tribes which had not tendered allegiance to the Zulus. This explains the expedition against a chief Bangu, undertaken by Saduka with Allan Quatermain's assistance, and alluded to in the First Act.

The army that could offer such resistance as did the Zulus to powerful British columns in 1879 succeeding in the almost entire destruction of one at Isandhlwana was a surprisingly efficient organisation, particularly as the warriors were, for the most part, armed only with shields and assegais, without aid from cavalry or artillery. Only by an enforcement of universal military service could these extraordinary results be achieved. In the play the audience is kept constantly in touch with the Zulu martial spirit, which was always very proud and fierce. This spirit, identical in many respects with "Prussian militarism," though without its malice, was not definitely broken until 1887, when England took over the government of the country.

An attempt is made in "Mameena" to reproduce also something of Zulu life and character when the country was still under its own régime, and when the prestige of the invincible army was still at its height. Great care has been taken to introduce incidents, not only in accordance with the romance, but in as strict conformity as possible to the life of an exceedingly interesting people—the brave and savage aristocracy of South Africa. Many of their habits, customs and superstitions, their pastimes, dancing, singing, attitudes, mannerisms and language have been introduced under the guidance of the well-known authority on Zulu matters, Mr. J. Stuart, author of "History of the Zulu Rebellion, 1906," whilst all the costumes as well as the properties used in the play were purchased direct from the Zulus themselves.

It is probably not too much to say that, merely as a collection of Zulu curios, that obtained for "Mameena" is the most complete which has ever been made.

The aim, however, has been to reproduce not so much the interminable detail of savage life in its various aspects, interesting as much of this would undoubtedly be to civilized people, as, during opportunities presented by the dramatization of a story, full of a striking interest of its own, to set before the audience material sufficient for the correct appreciation of a type of drama hitherto unattempted on the British, and perhaps any other, stage.

It only remains to add that "Mameena," who gives her name to the play, is a kind of Zulu Helen of Troy, whose ambition and fascinations, as set out in Sir Rider Haggard's romance, bring about the fall and death of the prince Mbuyazi and the triumph of his brother Cetshwayo, who as King of Zululand, was afterwards conquered by the British.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

CRITERION

THEATRE

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

To-night, Thursday, October 1st, at 8.30

IN AID OF QUEEN MARY'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND will be performed for the first time a new Comedy in Three Acts, entitled

Sir Richard's Biography

By WILFRED T. COLEBY.

Gertrude Vyse	.. (Widow of Sir Richard Vyse)	Miss MARY MOORE
George Vyse	.. .. (Her Son)	.. Mr. ALGERNON WEST
Sir James Aplin, M.D., F.R.C.S., etc	.. (Her Guardian)	Mr ERIC LEWIS
Edith Crawley	.. (Her Secretary)	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Parker	. . (Her Maid)	.. Miss PHYLLIS BARKER
Neville	.. (Her Gardener)	Mr EDWARD RIGBY
Arthur Bretton	.. .. (A Widower)	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Kitty Bretton	.. (His Daughter)	.. Miss DOROTHY BELL
Mrs Potts	.. (A Plain Young Lady)	Miss PHYLLIS STUCKEY
Miss Strange	.. (A Pretty ditto)	Miss MARGERY SARGENT

SCENE. Hall in Lady Vyse's Country House at Sealands, on the Hampshire Coast.

Dresses by Paquin, Dover Street. Madame Alexandra, Baker Street. Miss Mary Moore's evening gown by Worth, Hanover Square. Michee Zac, Hanover St. Flowers, etc., by Russell, Haverstock Hill. Scenery by Hemsley. Piano by Rogers, Berners St. Wigs by Clarkson

The Play produced by SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

Preceded at 8 by

WAGES NO OBJECT

A Comedy in One Act from the French of MAX MAUREY.

Christopher Hankey	.. ..	.. Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Mrs. Hankey	.. .. (His Wife)	Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Mr. Butterworth	.. .. (His Friend)	Mr. ARTHUR HARE
Alfred	.. (Cook-General)	.. Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Henry	.. ..	Mr CHRISTMAS GROSE

SCENE.—Mr Hankey's Flat

On subsequent evenings the performance of "Sir Richard's Biography" will commence at 9, and of "Wages No Object" at 8.30.

Matinees of both Plays every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

The J. H. Squire Sextette will play—

Before Curtain Raiser

(1) Princes March .. .. Rosse

Before Act I

(2) (a) Ban Love Lyrics .. .. .. Woodforde-Finden
(b) Temple Bells (b) Till I Wake
(c) Kashmiri Song (c) Less than the Dust

Before Act II

(3) (a) Softly awakes my Heart .. .. .. Saint-Saens
(b) Quanter si bella .. .. Bouchi

Before Act III

(4) (a) Those Dreams of Love .. .. Miss Heron Maxwell
(b) Bolero .. .. Moskowski
(c) Valse Caprice .. .. .. Durang

Business Manager .. .. Mr. CECIL BRETON

Stage Manager .. .. Mr REGINALD WALTER

D-10
3724
1011
Waters, J.
Plays

The play in which Miss Mary Moore appeared last night at the Criterion Theatre seems to have been written for her, and it fits her like a well-cut glove. Mr. Colcby no doubt has had some assistance in his task from consideration of the parts she has played since "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace," or indeed, going back earlier, since "The Tyranny of Tears." It may not be said that he is altogether successful in the task of exploiting the humours of the selfish, middle-aged woman with a genius for getting her own way, though up to a certain point he is triumphant. For the first act is a very clever and entertaining piece of artificial light comedy, so good and so complete also that it seems a pity there was a second. We could have been well content to form our own conclusions as to the outcome of the marriage with which the act concludes, without having the author's development of his proposition or half-hearted attempt to give the piece a happy ending. Miss Moore represented Gertrude Vyse, widow, and mother of a grown-up son. She had written a Biography of her husband, with the assistance of her friend Sir James Aplin, a retired once famous physician; and the work, in reality, is a monotonous exposition of her amiability and unselfishness as a wife. In a neatly written scene we are shown that this description is utterly untrue. Lady Vyse wants to get married again and find a husband who will be her slave. She selects as husband Mr. Arthur Bretton, widower, who, after a life of sacrifice to his wife and then to his daughter, wants a spouse who will worship and cherish him, and thinks that he has discovered her in the heroine of Sir Richard's Biography. At the end of the first act we see Arthur and Lady Vyse engaged, each expecting to find in the other a devoted slave; incidentally we discover that Arthur's self-willed daughter is on the point of wedding George Vyse, Gertrude's son, and that Sir James had advised each of the men to secure happiness by taking a strong line.

Up to this point the play was very amusing in its artificial studies of character, and witty at times in dialogue, and very real in construction. Afterwards the construction becomes unsatisfactory: indeed, the work grows nebulous. The piece seems to mark time during the second act, where we are shown the disillusion of the two husbands and their vain efforts to get their own way. In the early part of the third act a sort of secondary plot exhibits itself. Lady Vyse had engaged as secretary Miss Edith Cranley, a sly, pretty girl, obviously incompetent as secretary. Edith, an orphan, is a cold-blooded creature, determined to make a snug home for herself, so she set her cap—to be more accurate her pretty head—at Sir James. The old bird, though delighted to flirt with her, had no wish to marry her. The secondary plot shows how Sir James, whilst meddling with the affairs of Bretton and his wife, got into a mess, for he allowed Gertrude's husband, when furious with his wife, to dictate to him a love letter addressed to Edith proposing an elopement, and this letter, in the handwriting of the old gentleman, enabled Miss Edith, with the assistance of the other characters, to force the ex-physician into an engagement. What really became of George and his wife, or their son and daughter, was obscure; there was a suggestion that after their quarrels came a reconciliation, but nothing indicating that either union found any true basis for happiness.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE COURT.

"THE SPHINX."

On Saturday, October 3, 1914, was produced here a play, in four acts and an Apotheosis, by Janette Steer, entitled:—

The Sphinx.

Mary ..... Miss Janette Steer
Evelyn ..... Miss Barbara Everest
Sibby ..... Miss Mattie Block
Hortense ..... Miss Marianne Caldwell
Lisette ..... Miss Kitty Marion
Cullam ..... Miss Edith Hunter
Nura ..... Miss Stella Campbell
Tom ..... Mr. Langhorne Burton
Philip ..... Mr. Henry Hargreaves
Waiter ..... Mr. E. H. Hincks
Murray ..... Mr. Robert Hicks
Herr Schmidt ..... } Mr. Henry Daniell
Doctor ..... }

Act one, 1911.—Mary's Studio in Kensington. Act two.—One month elapses. The same. Act three.—Hotel in Grindelwald. One year has elapsed. Act four.—One month elapses. Tom's House at St. Germain. An apotheosis.—Two years elapse. The Studio. Studio scene painted by W. T. Hemsley. Stage manager, Mr. Stanley Roberts. Play produced by the author.

COURT THEATRE.

"THE SPHINX."

PRESUMABLY it is called "The Sphinx" because it is an inscrutable play and the riddle of its meaning no man can guess. No, nor woman either, unless Miss Janette Steer, who wrote it, produced it, and acted the chief part in it, can interpret it. Possibly she can, but certainly last night she failed to do so in four acts and an "apotheosis." Miss Steer's character is that of a married woman who is labelled the Idealist—all the characters are labelled, some at great length—and lives up to her label by denying herself to her husband and taking to sculpture. The husband—labelled the Sensualist in case we should not be able to guess his true character—found frequent consolation elsewhere, and so far as we could keep count kissed every female character in the play. Kissing was his hobby, just as sculpture was his wife's. Sometimes his victims objected, sometimes they didn't. One of them, who was in some obscure way a young relation of his wife's, lived with him quite a long time until one day he talked to her like the masterful male he was and the silly girl poisoned herself, quite forgetting that a gentleman—he was always a gentleman; his wife said that even after she had divorced him—sometimes says things he doesn't mean when he has reached the stage of breakfasting off "cognac and a devilled kidney." Whereupon he died of stage shock or indigestion. Strange to say, in the "apotheosis" he turned up alive and well, but somewhat chastened, expounding on the domestic hearth some pitiable nonsense about the regeneration of man—how he must be born twice of woman, once of her body and the second time of her spirit. At the best he wasn't a very nice man, but we liked him truculent and rakish and sensual better than humbled, reformed, and anæmic, and altogether Mr. Langhorne Burton played him very well. Also Miss Barbara Everest was excellent as his chief victim. The audience took the play in good part.

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Under the Management of GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10th, at 8 p.m., and Following Evenings at 8.15.

Mr. ALFRED BUTT

PRESENTS

Miss LAURETTE TAYLOR

In a Comedy of Youth, in Three Acts, entitled:

"PEG O' MY HEART"

By J. HARTLEY MANNERS.

"Oh, there's nothing half so sweet in life
As Love's Young Dream."

The Characters in the Comedy:

"Jerry" ... ... Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
Alaric Chichester ... ... Mr. PERCY AMES
Montgomery Hawkes ... ... Mr. J. H. BARNES
Christian Brent ... ... Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
Jarvis ... ... Mr. ALBERT SIMS
Mrs. Chichester ... ... Miss HELEN FERRERS
(By arrangement with SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER)
Ethel Chichester ... ... Miss VIOLET KEMBLE-COOPER
Bennett ... ... Miss BETTINA FOREST
"Peg" ... ... Miss LAURETTE TAYLOR

PRODUCED UNDER THE PERSONAL DIRECTION OF THE AUTHOR.

The Scenes in the Comedy:

ACT I. The Coming of Peg. ACT II. The Rebellion of Peg. ACT III. "Peg o' My Heart."

The entire action of the Comedy passes at Regal Villa, Mrs. Chichester's House in Scarboro' in early summer. One month elapses between Acts I. and II.; a single night passes between Acts II. and III.

NOTE.—The Curtain will be lowered in Act II. for one minute to denote the lapse of a few hours.

Dresses by SUZANNE, 31 Baker Street, W. Hats by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street, W.
Piano by ASCHERBERG & Co., Mortimer Street, W.
Wigs by CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

General Manager ... } for Mr. Alfred Butt { ... T. J. COURTLY
Stage Manager ... ... } { GISSING WALTERS

Business Manager (for G. Grossmith and E. Laurillard) ... ALBERT GILMER

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 3724 GERRARD.

D-10
3724
1917
Waters, J.
Plays

"PEG O' MY HEART."

Enthusiastic Reception for New Play at the Comedy Last Night.

The new play "Peg o' My Heart," produced for the first time in London at the Comedy Theatre last evening, won an immense success in America, and as the author, Hartley Manners, is an English, or rather an Irish, man, our cousins cannot claim all the kudos of the happy event. Truth to tell, this play, though pleasant and interesting enough, is no epoch-maker. It possesses no new idea, but simply wins its way by reason of its old-fashioned charm and the delightful personality of the American actress Miss Laurette Taylor, who plays the heroine. This lady originated the leading rôle in this, her husband's, play in New York two years ago, and last evening made her London début. The part she acts is the beginning and end of the play. The other characters are no more than her chorus, and it is only fair to say that she justifies her position.

In the story Peg is an Irish girl domiciled with English relatives paid to give her a social education, and just how Peg pulls all the strings with infinite charm, to the advantage of herself, makes the romance that ends ever so happily for Peg and all those around her. The play had a quite enthusiastic reception from the audience, and Miss Laurette Taylor, still retaining the Irish accent of the character she had played, made a humorous little speech.

F.W.

GLOBE THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ALFRED BUTT

Telephone: GERRARD 8722

Under the Management of

GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD

Mr. ALFRED BUTT'S SEASON

PEG O' MY HEART

6th January, 1915.

Dear Sir,

Owing to the great success and increasing popularity of Miss LAURETTE TAYLOR in "Peg O' My Heart," it has been decided to transfer this play as and from Monday, January 11th, to the Globe Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue.

"MICHAEL" AND "PEG"

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1914.

TWO-NIGHT THEATRES.

The West End theatres have had to be content with darkened fronts and somewhat smaller audiences. How the ten o'clock closing is going to affect them, the managers are as yet unable to make up their minds. Most of them say that it is best to wait and see, and all of them trust that the authorities will give sufficient light to enable the public to see their way to and from the theatres. Theatres afford many people the only means of relaxation from the strain of current events, and thousands are dependent on them for a livelihood. Therefore the managers of theatres and music-halls live in hope.

In the meantime three theatres—His Majesty's, Haymarket, and Criterion—will, beginning next week, give matinées every day, and reduce the number of evening performances to two. The evening performances at the first two will be on Thursdays and Saturdays, at the other on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Other theatres are expected to adopt the same policy later on.

WINGSWAY THEATRE. Tele., 4632 Ger.
LILIAH McCARTHY. GRANVILLE BARKER.
THE GREAT ADVENTURE, by Arnold Bennett.
LAST WEEKS.
Twice Daily. 2.30 & 8.30. Mats. Weds., Sats. Wish Wynne.
Matinée produced by Granville Barker. 658th TIME.
On and after Monday evening the performance will commence at 7.45.

"The Little Minister" will in future be given at the Duke of York's Theatre every Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday afternoon, and every evening except Wednesdays.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1914.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

We are glad to be able to state that Mr. George Edwardes, who had been in Bad Nauheim (undergoing a cure) since before the war, has been able to leave Germany and is now in Holland. The first news of his release was received in a telegram from himself yesterday. He stated he was very well, and gave a surprising proof of it by asking, "Why are my theatres not open?" He also inquired for news of his only son, a cavalry officer now with his regiment in France.

His home-coming will be welcomed in London—where his name is almost a household word. In theatreland, where he is one of the greatest personalities and a most popular figure, the news will be more than well received, and to the many hundreds of people who work for him the arrival in a few days of the "Guv'nor"—as they love to call him—will be a great joy. Mr. Edwardes, owing to ill-health, has been absent from his London office since early in last December.

"PEG O' MY HEART"

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

On TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1914,

And Every Evening at 8.30.

Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

WILL PRODUCE

A PLAY OF THE MOMENT

IN FOUR ACTS, ENTITLED

THE COST

By E. TEMPLE THURSTON

PEOPLE IN THE CAST:

Samuel Woodhouse	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
John Woodhouse (his eldest son)	Mr. OWEN NARES
Percy Woodhouse (his second son)	Mr. JACK HOBBS
Lionel Woodhouse (his third son)	Mr. HAYFORD HOBBS
Dorothy Woodhouse (his eldest daughter)	Miss DORA HARKER
Mabel Woodhouse (his second daughter)	Miss DOROTHEA DESMOND
Katharine Woodhouse (his third daughter)	Miss AGNES GLYNNE
Mrs. Woodhouse (his wife)	Miss MARY ROKKE
Judith Woodhouse (John's wife)	Miss BARBARA EVEREST
Mrs. Pinhouse (the cook)	Miss HANNAH JONES
Moffat (parlourmaid)	Miss GLADYS PRESTON
Major Paget	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Tradesman	Mr. VAL GURNEY

Mr. Owen Nares appears by the kind permission of Sir Herbert Tree and Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie;

Mr. Frederick Ross by the kind permission of Sir Herbert Tree; and Mr. Athol Stewart by the kind permission of Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie.

ACTS I. & II. - Dining Room, Samuel Woodhouse's Home

ACT III. - - The Kitchen, Samuel Woodhouse's Home

ACT IV. - - - - - - John Woodhouse's Flat

General Manager ... (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) ... CECIL PAGET

THE TIMES

EDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1914.

ears hence, no doubt, this war will become, erything in time becomes, material for years hence when the artist can look on it in serenity of contemplation. Meanall that is possible is "topical" art, rcise journalism in disguise; and Mr. ple Thurston modestly recognizes the ssities of the case in indicating his little as "of the moment." He shows how the affects an average City man's average sehold, and tells you what papa and mamma the boys and girls think, and feel, and do t it—how the servants are dismissed and stock of provisions laid in, how shirts made by the ladies, and how papa s little flags into the war map. But it would be hardly worth while our to the theatre to see people beg very much as we are all behaving outit. Mr. Thurston has, of course, to find us at least some rudimentary "story," he spins this round the eldest son of the ily. He is an "intellectual," the author a remarkably promising treatise on ethical blems, who loathes the barbarism of war yet caught by what he calls its "hysteria" cannot be prevented from enlisting. And e cost" of the war in his case is his intelquality; he returns home to his young and babe, outwardly healed of his wounds, warned by the doctors that he will never be equal to sustained thinking. So there e philosopher the less—and the war, we fear d indeed Mr. Thurston admits) will bring t many and far worse tragedies than that. Domestic humours of an unambitious sort—s fussing over family prayers or making self ridiculous in the kitchen, the girls playat domestic service, Mrs. Cook discussing rting with the man from the Stores, and forth make out the rest of the entertainnt. The acting of all concerned proved adequate for the occasion, and the audience med to be well content to be set thinking n at night of the subject which must have n mainly occupying their thoughts all day.

D-10
3724
Plays

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - LOUIS MEYER

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14th, 1914, and
EVERY EVENING AT 8.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

"THE DOUBLE MYSTERY"

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS,

Adapted by JOSÉ G. LEVY from "Le Procureur Hallers"
by LOUIS FORBST and HENRY DE GORSSE.

"Shadows we are, shadows we pursue."

Judge Hallers		ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Bünzli (his Secretary)		W. S. HARTFORD
Max Duquesne		ROLAND PERTWEE
Doctor Ferrier		A. E. GEORGE
Joseph		S. CHRISTOPHERSON
Heidegg (Police Inspector)		HERBERT BUNSTON
Police Sergeant		CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Poulard (Proprietor of "The Lame Duck")		THOMAS SIDNEY
Charlier	A Gang of Thieves	RAY RAYMOND
Picard	A Gang of Thieves	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Merlin	A Gang of Thieves	CHRISTOPHER STEELE
Jacquot	A Gang of Thieves	CYRIL SWORDER
Pierre		OSMUND WILLSON
Fritz (Waiter at "The Lame Duck")		CLAUDE EDMONDS
Itzig Belinsky		H. S. WILLIAMS
Louise (Hallers' Sister)		MARY DIBLEY
Marie (Duquesne's Sister)		ENID SASS
Yvonne		K. BINGHAM HALL
Suzanne		E. BINGHAM HALL
Sonia		MINA LEONESI
Elise		BETTY LINLEY
AND
Roucha la Rouge		VIOLET VANBRUGH

The Action passes in a large Frontier Town in Switzerland within 12 Hours.

Acts I, III & IV, at Judge Hallers'. Act II, at "The Lame Duck" Cafe.

DUAL PERSONALITY.

CASES showing prevalence of this mental disorder are to be found everywhere, but, as they do not obtain publicity, they are not generally known.

In the opinion of a well-known specialist in Auto-Suggestion, such people cannot be guilty of any criminal act. It is quite possible that they may act against themselves when suffering from Hysteria, and while not being sane they cannot be classed legally as insane.

The People afflicted are not responsible for their actions, and at times are for all practical purposes insane, yet they return ultimately to quite a normal state of mind. A man or a woman can become for a few hours a different being without being conscious of this transformation, without even having the slightest recollection of it. It is the vengeance which the devil seems to exact from the saints. There is in "Faust" a Sorceress, young and very beautiful, but from her mouth comes out a red mouse! We all carry in us this satanic animal, who occasionally appears.

Medico-Psychologists are of firmer opinion each day that the only cure is Hypnotism.

PRECEDED BY NELLIE WALKER

In Selections from her Repertoire, including

"YOUR KING AND COUNTRY WANT YOU."

Written and Composed by Paul A. Rubens. Published by Chappells, price 1/-.

The profits from the sale of this song go to Queen Mary's Women Emergency Fund.

A Signal will be given from the Stage by the sound of knocking, one minute before the rise of the Curtain.

The Scenery and Properties designed by HUGO RUMBOLD.

The Bloodhounds used in the Play supplied by MAJOR RICHARDSON, of Harrow.
Dresses worn by Miss Dibley and Miss Sass by Miss ADA WELLS, of Messrs. CHAS. LEE & SON, Wigmore Street, W. Wigs by FOX.

The New Act Drop representing the Encampment of King Henry VIII. at Marquison, July, 1544, painted by HUGO RUMBOLD, from an old Engraving.

General Manager	For ARTHUR BOURCHIER	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Stage Manager	For ARTHUR BOURCHIER	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Associate Stage Manager	For ARTHUR BOURCHIER	CLAUDE EDMONDS

Business Manager for GARRICK RENTERS, Ltd. ... JOSÉ G. LEVY

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, ...
Plays

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1914.

Psychopathological melodrama is nearly always good fun. It combines the usual attractions of romantic fiction with the more austere delights of scientific research. To be thrilled by all sorts of blood-curdling incidents on the stage, and at the same time to feel that you are penetrating the darker secrets of diseased mental states—this, indeed, is burning the candle of pleasure at both ends.

You get this double gratification over The Double Mystery, which is a melodrama about double personality. Everybody has heard, of course, about double personality, how a knock on the head or some other accident will turn one individual into two, each ignorant of the other's existence. And everybody knows how these two individuals in one individual may be absolutely opposite in character, A virtuous and dignified and B vicious and degraded. Fascinating ethical puzzles immediately present themselves. Is A responsible for B? Is there really a composite individual A + B? And there is the immense medical problem, How to get rid of the undesirable B. Will drugs do it, or diet, or a rest-cure, or hypnotism? On the stage they generally opt for hypnotism, because you can see the process at work and it doesn't take long. Oh, there's quite a lot of fun in psychopathological melodrama!

What we especially enjoy in The Double Mystery is the "policy of thorough" with which the authors have tackled their A+B. A is a high-minded Judge and B is a ferocious burglar. That is a promising start. And B actually burgles his own (that is to say, A's) house. That is better still. But the real trouvaille is this: in the very moment of the burglary B changes back to A. Imagine the astounding effect on B's fellow-burglars! To be suddenly brought up for examination before the man who a moment ago was participating in their crime! And imagine the no less astounding effect on A of the charge that he, the worthy magistrate, is a low thief! Indignant incredulity gives way to self-doubt, and then, by little piece after piece of material evidence, to the horrible certainty that the charge is true. Very ingeniously managed, this, and we will not spoil sport by telling how.

Of course the final stage is the elimination of B. That is not altogether convincing, perhaps. It is a case of exciting favourable volition. Make an effort, says the doctor to A, recall B to your memory, realize him, and then cast him out for ever. It is not to be done "in once," but I'll be always there to help you. Now things that are not to be done in once, that will not be completed until long after the curtain is down, are not dramatic, certainly not melodramatic. You feel baulked, you wanted the devil B to be cast out under your nose. But it was not to be. Sacrifices, in these modern enlightened days, must be made to science. Psychopathology oblige!

As to the mere, ordinary romantic melodrama of the affair, that naturally is not new, but it is as thrilling as any reasonable playgoer can want. Knives are pointed menacingly at the stomachs of detectives, pistols are fired in the dark, there is a most orgiastic orgy at a thieves' kitchen, and there is one of those wicked outcast girls with pathetic signs of good in her who came originally, we fancy, from Russian fiction. This outcast is played by Miss Violet Vanbrugh with the gusto that never fails her when she gets an evening off in a part of low life.

But, of course, Mr. Bourchier's is the part. He is A+B, immensely dignified, incisive, and magisterial as A, but after all putting A quite in the shade by his truculence, ferocity, and ogreishness as B. And the passages from A to B and from B to A—probably the most difficult things in the part—are quite plausibly done, though with an amount of groaning and grunting which is rather painful to witness. No doubt, however, this is another homage to the scientific side of the matter: a determined effort to rise above the mere hero of melodrama into the psycho pathological demonstrator. There is valuable help from Mr. A. E. George (doctor) and Mr. Herbert Bunston (detective) and Mr. Ray Raymond (leading burglar). The audience last night were unmistakably delighted with the whole affair.

L47
G
STALLS
Oct. 15.
1914
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS HALF

EVERY EVENING at 8 (MATINÉES at 2)

WILL BE ACTED

HIS HOUSE IN ORDER

A COMEDY, IN FOUR ACTS, BY

ARTHUR PINERO

Hilary Jesson	(British Minister to the Republic of Santa Guarda)	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Filmer Jesson, M.P.		HERBERT WARING
Derek Jesson		IRIS HAWKINS
Sir Daniel Ridgeley		E. LYALL SWETE
		By arrangement with Frederick Harrison
Pryce Ridgeley		C. M. LOWNE
Major Maurewarde		DAWSON MILWARD
Dr. Dilnott		NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Harding		LEWIS FIELDER
Forshaw	(A Representative of a Provincial Newspaper)	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Servants		JOHN RIDLEY
		GUY DAWSON
Nina		IRENE VANBRUGH
Lady Ridgeley		ALICE BEET
Geraldine Ridgeley		HENRIETTA WATSON
Mlle. Thomé		BABARA HANNAY

The Scene is laid at Overbury Towers, Mr. Filmer Jesson's Country House, on the outskirts of a Town in the Midlands.

The Action occurs during the Easter Parliamentary recess within the space of Twenty-seven hours.

D-10
3724
1014
Waters, J.
Plays

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1914.

An excellent revival of a typical Pinero play. Nearly all the original players are back again in their old parts, and the audience is lured for an evening into feeling itself back again in that impossible time, that earlier state of being, that wholly different world, named Before the War. And so people laughed last night with the old light-heartedness at the humours of the Ridgeley family, and listened with the old restiveness to the homilies of that incorrigibly verbose diplomatist Hilary Jesson, and asked themselves with the old wonder how so wild a little animal as Nina could ever have been bred in a quiet country rectory, or how so wooden a prig as Filmer Jesson, M.P., could ever have married her. They, or some of them, may have had a touch of the old discomfort ever the author's verbiage, his inveterate habit of making all his personages—not merely the prigs and the Puritans, but the diplomats and the private secretaries, young and old, gentle and simple—talk like a book, and that book distinctly not one of the Hundred Best.

That is one reason for calling it a typical Pinero play, but by no means the only reason. For it is also a capital example of the author's master-faculty, his gift of story-telling, his power of carrying you along, of keeping you always on the alert for what is coming next. No doubt the whole affair is an elaborate concoction rather than a sincere study; no doubt the Ridgeley chorus, amusing as it is, won't bear close examination; no doubt the character of Nina is a necessity of the artificial situation rather than a natural fact; and no doubt the diplomat's talent for preaching overtaxes one's patience. But you must take a Pinero play as you find it, and on the whole you find—the hearty applause last night conclusively proved it—His House in Order full of interest, "go," and amusement.

The acting was of high quality all round, and in the case of Miss Irene Vanbrugh really brilliant. She is never so good as when she has to be semi-hysterical and to abandon herself to a nerve-storm. Every quiver, every sob, every outburst of passion, seems not so much acted as wrung out of her. We have seldom seen the actress in finer form. Sir George Alexander, too, was thoroughly at home: easy, suave, good-humoured, obviously enjoying even the lengthy apologues and the dictionary-English. Mr. Lyall Swete was an immense figure of fun. But, as we have said, they were all good, all up to the St. James's high-water mark, and people in search of innocent distraction from the cares of the time ought not to miss this notable revival.

AMBASSADORS
THEATRE

16/10/14

Orch. Stall
F 73

To be retained

At 7.45 p.m. (afterwards 8.15 p.m.)

"From Louvain"

A One-Act Play, in English,

By M. E. M. YOUNG

Cast

THE BELGIAN	-	MR. MURRI MONCRIEFF
HIS GRANDCHILD	-	MISS BETTY BALFOUR
THE ENGLISHWOMAN	-	MISS ESMÉ BERINGER
THE GERMAN	-	MR. JOHN TRESAHAR
THE OTHER ONE	-	M. JULES RAUCOURT

Scene—A deserted Cottage near Louvain, Belgium

Produced by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN

At 8.30 p.m.

"L'Ingenue"

A One-Act Comedy, in French,

By MM. MEILHAC and HALÉVY

Cast

TURQUET	-	M. MAX DEARLY
DAUBERTHIER	-	M. LEON MORTON
OCTAVE	-	M. JULES RAUCOURT
ADELE	-	MLLE. JEANNE SAINT BONNET
LEONTINE	-	MLLE. ALICE DELYSIA

Scene—A Country House in France

Produced by M. MAX DEARLY

D-10
3724
101/4
Waters. J.
Plays

Concluding with

"Odds and Ends"

A miniature Revue by HARRY GRATTAN, with Music Composed and Arranged by EDWARD JONES.

N.B.—Mr. C. B. Cochran has spared no economy in mounting this Revue.

▼

MAX DEARLY

MORTON

JEANNE SAINT BONNET

DELYSIA

MILLIE SIM J. M. CAMPBELL

LEON DE SOUSA

BETTY BALFOUR MURRI MONCRIEFF

JULES RAUCOURT

8 GRECIAN MAIDS

▼

Produced by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN

▼

Business Manager, Stage Manager, Musical Director (For Mr. C. B. COCHRAN) { Mr. CLIVE R. MCKEE, Mr. MURRI MONCRIEFF, Mr. EDWARD JONES

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1914.

A PLAY ABOUT LOUVAIN.

Mr. C. B. Cochran opened an "Anglo-Franco-Belgian" seasoo at the Ambassadors Theatre last night with a miscellaneous programme, most of which was received with much favour by an Anglo-Franco-Belgian audience.

We are not sure whether anybody cares to have their feelings harrowed anew just now by such plays as the From Louvain, by M. E. M. Young, which opened the bill, even if the acting of Miss Esmé Beringer, little Miss Betty Balfour, and the others had succeeded in introducing some dramatic value into the piece. Meilhac and Halévy's L'Ingénue, with M. Max Dearly as Turquet, was much better distraction, and a clever little company, including Mlles. Alice Delysia and Jeanne Saint-Bonnet, and MM. Léon Morton and Jules Raucourt, played it admirably. The same players appeared also in a new revue, Odds and Ends, by Harry Grattan and Edward Jones, together with Mr. J. M. Campbell, Miss Milly Sim, the young dancer Miss Joan Carroll, M. Léon de Sousa, and others, including an agreeable troupe of dancers, Jackson's Eight Grecian Maids. The revue was a pleasant piece of nonsense and sense combined, and the effects were cleverly managed on the small stage.

AMBASSADORS THEATRE.

Telephone—Regent 2890, Gerrard 4460.
Sole Lessee—CHARLES B. COCHRAN.

ALICE DELYSIA

PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

SATURDAY, OCT. 17th at 7.45 p.m., and EVERY EVENING at 7.45 p.m.

MATINEES THURSDAY & SATURDAY at 2.15.

Florence Glossop-Harris and Frank Cellier's Season.

THE FAMOUS DRURY LANE DRAMA

CHEER, BOYS! CHEER!

By SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS, CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON.

Oliver C. Brown	ARTHUR CURTIS
Kitty Parker	MADGE SPENCER
Foreman	WALTER CARR
Reginald FitzDavis	FRANK CELLIER
Cyrus Trueman	TOM HESLEWOOD
Furniture Dealer	MAURICE INGRAM
Wolff Meikstein	GEORGE HOWARD
Lord Archibald Kesteven	ROY G. BEARD
The Marquis of Chepstowe	E. VASSALL-VAUGHAN
Lady Ughtred Kesteven	MAY EDWARD SAKER
Lady Hilyard	FLORENCE GLOSSOP-HARRIS
Blanche Lindesay	PHYLLIS RELPH
George Hilyard	HENRY HARGREAVES
Jackson (FitzDavis's manservant)	GEORGE YOUNG
Lady St. Elmo	RUBY WOOD
Mrs. Ogilvie	DAISY SEDGER
Lady Melrose	GWEN HAWKINS
Countess of Thirlmere	MARY RELPH
Lady Gwendoline Champneys	MARJORIE HESLEWOOD
Lady Mary Wordsworth	MARJORIE OWEN
Mrs. Cholmondeley	MARJORIE ELDRED
Policeman	PERCY HEWITT
Mrs. Bradshaw	SYBIL RUSKIN
Park Chair Money Taker	WALTER TOWNE
Mr. Batfield	ERIC COWLEY
Mr. Drinkwater	JAMES BROOK
Corporal Thompson (2nd Life Guards)	TREVOR SYLVAIN
Sergeant Bucklaw	H. HENRY
Trueman's Clerk	EDWARD MONTAGUE
Footman	KENNETH CRAVEN
Mr. Gordon Lees	CHRISTIAN MORROW
Mr. Phillip Gordon Lees	A. GEORGE FENN
Mrs. Verity	MARJORIE ALLEN
Sir Hilary Fanshawe	PERCY H. VERNON
Captain Champneys	HENRY HOWARD
Forbes	LESLIE OSWELL
The Rev. Mr. Nugent	FRANK COCHRANE
Sergeant	PADDY WHITE
Young Trooper	DOUGLAS RUBERY
Lady Fanshawe	JULIA HEATH

Troopers, Matabele, Fashionable Ladies and Gentlemen, and Furniture Men.

(The characters are placed in the order they appear.)

D-10
3724
1914
Waters.
Plays

ACT I.

Scene ... Messrs. Flynn & Flynn's Offices, Barrabas Buildings, Bucklersbury, E.C.

ACT II.

Scene 1 ... Hurlingham Polo Ground
Scene 2 ... The Lawn, Hurlingham
Scene 3 The Chambers of FitzDavis
Scene 4 ... ... Hyde Park
Scene 5 ... Trueman's Office, Barrabas Buildings, E.C.
Scene 6 ... ... Lady Hilyard's Drawing Room

ACT III.

Scene 1 ... ... The Hotel, Johannesburg
Scene 2 The Havilah Gold Mine, Matabele Land
Scene 3 ... Tableau I. The Last Stand
Tableau II. "Till Death us do part"

ACT IV.

Scene 1 Trueman's Office, Barrabas Buildings, E.C.
Scene 2 ... ... Chepstowe House

The Play produced by FRANK CELLIER and RALPH KIMPTON.

"CHEER, BOYS! CHEER!" by Henry Russell will be sung before the rise of the curtain by WILLIAM GUIDOTT.

The words have been re-written for this occasion by Mark Ambient.
Song in Act II., Scene 6, sung by ARTHUR HOLLAND.

Incidental Music composed and arranged by JAMES M. GLOVER.

Stage Manager ... ...GORDON FLEMING
Assistant Stage Manager .. EDWARD MONTAGUE

Miss Glossop-Harris's Dresses by WALLIS TAYLOR, Westbourne Grove.
Uniforms, Arms, Accoutrements and Wigs by CLARKSON (London).
Scenery by LLOLYN HART. Piano supplied by Messrs. BRINSMEAD.
Typewriter supplied by THE YOST COMPANY, Holborn Viaduct.

The Orchestra, under the direction of JOSEPH SKUSE, will play Selections from the following:

EGYPTIAN BALLET ... ... Luigini
SPANISH DANCES ... ... Moszkowski
GRACEFUL DANCE (HENRY VIII.) ... ... Sullivan
PLANTATION SONGS ... ... Chatham
MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE ... ... Rosse
DOROTHY ... ... Cellier
"IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY" ... ... Judge

Cheer, Boys, Cheer, one of the best and latest of the Drury Lane dramas of the Harrisian régime, was chosen by Sir Augustus's daughter, Miss Florence Glossop-Harris, and her husband, Mr. Frank Cellier, son of the late Savoyard conductor, for the opening of their season at the Prince's on Saturday, October 17. Produced as the autumn drama in 1895, and transferred from Drury Lane to the Olympic that Christmas, Cheer, Boys, Cheer was afterwards toured for years by the late Henry Dundas. It is, therefore, sufficiently familiar to render it unnecessary even to recapitulate the plot of a typical Drury Lane drama, which seems to have aged chiefly as regards the Raleighian rallies of the rather too copious comic relief. "The Lane" gave obviously better scope for the staging of such spectacular scenes as the Polo Ground at Hurlingham and of Rotten Row, with the orating and horsewhipping incidents; but it revives old memories to hear the plaintive air of the song of the title, wafted for some of us down the breezes of half a century, and also "Jimmy" Glover's incidental music, rendered by a capable orchestra, under the control of another old Drury Lane friend, Mr. Joseph Skuse; whilst the poignantly thrilling scenes reproducing Wilson's last stand against the Matabele raiders, and showing the marriage of the dying lion, the Marquis of Chepstowe, to the sorely calumniated Blanche Lindesay, were set forth with much of the pristine effect upon the boards of the Prince's.

Empire Theatre Programme

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

143

PROGRAMME

Week commencing Monday, OCTOBER 19th, 1914

1 OVERTURE ... "Blaze Away" ... C. Turner

ALFRED BUTT PRESENTS

2 "BY JINGO, IF WE DO—!"

By
ARTHUR WIMPERIS and HARTLEY CARRICK
With Music by HERMAN FINCK
The Chorus Business, Dances and Ensembles
Invented and arranged by LEONORA
Stage Production by TOM REYNOLDS
Scenery by Bruce Smith & G. Sidney
Scenes Nos. 4 & 8 by Walter Hann
Dresses designed and made by Percy Anderson
Hair ... Clarkson
Wigs by Willis & Clark

The Cast will include

MLLE. REGINE FLORY

MISS KATHLEEN CLIFFORD

MISS AMY AUGARDE — MISS FERNE ROGERS

MISS MABEL RUSSELL

RALPH LYNN

SPENCER TREVOR — FRED GROVES

TOM PAYNE — JAMES GODDEN

JULIEN HENRY — A. B. MAHILTON

"BY JINGO, IF WE DO—!"

SUCCESS OF A NEW REVUE AT THE EMPIRE.

The new revue presented by Mr. Alfred Butt at the Empire Theatre last evening has the strangely happy quality of being topical and yet wholly distracting.

Its title, "By Jingo, If We Do—!" proclaims its patriotic note, and the authors, Messrs. Arthur Wimperis and Hartley Carrick, do not let the audience forget that the keynote of the evening's entertainment is that above all things. But a manager has a duty to his artists as well as to his authors, and somehow—in this instance at all events—authors, manager, and artists have contrived to make "By Jingo, If We Do—!" one of the merriest—at moments—and one of the most serious—at moments—of the stage entertainments to be found today in the variety theatres of this early-to-bed London of ours.

It is tuneful throughout. Mr. Herman Finck never fails to give music of that quality, and the singers are clever, and the dancers are clever, and the ladies among them are pretty as well as clever. One hardly knows which to praise most—Miss Mabel Russell, Miss Kathleen Clifford, or Mlle. Regine Flory. It is an international question, for they represent respectively England, America, and France. One acts delightfully, one sings ever so "cutely," and one dances charmingly.

The men of the company, too, are most excellent. Nothing better than the street character scene on the Embankment has been done for quite a while, and that other episode, "A House on the Frontier," is a powerful, if brutal, piece of stage realism. Altogether this revue is a real revue: it presents the real and the ideal. It had a great reception.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

265

BOX OFFICE TELEPHONE
GERRARD 3830.

STRAND THEATRE,
W.C.

Wednesday Evening, October 21st, 1914
And Every Evening at 8.15 p.m.

LOUIS MEYER presents

A REVIVAL OF

"The Glad Eye"

Adapted by JOSE G. LEVY, from the French of "Le Zebre"
by M. M. Armont and Nancey

Gaston Bocard	-	RONALD SQUIRES
Maurice Polignac	-	H. MARSH ALLEN (his original part)
Galipaux	-	E. DAGNALL (his original part)
Chausette	-	FRED EASTMAN
Ferdinand Floquet	-	LAWRENCE CAIRD
Tracassin	-	PHILIP KAY
Comte de la Beuve	-	LAMBERT PLUMMER
Francois	-	SIDNEY T. PEASE
Police Sergeant	-	VINCENT HOLMAN
Lucienne Bocard	-	AURIOL LEE (her original part)
Suzanne Polignac	-	CECILY STUCKEY
Kiki	-	DOROTHY MINTO
Juliette	-	EILLEEN GERARD

The Play produced by E. DAGNALL

SPECIAL REDUCED PRICES

Stalls, 6s. Dress Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 3s.

Box Office Open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone Gerrard 3830

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE

Sole Proprietors The Executors of the late Mr EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee ..... FRANK CURZON

Tuesday, October 27th, 1914 and every Evening at 8.

FRANK CURZON'S

MUSICAL PRODUCTION

"MISS HOOK OF HOLLAND"

A DUTCH MUSICAL INCIDENT IN TWO ACTS

Chorus of Market Folk, Soldiers, Cheese Merchants, Voyagers, Assistants in the Liqueur Distillery

ACT I.—The Cheese Market at Arndyk.
ACT II. The interior of the Liqueur Distillery, Amsterdam.

The Play Produced by AUSTEN HURGON

Scenery by J. A. Lucas R. Dresses by Messrs. B. J. Simmons & Co.

Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2. First Matinee, Saturday next at 2

Prices—Boxes £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Dress Circle, first 5s. 6d. to 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7505

Nearest Tube Station Piccadilly Circus

Since Tuesday night Mr. Fred Lyne has taken up the part of the droll, dozy Slinks, in place of Mr. Dan Rolyat

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

DALY'S THEATRE

roprietor and Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES
Business Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. ARTHUR ALDIN.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 28th, 1914.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION.

A Revival of the English Musical Play.

"A COUNTRY GIRL"

IN TWO ACTS.

The k by JAMES T. TANNER.
Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

The Music by LIONEL MONCKTON.
Additional Numbers and Lyrics by PAUL RUBENS.

A COUNTRY GIRL

THE BOOK BY JAMES T. TANNER.
Lyrics by Adrian Ross.
THE MUSIC BY LIONEL MONCKTON.
Additional Lyrics and Numbers by Paul Rubens.

GEOFFREY CHALLONER	MR. ROBERT MICHAELIS
THE RAJAH OF BHONG	MR. LEEDHAM BANTOCK
SIR JOSEPH VERITY	MR. TOM WALLS
DOUGLAS VERITY	MR. VERNON DAVIDSON
GRANFER MUMMERY	MR. WILLIE WARDE
LORD ANCHESTER	MR. POP CORY
CAPTAIN GRASSMERE	MR. ARTHUR WELLESLEY
PETER GURNEY	MR. FRANK PERFITT
RUBE FAIRWAY	MR. FRED VIGAY
AND
BARRY	MR. W. H. BERRY
MARJORIE JOY	MISS WINIFRED BARNES
MADAME SOPHIE	MISS MABEL SEALBY
PRINCESS MEHELANEH OF BHONG ...	MISS CLARA BUTTERWORTH
MRS. QUINTIN RAIKES	MISS PHYLLIS LE GRAND
NURSE	MISS KATE WELCH
MISS CARRUTHERS	MISS ELISE CRAVEN
LADY ARNOTT	MISS VEDA LE GRAND
LADY ANCHESTER	MISS MODESTA DALY
LADY CYNTHIA ABBEY	MISS WINSOME RUSSELL
MISS ECROYD	MISS ELSIE SPENCER
MISS COURTLANDS	MISS CONNIE STEWART
MISS EGERTON	MISS DOLLY DOMBEY
AND
NAN	MISS GERTIE MILLAR

The Stage Production by EDWARD ROYCE.
Costumes designed by COMELLI. Scenery by ALFRED TERRAINE

The curtain will rise at 7.45 p.m. prompt.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters.
Plays

LYRIC THEATRE

Licensee ... ... Mr. EDWARD C. ENGELBACH.

Manager ... ... Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29th, and EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

Mr. PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY

PRESENTS

THE NEW SHYLOCK.

A Comedy of New York Ghetto Life,

By HERMAN SHEFFAUER.

Characters in the order in which they appear:

Sarah Ehrlich ..	.. .. (Simon's Second Wife) ..	Miss EDYTH OLIVE
Sam Ehrlich ..	.. .. (Simon's Son) ..	Mr. OTTO ALEXANDER
Rebecca Ehrlich	.. .. (Simon's Daughter)	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Simon Ehrlich ..	.. (A Russian Jew Pawnbroker)	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Leonard Scribner	.. .. (Scribner's Son) ..	Mr. LIONEL ATWILL
A Young Man ..	.. ..	Mr. AUBREY PRUST
A Little Girl ..	.. ..	Miss PEGGI ANDREWS
Louis Scribner ..	.. .. (A Financier) ..	Mr. LYSTON LYLE

Time: The Present.

Place: The Jewish Quarter on the East Side of New York.

NOTICE.—A GONG WILL BE SOUNDED PRIOR TO THE RISING OF THE CURTAIN.

D-10
3724
101
Plays

ACT I.	... ...	THE KITCHEN OF THE EHRLICH FAMILY
ACT II.	... ...	... THE INTERIOR OF THE PAWNSHOP
ACT III.	... ...	... ... SAME AS ACT I.
	Three Weeks elapse between Acts III. and IV.
ACT IV.	... ...	... ... SAME AS ACT I.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

The Safe used in Act II. kindly lent by Messrs. JOHN TANN, LIMITED, 117 Newgate Street, E.C.
The Cooking Stove used in Acts I., III. and IV. kindly lent by the GAS LIGHT AND COKE CO., LTD., Horseferry Road, Westminster.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by DIGBY. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.

Stage Manager	Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. CECIL WOODINGS

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets or any kind of head dress.
This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC played on the Pianola Grand Piano kindly supplied by THE ORCHESTRELLE CO., Aeolean Hall, New Bond Street.

a. LE PAPILLONS ... ... Grieg	a. HUMORESKE ... ... Gardner
b. ICH LIEBE DICH ... ... Grieg	b. DANCE CREOLE ... ... Chaminade
c. LORELEY ... ... Seeling	FRUHLING ... ... Moszkowski

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

NEAREST TUBE STATION, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, First Two Rows, 7s. 6d.; Other Rows, 6s. Upper Circle, Front Row, 4s.; Other Rows, 3s. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier): Matinees at 2. Commence at 8; Matinees at 2.30.
Box Office (... hone 3687 Gerrard.

GENERAL MANAGER	... Mr. ALAN FENN
ACTING MANAGER	... ... Mr. TOM PITT

His name was perhaps a few sizes too big for him. True, he lent moneys, upheld the ancient faith, despised Christians, talked much of justice, was the widower of a Leah, and had a daughter who stole out of the house at night with a Gentile gallant. Otherwise, no Shylock he, but just a big baby, as indeed his second wife Sarah told him, trying, bless his innocent heart, to put the clock back, and to play at being the venerable Hebrew patriarch in modern New York. Of course his illusions paid him out. His boy, whom he wanted to be a Rabbi, became a fraudulent Wall-street clerk instead, and an even more vulgar thief, robbing the safe wherein his father kept jewels deposited in pawn. His girl, in defiance of his most sacred prejudices, made a mixed marriage, after beginning it as only a mixed liaison. When he turned both children out of doors his Sarah departed too, in disgust. He wailed that the God of Israel had forsaken him.

But everything came right in the last act. The young couple were forgiven—after an absurd offer from the gallant to become a Jew which the new Shylock had the sense to reject. Possibly the memory of his great predecessor had set him against compulsory conversion. His boy wrote from Canada to give promise of becoming an honest citizen. And his Sarah returned home to whisper to him about a baby to be (with luck) a boy, and in that event, of course, a Rabbi. He was played by Mr. Louis Calvert with a rich sense of character and a clever exhibition of the humorous-pathetic.

Though the play makes no pretence to any searching analysis of the Jewish or the American or any other question, the audience evidently liked it none the worse for that, warmly applauded the players throughout the evening, and finally "called" the playwright. But for a new Shylock we must still await a new Shakespeare.

'Times'

D-10
3724
Lon. Waters. 3
Plays

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On SATURDAY, 31st OCTOBER, at 8 O'CLOCK,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

MILESTONES

By ARNOLD BENNETT and EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

ACT I.	John Rhead	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
	Mrs. Rhead	Miss EDITH EVANS
	Samuel Sibley	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
	Rose Sibley	Miss MARY JERROLD
1860	Ned Pym	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
	Thompson	Mr. WILFRED EATON
ACT II.	John Rhead	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
	Rose Rhead	Miss MARY JERROLD
	Emily Rhead	Miss ESTY MARSH
	Sam Sibley	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
1885	Nancy Sibley	Miss ESME HUBBARD
	Lord Monkhurst	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
	Arthur Preece.. .. .	Mr. MURRAY GRAHAM
	Thompson	Mr. WILFRED EATON
ACT III.	Sir John Rhead	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
	Lady Rhead	Miss MARY JERROLD
	Lady Monkhurst	Miss ESTY MARSH
	Lord Monkhurst . ..	Mr. CHARLES GRENVILLE
1912	The Hon. Muriel Pym	Miss ISOBEL ELSOM
	Nancy Sibley	Miss ESME HUBBARD
	Richard Sibley	Mr. STEWART DAWSON
	Arthur Preece..	Mr. MURRAY GRAHAM
	Webster	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN

The Play produced under the direction of FRANK VERNON.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, at 7-45,
and nightly at 7-45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS, AT 2-30

WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE present

THE SOLDIER'S WEDDING.

Written by WALTER MELVILLE. Music by EDWARD REEVES.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE and Lyceum Studios.
The Play produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Jack Brown (of His Majesty's Army)	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Colonel James Graham (Grenadier Guards) ...	Mr. CHARLES VANE
Tommy Spratt (the Amateur Cracksman) ...	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Teddy Munro (a Saucy Nipper)...	Master JACK ROOKE
John Marks (an Auctioneer)	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
George Pherson (a Clerk)	Mr. EDWARD WRIGHT
Jasper Northcot } Farmers {	Mr. A. ANDERSON
Joe Ongar }	Mr. J. WEBB
Watkin (Waiter at the Royal Hotel)	Mr. T. CARTER
Lizzie Walker (a poor girl in search of Matrimony) ..	Miss EVA DARE
Julie de Beauvrais (a Lady of High Life ...	Miss JOY CHATWYN
David Munro (alias Matthew McGuire, a deceived husband)	...Mr. FRANK LISTER
Charles Courtenay (the Colonel's Nephew) ...	Mr. LIONEL GADSDEN
Nathaniel Lee (an old Farmer)	Mr. EDWARD VALENTINE
John Penton (a Policeman)	Mr. JAMES FIELDING
Detective Ashford (of Scotland Yard)	Mr. L. RUSSELL
The Rev. George Perryman	Mr. ARTHUR ROWTON
Mrs. Hatherton (an old inhabitant of King's Langley)	Miss MAGGIE BURTON
Peggy Munro (the woman who left her husband) AND Nancy Lee (the old Farmer's Granddaughter)	Miss LILLIAN HALLOWS Miss JESSIE WINTER

Villagers, Farmers, Soldiers, Policemen, Bridesmaids, Countrywomen, etc., etc.

Acting Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

D-10
3724
1912
Plays

Act 1, Scene 1 .. .. The Royal Hotel, King's Langley
THE OLD COLONEL AND THE LADY OF HIGH LIFE.
Father and Son. Enlisting in the Army. Money and Matrimony.
The Evil Passion asserts itself. The Meeting of the Soldier and the Girl.
Scene 2 .. .. Watford Road
The Nipper and his Cigarette. Off to the Sale. The Partners in Crime.
Scene 3 .. .. Old Nat Lee's Farm, King's Langley
The Story of a Woman's Life. The Timely Warning.
BREAK UP OF THE OLD HOME. THE SALE.

Act 2, Scene 1 .. .. The Farm House
REINSTATING THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME. LOVE'S AWAKENING.
Scene 2 .. .. The Barrack Yard—Return to London
The Jealous Colonel and the Lady of High Life. How the British Army make a man.
A Woman Ruined my Life. The Amateur Cracksman ready for work.
Scene 3 .. .. The Colonel's Quarters
Asking consent to Marry. The Jealous Husband. The Scheme to take a Soldier's Character away. The Amateur Cracksman in a tight corner.

Act 3, Scene 1 .. .. Lee's Farm
The Day before the Wedding. The Return of the Nipper. Here's my Month's Pay.
A BOY'S BEST FRIEND IS HIS MOTHER.
The Meeting of Husband and Wife. The Woman who ran away to lead a life of Shame
A BAD WIFE BUT A GOOD MOTHER.
Scene 2 .. .. Hyde Park Mansions
THE WICKED NEPHEW AND THE WICKED WIFE.
Scene 3 .. .. .. Col. Graham's House at King's Langley
THE SOLDIER'S WEDDING DAY.
A Present to the Bride. The Colonel getting rid of his Wife.
THE WEDDING BELLS AND THE REVOLVER SHOT.
Scene 4 .. .. At the Foot of the Altar

Act 4. Scene 1 .. .. .. The Colonel's Garden, King's Langley
The Nipper Detective on the Track. The Mysterious Policemen.
The Stray Shot that found its Mark.
Scene 2 .. .. .. Inside Colonel Graham's House
Weaving the Web round the Lady of High Life.
Scene 3 .. .. The Parish Church, King's Langley
THE REDCOAT AND HIS BRIDE. THE SOLDIER'S WEDDING.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections :—

1. OVERTURE . "The Soldier's Wedding" ... ... Ed. Reeves
2. SELECTION ... ... "The Toreador" ... Caryll and Monckton
3. (a) ENTRACTE, BALLET, "D'Oseau" ...)
   (b) WALTZ ... "When Night is Brightest") H. Sullivan-Brooke
4. OVERTURE ... ... "England Expects" ... H. Sullivan-Brooke

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

THE LYCEUM.

"THE SOLDIER'S WEDDING."

As a successor to Tommy Atkins, Messrs. Walter and Frederick Melville have hit upon another piece of a partly military type, the former's drama, The Soldier's Wedding, originally produced at the Terriss, Rotherhithe, October 8, 1906. There is now no need to recount the varied incidents of this typically Melvillian drama, in which the author has supplied "ad libitum" comic relief of a laughable, if primitive, sort, and has seemingly set about the concoction of a series of startling situations, in which he has aimed apparently rather at effective sensationalism than at logical consistency and probability. The hero, it will be remembered, is Jack Brown, a private in the Grenadier Guards, who, having been adopted by Colonel Graham because that officer had had his life saved in action by the lad's father, has, mirabile dictu, been able to save the good round sum of £350. This he devotes to the buying back of the farm at King's Langley, owned for years by old Nathaniel Lee, whose grand-daughter is Nancy Lee, the heroine thus possessing a name usually associated with the sailor's wife in one of Stephen Adams's songs. The restoration of the old homestead to Nat. Lee takes place in one of the best and most taking scenes of the piece thus successfully staged at the Lyceum. Indeed, on Monday some of the hits of the evening were made by the fowls, ducks, and pigeons (several of which found resting places on the ceiling and on the proscenium and the front of a box), and by the highly intelligent and vocally stentorian Irish terrier cast for the part of poor "Towser," who is knocked down for 5s. Later on, "Towser's" exponent took part in a dance with results disastrous to the trousers of the old farmer, as played carefully by Mr. Edward Valentine.

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.45, 4 Nov

CHARLES HAWTREY and CO.,

Including Miss WINIFRED EMERY and E. HOLMAN CLARK, in

NEVER SAY DIE

By W. H. POST.

CHARACTERS.

Dionysius Woodbury	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Hector Walters	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
Virgil Galesby, M.D.	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Sir John Fraser, M.D.	Mr. JOHN CLULOW
Griggs	Mr. HUGH GIBSON
Verchesi	Mr. HENRY WENMAN
Buster	Master RONALD HAMMOND
Herman	... "Mr." SPOT
Mr. Gibbs	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Servant	Mr. CHARLES LASCELLES
Auction Man	Mr. EDWARD PAGE
Violet Stevenson	Miss DORIS LYTTON
La Cigale	Miss MONA HARRISON
The Hon. Mrs. Stevenson	Miss WINIFRED EMERY

ACT I. .. Drawing Room at Mrs. Stevenson's House in Park Lane
ACTS II. & III. .. Woodbury's Chambers, King Street, St. James

Preceded at 8.15 by

THE QUOD WRANGLE

A Farcical Comedy in One Act by OLIPHANT DOWN.

Bill Jenks	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Snippy	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
A Butcher	Mr. FRANK WAKEFIELD
A Policeman	Mr. PHILIP ANTHONY
Miss Ormerod	Miss GLADYS MAUDE
Boy...	Master RONALD HAMMOND

Scene : A Tenement Room.

J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S SEASON

ALDWYCH THEATRE

ALDWYCH, STRAND, W.C.

Licensee and Manager - - - - McLEOD LOADER
Business Manager - - - - - - DONALD BAYLIS

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4th, 1914,

and EVERY EVENING AT 8.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.30.

THE EARL AND THE GIRL

By Seymour Hicks and Ivan Caryll. Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.

CAST:

Jim Cheese (a Dog Trainer) - - - -		BERT BESWICK
Dick Wargrave (the Real Heir - - -		HADDON CAVE
Hon. Crewe Bootle (the supposed Heir) - -		MONTAGUE SYRETT
A. Bunker Bliss (Elphin Haye's Uncle) - -		JAMES PRIOR
Downham (an American Solicitor) - - -		FRANK W. CANE
Mr. Talk (an English Solicitor) - - -		MARK HENRY
Mr. Hazell (Host of "Fallowfield Arms") -		ALF. E. PASSMORE
Dudley Cranbourne	Friends of Crewe Bootle	H. HILLIARD
George Bellamy		D. MAURICE
Hugh Wallander -		C. BELL
Black Smith - -	Footmen at Stole Hall	E. TRIMINGHAM
Rossiter - -		J. FREEMAN
George - - -		J. BOYS
Charles - - -		G. FRANKS
Elphin Haye (an American Heiress) -		DOROTHY MONKMAN
Liza Shoddam (Jim Cheese's Sweetheart) -		FLORENCE LLOYD (Her Original Part)
Mrs. Shimmering Black (a strong lady) -		HELEN LANGTON
Daisy Fallowfield (Elphin Haye's Friend) -		CRESSIE LEONARD
Miss Virginia Bliss (Elphin Haye's Aunt) -		PHYLLIS BROUGHTON (Her Original Part)
Lady Gussie - -	Ladies of Crewe Bootle's Party	MIA SYLVELIN
Lady Violet -		DAISY GRAINGER
Lady Gwendoline		ESME MANETTE
Lady Ethel - -		MARJORIE GRESHAM
Lady Muriel - -		NANCY HAMLEY
Lady Rosedale -		MARIE GLIER
The Hon. Birdie Harold		— DENMAN
The I. O. Ewe -	Guests at the Hall	— COOKSON
Miss Astorbilt -		DOROTHY WAY
Miss D. Light - -		MARGARET MITCHELL
The Hon. Mrs. de Brett		SONIA RAY
Miss T. Gordon -		VIOLET HEATH
Miss Bertha Late -		NIKKI AMOR
Miss R. Rollo - -		MARIE CLEMENTS
Miss P. R. Brighton		DORIS LEMON
Miss L. Montez -		GRACIE BAKER
Violet Rose - -		BEESIE MIDDLETON
Miss Ventnor - - -		THERESE BLAN

"Earl and the Girl."

Musical comedy of ten or twelve years ago played in a somewhat noisy and none too distinguished way is just what you will now find at the Aldwych Theatre. "The Earl and the Girl" was on its original production at the Adelphi Theatre on December 10, 1903, a rather crude and noisy specimen of the musical play. But at the Adelphi Theatre it had the advantage of the Savoy company in the leading parts, and also, in addition to having a great West End chorus of the smartest type, was extravagantly mounted. In war times and at half the usual West End prices one must not expect the same as one got for twice the sum in times of peace. Therefore, if you are content with boisterous fun and are not exacting on the score of singing "The Earl and the Girl" at the Aldwych Theatre may make a pleasant entertainment. Miss Phyllis Broughton, who was in the original cast, gives distinction to the part she plays. J. W.

J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S SEASON

ALDWYCH THEATRE

ALDWYCH, STRAND, W.C.

Licensee and Manager - - - - - McLEOD LOADER
Business Manager - - - - - - DONALD BAYLIS

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4th, 1914,

and EVERY EVENING AT 8.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.30.

THE EARL AND THE GIRL

By Seymour Hicks and Ivan Caryll. Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.

CAST:

Jim Cheese (a Dog Trainer)		- BERT BESWICK
Dick Wargrave (the Real Heir		- HADDON CAVE
Hon. Crewe Bootle (the supposed Heir)		- MONTAGUE SYRETT
A. Bunker Bliss (Elphin Haye's Uncle)		- JAMES PRIOR
Downham (an American Solicitor)		- FRANK W. CANE
Mr. Talk (an English Solicitor)		- MARK HENRY
Mr. Hazell (Host of "Fallowfield Arms")		- ALF. E. PASSMORE
Dudley Cranbourne	Friends of Crewe Bootle	- H. HILLIARD
George Bellamy		- D. MAURICE
Hugh Wallander		- C. BELL
Black Smith	Footmen at Stole Hall	- E. TRIMINGHAM
Rossiter		- J. FREEMAN
George		- J. BOYS
Charles		- G. FRANKS
Elphin Haye (an American Heiress)		- DOROTHY MONKMAN
Liza Shoddam (Jim Cheese's Sweetheart)		- FLORENCE LLOYD (Her Original Part)
Mrs. Shimmering Black (a strong lady)		- HELEN LANGTON
Daisy Fallowfield (Elphin Haye's Friend)		- CRESSIE LEONARD
Miss Virginia Bliss (Elphin Haye's Aunt)		- PHYLLIS BROUGHTON (Her Original Part)
Lady Gussie	Ladies of Crewe Bootle's Party	- MIA SYLVELIN
Lady Violet		- DAISY GRAINGER
Lady Gwendoline		- ESME MANETTE
Lady Ethel		- MARJORIE GRESHAM
Lady Muriel		- NANCY HAMLEY
Lady Rosedale		- MARIE GLIER
The Hon. Birdie Harold	Guests at the Hall	- — DENMAN
The I. O. Ewe		- — COOKSON
Miss Astorbilt		- DOROTHY WAY
Miss D. Light		- MARGARET MITCHELL
The Hon. Mrs. de Brett		- SONIA RAY
Miss T. Gordon		- VIOLET HEATH
Miss Bertha Late		- NIKKI AMOR
Miss R. Rollo		- MARIE CLEMENTS
Miss P. R. Brighton		- DORIS LEMON
Miss L. Montez		- GRACIE BAKER
Violet Rose		- BEESIE MIDDLETON
Miss Ventnor		- THERESE BLAN

"Earl and the Girl."

Musical comedy of ten or twelve years ago played in a somewhat noisy and none too distinguished way is just what you will now find at the Aldwych Theatre. "The Earl and the Girl" was on its original production at the Adelphi Theatre on December 10, 1903, a rather crude and noisy specimen of the musical play. But at the Adelphi Theatre it had the advantage of the Savoy company in the leading parts, and also, in addition to having a great West End chorus of the smartest type, was extravagantly mounted. In war times and at half the usual West End prices one must not expect the same as one got for twice the sum in times of peace. Therefore, if you are content with boisterous fun and are not exacting on the score of singing "The Earl and the Girl" at the Aldwych Theatre may make a pleasant entertainment. Miss Phyllis Broughton, who was in the original cast, gives distinction to the part she plays. J. W.

223

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14th, AT 7.30, AND EVERY AFTERNOON AT 2.
(EXCEPT MONDAY, NOVEMBER 23rd AND 30th.)

SHAKESPEARE'S

KING HENRY IV. (PART I.)

King Henry IV.		BASIL GILL
Henry, Prince of Wales	Sons to the King	OWEN NARES
Prince John of Lancaster	Sons to the King	By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE and EADIE
Earl of Westmoreland	Friends to the King	DIGBY ENGLISH
Sir Walter Blunt	Friends to the King	HENRY MORRELL
Thomas Percy	Earl of Worcester	HENRY C. HEWITT
Henry Percy	Earl of Northumberland	H. A. SAINTSBURY
Henry Percy	surnamed Hotspur, his son	JULIAN CROSS
Edmund Mortimer	Earl of March	MATHESON LANG
Owen Glendower		ARTHUR CRANE
Sir Richard Vernon		STEPHEN ROBERT
Sir John Falstaff		FREDERICK ROSS
Poins		HERBERT TREE
Gadshill		CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
Peto	Followers of Falstaff	ERNEST GRIFFIN
Bardolph	Followers of Falstaff	J. W. MOLLISON
Douglas	Followers of Falstaff	ARTHUR WHITBY
Francis		CHARLES DORAN
Sheriff		DEERING WELLS
1st Messenger		HENRY BYATT
2nd Messenger		W. J. KEMP
Lady Percy	Wife to Hotspur and Sister to Mortimer	ALEXANDER SARNER
Lady Mortimer	Daughter to Glendower and Wife to Mortimer	VIOLA TREE
Mrs. Quickly	Hostess of a Tavern in Eastcheap	DILYS JONES
		MARY BROUGH

D-10
3724
Misc.
Plays

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

SHAKESPEARE'S

KING HENRY IV.

(Part I.)

That Wise Ruler Queen Elizabeth of England said:

"'Tis simple mirth keepeth high courage alive, and God he knoweth England hath need enough of that—ay, and of brave defenders."

279

LAST NIGHT'S PRODUCTION OF "HENRY IV."

Falstaffian Humour at His Majesty's.

In the sense that Shakespeare's "King Henry IV." is a fighting, patriotic play, its choice by Sir Herbert Tree for revival at His Majesty's Theatre at the present moment is doubtless a wise one. Anyhow it attracted an audience last evening great enough to fill the theatre to its utmost capacity, and if there was not over-much to thrill us there was a great deal of comedy to amuse and entertain. The title rôle in last night's representation could hardly be said to provide the chief character of the play, Falstaff, his friends and followers, and their adventures are made the chief business of this production.

The play was given by Sir Herbert in sixteen scenes, seven that were, as far as dis-play is concerned, in every way adequate, yet not at all as elaborate as the spectacular effects for which in more peaceful times His Majesty's Theatre is justly famous. As a background to the comicalities of Falstaff last night's stage production was good, and Sir Herbert as the elephantine drinker of sack was in every sense of the word immense. It is true that he entirely marred the King, but his mission was to awake the humour of the audience, to make it forget for the moment more serious things, and in that purpose he succeeded. Under these conditions the quarrel of Hotspur with his King lost much of its effect. It never stripped us.

Mr. Matheson Lang was virile enough as Hotspur. Mr. Basil King was dignity itself as Henry, but they seemed less than they were meant to be because the comedy and not the tragedy of the play was what we were intended to see.

PLAYGOER.

Sir Herbert Tree has done a happy and opportune thing in this revival. At one time the First Part of King Henry IV. was called the most popular of all dramatic compositions in the language. Yet the modern stage knows comparatively little of this splendid epic. There were matinées of the play by the present producer (then of the Haymarket) in the early summer of 1896, and matinées again by Mr. Lewis Waller at the Lyric in May, 1903, when Mr. Waller was, as he had been at the Haymarket, the fine Hotspur; as well as evening performances as part of the Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's in the spring of 1906.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.

SCENE 1. In the King's Palace.
SCENE 2. Before a Tavern.
SCENE 3. In the King's Palace.
SCENE 4. A Road by Gadshill.
SCENE 5. A Room in the Palace.
SCENE 6. The Boar's Head Tavern.

ACT II.

SCENE 1. Bangor: A Room in the Archdeacon's House.
SCENE 2. In the King's Palace.
SCENE 3. The Boar's Head Tavern.

ACT III.

SCENE 1. The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.
SCENE 2. A Road near Coventry.
SCENE 3. The King's Tent.
SCENE 4. The Rebel Camp.
SCENE 5. The Battle of Shrewsbury (Tableau).
SCENE 6. Part of the Battlefield.
SCENE 7. The Victorious Army.

New Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Costumes and Archæology have been supervised by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

Overture, Entr'acte and Interludes composed by RAYMOND ROZE. Incidental Music by RAYMOND ROZE and J. C. AMES.

Evening Performances of "King Henry IV." will be given every Thursday and Saturday at 8.

Extra Evening Performances of "King Henry IV." on Wednesday, November 25th and on Wednesday, December 2nd at 8.

Notice.—By request, Special Performances of "Drake" will be given on Monday, November 23rd and 30th, at 2 and 8.

STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL. ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER—ALFRED BELLEW. MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER—HENRY DANA.

POPULAR PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 6s. Balcony Stalls, 5s. Balcony, 4s. Upper Circle, 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (MR. POTTER) OPEN DAILY 10 to 7. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

LONDON HIPPODROME

Programme 6d.

Programme

Week commencing

MONDAY, NOV 16TH, 1914

"BUSINESS AS USUAL"

A HIPPODROME REVUE
IN EIGHT SCENES * *

By F. W. MARK and ALBERT P. DE COURVILLE
Lyrics by F. W. MARK
Music arranged by J. M. GLOVER
Dances and Ensembles by HARRY HALL
Produced by ALBERT P. DE COURVILLE (Assisted by Will Bishop

ELABORATE CAST:

UNITY MORE	HARRY TATE	VIOLET LORAINE
MORRIS HARVEY	CHRISTINE SILVER	VIVIAN FOSTER
AMBROSE THORNE	HILDA HOYES	HENRI LEONI
EDMUND GOULDING	LAWFORD DAVIDSON

AND MAMMOTH BEAUTY CHORUS OF OVER 70 PEOPLE

Scene 1—A Harvest Field in France
" 2—Whitehall
" 3—"The Nest," Tooting Bec
" 4—Famous Living Cartoons (By courtesy of Punch)
" 5—A Battlefield
" 6—A Cavalry Charge
" 7—An Up-to-date Sewing Party
" 8—The Allies' Levee

Stage Manager for the Revue - - HARRY HALL

Miss UNITY MORE is appearing by kind permission of George Edwardes, Esq.
Costumes designed by COMELLI & KATEL, and executed by SIMMONS, FISHER, ALIAS, SWAN & EDGAR, MORRIS ANGEL & REVELL. Shoes by GAMBA.
Organ by MUSTEL & SON. Scenery by MCCLEARY, E. H. RYAN and GEORGE HEMSLEY. Special Musical Numbers by HERMAN E. DAREWSKI, Junr., and ELSA MAXWELL.

D-10
3724
101
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Friday, November 20th, 1914

And EVERY EVENING at 8.30

Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

WILL REVIVE

THE FAMOUS COMEDY in THREE ACTS

ENTITLED:

OUR BOYS

By H. J. BYRON

Sir Geoffrey Champneys	(A County Magistrate)	Mr. JOHN BEAUCHAMP
Talbot Champneys	(his Son)	Mr. JOHN DEVERELL
Perkyn Middlewick	(a retired Butterman)	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Charles Middlewick	(his Son)	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Kempster	(Sir Geoffrey's Man-servant)	Mr. J. R. TOZER
Poddles	(Middlewick's Butler)	Mr. H. HALLADAY-HOPE
Violet Melrose	(an Heiress)	Miss BARBARA EVEREST
Mary Melrose	(her Poor Cousin)	Miss AGNES GLYNNE
Clarissa Champneys	(Sir Geoffrey's Sister)	Miss HELEN ROUS
Belinda	(a Lodging House Slavey)	Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER

ACT I.	At the Butterman's
ACT II.	At the Baronet's
ACT III.	Mrs. Patchman's "Three Pair Back"

PRECEDED AT 2.30 AND 8 BY A PLAY IN ONE ACT, entitled:

A MAN OF IDEAS

By MILES MALLESON.

Frank Cartwright	Mr. J. R. TOZER
William Goodman	Mr. ERNEST H. COX
Alice	Miss NETTA WESTCOTT
The Man	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLEN

(By kind permission of Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie)

Scene - - Room in Frank Cartwright's House

Our Boys may justly be accounted as one of the pioneers of record-breaking plays. Produced at the Vaudeville nearly forty years ago, it ran from January 16, 1875, to April 13, 1879, and the night after it completed its 1,362nd performance Henry J. Byron produced another of his many works at the same house. The progress of the comedy has been marked by many interesting features, among them being the celebration of the 1,000th representation on February 19, 1878, when the late David James and Tom Thorne, the managers, presented the entire receipts to London charities. Another notable event was the entertainment at the Bath theatre on February 5, 1879. Mr. Duck, the holder of the country rights, then marked the 1,000th provincial performance by giving all his company presents and a dinner, while Byron wrote a special address, delivered by Edmund W. Garden. Our Boys was successful in finding its way to Bath again long afterwards, and celebrating there its 2,000th time in the country. Miss Fanny Brough and Mr. E. S. Willard were for a long time members of the Duck company. The first revival of the play at the Vaudeville took place at the commencement of the management of the Messrs. Gatti on September 14, 1892, and continued well into the next year. Apart from that, there have been revivals at several other Metropolitan theatres. Our Boys quickly found its way to America, to Australia, and all the English Colonies. Moreover, it has been translated and acted in Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, Holland, Bavaria, Italy, and France. Of the original Vaudeville cast, Miss Kate Bishop, Mr. Thorne, Miss Cicely Richards, and Mr. William Lestocq happily survive.

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1914.

It is not often that Shakespeare is put up for a run at two London theatres concurrently, yet this is the case at the moment of writing. Following hard upon Sir Herbert Tree's splendid revival of "Henry the Forth (Part I.)" at His Majesty's, Miss Glossop-Harris and Mr. Frank Cellier started a very picturesque and capitally cast production of

"The Merchant of Venice"

at the Princes last Monday. Visiting the Princes on Thursday, I found "The Merchant" being followed with the deepest interest and with enthusiastic plaudits by an audience obviously possessing the keenest intelligence. Mr. and Mrs. Cellier's frequent Shakespearean performances in the provinces and suburbs have led many of us to expect sound and brainy work from them. We got it on Thursday. Mr. Cellier's Shylock was a powerful impersonation, with the accent on the villainous or vengeful side. Moreover, it was full of subtle touches that betokened original thought. Miss Glossop-Harris's Portia was as charming and gracious as it was elocutionarily effective, and fully deserved the numerous curtain-calls. A fine rendering of Bassanio, very touching in the pathetic points concerning that "royal merchant" Antonio, was given by Mr. E. Vassall-Vaughan. Mr. Alfred A. Harris was an excellent Antonio, Miss May Edward-Saker an engaging Nerissa, and Mr. Frank Cochrane acted not only artistically but sang melodiously as Gratiano. Jessica was well played by Miss Madge Spencer. Mr. Roy G. Beard was a good Lorenzo and Mr. Edward Montagu an earnest and effective Prince of Morocco.

* * *

This picturesque revival was given every afternoon last week and on Thursday and Saturday evenings. Owing to the increased booking, however, the play will be presented nightly from to-morrow evening and on Thursday and Saturday afternoons.

* * *

"The Dynasts"

presented at the Kingsway Theatre

November 25th. 1914.

THE DYNASTS

An Epic drama by

THOMAS HARDY

Abridged for the stage and produced by

GRANVILLE BARKER

Part First	Trafalgar
Part Second	The Peninsula
Part Third	Waterloo

PROLOGUE

Written for this production by

THOMAS HARDY

In these stern times of ours, when crimson strife
Throws shade on every thoroughfare of life,
Disfigures comely countries with its gore,
And sends back mangled heroes to our shore,
The gift of gifts is sturdy hardihood,
That holds it firm through each vicissitude,
Not only hour by hour, but year by year,
If need be, till life's lurid skies are clear.

Arrested by perceptions such as this,
We gather that it may not be amiss,—
During the few brief minutes you can spare
From the innumerous claims that call your care,—
To raise up visions of historic wars
Which taxed the endurance of our ancestors ;
That such reminders of the feats they did
May stouten hearts now strained by issues hid ;

Therefore have we essayed to represent,
By our faint means, event upon event
That Europe saw a hundred years ago . . . . . .
—What matters that Napoleon was our foe ?
Fair France herself had no ambitious ends ;
And we are happy in a change that tends
To make of nearest neighbours closest friends.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

The Reader		Henry Ainley
Chorus	Strophe	Esmé Beringer
	Antistrophe	Carrie Haase

PART I.—TRAFALGAR.

First Passenger		Cecil Bevan
Second Passenger		Clifford Marquand
Third Passenger		C. Croker-King
Pedestrian		Allan Wade
First Spectator		F. B. J. Sharp
Second Spectator		John Sargent
Third Spectator		Charles Koop
First Old Man		Charles Daly
Second Old Man		W. O. Billington
Mrs. Cantle		Esmé Hubbard
Private Cantle		Norman Page
Admiral Villeneuve	on board the Bucentaure	Clarence Derwent
Flag Captain Magendie		Nicholson Tucker
Lieutenant Daudignon		John Astley
Petty Officer		Gerrard Clifton
Nelson	on board the Victory	Nicholas Hannen
Dr. Scott		Frank Darch
Captain Hardy		Frederick Ross
Officer		Henry Hargreaves
A Lieutenant		William Muir
Pollard, a midshipman		Franklyn Bellamy
Dr. Magrath		Charles Maunsell
Dr. Beatty		A. Harding Steerman
First Citizen		A. G. Poulton
Second Citizen		Charles King
Boy		Arthur Burrell
Third Citizen		Charles Stone
Boatman		Rutland Barrington

PART II.—THE PENINSULA.

First Deserter		Charles Koop
Second Deserter		Franklyn Bellamy
Third Deserter		Sam Wilkinson
Fourth Deserter		Charles King
Fifth Deserter		Reginald Tippett
Sergeant		John Sargent
Officer		John Astley
Napoleon		Sydney Valentine
French Officer		Gerrard Clifton
Marshal Soult,		A. Harding Steerman
Straggler		Clifford Marquand
Colonel Graham		Cecil Bevan
Captain Hardinge		Charles Maunsell
Sir John Moore		H. R. Hignett
Sir John Hope		Bert Thomas
Major Colborne,		William Muir
Surgeon		F. B. J. Sharp
Chaplain		V. Tarver Penna
Sentinel		A. G. Poulton
Mrs. Dalbiac		Beatrice Smith
Mrs. Prescott		Pauline Strauss
Lord Fitzroy Somerset		Henry Hargreaves
Lord Wellington		Murray Carrington
Sergeant Young		Albert Chapman
Second Hussar		Allan Wade
Marshal Ney		Edward Irwin
Marshal Caulaincourt		E. H. Brooke
Marshal Macdonald		Frank Darch
Roustan, Napoleon's Mameluke		Clarence Derwent
Constant, Napoleon's Valet		A. Lubimoff

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

PART III.—WATERLOO.

Rustic	Charles Daly
Yeoman	W. O. Billington
A Girl	Dorothy Warren
A Woman	Hilda Francks
Longways	Reginald Tippett
Vicar	F. B. J. Sharp
Private Cantle	Norman Page
A coach guard	John Sargent
Young Officer	Franklyn Bellamy
His partner	Vera Cunningham
Her mother	Florence Haydon
General Sir Thomas Picton	Cecil Bevan
The Duke of Richmond	H. G. Hignett
The Duchess of Richmond	Mary Fenner
The Duke of Wellington	Murray Carrington
Muffling, Prussian Attaché	Allan Wade
The Prince of Orange	Frank Darch
The Duke of Brunswick	C. Croker-King
Gentleman next door	Charles Stone
Napoleon	Sydney Valentine
Marshal Soult	A. Harding Steerman
Another Marshal	E. H. Brooke
A Third Marshal	V. Tarver Penna
An aide	Eric H. Messiter
Another aide	Clifford Marquand
Colonel Marbot	Gerard Clifton
A Prussian prisoner	Charles Koop
Bridgeman,	Charles Maunsell
The Earl of Uxbridge	Nicholson Tucker
Lord Fitzroy Somerset	Henry Hargreaves
An aide	Albert Chapman
Colonel Heymès	Bert Thomas
An aide	H. Brough Robertson
Another Aide	Charles King
Lord Hill	Edward Irwin
Colonel Colborne	William Muir
Lord Saltoun	William Moore

THE abridged version of Thomas Hardy's "The Dynasts," presented by Mr. Granville Barker at the Kingsway Theatre on Wednesday evening, is a striking instance of how a very able stage manager can find himself confronted with an impossible task. "The Dynasts," as it was here seen, was anything but impressive, and one would very much rather retain one's own impressions of Nelson, Wellington, and Napoleon and his marshals than the figures one saw labelled thus on the stage of the Kingsway Theatre. Mr. Barker makes no attempt at spectacle. The background to all of the twenty or more scenes is pretty much the same, a little backing of an appropriate character being introduced now and then to help the illusion. The costumes, however, are numerous, picturesque, and—we may take it—correct.

Wordy Warfare.

This play has for its theme the lesson—as Mr. Hardy understands it—of the Napoleonic wars, and the smashing of Napoleon's power by Britain and her Allies. It is divided into three parts—Trafalgar, the Peninsula, and Waterloo—and finds its expression in numerous fragments of conversation designed to illustrate by masses of detail the attitude of the nations and their leaders in those far-off days of strife. Whether the play does so effectively or not is a matter of opinion. Personally I found the evening a very long one.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Saturday
Evening
Nov. 28

Orchestra Stl 7/6

No. J 21
This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1914,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

The Flag Lieutenant

A Comedy in Four Acts,
By MAJOR W. P. DRURY and MAJOR LEO TREVOR.

The characters are in the order of their appearance.

Edward Dormer-Lee, Midshipman ...	JACK HOBBS
Horatio Hood, Midshipman	EDWARD COMBERMERE
Richard Lascelles, Flag Lieutenant	GODFREY TEARLE
Vice-Admiral The Hon. Sir Berkeley Wynne, K.C.B.	ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE
Viola Hood	MAUD E. BELL
George Blockley, Yeoman of Signals ...	REGINALD BACH
William Thesiger, Major, Royal Marines	ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Mrs. Cameron	ELLIS JEFFREYS
Lady Hermione Wynne	STELLA MERVYN CAMPBELL
Christopher Neate, Admiral's Secretary	HENRY OLDHAM
John Penrose, Flag Captain	G. DICKSON KENWIN
Thomas Steele, Sergeant of Marines ...	ERNEST GRAHAM
James Sloggett, Ordinary Seaman ...	THOMAS WEGUELIN
Joshua Borlaise, Private of Marines ...	GORDON HARKER
Colonel McLeod, of the Campbell Highlanders	H. NYE CHART
Walter Crutchley, Surgeon, R.N. ...	LANGHORNE BURTON
Captain Munro, of the Campbell Highlanders	CHARLES LA TROBE
Memeti Salos, a Bashi-Bazouk ...	OLAF HYTTEN
Lady Dugdale	FRANCES IVOR
Mrs. Gough-Bogle	HELEN HAYE
General Gough-Bogle	O. B. CLARENCE
Michael Palliser, of the Eastern Telegraph Co.	JOHN WHEATMAN

The Play produced for FREDERICK HARRISON by E. LYALL SWETE.

A Splendid Revival.

Managers who provide the London public with plays that are in themselves entertainments calculated to interest and amuse are to be sincerely complimented just now. These are trying and exacting times, and so every simple, clean, and wholesome amusement is a thing to be prized. Mr. Frederick Harrison is therefore to be congratulated for having revived at the Haymarket Theatre that breezy comedy, "The Flag Lieutenant." He has done the thing quite splendidly too with a "star" cast that includes Mr. Allan Aynesworth, Mr. Godfrey Tearle, Mr. O. B. Clarence, Miss Ellis Jeffreys, Miss Stella Campbell, and Miss Helen Haye. This revival is a thing to see.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1914.

ACTORS AND THE WAR.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—I hope that a complete list of the names of actors who have joined the forces may soon be published. I think it will then be found that the dramatic profession has done its duty. I have made a hurried list of the names of those who have been associated with me at the St. James's Theatre who are now serving their country, and I have no doubt that other managers could supply even longer lists. Here is the list:

R. Horton Hummel, Cyril Cattley, J. Russell, Philip Desborough, F. Arundel, Trevor Roller, Gerald Jerome, Charles Hunt-Helmsley, Robert Loraine, Norman McKeown, Ernest Thesiger, Tom Woods, Eric Maturin, Charles Blackall, Ivo Dawson, W. C. R. Rose, Harold Holland, M. Elphinstone, Stuart Dennison, Montague Wigan, Guy Dawson; R.N.V.R.: E. Vivian Reynolds, A. P. Horne, T. M. de Courcy.

St. James's Theatre. GEORGE ALEXANDER.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Mr. Robert Vansittart has asked for statistics of the amount of service being rendered to the country by actors during this present crisis.

The Stage has published a list since the beginning of the war, which, although as yet not complete, covers several hundred names. In addition to this there is the United Arts Force, and as good a percentage of special constables as is represented by any other body of civilians, including dramatic authors!

Of course there are some lamentable and noticeable exceptions, but is not this the case in other callings? ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

Garrick Theatre, W.C.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Who is Mr. Robert Vansittart who is first of all allowed to traduce in your columns my profession, and then ask if it is true?

If he is a young man, why does he not serve himself? If he is elderly he is old enough to know better. If he buys the Stage he can see that actors have done well—very well. There may be—are probably—"slackers" in my profession, as doubtless there are in Mr. Vansittart's. By the way, what is his profession? Writing letters to newspapers from a comfortable club in Piccadilly?

I trust, in justice to a community which has served its country, both by giving of its members and of its money, that you will insert this letter.

FRED TERRY.

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8 O'CLOCK.

A Message from Mars

By RICHARD GANTHONY.

Horace Parker	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
A Tramp	Mr. GEORGE TULLY
Arthur Dicey	Mr. CHARLES LASCELLES
Dr. Chapman	Mr. H. GESLIN
Mr. Ferguson	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Sir E. Vivian	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Sir Roland Wright	Mr. EDWARD ARNOTT
Joe the Coster	Mr. NORMAN HADDOCK
The Emperor	Master EDWARD HAYWARD
Muggeridge	Mr. CHARLES ASHWELL
Jim	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
Policeman	Mr. FRANK WAKEFIELD
Servant	Mr. R. AUSTEN
Watchman	Mr. E. ASHTON
Boy	Master GEORGE WOODHOUSE
The Messenger from Mars	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Miss Parker	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Mrs. Clarence	Miss MONA HARRISON
Bella	Miss GLADYS MAUDE
Polly	Miss M. SUMMERLEY
A Flower Girl	Miss G. MEIKLEJOHN
A Poor Woman	Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Girl	Miss ESME WYNNE
Minnie Templer	Miss MARGERY MAUDE

Guests, etc.—Mesdames L. Flockton, Maun Ewin.
Messrs. Hulbert, Haddock, Boddy and Kendall.

APOLLO
THEATRE
2/12/14
Orch. Stall
C I
To be retained

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

ON THURSDAY, 10th DECEMBER, 1914, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

THE MAN WHO STAYED AT HOME

A Play in Three Acts, by

LECHMERE WORRALL and J. E. HAROLD TERRY.

Christopher Brent	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Carl Sanderson	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
John Preston, J.P.	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Percival Pennicuik	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Fritz	Mr. E. HENRY EDWARDS
Corporal Atkins	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Mrs. Sanderson	Mrs. ROBERT BROUGH
Miriam Leigh	Miss RUTH MACKAY
Molly Preston	Miss ISOBEL ELSOM
Miss Myrtle	Miss JEAN CADELL
Fraulein Schroeder	Miss MARY JERROLD
Daphne Kidlington	Miss ELIZABETH RISDON

The Play produced under the direction of EILLE NORWOOD.

The Action takes place at Mrs. Sanderson's Select Boarding Establishment in a town on the East Coast, on a certain day in September, 1914.

Scene: Mrs. Sanderson's Private Sitting Room.

The Curtain will be lowered for a few seconds in Act III. to indicate the lapse of some hours.

There will be intervals of 10 minutes each between the Acts.

Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY appears by arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Miss Ruth Mackay's and Miss Isobel Elsom's Dresses by Madame ESTHER, 5 Grafton St., W., and their Hats by MICHEE ZAC.

Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by GEO. ROGERS & SONS.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head-dress.

This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12th, AT 2.30

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	Mr. STEWART DAWSON
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

A Spy Play.

[illegible] of a new "spy" play at [illegible] Theatre on Thursday evening [illegible] one of the best audiences seen in [illegible] on, and Messrs. Vedrenne [illegible] can congratulate themselves on [illegible] a piece that amused their [illegible] author, Louis Napoge Worrall [illegible] Hatred Fenn—have called their [illegible] "Who Stood at Home." [illegible] [illegible] and in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

L-10
372.
1914
Walters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1915.

On Wednesday "The Man Who Stayed at Home" realised a total of 900 per annum at the box. Its Theatre and for December it will celebrate its first anniversary. In Paris, where it is being played in French, they have altered the title to "Qui," and in America, where it is now a big success, the title given it is "The White Feather."

D-10
3724
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1914.

A TRIP TO PARIS IN WAR TIME.

DELIGHTFUL BUT DIFFERENT.

By JAMES WATERS.

PARIS.

Before I left London for Paris I was strongly advised by a man who had been there recently not to bring more luggage than I could carry comfortably from the station to an hotel. "There are few railway porters in Paris," he said, "and there are few cabs." He was right about the railway porters. I had to join a syndicate of chance acquaintances of the dining-car in exploiting the services of a man caught red-handed in the act of looking for work. He justified his position with honour, and put each of us with our luggage inside of a cab within the space of five minutes.

The story of there being a shortage of cabs in Paris belongs to prehistoric times. Paris is alive with them, and after luncheon I was convinced that each one of them was on the wrong side of the road. Anyhow, I am prepared to affirm that in Paris you are even now, when crossing a street, taking an even-money chance that a taxicab bowls you over or that if he misses you the driver still has sufficient mental pain to compel him to relieve his feelings in language. People who drive things—whether they are of Paris, London, or New York—possess that talent, and only the inexperienced citizen or the one who wants a quick and entirely new version of his family history will reply to the bons mots flung into the air after one of these exciting escapes from injury.

* * * * *

In few departments of life is Paris dull these days. In the afternoon it is wonderfully animated, more animated, I think, than London is at the same hour. When the sun sets the lighted lamps fill the streets with a glow that is simply astonishing to anyone accustomed to the darkened London of the past weeks. At eight o'clock, or it may be a little earlier, Paris seems to disappear into those high, white houses. The dinner-hour is now much earlier, and although the authorities permit the restaurants to keep open until ten o'clock, all the diners have left a good half-hour before that time, and as early as eight o'clock the chairs are piled up in stacks on the terraces of the cafés. Along the main boulevards the full display of arc and other lamps shows up a great thoroughfare almost empty, but about eleven o'clock, when the music-halls and kinema theatres, all of which are doing splendidly, turn out their audiences, something of the old animation appears again in this region of entertainments. So far the drama has made no attempt to resurrect itself. One little theatre is open, and a charity matinée has been given at the Comédie Française. The Opéra is to open at the end of January, but nothing has leaked out yet—unless that remark can be applied to the Wagner scenery and costumes removed from the building last week.

Paris is at its best, these war days, from noon to six. The streets are then alive with people, but the overwhelming majority are women and children. One sees very few young men anywhere. Masculine Paris as seen in the streets, shops, and hotels is either too old or too young to go into the firing line. In the Champs-Elysées the children at play and the bonnes are as numerous as ever.

* * * * *

The Rue de la Paix is an interesting street just now. One sees beautifully dressed women in that headquarters of fashion. But instead of arriving in magnificent limousines the customers now come afoot. The jewellers around there and in the Place Vendôme still continue to display the same exquisite taste in showing their goods, and rely on still fewer objets in their windows to uphold their reputation and tempt the rich to buy. The milliners, too, have retained their old artistic instinct for display, yet Paris this December shows no design that is not carried out in either black, or white, or grey. In that quarter there are few closed shops now. A few with the blinds down continue to announce that the proprietor and his assistants are at the war, and some that are open—with women to serve in them—give the rank of the proprietor and the regiment with which he is serving at the front.

The demand the war has made on the men of military age has not caused Paris to be neglected. On the contrary, it is groomed to a state of perfection. It may take a greater number of men—because they are older—to do the work, but done it certainly is. The streets are beautifully kept just now; grey and white they look, and particularly in the wide spaces, like the Place de la Concorde or the Place de l'Etoile, the passing figures all dressed alike, in universal black, take the appearance of silhouettes. There are but few soldiers walking in the streets. There is not one uniform for the ten to be seen in London. But every day—mostly in the morning or early afternoon—one can see great, high-powered motor-cars, splashed thick with white mud, racing at terrific speed—come straight from Soissons or Rheims, some sixty miles away, an officer inside and a soldier in red cap at the driving wheel, a loaded rifle beside him.

* * * * *

But Paris gets little colour from the soldiers. On Sunday one sees many of them walking quietly about the streets, spending their few hours' leave looking in the windows of the shops. They are quiet, silent fellows, and by evening they have disappeared—gone back to the barracks in and around the city.

Across the river at the Invalides one gets picturesque glimpses of military men of every rank, and inside the church there is an ever-present group of soldiers beneath the line of seven flags captured from the Germans in the fighting on the eastern frontier. The soldiers who come to see these flags stand silent and uncovered, looking upwards; in front is an ever-present sentinel with bayonet fixed.

* * * * *

Paris has changed much since the war. It has not changed for the worse. Its streets are quieter now. The note of colour is changed. Nature helps but little with colour in December, and tens of thousands of men are being mourned. There are not any orchestras in the restaurants. The supper dance restaurants of Montmartre are closed. L'Abbé Thélème, Bal Tabarin, Le Rat Mort, and all such have closed their doors. Maxime's, in the Rue Royale, is at ten o'clock as dark as night. The hotels of the wealthy quarters are all reopening; only a few remain closed to the public because the Red Cross wants them. The great hotels that are open remain pathetically empty. The visitors are increasing but slowly, and yet Paris looks very beautiful. It inspires admiration in this time of awful trouble, keeping up its normal life, while sixty miles away "on the roads the guns are rumbling."

THE LONDON COLISEUM.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. Oswald Stoll, Chairman and Managing Director, The Coliseum Syndicate Ltd., Coliseum Buildings, W.C.

Managing Director - - - - - OSWALD STOLL.
Manager, ARTHUR CROXTON.
Stage Manager, HENRY CROCKER.
Musical Director, ALFRED DOVE.
Assistant Manager, H. PRYME.

PROGRAMME.

Week commencing Monday December 21st, 1914.
(X'MAS DAY EXCEPTED)

PROGRAMME—continued.

11.—Mr OSWALD STOLL presents for the first time on any stage, a NEW WAR PLAY by

J. M. BARRIE,

Entitled—

"DER TAG."

SCENE ... ... AN APARTMENT.

Spirit of Culture.....MISS IRENE VANBRUGH
Emperor.....MR. NORMAN McKINNEL
Chancellor.....MR. WILLIAM H. BROUGHAM
Commander-in-Chief.....MR. FRANCIS H. DUGUID

Produced by Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1914.

Sir James Barrie's knack of keeping some surprise up his sleeve for his audiences is so well known that one expected something out of the common in his conception of a war play, which would appeal to a vast place of amusement like the Coliseum. Out of the common Der Tag certainly is, and the author can hardly blame his audiences if they are puzzled at the outset on one vital point. Is this Kaiser, whom Sir James presents to us, his idea of the German Emperor as he actually was during those eventful days of July and August, when the peace of Europe trembled in the balance, or is it his idealized Emperor, his view of how the really great man—the Bonaparte, who is constantly thrown in the Emperor's face, as the emblem of strength—would have wished to mould the destinies of Europe? We confess that we are unable to answer the question. Possibly the playwright intended that it should remain unanswered, and that those who consider the portrait a fantastic one can comfort themselves with the thought that at any rate the ideal is one to be strived for.

If Sir James intends us to take his study of the Emperor as an accurate one, of an ambitious, but honourable, ruler, struggling against an overwhelming destiny of militarism, history must be left to decide whether the view is justified. At any rate, it is not the view of the masses to whom, presumably, Der Tag is addressed, who prefer to regard the Kaiser as a headstrong monarch dashing impetuously and at any cost to his goal. The dramatist's analysis of the Emperor really divides itself into two quite distinct sections. In the first we see him in conference with his Chancellor and Commander-in-Chief, whose desires, at least, are perfectly manifest. Their demand is for war, whatever may be the cost, and they beg the Kaiser to attach his signature to the document which will spell European strife. Flattery, hypocrisy, mendacity are all used in the efforts to obtain his permission for war. The arguments which have now become historic are all brought into play—England's internal strife, the uprising of the East, Poland's willingness to side with Germany. "These wounds might heal suddenly if German bugles sound," the Emperor reminds his officers, but the war-lust is insatiable. "You have fashioned us into the sword and now the sword must speak." If we are to accept Sir James's theory, the violation of Belgium was none of the Emperor's wish. He will enter France through Alsace. In vain his officers plead with him that if Germany does not invade Belgium France assuredly will. The Kaiser replies with anger that both nations have pledged their word and will not violate it. As the disgruntled officers retire, there comes to the worried Emperor the Spirit of Culture, who pleads with him that his path of duty lies in the way of peace and, recalling his officers, he brushes aside the declaration of war and declines to attach his signature.

Up to this point we have the idealized Kaiser, the man of ambition, who respects his international obligations. Then, however, Der Tag becomes more incoherent. As the Emperor dreams his troubled dreams he sees the horrors of the war into which he has plunged the world—Reims Cathedral bombarded, seats of learning sacked, and to him again appears the Spirit of Culture, this time sorely wounded. In biting words she rebukes him for his deeds. The Russians are at his gates, his best men lie dead on the field of battle. God, his ally, has deserted him. "England was grown degenerate, you have made her great again," says the Spirit of Culture, and passing out of his sight for ever she hands him a dagger as his one means of escape from the meshes of the net in which he is entangled.

Though the intention of Der Tag is not always apparent, and though its brevity has tended to make for a certain incoherence, there are some things about the little play which make its presentation an extremely interesting event. There is a dignity and eloquence in some of the speeches, particularly those of the Spirit of Culture in which she practically states the case of the world against Prussian ideals, which show us Sir James Barrie in a most effective light and they form a striking contrast with the comedy which we have been accustomed to expect. Parts of the dialogue in fact might well be quoted as England's argument, and we venture to think that the popularity of Der Tag will be greatest in the study. If the exact intention of the play remains obscure, let us hasten to add that the fault is by no means that of the players. Both Miss Irene Vanbrugh as the Spirit of Culture and Mr. Norman McKinnell as the Emperor—in no way made up to represent the Kaiser—were at their best, and it was a real pleasure to hear Sir James Barrie's prose declaimed in the manner that those two players can do.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

THE

ALHAMBRA THEATRE

LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON

THE ALHAMBRA REVUE

EVERYTHING NEW? NOT LIKELY!

A REVUE

By GEORGE GROSSMITH & COSMO GORDON LENNOX.

Scene XII. . . . . OR . "ROBINSON CRUSOE"

"The Diabolical Davy Jones, whose dastardly deeds are frustrated by the Fearless Fairy, who waves her witching wand and rescues Peter Pan Robinson from his perilous predicament."

A GORGEOUS AND SPECTACULAR PANTOMIME IN SIX SPASMS AND OCCASIONAL INTERLUDES, BY ROBERT HALE.

The Plot was hatched at HATCHETT'S.

(Anyone daring to infringe the copyright of this story will receive an Iron Cross.)

Music stolen by CLAVILLE MIDFON. Lyrics forged by SWEARS.—Costumes designed by MAGIST. Tights by TAUTZ. Shoes by SHOOLBRED. Dances and Ensembles by MAPLE. Stage Production by HANDBILL LARKER.

The Names of others responsible for the Production excised by The Censor.

NOTE.—The Doctor is always in attendance. Morphia may be obtained at the Bars.

The Demon King (A naughty gnome who stops at naught) . . . . . Mr. Lynch

Good Fairy Cockleshell (who never goes to Night Clubs) . . . . . Miss de Bausset

Seaweed . . . Good little Girl . . .
Golden Sand . . . Fairies specially engaged . . . Miss Hope
Silver Fish . . . this pro- . . . Miss Rossiter
Star Fish . . . duction . . . Miss Oliver
. . . from . . . Miss Daly
. . . the A.B.C. Co. .

Will Atkins (The Wicked Pirate King) . . . . . Mr. MORRISON

Billy Crusoe (Robin's step-brother) . . . . . Mr. Leslie

Mrs. Crusoe (Robin's Mother) . . . . . Mrs. AUSTIN

ROBINSON CRUSOE . . . . . Mr. ROBERT HALE

Polly (Robin's sweetheart, Principal Girl) . . . . . Miss MONKMAN

Captain Capstan (The captivating Commander, 2nd Principal Boy) . . Miss Mercer

Louisa (His girl, 2nd Principal Girl) . . . . . Miss Wollaston

Violet (3rd Principal Boy) . . . Miss Graham
Beryl (3rd Principal Girl) . . . Miss Cwynne
Nellie (4th Principal Boy) . . . Miss Inman
Violet (4th Principal Girl) . . . Miss Aston
Mabel (5th Principal Boy) . . . Miss Tierre
Rosa (5th Principal Girl) . . . Miss Sullivan
Cannibal King . . . . . Mr. Sim
Fritz . . . . . Mr. Studer
The Goat . . . . . Mr. Kaufmann
The Monkey . . . . . Mr. Nade
The Parrot . . . . . Miss Bassett
The Lightning Kid . . . . . Mr. Dagnall

Scene I. . . . . "Davy Jones's Locker under the Thames." (W. J. LINGS)

The Costumes for this Scene by BOOTS CASH CHEMISTS.
Goblets, Ignomes and Sea-nymphs by TOMMY DEWAR. The Good Fairy's Wand by SELFRIDGE.
The Demon's Cauldron boiled by THE GAS LIGHT & COKE CO.
OYSTERS in the River bed by HARRY HEMS.

Scene II. . . . . "Mill Wall Docks." (WILL CROOKS)

The Boat in which Robin Sails kindly lent by THE WHITE STAR LINE.
Fairy Cleaning by TRUE-FIT. Fairy Costumes by MISS-FITT.
Mrs. Crusoe's Laundry by THE GARDEN CITY CO.

Scene III. . . . . "Between Decks."

Scene IV. . . . . "The Pirate Ship."

Thunder and Lightning supplied by GEORGE BERNHARD SHAW.
The Mast and Rigging supervised by TOMMY LIPTON.

This Scene will be followed by a realistic and thrilling Storm, in which the good ship sinks

Scene V. . . . . "The Raft. Saved!"

Scene VI. . . . . "The Cannibal Island."

This Island was originally discovered over this Frontiersman by THEODORE ROOSVELT.
Friday's Fire supplied by the SAVOY GRILL.
Savages kindly lent by the SAVAGE CLUB. Escape through Fly kamera Agency.
Animals kindly lent by C. B. COCHRAN from the WONDER ZOO, and loaned by HATTY-BERSEE.

Daily Mail.

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1914.

A PANTOMIME BURLESQUE.

Burlesque has not had a better example for many a long day than the travesty of a pantomime introduced this week into the revue at the Alhambra Theatre. It is called "Robinson Crusoe," and its author is Mr. Robert Hale. He plays the chief part in it also—that of the pantomime "principal boy."

The little burlesque comes at the end of the evening, and plays hardly more than half an hour, but into that half-hour is crowded more comicality than often falls to the lot of a playgoer to see. The thing is genuinely, deliciously funny, and Mr. Hale is an unforgettable Robinson Crusoe. He is something to see.

J. W.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON

Monday Afternoon, Dec. 21st, and Twice Daily at 2.30 and 8,

By arrangement with FRANK CURZON

THE BRANDON THOMAS COMPANY

IN THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY ATTRACTION

"CHARLEY'S AUNT,"

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Colonel Sir Francis Chesney, Bart. ... (Oxford) . . . Mr. C. M. HOUSE
Stephen Spettigue ... . . . Mr. AMYAS E. PAGE
Jack Chesney ... . . . Mr. H. MAYSH ALLEN
Charles Wykeham ... . . . Mr. WALTER BANNISTER
Lord Fancourt Babberley . . . Mr. PERCY CRAWFORD
Brassett ... . . . Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez . . . . . Miss OLAVONNE WYNNE
Kitty Verdun .. . . . Matinees ... Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Amy Spettigue . . . Evenings ... Miss MURIEL MARTIN DARVELL
Ela Delahay . . . . . Miss WINIFRED WELLS
. . . . . Miss MARJORIE THOMSON

ACT I. . . . . Jack Chesney's Rooms in College.

ACT II. . . . . Garden outside Jack Chesney's Rooms.

ACT III. . . . . Drawing Room in Spettigue's House.

Time The Present. Commemoration Week, Oxford

Programme of Music under the direction of Mr. EDMUND MANEY:

SELECTION . . . Conductor . . . Mr. EDMUND MANEY
Introducing: I. Gavotte—Bach. 2. Waltz—Lacome. 3. Song—Harrison. 4. Dance—Bach. 5. Let Right Hearts Be Free—Hervé. 6. Song—Lemaire. 7. Pizzicato—Delibes. 8. Oh! Boys—Jones. 9. Le Temps—Lacome. 10. Interval. 11. Pride of Dorset—Jones. 12. Pride of Dorset—Wheeler. 13. Song—Chaminade. 14. Dance—Bach. 15. Pride of Dorset—Jones. 16. Harvard—Le Coq. 17. Finale—Wallace.
Pianoforte used by the Musical Director by BECHSTEIN & SONS, 130, Wigmore Street, W.
Concert Grand by Messrs. COLLARD & COLLARD, 16, Grafton Street, W.

General Manager ... Mr. C. H. RALPH
Acting Manager ... Mr. G. W. HOTEL

Reserved Seats (numbered and Stalls) . . . POPULAR PRICES . . . 1s. to 5s.
Unreserved Seats, Pit, Circle . . . Opera . . .

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors . . . . . Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

LEICESTER SQUARE Underground Station is next door to this Theatre.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF Dec 23rd

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

"RAFFLES"

A Play in Four Acts, by E. W. HORNUNG and EUGENE PRESBREY.

Characters.

A. J. Raffles	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
The Earl of Amersteth	Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Viscount Crowley	Mr. FRANK DENTON
Harry Manders (Bunny)	Mr. GUY RATHBONE
Curtis Bedford	Mr. JULES SHAW
Merton (his Assistant)	Mr. W. T. LOVELL
Crawshay (a Burglar)	Mr. FRANK ROYDE
Goldby (a Butler)	Mr. F. J. ARLTON
Barraclough (Porter at "The Albany")	Mr. HOWARD STURGE
Lady Melrose (Lord Amersteth's Sister)	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Lady Ethel (his Daughter)	Miss VIOLET EARDLEY
Gwendolen Conran (a Cousin)	Miss KYRLE BELLEW
Marie (a French Maid)	Miss MAUD BUCHANAN
Mrs. Vidal	Miss HILDA MOORE

ACT I. .. .. Milchester Abbey (September—Evening)
ACT II. .. .. The Same (Next Morning)
ACT III. .. Raffles' Chambers, The Albany, London (Next Afternoon)
ACT IV. .. .. The Same (Night)

The action of the Play takes place in 24 hours.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Dresses by LOVSE, Princes Street, Hanover Square, W.
Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., LTD., Hampstead Road, N.W.
Wigs by CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.
The Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by THE CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1. FANTASIE, "Lakmé" ... ... Délibes
2. a. MORCEAU, "Sur la Riviera" ... ... Davidoff
   b. SONG, "When the Angelus" ... ... Grant
3. SELECTION, "The Passing Show" ... ... Herman Finck
4. a. INTERMEZZO, "Huetamo" ... ... Ancliffe-Gibson
   b. SONG, "Charmante Marguerite" ... ... Old French Song
   c. VALSE, "Innamorata" ... ... Marchetti

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL
Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

310

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, :: W.C.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1914, at 2 o'clock.

Proprietors ... ... Mr. & Mrs. FRANK WYATT
Sole Lessee and Manager ... CHARLES FROHMAN

AND EVERY DAY ONWARDS at 2 o'clock
THURSDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS at 8 o'clock

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

PETER PAN OR, THE BOY WHO WOULDN'T GROW UP

By J. M. BARRIE

The Music Composed and Arranged by JOHN CROOK

Peter Pan		MADGE TITHERADGE
Jas. Hook		E. HOLMAN CLARK
Mr. Darling		DONALD CALTHROP
Mrs. Darling		MADGE MURRAY
Wendy Moira Angela Darling		HILDA TREVELYAN
John Napoleon Darling		ROY ROYSTON
Michael Nicholas Darling		ELYOT HAWKINS
Nana		EDGAR PLEON
Tinker Bell		JANE WREN
Tootles	Members of Peter's Band	GERTRUDE LANG
Nibs		MARJORIE GRAHAM
Slightly		A. W. BASKCOMB
Curly		PRUDENCE BOURCHIER
First Twin		DORIS McINTYRE
Second Twin		NANCY PAWLEY
Smee	Pirates	GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey		BEN FIELD
Cookson		CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins		WILLIAM HARBERD
Cecco		WILLIAM LUFF
Jukes		JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler		FREDERICK LEISTER
		Messrs. DICK COOPER, GORDON CARR, GEORGE WELCH
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	HUMPHREY WARDEN
Tiger Lily		MARGARET FRASER

Braves, ANNA WALDEN, ETHEL WELLESLEY, TONIE EDGAR-BRUCE, GLADYS CALTHROP, IDA PAWLEY.

Mermaid		DORA SEVENING
Baby Mermaid		MOYA NUGENT
Liza	(Author of the Play)	MOYA NUGENT
Crocodile		F. W. CECIL and D. ROSE
Ostrich		GORDON CARR

Pack of Wolves— GORDON CARR, F. W. CECIL, M. ROSE, D. ROSE, A. FANCHEUX, G. CLEVERLY.

NEW 'PETER PAN."

"Peter Pan" returned for the eleventh consecutive season to the Duke of York's Theatre and captivated its latest audience as easily as it did those in the years gone by.

This year—after a too long absence—Miss Hilda Trevelyan returns to her original part of Wendy, and Mr. Baskcomb to his of Slightly. Miss Madge Titheradge now takes the part of Peter. Mr. Donald Calthorp as Mr. Darling gave a splendid performance full of character touches.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

309

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Aldwych
THEATRE

24/12/14

Orch. Stall
B 7
To be retained

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1914.

Every Evening at 7.30.

MATINEES: DAILY AT 2 O'CLOCK.

"CINDERELLA"

Book by FRED. BOWYER. Music by B. J. PATERSON.

CAST:

The Baron Mugwump		SCOTT RUSSELL
Myrtle	His Daughters	HAROLD MONTAGUE
Popsy		HARVEY WHITE
Cinderella (Baron's Youngest Daughter)		JULIA JAMES
Pimple (the Page)...		JOHNNY SCHOFIELD, JUNR.
Nick Winter	Private Detectives	DENIS LYNDON
Sexton Blake		HARRY BENET
Prince Charming		LILY IRIS
Dandini (his Valet)		DAISY BARTHOLOMEW
Fairy Godmother		EVELYN HOPE
Fuzzy (Cinderella's Pet Pussy) ...		PAULINE PRIM
Fairy Queen		LENNIE DEANE
Demon		WALTER BRODIE
The Hare		HAROLD BARRETT
Footman		H. FREEMAN
Roger	Village Lassies	GWEN CONNINGTON
Colin		ILINE DENNIS
Robert		NORA COOK
Donald		JANE WELLS
Violet	Village Lads	IDA HARVEY
Alice		EDITH ELLIOTT
Maizie		VIOLET HYDE
Thirza		MADELINE MAR

Huntsmen, Villagers, Guests, etc.

SCENES:

PART I.

SCENE I.	Poppyland.
,, II.	The Baron's Home.
,, III.	Corridor in Baron's Home.
,, IV.	In the Woods.
,, V.	Another Part of Baron's Home.
,, VI.	The Kitchen.

PART II.

SCENE VII.	The Ball Room.
,, VIII.	The Way Home.
,, IX.	The Prince's Palace.

Doll and Golliwog Dance by Miss FLORENCE HERSEE and JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD, JUNR.

Speciality Dances by Miss HELEN MAY.

Producer and Stage Manager - WALTER B. HARCOURT
Musical Director - - - - B. J. PATERSON

Songs and Concerted Numbers by kind permission of Messrs. FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER; B. FELDMAN & Co.; STAR MUSIC PUBLISHING Co.; REYNOLD & Co.; WEST & Co.; SHEARD & Co., etc., etc.

Piano used by Mr. HAROLD MONTAGUE, supplied by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co., 50 Old Bond Street, W.

Children's Dances arranged by Miss EUPHAN MacLAREN.

Concerted Numbers and Dances arranged by Mr. JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD, JUNR.

Scenery painted by Messrs. ENGLAND & WALLACE, at Mr. HOWARD'S Crystal Palace Studio.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Costumes by Madame PHILLIPS.

Miss Julia James' Dresses by LUCILLE. Miss Lily Iris' Dresses by ALIAS.

Cat's Dress by H. & M. RAYNE.

Cigarettes supplied by H. L. SAVORY & Co, 47 Piccadilly, W.

Harlequinade at Matinees only.

Clown - - - - - - - WALTER MANFREE.

"CINDERELLA" AT THE ALDWYCH.

The version of "Cinderella" produced by Mr. J. Bannister Howard at the Aldwych Theatre makes a capital entertainment for young and old.

Miss Lily Iris and Miss Julia James, as the hero and heroine, made themselves prime favourites. The best comedy scenes were those in which the two ugly sisters took part, and to Messrs. Harold Montague and Harvey White is due the credit of making these two characters the funniest seen for some years in "Cinderella." Miss Pauline Prim played the black cat with rare humour. Altogether, an excellent pantomime.

J. W.

D-10
3724
lon.
Waters. 3.
Plays

THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE

THE NATIONAL THEATRE OF ENGLAND

Lessee ... ...

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1914.

SOLDIERS' CHORUSES.

ENJOYMENT OF OPERA HOUSE PANTOMIME.

The London Opera House anticipated the first public performance of its pantomime "Aladdin"—which is to take place this afternoon—by giving an invitation performance on Christmas Eve, when soldiers on leave formed a considerable part of the audience.

The author, Mr. E. C. Matthews, sets out the story in fifteen scenes, and with unerring dramatic license, makes the majority of the inhabitants of ancient Peking the most patriotic of British subjects and determined opponents of the Huns. The comedians' songs and the dances were much to the liking of the audience. Indeed, one of the features of the afternoon was the enthusiasm which the soldiers threw into the choros of the songs that appealed to them.

The company is a big one—quite 200 people appearing on the stage together in a couple of the scenes. Miss Claire Romaine is a prime favourite; Miss Billie Barlow and Miss Bessie Burke are first rate. The comedians are numerous and funny. There is a pretty ballet of children, with Miss Marjorie Mercer, a delightful child, as première danseuse, and last, but not least, there is a harlequinade.

J. W.

A LONDON PANTOMIME.

MOTION BY THEATRE MANAGER FOR A RECEIVER.

CHANCERY DIV.—Mr. Justice Astbury.

A motion was made on behalf of Mr. Humphry Ellis Brammall, theatrical manager, for the appointment of a receiver and manager of the London Opera House in connection with the pantomime "Aladdin." The defendants were the Mutual Industrial Corporation.

Mr. Russell, K.C. (with him Mr. Simmons), said the defendants were financing the pantomime. Disputes arose, and the plaintiff was excluded from his position as general manager.

It was said by the defendants (said Mr. Russell) that the plaintiff had not supplied them with the proper scenery. Yet the defendants were advertising the pantomime as the most gorgeous and magnificent spectacle the world had ever seen. The gross takings for the first week were £1,500, and for the second £1,300.

Mr. Bennett, for the defendants, read affidavits on their behalf, which stated that Mr. Brammall was excluded because he was not giving proper attention to the show, and the takings did not cover the expenses.

His lordship appointed a receiver of 15 per cent. of the gross takings and gave directions for an early trial of the action.

Dec 26 January 1915

YCEUM THEATRE

... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
ng Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

TWICE DAILY at 2 and 7-15

THE LYCEUM CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

Jack and the Beanstalk

Written by NEWMAN MAURICE.
Produced by WALTER AND FREDERICK MELVILLE.
Music specially composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, T. D. PILBEAM, J. SOAMES, and LYCEUM STUDIO.
Mechanical and other effects by THOMAS REES. Properties by WILLIAM CRISP.
Electrical and other effects by JOHN WATERS. Costumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.
The Ballets invented and arranged by MDLLE. ROSA.

Characters:

Simple Simon (the Silly Postman of Dimpledown) ... Mr. VICTOR KELLY
King Rulem (A dry old Stick) ... . Mr. HARRY BRAYNE
John Willie } Dimpledown Constabulary ... Mr. GEORGE WELTON
Long Lung } ... ... Mr. PERCY MAUR
Tiny Tom } ... ...Mr. HARRY FARMER
Buggins } Bailiffs .. .. Messrs. JACKLEY and LE SINE
Juggins }
Fairy Starlight ... ... Miss CISSIE VAUGHAN
Demon Mischief ... ... Mr. HAROLD BROWNE
Daisy (A dear old Cow) ... ... Messrs. MACDONALD and ARTHUR
Mr. Hops (Landlord of the Inn) ... ... Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Flossie (A Barmaid) ... ... Miss WINIFRED YORKE
Trotter (Potman) ... ... Mr. F. SAYERS
Princess Rosamund (The King's Daughter) ... Miss DORIS DEAN
Dolly Dimple (The Belle of Dimpledown) ... Mr. HARRY CONLIN
Colin (The Landlord's Son) ... . Miss IRIS BANFIELD
Margery Daw (In Love with Colin) ... ... Miss ELSIE PIDDOCK
Tom } School Children ... ... THE TWO CURES
Alice }
Mister Gobblywobbly (A Giant) ... ... Mr. RICHARD F. SYMONS

Slavey ... ... | The Giant Gobblywobbly's Cooks. | THE BOGANNY TROUPE.
Gravy ... ... |
Pepper ... ... |
Pickles ... ... |
Mustard ... ... |
Cress ... ... |
Ginger ... ... |

AND

Jack (The Hero of the Beanstalk) ... ... Miss LOUIE BECKMAN

Acting Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

318

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24th (CHRISTMAS EVE) AT 7.

SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8.

DAVID COPPERFIELD

Wilkins Micawber	HERBERT TREE
David Copperfield	OWEN NARES
James Steerforth	By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE and EADIE
Tommy Traddles	BASIL GILL
Uriah Heep	DEERING WELLS
Dan'l Peggotty	CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
Ham	HERBERT TREE
Mr. Dick	FREDERICK ROSS
Littimer	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
A Waiter	W. GAYER MACKAY
1st Old Fogey	ROY BYFORD
2nd Old Fogey	J. WILLIAM MOLLISON
3rd Old Fogey	HENRY BYATT
A Sailor	JULIAN CROSS
	W. J. KEMP
Agnes Wickfield	EVELYN MILLARD
Little Em'ly	JESSIE WINTER
Betsey Trotwood	AGNES THOMAS
Mrs. Micawber	SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Clara Peggotty	By arrangement with Messrs. A. & S. GATTI
Mrs. Gummidge	MARY BROUGH
Mrs. Heep	ADA KING
Martha Endell	ROSAMUND MAYNE-YOUNG
Mrs. Crupp	MARY CLARE
The Young Gal	STELLA ST. AUDRIE
Janet	SYBIL SPARKES
	MAUDE PHILLIPS

His Majesty's Theatre
HAYMARKET.

THUR. Evening
Dec. 24, 1914.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

317

PART I.

Scene 1 ... ... The Magic Glen
Scene 2 ... ... The Village of Dimpledown
Scene 3 ... ... Inside Mrs. Dimple's Cottage
Scene 4 ... ... Dimpledown Railway Station
Scene 5 ... ... On the Road to the Market
Scene 6 ... ... The Enchanted Glade
Scene 7 ... ... In the Clouds of Dreamland
Vision of the Magic Harp and the Hen with the Golden Eggs.

Grand Fairyland Ballet.

Dances by The LOTTIE STONE TROUPE.

Speciality Dances by Miss NINETTE DE VALOIS
and
Little Miss EDNA MAUDE, of the Lila Field Company, and THE WORLD FAMOUS DANCER
ROBERT ROBERTY.

Ballet arranged by Mdlle. ROSA
Music composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

TABLEAU ... ... SUNRISE.

INTERVAL OF ABOUT TWELVE MINUTES.

PART II.

Scene 8 ... ... Inside the Cottage
Scene 9 ... Outside the Cottage, The Magic Beanstalk
Scene 10 ... ... Castle of Giant Gobblywobbly
Scene 11 ... ... Inside the Castle
Scene 12 ... ... Cloudland
Scene 13 ... ... Among the Beans
Scene 14 ... ... The King's Palace

CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE.

The Lyceum Clown ... ... Mr. HARRY GARDINER
Pantaloon ... ... Mr. PERCY BAYERSTOCK

Stage Manager ... ... MAJOR JONES

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1914.

In prefacing The Dynasts Mr. Hardy said that his chronicle-piece assumed a common foreknowledge of its subject. The spectator was to "assist" thereat in more than the Gallic sense, to supplement what was shown with what he knew of its personages and events. Anyone who turns "David Copperfield" into play-form not only must make this identical assumption, but will make it with more confident assurance of fulfilment. For we know the people of romance far better than we can ever know the people of history. New facts may come to light any day to alter the biographies of Nelson and so, their biographies are only partial glimpses of the total lives they led. But Wilkins Micawber and Uriah Heep are all there on the printed page, and they have no life outside it. They cannot change; we possess them in their entirety, a trajet fait.

READY-MADE CHARACTERS.

Because of this immutability we know them better even than those whom, colloquially but quite unphilosophically, we call "real" people, our friends of daily life who, just because they live, are changing every moment under our eyes. Mr. Parker then, his Dickens in hand, has a fairly easy task. He need "prepare" nothing and "explain" nobody. He can fling Micawber at us ready-made and take Uriah's umbleness for granted. Two things only are absolute essentials: to give us the really critical points of the Dickensian curve and to shine by his own absence. These critical points were almost indicated in advance: the Micawber motif and the Peggotty motif there, and there with the classic text as little as possible alloyed by Mr. Parker's prose.

It is just as well to recognize at once that these chronicle-pieces, whether from historic or romantic material, are not for every taste. With all their advantages of the spectators foreknowledge, their personages who bring with them their approved dossier and need no introduction, they will hardly bear comparison with a self-contained work of art that has sprung fresh and whole from its author's brain. They cannot but lack organic unity and closeness of texture. This perhaps is an academic point not likely to importune many of the Christmas visitors to His Majesty's; but that a book like "David Copperfield" has for another consideration is more serious. It is many of us long since ceased to be a book and become part of our very selves, inextricably blending with our earliest recollections and more think of the world of romance without this story than we could think of London without St. Paul's. And so thinking of it, or their feeling it within us as a whole, with its own atmosphere, with every detail of dialogue and description just as it is and not otherwise, so loving it with an absolutely unreasoning, almost animal, kind of love, we are inclined to resent any rearrangement or omission of its parts, any interference with it whatsoever, as a mutilation. That very totality and immutability of its characters which we began by counting for an advantage to the stage-adapter here cries to him "Hands off!" His Micawber, we say, may be all very well, but he is not our Micawber, or not all our Micawber.

ART AND MR. MICAWBER.

And this brings us to the actor, for it is upon him that the difficulty most hardly presses. For Micawber in his hands of necessity gets farther away from our Micawber than ever; he becomes Micawber conditioned, actual, translated by the personality of Sir Herbert Tree. Now this infirmity of personal translation is, of course, true also of any well-known character whom the actor has to undertake—true of Mark Antony, true of Hamlet—and it was one of the reasons why Charles Lamb disliked seeing Shakespeare acted. But the difference is that Mark Antony and Hamlet were conceived and shaped by their maker to be acted, whereas Micawber was not. Frankly we would ourselves rather read about Micawber becoming maudlin over the punch-bowl, in Dickens's mitigating text, than see him crudely at it on the stage. But since after all actors must act, and, apparently, Micawber must be acted, let us make the best of it and say that Sir Herbert is as good a Micawber as one could seem, he was bound to be a good Micawber because he was a good Richard II. Both characters are incorrigible sentimentalists, and both have the lyric touch. Each finds a sure and ready solace for his woes in turning to contemplate them, to give them artistic expression, to find the right attitude for them, and then to forget their bitterness in the virtuoso's joy in the attitude. Add Micawber's own special qualities—the punch-bowl mixture of the orotund, the florid, the composite, the convolute, or in the architect's word, the baroque—and you see at once that Sir Herbert is the right man in the right place.

Inevitably his Dan'l Peggotty, though good enough, is not so marked a triumph. For one thing, it was not so marked a triumph on Dickens's part. He obviously saw Micawber, possessed him body and soul, revelled in every tone and tint of him, whereas he handled Peggotty as more or less "common form," so that the man comes out idealized and simplified, a type, like a peasant of George Sand. Considering that the simple pathetic is not Sir Herbert's strongest point, one was surprised to find him doing so well and, what is more, doing best just where the most pathetic notes—Peggotty's paroxysms of grief over Emily's flight and of joy over her recovery—had to be sounded.

THE DICKENSIAN NOTE.

Two other things stand out from the rest of the cast in high relief: the Heep of Mr. Charles Quartermaine and the Mrs. Micawber of Miss Sydney Fairbrother. These were both so absolutely, so authentically, Dickensian as almost to persuade us to take back what we have said about acting Dickens. Indeed, we feel grateful to both these players for illuminating and intensifying our Dickens for us: after seeing them we feel that we know our Heep and our Mrs. Micawber better than before. The Betsey Trotwood of Miss Agnes Thomas runs them very close, and two other capital performances are Mr. Frederick Ross's Ham and Mr. Nigel Playfair's Mr. Dick. Miss Evelyn Millard is a mild and sweet Agnes, and Mr. Owen Nares is an equally mild and

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.

SCENE 1.—Dover. Miss Betsey Trotwood's Garden.
SCENE 2.—London. The Dining Room at the Golden Cross.
SCENE 3.—Yarmouth. Peggotty's Boat House.

ACT II.

SCENE 1.—London. David's Lodgings in Buckingham Street.
SCENE 2.—Canterbury. Wickfield's Garden.
SCENE 3.—Yarmouth. Peggotty's Boat House,
SCENE 4.—London. David's Sitting Room, Highgate.
The Stage will be darkened during this scene to mark the passage of time.
SCENE 5.—Canterbury. Uriah Heep's Office.

ACT III.

SCENE 1.—Gravesend. The Hold of an Emigrant Ship.
SCENE 2.—Yarmouth. Ham Peggotty's Kitchen
SCENE 3.—Yarmouth. The Shipwreck.

ACT IV.

Dover. Miss Betsey Trotwood's Cottage.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE ... ... "Cricket on the Hearth" ... ... Sir Alexander Mackenzie
VALSE GRACISUSE ... ... Edward German
CAMEO ... ... S. Coleridge Taylor
1st ENTR'ACT—SUITE ... ... "Old English Airs" ... ... arranged by Adolf Schmid

ACT II.

GAVOTTE PASTORALE ... ... Theodore Holland
L'ANGLAISE AND MENUETTO ... J. H. Fiocco; arr. by Norman O'Neill
CARISSIMA ... ... Sir Edward Elgar
VARIATIONS ... "Three Blind Mice" ... Joseph Holbrooke
2nd ENTR'ACT ... { "Dream Children" ... Sir Edward Elgar; Intermezzo ... ... Granville Bantock

ACT III.

NOCTURNE ... ... Grace Hawkins
STORM MUSIC from "The Tempest" ... ... Sir Arthur Sullivan
3rd ENTR'ACT ... { "Woodland Pictures" ... Percy E. Fletcher; "Country Song" ... ... Gustav von Holst

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS and Miss LEVERICK. Wigs by CLARKSON.

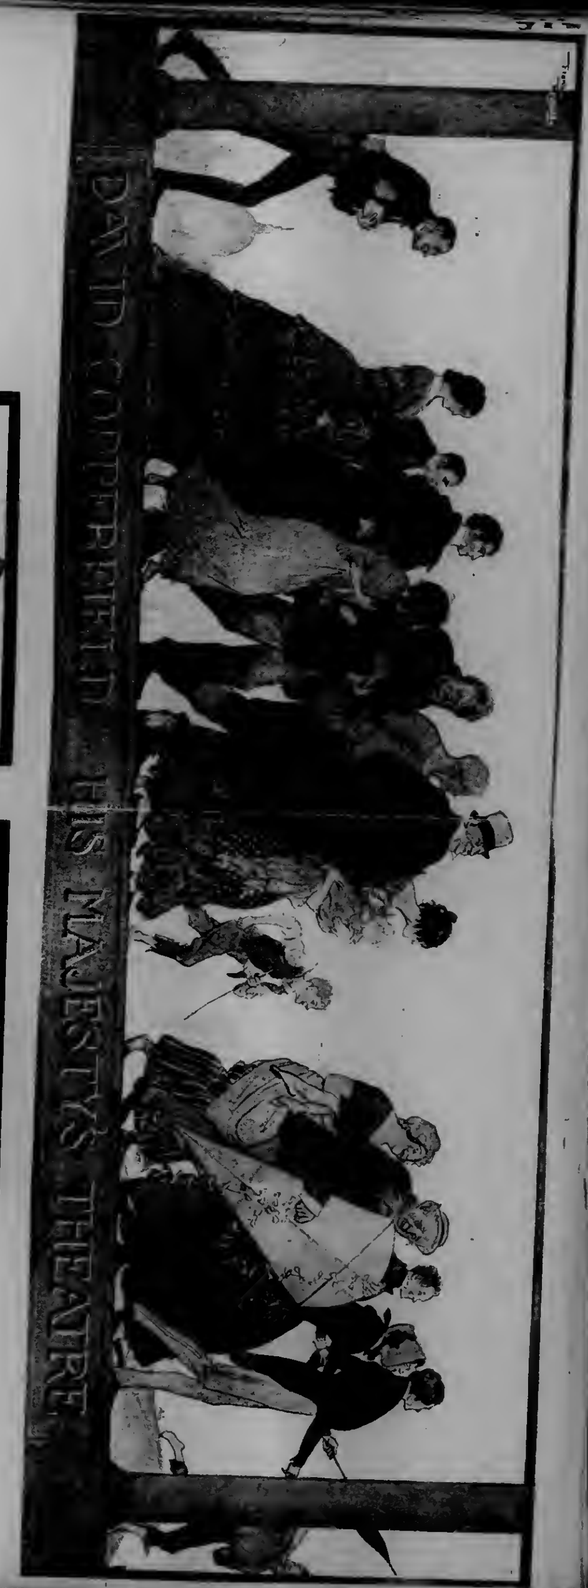
The Costumes have been supervised by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

The Theatre Edition of "David Copperfield," with illustrations, is on sale from the attendants, price 1/-

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.

STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL. ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER—ALFRED BELLEW. MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER—HENRY DANA.

POPULAR PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 6s. Balcony Stalls, 5s. Balcony, 4s. Upper Circle, 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE open Daily 10 to 10. Telephone Gerrard 1777.



D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

sweet Copperfield The parts of Little Em'ly and Steerforth pleasantly enough done by Miss Jessie Winter and Mr. Basil Gill, are reduced to mere thumbnail proportions.

It would be interesting to divine the impressions produced by the performance on the stray people in the Christmas Eve audience who had not read the book. (We are bound theoretically to assume their monstrous existence, because it is said the younger generation "cannot read" Dickens!) Anyhow, they must have had pleasure of some sort, for the whole house throughout the evening loudly testified its delight. Probably they took it for a variety entertainment, with "turns" by a comic "patter" gentleman with an egg-shaped head, another with a big kite, and a third who, informed of a wreck outside, fell to shouting "Ahoy, ahoy!" presumably as an incantation. They will understand it all (except perhaps the "ahoy!") when they go to the book. Let them bless Sir Herbert Tree for sending them to it!

D-10
3724
1914
Misc. Plays

PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

BOXING DAY at 2.30 and 7.30.

MONDAY, December 28th, TWICE DAILY at 2.30 & 7.30, and during the week.
Onwards EVERY EVENING at 7.30.
Matinees, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30

Season under the direction of Andrew Emm.

THE STIRRING AND LIFE-LIKE PLAY

ON HIS MAJESTY'S SERVICE

New and Elaborate Scenery by Alfred Whyatt, George Tweddell and Assistants. Correct Uniforms and Equipments by John Hyman, Leicester Square, W. Mechanical and other Effects by G. Jones, C. Herman.

Frank Fairway	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Charles Hedley, his Cousin	Mr. H. E. HERBERT
Will Rawson, a Sailor, afterwards a Soldier, O.H.M.S.	Mr. RONALD ADAIR
General Fairway, O.H.M.S....	Mr. HUGH MONTGOMERY
Bob Wittles, a Postman, O.H.M.S.	Mr. ANDREW EMM
Geo. Middleton, Landlord of the "Cherry Tree" Inn	Mr. GEORGE MITCHELL
Private Jones, O.H.M.S.	Mr. HARRY HARTLEY
Ned Farley, Head of a Gang of Thieves ...	Mr. GEORGE MANTED
Joe Hurley, Nick Bothwick { his Mates }	Mr. FRANK ELSWORTHY
... ...	Mr. W. JACKSON
Police Inspector Stacey, O.H.M.S.... ...	Mr. JACK CLARK
Phœbe Smith	Miss NELL BROWNE
Private Will Smith, O.H.M.S.	Mr. HART LINDSAY
Jack Harkaway	Mr. ALKE BLOWER
P.C. Merry, O.H.M.S.	Mr. P. WARDEN
Sergeant Millward, O.H.M.S. ...	Mr. NORMAN LEYLAND
Mary Parkins, Employed at "Cherry Tree" Inn	Miss BESSIE WALTERS
Molly Thorne, an Adventuress	Miss LILIAN HALLOWS
Master Frank, Frank Fairway's Son ...	Little VIOLET MARLEY
Madge Middleton, Frank's Wife	Miss ROSE RALPH

ACT I. Scene 1 ... Inside the "Cherry Tree" Inn, Portsmouth
THE NEW COMERS.
News of the War. The General's Son and the Innkeeper's Daughter.

Scene 2 ... ... A Lane off the Main Road
Birds of a Feather. The Plan.

Scene 3 ... Outside the "Cherry Tree" Inn, Portsmouth
Will Rawson's Fate. The Curse of the Land. On the Track of Ned Farley's Gang. The Old Love and the New. The Murder.

ACT II. Scene 1 ... Frank Fairway's Chambers in the West End
The New Life. Wife or Mistress. The Ruined Home. The Escaped Convict.

Scene 2 ... ... Outside the Barracks
The Postman's New Situation. Charles Hedley's Scheme for Fortune.

Scene 3 ... ... The Horse Guards, Whitehall
The General's Son and his Newly-made Wife. The Unseen Enemy. Disowned. What Luck stands before him.
Your King and Your Country Calls. On His Majesty's Service.

ACT III. Scene 1 ... ... At the Front
Writing Home to Mother. The Red Cross Nurse. The Spy. Going to her Death.

Scene 2 ... ... On Active Service
The British (?) Soldier. Treachery. Sentenced to Death. The Forlorn Hope. Can we hold out?
To Death or the Victoria Cross? The Despatches have been delivered.
Timely Arrival of the Naval Brigade.

ACT IV. Scene 1 ... ... Portsmouth. The New Home
Invalided Home. The Soldier's Wife. Mother and Son.
The Sailor's Lover. A Mother's Love. The Three Generations meet.
On His Majesty's Service.

"ON HIS MAJESTY'S SERVICE."

Mr. Walter Melville's well-known military drama "On His Majesty's Service," when first produced many years ago was called "On Her Majesty's Service"; it was revived on Saturday at the Princes Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue. Four acts and innumerable scenes—as is the custom of thrilling melodrama, clinging tenaciously to effective curtains—gives the performance an element of movement, and if the story is of the order that punishes hero and heroine very cruelly for crimes they have not committed, it most assuredly makes amends in the long run.

The patriotic and warlike notes are sounded loud and long in Mr. Melville's drama and quite delighted the audience, which wanted nothing better. Mr. Henry Lonsdale made a manly hero, and Miss Rose Ralph was very pleasing as the long-suffering heroine.

J. W.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

325

THE PLAYHOUSE

MA

Saturday

26/12/1914

Orch. Stall

E 7

This to be retained

TO-DAY, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26th, 1914, at 2 and 8
and TWICE DAILY

MR. H. BERNHARDT WILL PRESENT

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY

A Play, in Three Acts, by FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT

THE EARL OF DORINCOURT		MR. ALFRED BRYDONE
CEDRIC ERROL (LORD FAUNTLEROY)		LITTLE CORA GOFFIN
MR. HAVISHAM	(a Solicitor)	MR. J. J. BARTLETT
MR. HOBBS	(a Grocer)	MR. F. OWEN BAXTER
HIGGINS	(a Farmer)	MR. FRED GROVE
WILKINS	(a Groom)	MR. CHRISTMAS GROSE
DICK	(a Bootblack)	MR. ALBERT E. BENNETT
THOMAS,		MR. RAY
MINA		MISS ELLA ERSKINE
MARY		MISS MAUD SHELTON
MRS. ERROL ("DEAREST")		MISS LILIAN BRAITHWAITE

Act I. — A Room in New York
Acts II. and III. — At Dorincourt Castle

EVERY EVENING at 8 MATINEE EVERY DAY at 2

"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY."

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" was revived on Saturday for the holiday season at The Playhouse, and if (like most other plays that are old favourites) it seemed a trifle old-fashioned, it still retains the atmosphere of pleasant sentiment that originally recommended it.

It is twenty-six years since Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's play was first presented in London, and to enumerate all the promising child actresses who have played the part of the little hero in the many English revivals would require some labour. On Saturday Miss Cora Goffin played the part prettily.

J. W.

326

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee ... ... Mr. EDWARD C. ENGELBACH.

EVERY EVENING at 8 o'clock. MATINEES EVERY DAY at 2.30.

Mr. J. BANNISTER HOWARD

PRESENTS

"THE EARL AND THE GIRL"

By SEYMOUR HICKS and IVAN CARYLL. Lyrics by PERCY GREENBANK.

Jim Cheese	...	... (a Dog Trainer ...	... Mr. BERT BESWICK
Dick Wargrave ...	...	... (the Real Heir) ...	... Mr. BASIL FOSTER
Hon. Crewe Boodle ...	...	(the Supposed Heir)	... Mr. TALLEUR ANDREWS
A. Bunker Bliss ...	...	(Elphin Haye's Uncle)	Mr. JAMES PRIOR
Downham	...	(An American Solicitor)	... Mr. M. R. MORAND
			(His Original Part)
Mr. Talk	...	(An English Solicitor,	... Mr. MARK HENRY
Mr. Hazell	...	(Host of "Fallowfield Arms")	... Mr. CHARLES WAKEMAN
Dudley Cranbourne ...	...	Friends of Crewe Boodle	... Mr. H. HILLIARD
George Bellamy ...	...		... Mr. D. MAURICE
Hugh Wallender ...	...		... ... Mr. C. BELL
Rossiter	...	Footmen at Stole Hall	Mr. E. TRIMMINGHAM
Charles	...		... Mr. J. BOYS
George	...		... Mr. G. FRANKS
Elphin Haye	...	(an American Heiress)	... Miss ELLALINE TERRISS
Liza Shoddam... ...	...	(Jim Cheese's Sweetheart)	... Miss FLORENCE LLOYD
			(Her Original Part)
Mrs. Shimmering Black	...	... (a Strong Lady) ...	... Miss HELEN LANGTON
Daisy Fallowfield ...	...	(Elphin Haye's Friend)	... Miss EDITH DRAYSON
Miss Virginia Bliss ...	...	(Elphin Haye's Aunt)	...Miss PHILLIS BROUGHTON
			(Her Original Part)
Lady Gussie	...		Miss MIA SYLVELIN
Lady Violet	...		Miss DAISY GRAINGER
Lady Gwendoline ...	...	Ladies of Crewe Boodle's Party	Miss ESMIE MANETTE
Lady Ethel	...		Miss AUDLEY THORPE
Lady Muriel	...		Miss NANCY HAMLEY
Lady Rosedale ...	...		...Miss MARIE GLIER
The Hon. Birdie Harold ...	Miss DENMAN	Guests at the Hall	Miss Bertha Late ... Miss AMY HARCOURT
The Hon. I. O. Ewe	Miss COOKSON		Miss R. Rollo ... ...Miss MARIE CLEMENTS
Miss Astorbuilt	Miss DAISY BARKER		Miss P. R. Brighton ... Miss DORIS LEMON
Miss D. Licht...	Miss MARGARET MITCHELL		Miss L. Montez ... Miss GRACIE BAKER
The Hon. Mrs. De Brett...	Miss LILY BRICE		Violet Rose ... Miss BESSIE MIDDLETON
Miss T. Gordon ...	Miss VIOLET HEATH		Miss Vendmer ... ... Miss THERESE BLAN

RIC
ATRE
5.
M
'12/14
—
hestra tall 21

AND THE GIRL" REVIVED.

Earl and the Girl" was revived ay by Mr. J. Bannister Howard at 'Theatre with a much stronger than that he presented it with at rch Theatre some weeks ago. The rs are Miss Ellaline Terriss, Mr.
rand, Mr. Talleur Andrews, and Foster, and they with the others giving a very excellent perform-is popular musical comedy.

J. W.

Shaftesbury Theatre, W.

December 18th, 1914.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by Mr. F. R. Benson and Mr. Robert Courtneidge to forward you the enclosed ticket for the use of your Dramatic Critic, on Saturday Afternoon, Dec. 26th, at 2 o'clock, to the first performance of

SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY V.

Owing to this performance taking place on Boxing-Day, should you or your representative be prevented from being present, I shall be obliged if you will kindly return the tieket to me as soon as possible, and say the earliest date, most convenient to yourself, for which I may have the pleasure of exchanging it.

Yours faithfully,

A. S. PIGOTT,

Manager for Mr. F. R. Benson.

Chorus		OTHO STUART
King Henry V.		F. R. BENSON
Duke of Gloucester		GROSVENOR NORTH
Duke of Bedford		LANCELOT HEELEY
Duke of Exeter, Uncle to the King		MOFFAT JOHNSTON
Earl of Westmoreland		REGINALD DENHAM
The Archbishop of Canterbury		FRANK COCHRANE
Bishop of Ely		J. R. MAGEEAN
Earl of Cambridge		GEORGE MANSHIP
Lord Scroop		LEONARD PARISH
Sir Thomas Grey		REGINALD DENHAM
Gower	Officers in King Henry's Army	GEORGE MANSHIP
Sir Thomas Erpingham		W. H. QUINTON
Fluellen		A. E. GEORGE
Macmorris		J. R. MAGEEAN
John Bates	Soldiers in the same	A. B. IMESON
Michael Williams		E. LYALL SWETE

By kind permission of Mr. Frederick Harrison

Pistol	BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Nym	H. O. NICHOLSON
Bardolph	A. B. IMESON
Boy	LEAH HANMAN
English Herald	MARION FOREMAN
Charles VI., King of France	E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Louis, the Dauphin	BASIL RATHBONE
Duke of Orleans	DARBY FOSTER
The Constable of France	CHARLES DORAN
Montjoy	CHARLES WARBURTON
French Prisoner	H. O. NICHOLSON
French Page	ALICE DE GREY
A Camp Follower (with Dance)	LEAH HANMAN
Isabel, Queen of France	EVELYN HALL
Katharine, Daughter to Charles and Isabel	JEAN STERLING MACKINLAY
Alice, a lady attending on her	ELINOR ELDER
Hostess of a Tavern in Eastcheap, formerly Mistress Quickly, and now married to Pistol	ROSE EDOUIN

Act 1. Scene 1—A Room of State at Westminster. Scene 2—Eastcheap. Scene 3—A Tavern at Southampton. Act 2. Scene 1—A Room in the French King's Palace. Scene 2—Before Harfleur. Act 3. Scene 1—The English Camp at Picardy. Scene 2—The French Camp at Agincourt. Scene 3—The English Camp. Scene 4—The Field of Battle (Tableau). Scene 5—After the Battle. Act 4. Scene 1—Another part of the Field. Scene 2—Room in the French King's Palace.

1924
103
Benson.
Plays

FOREWORD

By F. R. B.

"May never War advance his bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France, that English may as French, French Englishmen receive each other. God speak this, Amen."—Henry V.

THAT is the conclusion of our play. That is the conclusion of the Drama played for 1,000 years on the stage of Europe.

Many times have the two neighbours met in the battle-field, oftener as foes than as friends, but always in the same spirit of generous rivalry, with the same acknowledgment, in the main, of the unwritten law of Chivalry that the Allies are shewing to-day. "All things are ready if our minds be so. Now soldiers march away, and as thou pleasest God dispose the day," comes down to us from the time of Elizabeth when the foundation of our present Empire had been made possible by the defeat of the Armada and the "murderous Machiavel" of Spain. This might be our excuse, if excuse were wanted, for keeping "business as usual" for the present in the Theatre Orb, till summoned if need be, to play more directly some part in the larger but still little O the world—a world in agony.

The Anglo Celtic Empire depends on the capacity of its people for Poetry, that is for seeing, thinking, making, doing. To the doers of deeds, the thinkers of great thoughts, the shapers of their own and the world's destiny, Poetry becomes the numbered value of life's rhythm. "Show me a Nation's laws and I will tell you her decadence." "Let me hear her songs and I will tell you the glory of her achievement." "We Greeks" defeated the Persians at Marathon and Salamis because we have ever loved things beautiful and free." Part of that ideal, alas, not all, is our birthright. Ἔστιν θάλασσα τίς δέ νιν κατασβέσει; There is the sea and who shall quench its might"—or ours. True to-day of our sea-girt Isle as of the Southern Peninsula in the time of Pericles. "Service is Power," quoth Alfred the Great; later, Ich dien becomes our motto. "Give yonder soldier my cup," moans the dying Sydney, "his need is greater than mine." "Die, but never surrender," triumphant ring the last words of Lawrence at Lucknow. Splendid is our heritage won for us by centuries of discipline and duty, of joy and sorrow, self-sacrifice and love and strife. Crudely, half consciously, often wrongfully, blindly, blundering, has developed this Empire of the Cymrhu, the brother peoples. Celt, Teuton, Roman, Saxon, Scandinavian, Norman strong fighters all, surviving heroes forced to turn their backs to the last wall or cliff and fight for land and life and liberty.

But half-welded, inchoate and incoherent, at times strangely apathetic and self-centred, but still strenuous, this crisis has forced us to realise our limited power, our infinite future. Has History ever recorded an Empire whose component parts have little, if any, formal bond, whose units are not obliged to send one soldier or to spend one sbilling, and yet are giving to the uttermost their heart's treasure and their blood—for what? For the songword of our race, for Freedom. Who but a poet can realise such an ideal so simple, so complex, so individual, so universal, so free, yet so self-governed, learning from the needs of all men, taking colour and shape from all races. From the four quarters of the earth they come, and with them the elder Aryan from India, often misunderstood, often misjudged, in the moment of national danger he offers his aid "all I possess." And so the practical poets with the will to the good not merely the will to power have wended their way to the West by road and river and stormy sea, singing as they went for joyousness of their strong, full life. The melody of their march is the music of great deeds, the blending of many bloods, the reconciling of many antagonisms round a common ideal of noble citizenship: a common ideal of Empire, not for conquest, or exploitation, or lust of greed, but an Empire for expansion and association; an Empire, which in terms of patriotism and intensification of national life shall bring the world a step nearer to the Brotherhood of Man. Of such is the kingdom of Poetry, and Shakespeare wears its crown. His songword becomes the epitome of deeds that lead to Kingship, part cause, part result. Henry's prayer at Agincourt finds an echo in the cry of the Connaught Rangers and many another in the presence of overwhelming odds—"Mother of God, be merciful to the loved ones at home if we should fall to-day! Charge!" Many a Commanding Officer knows, to his sorrow, the story of old Siward and his son, to his grief and to his glory. "Had he his hurts before, why then God's soldier is he. Had I as many sons as I have hairs I would not wish them to a fairer death." The dying soldier in the hospital turns to the Colonel: "Did I do my bit of the job all right, sir?" "First rate, boy, first rate!" "Thank you. That's all I wanted. Good-night, sir." And in Life's story and Death's noble fellowship Tommy becomes the Peer of the King of Poets, the fashioner of Fate and faithfulness for the free.

During intervals of the performance of "Henry V." by Mr. F. R. Benson's company at the Shaftesbury Theatre last night, the Lord Mayor of London and Major-General Sir Francis Lloyd addressed the audience on the importance of every available man offering himself for the front.

Daily Mail
January
12.

D-10
3724
1914
Theatre.
Plays

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26th (BOXING DAY), and Daily at 2.30 p.m., until further notice.

Messrs. STEDMAN'S MAGNIFICENT CHRISTMAS PRODUCTION

ALICE IN WONDERLAND

Founded on LEWIS CARROLL'S Delightful Stories "ALICE IN WONDERLAND" and "THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS."

Book by H. SAVILLE CLARK. Music by WALTER SLAUGHTER.

ACT I.—ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.

Mad Hatter ...	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
Mock Turtle ...	Mr. JAMES HARCOURT
Gryphon ...	Mr. LEEDAM STANLEY
March Hare ...	Miss NORA EDWARDS
White Rabbit ...	Miss VERA HAMILTON
Caterpillar ...	... Mr. ROY LORRAINE
Duchess ...	Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Cook ...	Miss WINIFRED PORTER
Cheshire Cat ...	... Miss RENE EMILLAR
Dormouse ...	...Miss HERMA HILAIR
First Fairy } First Lobster } ...	Miss VIOLET DENZEL
King of Hearts ...	. Mr. PERCY DAVISON
Queen of Hearts ...	... Miss EVELYN HILL
Knave of Hearts ...	... Mr. REG VICKERS
Executioner	Mr. ROBERT MACNAMARA

AND

Alice ... Miss IVY SAWYER

ACT II.—THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS.

Mad Hatter ...	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
White Queen ...	... Miss EVELYN HILL
White King ...	... Mr. REG VICKERS
Lily ...	... Miss ENA STRANGE
Rose ...	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Red Queen ...	Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Red King ...	... Mr. ROY LORRAINE
Oyster Queen ...	... Miss VERA CLARK
Guardian of the Shell Throne ...	... Mr. REG VICKERS
First Oyster ...	Miss ALICE RANDALL
Second Oyster ...	Miss DOROTHY ARDLEY
Tweedledee ...	Mr. JAMES HARCOURT
Tweedledum ...	Mr. LEEDAM STANLEY
Carpenter and Humpty Dumpty ...	Mr. ROBERT MACNAMARA
Walrus ...	Mr. PERCY DAVISON
Unicorn ...	... Miss COTTESMORE
Lion ...	Master PAUL MARCUS

AND

Alice ... Miss IVY SAWYER

Jesters:—Misses Joyce Pettit, Lilly Redinger, Cynthia Greaves, Gladys Du Boisson.

Lobsters:—Misses Linda Clark, Mai Deacon, Mildred Seymour.

Fairies, Cards, Chessmen, Housemaids, Humpty Dumpty, Guards, Etc.:—Misses Bessie Hamilton, Dorothy Dean, Joan Richardson, Gladys Gunn, Nellie Ireland, Kitty Bashman, Clara Brookes, Clare Hesleton, Marjorie House, Margaret Davidson, Violet McAnliffe, Barbara Halliday, Gwen Gilbert, Clemence Meyer, Ethel Fisher, Bertha Teharna, Winifred Atwell, Gladys Birney, Mary Longhurst, Iris Gordon, Kitty Murray, Evelyn Newstead, Grace Jackson, Gladys Fancourt, Dolly Murray.

LITTLE THEATRE,

ADELPHI, W.C.

On SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26th, at 2.30

"THE COCKYOLLY BIRD"

An Adventure, by Mrs. PERCY DEARMER. Music by MARTIN SHAW.

Real People.

KIT	(a Little Boy) ...	FAY LILMAR
LAVINIA	(a Nursery Maid) ...	IRIS MILLER
MISS BROWN ...	(a Governess)	MARGARET WATSON
MOTHER ...	(a very nice person)	LETTICE FAIRFAX
MRS. PRIM } MRS. PRUE }	(Two Cross Nurses)	MARIAN BIRD DORA LEVIS
THE DARLING		OAKRIDGE DOLLIE

Toys.

JUM JUM	(a Little Black Doll)	ELSIE GRENVILLE
THE COCKYOLLY BIRD ...		DOROTHY MANVILLE
LITTLE EDWARD	(a Teddy Bear) ...	ROY LILMAR
NOAH	(the Owner of the Ark)	DOROTHY FINLAYSON
	(By permission of the ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ART)
MRS. NOAH	(his Wife)	MARGUERITE FINLAYSON

Animals.

A POLAR BEAR		HARRY LIVESEY
	By permission of Madame MARIE BREMA
MRS. POLAR BEAR		NANCY BURDETT
A CRAB		IRIS ROWLAND

Japanese.

KISS OO	(a Little Girl, afterwards PHOEBE)	DORIS PROSSER
KOO KOO	(Another Little Girl)	GENITHA HALSEY
LUK OO ...	(a Third Little Girl)	... VERA LENNON
CHEE KI	(a Little Boy)	... IRIS ROWLAND

Pleasant Cannibals.

THE CANNIBAL KING ...	LEONARD CALVERT
THE CANNIBAL A. D. C.	... ROY LILMAR
THE CANNIBAL PRIVATE SECRETARY	MURIEL HARGROVES
THE BAND	JESSON ROY VERA LENNON

Penguins, Polar Bears, Butterflies, Japanese, Pleasant Cannibals, and Pleasant Cannibal Children: MARY SYKES, GLADYS SINCLAIR, IDA MELLOR, IVY CONNER, MARY BELDON, DAVINI ST. CLAIR, PEGGY FOSTER, MARGERY SANDERS, SHEILA GEERE, EILEEN COWTISHAW, KITTY FITCHIE, JOAN FAIRBAIRNS, MURIEL THOMAS, WINNIE REVELLIUS.

On Tuesdays the part of JUM JUM will be played by AUDREY TREVELYAN.

SCENE I.	The Schoolroom.	SCENE IV.	Japan.
SCENE II.	The Schoolroom changed.	SCENE V.	A Cannibal Island.
SCENE III.	The North Pole.	SCENE IV.	The Schoolroom again.

There will be an Interval of 10 Minutes between Scenes IV. and V.

The Battle Song of the Fleet at Sea by SHEILA CAVANAGH. Irish Songs (Wat. Music by MARTIN SHAW. Hon. Hockey Master at Oxford University Press.

The Aeolian Ladies' Orchestra under the direction of ROSABEL WATSON.

Dances by GWLADYS DILLON.

Scenery designed by PAUL SHEEVING. Dresses designed by PAUL SHEEVING, JESSIE MOORE and others. Properties by [illegible]
The Cockyolly Bird and Properties by SHEILA COLMAN SMITH. Music by CLARKE.
The dress worn by Esther Fenton designed and executed by LESLIE PHELPS, 28a, Albemarle Street, W.

The Play is produced by Mrs. PERCY DEARMER.

Theatre Manager ... ... W. T. CUNNINGHAM
Stage Manager ... ... A. J. PILMER
Assistant Stage Manager ... MURIEL HARGROVES
Business Manager for Mrs. Dearmer ... ALICE KINSLEY

"The Cockyolly Bird, the Book of the Play," [illegible] and illustrated by Mr. PERCY DEARMER, is published by Messrs. HODDER & STOUGHTON, price 7 6, and can be had at all Booksellers, also at the Attendants' office, Theatre.

"The Cockyolly Bird," the New Xmas Toy, manufactured by Messrs. HAMLEY & Co., 86, High Holborn, [illegible] the Theatre, price 1 3, 2 9, and 3 11.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

M^r. James Waters 's

Presence on

BOXING-NIGHT

Saturday Evening, Dec. 26, 1914

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK

To witness the Production of

The Sleeping Beauty Beautified

A FAIRY TALE

BY

GEO. R. SIMS and ARTHUR COLLINS

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

On BOXING-NIGHT, Saturday, December 26th, at 7.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY BEAUTIFIED

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	Duke of Monte Blanco
Mr. WILL EVANS	,,	Pompos { Nemo's confidant, formerly Chancellor to Monte Blanco
Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS	,,	Auriol
Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY	,,	Duke Nemo
Mr. STANLEY LUPINO	,,	Finnykin, a foundling
Mr ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	Big Head
Mr. ARTHUR POOLE	,,	Jacques, a peasant
Miss FERNE ROGERS	as	Princess Marcella (Beauty)
Miss RENÉE MAYER	,,	Puck
Miss NANCY BUCKLAND	,,	Zizi, a Dairy Maid
Miss KATE HOLBROOK	,,	Spyreena
Miss RITA CARR	,,	Jeanne, Jacques' Wife
Miss DOROTHY MOODY	,,	Première Danseuse
Miss STELLA ULMAR	,,	A Fairy
Mr. BRYAN POWLEY	as	Gaga
Mr. REGINALD GROOM	,,	The Mime
Master JACK RENSHAW	,,	A Folly
Miss CARRIE MURRAY	,,	Beauty's Chaperon
Miss MARIE LOVELL	,,	The Equerry
Miss BARBARA KEPPELL	,,	Goldstick
Miss R. RAYMOND	,,	Silverstick

THE TILLER TROUPE

Fairy Godmothers:

Miss GWEN FOTHERGILL
Miss NITA MAY
Miss JANE MASON
Miss IVY WILLIAMS
Miss AMY PRESTON
Miss MAUD ROSS

Courtiers:

Mr. L. ASHDOWNE
Mr. F. TONGE
Mr. J. HORNBY

Witches:

Mr. E. MORGAN
Mr. EDWARDS
Mr. ODNIL

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Secretary - R. H. LINDO
Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS
Business Manager - - SIDNEY SMITH

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1915.

DRURY LANE RESIGNATION

MISS FERNE ROGERS AND THE GERMANS.

Miss Ferne Rogers, an American, the principal girl in the pantomime of "The Sleeping Beauty—Beautified," at Drury Lane Theatre, resigned her part on Monday night in consequence of an unpleasant feeling that arose between her and the other principals of the company.

Miss Rogers is alleged to have on several occasions expressed opinions wholly sympathetic with the Germans and the manner in which they are conducting the war, and as several of her brother and sister artists strongly objected to her presence in the company, Mr. Arthur Collins, after careful inquiries, put the matter before Miss Rogers after Monday night's performance and accepted her resignation.

Miss Rogers has been succeeded as principal girl by Miss Nancy Buckland.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1914.

WAR CONCERTS.

CASINO AUDIENCE OF WOUNDED MEN.

MISS ELLALINE TERRISS'S "THANK YOU" SONG.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT,
JAMES WATERS.

BOULOGNE, Monday.

The British Concert Party organised to sing to the British soldiers on the lines of communication in France had a strenuous day of travel and work yesterday; but they got the welcome of a soldiers' chorus when the midday boat from Folkestone arrived at the Maritime Station at Boulogne soon after dark, and happily that compensated them in some degree for the distress of a rough crossing.

That same evening Mr. Hicks's party gave a concert at the Boulogne Casino to an audience largely consisting of wounded soldiers lying in bed, and they gave it without even the suspicion of a hitch. The great salon of the casino, which in days of peace was the salle de jeu, is now a vast space occupied with beds, and in these beds are wounded men. It is the great room into which in other days many a gallant lad has sailed with a pocket full of one-hundred-franc notes, prepared for the best and generally getting the worst of fortune; and now the nymphs painted on the pale blue ceiling look not on tables covered with green baize but on men lying in pain and on gentle nurses and doctors ever there to help them.

"YOU'RE SIMPLY SPLENDID."

It was a strange scene when the concert party entered the great salon. All around the wide space occupied by the beds were deep lines of soldiers, officers of every branch of the service, privates, and doctors, and seated in front of them the red-caped nurses. The windows at one end of the apartment were wide open, and below them stood rows of bathing cabins on the sands. A huge brazier throwing up flames from the red coals made eerie figures of some passers-by, and out on the sea stretched the rays of a searchlight.

The whole combination of strange effects brought home to one's mind the curious contrasts conjured up by war, for into the midst of these visual effects there entered the sounds of music, and to them were turned the attentions of wounded men.

The little concert party made no attempt to pose. They were dressed just as they were in the Channel boat. Mr. Van Allen told stories and played a violin. Mr. Hicks sang one short song and told two short stories. Mr. Willie Frame talked and "reminisced." Miss Ellaline Terriss sang two songs, and with one that thanked the brave soldiers for what they had done she made a very happy effect. The refrain of the song, which is by Arthur Wimperis, is:

So, thank you, for all that you are doing,
We are really proud of you,
For you'll be among the first, when the shells begin to burst,
And we love you for your courage, too.
You've thrown up everything to do your duty,
We know you'll never rest until it's done.
Your King and Country need you, so we pray God bless and speed you.
Oh, we think you're simply splendid, every one.

Mr. Ben Davies charmed everybody with "Songs of Araby" and another ballad. Miss Ivy St. Helier sang and played some excellent chorus songs. Mr. Eli and Miss Olga Hudson gave instrumental duets, and then, altogether, the company sang "Auld Lang Syne" and a verse of the National Anthem, and so brought to an end at half-past nine or thereabouts a very happy evening.

It was a very successful start to the tour. Only we who had to come out into the cold pelting rain, to trudge home, felt that we had not much to say to those soldiers who had been doing something.

LINK WITH HOME.

BOULOGNE, Monday Afternoon.

The wind-driven rain beat hard on the Casino at Wimereux when the motor-cars conveying the British concert party drew up at the entrance at three o'clock today, but the building within was cheerful with electric lights, and the wounded soldiers were eagerly watching for those who were coming to sing for them.

The kinema theatre of the casino came in splendidly for the purposes of the concert party, and there, in many lines close to the stage, we found arranged the beds in which lay the badly wounded. Scores of other poor fellows in warm blue jackets sat behind the beds on chairs, and every man, except the very sick, was busy with a cigarette.

Some of the poor chaps were so handicapped by bandages that they could not light their own cigarettes, but all were cheerful to a wonderful degree in spite of their wounds and the grey, depressing mist that lay on the sea beyond the uncurtained windows.

Every available corner of the hall and the corridors leading to it were crammed with soldiers of every rank, and among the wounded sat many nurses, happy and cheerful, caring tenderly for the soldiers in their charge.

The lasting impression created by this and last night's concert was that it is an admirable thing to send over from London those little parties, well equipped for giving an amusing hour or two to the poor British wounded lying maimed in the hospitals of France. Everyone con-

Artisti dei teatri londinesi di varietà che ottennero di recarsi a svagare i combattenti nei campi inglesi in Francia.

D-10
3724
1914
Waters, ...
Plays

nected with the hospitals simply craves for something to divert the attention of the wounded from the war, and one only wished that those who stay at home could see the effect on the men of cheery song and story.

As I write these lines in a room close by the concert hall, where I can hear the music, the poor fellows are stretching their heads from the pillows on the beds around me, hungering for the unusual sounds of gaiety that remind them of home.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1914.

WAR CONCERT IN THE DARK.

BASKET GRAND STAND.

MR. HICKS'S PARTY IN THE STORM.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT,
JAMES WATERS.

BOULOGNE, Tuesday.

The concert party singing for the British troops in France had a strenuous day yesterday. The afternoon concert at Wimereux, which I have already described, ended very pleasantly with a reception by the military and medical staff and a real English tea, but afterwards it was a wild rush through a rainstorm to Boulogne.

There the party was directed to an outlying street, where, in a long, low building that had been at one time the premises of a great fish-curing business, a regiment had made its headquarters. In the half lights of the place hundreds of men were enjoying a meal, and in a partitioned portion of the building we found the extemporised concert hall. A platform in one corner, benches all down the stone-floored space, and mottoes on the canvas-spread walls, were features that caught the eye. "To the Wives of our Officers and Men" was one of the happy banners that hung there in the light of pink Chinese lanterns. These banners and mottoes were part of the Christmas decorations.

There were no wounded in the audience for this concert—only strong, healthy men who revelled in the songs given them with splendid spirit by Mr. Ben Davies, and in the topical turns of the other members of the company. It was a short but greatly appreciated concert, and the regimental colonel, leaping on the platform at the end of it, spoke a few words and called for three cheers.

CHEERS FOR THE "PROS."

Less than an hour sufficed for rest and dinner, and then came a motor rush to the fruit market, where well over a thousand soldiers and nurses were waiting for what they called "the pros." They certainly gave the "pros" a rousing welcome, and cheered everything they did to the echo. The fruit market itself was a wilderness. Except the platform and seats for soldiers and for some nurses who came in there was no furniture. A mountain of empty fruit baskets was turned into a grand stand. Half a dozen arc lamps suspended from the high girders lighted the great space.

The concert, in spite of the storm at roared on the tiles outside and threatened to tear off the roof, was the jolliest imaginable. An hour before the finish the arc lights grew dim and then popped out, leaving the place in utter darkness. Two small candles on the piano located one spot in the vast black space, and a rousing cry of "Are we downhearted?" with a still more rousing answering "No" showed how the audience took the trouble. On the platform the company sang chorus songs as if nothing unusual had happened, and within five minutes motor head-lamps, oil lamps, and acetylene flares were commandeered from without.

When the concert ended a procession of open motor lorries filled with cheering soldiers went away to the camps whence the men had come.

HOSPITAL HALL CONCERT.

BOULOGNE, Tuesday Evening.

An afternoon performance was given today at the Hôtel Christol, which has been transformed by Lady Sarah Wilson into a hospital for wounded officers and soldiers. The space available for a platform and theatre was the entrance hall, and into its narrow limits was packed an audience of nurses and soldiers. It was the first hour since the company arrived that the sun shone for them in France, and after last night's storm they were entitled to it.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 1, 1915.

WAR CONCERT TOUR.

SONGS FROM TRAIN WINDOWS.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT,
JAMES WATERS.

ROUEN, Thursday.

The British Concert Party entertaining our soldiers in France have experienced to the fullest extent within the past twenty-four hours the pleasures and pains of touring on the Continent in war-time.

On Tuesday afternoon the military authorities advised a visit to Rouen. It is a long way off as trains now run. True to the tryst, the party arrived at the gates of the Town Station of Boulogne at 4.30 p.m., only to find that there was no one present with definite information as to the arrangements made. Eventually a composite carriage, first and second class, was found in a wilderness of railway lines and goods sheds, and at six o'clock, as the tail-piece of a stores train, the light-hearted party was towed out into the moon-lighted country.

Hour after hour passed as the train at an average speed of ten miles an hour traversed the land. At Amiens the merry-makers were left to rest and reflection for two hours. It was noon yesterday before that journey of just over 100 miles ended at Rouen. It is true we arrived on the outskirts of Rouen at 8 a.m., but being strangers, and sternly advised to hold our seats, we remained there for over four hours and were moderately patient.

The artists put their heads out of the train and sang to the soldiers who had convoyed us through the night and to a few railway officials who gathered around for the fun. Our soldiers are splendidly resourceful fellows, for they listened to the extempore concert and at the same time lit fires on the railway line at which they made tea and cooked bacon. The morning was bitterly cold; every pool was frozen hard.

The party were at last released, and after a well-contested lunch arrived at a camp. There, in a tent accommodating two thousand, 95 per cent. of whom were soldiers fairly on the recovery from wounds, the concert was given. I have never in my life seen so tense an audience. Men who have faced death, recovered from its effects, and are going back to face it again are not the people we meet every day.

On the plain around the marquee there were thousands of tents and huts, and in the fading light gronps of soldiers fairly convalescent were trying to play football. That the entertainment was a huge success need hardly be said, and another at night, given in the Théâtre des Beaux-Arts at Rouen to a packed audience of cheering British soldiers was just such another of the enthusiastic series.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, JANUARY 4, 1915.

CONCERT PARTY'S RETURN.

SOLDIERS' SONGS TO SINGERS.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS ILL.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT,
JAMES WATERS.

The tour of the British Concert Party among our soldiers in hospitals and camps in France ended on Saturday night in Havre at nearly ten o'clock, and an hour later all the artists were on board a steamer bound for Southampton.

The military authorities at Havre made the visit of the company to that city an exceptionally pleasant one, and from Friday morning, when the artists arrived, until the next evening, when several officers of the staff saw that even the final details of departure should be of the very happiest description, nothing that could add to the comfort of any member was wanting.

In numbers the little party of nine entertainers who landed in Boulogne yesterday week soon began to be reduced. Miss Ella-line Terriss returned to London after the Tuesday night's concert. Mr. Ben Davies, much against his will, got up at 4 a.m. in Rouen on Thursday to catch a steamer at Dieppe for England. In Rouen, too, Miss Olga Hudson became very ill on Thursday and had to be left behind, and on Saturday morning Mr. Seymour Hicks was so ill—threatened with pneumonia—that the doctor would not allow him to appear in the theatre or even to talk about it. The work of the tour was fairly trying, and the weather at times was bitterly cold.

At Havre the company gave four concerts—one in the afternoon and the other in the evening on both Friday and Saturday—in the municipal Grand Theatre, kindly lent by the mayor, who attended one of the performances, as did also the admiral of the port. The governor placed a French military guard of honour under the colonnade of the handsome building. Twice, therefore, on Thursday and Friday the citizens of Havre had the pleasure of seeing hundreds of smart young British soldiers under the command of officers marching across the wide space in front of the theatre and gradually filing through the entrances.

BOXES FOR NURSES.

It is a fine four-tier house, and, with the exception of the boxes and the dress circle, the smiling, interested young soldiers had the place to themselves. Their officers and some distinguished French guests had the dress circle and all the boxes except four or five reserved for nurses.

It was truly worth the journey from London to hear the soldiers sing the chorus of the songs made popular at home. They rolled out "You Made Me Love You" so that it might have been heard half a mile away. It is one of the favourite songs of our soldiers in France. And then, as a finish to the choruses of a dozen songs contributed by themselves to the concert, came "Tipperary." No one who has not heard "Tipperary" sung by men who are taking part in the war can understand the pathos and beauty of that swelling chorus as it filled the building with the simple words of a simple, unpretentious melody.

On Saturday we saw, for this visit, the last of the soldiers the Concert Party had gone to entertain. They were drawn up in the moonlight in the square. Alert and happy, they were about to march away after an evening that conjured up for them visions of home. They had seen their general, on behalf of himself and the staff, make a little presentation in the theatre to the ladies of the company, and had heard him speak a few eloquent words to all those visitors from England. The soldiers had been delighted. They had cheered for everybody. They had sung "Auld Lang Syne," "The Marseillaise," "God Save the King," and then with admirable discipline left the theatre to assemble outside. Before we had time to get ready to drive to the docks they were well outside the town swinging along the moonlit road.

It is but just to say that all in the company worked splendidly together, and that very great praise is due to Mr. W. H. Boardman, of Brighton, who managed the tour for Mr. Hicks.

Of all the things that impress one who visits those parts of France where our armies are quartered, the most conspicuous is the splendid cheerfulness and earnestness of our men. No matter what work they do, no matter how unpleasant the conditions or surroundings, those soldiers never complain. No praise, say their officers, can be too great for these fine fellows.

D-10
3724
1914
Theatre
Plays

NEW THEATRE
LONDON.

TUESDAY, December 29, 1914, and Daily at 2.30 (Mondays excepted).

THE NEW CLOWN

By H. M. PAULL

Lord Cyril Garston ...	JAMES WELCH
Captain the Honourable Jack Trent	STANLEY YOURKE
Thomas Baker	... F. W. TROTT
Mr. Dixon	... C. F. LLOYD
Mr. Pennyquick	GEORGE CHILD
Billy	DENIS J. HOGAN
Mr. Lamb... ...	BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Figgis	... BARRY TREVAINE
Boy...	... REX O'MALLEY
Policeman	... ROBERT GEORGE
Ping-Pong	... By HIMSELF
Maud Chesterton ...	... MURIEL KIDNER
Winnie Chesterton	QUEENIE THOMAS
Molly O'Farrell ...	NINA BOUCICAULT

ACT I.	... Parlour of the Riverside Inn, near Bray
ACT II.	... Dixon's Royal Circus: The Ring
ACT III.	...Dixon's Royal Circus: The Green Room

Ladies' Dresses by MARGUERITE CIESTE, 59, George Street, Baker Street, W. Hats by MICHÉE ZAC, 2, Hanover Court, W. Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by J. S. LYON, 112, High Holborn. Cigarettes by ABDULLA. Toilet Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hindes, Ltd., London & Birmingham.

Acting Manager	for Mr. James Welch	.. .. .. Mr. HAROLD CARSON
Stage Manager		.. .. Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Business Manager	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	.. .. Mr. CECIL ROSE

POPULAR PRICES. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No.—Regent 4166-4167.

Nearest Tube Station to this Theatre—Leicester Square.

D-10
3724
Plays

LAURENCE IRVING AND HIS "PARTNER."

WORK AND LOVE.

By JAMES WATERS.

Mr. Laurence Irving was a cool, fearless man in life; a man not given to ask for help. And it is conceivable that on his own account he had neither fear nor regret for the terrible tragedy that he awoke to face in the dark last Friday. He was very fond of his wife; they were the most united couple imaginable, and when he could not help her to save her life he made no attempt to save his own.

He held a unique place as an actor in the public mind, for his work in the theatre gave the impression of extraordinary sincerity and seemed to be independent of all desire to make a personal success for himself as an actor. He had to wait many years for recognition, and when it came he was in debt to no one but himself and his wife—whom he loved to call "my partner"—for the fact that the intelligent public of the theatre acclaimed him as a new and great leader among actors and presenters of plays.

Mr. Irving must always be recognised as a great artist—not merely as one who played his part admirably, but as a man who possessed ideas and was able to express them in dramatic form. He was but twenty-six when he wrote his first play, "Peter the Great," for his father, at the Lyceum Theatre. The influence of his own experiences for some months in Russia a few years earlier, when he was attached to the British Embassy in Petersburg, prompted him to write that play, but the result, although it contained a promise, was not a great success. The young author had not had time to arrange his impressions of life. He had returned to England filled with new ideas about humanity learned in the school of Tolstoy, and he had ideas of things that contrasted strangely with those of the young people with whom he was thrown during his first years on the stage, after he had abandoned all idea of a diplomatic career in order to follow his father's profession.

* * * * *

Before he settled down as a member of his father's company Laurence Irving had some years of touring in the provinces, and eleven years ago, when Sir Henry was playing "Dante" at Drury Lane, he married Miss Mabel Hackney, who was a member of that company. After Sir Henry's death in 1905 Laurence Irving fell on quiet times. Engagements became rare. Managers would not see in the rugged personality of this actor the determined, earnest character that must succeed. He got occasional engagements—parts as a rule quite unworthy of his genius, for he had genius, although even all those who were near to him then did not recognise it. In some special performances of non-commercial plays Mr. Irving made a deep impression on the few who witnessed them. Yet he had the galling experience of being idle very often when engagements came the way of his beloved partner. When he was idle and she was working at a theatre he would go to the stage door for her every night, and, indeed, on summer nights he would often bring their dogs there and they all walked home together—a very happy family indeed

At last, impatient of depending on occasional engagements, Mr. and Mrs. Irving went to the halls together, taking with them a short sketch, "Peg Woffington." There was an outcry at the time that a son of Sir Henry Irving should go to the "halls," but Laurence Irving had no false pride about work, and he could answer any attack anyone dared to make. Since then almost every actor of note in London has followed his example and has taken engagements at the music-halls. Mr. Irving looked on grimly enough afterwards at the procession of players who went back "on the road" to do what he had done. He was well content with his own experience. He wanted to earn money that he might present plays in London, and he succeeded. First, however, after the halls he and Miss Hackney went to America for a season. They had a pleasant welcome. The son of Sir Henry was sure of that over there. Personally also they won the favour of the public. But there was one critic to whom Laurence Irving took exception. It was a man in a strong position who could hit hard with little effort. Irving thought he overstepped the limits of fair play, and one night in New York he came before the curtain and told the audience in biting phrases what he thought of his critic, and the effect on New York was electrical, for they saw that this actor was a man with courage who would and could fight.

* * * * *

Home again in 1910 from New York, Mr. Irving and Miss Hackney went on tour to present plays preparatory to embarking on their own account as London managers, and on November 14, 1910, they realised their joint ambition by presenting at the Garrick Theatre "The Unwritten Law." This awful tragedy of mental torture was written by Mr. Irving from Fedor Dostoieffsky's novel "Crime and Punishment," and in it he appeared as Rodion Raskolnikoff, the young student who, to protect Sonia (played by his wife), slew a man. It was incomparably a greater play than anything produced that season, and the impression of Mr. Irving's performance has not been weakened in the interval of nearly four years. It was the greatest thing he ever did. Had it been done this year, or at any time since he secured the attention of a much wider public by his presentation of the much more showy and theatrical drama "Typhoon," he would have achieved a greater reputation and one at least approaching that to which he was entitled.

Mr. Irving took a wider view of life and its responsibilities than did the people he met in his ordinary experiences, and all through his career he nursed interests of a wide human and political character that were entirely independent of the art of the theatre. There was no question about it; he believed he had a mission, and had he lived he would assuredly have become the greatest character in the English-speaking theatre. It was not for affectation's sake that he was indifferent to dress. To be well and comfortably clad was the beginning and end of his demand. Colour seemed to have no attraction for him. A dull brown or grey suit and a soft hat just thrown on the top of his head was the impression his apparel gave as he hurried through the London streets looking preoccupied and confident. He believed in work. Yet he could relax occasionally, and if not for long, it was for long enough to show that he was, if serious, not melancholy, and that humour had a large part in his nature. He liked to make a speech and just poke a little fun at someone. At the Garrick Theatre at the end of the performance of "The Unwritten Law" he made a speech and thanked the audience for the reception of the play, and the company, "also," he added, "on behalf of my wife, who is known to us all here on the stage as the 'Holy Terror'"! No one laughed more merrily than Mrs. Irving, who knew well that he had more than appreciated her help throughout the rehearsals.

At all the theatres in which they worked these faithful partners shared the same office, and at evening when the theatre was lighted and the audience seated Laurence Irving's dressing-room became the office for himself and his wife, so that they might always be near one another. Their holidays . . . a week-end, or a week, were for both together, and those were spent in a little cottage they owned on a country road far out of London.

Their house in Kensington and their cottage by the country roadside were being got ready for their return this week. Mr. and Mrs. Irving were to have a brief holiday previous to going out for a short tour in August to produce their new Bonaparte play in the provinces before their London season of next October. All these plans have gone down with the tragedy. They had no children, and their houses are lonely and empty.

Daily Mail June 1, 1914.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

The Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1880.

LONDON, THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1915.

RUNS OF THE SEASON.

CLASSIFIED DIGEST OF THE WEST-END PRODUCTIONS, 1914-15.

Appended is a list of the pieces running at the West-End theatres during the 1914-15 season. The list includes all pieces produced for a run. Pieces performed by play-producing societies, matinée plays, and plays revived on particular occasions are not included, nor are plays intermittently performed in the course of repertory seasons. Plays in one act also are not included. The season is reckoned as starting on August 1 last. Plays overlapping from the previous season are given in a separate list. The plays of the 1914-15 season still running are also given separately, and in their case the number of performances is calculated up to next Saturday, July 24.

PIECES WITH CONCLUDED RUNS.

Piece.	Theatre.	First Production.	Times Played.
Odds and Ends	Ambassadors	Oct. 16, 1914	260
On His Majesty's Service	Princes	Dec. 20, 1914	183
Raffles	Wyndham's	Dec. 26, 1914	180
Flag Lieutenant, The	Haymarket	Nov. 23, 1914	179
Country Girl, A	Daly's	Oct. 28, 1914	173
Girl in the Taxi, The	Garrick	Jan. 23, 1915	155
Mameena	Globe	Sept. 30, 1914	133
Little Minister, The	Duke of York's	Sept. 3, 1914	131
David Copperfield	His Majesty's	Dec. 24, 1914	130
Baby Mine	Vaudeville	Feb. 15, 1915	128
Outcast	Wyndham's	Sept. 1, 1914	126
Tales of Hoffman	Shaftesbury	Feb. 6, 1915	106
Searchlights	Savoy	Feb. 11, 1915	105
Double Mystery, The	Garrick	Oct. 14, 1914	103
Drake	His Majesty's	Aug. 19, 1914	94
Florodora	Lyric	Feb. 20, 1915	90
Impossible Woman, The	Haymarket	Sept. 8, 1914	89
Kings and Queens	St. James's	Jan. 16, 1915	81
Rosy Rapture	Duke of York's	March 22, 1915	79
His House in Order	St. James's	Oct. 15, 1915	75
Busy Day, A	Apollo	Jan. 30, 1915	74
The Dynasts	Kingsway	Nov. 25, 1914	72
Tommy Atkins	Lyceum	Sept. 2, 1914	69
Mistress Wilful	Strand	Jan. 2, 1915	63
Miss Hook of Holland	Prince of Wales's	Oct. 27, 1914	62
Are You a Mason?	Comedy	Feb. 2, 1915	62
Angel of the House, The	Savoy	June 2, 1915	60
Veronique	Adelphi	April 3, 1915	59
Whip, The	Aldwych	Feb. 27, 1915	58
Sealed Orders	Drury Lane	April 3, 1915	58
In Time of War	Lyceum	May 22, 1915	58
Seven Keys to Baldpate, The	Apollo	Sept. 12, 1914	57
He Didn't Want to Do It	Prince of Wales's	March 6, 1915	57
Royal Divorce, A	Lyceum	March 31, 1915	56
Chocolate Soldier, The	Lyric	Sept. 5, 1914	56
Glad Eye, The	Strand	Oct. 21, 1914	53
Sweet Nell of Old Drury	Strand	Feb. 27, 1915	50
Fanny's First Play	Kingsway	Feb. 13, 1915	49
Soldier's Wedding, The	Lyceum	Nov. 2, 1914	48
Silver King, The	Strand	Sept. 5, 1914	48
Bluff King Hal	Garrick	Sept. 4, 1914	43
Our Boys	Vaudeville	Nov. 24, 1914	43
Three Spoonfuls	Criterion	April 10, 1915	41
King Henry V	Shaftesbury	Dec. 26, 1914	40
Earl and the Girl, The	Aldwych	Nov. 4, 1914	39
Right to Kill, The	His Majesty's	May 4, 1915	38
My Aunt	Vaudeville	Aug. 26, 1914	37
Three Musketeers, The	Lyceum	Feb. 24, 1915	37
Sir Richard's Biography	Criterion	Oct. 1, 1914	36
Chinese Honeymoon, A	Prince of Wales's	Jan. 28, 1915	36
Milestones	Royalty	Oct. 31, 1914	33
Excuse Me!	Garrick	March 6, 1915	33
Henry of Navarre	Strand	May 22, 1915	33
Cheer, Boys, Cheer	Prince's	Oct. 17, 1914	33
Oh, Be Careful! (Mlle. Tra-la-la)	Garrick	June 17, 1915	33
Arcadians, The	Shaftesbury	May 20, 1915	33
Marie-Odile	His Majesty's	June 8, 1915	31
King Henry IV.	His Majesty's	Nov. 14, 1914	30
Striking	Apollo	May 5, 1915	30
Panorama of Youth, The	St. James's	April 14, 1915	29
Argyle Case, The	Strand	April 22, 1915	28
Forget-Me-Not	Little	Sept. 15, 1914	28
Laughter of Fools, The	Prince of Wales's	May 29, 1915	27
Alsace	Court	April 12, 1915	25
Wild Thyme	Comedy	April 19, 1915	24
When Knights Were Bold	New	Feb. 8, 1915	24
Those Who Sit in Judgment	St. James's	Sept. 19, 1914	24
New Shylock, The	Lyric	Oct. 29, 1914	21
Cost, The	Vaudeville	Oct. 13, 1914	21
Advertisement	Kingsway	April 15, 1915	20
Quinneys'			20
Seven Keys to Baldpate, The			20
Wild Thyme			20
Young Wisdom			20

Comedy.

Angel of the House, The.
Fanny's First Play.
Great Adventure, The.
Hillarys, The.
Kiss Cure, The.
Modame Sans-Gêne
Mr. and Mrs. Ponsonby.
Mr. Wu.
Nobody Loves Me.
Our Boys
Sir Richard's Biography.
Road to Raebury, The.

Farce.

Are You a Mason?
Baby Mine.
Busy Day, A.
Eliza Comes to Stay.
Excuse Me!
Glad Eye, The.
Half Sister, The
He Didn't Want to Do It.
Joker, The.
My Aunt.
Never Say Die.
Seven Days.
Striking.
Three Spoonfuls.
When Knights Were Bold.
Who's the Lady?

Melodrama.

Argyle Case, The.
Cheer, Boys, Cheer.
Daughter of England, A.
For England, Home, and Beauty.
Her Forbidden Marriage.
Heritage of Hate, A.
Kismet
Mameena.
Oliver Twist.
Queen at Seventeen, A.
Sealed Orders.
Silver King, The.
Soldier's Wedding, The.
Tommy Atkins.
Whip, The.

Musical Comedy.

Arcadians, The.
Belle of New York, The.
Betty.
Chinese Honeymoon, A.
Cinema Star, The.
Chocolate Soldier, The.
Country Girl, A.
Dairymaids, The.
Earl and the Girl, The.
Florodora.
Girl in the Taxi, The
Miss Hook of Holland.
Oh, Be Careful!
To-night's the Night.
Veronique.

Revue

All Scotch.
More.
Odds and Ends.
Rosy Rapture.

Opera.

Tales of Hoffman.

War Plays.

Armageddon.
Cost, The.
Day Before the Day, The.
Daughter of England, A.
In Time of War.
Man Who Stayed at Home, The.
Searchlights.

French and Belgian Plays.

Alsace.
Ce Bon Monsieur Zoetelock.
Demoiselle de Magasin, La.
Flambée, La.
Kommandatur La.
Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans, Le.
Madame Sans-Gêne.
Zonneslag et Cie.

D-10
3724
1914
Plays

Day Before the Day, The	St. James's	May 19, 1915	19
Blow, The	Little	April 3, 1915	18
Hillarys, The	Criterion	June 2, 1915	18
Daughter of England, A	Garrick	Jan. 8, 1915	18
Dairymaids, The	Aldwych	May 22, 1915	18
Who's the Lady?	Prince of Wales's	May 1, 1915	18
Joker, The	New	April 17, 1915	17
Seven Days	New	March 15, 1915	17
Merchant of Venice, The	Prince's	Oct. 17, 1914	16
Oliver Twist	His Majesty's	April 19, 1915	16
Breed of the Treshams, The	New	May 17, 1915	16
Young Wisdom	Playhouse	Sept. 23, 1914	14
Armageddon	New	June 1, 1915	13
Never Say Die	Apollo	Nov. 4, 1914	12
Road to Raebury, The	Criterion	June 18, 1915	12
Queen at Seventeen, A	Prince's	Aug. 1, 1914	11
Sphinx, The	Court	Oct. 3, 1914	10
Half-Sister, The	Apollo	April 12, 1915	9
			7

PIECES STILL RUNNING.

Potash and Perlmutter	Queen's	April 14, 1914	536
Peg o' My Heart	Comedy	Oct. 10, 1914	328
Man Who Stayed at Home, The	Royalty	Dec. 10, 1914	260
Quinneys'	Haymarket	April 20, 1915	125
On Trial	Lyric	April 29, 1915	101
Betty	Daly's	April 22, 1915	96
To-night's the Night	Gaiety	April 28, 1915	89
For England, Home, and Beauty	Princes	May 22, 1915	83
Angel in the House, The	Savoy	June 3, 1915	60
Gamblers All	Wyndham's	June 9, 1915	53
More	Ambassadors	June 18, 1915	42
Enterprising Helen	Vaudeville	July 7, 1915	21
Her Forbidden Marriage	Lyceum	July 14, 1915	13
All Scotch	Apollo	July 16, 1915	11

PIECES CONTINUED FROM PREVIOUS SEASON.

Great Adventure, The	Kingsway	March 25, 1913	673
Mr. Wu	Strand	Nov. 27, 1913	403
Kismet	Globe	March 10, 1914	222
Land of Promise, The	Duke of York's	Feb. 26, 1914	185
My Lady's Dress	Royalty	April 23, 1914	176
Grumpy	New	May 13, 1914	157
Belle of New York, The	Lyceum	June 24, 1914	149
Cinema Star, The	Shaftesbury	June 4, 1914	109
Driven	Haymarket	June 17, 1914	60
Pair of Silk Stockings, A	Criterion	Aug. 1, 1914	49
Heritage of Hate, A	Aldwych	June 27, 1914	43
Eliza Comes to Stay	Vaudeville	July 6, 1914	38
Sin of David, The	Savoy	July 9, 1914	32
From 9 to 11	Wyndham's	July 14, 1914	21

KINDS OF PIECE.

The pieces may be arranged in the following classes:—

SHAKESPEARE.

King Henry IV. (Part 1.).
King Henry V.
Merchant of Venice, The.

POETIC DRAMA.

Armageddon.
Dynasts, The.
Sin of David, The.

ROMANTIC DRAMA.

Bluff King Hal.
Breed of the Treshams, The.
Corsican Brothers, The.
Drake.
Henry of Navarre.
Land of Promise, The Mistress Wilful.
Only Way, The.
Royal Divorce, A.
Sweet Nell of Old Drury.
Three Musketeers, The.

DRAMA

A Bit o' Love.
Advertisement
Alsace.
Blow, The.
Double Mystery, The.
Driven.
Forget-Me-Not.
Marie-Odile.
New Shylock, The.
On Trial.
Outcast.
Right to Kill, The.
Sphinx, The.
Those Who Sit in Judgment.

COMEDY-DRAMA

Enterprising Helen.
From 9 to 11.
Grumpy.
Gamblers All.
His House in Order.
Kings and Queens.
Impossible Woman, The
Laughter of Fools, The.
Little Minister, The.
Milestones.
My Lady's Dress.
Pair of Silk Stockings, A.
Panorama of Youth, The.
Peg o' My Heart.
Potash and Perlmutter.

AUTHORSHIP.

[Not including revivals.]

PIECES BY BRITISH PLAYWRIGHTS.

Advertisement.
All Scotch.
Angel of the House, The.
Bit o' Love, A.
Blow, The
Bluff King Hal.
Busy Day, A.
Cost, The.
Daughter of England, A.
Day Before the Day, The.
Dynasts, The.
Half Sister, The.
In Time of War.
Hillarys, The.
Kings and Queens.
Kiss Cure, The.
Mr. and Mrs. Ponsonby.
Mistress Wilful.
Nobody Loves Me.
Odds and Ends.
Outcast.
Panorama of Youth, The Queen at Seventeen, A.
Quinneys'.
Road to Raebury, The Rosy Rapture.
Searchlights.
Sir Richard's Biography.
Sphinx, The.
Striking.
Those Who Sit in Judgment.

PLAYS FROM NOVELS, ETC.

Dynasts, The.
Impossible Woman, The.
Mamee.

ADAPTATIONS FROM FOREIGN PIECES.

Double Mystery, The.
My Aunt.
Right to Kill, The.
Wild Thyme.

PIECES BY AMERICAN PLAYWRIGHTS

Argyle Case, The.
Excuse Me!
He Didn't Want to Do It.
Joker, The.
Marie-Odile.
New Shylock, The.
Seven Days.
Seven Keys to Baldpate, The.
Three Spoonfuls.
Young Wisdom.

REVIVALS.

Arcadians, The.
Are You a Mason?
Baby Mine.
Belle of New York, The.
Breed of the Treshams, The.
Cheer, Boys, Cheer.
Chinese Honeymoon, A.
Chocolate Soldier, The.
Corsican Brothers, The.
Country Girl, A.
Dairymaids, The.
David Copperfield.
Drake.
Earl and the Girl, The.
Eliza Comes to Stay.
Fanny's First Play.
Flag Lieutenant, The.
Florodora.
Forget-Me-Not.
Glad Eye, The.
Grumpy.
Henry of Navarre.
His House in Order.
King Henry IV.
King Henry V
Kismet.
Laughter of Fools, The.
Little Minister, The
Madame Sans-Gêne
Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans, Le.
Merchant of Venice, The Milestones.
Miss Hook of Holland.
Never Say Die.
Oh! Be Careful.
Oliver Twist.
On His Majesty's Service.
Only Way, The.
Our Boys.
Pair of Silk Stockings, A.
Raffles.
Royal Divorce, A.
Sented Orders.
Silver King, The.
Soldier's Wedding, The.
Sweet Nell of Old Drury.
Tales of Hoffman.
Three Musketeers, The.
Tommy Atkins.
Veronique.
When Knights Were Bold.
Whip, The.
Who's the Lady?

SEASONS.

IRISH PLAYERS.

Little, May 10 to June 5, 1915.—34.
Shanwalla, etc.

LIVERPOOL COMMONWEALTH COMPANY.

Kingsway, May 3.—32.
Bit o' Love, A.
Cousin Kate.
Kiss Cure, The
Nobody Loves Me.
Trelawny of the Wells.
Woman of No Importance, A.

BELGIAN.

Criterion, November 19 to March 13, 1915. 126.
Ce Bon Monsieur Zoetebeck.
Demoiselle de Magasin, La.
Flambée, La.
Kommandatur, La.
Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans, Le.
Zonneslag et Cie.

MME. REJANE.

Court, April 12 to May 1, 1915.—24.
Alsace.
New and Criterion, May 3 to May 29, 1915.—28.
La Passerelle.
Madame Sans-Gêne.

Advancement

Aces on Number and all Scots

anger he is even

Ar

Arcadians. The

Are You a Mason?

Ar

armageddon

A

Babes in the Wood

Baby stare

Best man to

Bat

B

Big Drum. The

B

Blue Stocking. The

Breach of the Treasury, The

Bric a Brac

Boy,

Case of Lady Camber. The

Charley's aunt

Chinese Honeymoon. a

Christian. The

collusion

Comedy of Conscience conspiracy

Corsican Brothers The

Dairymaids The

Day Before the Day. The

Daughter of England. a

David Garrick

En Jeune Prodigue. L'

Fatal Typist. The

Followers

Forging

Five Birds in a Cage.

Fling's Last Play

Flirt

Gamblers all

Gerard 5-0644

Girl in the Taxi.

G

Half-Sister The

He Did Not Want To Do It.

Henry of Navarre

Her Forbidden Marriage

Hillarys. The

Hindle Wakes

Hour

In Walpole

(reverse)

14

In Time of War
Iris Intervenes
Joker The Joy
Keeping up Appearances
Kick-In
King Henry VIII
Kings and Queens
Lady
96
Laughter of Fools The Little Bit of Fluff a 225. 243
Looking Back
251
Man of Ideas a
Man who Stayed at Home
Marie Odile
Mavourneen
127
Mercy
Midsummer Night's Dream a
Monsieur Beaucaire
Mr and Mrs Pennington
Mrs Tim Wilful
Mum
New Word. The
Nobody Loves Me
Nan's 1st Time
232
Oh! Be Careful
Oh! La La
301.
Oliver Twist
Only Girl. The
216
Only Way. The
On Trial
92
Papers of State
Panorama of Youth. The Passing Show. The Pauline
96
Pedlar of Paris The 277
Pe
190
Peg
183
Peter Pan
299
Plumbers. The Prodigal Son. The 231
Pussy and Co.
Puss in Boots
293
Quo
Ready Money
199
Right-To Kill The 100
Road to Ruin The 160
Robinson Crusoe
290
Romance
223

Rosy Rapture
Royal Display
Samples 264
Scarlet Pimpernel The School for Scandal The
Sealed orders
Searchlights
Seven Days
Shamwalla
Shell Out
Sovereign Love
Spanish Main. The 121
Starlight Express. The
S/S Tricf 307
Stormy Petrel The 237, 246
Striking
Sweet
Tina
Tinsichats The Night 245
Treare of the Soul. The
Three Musketeers. The 269
Three Sporrans
Tic
Wake Case The Walk Down Stars 204
When London Sleeps 104
Where the Rainbow Ends 207
Whips. The 298
Who is He? 33
Who's The Lady 272
Wild Thyme 95

animals 237 253.
Alexander. Sir George 20
Alhambra. new directors
Artists and Professors 159
Audiences. crowded & Theatre . 6. 44. 302. 291. 292. 294.
Barrie. Sir J. M. & Gaby Deslys 52
Bankruptcies 10 2. 266.
Cats, and dogs 237. 253
Charity performances 11
Christmas programmes 302
Directors of Theatres 2. 24. 25. 262
Dividends 9, 10. 24. 25. 262
Edwardes. George 222. 255
Elsie. Lily 242
Forsyth. Neil 193
Frohman. Charles 115
Gaiety ending 202
Friday productions 3. 192. 309

Imagination 188

Kings at Theatres

Lord Chamberlain's warning 99

Long Runs

Lucas 3[illegible]

Manners, Maya 90

Revue de Vogue 192

Smoking at Theatres 196. 260

Short 3 act Plays

Sing Plays

Tanner, James T. 193

Tilled earth

Twice Nightly

War Time Effects 6. 22. 111-192. 229. 246. 253. [illegible]. 302.

193. 253

Years plays, [illegible] 308

Vogue 88. 192

Returned To The Stage 87 242

Liverpool Repertory [illegible] 97. 115.

German Emperor, memoirs 114

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

Sole Proprietor ... LOUIS MEYER.

Under the Management of JULIA NEILSON & FRED TERRY.

On SATURDAY, JANUARY 2nd, 1915, and EVERY EVENING at 8.

Will be produced, for the First Time, a New Comedy in Four Acts, entitled

"MISTRESS WILFUL."

Adapted by ERNEST HENDRIE from FRANK BARRETT'S Book.

King Charles II.	... Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
John Goodman	Mr. JAMES CARTER-EDWARDS
Robin Fairfellow	... ... Mr. FRED TERRY
Benjamin Wedge	... ... M. J. H. BREWER
Pere Tenailles	... Mr. LESLIE H. GORDON
Master Blakey	... Mr. F. PERCIVAL STEVENS
Samuel Pepys	... Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL
The Rev. Anthony Pyn ...	... Mr. T. GIDEON WARREN
The Duke of Monmouth (passing as Sir Harry Luckless)	... Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lord Ralph Baxter ...	... Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
A Notary	... ... Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Constable Stulkey ...	... ... Mr. ROBERT NOBLE
Barberry Clip	... ... Miss WINIFRED RAE
Mistress Wedge ...	... ... Miss EMILY SPILLER
Margaret Goodman ...	... ... Miss JULIA NEILSON
First Wench	... Miss PEARLA GARDNER
Second Wench	... Miss DOROTHY DAVIS

Misses CARDOZO, CAWDERY and BRODIE.

ACTS 1, 2, and 3 - Parlour of John Goodman's Shop at the Sign of the Yellow Fleece, Fleet Street.

(F. I. LYNDHURST).

ACT 4 - - - - - At the House of the Royal Armourer over against Whitehall Stairs.

(R. C. MC CLERY).

Between Acts I. and II. a few minutes elapse.
Between Acts II. and III. a night elapses.
Between Acts III. and IV. a week elapses.

Time: Towards the close of the Reign of King Charles II.

Matinee on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-30.

The Overture and Incidental Music specially written by Mr. Sydney Ffoulkes.

Miss Neilson's dresses designed by Miss Edith Craig, and executed by Miss Mary Grey, Baker Street, W.
Other costumes by J. B. Simmonds. Wigs by W. Clarkson.

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd. London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Stage Manager ..... Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL.
Assistant Manager ..... Mr. EDWARD OUSTON.
Advertising Manager ..... Mr. ALFRED POPE.
Musical Director ..... Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES.
Assistant Manager ..... Mr. GUY SMETHURST.
General Manager ..... Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT.

Doors open 7.45. Matinee 2.15. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

Nearest Tube Stations: Leicester Square, Covent Garden, Strand, Holborn, Charing Cross.

MONDAY, JANUARY 4, 1915.

One of the most justly-prized merits of the stage is its way of throwing light upon historical facts not generally known. Thus Mistress Wilful shows how somewhere about the year 1682 Charles II. ceased to be the Merry and became the Melancholy Monarch. He spoke in a querulous sing-song. He buried his face in the Royal handkerchief and shed tears at the thought of "your poor dead mother, my child," or words to that effect. When invited to dance, he said, with a sigh, that he had long given up that sort of thing, and when nevertheless persuaded to try a step or two, he did it with the air of performing a funeral rite. On the whole the character was a grim warning of the peevish old age that awaits a Royal rake.

Mr. Pepys, too, was sadly changed from the man of the Diary. Not a trace survived in him of his old connoisseurship, virtuosity, curious interest in life. Though there was a saucy serving wench handy, he never remarked, much less toyed with her. In fact, he had become a mute inglorious Pepys, whose one function in the commonwealth was to hold Charles II.'s hat. It was a pleasure, however, to find he had got over the old trouble about his eyesight.

This historical pair, so depressingly unlike their old selves, intermittently interfere with the domestic affairs of an unhistorical pair, unfortunately too much like their old selves—the old stage-pair who by slow degrees turn a nominal into a real marriage. You know those slow degrees of interrupted explanations and impossible misunderstandings, which have to be slow because the couple must at all costs be kept out of each other's arms until the final curtain. You know how he and she went through the form of marriage for some odd reason and then, after much pouting, stamping of feet, alarums and excursions, learnt to love one another. You know how the husband kept on stretching out yearning arms to the wife when her back was turned, and how the wife kept on blowing kisses to the husband when his back was turned. You know that jealousy would be sure to arise, and that it would as surely be unfounded—on this occasion it was all about the wife's familiarity with the Duke of Monmouth, who happened to be her half-brother. What, however, you probably didn't know was that in a "habit-maker's" shop of 1682 they already talked of "departments."

Anyhow it is all harmless enough (its rather emphatic jokes about garters and bed-pillows being passed as appropriate concessions to a Pepysian taste) and obviously gives hearty pleasure to the hearty admirers of that hearty couple, Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry. It is comforting to find that, though Charles II. and Mr. Pepys are changed men, Miss Neilson is exactly the same superb woman as ever. No wonder Mr. Terry keeps holding out those yearning arms! No wonder the Duke of Monmouth takes every advantage of the blest privileges of a half-brother.

GARRICK THEATRE

Licensees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

FRIDAY, JANUARY 8th, 1915, and onwards TWICE NIGHTLY, at 6.20 and 9 p.m.

Matinees WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.30.

THOMAS DOTT

PRESENTS

"A DAUGHTER OF ENGLAND"

A New [illegible] AMA IN THREE ACTS, FROM THE FRENCH OF [illegible] ED BY PERCY BARROW AND [illegible] G. LEE.

CHARACTERS

Sylvia [illegible]	MARGA LA RUBIA
Freda	MATTH. BLOCK
Otto	MASTER WILLIAM SHERLOCK
Hannah	VICTOR VINES
Paul (Captain [illegible])	FRANK RANDELL
Colonel [illegible]	JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Herman	[illegible]
Captain [illegible]	[illegible]
Baroness [illegible]	[illegible]
Commandant [illegible]	[illegible]
Frau [illegible]	[illegible]
1st Gerry [illegible]	[illegible]
2nd [illegible]	[illegible]
Lieut. [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Major [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

4

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

Act I.

Act II.

Act III.

Stage Dir

Assistant S

Musical D

Manager

The completely successful introduction of the twice-nightly system into the West-End theatres will, we think, require a better and more skilfully designed piece than the frankly melodramatic and anything but plausible "new and topical drama, from the French," A Daughter of England, performed once at the Garrick on Friday evening, January 8, and since given twice nightly. Apparently, in the original French of E. V. Miller there were some ingenious and fairly adroit stage devices of an acceptably thrilling sort, but in the adaptation for the English boards made by Percy Barrow and José G. Levy (the latter of Glad Eye repute) there seemed little beyond these to commend the play, which, even on the opening night, with intervals between the scenes too long for what is required in a crisp and brisk twice-nightly presentation, took barely a couple of hours to perform. The scale of popular prices now started at the Garrick runs:—Orchestra stalls, 5s.; dress circle, 4s. and 3s.; upper circle, 2s. 6d. and 2s.; pit, 1s. 6d.; gallery, 6d. Those charges are certainly very moderate, and should gain a certain amount of patronage for Mr. Thomas Dott's enterprise, but still we wish that A Daughter of England had not been such cheap stuff. Although the list of dramatis personæ is a long one, about half of them appear only in the first act, and then merely in connection with an official reception given to the Prince acting as General-in-Command in the Alsace district by the melodramatically wicked Colonel von Rieter, of Zabern notoriety, who lives up to his name in a sort of way. The brilliant uniforms worn in this scene, and the excellent and picturesque scenery by Leolyn Hart, have their due effect in the ensemble of the Miller-Barrow-Levy piece, which is produced by Mr. Ralph Kimpton, Mr. Albert Fox being the musical director, and the management being in the hands of Mr. José Levy.

The naughty Colonel and his kindly and sympathetic wife had engaged as governess for their children, Freda and Otto, Sylvia Chetwynd, the title-character; and this Daughter of England, a spokeswoman of British justice as against Prussian might and brutality, is, of course, persecuted, in the good old bad way, by Von Rieter. This gallant officer declares that his love (?) for the girl is killing him, that he has tried to crush the sentiment, and that she must return his passion. Of course, she indignantly refuses, and insists that her previously given notice to leave shall take effect almost immediately. So the Colonel, aided by circumstances, plans a peculiarly base revenge. Sylvia had, at the opening, bestowed alms upon a wandering musician, an itinerant violinist, who describes himself vaguely as Paul the Fiddler, and this man is suspected of having killed an Adjutant employed in the German Secret Service. Further, the Colonel had just received important dispatches from his superiors, these including plans of the neighbouring French forts, particulars of the German spy system, and details of the forthcoming mobilisation of the 19th Army. What could be more natural than that Von Rieter should place these valuable documents in Sylvia's evening cloak, and, with the aid of a couple of his officers, hastily summoned to form a court martial, trump up a charge against the girl of having stolen the papers. Miss Chetwynd follows her emphatic denial of this odious charge by switching off the electric light, hiding behind a screen, and then making her escape whilst the three "judges" think she has fled into the garden. Sylvia finds her way to Paul's house, and he, taking off his grey wig, reveals himself as a dark-haired youth, and, further, as Captain Dubois, a notable French Secret Service agent, who had taken up the business of fighting the German spy system because it had brought about the ruin and disgrace of his father, who had fought bravely for France in the War of 1870.

[illegible] that he employs a fine dog, [illegible]her of the bull-dog breed, to [illegible]ges across the frontier, and by [illegible] of the second act this faithful [illegible]s carried von Rieter's precious [illegible]ly sought-after dispatches safely [illegible]ce; this scene on the Franco-German Frontier in the Vosges, with [illegible] on either side of a little footbridge, with the mountains at the back, being a decidedly effective and artistic one, and worthy of a far better play. Meanwhile Sylvia has been able, behind another convenient screen, to dress herself as a boy in a peasant costume taken from Paul's well-stocked cupboard, which is also provided with a secret exit; and Dubois, after baffling the pursuing Germans, almost in Sherlock Holmes fashion, by setting fire, with dazzling effect, apparently to some powder, turns up again with Sylvia, and also with the dog, at a generally deserted woodman's hut. Here he gulls one of the Prussian lieutenants with the very highly coloured story that he (Paul), also in Prussian uniform, had brought to the hut, which might easily be set on fire, the supposed boy, who was the brother of a farmer's girl whom he had wronged. This yarn, laid on much too thickly, one thinks, does not prevent the stopping of the fugitives at the footbridge, and where, at the end of act two, after Sylvia has got safely across, Dubois escapes up into the mountains. The modicum of merit that may, by a lenient onlooker, be discerned in acts one and two of A Daughter of England, is by no means apparent in the third, which, following on the Zabern and Vosges incidents in April, is supposed to take place at Portsmouth at the beginning of this last epoch-making August. Sylvia, represented as recovering from the illness that had ensued on her escape into France, has for father as preposterous a specimen of a British officer (retired) as has been seen in popular melodrama; and quite as egregious a personage is the police inspector who comes to arrest the heroine for having, in the spring of the preceding year, sold to the German Government plans of "the New War Office (sic) in construction at Portsmouth." These seemed to be in her handwriting, but by means of a peculiar sort of magnifying glass the suddenly and providentially appearing Paul (with whom obviously Sylvia had fallen in love), convinces even the idiotic inspector that the characters of her handwriting had been forged and copied one by one. The policeman's informant had been a supposed, naturalised retired German officer, who turns out to be von Rieter, in quest of designs for a new submarine, who, after being mobbed by the Portsmouth crowd, is presumably arrested and taken off to France by the successful spy-catcher. News has just come of the declaration of War, and Sylvia improves the occasion by waving together the Union Jack and the Tricolour and calling upon all the young men to enlist.

A very innocent example of a spy melodrama was presented at the Garrick Theatre on Friday evening with the intention of playing it there twice nightly. "A Daughter of England" is said to have been written by a French doctor now serving at the front, and he certainly must be given credit for possessing a poor estimate of his German enemies, otherwise he would not have expected anyone to believe such stupid people could exist as are the German characters in his play. The beautiful heroine has, of course, some difficulty in the early part of this melodrama in freeing herself from the attentions and the threats of the conventional stage villain who wants her, but, with the aid of a conventional stage hero, she tricks the enemy and lives happy ever afterwards with the man of her heart. It is all quite amusing.

J. W.

THE TWICE NIGHTLY SYSTEM IN THE WEST END.

(TO THE EDITOR OF "THE OBSERVER.")

Sir,—Mr. Thomas Dott has decided to withdraw "A Daughter of England" from this theatre to-night. As during the week several offers have been received from suburban and provincial managers to book this play at their theatres, I feel it only fair that any blame in the matter should not rest upon the shoulders of the play or the performers. It is the system, not the play, which is at fault.

At the end of my recent run of "The Double Mystery" at this theatre I gave two performances a day, one in the afternoon, one in the evening, and my receipts showed that, had I maintained this policy, I should have reaped my reward. I am convinced, therefore, that in the winter months at any rate, two performances a day in the West End would be a remunerative policy.

From the attitude of the public at the box office the twice-nightly system is clearly resented, the general feeling being that in order to come within the necessary time limit a play must be condensed to its detriment.

ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

Garrick Theatre, W.C., Jan. 16, 1915.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1915.

BRIGHTER THEATRELAND.

28 WEST END HOUSES CROWDED EVERY NIGHT.

The London theatres are enjoying such a wave of prosperity as might be expected only in times of peace. Twenty-eight theatres are now open in the West End with every class of theatrical attraction, from skits to Shakespeare, and nearly all of them—a most rare occurrence—are doing profitable business.

Some of these theatres are playing at every performance to their full seating capacity. In the majority of the London playhouses reduced prices have been introduced, but, curiously enough, the managers who saw no reason for lowering prices are doing at least as well as those who made reductions.

The reasons given for the revival are many. It is stated that an enormous number of men of the new Army spend their leave in London, and that they and their friends buy at least 30 per cent. of the reserved seats. The young people home for the holidays are also contributing to the prosperity. Managers are inclined to think that as the restaurants are closed early and London evenings are terribly depressing under the "lights out" order, people who want to be amused find that they must go to the theatre. Seaside resorts in these times are dark and gloomy at night; foreign resorts are either inaccessible or too remote; hence London's Theatreland becomes the only resort of those who seek distraction. No one, however, believes that "full houses" will long continue. "Holidays and soldiers' leave," say managers, "have given an almost unprecedented spurt to theatre business, but we expect that after a couple of weeks or so only the special attractions will continue to draw the crowd."

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1915.

IN THE THEATRES.

Audiences last evening at the London theatres and music-halls were very subdued. They were smaller too than usual, even for Friday evenings, and the people were nervous and anxious.

In the interval—particularly in the variety theatres—the staffs of the houses were kept busy trying to answer questions, but they had no information beyond the vague reports in circulation in the streets.

G 148
STALLS
Jan. 16.
1915
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

EVERY EVENING at 8 (MATINEES at 2)

WILL BE ACTED

KINGS AND QUEENS

A PLAY, IN THREE ACTS, BY

RUDOLF BESIER

"My dears, they have five fingers on each hand, and take their meals regularly."

The Education of Claude and Ivo.

H.I.M. Frederick IV.	...	GEORGE ALEXANDER
H.M. King Richard VIII		ARTHUR WONTNER
H.M. Queen Charlotte	...	MARIE LOHR
H.M. Queen Elizabeth	...	FRANCES IVOR
H.R.H. Prince Louis	...	BEN WEBSTER
Count de Cartaret	...	F. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Count Fersen		HESKETH PEARSON
Baroness de Lisle		ALMA MURRAY
Madame Selincourt		MARCELLE CHEVALIER
Martin	...	E. H. HINCKS
		W. COATS BUSH
Attendants	...	EDWARD MONTAGU

The action takes place in the Palace of King Richard within twenty-four hours.

Act I. A Morning-room.
Act II. A Smoking-room.
Act III. A Room in the Emperor Frederick's Suite.

The Play produced by SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER.

The Scenery Painted by G. SACKMANN.

Dresses by BAROTTI Hats by LUSH Wigs by C[illegible]SON

Appointments by ERNEST RENTON

THE TIMES

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

A warning which heads the St. James's playbill about Kings and Queens having five fingers to each hand and taking their meals regularly seems a little superfluous. It would be strange indeed if the labours of innumerable historians, memoir-writers, and backstairs gossips had left the rest of us in any doubt on this point. That Kings and Queens are, after all, men and women and cannot help behaving "as sich," is a postulate which any playwright may safely take for granted. Indeed, if he writes about the private lives of Kings and Queens, it is quite another sort of justification that we expect from him. If you show your personages, we may say, in the aspect wherein they are just like everybody else, why trouble to give them Royal labels? The answer is that Kings and Queens are not, and cannot be, exactly like other people even in their private lives. There is a certain difference, slight but appreciable, peculiar to the position, and it is precisely that slight difference which we look to the playwright to bring out.

Obviously the difference has occurred to Mr. Besier; our only doubt is whether he has made enough of it. To begin with, Kings and Queens have, to put it moderately, more limited opportunity of hearing those plain truths about themselves and their behaviour with which the rest of us are so lavishly favoured by our friends and neighbours. Hence, having less chance of self-modification, they must tend to develop more angular angles and more highly-coloured prejudices. In this superior freedom and wealth of idiosyncrasy they become, of course, a natural prey for the dramatist. Thus mothers-in-law of all social classes—it is their immemorial stage privilege—are old-fashioned, crotchety, and tyrannical; but Mr. Besier's Queen Mother will, just because of the privileges—which are in this aspect disadvantages—of her royalty, exhibit these qualities in their superlative degree. If she considers smoking abominable and the "one-step" disgraceful, and dowdy gowns an integral part of woman's virtue, there is nothing for it but to bow and say, "Yes, ma'am." But when she bullies her daughter-in-law, just as though the pair were Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Brown, junr., of Brixton, we begin to wonder whether Mr. Besier is not confusing likeness to the common people with identity. It is true that Mrs. Brown, junr.—we beg pardon, H.M. Queen Charlotte—is herself partly to blame, being more Brixtonian than Royal in her behaviour, but if she forgets that she is a Queen-Consort, with a private life which is only the other side of a public life in some kingdom or other, that is hardly reason why the Queen Mother, not to mention Mr. Besier, should forget it, too.

A Royal "Viveur."

Another Royal immunity or disadvantage, whichever way you choose to look at it, touches a point of morals. It is needless to discuss why the world has always had an indulgent eye for Royal "flirtations"; the fact is beyond question. Mr. Besier strains nothing, then, in showing us an Emperor Frederick IV. who gives presents of diamond garters to countesses and ogles the mannequins who are displaying the young Queen's gowns. These peccadillos are amusing touches in a familiar stage-character, which is of self-indulgence and sentiment all compact, the character of the good-hearted, well-fed, well-groomed uncle—whose relations to fair ladies are not exclusively avuncular. But would it occur to anyone, who had not looked at the playbill, that this amiable, philandering, mundane, elderly viveur is also an Emperor? About his nephew, King Richard VIII., we cannot, to be sure, be in the same degree of doubt. We do, at any rate, hear of his Royal position.

He says expressly it is his ideal of kingship that has led him to oppose an austere negative to all the girlish impulses of his wife. "I never thought you felt like this about it, my boy," says the naturally-discomposed Imperial viveur, and indeed we had never thought so either, for King Richard only disclosed his kingly ideals casually, when the play was half over, and, as it were, by way of finding some tardy reason of State for having behaved inconsiderately to his wife because he was under his mother's thumb. Reason of State! Indeed, it is the only reference to State in the play. So seduloulsy has Mr. Besier confined himself to the private lives of his kings and queens that you would never suspect them of having any other life, any empires, kingdoms, and peoples to govern. Stay! The young King does say when his Queen runs away with her cousin, that he will be the laughing-stock of the "whole world." Had he been a private person it would have been merely the whole county or the whole terrace. But this is simple mensuration.

Our feeling about the play, then, is that the playwright, in his anxiety to show us how Royal people on their domestic side resemble other people, has not sufficiently insisted on the nuance which differentiates them from other people. This nuance is all the more important because the story without it is mere theatrical "common form," the story of the frivolous girl-wife, who, to escape the tyranny of her mother-in-law, runs away from a wooden husband with a plausible cousin who plays the piano.

But if the story is common form, that, of course, only proves that it is inherently a good story. Somehow or other we all like to see girl-wives running away from wooden husbands, so long as they think better of it immediately and return to rout mamma-in-law and live happily ever afterwards—especially when the girl-wife can be so winsomely girlish as Miss Marie Lohr and when the wooden husband can be turned into so hot a firebrand as Mr. Wontner in the last act. And oh! don't we just all like to see Sir George Alexander being once more the sentimental, polished elderly viveur! A crowded house immensely enjoyed these performances on Saturday night, and not only these, but the capital work done by Miss Frances Ivor as the Early Victorian Queen Mother and by Mr. Ben Webster as the piano-playing cousin. Ultimately Sir George had to drag the reluctant author on the stage and to make a little speech of thanks.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

LONDON, TUESDAY, OCT. 26.

DRURY LANE PANTOMIME.

At the annual meeting of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, yesterday, the report presented by the directors showed that, owing to the abnormal conditions prevailing since August 1914, the result of the year's operations was a loss of £9,542. To meet this, £8,000 had been transferred from the reserve fund. Owing to the continuance of the war, the directors had reluctantly come to the conclusion that they would not be justified in producing an autumn drama as well as the pantomime. "In order, however, not to break the traditions of so many years," continued the report, "it has been decided to produce the annual pantomime as usual on Boxing Night, and so preserve what has always proved a most attractive feature of the children's holiday season. The pantomime will be founded on the well-known story of 'Puss in Boots,' and will be written by Messrs. George R. Sims, Frank Dix, and Arthur Collins."

Mr. T. H. Birch (chairman) having pointed out that the financial position was sound, and that £10,000 had been invested in the first War Loan, Mr. Arthur Collins (managing director) said "Puss in Boots" had not been staged at the theatre since 1887, and promised one of the strongest casts yet seen there. Finally the chairman promised that consideration should be given to suggestions offered by two other speakers—one favouring afternoon performances and the other proposing that evening performances should begin an hour earlier.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

THEATRE DIRECTORSHIPS.

Mr. George Dance and Mr. W. B. Purefoy have resigned from the directorate of both the Adelphi and Gaiety Theatres. The new directors elected to the board of the Adelphi Theatre are Sir Ernest Cochrane, Mr. William Boosey, and Mr. E. W. Royce. Mr. George Edwardes will shortly announce a new play for this theatre. The vacancies at the Gaiety Theatre have not yet been filled.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS.

CREDITORS ACCEPT HIS PROPOSAL.

The creditors under the failure of Mr. Seymour Hicks, the well-known actor, again met at Bankruptcy Buildings to-day for the purpose of voting upon a scheme of arrangement lodged by the debtor. This provided for the payment of a composition of 6s. 8d. in the £ to creditors, Mrs. Hicks, a creditor for £26,000, unconditionally releasing her debt.

The debtor undertakes to set aside £1,040 per annum out of his earnings and pay it to the trustee under the scheme by quarterly instalments of £260 towards payment of the composition, and also to hand over to him any plays and sketches that he may write or cinema contracts into which he may enter.

The scheme also provided that Mr. Hicks's assets should vest in the trustee, including all his rights in existing plays, sketches, etc.

The debtor's statement of affairs showed ranking liabilities £38,327, and the Official Receiver estimated that about £4,817 would be required to pay the composition. He considered that if the debtor's estimate of the realisable value of his assets were correct the scheme was reasonable and calculated to benefit creditors, and provided that the guarantees proposed to be given were satisfactory, the security required by the Act was forthcoming.

Mr. Hicks was not in attendance, and it was stated by Mr. Stanley Passmore, who appeared on his behalf, that the debtor was fulfilling an engagement at Birmingham, playing three times a day most days and twice the others.

The scheme was duly carried.

R.M.9 — 16/10/15

An Angel's Luck.

One of the luckiest "angels" that ever entered the heaven of the London theatres is Mr. Jowett, a wealthy Yorkshire manufacturer, who has a big interest in several London successes. An "angel," according to the theatrical glossary, is one who, having no technical knowledge of management, invests money in play ventures. The history of "angels" is a history of almost endless losses; but where other "angels" did not fear to tread Mr. Jowett thought that he would go. Think of his luck—he has a share of each of the following:—"Potash and Perlmutter," "Peg o' My Heart," "To-night's the Night," and "On Trial," and the big share, too, in more than one of them.

J. W. & W. D. 9/5/15

The Weekly Dispatch

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House E.C.

ORIGINAL DISPATCH

OCTOBER 17, 1915

The Stage.

LONDON, THURSDAY, OCT. 14, 1915.

The Gaiety Theatre Company.

The shareholders in the Gaiety Company had not a very inspiriting balance-sheet to face at their annual general meeting on Tuesday. A debit balance of £18,645 was disclosed. However, the chairman, Mr. Alfred Butt, took a hopeful view of the future, a promising start having been made with To-night's the Night. The report stated that a very heavy loss had been made the first ten months of the financial year, but from April 23—the date of the production of To-night's the Night, upon sharing terms with Messrs. Grossmith and Laurillard—the company has been making a substantial profit weekly. The directors have thought it advisable to write down the stage properties and rights in plays, scenes, etc., account to the amount of £9,027. The revenue account shows that expenses amounted to £19,083, and receipts to £10,343, leaving an adverse balance of £8,740. Adding to this the loss on sale of investment, £1,461, and the amount written off stage properties, £9,027, and deducting the balance at July 4, 1914, of £583, there was a debit balance of £18,645. Mr. Alfred Butt, referring to the death of Mr. George Edwardes, said it was largely due to his genius in the past that the name of the Gaiety was a household word and held a unique position in the theatrical world. It would be idle to deny the fact that the Gaiety, for the last two or three years prior to the production of To-night's the Night, had fallen upon evil days; but when it was stated that during this period Mr. Edwardes, owing to his ill-health, was unable to exercise a close supervision of the company's affairs, it would be realised that it was through his physical inability that there was a temporary lapse in the prosperity of the company.

A Meeting Without Snap.

There was not a trace of the old-time "snap" in the proceedings associated with the annual general meeting of the Gaiety Theatre shareholders, held on the stage at noon on Tuesday. The shareholders had lost their spirit. When they owned the whole of the sixty thousand pound capital and got a rousing dividend on it every year (one year excepted) they were an active, sometimes critical, but nearly always an amusing community of men and women. Last Tuesday they were listless, dull, and sleepy—not a fight in them. One old gentleman started to criticise, but was pulled up very quickly. "If the 'No Treating' Bill was not passed it would have him operating on a Manhattan cocktail," whispered one shareholder. "In a hurry to get to the City, and in truth the shareholder represented every shareholder—they were all in a hurry to get away.

Mr. Alfred Butt (the chairman), who has been only a few weeks on the board, explained the position. During the two years' absence of Mr. George Edwardes due to ill-health the company suffered for want of his able direction. The company's debts amounted to £20,000, and when things were very bad a few months ago a shareholder guaranteed an issue of £30,000 worth of profit-sharing debentures. "To-night's the Night" has been making a weekly profit for many months, but, as the Gaiety company has only half-share in that venture with Messrs. Laurillard and Grossmith, the shareholders do not get all the profit. Messrs. Laurillard and Grossmith get half of it and the other half is divided between the shareholders and the debenture owners. What a difference for the shareholders if their directors had produced this success themselves!

A Guarantee of £30,000.

The man who guaranteed the issue of £30,000 worth of Gaiety Theatre debentures and actually holds £22,000 worth is Mr. Frank Gould, the son of the late Jay Gould. He lives in Paris, and is married to a very charming lady who used to dance at the Gaiety eight years ago. He is the largest holder of the ordinary shares of the Gaiety Theatre, having bought a few years ago about ten thousand £1 shares at prices considerably above par. Mr. Gould is also about the largest, if not the largest shareholder in the company that produces musical plays at the Adelphi Theatre. He is a large shareholder in the Victoria Palace, and also in the company formed by Mr. Alfred Butt to build and manage a great modern music-hall in Paris. He is very astute, and has enormous faith in A. B. He never uses three words if two will do.

Mr. Frank Gould's Interests.

GARRICK THEATRE

ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH

On SATURDAY, JANUARY 23rd, 1915, at 2.30, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30.

Matinees WEDNESDAYS, THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.30.

"THE GIRL IN THE TAXI"

A Mus... By ... From the ...

CHARACTERS

Baron Duvray ... of the Academy
Baroness Delphine ...
Jacqueline (Their D...
Hubert (Their Son ...
Rene (Their Nephe...
Mariette (Their Ho...
Monsieur Pomare ... of Tours)
Suzanne (His Wife ...
Professor Charcot ...
Rose ... ...
Alexis (Head Waiter of the "Jeunesse Dorée")
Emile, Felix, Charlotte, Tina, Mimi, Phyrnette, Irma, Fraisette, Céleste, Godet, Paillasson, Vivarell — Waiters

Stars ... "Je... Girls

Habitues of the "Jeunesse Dorée"

... MAUDE ...
... MARIE ... JENSON
... LORNA ELLA
... PEGGY HARVAN
... LILY DRUMMOND
... OLGA SOMERVILLE
... PAUL HANSELL
... SYDNEY HOLLISTER
... CHARLES KEMBLE

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

[illegible] Thursday Evening, 23rd 191[illegible] at 8

1376th PERFORMANCE IN LONDON

FIRST [illegible] SEASON

OF

A CHINESE HONEYMOON

[illegible] PRODUCED BY FRANK CURZON

[illegible] WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT [illegible]

[illegible]ers, J.

A Long Runner.

In the last week of the present month Mr. Frank Curzon will revive "A Chinese Honeymoon" at the Prince of Wales Theatre. It was the first play he produced in his own name in London, and the date was October 5, 1901. It got a run of 1,075 performances at the Strand Theatre, and previous to that had toured the provinces for two years. The part of the heroine was originated at the Strand Theatre by Miss Beatrice Edwardes, and after a year she was succeeded by an actress from the provinces—Miss Lily Elsie—who went touring again when the play was withdrawn on May 25, 1904. The public never suspected then that three years later Mr. George Edwardes was to make Miss Elsie a famous "star" by giving her the same part in his production of "The Merry Widow."

Royal Opera House

COVENT GARDEN

Under the Patronage and in the Presence of
Their Majesties

THE KING AND QUEEN

A

Matinée

In Aid of the

ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND

Tuesday, 2 February, 1915

The National Anthem

Madame KIRKBY LUNN

The School for Scandal

By RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN

Sir Peter Teazle	Sir HERBERT TREE
Sir Oliver Surface	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Sir Harry Bumper	Mr. BEN DAVIES
Sir Benjamin Backbite	Mr. H. V. ESMOND
Joseph Surface	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Charles Surface	Mr. FRED TERRY
Careless	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Snake	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
Crabtree	Mr. WILLIAM FARREN
Rowley	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE
Moses	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Sir Toby	Mr. OWEN NARES
Trip	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Servant to Joseph	Sir GEORGE ALEXANDER
Servant to Lady Sneerwell	Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Servant to Sir Peter	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Servant to Charles	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Lady Teazle	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
Mrs. Candour	Lady TREE
Lady Sneerwell	Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER
Maria	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
Maid to Lady Teazle	Miss ELLALINE TERRISS
Maid to Lady Sneerwell	Miss EVA MOORE

The Play produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT

ACT I

SCENE 1. Lady Sneerwell's Boudoir SCENE 2. Sir Peter's House
SCENE 3. Lady Sneerwell's Drawing Room

The Song in this Scene sung by Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
AND
The Minuet arranged by LOUIS HARVEY D'EGVILLE

ACT II

SCENE 1. Drawing Room at Sir Peter's SCENE 2. Hall in Charles Surface's House
SCENE 3. Picture Room at Charles Surface's

ACT III

The Library at Joseph's Surface's

ACT IV

SCENE 1. Sir Peter's House SCENE 2. The Library at Joseph Surface's

Ladies and Gentlemen taking part in the "Minuet"

Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS
Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Miss STELLA CAMPBELL
Mlle. ADELINE GENÉE
Miss MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Miss DORIS LYTTON
Miss DOROTHY MINTO
Miss PHYLLIS MONKMAN
Miss HILDA MOORE
Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Miss JESSIE WINTER

Mr. J. V. BRYANT
Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
Mr. H. V. ESMOND
Mr. BASIL GILL
Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Mr. OWEN NARES
Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER

Lady Sneerwell's Guests

Miss LENA ASHWELL
Miss MURIEL BARNBY
Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Miss FRANCES DILLON
Miss MARY FORRESTER
Miss MAY FORTESCUE
Miss MARGARET HALSTAN
Miss EVELYN MILLARD
Miss MARY MOORE
Miss JULIA NEILSON
Miss OLGA NETHERSOLE
Miss LOTTIE VENNE

Mr. J. H. BARNES
Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Mr. HOLMES-GORE
Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Mr. GERALD LAWRENCE
Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Mr. ROBERT PATEMAN
Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE

The Costumes and Scenery designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

And painted by JOSEPH HARKER and WALTER HANN

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

THE KING & QUEEN AT COVENT GARDEN.

£2,300 FOR ACTORS' CHARITY

The King and Queen were present at Covent Garden Theatre yesterday afternoon at a special performance of "The School for Scandal," given by our leading actors in aid of the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

Punctually at 2.30 their Majesties arrived in the royal box, and as the vast audience rose the lights were subdued. The orchestra, under Mr. Landon Ronald, struck up the National Anthem. Mme. Kirkby Lunn sang it, and in a moment the whole house was singing with her. It was the most affecting and impressive rendering of the anthem that could be imagined. It was the first visit the King and Queen had paid to a theatre since the war began.

PLAY WITH A "STAR" CAST.

The play was performed with a "star" cast. Hardly a part, however small, but was allotted to some well-known figure of the London theatres, and although some acting disappointments must occur when the characters, as on such an occasion as this, have to be allotted to players of reputation—independent of their fitness to play them—the representation of the famous comedy was, all round, a good one.

Sir George Alexander, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. H. B. Irving, and Mr. Weedon Grossmith were content to appear as the servants of the leading characters, and Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Margaret Halstan, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Olga Nethersole, Miss Julia Neilson, Mr. Sydney Valentine, Mr. O. B. Clarence, Mr. Charles V. France, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Gerald Lawrence, Mr. A. E. George, and many others, were also quite satisfied to appear in "walk-on" parts.

Mr. Ben Davies played the part of Sir Harry Bumper, and was encored for his singing of "Here's to the Maiden."

The production of the play was in the hands of Mr. Dion Boucicault, and it was by no means his fault that the pace was too slow. His stage-management was admirable, his stage pictures were beautiful, and in Sir Herbert Tree and Miss Irene Vanbrugh he had a most excellent Sir Peter Teazle, and a most delightful Lady Teazle. There were many others, too, who scored successes yesterday, notably Mr. Louis Calvert, Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Henry Ainley, Mr. William Farren, and consequently the audience was satisfied.

Before the fourth and last act Sir Charles Wyndham announced that the charity had benefited by the matinée to the amount of £2,300, and about six o'clock a notable performance of a famous play came to a close.

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S

PRODUCTION OF

"A BUSY DAY"

An Original Farce in Three Acts,

By R. C. CARTON.

Characters.

Lord Charles Temperleigh ..	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Marquis of Pentreath	Mr. E. H. KELLY
Hon. Slingsby Rooke	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
Major Goadby	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Mr. Spenser Garrington	Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
Mr. Richard Travers	Mr. EDGAR PAYNE
Tigwell	Mr. W. CORRIE
Rafferty	Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD
Bingham	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Chauffeur	Mr. CHARLES LASCELLES
Boy	Master CHARLIE WADE
Adela Goadby	Miss DORIS LYTTON
Miss Soady	Miss MONA HARRISON
Preeson	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Mrs. Tigwell	Miss HETTIE CAVENDISH
	AND
Mrs. Cosmo Garrington ..	Miss COMPTON

ACT I. ... ... The Bungalow, Ashford

ACT II. ... ... A Chandler's Shop in Mudborough

ACT III ... ... Lord Charles' Flat in Jermyn Street

Miss Compton's Costume by Mdme. BAROLET.

Miss Lytton's Costume and Hat by ANN TALBOT, LTD., 5 George Street, Hanover Square.

Scenery constructed by J. BRUNSKILL and painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by J. S. LYON.

THE MOTOR CAR in 1st Act supplied by THE FORD MOTOR CO., LTD.

PRECEDED AT 8 O'CLOCK BY

Mr. CHARLES CORY - - Entertainer

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

THE J. H. SQUIRE CÉLESTE SEXTETTE

will select from the following Repertoire.*

1	FANTASIA BRILLANTE	Hubay
2	RHAPSODIE IN C MINOR	Liszt
3	VALSE DE CONCERT...	Durand
4	DANSE NEGRE (A Study on Black Keys)	Ascher
5	SERENADE CELESTE	Squire
6	RHAPSODIE No. 14	Liszt
7	VALSE BRILLANTE IN A FLAT	Moszkowski
8	2nd POLONAISE	Wieniawski
9	LE VONT DU SOIR	Langey
10	AUTOMNE	Chaminade
11	OPERATIC FANTASIAS (Changed at each Performance) ...	Godard
12	2nd MAZURKA	Mendelssohn
13	FINALE FROM CONCERTO IN E	Chopin-Sarasate
14	NOCTURNE IN E FLAT
15	CHANSONS POPULAIRE (Various)	Squire
16	"THE MAN OF THE MOMENT"

Grand Piano by MURDOCH & MURDOCH.

The Repertoire mainly consists of special arrangements which are exclusive to the Sextette.*

MATINEE

Every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.15.

Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	... Mr. B. CAMPLIN-SMITH
Assist. Stage Manager		... Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager ...		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone Gerrard 3243.

Nearest Station, PICCADILLY CIRCUS (Tube).

General Manager ... ...(for Mr. Tom B. Davis)... ... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

LAST NIGHT'S NEW PLAY.

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY AND MISS COMPTON IN "A BUSY DAY."

In 'A Busy Day," the new three-act farce by R. C. Carton, which Mr. Charles Hawtrey produced at the Apollo Theatre last night, the author is not quite at his best. The play is amusing, no doubt, and the audience showed their appreciation of it by much laughter, but it was difficult to concentrate a great deal of interest on the doings of the two principal characters in the plot—played by Mr. Hawtrey and Miss Compton. The author himself was to blame for this weakness, and the wonder is how he could have expected us to accept with conviction the adventures of two middle-aged people who "annexed" a motor-car to escape from their guardians, and pawned some of the gentleman's garments to buy railway tickets to London.

The humour of "A Busy Day" arises from the fact that an impecunious gentleman refuses to marry a rich widow whom he has never seen, and that the widow on her side will have no hand in a scheme to ally herself to a man whose name she has never heard. When these two people—each unaware of the identity of the other—happen by accident to be thrown together and mutually agree to assist each other to escape from the guardians that would marry them, the plot that gives the title to the farce is supposed to get going. It never, however, gets going very fast, and never gets very funny. They make use of a motor they found outside a hotel to escape to a neighbouring town where the gentleman knew that his old nurse kept a grocer's shop. Finding, however, on arrival at the shop that the old woman had no ready money the gentleman sent her out to pawn some of his garments, and in her absence he and the unknown partner of his "busy day" attended to the freak customers who entered the shop. So far so busy. In the third and last act the two adventurers learned who the other was, and in this final instalment of the play there was much more fun than could be found in the whole of the first two acts. It at least brought on a very absurd Irish waiter, who was made as funny by Mr. Edward Fitzgerald as the part would allow, and he certainly made the chief success of the farce.

Miss Doris Lytton got no opportunity to do more than look charming, and Mr. Hawtrey had few big chances to score in any of the scenes in which he took part.

PLAYGOER.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

ACTOR-MANAGER FOR 25 YEARS.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER'S SUCCESSES.

SUPPORTER OF ENGLISH PLAYS.

Twenty-five years ago to-day Sir George Alexander became for the first time an actor-manager by producing at the Avenue Theatre—now the Playhouse—a farce, adapted from the French, called "Doctor Bill."

During that long period Sir George has created for himself a reputation wholly independent of the play in which he may happen to appear, but when he launched out for himself in London in those far-off days he had, he admitted, little to support his name beyond a long engagement under Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theatre and a shorter one with Messrs. A. and S. Gatti at the Adelphi Theatre in the drama called "London Day by Day."

He came into his own, however, well equipped for an acter and a manager. After some years' business training in London, with a great deal of Scottish common sense to appreciate it, some preliminary experience as an amateur in London and three years as an actor in the provinces taught him all that a young actor could well learn; and when Sir Henry Irving was arranging to produce "The Two Roses" in London he offered Mr. Alexander a place in the company. He remained with Sir Henry several years and played with him in America.

When at last a production occurred at the Lyceum Theatre in which there was no part for him he was offered the leading part in a new drama at the Adelphi Theatre, and from that went into management on his own account at the Avenue Theatre on February 1, 1890. Twelve months later he became lessee of St. James's Theatre, and there in undisputed control—without partner and without help—he has built up a reputation for that house and himself that is now world-wide.

PRODUCER OF MANY PLAYS.

At St James's Theatre Sir George Alexander has been one of the most consistent supporters of English dramatists, and has to his name the credit of producing a greater number of new plays—that have made fame—than perhaps any other actor-manager of his time. Among them may be mentioned Sir Arthur Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan" and "The Importance of Being Earnest," Mr. Stephen Phillips's "Paolo and Francesca," Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy's "If I Were King," and Mr. Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner of Zenda."

These are only a very few of the successes he has produced, and whether the public has been attracted or not he has gone on presenting plays he considered worthy, in each instance chosen by his own unaided judgment.

St. James's Theatre has, under his management, become an institution in London, and although Sir George will admit that he would do more for the playgoer if the playgoer would only allow him—for instance, protect the punctual arrivals by closing the doors just before the curtain goes up—he smilingly accepts the inevitable and takes it as gracefully as he does his popularity.

He can boast of having been commanded by Queen Victoria to play at Balmoral and by King Edward to appear at Sandringham. He can claim to be the only actor-manager who was a member of the London County Council, and, in the words of a clever critic, "he has created on the stage the average man of the world."

When he is in need of a rest from that world he retires to a cottage at Chorley Wood.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

GIFTS TO SIR G. ALEXANDER.

St. James's Theatre was well filled yesterday afternoon with friends of Sir George Alexander, who gathered to congratulate him on his attainment of twenty-five years of actor-managership and to present souvenirs of the event. For the little ceremony of the presentation the stage was set to represent a library, and into this apartment Mrs. Kendal came, accompanied by Sir George and Lady Alexander.

She was the spokeswoman for the hundreds of friends who sat in front, and she told how, many, many years ago, when she first met Sir George, she said, "I hope he is as nice as he looks," and the answer to that, made by a friend of hers, was, "Boyhood is always nice." "Sir George," she continued, "very soon grew to be what is called a matinée idol, and still, in spite of the 'silver threads among the gold,' we all remain his faithful admirers."

Mrs. Kendal presented Sir George Alexander with a George II. silver cup of the year 1746 and also with a cheque for £200 to give to charity. To Lady Alexander she handed a beautiful silver salver, and reminded her that she had taught her friends the true Biblical meaning of the word "helpmeet." Sir George made a short, graceful speech of thanks.

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Under the Management of Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, AND EVERY EVENING AT 9.

The Successful Three-Act Farce,

ARE YOU A MASON?

(By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.)

Amos Bloodgood	Mr. E. DAGNALL
Frank Perry (his Son-in-law)	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
George Fisher	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
John Halton	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Ernest Morrison (a Mason, a young Architect)	Mr. AUSTIN FAIRMAN
Hamilton Travers (of the Folly Theatre)	Mr. ROLLO BALMAIN
P.C. XX	Mr. FRANK LESTER
Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Eva, Mrs. Perry (Mrs. Bloodgood's Daughters)	Miss DULCE MUSGRAVE
Lulu (Mrs. Bloodgood's Daughters)	Miss MARGERY SARGENT
Annie (Mrs. Bloodgood's Daughters)	Miss JOAN HAY
Mrs. Halton	Miss AGNES MAUDE
Franchon Armitage (from Mad. Jolivet)	Miss INEZ VILNA
Lottie	Miss LUCY EDWIN

ACT I.	... ...	MORNING.	SITTING ROOM IN FRANK PERRY'S HOUSE
ACT II.	... ...	AFTERNOON.	" " "
ACT III.	... ...	EVENING.	" " "

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. CHARLES H. WILLIAMS.

Miss Marie Illington's Dresses by HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47-48 New Bond Street.

Miss Musgrave's Dresses and Hat in Act I. by VIOLA, South Molton Street, W.

Fanchon's Dresses by VIOLA, South Molton Street, W.

Miss Joan Hay and Miss Sargent's Dresses in Act III. by ELIZABETH GORTON, 20 South Molton St.

Preceded at 2.30 and 8.30 by

Mr. COOPER MITCHELL at the Piano.

Grand Piano supplied by GEO. ROBERS & SON, 60 Berners Street, W.

FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd, and EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY FOLLOWING AT 2.30.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. WILLIAM C. MASON

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 5724 GERRARD.

Business Manager ... ... LEONARD LILLIES

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1915.

POPULAR SPY PLAYS.

SOME PROSPEROUS THEATRES.

By JAMES WATERS.

The theatres of London have so far come fairly successfully through the stress of the war.

Six months of war has altered, without ruining, as was in the early days of the great conflict expected it would do, the people engaged in providing the theatre entertainments of London. Almost one of the first things that the managers of the theatres and variety houses were compelled to do was to reduce expenses. By the exercise of tact and judgment that has in every instance been done. The only expenses that managers have failed to reduce are rents and taxes. Matters were made easier for managers when actors and actresses and variety artists almost immediately and almost unanimously agreed to accept salaries considerably below those they were accustomed to receive in normal times.

The theatres, too, with three or four exceptions, advertised and have rigidly kept to a new system of reduced prices of admission. The war also has put an end, for the present at all events, to extravagant mounting of plays. Tens of thousands of pounds have been saved in that way during the past six months, and the fairly general policy of reviving old and popular plays has made this economy easier. The gross receipts of the London theatres for the past six months have not been nearly equal to those of the corresponding period in any recent year. On the other hand, the failures have been much fewer, and the losses where there have been failures have in only very rare instances been serious.

* * * * *

Under present conditions the theatres that shelter unqualified successes—and there are a few such—are making much less money than they would be doing if times were normal; on the other hand, the lower cost of running theatres and offering the public cheaper seats have allowed a great number of theatres to be kept open and so give an immense amount of employment to people who have no other means of earning a living than is to be found on or near the stage.

At present about twenty-six or twenty-seven of the thirty-three West End theatres are open; not one of the nine music-halls of the central amusement area is closed; and, if one might form an opinion of the business being done at kinemas by the lungs of the "barkers" who stand at their doors, they at least are doing a roaring business.

It may be of interest to note here that the long threatened invasion of London by American dramatists seems now more likely than ever to be brought off. At the moment there are only two American pieces being performed—namely, "Potash and Perlmutter" and "Peg o' My Heart," each, it may be remarked, a great success; but the number of new ones that have been bought in New York this winter for production in London is, to say the least of it, prodigious.

Theatreland suffered a heavy blow when the order came last autumn to reduce all forms of street lighting; closing the restaurants before the supper hour has not been helpful either. People who go to the play like to go there through brightly lighted streets, and there are many of a mind with the young "blood" who swore that "supper at a restaurant afterwards was the only thing that made the drama possible."

* * * * *

Supper or no supper, London has become more or less habituated to the feeling of perpetual fog that sets in after dark. All the experiments that managers attempted on a simple-minded theatregoing public in the autumn (mostly to "save daylight") have been discarded. One only has been retained—reduced prices. The scheme of daily matinées and only one evening performance that Sir Herbert Tree initiated, and that several other managers also adopted, has been abandoned. So also has the hastily tried plan attempted at Daly's Theatre of starting at seven o'clock. The normal hour has resumed its sway. At the Garrick Theatre they tried the experiment of "twice nightly." It was a war drama too that they gave thus, and yet scheme and play—as far as Theatreland is concerned—ended there after eight nights.

The London public at present will take a war play in good part, but it will simply hug a "spy" play. The Royalty Theatre gave London a spy play on December 10—a spy play with a wireless installation in the breakfast parlour of an east coast lodging house—and the Royalty Theatre is full of people eight times a week watching the work of the villains and their final capture and destruction.

Little war plays with wicked Uhlans, frightened heroines, and brave men flourished, mainly in the music-halls, let it be said, in the early days of the great struggle, and now the "spy" play has dispossessed them. Mr. H. B. Irving has, it is whispered, a spy play in rehearsal for production at the Savoy Theatre on Thursday evening, and its title, "Searchlights," is promising. One hears, too, amid the cry of "Walk up, walk up," of syndicates and managers, the echo of a call from the actors of the Belgian-London colony at the Criterion Theatre to come there and see "La Kommandatur," a war play of Belgium as it is under the occupation, with a real German spy, too, in the story. Yes, Theatreland has many novelties. One of them is a company of clever French actors and English actors working together, giving a real witty revue every night in London at the Ambassadors Theatre to an audience of all nationalities; and at the Alhambra Theatre all London crowding to see a burlesque of the most English of institutions, a pantomime—the most English of pantomimes, too—"Robinson Crusoe." What a contradiction in terms and conventions!

* * * * *

At the eastern end of Theatreland there has been a company of Belgian artists playing a drama of "The Cloister," a drama acted in French, written by a Belgian dramatist, and played by Belgians. Among the other signs that indicate the temper of the times is that a Russian play which was announced for production in early September was put aside at once as unsuitable by the London manager who had paid for it. Its story was not sympathetic with our Ally, and that sufficed him.

It is curious that London should have supported its Theatreland so well as it has done through this six months of war. New York, nearly 3,000 miles from the firing lines of the European nations engaged in the great conflict, has not had as good a winter season with its theatres as London is having.

THE TIMES

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915.

A THEATRICAL MANAGER'S BANKRUPTCY.

IN RE FARADAY.

(Before Mr. Registrar Hood.)

An application for an order of discharge was made by Mr. Philip Michael Faraday, theatrical manager, who was adjudged bankrupt on August 27, 1914. The trustee had reported that the admitted proofs of debt and the probable claims amounted to £11,531. The assets had so far realized £28 2s. 3d., and £155 more might be received.

Mr. Daniel Williams, Assistant Official Receiver, attended; Mr. E. W. Hansell appeared for the trustee; Mr. G. F. Kingham for a creditor; and Mr. G. C. Rankin for the bankrupt.

The bankrupt, who had been a surveyor and estate agent, had since 1909 been interested in the production at the Lyric Theatre of The Chocolate Soldier, Nightbirds, The Five Frankforters, and The Girl in the Taxi. A large profit was made on The Chocolate Soldier and The Girl in the Taxi; the two other plays were produced at a loss. The bankrupt attributed his insolvency to the failure of N.L.T. (Limited), to which in March, 1913, he sold his interest in the Lyric Theatre, The Chocolate Soldier, and The Girl in the Taxi.

Mr. Rankin said that the bankrupt, if he obtained his discharge, would be in a position to earn £1,500 a year as a rating surveyor. He was willing to consent to judgment for £3,000, payable by yearly instalments of £500, and to pay £200 of the first instalment before the order of discharge was signed.

Mr. Registrar Hood granted the discharge on these terms.

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, JULY 18, 1915.

* * *

A return of societies which gave cinematograph entertainments on Sundays during the period from April 1, 1914, to March 31, 1915, in premises licensed by the London County Council shows that the total gross receipts were £181,944 12s. 4d. Of this amount £103,012 0s. 6d. was paid in respect of rent, out-of-pocket expenses, and films; £45,901 0s. 4d. was expended on wages for the staff employed on Sundays; and £33,031 11s. 6d. (18.1 per cent. of the total receipts) represents the net profit made by the societies.

* * *

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, MARCH 7, 1915.

* * *

The ordinary general meeting of the Empire Palace, Limited, will be held at the Empire, Leicester-square, next Friday at noon. The directors' report for the year ended Dec. 31 last shows a loss of £4,642 12s. 9d., and it is not proposed to pay a dividend. I am sorry to hear that, owing to ill-health, Mr. Walter Dickson has resigned his seat on the board, for Mr. Dickson was intimately associated with many of the Empire's most prosperous years.

* * *

THE REFEREE.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 14, 1915.

* * *

The annual ordinary general meeting of the Alhambra Company, Limited, will be held at the Alhambra on Feb. 23, at 12.30 p.m. The directors' report for the year ended Dec. 31 last shows that the total receipts were £103,479, and the gross profit, after transferring £2,000 to renewals reserve account, amounted to £11,024. The directors propose a dividend of five per cent., which, considering the circumstances, is an excellent result, and it is good to see the Alhambra once more among the dividend-paying London variety theatres.

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1915.

Sir,—May I in the midst of profound grief be allowed to express a humble opinion as to what I conceive to be one's duty in the colossal task that we have before us? The outcry of certain people against all forms of entertainment and recreation during this crisis seems to me a false cry. To "entertain" means to engage the attention and to occupy it agreeably, and to "recreate" means to refresh. Many of us earn our livelihood in ways that appear not vital to national existence. But what is vital? At the present moment all that is vital to our existence as a nation is the wherewithal to carry on the war to a successful issue. It is our duty to provide this first and foremost. Equally with this it is surely our duty to provide those who are dependent on us with the necessities of life. There are hundreds of thousands of men and women unfit and unqualified to help their country in a direct way at the present moment, but for whom paid employment is as individually vital as our national existence. Is it not better for such as cannot fight for their country to earn a living even in racing stables, in theatres, and music-halls, or as novelists, artists, musicians—in fact in a hundred other ways—rather than starve or live upon the charity of the already overburdened ratepayer? Looking at it from an economic point of view the question presents an aspect that is vital, not only to those who are directly concerned, but to the millions who are only indirectly affected. The manufacture and consumption of the superfluities of life outweigh the necessities to an extent impossible to calculate. To stop racing, to close theatres and music-halls, to put an end for the time to literature, art, music, and—if we are to be logical—to cease the consumption of wines, the manufacture of spirits, beer, tobacco, jewelry, or even the cultivation of flowers, must inevitably result in a reduced circulation of money and a corresponding increase of taxation, which would prove the ultimate ruin of those few industries vital to the existence of a great nation.

Yours faithfully,

GERALD DU MAURIER.

21, Cumberland-terrace, Regent's Park, N.W.,
March 12.

The Financial Times

TUESDAY, 16th FEB., 1915.

GAIETY THEATRE.

RECONSTRUCTION PROPOSALS.

SHARE ASSESSMENT OR DEBENTURE ISSUE?

An extra-ordinary meeting of the Gaiety Theatre Company has been called for Friday next for the purpose of considering reconstruction proposals. At the annual meeting on 24th September last Messrs. W. Boosey, J. B. Concanon and J. W. Woodhouse were appointed an Advisory Committee as representing the shareholders to confer with the Board and report on the general position. The committee have arrived at the conclusion that the Company should be reconstructed and that the funds needed for working capital should be provided by forming a new concern with the same capital as at present, but with only 15s per £1 share credited as paid up. The 5s levy would bring in £15,000. The Directors, on the other hand, do not think this sum large enough, and suggest as an alternative that £30,000 Six per Cent. Profit-sharing Debentures should be offered to the shareholders. The proprietors have accordingly to choose between these proposals. The Directors have invited each shareholder to state how many Debentures he will take up, and should promises to the amount of more than £25,000 be received they will, with the concurrence of the Advisory Committee, give precedence to this plan. If, on the other hand, not sufficient support is forthcoming they will proceed with the necessary resolutions for carrying out the reconstruction scheme of the committee.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

In their report the advisory committee state that they have come to a definite conclusion on two points—(1) that the company should be reconstructed, with a view to providing further working capital, as soon as possible; and (2) that the Board should be reorganised and strengthened. An examination of the financial position shows that, as regards cash assets and liabilities, there appears to be, approximately, a net deficiency of £14,100. It is urgently necessary that money should be provided to meet this deficiency, and to that end the committee suggest that a new company should be formed, with a capital of £60,000, in 60,000 shares of £1 each, to take over the assets and liabilities of the present company in consideration of an allotment of 60,000 shares in the new company credited with 15s paid up, thus leaving an assessment of 5s per share, which should produce a fund of £15,000. In the committee's view it is impossible, in the present financial circumstances, for the management to undertake the production of a new play and to reopen the theatre until the finances have been reorganised. The Board have, with the committee's concurrence, entered into an agreement with Messrs. Grossmith and Laurillard, under which the latter, in consideration of a payment of £750, have the option to produce a play at the theatre. In the opinion of the committee, the Board, in consequence of the ill-health of Mr. George Edwardes, requires to be re-formed and some active steps taken to resuscitate the fortunes of the theatre. They have been in direct communication with Mr. Edwardes, and have discussed the situation with him, and are authorised to say that he concurs in the views expressed and places himself unreservedly in the hands of the shareholders. If they desire to retain his name on the Board and his association with the management he is willing to serve, and, so soon as his health is restored, he will return to the active conduct of business. When ordinary conditions again prevail the committee see no reason why results equal to those attained in the past should not again be realised. Many schemes have been considered and discussed, but, in their judgment, the scheme they have put forward is the best in the interests of the general body of shareholders. Its success, however, will depend upon the shareholders coming forward and supporting the scheme as a body to protect their own property, otherwise the inevitable result must be liquidation.

DIRECTORS' ALTERNATIVE PROPOSAL.

In a circular accompanying the advisory committee's report, the directors say that the committee and the Board are unanimous that it would be unwise at the present juncture to incur further expenditure upon production, and that, having regard to the financial position, further funds will be required to meet the accruing liability for rent and other necessary outgoings while the theatre remains closed and to provide for the production of a new play and for the efficient working of the theatre thereafter. The directors are of opinion that the committee's reconstruction scheme would press hardly upon such shareholders as find themselves unable to provide the assessment of 5s per share, while the assessment, if agreed to by all shareholders, would only produce £15,000, which is less than appears desirable to place the finances on an independent basis. The Board favour and recommend a larger scheme, taking the form of an issue of £30,000 of Debentures, bearing 6 per cent. interest and entitled in each year, after a dividend of 6 per cent. has been paid upon the shares, to participate pro rata with the shares in any surplus of divisible profits. It is proposed that £3,000, commencing with 1st July, 1916, be annually allotted for interest on and repayment of Debentures, the lafter to be effected by drawings at £105, or by purchase in the market under that price, the balance being redeemable at the same price on 31st December, 1925, with power reserved to the company to pay off earlier, on three months' notice, on similar terms. Allotment to be made if £25,000 Debentures are subscribed, £5,000 being reserved for future issue. Subscribers to the Debentures to be given the power to elect two directors. By the issue of Debentures the heavy expense attending reconstruction will be avoided, and the shareholders, by taking them up, will be protecting their own property and will retain the whole of the profits of future working. The directors are given to understand that their proposal will have the approval of the advisory committee if it meets with sufficient support from the shareholders to render it practicable. In the event of adequate support not being obtained, reconstruction will be inevitable.

* * *

'Referee' June 6 15

The annual meeting of the Oxford, Limited, was held last Tuesday. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, the report of the directors for the year ended April 30 last is far more satisfactory than might have been expected, although the gross takings dropped from £46,200 to £37,760. The net profits amounted to £5,900 as compared with £8,000 for the previous year. After payment of a dividend of a balance of £4,300 remains to be carried forward, as compared with £3,400 brought into the accounts, but nothing is this time allocated to premises and goodwill account, to which £1,000 was appropriated a year ago.

Five per Cent.

e Company was formed in 1888, and it only quite recently that it has met with misfortune, though undoubtedly the misfortune is the climax of the policy of the management in the past. The theatre originally leased was pulled down under the Strand improvement scheme, and the new house, built a few yards from the site, was opened in 1903. For the last twenty years net profit has been as follows:—

Year Ended 30th June.	£	Year Ended 30th June.	£
1895	12,300	1905	7,900
1896	18,500	1906	9,200
1897	16,400	1907	8,500
1898	4,400	1908	10,200
1899	16,700	1909	20,400
1900	11,800	1910	29,100
1901	8,100	1911	10,200
1902	20,000	1912	6,100
1903	3,900	1913	4,500
1904	13,600	1914	300

The average annual profit for the two decades is, roughly, £12,000, equal to 2½ per cent. on the capital. The actual distribution has been 16¼ per cent. per annum, and this really explains the Company's present plight—the profit has been divided practically up to the hilt, and not enough has been put by for depreciation and reserve. In all the Company has paid 355 per cent., or £213,000, in dividends averaging 13⅝ per cent. per annum, and ranging from 5 to 25 per cent. The only periods when no distributions were made were 1893-4, 1906-7 and last year. On the first occasion the absence of a dividend was due to the very small profit earned. On the second occasion there was a respectable profit, but owing to inadequate provision previously for wastage of assets £7,300 had to be taken from earnings and £12,000 from reserve to write down stage properties and rights. Much the same happened last year, when out of reserve and the profit balance £15,900 had to be transferred to reduce the book value of the same items. One lesson the experience of the past, therefore, plainly teaches the management is that unless this sort of thing is to occur again dividends should be restricted to a more reasonable figure and greater provision made for depreciation and reserve.

Daily Mail

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1915.

PALACE THEATRE'S 10%.

Mr. Alfred Butt will have a pleasant report for the shareholders of the Palace Theatre at the forthcoming meeting. The profits for the year ended July 26, together with the balance brought forward, are £34,064. Of this £10,000 will be transferred to reserve.

A dividend of 10 per cent. will be paid, and the company will have a reserve fund of £45,000.

PALACE THEATRE RESULTS.

The Palace Theatre is again paying a dividend of 10 per cent. The total receipts amounted to £106,460, whilst the expenditure, including interest on mortgage, reached £89,855, giving a profit for the year of £16,604. Income-tax absorbed £1,103, and, with the balance brought forward from last account £14,259, the available balance is £29,760. The dividend absorbs £9,000, there is transferred to reserve £10,000, and the amount carried forward is £10,760.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1915.

GAIETY THEATRE DIRECTORS.

The Gaiety Theatre directorate is about to undergo a great change. With the exception of Mr. George Edwardes, who, at the unanimous request of his friends in the theatre, has consented to remain chairman, none of the directors at the beginning of the year will be associated with it in that capacity after the next few weeks. Mr. George Dance and Mr. Purefoy retired several weeks ago. Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Malone will, it is understood, retire in two or three weeks.

It is the intention of the company to issue 30,000 profit-sharing debentures of £1 each, and while it is hoped that the shareholders generally will subscribe for these shares, one of the largest of them has underwritten the whole issue. The new board will include Mr. Alfred Butt, and two others to be nominated by the debenture holders.

Gaiety Directors.

Having gone through a dull period the Gaiety Theatre Company emerges now—let us all hope for better times—with a new board of directors, of which Mr. George Edwardes has consented to be chairman. The other directors are Mr. Alfred Butt (of the Palace Theatre), Mr. William Boosey (of Chappell and Co., New Bond-street), and Mr. George Chantrey (chartered accountant). Mr. William Dawes, a favourite with every patron of the Gaiety Theatre, will remain manager of the house. He is the right man in the right place.

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - Mr. H. B. IRVING

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11th, 1915,

SEARCHLIGHTS

A Play in Three Acts

By HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL.

Robert Blaine	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Sir Adalbert Schmaltz, K.C.V.O.	Mr. HOLMAN CLARK
Harry Blaine	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Dr. Firmin	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Moneypenny (a Solicitor)	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Fewson	Mr. CHARLES MAUNSELL
Trenchett	Mr. E. H. RUSTON
Hon. Mrs. Blaine	Miss FAY DAVIS
Lady Schmaltz	Miss KATE BISHOP
Phœbe Schmaltz	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
Nurse	Miss LYNN FONTAINE

ACT I. Smoking Room in Corriefeuran Castle, Scotland.
(10 Months elapse.)

ACT II. Library of Blaine's Country House.
(4 Months elapse.)

ACT III. Drawing Room in Blaine's Town House.

The Play produced by Mr. HOLMAN CLARK.

All Gowns and Hats designed by Mr. REVILLE, and executed by REVILLE & ROSSITER, 15 Hanover Square, W. Curtains by MAURICE, 53 Haymarket.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by

THE PLUMBERS

By HENRY GRATTAN.

Mrs Drake	Miss MAY HOLLAND
Martha (Mrs. Drake's Cook)	Miss META PELHAM
Mr. Saunders (an alleged Plumber)	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Erb (his Mate)	Mr. LESLIE OSWELL

Scene—Breakfast Room at Mrs. Drake's House.

Programme of Music

By the CARLTON MASON SEPTETTE.

1.	MARCH, "Pomp and Circumstance"	Elgar
2.	FANTASIA BOHEME	Puccini
3.	a. NOCTURNE IN E FLAT	Chopin
	b. INDIAN LOVE LYRICS	Woodforde-Finden
4.	a. SERENADE ROCOCO	Meiger-Helmund
	b. VALSE BACCHANALE	Zalucka

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. LESLIE OSWELL

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by removing their hats.

Box Office (Mr. R. WEAVER) open daily, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Telephone: 2602 Gerrard. Entrance SAVOY COURT, STRAND.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
First Circle, 5s. and 4s. Unreserved: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

General Manager ... ... Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

It is true, as Mr. Vachell says, that this war has changed us all, and no doubt Mr. Vachell with the rest of us, but whatever change has come about it has not so far appreciably affected his "poetic." He still writes the same pleasant, ambling, well-bred kind of story as before, with cheery young lovers in it, and rich but stern papas, and quite "nice" mammas who have made domestic mistakes, and a judicious sprinkling of sentiment, and a mild infusion of comic relief. In short, he is still the old Mr. Vachell, warranted to amuse many and to offend none.

His Harry Blaine is a quite agreeable, easy-going, extravagant young Guardsman, who, as you see with half an eye before the curtain has been up five minutes, cannot be the son of the hard, cold, melancholy, but immensely wealthy Robert Blaine—even without the production of his real and deceased father's photograph. Why Mrs. Blaine made this one slip is not absolutely clear, but you don't care, as she is obviously a sweet woman now and charmingly dressed and precious lucky in the caressing voice of Miss Fay Davis. Naturally, she and her husband don't get on, and you feel it quite horrid of him that he should oppose the marriage of sympathetic young Harry with winsome little Phœbe. And you feel it a little tactless of her that she should, out of mere temper, taunt the cold, hard man with not being the boy's father.

Fortunately—fortunately, that is, for Harry and the scenic situation, not for the world at large—the war breaks out at that moment, just in time to turn Harry from an elegant waster into a hero at Mons and to save his mamma from continuing to discuss with her husband whether she shall or shall not give him a signed confession of her guilt. And the war, as we began by saying, changes everybody. It changes Harry—invalided home with sunstroke, after the most gallant exploits—into a sobered young man, determined to marry Phœbe with or without Papa's consent. It changes Phœbe's father, a naturalized German, into a True Born Englishman with a new and authentically English name. It changes Harry's mamma into a sad, repentant (but, happily, still handsomely gowned), matron, willing to sign the much-discussed "scrap of paper" about her conjugal infidelity. And it changes her cold, hard husband into the noble sort of man who forgives everybody, says "Bless you, my children," or Mr. Vachell's tasteful equivalent (for he is never guilty of a cliché of that sort), and consigns weak woman's confessions to the flames. "You have borne arms for your country, my boy," is the sentiment which accounts for it all, and very properly too.

Mr. Irving as the cold, hard, melancholy one kept it up very well, and Miss Fay Davis was all softness and sweetness, and Mr. Reginald Owen and Miss Margery Maude were delightfully young and fresh as the young and fresh people, and Mr. Holman Clark as the naturalized German with unimpeachably English sympathies was great fun, and all Miss Kate Bishop's old friends were pleased to see her once more on the stage, and Mr. Vachell had to take a hearty "call" and Mr. Irving to say a few words of hearty thanks.

Proprietress: THE Miss Lena Ashwell

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Lillah McCarthy – Granville Barker

Every Evening at 8.30 p.m.

Fanny's First Play

THE INDUCTION.

Servant	T. West
Cecil Savoyard	A. G. Poulton
Count O'Dowda	C. H. Croker-King
Fanny O'Dowda	Manora Thew
Mr. Trotter	Miles Malleson
Mr. Vaughan	E. H. Brooke
Mr. Gunn	Allan Wade
Mr. Flawner Bannel	G. Hamilton Gay

THE PLAY.

Mr. Robin Gilbey	Fewlass Llewellyn
Mrs. Gilbey	Florence Haydon
Juggins	Henry Ainley
Dora Delaney	Ivy St. Helier
Mrs. Knox	Helen Haye
Mr. Joseph Knox	F. B. J. Sharp
Margaret Knox	Lena Ashwell
Lieutenant Duvallet	Herbert Dansey
Bobby	Norman Page

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1915.

It will be interesting to see if Fanny's First Play bears present revival. There was loud laughter in the house on Saturday night, particularly among the hypergelasts, an innocent sect for whose benefit Mr. Shaw, evidently under no illusions about their intelligence, carefully eschews the more recondite forms of humour. But the judicious—if Mr. Shaw will pardon us for assuming that there are any such people—may still wonder.

It may seem to them that the moment is not happily chosen for resuming the old Shavian capers, which were among the strangest by-products of a long peace. The fun of travestied facts and lopsided judgments then agreeably stimulated a languid world. This, in Johnson's phrase, was milking the bull, and was all the better fun for the spectator from Mr. Shaw's passionately declared faith that his bull was really a cow. But to-day we have to be at grips with facts. If we want the milk of truth we must go to the right animal for it or perish. And the simple fact is that we shall not get it from Fanny's First Play.

It is simply not true that fathers are vulgar idiots, weak, blustering, hysterical, dominated by the cool wisdom and natural tact of their wives. It is simply not true that when boys and girls are strictly brought up nature takes her revenge by prompting them to assault the police and get locked up. It is not true that this experience is just the thing to give them a sense of spiritual redemption. Dora is no more a true Daughter of Joy than Duvallet is a true Son of France. All this fundamental untruth mattered little in the old bull-milking days; we could then afford to concede Mr. Shaw his postulates for the sake of his fun. But to-day the fun is felt to be incongruously trivial. And we, who have all had to go through a real regeneration, are out of humour for the sham regeneration of Holloway and Wormwood Scrubs.

One True Character.

But let us be fair. There is one true thing in Mr. Shaw's play, as valuable now as ever it was, because sympathetically noted and expressed: the wife with an old-fashioned religious faith of prayer and predestination which survives all the hard knocks which such a faith must receive in any Shavian play. This character is quite tenderly conceived, and has the luck of being beautifully played by one of our most truthful actresses, Miss Helen Haye. There is truth, too, such as it is, in the comfortable matron so comfortably played by Miss Florence Haydon.

If the rest seem to have abrupt gestures, fantoccini jerks, awkward pauses, masks instead of faces, that we think is no fault of theirs—for they are all competent players and one of them, Miss Asbwell, of high accomplishment—but measures the lack of truth in their characters. Characters to be true must begin by being fully imagined and possessed by their author; whereas, clearly, Mr. Shaw has never imagined these people as people, but merely as the instruments of his fun. Hence the restless embarrassment of the comedian, in himself a real live person, compelled to represent something that never was alive. As for the irrelevant Induction, we submit that the time has come for dropping it. It could never have amused more than a small circle and proves now, at any rate to our sense, intolerably tedious.

28

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

MARGARET MAYO'S

SCREAMINGLY FUNNY FARCE,

"BABY MINE"

Jimmy Jinks	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Alfred Hardy	Mr. J. V. BRYANT
Michael O'Flarity	Mr. CHARLES NEVILLE
Inspector Thompson	Mr. ARTHUR G. LEIGH
Constable Donovan	Mr. J. R. TOZER
Aggie (Jimmy's Wife)	Miss CONSTANCE HYEM
Rosa Gatti	Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Maggie O'Flarity	Miss AGNES GLYNNE
Zoie (Alfred's Wife)	Miss IRIS HOEY

ACT I.	Zoie's Sitting Room
ACT II.	Zoie's Bedroom, a few Months later—Night
ACT III	Zoie's Bedroom Same Night

"A MAN OF IDEAS"

By MILES MALLESON

Frank Cartwright	Mr. J. R. TOZER
William Goodman	Mr. ERIC ALGAR
Alice	Miss AMY WILLARD
The Man	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLEN

By kind permission of Vedrenne & Eadie

MANAGER FOR MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH, MR CHARLES THORBURN
STAGE MANAGER AND MR GILBERT PORTEOUS MR. CORAM SMART

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1915.

Farces about infants, like infants themselves, are all very much alike. The infant is sure to be borrowed or stolen. It has to be hugged by embarrassed elderly gentlemen, entire strangers to it. If there are two to be hugged, so much the better. A cradle and feeding-bottle help the fun with pit and gallery. But when Mr. Weedon Grossmith is the embarrassed elderly gentleman the whole house must needs laugh.

The way he keeps on coming in with a fresh infant under his overcoat! His pathetic complaint that "he has had nothing to eat yet" when sent out by his wife for yet another baby! His terrible difficulties between the people upon whom he foists the infants and the people from whom he has borrowed them! Then there is Miss Iris Hoey to play the pretty minx, to let her hair down, to pop in and out of bed in an alluring dressing-gown, and petulantly to reject the various imported babies that are supposed to be her own.

It has all been seen before, but evidently the fun of the thing is inexhaustible for the large public who like that sort of thing, and the laughter last night was uproarious.

THE LYRIC

"FLORODORA" REVIVED.

On Saturday evening, February 20, 1915, Mr. J. Bannister Howard revived the musical comedy, written by Owen Hall, music by Leslie Stuart, lyrics by Boyd Jones and Paul Rubens, entitled:—

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee ... ... Mr. EDWARD C. ENGELBACH.

EVERY EVENING at 8. MATINEES WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

J. BANNISTER HOWARD

PRESENTS

"FLORODORA"

Written by OWEN HALL. Music by LESLIE STUART.
Lyrics by BOYD JONES and PAUL RUBENS.
(By arrangement with Tom B. Davis.)

Anthony Tweedlepunch (a Showman, Phrenologist, Hypnotist and Palmist)	Mr. BEN NATHAN
Cyrus Gilfain (Proprietor of the Perfume and of the Island of Florodora)	Mr. SCOTT RUSSELL
Frank Abercoed (Manager for Cyrus Gilfain of Island of Florodora)	... Mr. JAMESON DODDS
Capt. Arthur Donegal ... ... (Lady Holyrood's Brother) ...	Mr. HERBERT ST. JOHN
Leandro... ... ... (Overseer of Farms)	... ...Mr. G. H. ASQUIN
Paul Grozon ... ... Heads of various Farms	... Mr. JAMES WRIGHT
J. Tudon ... ... Heads of various Farms	... ... Mr. CYRIL BELL
S. Gibbons ... ... Heads of various Farms	... ... Mr. FRED DENT
Fennyson Sims ... ... Gilfain's Clerks	... Mr ERSKINE LANG
Ernest Pym ... ... Gilfain's Clerks	Mr. DUDLEY MAURICE
Mon. Le Blanc	... Mr. BILLY REYNOLDS
Reginald Langdale	... Mr. HARRY HILLIARD
Footman	... Mr. FRANK PREBBLE
Carmen...	... ... Miss WILDING
Valleda ... ... (Maid to Lady Holyrood)	Miss EUPHAN MACLAREN
Ine ... ... Florodorean Girls	... ...Miss KITTY BELL
Jose ... ... Florodorean Girls	Miss CONNIE HAZELDEN
Juanite ... ... Florodorean Girls	... Miss ANUTA LOUIS
Violante ... ... Florodorean Girls	... Miss GRACIE BAKER
Calistra ... ... Florodorean Girls	Miss DOROTHY CLIFFORD
Mamie	...Miss JANE DAWN
Angela Gilfain	Miss JULIA JAMES
Lady Holyrood .. ... English Ladies	Miss MAY LESLIE STUART
Daisy Chain ... ... English Ladies	Miss MARIE CLEMENTS
Lucy Ling ... . English Ladies	Miss MARGRET MITCHELL
Lottie Chamber ... ... English Ladies	... Miss VIOLET BRYCE
Cynthia Belmont ... ... English Ladies	... Miss NOEL BARKER
Xenia Dillon ... ... English Ladies	... Miss OLIVE ROYSTON
Clarice FitzClarence ... English Ladies	... Miss VIOLET HEATH
Typewriter	Miss PHYLLIS GROSVENOR
AND
Dolores	Miss EVIE GREENE

Pretty Maidens: Misses AMY PRESTON, ESME MANETTE, MARION ROBINSON, MIA SYLVELIN, MARIE GLIER, VIOLET HEATH.

ACT I.	FLORODORA, A SMALL ISLAND IN THE PHILIPPINES
ACT II. ...	Scene 1	ABERCOED CASTLE, WALES
	Scene 2	THE BALLROOM, ABERCOED CASTLE

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY STANLEY WHITE.

Musical Director ... ... E. J. PATERSON

Two new numbers, "Beautiful Garden Girl" (Words by LESTER BARRETT, Music by LESLIE STUART), and "Jack and Jill" (Words and Music by LESLIE STUART), have been specially written for this revival.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limit
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILL

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Wednesday, February 24th, 1915,
at 7-30, and
NIGHTLY at 7-30.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS, AT 2-30

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, at 2-30.

The ROMANTIC PLAY from the Famous Work of ALEXANDRE DUMAS

The Three Musketeers

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN LANDECK.
Music composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE & LYCEUM STUDIO.
Produced by WALTER AND FREDERICK MELVILLE.

Characters:

D'Artagnan (A young Gascon)	...	Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Athos		Mr. WILSON COLEMAN
Porthos (The Three Musketeers)		Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Aramis		Mr. WINGOLD LAWRENCE
De Treville (Captain of the Guard)	...	Mr. S. MAJOR-JONES
Louis XIII. (King of France)	... ...	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Cardinal Richelieu (The King's Favourite)	...	Mr. ALBERT WARD
George Villiers (Duke of Buckingham the Queen's Love)		Mr. AIDEN LOVETT
Felton (A Fanatic)	... ...	Mr. EDWARD VALENTINE
Patrick (The Duke's Servant)	...	Mr. HARRY G. WRIGHT
Simon (Landlord of the Calais Inn)	...	Mr. HERBERT WILLS
Anne (Queen of France)	... ...	... Miss MARY DIBLEY
Constance (Attendant on the Queen)		Miss DORRIE ROBERTS
Planchet (Servant to D'Artagnan)	...	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Count de Rochefort (The Cardinal's Emissary)		Mr. CLIFTON BOYNE
Malines ... ... (of the Guards)		Mr. LAWRENCE CECIL
Jussac ... ... (of the Guards)		Mr. HENRY HALLATT
Bonacieux (Landlord)	... ...	Mr. LEONARD CALVERT
Captain of the Port	... ...	Mr. GEORGE WOODLEY
Kitty (A Servant)	... ...	Miss MARY PEMBERTON
and
Milady (The Cardinal's Spy)	... ...	Miss ETHEL WARWICK

Musketeers, Guards, Royal Attendants, Courtiers, etc.

Acting Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

Hippodrome Theatre

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27. at 2.30,
And EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MATINEES—WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

"THE WHIP"

The Wonderful Drury Lane Drama,
By CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON.

CAST:

Captain Greville Sartorys	Mr. Arthur Poole
Tom Lambert	Mr. Tom Sinclair
Rev. Verner Haslem	Mr. Anthony Keith
Hubert, Earl of Brangaster	Mr. Geoffy Wilmer
Joe Kelly	Mr. George Polson
Sir Andrew Beck	Mr. Lindley Dickson
The Marquis of Beverley	Mr. James English
Harry Anson	Mr. Albert Bennett
Tom Foster	Mr. Mark Henry
The Hon. Mrs. Beamish	Miss Naomi Nelson
Lady Diana Sartorys	Miss Margaret Swallow
Mrs. D'Aquila	Miss Nina Lynn
Myrtle Anson	Miss Dorothy Rundell
Lady Antrobus	Miss Cecily Eldon
Mrs. Purley	Miss Ella Daincourt
Mrs. Tomlin	Miss Eileen Searson
Master Tomlin	Master Walter Savage
Captain Raynor	Mr. Harry Johnstone
Mrs. Pelham	Miss Gwen Connington
Miss Tomlin	Miss Dorothy Bellew
Lady Middleton	Miss Phyllis Darsley
Emmett	Mr. Jack Morris
Carpenter at Tussaud's	Mr. C. R. Hughes
Bumkins	Mr. Bert Leonard
Tomlin	Mr. Henry Mark
Lord Clanmore	Mr. Norman Rolfe

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

Sole Proprietor ... LOUIS MEYER.

Under the Management of JULIA NEILSON & FRED TERRY.

On SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, 1915, & Every Evening at 8.

'SWEET NELL of OLD DRURY'

By PAUL KESTER.

Charles II.	Mr. FRED TERRY
Lord Jeffreys	Mr. F. PERCIVAL STEVENS
Sir Roger Fairfax	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lord Rochester	Mr. LESLIE H. GORDON
Lord Lovelace	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Percival	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Rollins	Mr. E. PARDOE WOODMAN
Lacey	Mr. ROBERT NOBLE
Captain Graham Clavering	Mr. JAMES CARTER-EDWARDS
1st Alderman	Mr. LESLIE KYLE
2nd Alderman	Mr. CLIFFORD SPURR
Mercer	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
William	Mr. EDWARD OUSTON
Lord-in-Waiting	Mr. BROUGHTON FERRIE
Nebuchadnezzar	Master EDWARD DENNIE
Sergeant of the Guard	Mr. W. H. GARBOIS
Lady Castlemaine	Miss VIOLET FAREBROTHER
Duchess of Portsmouth	Miss ANTONIO CHRISTIE
Lady Olivia Vernon	Miss PEARLA GARDNER
Tiffin	Miss WINIFRED RAE
Nell Gwynn	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Courtiers, Soldiers, Citizens, &c.: Say, Tosh, Will; Misses Davis, Cardozo, Cawdrey, Brodie, Winter, Spencer Daniel, Saunders.

ACT I. Before the King's Theatre, Drury Lane.
(JOSEPH HARKER).

ACT II. Drawing Room at Nell Gwynn's House, Pall Mall.
(JOSEPH HARKER).

ACT III. A Room in Lord Jeffrey's House.
(JOSEPH HARKER).

ACT IV. Ante-Room in the Palace, Whitehall.
(WALTER JOHNSTONE).

The Dance between Nell Gwynn and the two Actors in the Second Act arranged by Mr. John D'Auban.

The Old Flemish Harpsicord provided by Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch.

Costumes by Miss Edith Craig. Wigs, Armour, &c., by Mr. William Clarkson. The entire music of the play, including Nell Gwynn's song as sung by Miss Julia Neilson in the Second Act, especially written for this production by Mr. Raymond Roze.

Matinee on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2-30.

The Overture and Incidental Music specially written by Mr. Sydney Ffoulkes.

Toilet Table Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's Ltd, London & Birmingham

THE MANAGEMENT WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NON-APPEARANCE OF ANY OF THE ARTISTS THROUGH ILLNESS OR ANY OTHER UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE.

Stage Manager	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL.
Assistant Stage Manager	MR. EDWARD OUSTON.
Advertising Manager	MR. ALFRED POPE.
Musical Director	MR. SYDNEY FFOULKES.
Assistant Manager	MR. GUY SMETHURST.
General Manager	MR. ARTHUR GARRETT.

Doors open 7.45. Matinee 2.15. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

Nearest Tube Stations: Leicester Square, Covent Garden, Strand, Holborn, Charing Cross.

GARRICK THEATRE.

SATURDAY EVENING, MARCH 6th, 1915, at 8.

Matinées—WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.30.

"EXCUSE ME!"

A Pullman Car Musical Travel Skit

By RUPERT HUGHES

CHARACTERS.

Harry Mallory	DONALD CALTHROP
Ira Lathrope	JOHN CLULOW
Rev. Joshua Tree	LOUIS PAYNE
Jimmy Wellington	ROBERT FISHER
Roger Ashton	ARTHUR GREENAWAY
Harold Wedgewood	E. H. KELLY
The Porter	WILLIS SWEATNAM
The Conductor	HENRY WENMAN
Lieut. Hudson	ALONZO PRICE
Lieut. Shaw	CHARLES KING
First Highwayman	GEORGE ARDITT
Second Highwayman	WILLIAM COOK
Rev. Charles Scott	WALTER LUCK
Yvonne D[illegible]	YVONNE ARNAUD
Catherine [illegible]	MARJORIE VILLIS
Ann Gattle	CHRISTINE SILVER
Mrs. Joshua [illegible]	ANNIE HILL
Mrs. Juanita W[illegible]	SARAH BROOKE
Mrs. Wilcox [illegible]	CHLOE O'HARA
The Twin Bubbles	CECIL J. WOODINGS
Sue Zilch	BY HIMSELF

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY:

ACT I. The San Francisco Sleeper leaving Chicago. Monday Night.

ACT II. The Composite Car in Utah. Wednesday Afternoon.

ACT III. Same as Act I. In Nevada. Thursday Morning.

The Scenery [illegible] constructed and furnished by Bert[illegible] Smith, J. Rut[illegible] & J. Hig[illegible] & Son.

Lost[illegible] Hats by Vogue Hat Shop [illegible] Wallis Lewis.

Business Manager	FRED J. TURNER
Stage Manager	ALONZO PRICE
Assistant Stage-Manager	CECIL J. WOODINGS
Press Manager	WILLIAM ALBERT
Musical Director	ROBERT FOX.
Business Manager	JOSÉ G. LEVY

Box Office [illegible] Telephone [illegible]

Private Boxes [illegible]

Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and [illegible]

Pit (unreserved) 2s., 1s.

Doors open [illegible]

At this [illegible] ting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Excuse Me is hardly likely to repeat at the Garrick the enormous success which it has enjoyed in the United States.

On the face of it, a glimpse of the curious medley of travellers that one is—perhaps—likely to meet during a four days' train journey from Chicago to San Francisco sounds a capital idea; but there is not sufficient material apparently to provide a full evening's entertainment. On Saturday the first act was excellent fun, but by the middle of the next act the plot had worn very thin and the machinery was creaking badly. If it were considerably compressed there is a good music-hall sketch in Excuse Me, but not a three-act comedy. Quite the best feature of the production is the illusion of a train journey, which is cleverly sustained from first to last.

One was apt to lose the plot in the speed at which the train was travelling. There was a young couple who had caught the train at the last minute and were seeking high and low for a minister to marry them on board; there was a bibulous gentleman—remarkably like Bunny of the cinematograph pictures—who chattered about his love affairs; there was a nigger porter who was for the most part genuinely amusing, except for a wearisome five minutes in the second act; there was a specimen of that extinct species, the English Johnnie, and a couple of train robbers, who were easily laid by the heels by the young hero, and there were various other ladies and gentlemen who really seemed to have little to do with the main story.

If the production failed to hit the mark—and the reception at the fall of the curtain was decidedly mixed—the fault did not rest with the players, who worked unflaggingly. Mr. Willis Sweatnam as the nigger porter had most of the opportunities, and his performance was a richly humorous one, which went far towards explaining the vogue which the production has enjoyed in the United States. Now and again one felt that there was just a little too much of the "burnt cork" philosophy with which Mr. Sweatnam regaled the audience, but, all the same, his

2

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

To-Night Saturday, March 6th, 1915 at 8,

FRANK CURZON'S PRODUCTION

"HE DIDN'T WANT TO DO IT,"

A New Farcical Play in Three Acts, by

GEORGE BROADHURST and WALTER HACKETT.

Philip Witherton	... Mr. FREDERICK KERR
Major Drinkwater	... Mr. FRED LEWIS
Washington Demming	... Mr. NAT D. AYER
Manager of the Hotel ...	... Mr. E. LYALL SWETE
	[Impersonated by Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON]
Detective	Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Waiter	... Mr. KEVAN BERNARD
O. Vivian Smith	... Mr. JOSEPH COYNE
	[By arrangement with Mr. EDGAR TYLER]
Paula Wainwright	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Marjorie Thompson	... Miss MARION LORNE
Susan Clarke	... Miss HILDA BAYLEY

Scene The Lounge of a Hotel on the Riviera.

Time The Present.

The Action of the Play takes place between 10 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock of the same evening.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GEORGE BROADHURST AND FRANK CURZON.

Dresses by Madame Lysse, Princes Street, Hanover Square. Scenery by J. A. Fraser.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
(First Matinee Wednesday Next at 2.30).

The Orchestra under the direction of ERNEST VOUSDEN will play the following Music

Ouverture	Stuart	5.	(a) Selection	"Mam'zelle Angot"	Lecocq
(b) Serenade	Bizet			The Fisher's Song	Finck
(c) Valse	Mrs. Jay			"Le Petit Gentilhomme"	Godfrey

Arranged by Messrs. Metzler & Co., 26, Oxford Street, W.

Musical Conductor ... ERNEST VOUSDEN
Stage Manager ... EDWARD SHALE
General Manager ... T. B. VAUGHAN

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 5s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7483 (2 lines).

Nearest Tube Station—Piccadilly Circus

THE TIMES

MONDAY, MARCH 8, 1915.

"He" was Mr. O. Vivian Smith, or Mr. Joseph Coyne; and what he didn't want to do was to break into Major Drinkwater's bedroom in a hotel on the Riviera and abstract a leather case containing letters written by Mrs. Marjorie Thompson. But he did it, partly because Mrs. Thompson carried on so pitifully, partly because he was in search of romance, and chiefly because Mrs. Thompson's friend, Paula Wainwright, was very beautiful, with red hair. Now Paula Wainwright was not really Mrs. Thompson's friend; and Mrs. Thompson was not really Mrs. Thompson, and the leather case did not really contain letters, but some famous emeralds, which were not really the famous emeralds but imitations of them, carried about by Major Drinkwater, who was not really a major, for his own nefarious ends.

That is the kind of thing that you must get used to in this bewildering play. No one is what they seem; no one has done what they thought they were doing or intended to do; and confusion writhes into new confusion with every entrance or exit. The plot defies narration; and, perhaps, to "give away" any more of it, or to reveal who it is that finally succeeds in "spoofing" this queer set of people who have all been trying to "spoof" each other, would be to rob future spectators of some of the fun.

But He didn't want to do it must certainly be seen. It is not witty; but it is brilliantly and audaciously funny on the traditional lines of complication. And it is admirably acted by everybody, from Mr. Coyne and Mr. Kerr and Mr. Lyall Swete to Mr. Kevan Bernard and Miss Hilda Bayley. Miss Lydia Bilbrooke has never "presented so fine a stage appearance" (that, we believe, is the polite way of putting it) and acted so well: Mr. Arthur Hatherton has never before been so drolly eccentric, nor Mr. Lyall Swete worn such a masterpiece in beards. The reception of the play was uproarious.

The Palace Theatre

:: Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W. ::

The Premier Variety Theatre of Europe

Every Evening at 8. Matinee, Wednesday & Saturday at 2.

ALFRED BUTT PRESENTS

THE PASSING SHOW OF 1915

Book and Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS and HARTLEY CARRICK
Music Composed and Arranged by HERMAN FINCK
Staged by TOM REYNOLDS Dances and Ensemble Numbers by GEORGE SHURLEY

SCENERY BY BRUCE SMITH AND G. SACKMANN
DRESSES BY PASCAUD (Paris), SUZANNE (31, Baker Street, W.) (from Designs by RICHARD ELLETT); ALIAS: SIMMONS; AND MORRIS ANGEL
MISS ELSIE JANIS'S GOWNS AND HATS BY ELLA BURGESS (160, Westbourne Terrace, W.)
HATS BY MAISON LEWIS WIGS BY CLARKSON TAILORING BY JOHNS & BONHAM
SHOES AND HOSIERY BY RAYNE

Cast

THE CHARACTERS APPEAR IN THE ORDER NAMED

Scene I ... ... THE REVUE FACTORY ... Bruce Smith

John James Juggernaut ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Page Boys...Messrs. K. DOUGLAS and T. G. GRAHAM
Mr. Montague ... Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS
Rowland Tate ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Jewel Juggernaut ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Harry Tate ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Gilbert the Filbert ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Miss Foxtrot from U.S.A. ... Miss ELSIE JANIS

DAVID COPPERFIELD A Travesty

SCENE I ... ... PEGGOTTY'S COTTAGE

Mrs. Gummidge ... ... Miss MARION PEAKE
Peggotty ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Copperfield ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
Ham ... ... Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY
Little Emily ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Steerforth ... ... Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS

SCENE II ... ... WICKFIELD'S OFFICE

Agnes Wickfield ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Micawber ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Betsy Trotwood ... ... Miss ELSA FLACK
Mr. Dick ... ... Mr. FREDERICK GRANGER
Tradlles ... ... Mr. DICK WEBB
Uriah Heep ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Mrs. Micawber ... ... Miss MARION PEAKE

Rag-Time Cowboy Joe's Sister ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS

A Show Girl ... ... Miss CONNIE AMOR
Capt. Hercules Chutney ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS

Musical Numbers—

Opening Chorus.
"J. J. Juggernaut" ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR and CHORUS
"Mr. Producer" ... ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and CHORUS
"The Constant Lover" ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM, CHORUS, and SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS
The Foxtrot ... ... (Miss ELSIE JANIS / Messrs. NELSON KEYS, DOUGLAS PHILLIPS / T. A. DOUGLAS and K. GRAHAM)
Duet: "Someone I used to Know" ... Miss ELSIE JANIS and Mr. BASIL HALLAM
"The Four-foot Ten Brigade" ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS and CHORUS

THE PALACE.

"THE PASSING SHOW OF 1915."

On Tuesday evening, March 9, 1915, was produced here, for the first time, a revue, in five scenes, by Arthur Wimperis and Hartley Carrick, the music composed and arranged by Herman Finck, the dances and ensemble numbers by George Shurley, and staged by Tom Reynolds, entitled The Passing Show of 1915.

THE PASSING SHOW OF 1915—continued.

Scene II ... ... LOVE IS BLIND ... ... G. Sackmann

The Servant ... ... Miss MARION PEAKE
The Caller ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
The Man ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM
The Girl ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN

Musical Numbers—

Duet for Three Voices ... ... (Miss ELSIE JANIS / Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN / Mr. BASIL HALLAM)

Interval of Ten minutes

Scene III ... ... CHANTS D'AMOUR ... ... G. Sackmann

Scenario by MAURICE VOLNY Dances arranged by M. LEGAT

Argument The Spirit of Evil comes to Love's Domain and demands an account of her achievements.

SCENE MIMEE

Love (as Old as the World) ... Miss LOTTIE WATTS
Youth ... ... Miss VIOLET SEABRIGHT
Manliness ... ... Mr. DICK WEBB
Beauty ... ... Miss CONNIE AMOR
Evil ... ... Mr. HUGH VICTOR

TABLEAU I—SAMSON AND DELILAH

Music by SAINT SAENS

Samson ... ... Mr. FREDK. BLAMEY
Delilah ... ... Miss OLIVE STURGESS

Priestesses

The Misses MELVILLE, DENNELL, DESMOND, CHERRY, GREEN, FLACK, LE CORNU, CAREW

Warriors—

Messrs. LEWIS, DUNFORD, JONES, STACEY, STEVENS, KING

Musical Numbers

Dance of the Priestesses
"Softly Awakes my Heart" ... ... Miss OLIVE STURGESS and Mr. FREDK. BLAMEY Entrance of the Philistines

TABLEAU II—MANON

Music by MASSENET

Manon Lescaut ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Des Grieux ... ... Mr. FRANK FOSTER

Minuet Dancers

The Misses CAIRNS, WHITING, LORAINE, MCSPIRIT, SHAW, DOLAN, LYNTON, WHARTON

Bourgeois and Bourgeoises

The Misses DANTE, FANE, COOPER, BEVERLEY, THORN, CAREW, STEWART, HAMILTON, EDIS, HOLT
Messrs. STACEY, EADIE, HAYES, JONES, WALSH, GRAINGER

Musical Numbers—

Minuet
Chorus: "'Tis the Fête of Cours la Reine"
Duet: "Is it not my hand" ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and Mr. FRANK FOSTER

SCENE MIMEE

BACCHANALE (Glazounov)

Mlle. NICOLAYEWA M. LEGAT
(From the Imperial Opera House, Petrograd)
And THE SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS

Incidental Music by HERMAN FINCK

(Mr. ALFRED BUTT is indebted to THE TRUSTEES OF THE LATE SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS, and to Messrs. DURAND, PARIS, for kind permission to present excerpts from "Samson and Delilah" and "Manon" respectively)

THE PASSING SHOW OF 1915—continued.

Scene IV ... ... UNDER THE CLOCK ... ... Bruce Smith

The Ticket Collector ...	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR	A Man on Crutches	Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY
A Lady	Miss MARION PEAKE	Another Passenger	Mr. HUGH RENÉ
A Passenger	Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS	Big Knut	Mr. BASIL HALLAM
A Frenchman	Mr. NELSON KEYS	Little Knut	Mr. NELSON KEYS
A Frenchwoman	Miss CONNIE AMOR

Musical Number

"When the Clock Strikes Thirteen" ... ... — Messrs. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR, BASIL HALLAM, NELSON KEYS and DOUGLAS PHILLIPS

Scene V ... ... THE FANCY FAIR ... ... G. Sackmann

The Canon	Mr. HUGH RENÉ	Heinrich (a Waiter) ...	Mr. NELSON KEYS
General Bumble	Mr. LEWIS SYDNEY	Gretchen (a Waitress)	Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Mr. Speiro	Miss ELSIE JANIS	John James Juggernaut	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Gilbert	Mr. BASIL HALLAM	Kitty O'Hara	Miss ELSIE JANIS

Some Impressions
by
Miss ELSIE JANIS

Musical Numbers—

Chorus of Stallholders
"The Fortune Teller" ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS
Duet: "The Home of the Hun"... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and Mr. NELSON KEYS
"Keep Smiling" ... ... Mr. BASIL HALLAM and SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS
Duet: "Good-Bye" ... ... Miss ELSIE JANIS and Mr. BASIL HALLAM

MONDAY, MARCH 15th, 1915, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30
MATINEES WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.30

A new Farcical Comedy in three Acts, entitled

"SEVEN DAYS"

BY

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART and AVERY HOPWOOD

James Wilson	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Dallas Brown	Mr. LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Tom Harbison	Mr. HENRY HARGREAVES
Burglar	Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
Flanigan	Mr. DENIS J. HOGAN
Footman	Mr. CHARLES BISHOP
Bella Wilson	Miss AURIOL LEE
Kit McNair	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Anne Brown	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
AND
Aunt Selina	Miss LOTTIE VENNE

Daily Telegraph, 18th Feb., 1915.—"The title is explained by the fact that there exists in New York a law imposing a quarantine of seven days, or more, on the inmates of any house, to which an infectious disease can be traced. The casual passer-by may merely have popped in to sympathise with a sick friend, but once the fatal hour has struck he finds himself a prisoner for the time indicated."

Act I.—UPSTAIRS. Act II.—DOWNSTAIRS. Act III.—ON THE ROOF.

Scene takes place in James Wilson's House.

The Play Produced by Mr. E. DAGNALL.

Dresses by Madame ALEXANDRA, Baker Street, London. Miss AURIOL LEE'S Evening Dress and Cloak by PAULINE MARTYN.
Miss LOTTIE VENNE'S Dresses by MICHARD SOEURS, 2, Hanover Square W.
Toilet Appointments throughout the Theatre by Hindes, Ltd., London and Birmingham.
The Theatre Disinfected and Perfumed with SPRAOLITE, MASLIN BROS., London.

Acting Manager	Mr. SHAD. FROST
Stage Manager	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS
Musical Director	Mr. ALBERT CAZABON
Business Manager	Mr. CECIL ROSE

Prices Private Boxes, £4 4 0, £3 3 0, £1 11 6; Stalls, 10/6; Dress Circle, 7/6 & 6/-; Upper Circle, 5/- & 4/-; Pit, 2/6; Gallery, 1
Box Office (Mr. Mills) 10—10 Telephone Nos.—Regent 4496 & 4497.

Nearest Tube Station to this Theatre—Leicester Square.

TUESDAY, MARCH 16, 1915.

NEW THEATRE.

"SEVEN DAYS."

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART and AVERY HOPWOOD.

James Wilson	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Dallas Brown	Mr. LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Tom Harbison	Mr. HENRY HARGREAVES
Burglar	Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
Flanigan	Mr. DENIS J. HOGAN
Bella Wilson	Miss AUDIOL LEE
Kit McNair	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Anne Brown	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
Aunt Selina	Miss LOTTIE VENNE

If English faith in American humour is to be preserved English theatres must give up importing American farces. Seven Days is a penitential experience not inappropriate to Lent. The first act exhibited a gentleman, in sudden need of a wife for the deception of a rich aunt, passing off the first lady at hand in that character, a theatrical motif which was probably old-fashioned in the days of Thespis his cart. Then came from the stage the news about the Dresden, which cheered up the audience and almost carried off a second act about the kitchen troubles of a New York household isolated under quarantine. But nothing short of the annihilation of the whole enemy fleet could have saved the third act, which showed the same household now semi-starved upon the roof. Item: A man who was divorced because he was fat. Item: A burglar who was mistaken for an astral body. Mr. Lennox Pawle was Mr. Lennox Pawle at his most lugubrious; but poor Miss Lottie Venne had no chance of ever being Miss Lottie Venne. And there was not even the compensation of any new American slang!

"5064 GERRARD!"

A NEW REVUE in 2 Acts and 12 Scenes
By
COSMO GORDON LENNOX and ROBERT HALE
Additional Scenes by C. H. BOVILL
Arranged by WILLY REDSTONE. Special Numbers by THE TWO BOYS
Dances and Ensembles by J. W. JACKSON
Ballet staged by SERGE MOROSOFF
Stage Production by HERBERT BRYAN
Dresses by ELIZABETH GORTON. Hats and Headdresses by MAISON LEWIS
Costumes designed by GEORGE DE FEURE
Executed by ALIAS LTD., and by MRS. COLBY
Scenery by R. McCLEERY, A. E. CRAVEN, and G. DE FEURE.
Produced by ANDRE CHARLOT

ACT I.

Scene 1 . . . . . "SAM'S ROOM"
GEORGE DE FEURE

...	Mr. SHAW	Laura ...	Miss HOWARD
Margaret ...	Miss WOLLASTON	Dora ...	Miss MOLTENO
Dorothy ...	Miss DAVIES	Flora ...	Miss HOPE
Dorothy ...	Miss ROSSITER	Nora ...	Miss OLIVER
... rah ...	Miss DALY	Miss Prim ...	Miss DE BALSCHE

Music.

"Goodnight." By DAVE STAMPER. Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.
"Dearie." By EVANS LLOYD. Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

Scene II. "REVUESTON STATION"

The Clerk	Mr. MORRISON
Mrs. Brown	Mr. AUSTIN
Hildebrand	Mr. NAGEL
The Slingsby Baby	Mr. DESMOND
G. B. S.	Mr. LYNCH
Jack Johnson	Mr. COLAVERD
An Old Turk	Mr. BUER
Mrs. Snark	Miss MONKMAN
Sam	Mr. SHAW
Miss Prim	Miss DE BALSCHE
A Lady of the Chorus	Miss GRAHAM
The Old Porter	Mr. COOK
A Porter	Mr. PHILLIPS
The American Lady	Miss WHITE

Music.

"She's Always Been a Lady." By WILLY REDSTONE. Published by RICORDI.
"Tickling the Ivories." Dance by WILLY REDSTONE. Published by REMICK.
"He'd Keep on Saying Good-Night." By ERNEST BUTCHER. Published by FELDMAN.
"The 5.15." By MARSHALL & MURPHY. Published by REMICK.
"Good-bye, London." Composed by THE TWO BOYS.
Miss BELL. Musical Boards and Chorus' dresses by ELIZABETH GORTON. Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

Scene III. "BACK TO THE FARM"
GEORGE DE FEURE

The Boy ... ... Miss LILLIE

Music.

"I Want to Go Back to Michigan." By IRVING BERLIN. Published by FELDMAN.
Miss Lillie's song by POPPY C. BRADLEY.

The New Alhambra THEATRE
19
MARCH 17
1915
FAUTEUIL
D 6
Retain this portion which is the voucher for seat only, and does not admit to the Theatre

444
46

2

Scene IV. . . . . . "GENUINE ANTIQUES"

Adapted from the French of RIP and JACQUES BOUSQUET

Jim ...	...Mr. MORRISON	Sam ...	Mr. SHAW
Mr. Wardour Street	Mr. AUSTIN	Miss Prim...	Miss DE BAUSCHE

Scene V. . . . . . "IN THE PARK"

(R. McLEER)

Sam ...	Mr. SHAW
Miss Prim...	Miss DE BAUSCHE
The Lieutenant	Miss MONKMAN
Palmer ...	Mr. COOK
Basil ...	Mr. MORRISON
George Lashwood	Mr. LYNCH
Wilkie Bard	Mr. AUSTIN
Mark Sheridan	Mr. MORRISON
Billy Merson	Mr. COOK
Mrs. Whatnot	Miss WHITE

Music

"They're on their Way." By IRVING BERLIN. Published by FELDMAN.

"Dance." By JEAN SCHWARTZ.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

"Beets and Turnips" Dance. By CLIFF HESS and FRED ABLERT.
Published by FELDMAN.

"Secret Ambitions." By WILLY REDSTONE.
Published by RICORDI.

"1915" Scout March. By WILLY REDSTONE.
Published by RICORDI.

Miss WHITE'S dress by ELIZABETH GORTON.
Gentlemen's suits by MORRIS, INGEL & SONS.

INTERVAL

Selection . . . "5064 Gerrard!" ... ... Redstone

ACT II.

Scene I. . . . . . "AT MURRAY'S CLUB"

(L. E. CRITLEN)

THE VERSATILE FOUR

Sam...	Mr. SHAW	Rosie Rapture	Mr. HALE
A Dancer	Miss MONKMAN	An All British Waiter	Mr. COOK
Page	Miss E. BROADWOOD	The Proprietor	Mr. AUSTIN
Miss Foxtrot	Miss LILLIE	A Visitor	Miss WOLLASTON
Peter Pan	Miss HOPE	A Nut	Mr. DESMOND
The Little Minister	Mr. LESLIE	Mlle. X	Miss WHITE
A Revue Author	Mr. MORRISON	Mons. X	Mr. MORRISON
		Horatio	Mr. HALE
		Mrs. Sippi	Miss PLOWDEN

Music.

"What Happened in the Summer Time." By NAT D. AYER.
Published by FELDMAN.

"At the Fox Trot Ball." By NAT D. AYER. Published by FELDMAN.

"Frenchie-Scotchie." Arranged by WILLY REDSTONE.

"My Night Club Girl." By MAX DAREWSKI.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

"The Zig-Zag Dance." By WILLY REDSTONE. Published by RICORDI.

"How do you do?" By ALFRED HOLLEY.
Published by THE MUSIC PRODUCERS CO.

"On the Boulevard." By HARRY VON TILZER.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

"The Mississipi Barbecue." By DAVE REED. Published by WITMARK.

The dresses in this Scene by ELIZABETH GORTON.
Head-dresses by ALLISON LEWIS.
Gentlemen's suits by MORRIS, INGEL & SON.
The Zigzag Dance staged by T. ROYAL.

Scene II . . . . . "JUST A SONG"

Miss WHITE.

Scene VI. . . . . . "PHOTOGRAPHING"

Artist ...	Mr. HALE
Son ...	Mr. DESMOND
Man ...	Mr. SIMS
Woman ...	Miss DICK
Children ...	Messrs. Kaufman & Nagel, Miss Barrett

Scene VII. . . . . . "THE MAD SONGSTERS"

(GEORGE DE FEURE)

Miss MONKMAN

Miss LILLIE	Mr. SHAW
Miss PLOWDEN	Mr. MORRISON
Miss DE BAUSCHE	Mr. AUSTIN
Miss WOLLASTON	Mr. COOK

and Miss WHITE

Music.

Opening Chorus: "Down among the Sugar Cane"

"Big White Moon." By MELLOR & GIFFORD.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

"The Rag Time Picker." By IRVING BERLIN.
Published by FELDMAN.

y the Swanee River." Tambourine Dance. By MYDDLETON
Published by HAWKES.

"The Pick of the Family." By ARTHUR LANGE.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

"Humpty Dumpty." By DAVE STAMPER.
Published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER.

Footwear by RAYNE, Charing Cross Road.
Wigs by H. CLARKSON, Wardour Street.
Hats and Head-Dresses by ALLISON LEWIS.
Machinist: Mr. BAILEY. Properties: Mr. MORGAN.
Electrical Effects: Mr. POLLARD.

Scene III. . . "FIRST APPEARANCE IN THE WEST END"

(The Five Successful Last Ladies)

Joe	CHARING CROSS	and	Mac
	(otherwise)
Clyde	COOK	and	Alfred AUSTIN

Scene IV. . . . . . "AT WYNDHAM'S"

Manservant	Mr. LESLIE
Gerald ...	Mr. HALE
The Lover ...	Mr. MILLER
Arthur ...	Mr. SIMS
The Adventuress	Miss SULLIVAN
The Heroine ...	Miss WHITE
The Taxi Driver	Mr. BUCK

Scene V. . . . . . "THE TEMPLE OF THE SUN"

(GEORGE DE FEURE)

A Ballet by GEORGE DE FEURE and C. H. BOVIL.
Staged by SERGE MOROSOFF.

Prologue ... Miss DICK and Mr. PHILLIPS

The Incense Burner ...	Miss MONKMAN
The Idea ...	Mr. SHAW

Music.

a) Introduction and Scene ...	Willy Redstone
b) 1st Gymnopedie ...	Erik Satie
c) Scene ...	Willy Redstone
d) Dance ...	Victor Herbert

Costumes designed by GEORGE DE FEURE ... executed by ELLIS & SONS.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

46 48

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1915.

ALHAMBRA REVUE.

IRRESPONSIBLE BLEND OF AMUSEMENT.

The new revue at the Alhambra Theatre last evening, throwing coherence clean away, goes in boldly for variety. And it scored, too, on these simple lines. The title, "5064 Gerrard!" is the most meaningless one can imagine; it is the telephone number of the theatre box-office, and carries an admission that there will be no super-tax imposed on the intelligence of the audience. This is perhaps the best policy a revue can adopt, and the Alhambra Theatre with a bewildering variety of scenes—quite a dozen—a huge chorus of pretty girls, tuneful music, and much fun, can look the whole world in the face and make it smile.

This new revue has authors—three at least, and the same number of composers, but the general impression created by the entertainment is that the greater part of what is entertaining in it is due to the comic genius of Mr. Robert Hale, both as author and actor, and that the national music of the American nation—call it "rag-time"—is still able to hold its own with any other sort of sound when the world wants to feel glad after dark. There was one song last night, called "When I say good-bye to dear old London Town," that caught the fancy of the house, and yet never was there a song about London less English in tune . . . Of Alabama, yes; but there was never a word of any town but London. It was one of the peculiar licences of revue. The atmosphere of "something foreign" was, however, well marked in a futurist setting of an acid-green cottage in a forest of purple trees, where a lover sang of Michigan and a chorus sighed in a twilight. These curious contradictions must stand as among the features of "5064 Gerrard!" and, admitting that the fragment of Peruvian ballet aims at something very high, it is not necessary to admit more.

MR. HALE AS MLLE. DESLYS.

One of the best and most successful scenes is the supper-dance room of a night club, with a skit by Mr. Robert Hale as Mlle. Gaby Deslys. But the French soubrette is not the only one that Mr. Hale hits off with such astonishing skill and humour. This night club can boast, as one of the members said, of a proprietor who has invented a temperance drink as cheap as good champagne, and Mr. Hale presents his imitations in this scene with rich humour. Later on he presents a burlesqued scene from "Raffles," a very harlequinade, with spring traps in the floor and windows to be taken at flying leaps.

These and a comical study of what Mr. Harry Tate might do if he was a stage photographer are among the genuinely amusing scenes in the new revue, which could well spare a tiresome scene of two acrobats, and another in which a curio-dealer was supposed to be droll. There is, for the rest, abundance of light, tuneful, laughing entertainment. There are rows and rows of pretty faces, animated young people who move across the stage looking well-pleased with everything, and when the finale came—a splendid scene of some seventy Pierrots singing and dancing to an infectious tune—there was no reason to doubt the success of this irresponsible entertainment.

J. W.

49

D.Y.T.

16/3/1915

Orch. Stall

G 1

No.

David Allen & Sons, Ltd. London, Harrow, &c

THIS EVENING AT 7.30,
AND ON SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8.15,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE NEW WORD,

A FIRESIDE SCENE.

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

FATHER	Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
MOTHER	Miss HELEN HAYE
SON	Mr. GEOFFREY WILMER
DAUGHTER	Miss GERTRUDE LANG
Scene	Any Home Nowadays.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY

ROSY RAPTURE,

THE PRIDE OF THE BEAUTY CHORUS,

A BURLESQUE IN SEVEN SCENES.

BY

J. M. BARRIE.

Lyrics by F. W. MARK. Music by HERMANN DAREWSKI & JEROME D. KERN.
Incidental Music by JOHN CROOK.

LORD LIL LANGUOR	Mr. JACK NORWORTH
THE HONOURABLE BABETTE	Miss BIDDY DE BURGH
CHOLMONDELEY, a Butler	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
DUDLEY, a Lover	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
A REPORTER	Mr. HARRY HILLIARD
JENNY, His Fiancee	Miss GERTRUDE LANG
A JUNKER	Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN
THE DANCER	M. JULES RAUCOURT
A NUT	Mr. W. CADOGAN
A HUMBLE VILLAIN...	Mr. LICHFIELD OWEN
CRASHAY	Mr. FREDERICK LEISTER
DAVID'S FRIEND	Mr. GEOFFREY WILMER
MAN WITH A KITE	Mr. RICHARD COOPER
FAIRY GODMOTHER	Miss ETHEL WELLESLEY

AND

OUR DISDAINFULLY MELTING CHORUS

Miss GABY DESLYS	Miss IRENE OSTREHAN	Miss BLOSS TAYLOR
Miss MARY JOCELYN	Miss ALMA DUDLEY	Miss PHYLLIS SIDNEY
Miss WINIFRED IZARD	Miss IDA PAWLEY	Miss FREDA CHARTERIS

Club Members, Footmen, &c.—Mr. T. GLOVER, Mr. D. COOPER, Mr. C. RENSHAW, Mr. J. HOMEY, Mr. E. LEEMAN, Mr. E. STROAN, Mr. W. CADOGAN, Mr. R. TIPPETT, Mr. J. B. O'CONNELL, Mr. C. OSBORNE, Mr. J. LESLIE, Mr. A. THORN, Mr. J. DUNDAS, Mr. J. ASHLEY.

SCENE 1	... ...	Papa, Mama, and Me (Domestic)
SCENE 2	...	The Husband, the Wife and the Lover (Funereal)
SCENE 3	... ...	The Making of a Revue (Art)
SCENE 4	...	The Supper Club of the Receding Chins (Physiological)
SCENE 5	... ...	A Wild Night (Histrionic)
SCENE 6	... ...	The Marvellous Babe (Heart-strings)
SCENE 7	....	How to be Happy tho' at Home (Triumphs of Discovery)

The Dances arranged by Mr. WILLIE WARDE, except Mlle. Deslys's Dance in Scene 4 with M. Jules Raucourt, which has been arranged by M. HENRI MAURIAL.

Scenery by WALTER HANN & SON.

Costumes designed by C. WILHELM and executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.

Mlle. Deslys's Dresses by CALLOT SŒURS, Paris. Millinery by THE MAISON LEWIS.

The Beauty Chorus Dresses by MICHARD SŒURS, 2, Hanover Square. Furniture by OETZMANN.

Cinematograph Film by THE NEPTUNE FILM COMPANY, LTD. (Manager, Mr. PERCY NASH).

Both Plays produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

General Manager . . . . . W. LESTOCQ.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request being made for the benefit of the audience, the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will assist in having it carried out.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.
(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards
(3) The Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening will be lowered at least once during the performance to ensure its being in proper working order
(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium
(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

Business Manager. . . . . JAMES W. MATHEWS.

Stage Manager . . . . . LICHFIELD OWEN.

ICES, TEA and COFFEE can be had of the Attendants.

Nearest Underground Railway Stations :—
LEICESTER SQUARE and TRAFALGAR SQUARE.

TUESDAY, MARCH 23, 1915.

Apparently Miss Gaby Deslys is an institution. She must be nothing less than that to have a revue written all on purpose for her by Sir James Barrie. And as soon as you set eyes on her you know it; you can see it in her dress, in her daring costumes and her daring semi-nudes, in the way she takes the stage, in her whole behaviour. Obviously, irresistibly, triumphantly, she is an institution.

Also, by fits and starts, she is an artist. Literally by fits and starts, for it is when she dances. She can dance you any dance—the dance graceful and legato, the dance comic and staccato, the dance epileptic and frenzied. It is here that she is really rapturous, with the joy of the artist in creating art. Further, she is an everlasting high-pressure source of energy, never at rest and, as people say, all over the place.

Your resultant impression of her is, perhaps, rather mixed. You are fascinated by her dancing, repelled by something macabre about her, enlivened, and in the end rather fatigued. It is her immense energy. We speak for what Shakespeare called "The general." No doubt for special tastes Miss Deslys offers special provocations. The devotees of dress must worship her. Amateurs of bare backs must hold her priceless. English people who like to have their language tortured out of recognition must revel in her. But in the end you have to come back to the old view: she is an institution, something not to be missed, a theme for dinner-table and smoking-room gossip. And now her talent has been hallmarked "J.M.B." in the corner!

We wish we could recognize the process as reciprocal, we wish "G.D." in the corner could hall-mark Sir James's talent. To be frank, it doesn't. If it weren't for the name on the playbill and some mechanical jokes on the stage we should never have detected Sir James's hand in this revue. We really mean mechanical jokes—jokes with the electric light, jokes with stage "properties," jokes burlesquing the "wobbling" of the kinematograph, and so forth. They are quite good jokes in their way, their mechanical way; and there is, you rejoice to see, a good deal of the boy still left in Barrie. Not to be hypercritical, there is perhaps also something characteristically Barrie-ish in the burlesque parts—the burlesque of David Copperfield at His Majesty's, the burlesque of old-fashioned melodrama. Peggotty has to keep on driving Little Em'ly out of the house in order that he may keep up his search for her. He even lights the candle as a beacon for her return while she is still in the room. Peggotty and Micawber meet (of course over the punch-bowl) and "crab" one another's parts. The villain of melodrama has returns of virtue at critical moments, explained by "heredity."

Outside the burlesque there appears to be some attempt at a comic thesis—the disappearance of the tertium quid, the "lover," from the "eternal triangle." The stage has no further use for his services. He is turned into a "brother," and, worse, an "uncle." This idea gave promise of fun that was hardly fulfilled; probably the notion was too intellectual, too "high-browed," to get a fair chance in competition with bare backs.

What else is there? An interpolated kinematograph show—a real one this time—all about a wonderful baby captured by gipsies, whom the babe crushes flat under her perambulator. It is quite a good show, a clever "find" in (we guess) some Transatlantic field, but of course not Barrieish. And then there is the inevitable supper-club scene, with the chorus ladies and the nuts—almost as tiresome in its way as at the Alhambra or the Empire. Also there is the inevitable song to baffle the audience's efforts to sing it, on the "Sister Susie" principle; this one mixes up "Ipswich," "switch," and "which" in most admired confusion. Mr. Jack Norworth sings it, and another song, musically still better (in the burlesque-melodrama scene), which we cannot name, for we failed to catch the words. Mr. Eric Lewis as a pompous butler, and later as Peggotty, is delightfully Lewisian; Mr. Leon Quartermaine as the "lover," and later as Micawber, is as cool as a cucumber. But it all comes back in the end to the institution, to Miss Deslys and her wonderful dances, and her wonderful dresses, and her rather sick smile, and her incomprehensible jargon, and her celebrated expanse of bare back. If you are more attracted than repelled by her, you will on the whole be more pleased than bored with Rosy Rapture.

Happily The New Word

Father	.. ..	Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Mother	.. ..	Miss HELEN HAYE
Son	.. ..	Mr. GEOFFREY WILMER
Daughter	.. ..	Miss GERTRUDE LANG

was a pure Barricism. Merely ten minutes' talk between father and son, just when son had become Second Lieutenant and was off to the front. Mother had been all emotion, the difficulty of father and son was to stand the slightest manifestation of the sort from one another—two shamefaced, inarticulate Englishmen suddenly brought up against a critical moment. They were inarticulate to the end, and yet managed to tell us all, and one another, what was in their hearts. It was a delicious little piece of quiet humour and sentiment, played with rare delicacy by Mr. O. B. Clarence and Miss Helen Haye.

41 52

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, MARCH 15, 1915.

MLLE. GABY AND SIR J. M. BARRIE.

HOW HE THINKS SHE SHOULD DRESS.

Sir J. M. Barrie's new play, "Rosy Rapture, the Pride of the Beauty-Chorus," his first venture into musical burlesque, will be presented for the first time on any stage at the Duke of York's Theatre next Monday evening (having been postponed from to-morrow). Three composers have provided the music. Sir James Barrie would not have objected to twelve. Being a musical burlesque, it had to have a score, but music does not interest the author enormously, and the composers were given a fairly free hand.

Never has a new play by Sir James Barrie created such a first-night demand for seats.

The following brief but characteristic interview with Mlle. Gaby Dealys, who is to play the title rôle, has come into our possession with permission to publish it:—

THE INTERVIEW.

"Alors!" said Mlle. Gaby, when with extraordinary difficulty I had penetrated to her sanctum at the Duke of York's Theatre. "Alors! I will tell you just one thing about the new burlesque, but listen, monsieur, it shall be just any one thing what you like the most to ask. Hullo, fire away."

She was naturally exceedingly proud of her beautiful English.

What, I asked myself hurriedly, did I most want to know, or, rather, perhaps, what did other people most want to know? I plunged. "This is the question, mademoiselle, how do you and Sir James hit it off together?"

"Say it more plain," she begged, and I said it more plain. She looked at me with large plaintive eyes. "He is strange author," she said. "He not like me to know what he means. When he look glad then I know I doing it all wrong, but if he look triste then I know I doing it right."

"But doesn't he explain to you how you should do things?"

"Oh, no, monsieur; he just sit far off in stalls, and if we look at him he go away."

"Does he like your dresses?"

"I not know, monsieur. Figure to yourself. I catch hold of his coat, so that he no can go away, and I ask him, 'What you think about dresses for me, monsieur?' Then he think hard for long time, and he say, 'I think you should have a nice little white frock, mademoiselle, with flounces on it.'"

She flung up her hands and exclaimed to me, "What is flounces, monsieur?"

"Something Scotch," I suggested at a venture.

"And then my hair," she continued wistfully. "I say to him, 'How I do my hair?' and he think hard, and he say, 'I think the best way would be brushed back smooth over the forehead, with nice little round bump at back.'"

Mademoiselle held out her hand to signify that the interview was ended. "Think of me, monsieur," she said tearfully, "with nice little bump at back!"

But was she tearful? Was she not really laughing? Was she, in short, pulling my leg? I darted after her suspiciously with another question: "Mademoiselle, did the author tell you what to say to me?" But she had gone.

5-3

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31st, 1915, at 7-45,
AND NIGHTLY at 7-45.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, APRIL 3rd, at 2-30.

TWICE DAILY EASTER WEEK, at 2-30 & 7-45 and onwards nightly at 7-45.

Matinees, Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2-30.

The most Successful Historical Play of the Century,

A Royal Divorce

A STORY OF WATERLOO.

By W. G. WILLS.

Presented by arrangement with W. W. KELLY.
Play Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Napoleon, Emperor of the French ...	Mr. FRANK LISTER
Talleyrand, Minister of State	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Marquis de Beaumont	Mr. ALBERT WARD
General Augereau	Mr. WINGOLD LAWRENCE
Marshal Murat	Mr. WILSON COLEMAN
Doctor Corvisart, the Emperor's Physician	Mr. EDWARD VALENTINE
Grimaud, Innkeeper at Genappe	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Brigadier Jacques	Mr. LAWRENCE CECIL
Brigadier Pierre	Mr. LOUIS FIELD
Lord Keith, the British Admiral ...	Mr. S. MAJOR-JONES
First Lieutenant, Attendant to Lord Keith ...	Mr. P. MORRIS
Officer of the Palace Guards	Mr. J. RIGBY
Bob Royal, Sailor on the "Bellerophon"	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Servant	Mr. W. READ
Marie Louise, Napoleon's Second Wife ...	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY
Stephanie de Beauharnais	Miss DORRIE ROBERTS
Blanche d'Hervas	Miss MARY PEMBERTON
Angelique de Varennes	Miss MADGE COLLIER
The Little King of Rome	Miss LYNDA TOTTENHAM
Gouvernante of the King of Rome ...	Miss EMILY BURNS
Jeanne La Terreure	Miss MARIE JOHNS
Mother Lomas	Miss CONSTANCE WELTON
Empress Josephine, Napoleon's First Wife	Miss ETHEL WARWICK

Men of the Old Guard, Officers, Citizens, Soldiers, etc.

Acting Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

ACT 1—
Scene ... ...The Palace at Fontainebleau
"Here at thy feet I throw the Diadem I may not wear on sufferance."

ACT 2—
Scene 1 ... ... The Emperor's Cabinet at Versailles
Scene 2 ... ... Malmaison
"Memory Lives."

ACT 3—
Scene ... ... Garden at the Tuilleries

ACT 4—
Scene ... ... Inn at Genappe
An Interval of One Minute only between the end of this Act and the Tableaux.

NAPOLEON AT WATERLOO

1st Tableau—THE BATTLE. 2nd Tableau—THE CONQUEROR OVERTHROWN.

ACT 5—
Scene ... Plymouth Harbour (Time, 31st July, 1815)
Napoleon Exiled to St. Helena.

Tableau ... ... THE EXILE

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Since this Play was originally produced at the New Olympic Theatre, 1890, the last Act has been entirely re-written by GEORGE GERVOISE COLLINGHAM.

Costumes, Wigs, Uniforms, &c., by CLARKSON.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE AND LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

1. OVERTURE ... ... "Dragons Du Villars" ... ... Naillart
2. SELECTION ... "A Princess of Kensington" ... Ed. German
3. FOUR INDIAN LOVE LYRICS... ... ... Amy Woodforde Finden
4. OVERTURE ... ... "1812" ... ... Tschaikowsky
5. SELECTION ... "H.M.S. Pinafore" ... ... A. Sullivan

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE, LIMITED.

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

's

Presence on

Saturday Evening, April 3, 1915

At 7.45 o'clock

WHEN WILL BE REVIVED
THE GREAT NAVAL DRAMA

SEALED ORDERS

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON.

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

"SEALED ORDERS" UP-TO-DATE.

The next best thing to a new Drury Lane drama is an old one brought up to date, and as the former was apparently considered to be out of the question this spring, the revival of Sealed Orders should prove to be an excellent substitute. It seems strange that a play produced only 18 months ago should already require to be modernized; but events have moved since with such rapidity that the author is now allowed a great deal more dramatic liberty than the Censor would have permitted heretofore.

Originally, all the Drury Lane scenic and mechanical devices were used to show the attempt of the unscrupulous Ambassador of an unnamed foreign Power to purloin the secret orders of the British Fleet. Now, it is almost needless to add, the mysterious foreigner is frankly labelled as the Ambassador of the German Empire, and there are plentiful allusions to the underhand way in which Germany prepares for and carries on war. On Saturday night there were too many of these patriotic, and occasionally bombastic, utterances. One would like, as far as possible, to forget about the war, but at Drury Lane they positively revel in fervent speeches about German baby-killers and the like. The effect is somewhat incongruous, for the action is still laid in the pre-war period when the tight skirt was in fashion and night clubs, flower shows, mystery airships, and sales at Christie's were, apparently, the leading features of Society conversation.

SEALED ORDERS

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS
Incidental Music Composed by J. M. GLOVER.

Characters in Act I.

Mr. C. M. HALLARD	as	JOHN LE PAGE
Miss MABEL MANNERING	,,	ELLEN LE PAGE (his Sister)
Miss MARJORIE WALKER	,,	RUTH LE PAGE (his Daughter)
Mr. ROBERT AYRTON	,,	MENDEL HART
Mr. E. H. KELLY	,,	BERTIE HART
Mr. BRYAN POWLE	,,	MONTY BEVIS
Mr. ARTHUR G. LEIGH	,,	JOE ALLAN
Mr. HERBERT VYVYAN	,,	BILL CORRY
Mr. GEORGE FOREST	,,	HARRY SYMONDS
Mr. ROBERTS	,,	INSPECTOR

Characters in Acts II and III.

Mr. C. M. HALLARD	as	GASTON FOURNAL (formerly knowu as John Le Page)
Miss MARIE ILLINGTON	,,	Mrs. O'MARA
Mr. EDWARD SASS	,,	ADMIRAL LORD HUGH GAVESTON, G.C.B.
Miss GLADYS MASON	,,	LADY FELICIA GAVESTON (his Wife)
Mr. LANGHORNE BURTON	,,	HON. DENNIS WILLOUGHBY
Miss MARJORIE CHARD	,,	RUTH FOURNAL (formerly known as Ruth Le Page)
Mr. RONALD SQUIRE	,,	HANNIBAL K. CALHOUN ("Cagliostro")
Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY	,,	EDWARD HAY — Lieutenants H.M.S. "Valiant"
Mr. LAURENCE CAIRD	,,	CECIL DRUMMOND — Lieutenants H.M.S. "Valiant"
Miss GWEN FOTHERGILL	,,	LADY VIOLET FAUX
Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE	,,	BARON KURDMANN
Miss Y. VIVIEN-VIVIEN	,,	LADY OWTHWAITE
Mr. LAMBERT PLUMMER	,,	RT. HON. RONALD CAVERSHAM
Mr. E. H. KELLY	,,	BERTIE HART
Mr. ARTHUR G. LEIGH	,,	JOE ALLAN
Mr. E. W. ROYCE	,,	OLD ALF
Mr. FRED PEARSE	as	AUCTIONEER
Mr. DENIER WARREN	,,	NED CORRY
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	,,	GINGER
Mr. A. WILSON	,,	Capt. POMFRET
Mr. C. TOWLE	,,	Admiral ST. EVREMOND
Mr. P. HUGHES	,,	Admiral DON DIEGO VALDEZ
Mr. E. McLEOD	,,	Admiral PRINCE VASSILOVITCH
Miss JEAN BLOOMFIELD	,,	DUCHESS OF FARNBOROUGH
Mr LEONARD ASHDOWNE	as	JIM SAUNDERS
Mr. J. GLYN	,,	VALET TO CALHOUN
Mr. WALTERS	,,	BUTLER TO GASTON FOURNAL
Mr. H. WATSON	,,	Capt. TREVOR-RAWSON
Mr. WALTER TEALE	,,	SPRIGGS FORTESCUE
Mr. T. RICHARDS	,,	JEAN MORNY
Mr. SMYTHE	,,	STEFAN
Miss OLGA LINDO	,,	FLOWER GIRL

Synopsis of Scenery

Period: Act I., 1894. Acts II. and III., 1914.

THE LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.

(Proprietress: Miss Gertrude Kingston.)

Telephone: City 4927.

Mr. N. J. Sutton-Vane requests the honour of your presence at the first performance of a play in three acts, which will be presented for the first time on Saturday, April 3rd, at 8 o'clock.

"THE BLOW,"

In the event of your representative preferring to attend the dress rehearsal on Thursday, April 1st, at 7 o'clock, Mr. N. J. Sutton-Vane would be most pleased to receive him on presentation of this letter.

Should you be unable to attend the first performance you would greatly oblige by kindly returning the enclosed ticket at your earliest convenience.

Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM ABINGDON,

Business Manager.

P.S.—Mr. N. J. Sutton-Vane has arranged for the office on the right of the foyer to be placed at the disposal of your representative, and should be happy if he will make use of it.

(For Caste see over.)

SATURDAY, APRIL 3RD, 1915.

—— AT 8.0. ——

"AS OTHERS SEE US,"

by ROBERT HIGGINBOTHAM.

Cornwall Blair	Mr. EWAN BROOK.
Viola Blair	Miss EVELYN SUMMERS.
Harold Wiggins	Mr. EDWARD NIMMO.

Scene: Blair's cottage on the Thames.

—— AT 8.30. ——

"THE BLOW,"

by VANE SUTTON-VANE.

Lady Claring	Miss FORTESCUE.
Captain Richard Claring	Mr. EWAN BROOK.
Evelyn Pallant	Miss EDYTH OLIVE.
Fay Pallant	Miss JEAN STIRLING.
Price Sedgley	Mr. JULIAN ROYCE.
Nina Gicquelle	Miss AIMEE DE BURGH.
Marie	Miss EVELYN SUMMERS.
Illingworth	Mr. VINCENT ODLE.

Act I.—Library of Mr. Pallant's house in Paris.
An evening in early spring.

Act II.—Drawing room of the same house on the same evening.

Act III.—Price Sedgley's flat in London.
Eleven months later.

General Manager - Mr. WILLIAM ABINGDON.

4 60

MONDAY, APRIL 5, 1915.

In The Blow you have an instance of the application of ingenious pattern-weaving to unsuitable material. It would have been quite a good pattern if it had been executed in lighter stuffs. A's daughter is about to marry B's son when A does something which so offends B that the match has to be broken off. Then B is compelled to forgive A by seeing her son do, or attempt to do, exactly what A did, and the word is "as you were." A symmetrical pattern, as you see, and apt for a play provided that your materials are appropriate. For instance, A's offence might have been some social solecism—dropping h's, say, or being "sidy" about the correct pronunciation of Przemysl. But A's offence happens to be murder. That is to say, the pattern is executed in tragic stuffs, which prove too heavy for it. When you are shown human passions at their most violent and catastrophic, you are no longer in the vein for symmetrical patterns.

Mrs. Pallant kills Mme. Gicquelle under the strongest provocation. The adventuress has stolen her husband from her, admits she doesn't care a straw for him but "only does it to annoy" his wife—in short, is the stage-adventuress that you know. Obviously there are extenuating circumstances for Mrs. Pallant, as indeed the (Parisian) jury held, which subsequently acquitted her. But murder is murder, and there must be horror in it for Mrs. Pallant, and you, the spectator, should be made to feel it. What you do feel, however, is that it is simply a feature in the pattern: for, five minutes after the crime, Mrs. Pallant is discussing with Lady Claring the effect of her act upon the marriage of the young people. Lady Claring is apparently less shocked by the murder as a murder than annoyed by its inopportune interference with comfortable family arrangements. Conceal your crime, she says, and clear out, and the marriage shall go on. If not, not. The mother consents but not the daughter, and the marriage is off. Not long afterwards a family friend, Mr. Sedgley, concocts an elaborate plot. He pretends to young Claring (after posting Lady Claring at listening distance in the next room) that Miss Pallant is no better than she should be; is, in fact, about to become his, Sedgley's, mistress. Thereupon the infuriated Claring does his best to strangle him. Conversion of Lady Claring and happy ending to a play which may amuse you as artifice but cannot illude you as life.

For the readiness of its people to commit homicide is, you can see with half an eye, merely readiness to help the author on with his pattern. But the pattern in itself is ingenious and pleasing, and the obviously young author, Mr. Vane Sutton-Vane, who can write dialogue with sobriety and succinctness, which is not the usual way of young authors, is on the whole to be congratulated. The wife was played with intense passion by Miss Edyth Olive, the adventuress with agreeable insolence by Miss Aimée de Burgh, Lady Claring with aplomb by Miss Forteseue, and the family friend with quiet humour by Mr. Julian Royce.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

VERONIQUE

4 62

Cast of the Play

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, APRIL 5, 1915.

"VERONIQUE" REVIVAL.

MISS DOROTHY WARING'S FIRST APPEARANCE.

It is eleven years since M. André Messager's "Véronique," which was revived for the first time at the Adelphi Theatre on Saturday evening, was first presented by Mr. George Edwardes at the Apollo Theatre. Its advent marked a new epoch in musical-play production in London, for it was the first that brought the qualities of freshness and fragrance into that department of theatrical art, and its influence, together with that of the same composer's "Little Michus," helped very materially to raise the standard of musical plays in London.

Except in the personnel of the company, which on Saturday evening was entirely new, there was no difference between the general note of the first production of eleven years ago and that of the revival. The first production was made for Mr. Edwardes by Mr. Sydney Ellison, and Saturday's by Mr. Edward Royce. In every respect the manner is the same—scenes played with the quick, light-hearted charm that marks so effectively the difference between this and the noisy bustle of the American chorus methods of many musical plays and revues.

One of the particular features of Saturday's performance was the début of a young pupil—Miss Dorothy Waring—of the Guildhall School of Music. Her friends, with a perhaps ill-advised enthusiasm, made difficulties for her that would not have been suspected if they had not insisted on making public in advance the conditions of her engagement for the part of Véronique and the success they anticipated for her. Miss Waring, in spite of this handicap, did remarkably well for a débutante. She is young and pleasing, possesses a fresh, sweet voice, and sings very effectively. Had she been an unheralded newcomer she would probably have taken the house by surprise and have made one of those instantaneous first-night successes in which audiences love to participate. As it was, she was judged by high existing standards, and while coming through very well she did not affect our opinion of others who played the same part.

Another newcomer on Saturday was M. Henry Defreyn, a Belgian artist, with a delightful baritone. He acts very well, too, the part of Florestan, but his pronunciation of English will have to be much better before he can be described as perfect in the part.

Perhaps the best thing about this revival of "Véronique" is the all-round excellence of the company. Miss Amy Augarde and Miss Daisie Irving sang their music and played their parts admirably. Mr. Tom Wallis and Mr. George Barrett were delightfully humorous as chief comedians, and then, above all, as charming as a little fairy, Miss Elise Craven danced with twinkling feet into the good graces of the audience and became, instantaneously, one of the stars of the London musical stage. The chorus on Saturday was excellent. They are charming girls, can sing well, and at all times were well in the spirit of this fragrant play.

The reception accorded the performance was enthusiastic.

J. W.

CRITERION THEATRE

Lessees & Managers
SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM
and
MISS MARY MOORE

On SATURDAY, APRIL 10th, 1915, and NIGHTLY at 9 o'clock.
MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

ZELLAH COVINGTON and entire American Company, in

THREE SPOONFULS

A Farce in Three Acts
By ZELLAH COVINGTON and JULES SIMONSON

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

Arranged in the order in which they appear.)

Sylvia Relyea	... Miss ROSE WILBER
Mrs. Wellzmiller	Miss ISABELLE WINLOCKE
Phillip Staunton	... Mr. JOHN ARTHUR
Mrs. Johanna Vivvert	Miss NORAH LAMISON
Frederick Relyea, M.D., F.R.S.E.	Mr. ZELLAH COVINGTON
General Burbeck	Mr. ROBERT ROBSON
Marcella	Miss SARA BIALA
Judge Sanderson	Mr. WADE HAMPTON
Cliff Blanchard	Mr. J. K. HUTCHINSON
Peregrin	Mr. IRWIN F. SHEEBE

ACT I. Dr. Relyea's Home, Oneida, New York State ... ... 3 p.m.
ACT II. The Same ... ... 8 p.m.
ACT III. The Same ... ... 7 p.m.

Preceded at 2.50 and 8.30. by

"THE ARTISTS"

Entertainers.

WILL TERRY ERNEST CRAMPTON PHYLLIS ASHWELL NORA BIRD BILLIE TAYLOR
At the Piano ... TONY CASTLE
Piano by Messrs. [illegible] & Co., Mortimer Street, W.

Programme of Music to be played by the CAZABON SEXTETTE.

Before "The Artists."
... "Le Caid" ... ... Luigi Venzano ... Selection ... ... "Gipsy Love" ... ... Lehar

Before the Play.
... "Stars and Stripes" ... ... Lord d'Abernon ... "La Caprice de Nanette" ... ... Clarence Taylor
... "Dixie" ... ... Brian Hope ... "The Reason" (Violin Solo) ... ... Hermann Finck
... "Star Spangled Banner" ... Russell Hedges ... Norwegian Dance ... ... Grieg

Grand Pianos supplied at the Theatre by HASLAM, Ltd., Leopold and Birmingham.

Doors Open at 8. Matinees 2. Commence at 8.50 (Matinees 2.30). Box Office open 10 to 10.
Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit 2s. 6d.

Box Office (Mr. Hyde) is open from 10 o'clock to [illegible]. Telephone Nos.—Gerrard 514 & 6240.

Business Manager ... ... (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) ... Mr. CECIL BRETON

NEAREST TUBE STATION—PICCADILLY CIRCUS.

Plays

THE TIMES

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1915.

The staple material of farce is homely—baby, the lodger, mother-in-law, and the like—it is as well to have it written and acted by people whose homes are not like your own. Getting it in this way, at any rate, you escape the homeliness which you know too well for a homeliness which is something new and strange. Three Spoonfuls gives you notes on American domestic life which are all the more valuable because they are beneath the dignity of comedy. A "judge" is so called because he is an attorney, a "general" because he is a doctor, and the short for "doctor" is "doc." And the "best ladies in town" go to an afternoon lecture on Napoleon. "The greatest moment in the life of Napoleon," says one of them, "was when Roosevelt stood silent at his tomb." The lady's husband must have an "auto-mobeel," though we ought to be saving up to buy a peer."

Mr. Zellah Covington even brings us a new American voice—a voice which sticks in his throat like Macbeth's "Amen." He is the doctor who supposes himself to have discovered the secret of youth and tries it on the "general." The doctor, surreptitiously brought into the house, is taken for the "general," recognised, and a good deal of fun is got out of the situation, much more fun than one has a right to expect from American farce. Indeed, Americanism is the best part of the matter all: the quaint differences between American homeliness and the homeliness of these islands of ours who so surprise us by their new variations on our old language. While Mr. Covington jerks it out from the back of his throat, the ladies sing it plaintively. If "home" in Oneida, New York State, is not too violently misrepresented here, you feel more sure than ever that there is no place like it.

ZELLAH COVINGTON
& ENTIRE AMERICAN COMPANY IN
3 Spoonfuls
PRECEDED AT 8.50 & 2.30 BY HAROLD MONTAGUE

Nightly at 9.
Matinees
Wed & Sat at 3.

Phone
Reg. 3365
Gerr. 3844

CRITERION

Laugh! Laugh!! Laugh!!!

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 9 O'CLOCK

"THE HALF-SISTER"

A Farce in Three Acts.

By AGNES CROYSDALE

The Hon. Claude Southgate ..	Mr. LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Mr. John Waters	Mr. VERNON DAVIDSON
Mutch	Mr. WILLIAM CORRIE
Mr. Ebenezer Mornington ..	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
Mr. Brimstone	Mr. C. A. WHITE
Mrs. Waters	Miss JOY CHATWYN
Lady Southgate	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Angela Wendover	Miss MARGOT KELLY
Sylvia Wendover (alias Mornington)	Miss NITTA WESTCOTT
Mrs. Ebenezer Mornington ..	Miss MONA HARRISON
Mrs. John Skeffington Bower ..	Miss JANE WOOD

ACT I. ... ... Room at Lady Southgate's Town House

ACT II. ... ... Same as Act I.

ACT III. ... . A Room off Ball Room at Lady Southgate's

Time To-day.

Gowns and Hats by MADAME DURHAM, 111, Queen's Road, Bayswater.

Furniture by J. S. LYON. Wigs by CLARKSON.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

"COLLUSION"

A Play in One Act.

By FRANCIS COUTTS.

The Lord	Mr. MURRAY MOORE
The Lawyer	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
The Lady	Miss JANE WOOD
The Lady Secretary	Miss MONA HARRISON

Scene ... The Lawyer's Office.

BOTH PLAYS PRODUCED BY MR. FORBES DAWSON.

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 1915.

Lady Southgate wanted a "lion" for the London season, so she advertised in the newspapers for a "professional beauty." The post was taken, on certain innocently false pretences, by a girl who was really the half-sister of Lady Southgate's niece; but in order to obtain it she had to pass for a married woman, and, therefore, to take a married name. She took that of a well-known man, who had already a wife; and that man and his wife appeared upon the scene.

A farce-writer, of course, need display no knowledge of the ways of the class which he is supposed to be depicting; but it is strange that, given a plot of any kind and 11 young human beings, any author could make so little of them as is made in this play. On the whole it is the stupidest play that we have ever seen.

And Mr. Francis Coutts's Collusion, which preceded it, is little better. Can this be the same Mr. Coutts who writes pleasing poetry about King Arthur? If so, he is more at home in Camelot than in a solicitor's office in London, where a squabbling peer and peeress flirt, one with the solicitor and the other with his managing clerk, who is a lady.

Once more, a farce-writer need display no knowledge of the ways of the class which he is supposed to depict. But if Mr. Coutts is allowed to outrage the feelings of the Law Society by showing a female managing clerk who hopes soon to be made a partner, it must be on condition that he amuses. And Collusion does not amuse, although Miss Mona Harrison does her best to make it.

A Short-Lived Play.

The new play put on for a limited run at the Apollo Theatre on Monday evening had the short life predicted for it. It came off last night. The name of the piece was "The Half-Sister," and The Times critic said of it on Tuesday, "On the whole it is the stupidest play that we have ever seen." The author was given on the programme as Agnes Croysdale, and I understand she is the wife of a very wealthy mill-owner in Yorkshire. Her play is too ingenuous and amateurish to require description, and its brevity was its only distinguishing mark. The total time occupied by the actual performance of its three acts was fifty-eight minutes.

J.W.

G 148A
STALLS
April 14.
1915
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS HALF

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE,

KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.

April 8th, 1915.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER requests the honour of your presence on Wednesday next, April 14th, at 8 p.m. punctually, when

THE PANORAMA OF YOUTH

A Play in Four Acts

BY J. HARTLEY MANNERS

will be acted.

E. ARNOLD,
BOX OFFICE.

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1915.

GEOMETRICAL PLAY AT THE ST. JAMES'S.

By J. HARTLEY MANNERS.

Sir Richard Gauntlett	..	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Geoffrey Annandale	..	OWEN NARES
Colonel Gladwin ..	..	ALFRED BISHOP
Clifford Carstairs ..	..	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Thorn	..	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Mrs. Gordon-Trent ..	..	NINA BOUCICAULT
Mrs. Stephens ..	..	HELEN ROUS
Felicia Gauntlett ..	..	MADGE TITHERADGE

The author of The Panorama of Youth revives fond recollections of a work which generally begins the panorama of English youth—the Elements of Euclid. Triangles, you remember, had a way of being "similar and similarly placed." That is also the way of Mr. Hartley Manners's people.

Sir Richard, who once took on his own shoulders the fault of a wicked wife, now, a widower of 10 years' standing, desires to marry Mrs. Gordon-Trent. The lady is similar and similarly placed—i.e., is also the victim of scandal and also quite innocent. Her husband was so brutal that to escape him she allowed herself, quite innocent as she was, to be divorced. More Euclid is supplied by the younger generation. Mrs. Gordon-Trent's son desires to marry Sir Richard's daughter; and both the young people are wrong as to the facts about their parents. Geoffrey supposes his really innocent mamma to have been guilty. Felicia supposes her really guilty mamma to have been a saint.

A third Euclidean pair, similar and similarly placed, is forthcoming in two of Sir Richard's new friends, who pop in and out to talk to him about youth and age. These two are never seen apart, finish one another's sentences, and while parallel to one another are always at right angles to Sir Richard. When, fighting against middle age, he dyes his hair and wears stays, they parade their grey heads and "bow-windows." When, after an illness, he decides to let nature have her way and appears his elderly self, one of the friends is found with dyed hair and the other in stays. Even the Euclid of our youthful panorama was not, if we remember rightly, quite so regularly symmetrical as this.

Perhaps it is the Euclidean association which chills us over Mr. Hartley Manners's play. Johnson (or another) said of Richardson (or somebody else) that he taught the passions to move at the command of virtue. But nobody can teach the passions to move at the command of geometry. Our passions were unmoved by the amatory difficulties of Sir Richard and Mrs. Gordon-Trent and of Geoffrey and Felicia. Various questions were raised, but it really didn't seem to matter much what the answers were going to be. Would Sir Richard marry his lady-love when he learnt the scandal about her past? Why, of course, so far as he was concerned; a man so chivalrous over the earlier scandal would not be less chivalrous here, where his affections were concerned. But his daughter was the difficulty. She still believed in her "sainted" mother, and the widower of such a woman ought not, she held, ever to marry again.

A EUCLIDEAN DÉNOUEMENT.

Sir Richard felt he would never undeceive the girl about her dead mother and told Mrs. Gordon-Trent that the marriage was "off," while the girl simultaneously turned her Geoffrey adrift. But she had begun to have doubts about her mother, and things would obviously have been cleared up then and there, if Sir Richard's sudden illness had not postponed complete explanations until the last act. By this time Felicia had learnt that her "sainted" mother was no better than she should be, and Geoffrey had learnt that his "guilty" mother was as white as snow, and so they all came together once more. Sir Richard held coyly off from Mrs. Gordon-Trent for a while, because of the semi-circles under his middle-aged eyes, but Mrs. Gordon-Trent showed him that, in the sun, her eyes had semi-circles too. Final application of the Euclidean "similar and similarly placed."

It all left us quite cold. The "youth and age" refrain that ran through the play left us cold, too. You can only talk commonplaces on that time-worn subject; and about commonplaces communia—there is always the old difficulty the Roman poet speaks of—the propria dicere. Mr. Hartley Manners never hits on the propria, the individual turn, but uses all the familiar "shop-soiled" phrases. Indeed, his dialogue throughout is sheer stereotype. When a young man tells his sweetheart (about his mother) that "our ways lay apart" and a girl tells her father that "love has come to me," you know that you are not really in England but in Stageland. The only people allowed to talk naturally are the two friends amusingly played by Mr. Bishop (grey hairs) and Mr. Playfair (bow window), and they have only one topic. Miss Nina Boucicault is charming with her timid grace, and Miss Madge Titheradge with her solemn and girlish fervour; but all Sir George Alexander's gentlemanly polish and perfect finish cannot reconcile us to his chestnut wig. Surely middle age could have been exhibited in its full panoramic extent without this hideous dye?

Nevertheless, there was plenty of applause for the play, and you conclude that there are happy playgoers whom Euclid cheers and not refrigerates.

"The Panorama of Youth."

Not a little old material went to the making of the four-act play "The Panorama of Youth," which Sir George Alexander presented at St. James's Theatre on Wednesday evening. The middle-aged hero is engaged to marry a lady with "a past," and in order to feel young again wears corsets and covers his grey hairs with a red dye. But his daughter comes home unexpectedly from a convent to tell him she has decided to devote her life to the service of a young man instead of to the Church, and it makes a difference. In the "taking of stock" that follows, the father learns for the first time that not only has the lady he loves got a past but that she is the mother of the man engaged to his daughter. Being determined to feel young he laughs at these trifles, but when his daughter discovers that her own mother was no better than she ought to be she precipitates a stage crisis which is not subdued until the fourth act, where all parties are once more replaced as they were. The play was well received but, whether its production was sufficient reason for closing the Globe Theatre for that night in order that Miss Laurette Taylor could get off to see it (because her husband Hartley Manners wrote it) is a matter of opinion. The first night certainly thought it was justified, and they applauded heartily.

• • • • •

All the fun that is to be found in "The Panorama of Youth" is made out of two middle-aged cronies of the middle-aged hero. The mention of their absent wives turns their faces acid. The "lucky dog" is the fellow whose wife is away from home. Wives are the evil spirits, and so the whole scheme of fun reminds one of the story of the two men strolling homeward from a supper party. "Come in and have one little drink; it's not late," said one of them when they arrived at his door. The other hesitated, prepared to look at his watch, and said: "But how does the enemy?" "Oh! she's all right," said the first. "She's been fast asleep in bed these two or three hours."

J. W.

KINGSWAY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to LENA ASHWELL, 36, Grosvenor Street, W.

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, APRIL 15th, 1915, AT 8.

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

ADVERTISEMENT

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS By

B. MACDONALD HASTINGS.

Luke Sufan		Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Seton Sufan		Mr. ALAN FISHER
Randolph Qualtrough	(of "The Daily Passenger")	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Willoughby Woods	(of "The Woods Billposting Co., Ltd.")	Mr. PAUL ARTHUR
Bert Pym	(of "The Novelty Advertising Co., Ltd.")	Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
John Hext	(of "John Hext & Co.")	Mr. CHARLES DALY
Duncan Mudie	(of "John Hext & Co.")	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN
Adolf		Mr. LEON M. LION
A Reporter		Mr. HARVEY BRABAN
Another Reporter		Mr. STEWART DAWSON
Ellen Sufan		Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Rose Appleyard		Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Elsie Makins		Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Maid		Miss JANET ROSS

The Play produced under the direction of SYDNEY VALENTINE.

The action of the play takes place before (Act I.) during (Act II.) and after the War (Acts III. and IV.) Some years elapse between Acts III. and IV.

Act I.—At 31a, Arlington Street, W.
Act II.—Luke Sufan's Office.
Act III.—At 31a, Arlington Street, W.
Act IV.—On the leads of a house in Hampstead.

There will be intervals of 10 minutes each between the Acts.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

Under the same Management, at the ROYALTY THEATRE,

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15.

THE MAN WHO STAYED AT HOME.

A Play in Three Acts by LECHMERE WORRALL and J. E. HAROLD TERRY.

MR. DENNIS EADIE, MR. MALCOLM CHERRY, MR. HUBERT HARBEN, MR. STANLEY LOGAN, MISS ISOBEL ELSOM, MISS RUTH MACKAY, MISS MARY JERROLD, MISS JEAN CADELL.

MATINEES EVERY THURSDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Miss BRAITHWAITE's and Miss O'MALLEY's dresses by Madame ESTHER, 5, Grafton Street, W.

Hats by MICHEE ZAC. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Poster in Act II. by NORMAN MORROW.

Weber Pianos manufactured in London used in the Orchestra and on the Stage supplied by THE ORCHESTRELLE COMPANY, Æolian Hall, New Bond Street, W.

Furniture by DRUCE & Co., Baker St., W. Scenery by GEORGE SACKMANN.

The Box Office (R. Wynne) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Telephone 4032 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes £2 12s. 6d. & £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Amphitheatre 2s. 6d. Pit (unreserved) 2s. 6d.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY APRIL 17TH AT 2.30.

The nearest Tube Stations to this Theatre are Holborn and British Museum.

Stage Manager - - - - - - Mr. STEWART DAWSON.
Business Manager - - - - - - Mr. ARTHUR PENLEY.

Plays

FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1915.

Sufan's Staminal Syrup cures that tired feeling and brings riches to Luke Sufan until the public appetite for it is sated, when Luke changes the label to Stefan's Scalp Cream and the money pours into his pockets again faster than ever. It is the old story: advertisement is the soul of business, &c.—for full particulars see advts. of the advertising agents. It also seems to be the soul of Luke Sufan, for when his only son is killed in the war, though his grief is genuine, he contrives to turn the hero's obituary notice into a puff of his new scalp cream. This is a neat ironic touch, indeed the neatest thing in the play: and yet it is not irony that Mr. Hastings is chiefly out for. What, obviously, he has been trying for in his Luke Sufan is the picture of a "mixed" character, a blend of good and bad, the high-minded and the vulgar, the romantic and the prosaic.

Of course these mixed characters are much more difficult to exhibit than characters all of a piece, and if Mr. Hastings has not succeeded, his is, at any rate, an artistically honourable failure. A failure Sufan must, we think, be called, because the blend attempted by the artist seems never to be quite complete. You see the different aspects of the man in succession, but you don't get a "composite photograph" of them. You are invited to consider him as (1) an "advertisement king," one of the vulgar rich, who used to be a romantic and entirely sympathetic fiddler; and (2) as a pious Jew who has married a "goy" wife, and feels that he is justly punished by their not getting on together. But, as you see the man, you simply cannot believe in his ever having fiddled; it is simply what the soldier (in this case his wife) said. Then the Hebraic business seems something merely stuck on, not an integral part of the character.

A COMING OF AGE.

Thus the play falls short of success as a whole because it is not, or rather its protagonist is not, really a whole, an organism, but a mechanical juxtaposition of parts. Several of the parts are quite bright. There is a capital scene of the young Sufan's coming of age: he is fresh from Cambridge and as unhappy among the advertisement-mongering crowd as the Lady amid the rabble rout of Comus. And there is a highly dramatic scene between husband and wife, when the fact (which the audience knew already) that the boy, now dead, was no son of Sufan's, is brought into full light. He is at first silenced by his wife's contempt for advertisement and scalp creams and her avowal that her love ceased when he gave up being a romantic fiddler; then rises and crushes her by the majestic wrath of the outraged Hebrew husband. You are thrilled yb the passionate vigour of the scene, and yet not so much thrilled as you might be because of the queer and confusing mixture of the two motifs: the trouble over old romance superseded by sordid prose and the trouble over the Jewish-Christian marriage.

They both reappear in the final act, where Sufan, deserted by his wife and retired from sordid business, is keeping the Feast of Tabernacles and playing his old romantic fiddle. He is tempted by the demons of advertisement, but drives them out of the tabernacle. Of course, his wife comes back to him, to the accompaniment of a Chopin nocturne, and they are left, grey-haired and chastened, minded to enjoy the smooth evening of their days.

A play, then, of excellent intentions, not all completely carried out, and with many interesting ideas, but rather more than the author has quite been able to manage. Mr. Sydney Valentine plays the husband with his usual intelligence and gusto and Miss Braithwaite the wife with her usual tenderness. Mr. Athol Stewart and Miss O'Malley are pleasant as a pair of not-too-young lovers; and there is a really comic chorus of advertisement demons.

'Advertisement': Play of Real People.

The new play by B. Macdonald Hastings, "Advertisement," presented at the Kingsway Theatre on Thursday evening, stands out apart from and above all the plays of the whole season. It is a welcome change from the false sentiment of the so-called comedies of serious interest to find a play of real people and real motives. It is true there is not over-much story for a four-act play, but what there is is real, for this Luke Sufan, the Jew, who began life as a musician and became a patent medicine maker, is a real man, and from the moment when the author presents him—a strenuous, rich, middle-aged, pushing business man earning thousands—down to the moment when we see him sick of the money hunt, turning back again to his music, we are held by him. He fascinates us. His is the dominating personality of the play, and the others around appear very small indeed. I think the author was very fortunate to have had Mr. Sydney Valentine to play this part—it is easily the best acting performance in London to-day. And, even then, he only took the part at the last moment owing to the sudden illness of Mr. Frederick Ross.

J. W.

74

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. RUPERT D'OYLY CARTE, Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - Mr. H. B. IRVING

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 3.

SEARCHLIGHTS

Preceded at 8.15, Matinees at 2.30, by

KEEPING UP APPEARANCES

A Play in One Act

By W. W. JACOBS.

Bill Burtenshaw ... ... Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Silas Winch ... ... Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Mrs. Burtenshaw ... ... Miss CLARE GREET

Scene—Mr. Burtenshaw's Best Bedroom.

SAVOY
THEATRE

17 April 1915

M

Orch. Stall

No C 1

To be retained

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1915.

A COMIC GHOST.

MR. W. W. JACOBS'S AMUSING ONE-ACT PLAY.

The children would just love it. There are few things they enjoy more than a really comical ghost story, and Mr. W. W. Jacobs has given that in his new one-act play called "Keeping Up Appearances," which was presented at the Savoy Theatre on Saturday in front of "Searchlights."

Bill and Silas lived in mean streets, drank beer, and were longshoremen. In far-off days, when they were "romantic," they made a compact that the first one to die should revisit earth and call on his friend. Then they lost sight of one another, and when the story opens Silas, after many years of absence, was back again very thirsty and very anxious to borrow all Bill possessed. Bill, however, found no difficulty in drinking the £2 a week he earned, and Mrs. Bill, who knew of the old compact, persuaded Silas to stay and appear as a ghost to her husband. Bill came home shouting and prepared to see a hundred ghosts, and he roared louder still when Silas appeared at the foot of his bed and made him swear to give up drinking and to send 15s. a week by post to the "widow" of his old "pal," Mrs. Silas.

When the "ghost" had gone, Mrs. Bill told her husband that he had returned for a moment to say that instead of sending the weekly money by post he was to send it by his wife, Mrs. Bill, and Bill, broken-hearted at the prospect of a life without beer, consented. What Silas would think of this manœuvre can be imagined; the audience just chuckled over it. J. W.

35

NEW THEATRE

E
17/4/1915

Orch. Stall

H 151

LEFT
To be retained

ON SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1915, and Every Evening at 8.30.
Matinees, every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30.

GEORGE CLARK and ALAN FENN

PRESENT

THE JOKER

A New Farcical Comedy in three Acts by
ERNEST SCHOFIELD and JOHN RAMSAY.

The characters in the Play are given in the order in which they appear

Mary Hildebrand	(Younger daughter of Colonel Hildebrand)	MADGE CRICHTON
Count Beaupré	(The Colonel's friend)	HENRI LAURENT
Colonel Hildebrand		DAWSON MILWARD
Kitty Hildebrand	(Elder daughter of Colonel Hildebrand)	DORIS LYTTON
Agatha Hildebrand	(His sister)	MARGARET WATSON
Rayne	(The Butler)	FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Inspector Dorrien	(Of Scotland Yard)	STANLEY BROWN
Arthur Smith	(The Joker)	NORMAN PAGE
Biedenkopf	German Spies	FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Winter		CHARLES BISHOP
Hecht		OLAF HYTTEN
Shoetenkampf		VINCENT HOLMAN
Hans Richtheim	(Master Spy)	OSWALD MARSHALL
Claire Hildebrand	(Colonel Hildebrand's wife)	MARIE GEORGE
Miss Jenkins	(Her Assistant)	NORAH GREGORY JONES
Fletcher	(Police Officer)	FRANK LIDINGTON

ACT I. .. .. Room in Colonel Hildebrand's house in Essex. Time about 11 a.m. } Same day
ACT II .. .. The same. Time about 9.30 p.m. }
ACT III. .. Fitting room and shop in Mrs. Hildebrand's house in Chelsea. Two hours later }

The Play produced by HOLMAN CLARK.

Miss Lytton's, Miss Crichton's, and Miss Watson's Dresses by WILSON, 17, Hanover Square, W.
Miss Marie George's Negligée, etc., by Madam LOYSE, 11, Princes Street, W.
Diver's suit kindly lent by Messrs. SIEBE GORMAN. Furniture by S. ALLMAN. Piano by CRAMER. Uniforms, Wigs, etc., by CLARKSON.
Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDES, Ltd., London and Birmingham.
The Theatre Disinfected and Perfumed with SPRAOLITE, MASLIN BROS., London.

Acting Manager	(For George Clark and Alan Fenn)	C. KINGSLEY
Stage Manager		OSWALD MARSHALL
Assistant Stage Manager		JAMES ANDERSON
Business Manager	(For Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	CECIL ROSE

Nearest Tube Station to this Theatre—Leicester Square.

THE TIMES

MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1915.

A widower who was ashamed to tell his family that he had married again and to tell his wife that he was a widower with a family told each party the same fib to cover his visits to the other; he said he was attending to a submarine of his invention. Each party believed in the submarine, and so chattered about it that friendly Governments sent their agents to negotiate for it and the Germans a gang of spies to shadow the inventor and to destroy his invention.

A youth who had tried to enlist and been refused for physical defects (hence likening himself to the "Joker," the useless card in the pack) was mistaken by the German spies for their master spy, and, accepting the situation, had to be disguised as the new governess to the widower's family (cue for Charley's Aunt episodes). By and by the real master spy appeared, but the sham one brazened it out so successfully as to get the other spies to gag and bind the real one as an impostor and telephoned to Scotland Yard to pounce on the whole gang just at the moment when the widower (disburdening himself of his fictitious submarine by pretending that it had sunk) came in dripping wet, and was compelled by his wife to put his feet in mustard and water. Shortly afterwards the sham spy was detected as a sham by his associates and there was more gagging and binding, accompanied by bombs timed to explode in three minutes by the clock.

But Scotland Yard intervened just at the 180th second, and the Germans were handcuffed, and there was an end of a farce which, in the records of the far-fetched, must stand very near the top, and no doubt suggested to every one in the audience the obvious joke that The Joker jokes "will" decflcuity."

MONDAY, APRIL 19th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

(FOR TWO WEEKS ONLY).

OLIVER TWIST.

Fagin	HERBERT TREE
Bill Sikes	LYN HARDING
The Artful Dodger	FRANK STANMORE By arrangement with the London Film Co.
Charlie Bates	J. W. MOLLISON
Tom Chitling	VICTOR M. LEWISOHN
Barney	ALEXANDER SARNER
Mr. Brownlow	HENRY MORRELL
Mr. Grimwig	JULIAN CROSS
Monks	H. A. SAINTSBURY
Harry Maylie	BASIL GILL
Dr. Sime	HENRY BYATT
Mr. Bumble	ROY BYFORD
Giles	LEONARD YORKE
Brittles	GEORGE LAUNDY
Oliver Twist	MAVIS YORKE
Nancy	CONSTANCE COLLIER
Betsy	MARY CLARE
Mrs. Maylie	ALMA MURRAY
Rose Maylie	JESSIE WINTER
Mrs. Bedwin	MARY BROUGH
Mrs. Bumble	STELLA ST. AUDRIE
Maid	IRENE DELISSE

His Majesty's Theatre
HAYMARKET.

MON. Evening,

April 19, 1915.

Orchestra Stall
Seven Shillings and Sixpence

No G 1

This to be retained.

An "Oliver Twist" Story.

Sir Herbert Tree's revival (for two weeks only) of "Oliver Twist" at His Majesty's Theatre last Monday reminded some of us of that night ten years ago (September 26, 1905) when during the first run of this play Sir Herbert came before the curtain and told the astonished audience that although "Oliver Twist" was playing to the utmost capacity of the house at every performance he must close the theatre at once for some weeks. The reason for that sudden closure was the discovery of a creek in the proscenium arch. He explained that there was no immediate danger, but he thought it best to go, and as, five minutes before he spoke there he had secured the Waldorf Theatre (now the Strand Theatre), there would be no interruption to the run. He kept his word, too, and played at the Waldorf the next evening. J. W.

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Under the Management of Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

ON MONDAY, APRIL 19th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH presents

Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS

AND

Miss ELLALINE TERRISS

IN

WILD THYME

A New Comedy in Three Acts, adapted from the French "La Belle Aventure," by De Flers, Caillavet et Rey, by GEORGE EGERTON.

Characters in the order in which they appear in the Play.

Comtesse De Landal, Andre's Mother	Miss VANE FEATHERSTON
Didier	Mr. EDWARD THIRLBY
Jeanne De Valette	Miss IVY ST. HELIER
Edonard De Fontaine	Mr. RICHARD CHARLTON
Valentin De Rochat, Hélène's Fiancé	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Laurens	Mr. LEWIS FIELDER
Comte De Landal, Andre's Father	Mr. JOHN BEAUCHAMP
Hélène De Treville	Miss ELLALINE TERRISS
Suzanne Fontaine	Miss MAY TAVERNER
Monsieur Duprez	Mr. W. O. BILLINGTON
Madame Duprez	Miss ADELA MEASOR
Marquis De Langel	Mr. GRAHAM PRICE
Andre De Landal	Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS
Jeantine	Miss MOLLIE LOWELL
Gaston	Mr. CHARLES CECIL
Doctor Le Brun	Mr. J. C. BUCKSTONE
Madame De Treville, Helen's Grandmother	... Miss MARY RORKE

Wedding Guests: Mesdames Dorothy Buckstone, Elizabeth Beerbohm, Irene Russell, Sybil Hook, May Vaughan, Joan Challis, Lucy Roche, Constance Luttrell, Elinore Hare, Margaret Watts, Lena Morris. Messrs. Eric Lugg, Seymour Jackson, Frank Lester, J. Rowland, Aubrey Daring, Johnson Cookson, Capt. Morris.

ACT I. ... ... The De Landal's Chateau, near Paris

ACT II. ... The Sitting Room in Helene's Cottage at Clermont. (The same night)

ACT III. ... ... The Garden Room in Helene's Cottage. (The next morning)

Time: THE PRESENT.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS.

The Song in Act II. specially composed by Madame GUY D'HARDELOT and Sung by Signor MANRICO BACCI. Published by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co., LTD., 50 New Bond St., London, W.

The Dresses designed and made by Madame ALEXANDRA, 47 Baker Street, W.

Hats by KOSKY, 4A Sloane Street.

Miss Terriss's Dresses designed and made by LUCILE LTD., 23 Hanover Square.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. WILLIAM C. MASON

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 3724 GERRARD.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Stooking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, APRIL 20, 1915.

It is a pity they kept the name "Amire." The stage echoes with it. It is on every lip. Such a pretty name! says Mr. Seymour Hicks. Yet not one of them gets it right even once. Even the harmless necessary "Madame" is a stumbling-block. Such trifles become important in a world of counts and marquises, where you hear of the blood of the De Trévilles. French playwrights like our own have a weakness for titles, and if you are out for "distinction" it is just as well to keep it up phonetically.

But, however mispronounced, it still remains good fun, not quite such racy fun as in the original text, of course, but as good fun as is compatible with mild bowdlerization. As La Belle Aventure, however, dates from before the war, all ardent playgoers may be assumed to know what it is about. It is about a young bride who, finding at the eleventh hour that she cannot "stick" the bridegroom, leaves him practically on the way to church and runs away, escorted by the man she does love. In a very natural way they are taken by the girl's grandmother for the lawfully wedded couple and, in their own despite, thrown into one another's arms. It is a dangerous theme, and with the least blundering might become nauseous, but the French authors have handled it absolutely without offence.

Modern 'Babes in the Wood."

There is a good deal of pretty sentiment in the play "Wild Thyme" (adapted by "George Egerton") from the French "La Belle Aventure"), produced at the Comedy Theatre last Monday, and it would have been much more effective than it was if some of the principals could have played into each other's hands instead of giving onlookers the impression that they were addressing their dialogue to the audience. "Wild Thyme" is a modern variant of the "Babes in the Wood" fairy tale. In this instance, however, the little birds are two very very young people who elope to get married, and before the ceremony can be arranged are found by an enthusiastic, and none too observant, old grandmother and led off together by her to rest. The sentiment is laid on with a free hand, obviously to make the audience imagine that it is quite an innocent story, with nothing French about it except the names of the people and places. Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss Ellaline Terriss were the runaway lovers. Let it be added that the play had a capital reception, and that Mr. Hicks was compelled to make a speech. J. W.

To-night, Tuesday, April 20th, 1915,

And every following Evening at 8.30.

Frederick Harrison presents

QUINNEYS

By Horace Annesley Vachell.

A New Comedy in Four Acts.

Upon which the Novel of the same name was subsequently written.

Joseph Quinney	Henry Ainley
Susan, His Wife	Sydney Fairbrother
Posy, His Daughter	Marie Hemingway
Sam Tomlin, His Brother-in-law ...	A. G. Poulton
Mabel Dredge, His Typist	Mary Malone
James, His Foreman	Godfrey Tearle
Cyrus P. Hunsaker	E. J. Caldwell
Dupont Jordan	Roland Pertwee

Time—The Present.

Acts I, II & IV take place in the "Sanctuary" in Quinney's house overlooking Soho Square.

Act III in Sam Tomlin's Sitting-Room in the Fulham Road.

The Play produced for Frederick Harrison by E. Lyall Swete.

Scenery by Joseph Harker.

Dresses and Hats designed and executed by Löyse, 11 Princes Street, Hanover Square.

Furniture by Thornton Smith, Ltd., 31 Soho Square, Kreble Ltd., 10 Carlisle Street, Soho, Parkenthorpe, Ebury Street, and Spillmans, St. Martin's Lane. To the members of all these firms, the thanks of the management are tendered for expert advice in regard to Quinneys' Sanctuary.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by

A New One Act Comedy,
By G. E. Jennings.

Susan, The Duchess of Wiltshire	Ellis Jeffreys
Leonard, Lord Porth	H. R. Hignett
Bert, a Workman	Godfrey Tearle
Horace, The Lift Man	Gordon Harker
Nelly	Maud E. Bell

Scene: A Lift on the Underground.

The Play produced for Frederick Harrison by E. Lyall Swete.

Miss Ellis Jeffreys' Dress and Hat by Madame Handley Seymour.
Accessories for the Tube Lift Scene have been kindly lent by The London Electric Railway—"The Underground."

Programme of Music.

1.	(a) Torch Dance and Pastorale		... Vicent Thomas
	(b) Overture	"All that matters" ..	Norman O'Neill
2.	(a) Scotch Airs	...	Traditional
	(b) Prelude	"Figaro"	... Mozart
3.	(a) Valse	"L'Arbre de Noël"	... Rebikoff
	(b) Dance	"Schcherazade"	Rimsky-Kosakoff
	(c) Chanson	... ...	Kalinnikoff
4.	Four 18th Century pieces (Old Flemish)...		... Frocco
5.	(a) Serenata		Moszkowski
	(b) Morning		... Grieg

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Stage Manager, Reginald Bach. Musical Director, Norman O'Neill.

THREE MATINEES WEEKLY.

Every Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday at 2.30.

The Box Office (W. H. Leverton) is open daily from 10 to 10.
Telephone—Regent 6030, 6031 and 6032.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Nearest Underground Stations—Piccadilly and Trafalgar Square.

Business Manager ... ... Horace Watson.

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1915.

Before the first act of Quinneys was half over you felt quite sure of your evening. Evidently you were in for a good thing; Mr. Ainley was going to see to that. And then you found that other people were going to see to it, too, Miss Fairbrother, for instance, and Mr. Tearle. Ultimately you found that the one who had seen to it most of all was the author, for good players are made by good parts, and for homely, hearty humanity the husband and wife in this play could not easily be bettered. Mr. Vachell is lucky to have had Joseph Quinney and Sarah, his wife, played as they were last night: he is luckier still to have thought of them before they were played.

Quinney is a Yorkshireman. You shiver by anticipation, remembering that impossible hybrid monster the usual stage Yorkshireman. But this one is a real Yorkshireman; much better than that. He is just his individual self. He is a dealer in curios by trade, but a great one and an honest one. Things, his wife calls the curios he deals in, sticks and stones and graven images, and she declares that he has all his life preferred things to persons. And it seems a true bill. His best curios are so dear to him that he cannot part with them. His "sanctuary" is as crammed with valuables as that wonderful curio-shop in the "Peau de Chagrin": he caresses them, idolizes them, and will not sell them. His daughter and his wife come next in his affections, or seem to. And when his daughter is found to be in love with his foreman, the father is furious: for he cannot believe the young fellow simply wants the girl. He assumes he must want the precious "things." With this notion in his head he becomes unmanageable—a bull in his own china-shop.

It would be a pity to tell the little story, for it is a very little story, and after all it doesn't matter. It is the characters that matter. The characters of Quinney and his wife, and the essential veracity and rich humour with which they are put before you. They are both as obstinate as mules. They scold one another with an incredible profusion of tormenting epithet. Yet you see through it all that their affection is deep and strong. It is too strong for such trifles as the "butterfly kiss" which (after seeing it pass between the young sweethearts) the old man playfully tries on his wife. "Well?" asks his wife. "Rotten!" he grimaces, and gives her a good hug. But this delightful pair are not to be described by samples; they must be seen. Mr. Ainley and Miss Fairbrother, artists always, have here parts worthy of their art. Their obvious enjoyment in playing them is shared, as always, by those who see them play. Mr. Tearle and Miss Hemingway make a pretty pair of young sweethearts, of course, but these belong to the "story." The elder pair belong to life. Great delight was manifested over the play. It is beyond question the best work Mr. Vachell has yet done in the theatre.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Tuesday
Evening
April 20

Orchestra Stalls 10/6

No. J 21

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause

IS the vogue of the business man as a stage hero about to begin in London? American authors have for a long while been exploiting him, but our dramatists have almost neglected him until this month—and within a week of each other—we get two plays in which the commanding sympathetic character is a man of business. The first of the two plays to arrive was "Advertisement," now running at the Kingsway Theatre; the second is "Quinneys," produced at the Haymarket Theatre last Tuesday. This latter is much the best play Horace Vachell has yet written. It is delightfully quaint, with a whimsical old curio dealer as its chief character and a charming young girl—his daughter—helping to bring into the story a pretty air of sentiment through her love for her father's manly young foreman.

* * * *

Fortunately the sentiment never obtrudes in "Quinneys." There is not too much of it to clog the action of the piece, which is full of human little touches and interesting little incidents. No wonder the play and players were accorded an enthusiastic ovation. Mr. Henry Ainley gave a splendid performance as the curio dealer, and Marie Hemingway as the heroine was a splendid surprise. A surprise, I say, because it was the first chance she has ever had except in tiny parts. She is young, pretty, and charming, and every word she speaks comes clearly and distinctly over the "floats." What a relief from that which we are accustomed to get. "Quinneys" is a big winner. J. W.

A Great Success.

A few weeks ago I met Horace Vachell, the author of "Quinneys," as he was coming out of the shop of a curio dealer near the Seven Dials. I asked him if he was buying green china. He said he was not, but that he knew of a black vase that he would like to be able to buy. This was a week or two before his play "Quinneys" was produced, and now if he desires that black vase I think he can buy it, for his play is a prodigious success, and will be a still greater success in America—because the theatres out there hold more money and there are more of them. Mr. Cyril Maude must feel greatly disappointed that he let this play go after having had it. Mr. Frederick Harrison got the first chance of reading it after it was released, and within a week had the company engaged and the play in rehearsal. It is going to be one of those fortune-makers that crop up occasionally.

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

SOLE PROPRIETORS: The EXECUTORS of the late Mr. LOUIS MEYER.

Under the Management of JULIA NEILSON & FRED TERRY.

On THURSDAY, APRIL 22nd, 1915, & Every Evening at 8.

"THE ARGYLE CASE."

By HARRIET FORD and HARVEY J. O'HIGGINS.

Written in co-operation with Detective William J. Burns.

Ashe Kayton ("Never-Sleep Kayton"), Head of the Kayton Detective Agency	Mr. FRED TERRY
Bruce Argyle, son of the murdered man	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
James T. Hurley, Mr. Argyle's lawyer	Mr. F. PERCIVAL STEVENS
Dr. Frederick Kreisler	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Simeon Gage, Counterfeiters	Mr. E. WOODWARD
William Skidd, Counterfeiters	Mr. LESLIE GORDON
Augustus Leischmann, Manager Kayton's New York Office	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Samuel Cartwright, Detectives	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL
"Joe" Manning, Detectives	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON
Thomas Nash, Detectives	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Daniel Colt, a Government Expert	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
"Bob" Vincent, Kayton's Detecta Phone Operators	Mr. BROUGHTY FERRIE
"Jim" Baynes, Kayton's Detecta Phone Operators	Mr. GEO. C. BROWNE
Findley, a Butler	Mr. W. H. GARBOIS
Andy, a Servant	Mr. CLIFFORD SPURR
Popp, a Footman	Mr. IAN O. WILL
Mrs. Martin, Wife of Dr. Kreisler	Miss JULIA NEILSON
Mary Maynard, Mr. Argyle's adopted Daughter	Miss NELL CARTER
Mrs. Wyatt, her Companion	Miss WINIFRED EVANS
Nancy Thornton, Bruce's Fiancee	Miss PEARLA GARDNER
Mrs. Beauregard, a Cook	Miss BESSIE MAJOR
Kitty, a Maid	Miss DOROTHY DAVIS

ACT I. Mr. Argyle's Library.

ACT II. Kayton's Private Office, at the Kayton Detective Agency.

ACT III. Double Scene. The large room of Kreisler's Counterfeiting Den in Washington Square, and a small attic in the house next door, where Detective Kayton's men are on the receiver end of the Detecta Phone.

ACT IV. Kayton's Office. The next morning.

Time: The present. Place: New York City.

Stage Manager ... Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL

Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. ERIC MESSITER

Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. ALFRED POPE

Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. GUY STEWART

Call Boy ... Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

THE TIMES

FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1915.

As American detective plays go, this is a quite amusing American detective play. Perhaps it ought to be called an American detectaphone play. This barbarous name has been needlessly invented for a peculiarly sensitive telephone designed apparently to transmit the incriminating conversations of murderers, coiners, note-forgers, e tutti quanti to detective-stenographers seated in the next room. But as the detectives themselves seem to have the run of the criminals' apartments, and do in fact interfere personally whenever anything requires really doing, the detectaphone strikes us as merely an elegant superfluity.

Anyhow, the real interest of The Argyle Case is not detectaphonic but human, which is what it should be. Very human is the detective played by Mr. Fred Terry. He examines at great length the Irish butler and the black cook, and all the other people who, it would be obvious to every one save a very human detective, never committed the murder. He never uses one word, like the lady novelist you have heard of, where six will suffice. And he falls in love at first sight with the falsely accused heroine. Since the death, if he is dead, of Dr. Watson's famous friend, this is the detective for our money. He wouldn't hurt a fly. A child could play with him. He has a soul above such low tricks as withdrawing bullets from the criminals' revolvers or crying "hands up" to all and sundry. No, this very human detective, at the very moment when the criminals are pointing really loaded revolvers at him, devotes himself to tenderly nursing the fainting heroine. And his best energies are reserved for the business of letting off the woman-criminal because she is the heroine's long-lost mother. This is Miss Julia Neilson, a woe-begone figure, passionately adoring a Teutonic-American note-forger in a green velvet coat who has invented a process of producing bank "bills" superior to the genuine article by colour-photography. Fortunately the process, unlike the extra-sensitive telephone, gets off free of a barbarous name. Mr. C. W. Somerset is the forger, a sinister, wailing personage, who might (as the woman suggests) make an honest living out of his photographic discovery but prefers to turn it to base uses, out of a spite against society. When he shoots himself he contrives a most effective fall over the table, so that you may say nothing becomes in his life like the leaving of it. To the general surprise and delight the murder which forms the "case" proves to have been committed by a solicitor. Needless to add, the one thing that has not the remotest connexion with his discovery and conviction is the detectaphone. Yes, a decidedly amusing detective play, but just about half-an-hour too long. The programme calls the detectaphone a "cute little instrument"; but so is the stop-watch.

"The Argyle Case."

Somehow Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson have made a much better hand of presenting an American "crook" play than any other managers here appear able to do. "The Argyle Case," which they produced at the Strand Theatre on Thursday evening, is a very entertaining example of melodrama, and Mr. Terry as the New York detective is a delight and looks delighted all the time with the work he is doing. In this play he is "Never-Sleep" Kayton, the famous New York detective called in to unravel the mystery of a murder case, and who in investigating the crime, comes across a gang of forgers. Armed crooks, detectives, a mysterious woman, suspected innocents, a crime-loving lawyer, and all sorts of other curious people are mixed up in this story. There are scenes on the detective office, a midnight fight in an attic, fierce threats from fierce crime hunters, and heaps of material of that sort, all displayed in the best dramatic style by Mr. Fred Terry and his excellent company. This play should be a popular one.

J. W.

DALY'S THEATRE

Proprietor and Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES
Business Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. ARTHUR ALDIN.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24th, at 8.

FIRST PERFORMANCE OF

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

The Musical Play

"BETTY"

IN THREE ACTS.

By FREDERICK LONSDALE and GLADYS UNGER.
Music by PAUL A. RUBENS.
Additional Numbers by Ernest Stellan and Merlin Morgan.
Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and PAUL A. RUBENS.

Betty	Miss WINIFRED BARNES
Lady Playne	Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
Estelle (Head Model at Jotte's)	Miss MABEL SEALBY
Chicquette	Miss ISABEL DELORME
Mrs. Rawlins	Miss KATE WELCH
Jane	Miss MODESTA DALY
Lord Playne	Mr. G. P. HUNTLEY
Achille Jotte (Court Dressmaker)	Mr. W. H. BERRY
The Duke of Crowborough	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Gerard, Earl of Beverley (His Son)	Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
David (Lord Playne's Nephew)	Miss DAISY BURRELL
The Hon. Victor Halifax	Mr. ARTHUR WELLESLEY
Major Otway	Mr. ALFRED S. BARBER
Cedric	Mr. CECIL FLETCHER
Hillier (Butler)	Mr. CHAS. F. COOKE
Lathers (Valet)	Mr FRANK PERFITT
Alf (Page)	Master CYRIL DOUGHTY

Act I — Earl of Beverley's House in Regent's Park (E. H. Ryan)
Act II — Gardens of Same (E. H. Ryan)
Act III — Farnham Towers (Alfred Terraine)

Dresses designed by Comelli, and executed by Esther, Ltd., Miss Fisher, Michard Sœurs, Johns & Bonham, Ltd., Morris Angel & Son, B. J. Simmons. Hats by Maison Lewis.

Stage Director - - - Mr. Fred J. Blackman
Musical Director - - - Mr. Merlin Morgan

"BETTY" COMES TO TOWN.

Mr. George Edwardes' New Success.

The long-expected musical play "Betty" was produced at Daly's Theatre last evening. The production of a new piece at Daly's Th[illegible] is always one of the big events of the [illegible]trical year. It is not an event, how[illegible], that happens every year, for the judgment of Mr. George Edwardes is such that twelve months does not always limit the run of the plays that he presents.

The book of the new piece is by Frederick Lonsdale and Gladys Unger, the lyrics by Adrian Ross, the music by Paul A. Rubens. Mr. Edwardes first read—and accepted—this play two years ago, when he was living in a cottage on the top of the Wiltshire hills, and the directions for its mounting came direct from him from a cottage down on the Hampshire coast. His great reputation as a producer of musical plays is shown very clearly by the facts in this instance: yesterday crowds waited outside the theatre all day for the doors to open, and the libraries once more found a public willing to book seats far ahead.

Let it be said at once that the new play justified all that was said of it beforehand. As a preliminary to the London production Mr. Edwardes first presented it at Manchester last Christmas, and gave it a three months' tour. He did the same thing years before with "Kitty Grey" and also with "The Dollar Princess," so it was no precedent. For London, however, the cast of "Betty" has been very considerably altered. The chorus is an entirely different one, and the costumes and scenery are new.

The story is the simple one of a young lordling who to spite his father marries one of the maids in his house and eventually falls in love with her. That is the pretty little romance that Miss Winifred Barnes and Mr. Donald Calthrop have to act, and delightfully and naturally this pleasant and talented young couple do it.

It is the first time that Miss Barnes has played the lead at Daly's Theatre, and it is Mr. Calthrop's first appearance in a musical play. Another actor from the legitimate stage who helps "Betty" enormously is Mr. C. M. Lowne.

With such a cast as Mr. Edwardes gave to last night's piece it would have been strange if the performance did aught but delight the audience. It was a pleasure to laugh at the oddities and humours of Mr. G. P. Huntley, Mr. W. H. Berry, and Miss Mabel Sealby. In smaller parts, too, Miss Daisy Burrell, Miss Kate Welch, and Mr. Arthur Wellesley (Lord Dangan) were excellent, and the chorus is easily the most beautiful and most beautifully gowned ever seen at any time in a musical play.

J. W.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT DEVELOPED AIRMANSHIP.

THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1915.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS' MATINEE.

Wounded soldiers, officers and men, from London hospitals filled every corner of Daly's Theatre to see an invitation performance of "Betty" given yesterday by Mr. George Edwardes. They arrived in omnibuses, vans, and private motor-cars, with nurses to help and wait on them.

There were strong comrades there to carry in those who were badly wounded, and there were charming ladies to bring them tea in the interval. The only "regret" of the afternoon was that the Lord Chamberlain's licence did not permit smoking. The men did not appear to miss the accustomed cigarette: they were too amused and interested with all that went on, and when the play was over they cheered the company and the company cheered them, and together they all sang "God Save the King."

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

OCTOBER 31, 1915

DALY'S THEATRE
EVENING
Oct. 29
Stall
C 19
To be retained.

Gabrielle Ray Returns.

After an absence of four years Miss Gabrielle Ray returned to the stage on Friday evening, at Daly's Theatre, in the cast of the tuneful "Betty." She was given a fine welcome by the audience, and the gallery added an extra cheer, on its own account, to the three salvos that greeted her on her first entrance. Always a delightful dancer, with a style all her own that many have vainly tried to imitate, Miss Ray is now, if possible, more charming and nimble-footed than ever, and so paid the penalty of having to give many encores. Another newcomer also made his appearance in "Betty" on Friday—the popular Mr. Lauri de Frece, with many new comicalities that put everyone in good humour. "Betty" is certainly worth seeing again.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Licensee - Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28TH, 1915, at 8.0

Mr George Grossmith's and Mr. Edward Laurillard's

PRODUCTION

"TO-NIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

A NEW MUSICAL PLAY.

Book by FRED THOMPSON Music by PAUL A. RUBENS

Lyrics by PAUL A. RUBENS & PERCY GREENBANK

Montague Love-it-Love	Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Pedro ... (A Tango Teacher) ...	Mr. MAX DEARLY
Henry ... (Love-it-Love's Nephew) ...	Mr. LESLIE HENSON
Alphonse ... (Head Waiter at Covent Hall) ...	Mr. ROBERT NAISBY
Robert Carraway ...	Mr. VERNON DAVIDSON
Albert ...	Mr. VICTOR GOURIET
Lord Ridgmount ...	Mr. STANLEY BRIGHTMAN
Policeman ...	Mr. FOREST SYYLIE
AND
The Hon. Dudley Matten ...	Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH
...	...Miss HAIDEE DE LANCEY
Beatrice Carraway (Robert's Wife)	Miss JULIA JAMES
Victoria ... (Her Sister)	Miss MOYA MANNERING
Percy de Menthe (Of the Pall Mall Family)	Miss MADGE SAUNDERS
Angela L'Amour Lovatte (Her Friend)	Miss GLADYS HOMELEY
Lucy Percy Preston	Miss PEGGY KURTON
Lady Edith Taplow	Miss BARBARA DUNBAR
Minnie Sheats	Miss JUDITH NELME
The Hon. Baby Vercher	Miss DORIS STOCKER
Avice Carlton	Miss ELSIE SCOTT
Yvette La Plage	Miss ADRAH FAIR
Attendants at Opera House	Miss DOROTHY DEVERE Miss VERA DAVIS
Alice (Mistress of Dancing)	Miss CYNTHIA MURRAY

ACT I. [illegible]
The Carraway's House at Maidenhead.

ACT II. [illegible]
Scene 1. Foyer of the Boxes, Royal Opera House.
Scene 2. Covent Garden Market.
Scene 3. Daisy's Flat in Mount Street.

[illegible] Produced by AUSTEN HURGON.

The Musical Numbers [illegible]

Dances and Choruses arranged by GEORGE SHURLEY.

Costumes designed by [illegible]

[illegible] Model Dresses and Chad's are the Modern Dress [illegible]

Orchestra conducted by [illegible]

Stage Manager [illegible]

Scenery by H. & M. Ravenhill & Mackie.

[illegible]

MATINEE: SATURDAYS AT 2.15.

[illegible]

THE Gaiety Theatre was very nearly like its old self again on Wednesday evening, when Messrs. George Grossmith and Edward Laurillard's production of "To-night's the Night" was presented for the first time in London. There were many of the regular old patrons of the house present, and many an actress, too, who had sung and danced in musical successes on its stage. Miss Gertie Millar, Miss Lily Elsie, Miss Gladys Cooper, each got her welcome, as she arrived, from pit and gallery, and so the bustle and excitement helped to bring in some at least of the old electricity of a Gaiety first night. The familiar faces of Mr. George Dance and Mr. W. B. Purefoy, who until this year were two of the old-time directors of the Gaiety, were among the audience, and faithful patrons of the house, such as Lord Cholmondeley, Lord Lurgan, and Sir Charles Hartopp, were also there.

"To-night's the Night."

Had the Gaiety Theatre, at the time that Mr. Edwardes was compelled to take a rest, put on a bright, jovial, full of fun and frolic affair like "To-night's the Night," the theatre would not have had the unpleasant experiences that it has gone through during the past twelve months. This new entertainment is the very lightest and merriest affair, and is absolutely certain to be popular. It has had the advantage of being produced by Mr. Austen Hurgon, and of having had the dances and choruses arranged by Mr. George Shurley. The result is the success that was cheered to the echo on Wednesday night. George Grossmith, James Blakeley, and a newcomer named Leslie Henson, are all absolute successes in this piece, and Miss Moya Mannering, about whom no one knew anything in advance, made the biggest personal first night success in musical comedy seen for some years. J.W.

The "Find" of the Season.

Miss Moya Mannering, who has made a greater personal success in a London musical comedy production—in "To-Night's the Night," at the Gaiety Theatre—than any actress has done in recent years, has been waiting a good while for her chance. She has played in everything from concert parties to melodrama, and has toured in Australia. She is a bright, clever, young actress and belongs by birth to the profession. Her father (Mr. "Daddy" Doyle) has for many years been stage manager and producer at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, and has had his own companies on the road. In addition to being the proud father of the new Gaiety girl, he also is father of Mrs. Malcolm Cherry. J.W. May 16

FROM CHORUS TO LEADING LADY. 5/8

From the Gaiety Theatre Miss Moya Manuering will go to the Globe Theatre tomorrow evening to play the heroine in "Peg o' My Heart." She is taking up this part for the time that Miss Laurette Taylor is away on holidays. She is a very clever girl and was promoted from the chorus to leading lady at the Gaiety Theatre during the rehearsals of "To-Night's the Night." J.W.

GAIETY THEATRE.

To-Night's The Night

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee ... ... Mr. EDWARD C. ENGELBACH.

THURSDAY, APRIL 29th, 1915, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING following at 8.15.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

Messrs. GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD

PRESENT

"ON TRIAL"

A Play In a Prologue, Three Acts and an Epilogue.

By ELMER E. REIZENSTEIN.

By arrangement with Messrs. COHEN & HARRIS and ARTHUR HOPKINS, New York City.

THE PARTICIPANTS.

The Defendant	ARTHUR WONTNER
His Daughter	ODETTE GOIMBAULT
His Wife	EDYTH GOODALL
Her Father (Deceased)	FRANK A. WAKEFIELD
The Dead Man	CLIFTON ALDERSON
His Widow	FRANCES DILLON
His Secretary	TARVER PENNA
A Newsagent	EDGAR B. PAYNE
A Hotel Proprietor	E. H. BROOKE
A Physician	A. HARDING STEERMAN
A Maid	JENNIE MARIS
A Waiter	FRANCIS SERLE
The Judge	WILLIAM LUGG
The District Attorney	JULIAN ROYCE
The Defendant's Counsel	BASSETT ROE
The Clerk	CECIL BEVAN
The Court Stenographer	G. DICKSON-KENWIN
The Court Attendants	FRED TERRISS, JAMES LOMAS
Foreman of the Jury	LEONARD SHEPHERD
Juryman Mr. Summers	SYDNEY PAXTON

The Jury Leonard Calvert, A. C. Hardie, Arthur Jackson, H. S. Dacre, Fred C. Glover, Henry Nelson, G. A. Senger, &c.

PRODUCED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF FELIX EDWARDES.

NOTE.

The Action of the Play takes place in the United States, and endeavours have been made to retain the American surroundings and atmosphere. The Court Scene is an exact replica of a Criminal Court in New York, including costumes of the Judge, Barristers and Court Officials.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

FIRST DAY OF THE TRIAL.

PROLOGUE: The Court Room.

ACT I. Scene 1 The Library in the home of Gerald Trask. June 24th, 1913. 9.30 p.m.
Scene 2 The Court Room.

ACT II. Scene 1—The Court Room.
Scene 2 The Sitting Room in the home of Herbert Strickland. June 24th, 1913. 7.30 p.m.
Scene 3 The Court Room.

SECOND DAY OF THE TRIAL.

ACT III. Scene 1—The Court Room.
Scene 2 A room in a Hotel on Long Island 13 YEARS EARLIER.
Scene 3 The Court Room.

EPILOGUE: Scene 1 The Jury Room.
Scene 2 The Court Room.

Business Manager ... } For GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD ... Mr. H. F. NOKES
Stage Manager ... } ... Mr. E. H. BROOKE

ACTING MANAGER ... ... (For the Lyric Theatre) ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1915.

Why does American melodrama bear export better than American farce? For one reason, because jokes are apt to be local whereas thrills never are. For another, because the American virtue of strict attention to business is all the more effective when the business is serious business.

On Trial is an American melodrama which distributes its thrills on a novel plan. Its framework is a murder-trial, and you have all the orthodox excitements of a trial scene; speeches of counsel, agitation of accused, demeanour of jury, and so forth, plus the amusement of noting the differences between an American criminal court and one of our own. But the Court scene is only a frame-work. As each important piece of evidence is reached the lights are suddenly extinguished, the scene revolves, and you are shown in action and in situ what the witness is telling the jury. Thus the murdered man's widow in the box—we beg pardon, on the stand—says, "At that moment my husband's telephone-bell rang," and at that moment you are transported to the room where the bell is ringing and see all that follows. Or the accused's child tells the jury how she was sitting down to the piano—and hey presto! there she is sitting at the piano, and you get another instalment of the action subjected oculis fidelibus. Or the accused's wife relates how in the long, long ago she met the murdered man and was deceived by him—and, on the spot, you are shown the meeting and the deception.

Of course this means that the story is told backwards—you start with the murder and go on to the cause of the murder, and finish up with the long, long ago—but perhaps that is as good a way of telling a melodramatic story as any other, and it is, anyhow, a novel way. Besides, you have the fun of constantly speculating about the moment at which the Court scene is going to vanish into darkness and be superseded by a bit of the actual story which the Court is trying to unravel.

Why the murder was no vulgar crime, but what Bacon calls a kind of wild justice, it would be spoiling sport to tell. The audience is soon let into that secret, and it looks as though the interest would prematurely fade, but it is revived and kept up to the end by the ingenious introduction and detection of a subordinate criminal who had been in Court all the time, a mere insignificant and unobserved item until he was wanted for the dénouement.

Miss Edyth Goodall and Mr. Arthur Wontner take the principal parts. They are both excellent at this kind of work, and in a scene—not new, but always effective—wherein the truth is wrung by a relentless man out of a lying woman, they last night strung the audience to the topmost pitch of excitement. There is a clever child-actress, Odette Goimbault. Mr. Julian Royce and Mr. Bassett Roe obviously enjoyed themselves as the opposing counsel—American counsel, of course, with a manner more free-and-easy than forensic, and the house as obviously enjoyed the whole affair.

A Novel Idea. 5-

Novelty was the distinguishing characteristic of the American drama called "On Trial," which was presented at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday evening. It is quite a jig-saw puzzle, with eleven scenes that are most ingeniously put together to make a picture story. It is American in its cleverness, its speed, and its attempt to get something of reality into it. It begins with the trial in an American court of law of a man for the murder of another. The trial is supposed to extend over three days, but only two or three of the principal witnesses are seen, and while each one of these is giving evidence the scene suddenly shifts from the criminal court and we see enacted the very events that the witnesses describe. All this change of picture caught the fancy of Thursday's audience. It cheered and laughed almost hysterically, and the buzz of talk when the theatre was darkened for sudden changes of scene almost drowned the noise of the turn-table employed for the working of the lightning changes of scenery. The American author of "On Trial"—his name is Elmer E. Reizenstein—is a young man well under thirty—with new ideas. This is the first glimpse of the new mechanics of melodrama that London has got, but New York is getting ahead so fast with them that "On Trial" is by now reckoned almost old-fashioned. It was not acted at the Lyric with any particular brilliance or distinction on Thursday. The wronging of a woman incident evidently tied our players down to the melancholy traditions of our melodrama, in which a simple woman is always deceived. The sooner they forget our methods the better. J. W.

"On Trial." at the Lyric Theatre

The trial of Herbert Strickland (Mr. Arthur Wontner). The defendant pleading to the Judge for his child (Miss Odette Goimbault) to be excused from giving further evidence in the case

Prince of Wales' Theatre,
W.

Lessee and Manager - - FRANK CURZON

On Saturday, May 1st, at 8.30

(By arrangement with MARTIN HENRY)

M. J. DUDLEY presents

A Revival of the successful farce in 3 Acts

"Who's the Lady?"

From the French "Madame La Présidente," by MM. Hennequin and Veber

Adapted by JOSÉ G. LEVY.

Cyprien Gaudet	.. ..	Mr GEORGE BEALBY
M. Tricointe	.. ..	Mr E. DAGNALL
Marius	.. ..	Mr ARTHUR HATHERTON
Bienassis	.. ..	Mr. ERIC COWLEY
Octave Rosamund	.. ..	Mr MAX LEEDS
Poche	.. ..	Mr FRED EASTMAN
Pinglet	.. ..	Mr T. A. BRAIDON
Moulaine	.. ..	Mr KEVAN BERNARD
Bouquet	.. ..	Mr. GERALD STONEY
Dominique	.. ..	Mr. GEORGE FITZGERALD
Francois	.. ..	Mr HUBERT BRETT
Gobette	.. ..	Miss MARGA RUBIA-LÉVY
Mdme. Tricointe	.. ..	Miss BARBARA GOTT
Denise	.. ..	Miss DOROTHY WARREN
Sophie	.. ..	Miss VIOLET GOULD
Angeline	.. ..	Miss PEGGY DOYLE
Juliette	.. ..	Miss BETTY STRANGE WINTER

Act I. Sitting Room at Tricointe's House, at Gray.
(A small provincial town in France.)
Act II. Private Office of the Minister of Justice, Paris.
Act III. Vestibule of the Hotel de la Paix, Paris.
Time—The Present.

The Play produced by E. DAGNALL.

Manager (for "Who's the Lady?" Company PERCY BARROW

Musical Conductor	.. .. ..	ERNEST VOUSDEN
Stage Manager	.. .. ..	CLAUDE EDMONDS

General Manager - - T. B. VAUGHAN

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Proprietor - - Miss Lena Ashwell.

April 30th, 1915.

Dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in enclosing tickets for

Monday Evening, May 3rd, 1915

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 8.40,
Matinee Wednesday at 2.30.

The Kiss Cure

A New Play in Three Acts by Ronald Jeans.

Joanna Noyes	Edith Smith
Kenneth Noyes	Harvey Adams
Banks (a butler)	Wilfred E. Shine
Peter Carey	Frederick Cooper
Stella Warren	Estelle Winwood
Maurice Jupe	William Armstrong

Scene.—The Inner Hall of the Noyes' Country House.

Act I.—Before dinner on an evening in late Spring
Act II.—After breakfast three days later.
Act III.—After luncheon three days later.

Produced under the direction of Arthur K. Phillips.

The characters in the order of their appearance.

Preceded at 8.15 by

PAULINE

by Ronald Jeans.

Pauline	Madge McIntosh
Gerald	Percy Marmont
Maid	Gwynifrede Sardon

Scene.—A Room in Pauline's flat.

Produced under the direction of Madge McIntosh.

A WORD OF THANKS.

THE Liverpool Commonwealth Company thank you most heartily for your presence here to-day. They hope you will enjoy "Pauline" and "The Kiss Cure," and if you do they would appreciate it very much if you would address the attached card to one of your friends. If you hand it to one of the attendants the Management will see to the postage. During the season about a dozen different plays will be presented and if you should honour the Commonwealth Company with a weekly visit you will be in a position to revel in the rich, ripe humour of the Revue, "Hullo, Repertory," to be played by this Company at the Coliseum in June.

I am at the Kingsway Theatre seeing The Liverpool Commonwealth Company in "Pauline" and "The Kiss Cure," by Ronald Jeans. The last named play is described as the merriest comedy in Town and I am inclined to agree with the description. I think you would enjoy the show and may like to know that these plays will be done on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday (two performances), "Nobody Loves Me," by Robert Elson, will be produced for the first time in London. I hope to see this. Would you like to ?

Yours always,

P.S.—Kingsway Theatre.
'Phone : Gerrard 4032.

What is the Liverpool Commonwealth Co?

WHEN the great War broke out, the Liverpool Repertory Company, formed by the Citizens of Liverpool, felt that they were not justified in carrying on, but two of the leading actresses, Miss Madge McIntosh and Miss Estelle Winwood, on behalf of the 67 men and women attached to the theatre, made an offer to the Directors to run the theatre as a Commonwealth. Their pluck and enterprise mightily appealed to the inhabitants with the result that they succeeded beyond their most sanguine expectations.

THE Company consists of 22 experienced players, and Liverpool has developed the habit of seeing them in everything they play. Liverpool watches with interest the various parts in which their favourites appear. A principal one night in, say, a Galsworthy production, will on the following night be cast for a footman in a curtain raiser. And now the Company make their bow to London.

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1915.

Like the Comédie Française, the Liverpool Commonwealth Company manages its own business. Ambitiously like the Comédie Française, it has its own dramatic repertory. Punctiliously, like the Comédie Française, it offers you the hero of one night as valet on the next. This is quite a respectable extent of likeness to begin with; when the Commonwealth is as old as the Comédie it will be time to make comparisons of histrionic accomplishment.

What suggests comparison at all is the first London production of the Commonwealth, The Kiss Cure, which is just the type of play Marivaux, a favourite author of the Comédie, wrote a century and a half ago and wrote rather better. To be sure, a good many people have been writing plays of this particular type between Marivaux and Mr. Ronald Jeans, and you might label any one of them after the original title, Le Jeu de l'Amour et du Hasard: No.— For it is always, this game of love and chance, the same game. Rather, it is the same dance.

The couples pout, set to partners, pout again, execute a chassé-croisé, change partners, and finally each claims his true love (who was at first somebody else's true love) with a kiss. If Marivaux wrote this sort of thing better, that was partly because he had the luck to write in the Dresden-china time of powder and patch, Watteau swains and shepherdesses. An artificial dance-figure seemed less appropriate and less credible in our contemporary world of golfers and motor-cyclists, especially when these contemporary swains call their nymphs Steller and Joanner—an almost universal practice with our young actors and a torture to the fastidious ear.

If Mr. Jeans does not write like Marivaux, who had a style, he writes at any rate with simplicity and naturalness and even a certain elegance. The Kiss Cure is, in short, a quite agreeable entertainment for those—and they are not few—who find the comedy of dance-figures entertaining. The gyrating and interchanging couples are played, with youthful buoyancy as they should be, by Miss Estelle Winwood (a minx) and Mr. Fred Cooper (a simpleton), Miss Edith Smith (demure foil to minx), and Mr. William Armstrong (with stutter and Scotch burr). Mr. Wilfred Shine, as a comic butler who comes late into a stage world already overpopulated with comic butlers, yet contrives to excite laughter. A little forepiece by the same author, Pauline, serves for the reintroduction of that agreeable actress Miss Madge McIntosh to the London stage, if for nothing else.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1915.

"THE KISS CURE."

REPERTORY PLAYERS IN A NEW COMEDY.

The Liverpool Commonwealth Players, who inaugurated their first London season at the Kingsway Theatre last evening, are young and amusing. They presented a new three-act play, "The Kiss Cure," by Mr. Ronald Jeans, who is also young, but quite amusing. His story of the loves and jealousies of two young couples at a country house where the only semi-responsible man is a comical Irish butler is absurd, yet there is enough in it to keep an audience thoroughly amused and in good humour with everything that happens.

One of the two heroines of this youthful love story is a gem. Her sweetheart, according to her description, has a "third-time-does-it sort of stutter." Her philosophy is to allow an admirer to kiss her, and if it's "disappointing" at once to ask him, "How dare you?"

It was a pity that the author made her a "cat." She had ability and wit enough to have been better than that. But we had to take her as we got her, and wholly agree with the comical butler's poor opinion of the young man she jilted in favour of another. This Liverpool company has some excellent young players—Miss Estelle Winwood, Miss Edith Smith, and Mr. Frederick Cooper; and a most invaluable comedian in the experienced Mr. Wilfred Shine.

J. W.

Liverpool made the Kingsway Theatre its own all the past week, and will continue to do so for some more weeks while the Liverpool Commonwealth Company is playing its first London season there. It presented two new plays during the week, "The Kiss Cure," by Ronald Jeans, on Monday; and "Nobody Loved Me," by Robert Elson, on Thursday. Both plays are of the lighter texture—comedies of manner, so to say—and somewhat thin. Both of them are by young men; they both show observation of character, but "The Kiss Cure" is much better constructed than the other, and is much wittier. The chief impression produced on me by two visits to these players was that Liverpool should be congratulated. The plays are not perfect, but they are better than some recent London productions that have been acclaimed successes. To have a company such as this in Liverpool is a credit to it, and when one remembers the awful companies and plays going the dreary round of a provincial tour, one only wonders why every city has not got its own company and a "school" of authors. J.W.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE,
ST JAMES'S PALACE, S.W.

The Lord Chamberlain desires to remind all Managers of Theatres and Music Halls, and also the Managers of Companies touring Plays, Sketches and Revues, that any proposed alteration or addition to the licensed script, or any alteration of title should be submitted for his approval.

Managers of Theatres and Music Halls should satisfy themselves that all Plays, Sketches and Revues booked for performance in their Theatres and Music Halls have been licensed, and should inform themselves as to any conditions attached to the licences in question.

The Lord Chamberlain regrets to notice that there is a tendency towards suggestiveness and impropriety of language as well as scantiness of dress in certain classes of performances, and he wishes to remind the Managers of Theatrical Companies that his Regulations strictly forbid any impropriety of language or indecency of dress, dance or gesture on the Stage.

Failure to observe these Regulations may endanger the continuation of a performance.

4th May, 1915.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

Sir Herbert Tree

requests the honour of the presence of

at the Première of

The Right to Kill.

on Tuesday Evening. May 4th

at His Majesty's Theatre

A reply is only expected in the event of an acceptance, and it is requested that such acceptance should be sent not later than Thursday April 29th

Adapted from the French of PIERRE FRONDAIE by GILBERT CANNAN and FRANCES KEYZER

TUESDAY MAY 4th AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

THE RIGHT TO KILL.

Marquis de Sevigné	HERBERT TREE
Sir Archibald Falkland	EDMUND MAURICE
Prince Cernuwitz	HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Mehmed Pasha	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Lieutenant Bolton, R.N.	HENRY HEWITT
John Warman	CHARLES LASCELLES
Atik Ali	H. A. SAINTSBURY
Georgie Falkland	CHRISTOPHER FRERE
Butler	JULIAN CROSS
Manservant	HENRY BYATT
Lady Falkland	IRENE VANBRUGH
Edith Falkland	MAUD CRESSALL
Lady Massinger	CHARLOTTE GRANVILLE
Baroness Kerloff	ETHEL HODGKINS
Maid	IRENE DELISSE

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1915.

It would seem from the bill of the play that three people are responsible for The Right to Kill. We venture to mention a fourth, Claude Farrère, because he happens to be the real author. The play is only an adaptation of his six-year-old novel "L'homme qui assassina." When Sir Herbert Tree presented a version of "David Copperfield" it would have been superfluous to name Dickens. But Claude Farrère, though well known, is not quite on that pinnacle of fame; and it seems odd to have omitted all mention of him.

Not that his book was a masterpiece of art. It was just one of those books that you used to buy at the Gare de Lyon to while away the earlier part of the railway journey to the south, and you probably left it behind in the buffet at Dijon. But when a railway novel gets adapted for the stage, ah! that's quite another story. You can't leave a play in a buffet. It becomes an imposing mass, a formidable engine, or what somebody in Boswell called somebody else, a tremendous companion. There are great solid blocks of scenery and live gentlemen in uniform and live ladies in the newest fashions; and the prompter hoarsely whispers; and the curtain goes up and down with a slow gravity of its own—in short, the whole complicated apparatus of the acted drama is brought to bear upon you. The thing has ceased to be something "on grey paper with blunt type" which you can throw out of the carriage-window; it has become an event, a monument, an institution.

Constantinopolitan Melodrama.

Yet there were moments last night when we thought with tender regret of the Dijon buffet. For The Right to Kill perhaps abuses the right of melodrama to have longueurs. It happens at Constantinople, and people kept on exclaiming with rapture, "Oh, Stamboul!" which was tantalizing, as you never caught so much as a glimpse of Stamboul. Those glimpses have been left undisturbed in Claude Farrère's book. But you did have a charming moonlit garden on the Bosporus and some Turkish interiors, all cleverly designed by Mr. Hugo Rumbold and executed by Mr. Arthur Pullinger. In the foreground you had Constantinopolitan, or, what is much the same thing, cosmopolitan melodrama. There was a French Marquis—a Sevigné, no less—but Irish on his mother's side, who chivalrously loved the persecuted English wife of the brutal and Scotch Director of the Ottoman Debt, and the persecuted wife was unchivalrously loved by the Slavonic Prince Cernuwitz, while the head of the Turkish police impartially spied upon them all. Indeed, this Mehmed Pasha was quite the most interesting member of the party. He tucked his legs under him on the sofa and puffed away silently at his nargileh and looked wiser than any human being, Turk or giaour, could ever really be. And he discoursed with sententious gravity to his friend the French Marquis—with gravity, and with cynicism, and with roan-of-the-worldism—anyhow, he discoursed quite amusingly. But the Marquis was moody, embarrassed, almost dumb. And a Sevigné, of all people!

It was, in short, the Marquis who provided the longueurs. No doubt his position was partly to blame. There is something inevitably depressing in the spectacle of a hopeless passion. And a gentleman whose hopeless passion leads him to stick a knife into the brutal husband of its object, in order to save her good name, when the lady has already provided herself with a quite worthless lover, is really rather an absurd gentleman. But we submit that he need not be dull. Now the Marquis last night was too frequently dull. He heaved deep sighs; he imprinted chaste kisses upon the tips of the lady's fingers, he was melancholy and chivalrous—and dull. And when he had to play unwilling eavesdropper at a tender interview between the lady and her unchivalrous lover—he was hiding somewhere down below and kept on popping up his head with a more and more agonized expression—you had to stifle the feeling that he was a little ludicrous, too. This incident, by the way, with its Jack-in-the-Box effect, is a trouvaille of the adapters, and must not be imputed to Claude Farrère. So also with the particular method by which the very disagreeable Director of the Ottoman Debt is done to death—though this proved last night thrilling enough. A less violent and more artistic thrill was that of the scene (taken straight from the book) wherein Mehmed Pasha listens to the Marquis's veiled confession of the murder and condones. But melodramas ought, at all costs, to have a "happy ending." When the lady and the Marquis parted "for ever," she to devote a love-lorn widowhood to her child, and he to fight for France, there was an unmistakable drop in the temperature of the house.

There had, however, in the course of the evening been a good deal of enthusiasm. Miss Irene Vanbrugh had once more shown power in the exhibition of intense feeling, and in particular had startled the house by her hysteric frenzy in the scene wherein her husband forces her to sign away her good name. Mr. Bourchier, too, playing with rich and quiet humour, made the Pasha a great public favourite. That Sir Herbert Tree was not happy last night as the Marquis de Sevigné was only too apparent; to be just, we cannot think of any actor who would be otherwise than unhappy in such a part. You see, in the book the Marquis has the immense advantage of telling all the story himself and you have the immense advantage, if and when he grows tedious, of throwing him out of the window or leaving him behind in the buffet.

WATCH YOUR STEP.

EMPIRE.

PROGRAMME

TUESDAY Evening, MAY 4th, 1915

1 ACT I. "Watch your Step"

ALFRED BUTT

presents

2 "WATCH YOUR STEP"

Music by H. P. SMITH Music and Lyrics by IRVING BERLIN

English Book by HARRY GRATTAN

Staged by RUTH BURNSIDE

The Cast includes

GEORGE GRAVES	ETHEL LEVEY	JOSEPH COYNE
DOROTHY MINTO	LUPINO LANE	BLANCHE TOMLIN
CHARLES CARRY	IRENE TROT	REGINALD SHARLAND
IVY SHILLING	PEYLEY BLYDELLS	AUBREY ASHTON

EMPIRE

124

Row C

No 7

STALLS, 10/6

Tuesday, May 4
1915

This portion does not admit to the theatre

106

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1915.

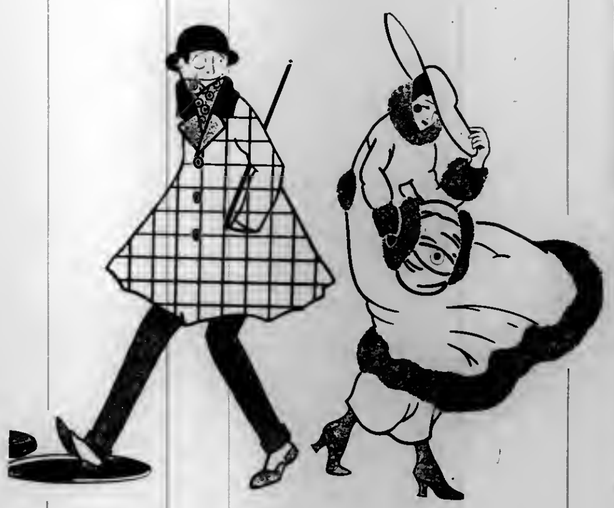
CRAZY RAG-TIME.

FRENZIED DANCES OF "WATCH YOUR STEP."

Perhaps it is just as well that the adapter of the new American musical production, "Watch Your Step," presented by Mr. Alfred Butt at the Empire Theatre last evening, did not succeed in getting rid of traces of its origin. Only Americans could have invented the frenzy of those dances, only Americans could have been so lavish of brasses and drums, and only Miss Ethel Levey could have sang and danced to the wild rag-time of "Watch Your Step."

It is the very superlative of crazy ragtime. You could follow at least two of its numbers from half a mile off, and getting this last night—plus the cheering applause—was an experience not to be forgotten.

The American producer has exhausted every dancing movement in order to interpret the composer, Mr. Irving Berlin, and Mr. Berlin has given him every rag-time opportunity. If the author of the scheme had a plot it has certainly been danced away.



Mr. George Graves, with his characteristic style of addressing the audience with the most extraordinary gags, had not the shadow of difficulty in making the audience more than contented with what he gave them in place of the original humour. He kept this patter going without ever a sign of a hitch, and he shared with Miss Ethel Levey the main success of the evening. Another favourite who did well was Mr. Joseph Coyne. These artists and Miss Dorothy Minto and Mr. Lupino Lane won the honours of the new production.

The chorus, too, are untiring workers in a production that is the most American, and the most crazy, frolic that London has ever seen—and heard.

J. W.

EMPIRE

LEICESTER SQUARE

Watch Your Step

107

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.15,

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S

PRODUCTION OF

"STRIKING!"

A Farcical Romance in Three Acts.

By PAUL RUBENS AND GLADYS UNGER.

Lord Marston	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Jack Paulton	Mr. H. MARSH ALLEN
Donald Macrae	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Snaith	Mr. CAMPBELL GULLAN (By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE & EADIE)
An Italian Waiter	Mr. HENRY ADNES (By arrangement with Messrs. GROSSMITH & LAURILLARD)
A Scotch Piper	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
A Porter	Mr. E. W. TARVER
A Page	Master CHARLIE WADE
William	Mr. CHARLES LASCELLES (By arrangement with Sir HERBERT TREE)
A Delegate	Mr. E. T. VARR
Zoë Lady Marston	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Pomona Macrae	Miss HILDA TREVELYAN
Ellie Karstowe	Miss NETTA WESTCOTT
Hotel Manicurist	Miss GLADYS MAUDE

ACT I. ... ... Lord Marston's Sitting Room in the Hotel at Oban
(A few weeks elapse).

ACT II. ... Lord Marston's House in Mayfair. The Morning Room
(A few months elapse).

ACT III. ... ... Lord Marston's House in Mayfair. The Courtyard

APOLLO
THEATRE
5/5/15

Orch. Stall
C 1
To be retained

Dresses by HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, New Bond Street.
Hats by ANN TALBOT, 5 George Street, Hanover Square.
Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Scenery constructed by J. BRUNSKILL and painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN.
Pathéphone kindly lent by PATHE SALON, 64 Regent Street, W.

PRECEDED AT 7.45 BY

Mr. CHARLES CORY - - Entertainer

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

THE J. H. SQUIRE CÉLESTE SEXTETTE
will select from the following Repertoire.*

1	FANTASIE IMPROMPTU	arr. Brunet
2	RHAPSODIE IN C MINOR	Liszt
3	VALSE DE CONCERT	Durand
4	DANSE NEGRE (A Study on Black Keys)	Ascher
5	SERENADE CELESTE	arr. Squire
6	RHAPSODIE No. 14	Liszt
7	VALSE BRILLANTE IN A FLAT	Moszkowski
8	CARISSIMA	Elgar
9	TAMBOURIN CHINOISE	Kreisler
10	CHANSON	Godard
11	OPERATIC FANTASIAS (Changed at each Performance)
12	2nd MAZERKA	Godard
13	FOUR INDIAN LOVE LYRICS	Woodforde-Finden
14	"CALM AS THE NIGHT"	Bohm
15	LOUIS BLECE VALSE	Cox
16	RUSSIAN BALLET FANTASIE	arr. Squire

Grand Piano by MURDOCH & MURDOCH.

 The Repertoire mainly consists of special arrangements which are exclusive to the Sextette.*

MATINEE
Every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.
First Matinee SATURDAY next.

Stage Manager	For Mr. Charles Hawtrey	Mr. B. CAMPLIN-SMITH
Assist. Stage Manager		Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
General Manager		Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. Phone Gerrard 3243.

Nearest Station, PICCADILLY CIRCUS (Tube).

General Manager ... ... (for Mr. Tom B. Davis) ... ... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1915.

Mr. Hawtrey and Miss Lottie Venne and Miss Hilda Trevelyan, all three at once and each with an appropriate part, ought to prove an irresistible combination. Mr. Hawtrey is the very idlest of the idle rich, absolutely helpless in fact, whose valet has to be not only valet hut agent, adviser, remembrancer, and factotum—see the Honble. Mr. Listless and Fatout in "Nightmare Abbey." Miss Venne is the fashionable, frivolous, flighty aunt, whose one aim it is to choose the helpless one's wife for him. Miss Trevelyan is the merry, homely, shrewd Scotch lassie who cannot abide helpless people and tries to "make a man" of this one, winning his heart and hand in the process and upsetting all the little schemes of the aunt.

These parts are elaborated by the authors for the players and by the players for themselves along their several characteristic lines, to the general profit and amusement; but, as usually happens when parts are designed to fit players, the parts are better than the whole. For the whole there is the framework of a universal strike, exhibiting all the "upstairs" people forced to attempt, amateurishly, the menial tasks proper to the "downstairs" people, and this particular joke has already been well-nigh exhausted on the farcical stage. There is still, however, just a little fun left in it, and that little the players make the most of, aided by dialogue of exceptional gaiety and even wit. But the best fun of the play is in the free run given to the well-known and well-liked idiosyncrasies of Mr. Hawtrey and Miss Venne and Miss Trevelyan, who between them kept the house last night in unbroken merriment.

Not a Striking Success.

Miss Elsie, Miss Mabel Russell, and Miss Marie Lohr were in the stalls of the Apollo Theatre for the first performance of Paul A. Ruhens' and Gladys Unger's new farce "Striking," on Wednesday evening, and Mrs. Horlick, who wrote a play called "An Indian Summer," and had it produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre last June, was also there. The first act of the new Apollo production is the best. Mr. Charles Hawtrey has a Hawtrey part in it—an unconscionaly selfish fellow who never gets the worst of anything. Miss Lottie Venne was funny in that first act also, and Miss Hilda Trevelyan seemed to come straight out of "What Every Woman Knows"—the Barrie play in which she was a simple young Scotswoman with a knack of managing men folks. The authors of "Striking" had a good idea to work on—the idle rich condemned for a week or two by a universal strike to shift for themselves; but they frittered their chances away completely by giving forced absurdities instead of letting their characters act reasonably like what they would do if the conditions stated had existed. The audience, I must say, laughed uproariously throughout the evening, so I must suppose my view was wrong. J.W.

Nobody Loves Me

A Comedy in Three Acts by Robert Elson.

Produced by Madge McIntosh under the direction of the Author.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

Jane Murdoch	Nina Henderson
Mrs. Ferrard	Alice Mansfield
Tony	Edith Smith
Lady Kenford	Edith Barwell
Major Gen. Sir Walter Kenford, K.C.B., D.S.O., &c.	Wilfred E. Shine
Alessie	Gwynifrede Sardon
Mrs. Edmund Ferrard	Estelle Winwood
Lord Redesmere	Percy Marmont
Lincoln Baker	William Armstrong
George Pendle	Harvey Adams
Miss St. Aubin	Doris Lloyd
Mrs. Burbank	Madge McIntosh
Gerald Anstruther	Lawrence Hanray
Waiter	William Dexter
Parkinson	Arthur C. Rose

It looks as though minxes were a hobby with the Liverpool Commonwealth Company. Miss Estelle Winwood, who was a young minx on Monday, was last night a maturish minx, euphemistically described as "so very modern." This being interpreted, meant that she was a merry widow who started a hat-shop out of her winnings at "Monte," gave rowdy supper-parties at her flat—when the guests laughed uproariously at jokes which left the audience in front quite cold—and lived, ruined, with a remarkably humdrum solicitor.

When her daughter, an ingénue fresh from the country, where she lived in charge of a tyrannical grandmother (cane, ear-trumpet, lace fichu, and sharp tongue, all of the regulation stage pattern), turned up unexpectedly at the flat, just when the supper-party had got to the liqueurs, it was awkward for the minx and still more awkward for the daughter. Fortunately the usual stage lordling was at hand to take the girl back to her grandmother in his car and subsequently to marry her, almost in her own tomboyish despite. But not before the tyrannical grandmother, relenting under the new experience of being "stood up to" by the various victims of her tyranny, forgave the minx and even, if we are not mistaken, bestowed an old woman's blessing upon the humdrum solicitor.

KINGSW
GT. QUI LIVERPOOL COMMO
By arrangement w
Thursday
Evening
May 6
Stall
No. D 1
This to be retained

Act I.—The morning room at Mytton Court, Buckinghamshire.
Scene 1.—A Sunday Morning in Spring, between twelve and one o'clock.
Scene 2.—The same afternoon.
Act II.—Mrs. Edmund's Flat in London.
Scene 1.—Ten p.m. the same evening.
Scene 2.—About two hours later.
Act III.—Same as Act I.
Scene 1.—The next morning about ten a.m.
Scene 2.—Three months later—Sunday morning in Summer between twelve and one o'clock.

The Curtain will be lowered between Scenes 1 and 2 in each Act for two minutes.

Costumes by J. Eurkinshaw & Son, Liverpool. Furniture by J. S. Lyons, Holborn. Pictures kindly lent by J. F. E. Grundy, 4, Adam St., Strand. Weber Pianos manufactured in London used in the Orchestra and on the Stage supplied by the Orchestrelle Company, Æolian Hall, New Bond Street, W. The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Proprietress. A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

The Box Office (R. Wynne) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 4032 Gerrard.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Matinee and Evening.
TRELAWNEY OF THE WELLS
By Sir Arthur Pinero.
Thursday and Friday,
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE
By Oscar Wilde.
Saturday, Matinee and Evening,
THE KISS CURE
By Ronald Jeans.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

FRIDAY MAY 7 1915

STAGE STORM.

REAL RAIN THAT HELPED IN A NEW PLAY.

In one of the seven scenes of the play "Nobody Loves Me," presented by the Liverpool Commonwealth Players at the Kingsway Theatre last evening, the "performance" of an imaginary stage storm synchronised perfectly with the very real thunderstorm that reverberated about the roof of the theatre.

It was a contrast of realism and art, and as most of the audience were wondering how they were going to get home, realism prevailed. It was a rare experience to hear the real rain, which made its way through some open skylights, patter on the scenery during the progress of the play, and, to some extent, it confused the impression of Mr. Robert Elson's comedy.

Under the most favourable weather conditions, however, it would not have been an easy matter to guess at the motives of any of the characters in this play; sufficient, therefore, will it be to say that when the seventh and final scene was ended three pairs of lovers seemed destined for early matrimony.

J. W.

Plays

PUSH AND GO!"
PROGRAMME 6D.

LONDON HIPPODROME

CRANBOURN STREET, LEICESTER SQUARE

Proprietors - - - - - - - Moss' Empires, Ltd.

Managing Director - - - - - - - - Mr. Frank Allen
Assistant to Managing Director - - - Mr. Albert P. De Courville
Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. Fred Trusseli

TWICE DAILY at 2.30 p.m. & 8.30 p.m.

Programme

Week commencing

MONDAY, MAY 10TH, 1915

"PUSH AND GO!"

A HIPPODROME REVUE

Book and Lyrics by F. W. MARK and ALBERT DE COURVILLE
Music by HERMAN DAREWSKI
Staged by WILLIAM J. WILSON
Produced by ALBERT DE COURVILLE

Elaborate Cast:

SHIRLEY KELLOGG	HARRY TATE
VIOLET LORAINE	JOHNNY HENNING
ANNA WHEATON	LEWIS SYDNEY
LUCILLE VIVIEN	GERALD KIRBY
MURIEL HOWARD	ARTHUR SWANSTONE
DAISY ETHEL	CHAS. BERKELEY
ETHEL KENRICK	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
	FREDDIE NICE
40 BEAUTY QUEENS	CHARLIE DE HAVEN
CHORUS OF 60 PERFORMERS	ROBERT PURSER

JORDAN'S "PUSH AND GO!" SYNCOPATED ORCHESTRA

Scene 1	The "Push-and-Go!" Gymnasium
" 2	The Revue King's Office
" 3	Among the Celestials
" 4	A Box Office
" 5	"Curse you, Jack Dalton"
" 6	"Big Lizzie"
" 7	Saving Time
" 8	Piccadilly Circus
" 9	At the Bali

Plays

"Let Us Forget"

I never noticed till the other day that the great picture which was painted to commemorate the visit of the German Emperor to Drury Lane Theatre on the night of May 17, 1911, had been removed from its place on the grand staircase and taken out of sight of all. The ornate panel erected in the vestibule recording the names of all the actors and managers and others who had taken part in the making of the arrangements for that theatre visit has been boarded up, because many of the patrons of the theatre did not wish to be reminded of these things. All the same, these things have to be remembered. I remember the play given that night was Lord Lytton's "Money," that the night's receipts were just over ten thousand pounds, and that the following lines appeared on the programme:—

"It's a very good world to live in,
To lend, or to spend, or to give in,
But to beg, or to borrow, or to get a man's own,
It's the very worst world that ever was known."

J. W. in W D, May 9

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, MAY 10, 1915.

CHARLES FROHMAN.

A TRIBUTE.

BY SIR J. M. BARRIE.

The man who never broke his word. There was a great deal more to him, but everyone in any land who has had dealings with Charles Frohman will sign that.

I am too sad at heart to say anything hurriedly about him just now, and yet I should like to say a word; about the qualities that to his friends were his great adornment rather than about his colossal enterprises or the energy with which he heaved them into being; an energy that was like a force of nature, so that if he had ever "retired" from the work he loved (a thing incredible) companies might have been formed, in the land so skilful at turning energy to practical account, for exploiting the vitality of this Niagara of a man. They could have lit a city with it.

MR. C. FROHMAN.

He loved his schemes. They were a succession of many-coloured romances to him, and were issued to the world not without the accompaniment of the drum, but you would never find him saying anything of himself. He pushed them in front of him, always taking care that they were big enough to hide him. When they were able to stand alone he stole out in the dark to have a look at them, and then, if unobserved, his bosom swelled. I have never known anyone more modest and no one quite so shy. Many actors have played for him for years and never spoken to him, have perhaps seen him dart up a side street because they were approaching. They may not have known that it was sheer shyness, but indeed it was. I have seen him ordered out of his own theatre by subordinates who did not know him, and he went meekly away. "Good men these; they know their business," was all his comment. Afterwards he was shy of going back lest they should apologise.

TOO SHY TO SEE A DOCTOR.

Once a friend made an arrangement that Mr. Frohman should see a London doctor. When the time came he was too shy to keep the appointment. Something had to be done, so another friend went in his place to pass as Mr. Frohman and describe his "symptoms" as his own. Mr. Frohman was to benefit at second hand. Electrical treatment was ordered, and on that first occasion at least performed on the wrong man. The result was said to be a marked improvement in Mr. Frohman's health. It was all in the day's work for his friends to do this sort of thing for him. But you should have seen how he stepped to the front when there were big things to do and the others were perhaps afraid to do them.

At one time he had several theatres here and was renting others, the while he had I know not how many in America; he was not always sure how many himself. Latterly the great competition at home left him with no time to look after more than one in London. But only one anywhere seemed a little absurd to him. He once contemplated having a few theatres in Paris, but on discovering that French law forbids you having more than one he gave up the scheme in disgust.

A sense of humour sat with him through every vicissitude like a faithful consort. "How is it going?" a French author cabled to him on the first night of a new play. "It has gone," he genially cabled back. Of a Scotch play of my own that he was about to produce in New York, I asked him what the Scotch would be like. "You wouldn't know it was Scotch," he replied, "but the American public will know."

SIXTEEN YEARS' QUARREL.

He was very dogged. I had only one quarrel with him, but it lasted all the sixteen years I knew him. He wanted me to be a playwright and I wanted to be a novelist. All those years I fought him on that. He always won, but not because of his doggedness; only because he was so lovable that one had to do as he wanted. He also threatened, if I stopped, to reproduce the old plays and print my name in large electric letters over the entrance to the theatre.

A very distinguished actress under his management wanted to produce a play of mine of which he had no high opinion. He was in despair, as he had something much better for her. She was obdurate. He came to me for help, said nothing could move her unless I could. Would not I tell her what a bad play it was and how poor her part was and how much better the other parts were and how absolutely it fell to pieces after the first act? Of course I did as I was bid, and I argued with the woman for hours, and finally got her round, the while he sat cross-legged, after his fashion, on a deep chair and implored me with his eyes to do my worst. It happened long ago, and I was so obsessed with the desire to please him that the humour of the situation strikes me only now.

A PASSION FOR THEATRES.

For money he did not care at all; it was to him but pieces of paper with which he could make practical the enterprises that teemed in his brain. They were all enterprises of the theatre. Having once seen a theatre he never afterwards saw anything else except sites for theatres. This passion began when he was a poor boy staring wistfully at portals out of which he was kept by the want of a few pence. I think when he first saw a theatre he clapped his hand to his heart; and certainly he was true to his first love. Up to the end it was still the same treat to him to go in; he still thrilled when the band struck up, as if that boy had hold of his hand.

In a sense, he had no illusions about the theatre, knew its tawdriness as he knew the nails on his stages (he is said to have known every one). He would watch the performance of a play in some language of which he did not know a word and at the end tell you not only the whole story but what the characters had been saying to each other; indeed, he could usually tell what was to happen in any act as soon as he saw the arrangement of the furniture. But this did not make him blasé—a strange word, indeed, to apply to one who seemed to be born afresh each morning. It was not so much that all the world was a stage to him as that his stage was a world, a world of the "artistic temperament"—that is to say, a very childish world of which he was occasionally the stern but usually the indulgent father. His innumerable companies were as children to him; he chided them as children, soothed them, and forgave them, and certainly loved them as children. He exulted in those who became great names in that world and gave them beautiful toys to play with; but, great as was their devotion to him, it is not they who will miss him most, but rather the far greater number who never "made a hit," but set off like all the rest to do it and fell by the way. He was of so sympathetic a nature, he understood so well the dismalness to them of being "failures," that he saw them as children with their knuckles to their eyes, and then he sat back cross-legged on his chair with his knuckles, as it were, to his eyes, and life had lost its flavour for him until he invented a scheme for giving them another chance.

Authors of to-day sometimes discuss with each other what great writer of the past they would like most to spend an evening with if the shades were willing to respond, and I believe (and hope) that the choice most often falls on Johnson or Charles Lamb. Lamb was fond of the theatre, and I think of all those connected with it that I have known Mr. Frohman is the one with whom he would most have liked to spend an evening. Not because of Mr. Frohman's ability, though he had the biggest brain I have met with on the stage, but because of his humour and charity and gentle chivalry and his most romantic mind. One can conceive him as so often, sitting at ease, far back, in his chair, cross-legged, occasionally ringing for another ice, for he was so partial to sweets that he could never get them sweet enough, and sometimes he mixed two in the hope that this would make them sweeter. I hear him telling stories of the stage as only he could tell them, rising now and roaming the floor as he shows how the lady of the play receives the declaration, and perhaps forgetting that you are the author of the play, and telling you the whole story of it with superb gesture and gleaming eyes. Then back again cross-legged to the chair. What an essay Elia might have made of that night, none of it about the stories told, all about the man in the chair, the humorous, gentle, roughly educated, very fine American gentleman in the chair.

Perhaps it is fitting that all those who only made for honest mirth and happiness should now go out of a world because too wicked for them. Strange to think that in America Dernburg and Bernstorff, who we must believe were once good men too, have an extra smile with their breakfast roll because they and theirs have drowned Charles Frohman.

The Late Charles Frohman.

London is not likely ever again to see such an American manager as Charles Frohman. He was the straightest and the pluckiest his country ever owned, and was in a class entirely by himself. He must have lost a huge fortune by his English enterprises, but he never complained. He just smiled and said, "I shall try again." When he first launched out in London he was under forty, and he did many things that he gave up after a few years. He sold his motor-car. He ceased going to the race meetings round London, and he seldom went away for week-ends. He preferred to spend his time in Town, and to go to theatres and have a chat with intimate friends afterwards in his private sitting-room at the Savoy Hotel.

His London Home.

When he arrived from New York in London each early spring—end of February—he walked straight into the Savoy Hotel and went to his rooms without a word, as though he had been staying there for months. He never gave the Savoy people notice he was coming. But he always expected he would get the same suite each season—it overlooked the river—and he did. It was kept for him. He loved the ever-changing view from his windows, and he loved to show it and talk of it to those who came to see him. Since he had a bad illness three years ago which left him a stiff knee joint that made it difficult for him to walk he changed his rooms to the Strand side of the house, where his door faced a lift. But although he never complained he missed being able to take his strolls in the London streets and he missed the view of the river when he got home.

"The Water Looks Very Cold."

Charles Frohman's greatest friends in America were Mr. William Gillette and Miss Maude Adams. He liked Gillette for his quaint manner and his respect and admiration for Miss Adams had no limit. Many a time she advised him to do certain things that he knew would mean heavy losses to him. "Shall I do them, knowing this?" he sometimes asked, and Miss Adams had but to reply "They are worth doing even at a loss of money," for Charles Frohman to have them done. Many of her long summer vacations are spent by Miss Adams in a quiet convent in an out-of-the-way corner of Ireland; and off that lonely coast on a summer day this great active manager who loved the cities for their theatres and their lights and their ventures, went down in the sea. The last sentence he spoke, and he spoke it with a smile on his lips, was, "The water looks very cold." A second or two later he and the friends with whom he was speaking were swept apart by a wave. He did not ask for help.

J. W.

St. Martin-in-the-Fields

CHARING CROSS

Memorial Service

For the late

CHARLES FROHMAN

Tuesday, May 25th, 1915

4 o'clock p.m.

Palace Theatre

Managing Director — Mr. ALFRED BUTT

Messrs. VEDRENNE and EADIE

Present the Royalty Theatre Company

in

The Man Who Stayed at Home

By Lechmere Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry.

In the presence of

Their Majesties The King and Queen

TUESDAY, MAY 11th, 1915

at 2.30

Officers' Families Fund

For the assistance of Wives and Dependent Relatives of Officers in monetary difficulties incurred through the War, and for prompt financial aid to Officers' Widows and Orphans.

NEW THEATRE

LONDON.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S SEASON

MONDAY, MAY 17th, and Every Evening at 8.15
Matinee on Saturday at 2.30

FOR TWO WEEKS. Mr. MARTIN HARVEY will present a revival of

The Breed of the Treshams

By JOHN RUTHERFORD

Lieutenant Rupert Lovell "The Rat" (his original part)	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Viscount Dorrington	Mr. CHARLES J. CAMERON
The Hon. Clement Hungerford (his Son)	Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY
Sir Henry Curwen	Mr. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Colonel Bagshaw	Mr. WALTER HOWE
Captain Stanhope	Mr. WILSON GUNNING
Captain Rashleigh	Mr. FRANK FORBES ROBERTSON
Lieutenant Willoughby	Mr. SIDNEY COLTSON
Cornet The Hon. Francis Tresham	Mr. EUGENE WELLESLEY
Cornet Peyton	Mr. PERCY FOSTER
Corporal Lumsford	Mr. ALFRED IBBERSON
Corporal Saxton	Mr B. MARSH-DUNN
Will Lumsford	Mr. A. LLOYD
Jevons	Mr J. DENTON THOMPSON
Servant	Miss BESSIE ELDER
Mrs. Bagshaw	Miss MARIE LINDEN
Helena Pierrepoint	Miss MARY GRAY
The Hon. Margaret Hungerford	Miss MAUD RIVERS
Batty (her original part)	Miss N. de SILVA

Troopers, Soldiers, etc.

The Action takes place in Feversham Castle, 1645

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I. The Gatehouse .. .. George J. Dodson
ACT II. An Upper Chamber .. .. George J. Dodson
ACT III. Scene 1. The Withdrawing-Room .. .. F. Potts
Scene 2. The Same. Half-an-hour Later.
ACT IV. The Same. Next Day.

NOTE—In Act III. the Curtain will be lowered for One Minute between Scenes 1 and 2. Intervals—Eight Minutes

Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDES, Ltd., London and Birmingham.
The Theatre Disinfected and Perfumed with SPRAOLITE, MASLIN BROS., London.

Business Manager	For Mr. Martin Harvey		Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL
Stage Director			Mr. WILLIAM HOLLES
Stage Manager			Mr. CHARLES BEARD
Musical Director			Mr. W. H. HUDSON
Assistant Stage Manager			Mr. SYDNEY COLTSON
Business Manager	(For Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)		Mr. CECIL ROSE

IRE
May 17
Stall
No. F 16
This to be retained

THE IRISH PLAYERS from the ABBEY THEATRE, DUBLIN,
in Repertoire of Irish Plays.

MONDAY and THURSDAY EVENINGS AT 8.30.
SATURDAY MATINEE AT 2.

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON OF

Shanwalla

A Play in Three Acts by LADY GREGORY.

Laurence Scarry, a Stallman	H. L. HUTCHINSON
Hubert Darcy, his Master	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
Bride Scarry, his Wife	KATHLEEN DRAGO
Owen Conary, a Blind Beggar	J. M. KERRIGAN
Pat O'Malley	FRED O'DONOVAN
James Brogan	ARTHUR SINCLAIR
First Girl	EITHNE MAGEE
Second Girl	ANN COPPINGER
Head Constable	J. A. O'ROURKE
First Constable	U. WRIGHT
Second Constable	PHILIP GUIRY

SCENE. Acts I. and II. An old Harness Room at Darcy's Stables.
Acts III. An Office at Darcy's House.

Sovereign Love

A Comedy in One Act, by T. C. MURRAY.

Donal Kearney, a Farmer	J. M. KERRIGAN
Ellen, his Daughters	KATHLEEN DRAGO
Katty	EITHNE MAGEE
Maurice O'Brien, their Uncle	PHILIP GUIRY
Mrs. Hickey, Hostess of "The Granuaile"	HELEN MOLONY
Charles O'Donnell, another Farmer	SYDNEY J. MORGAN
David, his Son	H. E. HUTCHINSON
Tom Daly, Cousin to David	J. A. O'ROURKE
Andy Hyde, a returned Yank	U. WRIGHT

The action takes place in the Parlour of "The Granuaile."

Directors	LADY GREGORY AND W. B. YEATS
General Manager	A. PATRICK WILSON
Stage Manager	U. WRIGHT

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

TUESDAY, MAY 18, 1915.

LADY GREGORY'S NEW PLAY.

The Irish Players presented a new three-act play by Lady Gregory, entitled "Shanwalla," at the Little Theatre, last evening.

Lady Gregory has fashioned a story of picturesque beauty, and the Irish Players have interpreted it with that rare and seemingly unconscious art that removes their work from all comparison with the ordinary traffic of the theatre.

Lady Gregory's story is based on the belief that the spirit of the dead may return to earth to help those it loved in life. The pathetic figure of the young dead wife who in this story returned to warn her husband against the men who would lead him astray was wholly appealing. The stage trappings of the "ghost" had been ignored. The young bride appeared as she was in life, dressed the same, and speaking the same; but no one heard her but the blind tramp. For the first time in his life his eyes that had been ever dark saw the light. J. W.

Fascinating Irish Play.

Out of very simple materials Lady Gregory has conjured a strangely fascinating drama in "Shanwalla," which the Irish Players produced, for the first time in London, at the Little Theatre on Monday. The play takes its title from a racehorse—the popular favourite for a great steeplechase in Galway—and the incidents are concerned with a plot to drug the animal. Caught by the young trainer's wife in the act of poisoning the horse's food, the villain kills her, and later on persuades her husband that his master murdered her because she refused to do what he asked.

The Young Wife's Return.

From this point to the end of the play Lady Gregory treats it in mystic manner. The young wife returns to earth to warn her husband, and as she comes and goes amid those strange Western scenes her presence is unknown to all save a blind tramp, who unconsciously becomes her instrument. The play made a most effective impression, because it is in part beautifully written and is in every instance beautifully acted. Lady Gregory, who sat well back in a private box, blushed and looked very pleased after her play had finished. Mr. W. B. Yeats congratulated her on its success, and so did Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Shaw. Mr. Augustus John, the painter, looking like a great Biblical figure, sat with a party of ladies, and applauded the play for long after the curtain had fallen. J. W.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE,

KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.

May 12th, 1915.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER requests the honour of your presence on Wednesday next, May 19th, at 8 p.m. punctually, when

THE DAY BEFORE THE DAY

A New Drama in Three Acts

BY CHESTER BAILEY FERNALD

will be acted for the first time.

It is unable to be present, kindly return the ticket to

E. ARNOLD,
BOX OFFICE.

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1915.

"THE DAY BEFORE THE DAY."

WAR MELODRAMA AT THE ST. JAMES'S.

By CHESTER BAILEY FERNALD.

Captain Guy Howison ..	LYN HARDING
Second-Lieutenant Robert Cresfield	OWEN NARES
Captain Richard Buckingham	HESKETH PEARSON
Colonel Wallingford ..	DAWSON MILWARD
Führman Max von Ardel ..	GERALD LAWRENCE
Karl Pulitzer	FREDERICK ROSS
Adolf Schindler	A. B. IMESON
Ludwig Grunau	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Herr Professor Willy Effenbach	EDMUND GWENN
Frieda Grunau — ..	CLARE GREET
Lady Lulliby	ELIZABETH CHESNEY
Mona Cresfield	STELLA MERVYN CAMPBELL
Victoria Buckingham ..	GRACE LANE

At the end of Act II. the curtain falls upon Mr. Lyn Harding chained by the leg to the wall, bound with rope, gagged, and stunned by a blow on the head from a bludgeon. The German secret agents who have brought him to this pass have left the house (on the East Coast) apparently in order that the next expected visitor, an officer of the Prussian Guard (coming ashore from a submarine), may have the sport of finishing off the helpless Englishman with his own hand.

But when the curtain rises again so does Mr. Harding, and with wondorful dexterity succeeds in releasing himself from his bonds. Thereupon enter the Prussian Guardsman with a revolver, and it would have been all up with Mr. Harding if he had not had the happy thought of pretending to be bound again and subsequently tricking the Prussian into laying down his revolver, with the result that it soon becomes the enemy's turn to be bound and gagged—with the assistance of a lady whom the Prussian had been on the point of subjecting to foul outrage.

It is all, as you see, on the melodramatic plane, with revolvers all over the stage and wireless in the cellar (to say nothing of an electric oven down there for incinerating corpses) and a clock for signalling to the submarine and strains from Wagner converted into passwords, and, in addition to all this apparatus, a tremendous orgy of Teutonic brutality.

124

For some mysterious reason they all meet again in a Hampstead drawing-room, where the German secret agents figure as naturalized and ultra-patriotic Englishmen, while British officers (reinforced by Mr. Lyn Harding) keep watch and ward, biding their time. The great thing is to discover which is the true German plan of invasion and which the bluff. Is it to be Northumberland or Kent? One is in an envelope and the other in a tin case, and as the probabilities are in favour of the tin case this is suddenly popped out upon the Germans by the lady of the previous acts, while the British officers watch the effect through a hole in the door.

It is the tin case, and to telephone "Kent" to the W.O., to disarm the German agents by a little ju jitsu, and to march them off to be shot in the Tower is for the British officers the work of a moment. Then the lady (who, you are glad to learn, had emptied a revolver into the Prussian Guardsman in the interact) falls into Mr. Harding's arms, just after the announcement that the German Fleet has at last come out and is in process of meeting its fate.

Here, then, is another war play for those who like war plays. Whether romantic fiction is profitably employed upon the tremendous facts which we are all of us "up against" is, no doubt, a question about which tastes will widely differ. We prefer not to discuss it, but merely to record that the performance last night appeared to give a great many people a good deal of gratification. There was some tittering over the excessive number of compromising documents and other naïve elements in the plot, which must have disconcerted players who were loyally doing their utmost. Miss Grace Lane made the distressed and not very sensible heroine as sympathetic as possible, Mr. Lyn Harding played with immense energy, and the gentlemen who had to impersonate brutal Germans—Mr. Ross and Mr. Lawrence, Mr. Playfair and Mr. Gwenn—sacrificed themselves nobly on the altar, not exactly of art, but of topical melodrama.

New Spy Drama.

Nothing more unlike a St. James's Theatre play can be imagined than the four-act drama, by C. B. Fernald, that Sir George Alexander presented on Wednesday evening. In ordinary times if a play with the title of this one—"The Day Before The Day"—was announced for St. James's the friends of that house would assuredly say, "Ah! that means the day before the wedding," in Mr. Fernald's play it means the day before the day a gang of German spies expect the invasion of England. Provided this drama is not taken seriously for any one moment, it makes good entertainment, and on Wednesday evening the audience laughed at the diabolical plots of the German emissaries of the Emperor and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Firearms Plentiful.

"The Day Before The Day" ends with a great coup in which the armed Germans are captured, and the British heroine confesses to having killed with a gun the leader of the wicked hand. Firearms are very plentiful in this drama. "Shooting irons" are pulled out on the slightest provocation, but never a shot is fired at anyone. A very charming couple of ladies sat in front of me, their fingers to their ears all the evening. I thought that it was through a delicate feeling not to overhear my conversation with a neighbour that made them close their ears. Later on I discovered it was fear of the noise of firing, and as there was no noise of that sort they were disappointed. They missed, too, the joy of hearing one of the characters say, "America is not a nation, it is a mass meeting." That line got a roar; in fact, the play went with a roar, and when Sir George Alexander (who does not appear in the piece) came out to thank the audience for their reception of the drama, he too laughed good-humouredly. His predecessors in the occupation of St. James's Theatre, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, who were in the stalls, were much interested in the new style of play for this house, and Sir John Simon, who (possibly on account of the crisis) was the only representative of the Government present, got a hint or two about how to round up spies. Miss Clara Butt and Mr. Kennerley Rumford had one of the only two boxes at St. James's Theatre, and worthily represented the English singing world.

J. W.

Shaftesbury Theatre, W.

14th May, 1915.

Dear Sir,

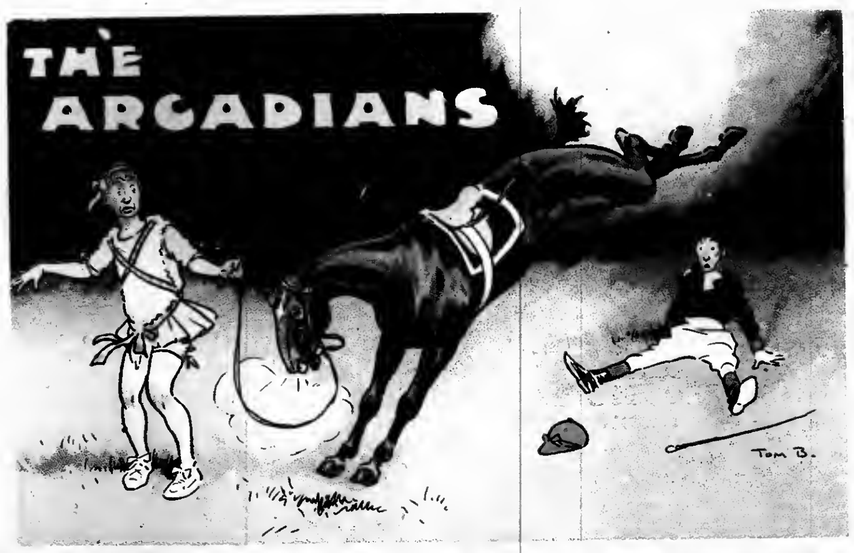
I am desired by Mr. Robert Courtneidge to forward you the enclosed ticket for the use of your Dramatic Critic, on Thursday Evening, May 20th, at 8 o'clock, to the revival of

THE ARCADIANS

A Fantastic Musical Play in Three Acts
By MARK AMBIENT and A. M. THOMPSON
Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS
Music by LIONEL MONCKTON and HOWARD TALBOT

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, I shall be obliged if you will kindly return the ticket to me as soon as possible, and say the earliest date, most convenient to yourself, for which I may have the pleasure of exchanging it.

Yours faithfully,



CAST

James Smith	(Simplicitas)	Mr. DAN AGAR
Time	-	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
Jack Meadows		Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Bobby	-	Mr. JACK HULBERT
Sir George Paddock	-	Mr. AMBROSE MANNING
Percy Marsh	-	Mr. H. NELSON HANCOCK
Reggie	-	Mr. CHARLTON MORTON
Sir Timothy Ryan	-	Mr. HORACE PERCIVAL
Harry Desmond		Mr. EDGAR STANMORE
Peter Doody	-	Mr. ALFRED LESTER
Eileen Cavanagh	-	Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE
Mrs. Smith	-	Miss GWEN CLIFFORD
Lady Barclay		Miss IVY LOUISE
Hon. Maud Barclay	-	Miss MABEL MUNROE
Lucy Selwyn		Miss LOUIE LOCHNER
Marion	-	Miss DORIS VINSON
Beatrice		Miss LESLIE GRAHAM
Amaryllis	of the Arcadian Restaurant	Miss GRETCHEN YATES
Daphne		Miss MADGE COMPTON
Dryope	-	Miss PHYLLIS SMYTH
Psyche	-	Miss LENA MILLER

ARCADIANS

Chrysea	-	Miss HETTA KELLY
Astrophel	-	Mr. H. E. PEARCE
Strephon	-	Mr. HAROLD CLEMENCE
Damoetas	-	Miss KATHLEEN HAYES
Sombra		Miss HOPE CHARTERIS

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

SOLE PROPRIETORS: The EXECUTORS of the late MR. LOUIS MEYER.

Under the Management of JULIA NEILSON & FRED TERRY.

On Saturday, May 22nd, 1915, and every Evening at 8, will be produced the Romantic Play:

"HENRY OF NAVARRE,"

By WILLIAM DEVEREUX.

Charles IX. (King of France)	Mr. ALLAN JEAYES
Henry de Bourbon (King of Navarre)	Mr. FRED TERRY
Henry, Duc de Guise	Mr. BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Henry, Duc d'Anjou	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Arthur de Mouhy (a Huguenot Leader)	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Cosmo Ruggieri (an Astrologer)	Mr. F. PERCIVAL STEVENS
Marshal de Tavannes	Mr. JAMES CARTER-EDWARDS
Duc de Biragne	Mr. W. H. ROTHERAM
Duc de Retz	Mr. GEORGE C. BROWNE
Duc de la Rochefoucauld	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
M. des Valles	Mr. IAN O'NEILL
M. de Besme	Mr. W. H. GARBOIS
Nancey (Captain of the King's Guards)	Mr. CLIFFORD SPURR
Page	Mr. ERNEST WATTS TYE
Catherine de Medici	Miss TITA BRAND CAMMAERTS
Marie Belleforet	Miss PEARL A GARDNER
Charlotte de Sauve	Miss FLORENCE SAUNDERS
La Belle Dayole	Miss DOROTHY DAVIS
Mdlle. de Montmorenci (La Belle Fosseuse)	Miss IVY CLEMOW
Mdlle. de Torigni	Miss INTHEA PITZ
Marguerite de Valois	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Court Ladies, Courtiers, Soldiers, Servants:
Misses Cawdery, Brodie, Evans, Talbot-Daniel, Otway and Percival;
Messrs. Edgar, Goodhart, Ray, Wyley, Derrington-Turner.

Stage Manager	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. ERIC MESSITER.
Musical Director	MR. SYDNEY FOULKES.
Advertising Manager	Mr. ALFRED POPE.
Assistant Manager	Mr. GUY SMETHURST.
General Manager	MR. ARTHUR GARRETT.

The Aldwych Theatre

EVERY EVENING AT 8. May 22

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

J. BANNISTER HOWARD

PRESENTS

THE DAIRYMAIDS

Written by A. M. THOMPSON and ROBERT COURTNEIDGE.

Music by FRANK B. TOURS and PAUL RUBENS.

(By arrangement with Robert Courtneidge.)

Lieut. Sam Brudenell, R.N. (Lady Brudenell's Nephew)		Mr. CONINGSBY BRIERLEY
Lieut. Frank Meredith, R.N.		Mr. HERBERT ST. JOHN
Dr. O'Byrne, R.N.		Mr. ROBERT AYRTON
Tim Capus		Mr. JOHN SANDBROOK
Lieut. Brereton, R.N.		Mr. CHARLES P. HUGHES
Todgers	(Farm Servant)	Mr. FRED DENT
Joe Mivens, A.B.	(Dr. O'Byrne's Servant)	Mr. EDWIN DODDS
Lady Brudenell		Miss ALICE VENNING
Eliza	(Maid-of-all-Work)	Miss EDIE MARTIN
Winifred	(Peggy's Sister)	Miss EDITH DRAYSON
Helen	(Sam's Sister)	Miss GABRIELLE GORDON
Miss Penelope Pyechase	(Of Pyechase Academy)	Miss ROSE EDOUIN
Lady Hyde		Miss JOSEPHINE ELLIS
Mrs. Cheyne		Miss MARJORIE BURGESS
Maisie		Miss AMY PRESTON
Dolly		Miss BABS CHRISTOPHER
Daisy		Miss MILLICENT HEALY
Betty		Miss LILY BELL
Joan		Miss DORA WOODROFFE
Jenny		Miss MARIE GLIER
Meg		Miss GRACE WARRELL
Nancy		Miss RUBY VINCENT
Rosie		Miss BARBARA HALL
Gertie		Miss LENA REEVES
Bessie		Miss NOREEN CRAIGIE
May		Miss JOAN COULTHURST
Peggy	(A Dairymaid)	Miss CLARA BECK

PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

SATURDAY, MAY 22nd, at 7.30,

And EVERY EVENING at 7.30.

MATINEES: WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, & SATURDAY at 2.30.

SPECIAL MATINEE WHIT-MONDAY AT 2.30.

ANDREW EMM SEASON.

A NEW DRAMATIC PRODUCTION

Dealing with Incidents of the present day, entitled

For England, Home & Beauty or, "Comrades in Arms."

Written by ANDREW EMM.

Richard Elton, afterwards Lieut. Elton	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Maurice Latimer, Sir James' Nephew	Mr. ARTHUR POOLE
Lord Harry Leyton	Mr. GERALD HENSON
Jerry Lee, an old Trainer	Mr. MATT WILKINSON
Clifton Rayne, Lucy's Father	Mr. HUGH MONTGOMERY
Abraham Schultz, a German Jew	Mr. FRED C. IMBERT
Dr. Langdale, R.A.M.C.	Mr. ARNOLD WINTERS
Herr Riche, a German Spy	Mr. HARE LINDSAY
Jackson, a Stable Lad	Mr. WALTER JOHNSTONE
James ... Servants at	Mr. HARRY HORNSBY
John ... Claremont Hall	Mr. FRANK EARLSWORTHY
Tommy, a Messenger Boy	Master ALFRED SYDNEY
P.C. Brook	Mr. GEORGE MANTELL
Tom Berry, a Clerk in Schultz's Office	Mr. HAROLD MARTIN
James Baker, the Family Lawyer	Mr. ALFRED MILLS
Von Bercham, a German General	Mr. JOHN SARGENT
Teddy Bush	Mr. ANDREW EMM
General West	Mr. GEORGE MITCHELL
Sergt. Cross	Mr. WALTER HURLEY
Heinrich	Mr. E. G. UNDERWOOD
Houslette	Mr. PHIL HARPER
Horseman	Mr. ALFRED RIDGEWAY
Klooke	Mr. CHARLES CLIFTON
Jack Green, a London Scottish	Mr. GEORGE BELMORE
Alice Smith	Miss MARY WILLS
Maggie Standish	Miss ELEANOR MOORE
Gertie Brown	Miss PHYLLIS HARWOOD
Elsie Davies	Miss EDNA BURNE
Florrie Newman, a Nurse	Miss GRACE ARTHURS
Betty Evans	Miss BESSIE WALTERS
May Lee, the Trainer's Daughter	Miss MERRIL DEAN
Lucy Rayne	Miss ROSE RALEIGH

Tenants, frequenters of Race Courses, Bookmakers, Soldiers, Jockeys, Nurses, and German Soldiers.

ACT I. Scene 1 ... ... Jerry Lee's Cottage, "Mayflower"
The Old Trainer's Home. Teddy Bush Reducing his Weight.
The New Owner of Claremont Hall.

Scene 2 ... ... The Grounds of Claremont Hall
Teddy Bush's Halfway House. The Unmarried Mother.
The Honourable Lover.

Scene 3 ... ... Claremont Hall. The Library.
The Espionage Agent. The Anxious Tenants. The Reading of the Will.

ACT II. Scene 1 ... ... The Old Trainer's Home
The Farewell Meal. Love in a Cottage. Teddy Bush Overeats Himself!

Scene 2 ... ... Abraham Schultz's Office in Soho
The Stepping Stone to England.

Scene 3 ... ... Near the Racecourse
The Snake in the Grass. The Contents of Lucy Rayton's Locket.

Scene 4 ... ... The Racecourse
Husband and Wife. The Barrier. The Winning Colours.

ACT III. Scene 1 ... ... May Elton's Apartments in London
War is Declared. The Patriotic Young Britishers. The Suspicious Wife.
A Woman's Greatest Treasure.

Scene 2 ... ... Maurice Latimer's Rooms, Holborn
A Father's Grief. The Unwritten Law.

Scene 3 ... ... Hyde Park
Khaki in Trouble. A Woman's Past. The Sound of the Bugle.
The False Accusation. A Father's Revenge.

ACT IV. Scene 1 A Farm House near the German Firing Line
The Hymn of Hate. The Deserter. The British Prisoners.
The German General's Proposal. The Wireless Installation.

Scene 2 ... ... The Temporary British Hospital
The Impassable Road. Comrades in Arms. The London Scottish.
The Accusation. The Women and the Wounded. Defending their Honour.
For England, Home and Beauty.

WAR MELODRAMAS.

"FOR ENGLAND, HOME, AND BEAUTY."

For England, Home, and Beauty, or Comrades in Arms is the compendious title of the new play "dealing with incidents of the present day," which Mr. Andrew Emm, its author, produced at the Princes Theatre on Saturday night. It is in four acts and 12 scenes, and its characters include a Jew, a spy, and a general (all Germans), a member of the London Scottish, soldiers, nurses, and "German soldiers"—so that its concern with actuality cannot be questioned. Its long-suffering hero goes to the front at the outbreak of war and the heroine follows (naturally) as a nurse. Indeed, practically everybody in the cast gets to the front in one capacity or another and all have thrilling adventures, culminating in a fight at a farm-house which is realistic enough in all conscience and during which a Zeppelin is brought to the ground.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Saturday, May 22nd, 1915, at 7-45.
and Nightly at 7-45.
SPECIAL MATINEE, WHIT MONDAY, MAY 24, at 2-30.

Matinees, Wednesdays & Saturdays, at 2-30.

WALTER AND FREDK. MELVILLE present C. Watson Mill's
Entirely New Play of Extraordinary Interest—
IN TIME OF WAR

Mr. Lauderdale Maitland — As "Captain Russell Squires,"
Miss Ethel Bracewell — As "Diana,"
And Full Lyceum Company.

In Time of War

By C. WATSON MILL.
Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Captain Russell Squires, commanding the Wireless Station	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Baron Guggenheim, known as Richard Bellairs, a Spy	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Colonel Mars, a British Officer	Mr. WILLIAM H. BROUGHAM
Percy Chumleigh, "Percy" (Pals)	Mr HERBERT WILLIAMS
Herbert Bruce, "Erb" (Pals) ...	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Prince Seigfried, The War Lord	Mr. CECIL DU GUE
Dennis O'Flagerty, Landlord of the Blue Anchor	Mr. LAWRENCE CECIL
Jim Bickers, a Barman	Mr. P. MORRIS
George Audley, a Postman	Mr. J. RIGBY
Sergeant Gunstock, of the British Army ...	Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Corporal Fritz, A Germ-Hun	Mr. CECIL DE LEE
Jean, a Chasseur of the French Army Officer	Mr. WINGOLD LAWRENCE
Otto, a German Sentry	Mr. W. READ
Mother Bruce, 'Erb's Mother	Miss LENA CLIFTON
Nurse Alice, a Red Cross Nurse ...	Miss FLORENCE RADCLIFFE
Princess Catherine Zarine, "Kitty," a German Spy	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY
Diana Squires, Wife of Captain Russell	Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL

Villagers, British Soldiers, German Uhlans, Officers, etc.

Acting Manager ... ... BERT E. HAMMOND

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

MONDAY, MAY 24, 1915.

FARCE AND WAR.

The east coast again suffers badly—in melodrama. This time the drama is called "In Time of War." Its author is Mr. C. Watson Mills, nnd it made its first London appearance at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday evening. It is a crude mixture of melodramatic horrors and low comedy.

The old, creaking machinery of melodrama-of-sorts is used to introduce comic turns, patriotic turns, and shrieking turns—most of them supposed to happen at the front, here referred to by programme and principals as the frontier. Even the Warrior Emperor of the great Central State—one of the characters in this drama—is not sure of himself on that point when soliloquising in the breakfast-parlour of the "royal quarters" near the fighting line. It is a gloriously comical scene, courtiers marching with despatches into the room, every man-Jack of them giving his own stage version of the goose step.

How tha audience roared at thie exaggerated absurdity cannot be described. But they laughed at many other things—the spy-poisoners, the plot generally, and the final curtain, when a fierce fight ended with the appearance of a brass band outside the windows—for all the world like Christmas "waits"—prepared tb play a tune.

J. W.

ACT 1 ... ... The East Coast Village

The Call to Arms.

ACT 2—

Scene 1 ... The Royal Quarters near the Fighting Line

German Spy reports Progress.

Scene 2 ... ... The City in Ruins

ACT 3 ... The Chateau Hospital of the British Forces

German Spy at Work.

ACT 4—

Scene 1 ... ... The Shattered Fort

The Beleaguered British Garrison.

Scene 2 ... The Wireless Telegraphy Station on the Frontier

British Pluck versus German Cunning.

The Wireless Message——?

How the Garrison was Saved.

Costumes by W. CLARKSON.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE AND LYCEUM STUDIOS.
Mechanical Effects by THOMAS REES. Properties by W. CRISP.
Electrical Effects by J. WALTERS.
Wireless Installation by GILBERT HERON.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections:—

1. OVERTURE ... "In Time of War" ... Sullivan-Brooke
2. SELECTION ... "Old English Melodies" ... ...
3. ENTR'ACTE (a) "Laces and Graces" ... ... Bratton
   (b) "The Kiltie's Kourtship" ... Mackenzie
4. SELECTION ... "England Expects" ... Sullivan-Brooke

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances

---

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Proprietor - - Lena Ashwell.

TUESDAY, MAY 25TH AT 8.15.

And Every Evening.

Matinee, Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

A Bit o' Love,

By John Galsworthy.

Michael Strangway	William Armstrong
Beatrice Strangway	Madge McIntosh
Mrs. Bradmere	Edith Barwell
Jim Bere	Wilfred E. Shine
Jack Cremer	Frank Randell
Mrs. Burlacombe	Alice Mansfield
Burlacombe	Frank Cremlin
Trnstaford	Percy Marmont
Jarland	William Dexter
Clyst	Lawrence Hanray
Freman	Bryan G. Powley
Godleigh	Charles R. Stone
Sol Potter	Harvey Adams
Morse	Arthur C. Rose
Ivy Burlacombe	Edith Smith
Connie Trustaford	Doris Lloyd
Gladys Freman	Eileen Thorndike
Mercy Jarland	Estelle Winwood
Tibby Jarland	Blanche Fingleston
Bobbie Jarland	Osmnnd Willson

Dumb as Fishes—John C. Rice, Girton Barrie, William Podmore.

Villagers and Congregation—Nina Henderson, Gwynifrede Sardon, Kathleen Johnston, Maisie Horne, Joan Temple, Hilda Horton.

SCENE—A Village of the West.

ACT I. Strangway's rooms at Burlacombe's. Morning.

ACT II. Scene 1—The Village Inn
2—The same
3—Outside the Church } Evening.

ACT III. Scene 1—Strangway's rooms.
2—Burlacombe's Barn

The action passes on Ascension Day.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 26, 1915.

As St. Francis preached to the birds and fishes at Assisi, so Michael, the curate, preaches to the Devonshire village lasses, preparing them for confirmation, talking to them about that same St. Francis and asking them the question, too hard for them to answer: What is a Christian? Incidentally he espies Mercy Jarland with a caged starling (after Sterne caged birds seem always to be starlings) and sets it free. Then his wife, who had run away from him, comes back to say she cannot give up the other man and begs Michael to let them go in peace. She had never loved him apparently he was too saintly a St. Francis for her taste—and so he consents to set that starling free too.

This sublimity of forgiveness may be all very well for saints, but it is not to be tolerated by plain, cider-drinking Devonshire villagers, who hold that it is the business of a wronged husband to cast off the wicked wife and to punch the other fellow's head. Accordingly they hold a village meeting to consider the conduct of Curate Michael, which meeting, through the difficulty of appointing a chairman, arrives at no decision—a fiasco which does not prevent the villagers from gathering round the church porch and soundly hissing the curate. Michael bears his martyrdom with outward courage, but within his spirit fails him and he would have hanged himself in the great barn with the full moon pouring in through the open doors were it not for little Tibby slumbering there, who woke and cried out in terror at Michael as a ghost.

Then Michael falls on his knees and prays, to the full moon:—

. . . La lune
Comme un point sur un i—the moon to which the villagers had just been dancing: he prays that, in place of the love he has lost, he may learn to love every living thing, like the St. Francis of whom he discoursed to the Confirmation class.

The New Galsworthy Play.

It seems a great pity that so able an author as John Galsworthy should give us plays that have nothing in them of the joy of life. What good can these melancholy plays do? "Justice" and "Strife" made appeal to the well-to-do to be charitable, more thoughtful, and more considerate to those in humbler circumstances than themselves. But to whom can "A Bit o' Love," produced on Tuesday evening at the Kingsway Theatre and acted by the Liverpool Players, appeal? Mr. Galsworthy's story is of a curate who is persuaded by his wife not publicly to protest against her going away to live with another man. And he consented because his love for her forbade him to disgrace her. Then followed the discovery of his secret and the torture he was made to endure in the village where his home had been made. The play has undoubted merits—what John Galsworthy writes has always that—but its qualities are very uneven and this company was not sufficiently experienced to make the most of its best qualities nor to conceal any of its defect.

J. W.

THE IRISH PLAYERS from the ABBEY THEATRE, DUBLIN,
in Repertoire of Irish Plays.

WEDNESDAY (AFTERNOON) AT 2 etc SATURDAY (AFTERNOON) 8.30

FIRST PRODUCTION IN LONDON OF

A Minute's Wait

A [illegible] by MARTIN J. McHUGH

Jimmy Dorrigan	ARTHUR SINCLAIR	[illegible]
Christy Dorrigan	PHILIP GUIHEN	[illegible]
Miss Tidsey	NORA DESMOND	[illegible]
Mary Ann McMahon	ETHNE MAGEE	[illegible]
Andy Rourke	FRED O'DONOVAN	[illegible]
Pat Morrissey	J. A. O'ROURKE	[illegible]

The action takes place on the platform of Dunfaill Station on the Ballyscran and Dunfaill Light Railway, as the evening train is about to depart on a summer day. Present time.

NOTE The audience are supposed to view the Platform from the Train.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1915.

AN IRISH RAILWAY PLAY.

The Irish Players gave the first performance in London yesterday at the Little Theatre of a short amusing play by Mr. Martin J. McHugh called "A Minute's Wait." The scene of the comedy is the platform of a remote little railway station in Ireland, and the audience is supposed to witness the incidents from the windows of the train.

None of the incidents has a worse effect than to delay the train, the engine of which is with difficulty, as the stationmaster says, "kept on the boil," while late passengers and late parcels drive him out of his mind. Pat Murnane's goat, too, had to be brought at the last moment from the first-class waiting-room, where it managed to eat a basket of prize cabbages and the paper off the walls. Altogether a most simple and comical play acted with splendid humour by everyone concerned.

THE LIT
JOHN ST
Sole Proprietress
THE IRI
Wednesday
Matin
May 26
Stall
No. D 2
This to be retained

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to FRANK CURZON

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

To-Night Saturday, May 29th, 1915, and Every Evening at 8.30.

FRANK CURZON'S Production

"THE LAUGHTER OF FOOLS,"

A New Play in Three Acts, by H. F. MALTBY.

John Bassett Greig	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Bertie Greig	... Mr. MAX LEEDS
Charles Vidal	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Horace Biggs	...Mr. JACK HOBBS
Mr. Nuttall	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Mr. Plunkett	Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Mrs. Greig	Miss FRANCES IVOR
Mabel Greig	Miss HILDA BAYLEY
Doris Henley	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Elizabeth	Miss EVA LE GALLIENNE

Act I. ... The Drawing Room at "Cliff House." Evening.

Act II. ... The "Snuggery" at "Cliff House. The Next Morning

Act III. ... The Hall at "Cliff House." Afternoon of the Same Day

Scene is laid at Southcliffe Time: The Present.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY E. LYALL SWETE.

Dresses by Miss Gray, Ltd., and Messrs. Isabella's, Ltd. Scenery by J. V. Fraser.
Furniture by Mrs. H. Cecil Jenson, 351, Pentland Square, W.C.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. ERNEST VOUSDEN will play the following Music:—

Selection	"Dear Dream"	Sullivan	Last Pierrot	... "In Dahomey" ... ... Cooke
Two Waltzes	"On Meadow's Edge"	Coppe
Dance	"Poland" ...	Wyniawski	March ...	... "The Irresistible" ... Vousden

Piano by Murdoch & Murdoch, 461, Oxford Street, W.

Musical Conductor ... ... ERNEST VOUSDEN
Stage Manager ... ... EDWARD SHALE
General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

THE TIMES

MONDAY, MAY 31, 1915.

"Interroge-toi quand tu ris," wrote Stendhal to his sister; but it was a counsel of perfection. Laughter is not easily controlled by self-interrogation, yet is not therefor inevitably to be condemned as of the kind described in the title of this play. Nor were all the people who laughed so boisterously on Saturday night necessarily of the tribe of Mr. Peter Magnus's friends. Some of them may have been descendants of the perhaps too notorious personage who could never help laughing over the story of grouse in the gun-room. Whatever the precise quality of their laughter, however, there was no doubt about its abundance and its spontaneity.

There were two stories to laugh at. One was the story of Cinderella, a "poor relation" in a snobbish and insolent family, condemned to be the household drudge, but achieving her drudgery with so modest and winning a grace as to capture the heart and hand of Prince Charming, a wealthy young man whom the family had hoped to catch for one of its own inner circle. The other story was of an elderly gentleman, the despised and neglected father of the snobbish family, who in the excitement of an auction bought a house which he didn't want for a sum which he couldn't pay, but who almost immediately sold it again for a handsome profit to a railway company which did want it. The sole connexion between the two stories was the circumstance that the old gentleman and Cinderella were fast friends.

NEW
THEATRE

E
1/6/1915

Orch. Stall
£1 2 0

RIGHT
To be retained

On TUESDAY, JUNE 1st,

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY

will produce

ARMAGEDDON

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

Evenings at 8.30 p.m. Matinees Wednesdays & Saturdays at 2.30 p.m. (First Matinee, June 5.)

The whole of the proceeds of the first performance will be handed over by Mr. Martin Harvey to the Wounded Allies Relief Committee.

CHARACTERS.

Prologue - - In Hell

Satan (the Archfiend)	MR. MARTIN HARVEY	Moloch (Lord of War) ..	MR. EDWARD SASS
Beelzebub (inferior only to Satan)	MR. J FISHER WHITE	Belial (Lord of Lies) ..	MR. F FORBES ROBERTSON
The Shade of Attila	MR. FRANKLIN DYALL	A Fury	Miss MARY RORKE
Shadows ..	Misses BESSIE ELDER, MARY GRAY, NORAH ALLEN, &c
	Fiends, Spirits, &c., &c.

Scene I.—RHEIMS. A room in a French Chateau overlooking Rheims.

Count Von der Trenk (Commander of the 5th German Army Corps in Rheims)			MR. CHARLES GLENNEY
The Abbe of Rheims ..	MR. MARTIN HARVEY	A Lieutenant	MR WILSON GUNNING
Pierre (a Prisoner) . ..	MR. HERBERT DANSEY	An Orderly	MR. IVO DANYERS
Marie (a French peasant girl)	Miss MAUD RIVERS	A Captain of Uhlans ..	MR. B. MARSH DUNN
A Captain	MR. ALFRED IBBERSON	Officers of General von Trenk's Staff, Priests, Soldier &c

Scene II.—AN ENGLISH ORCHARD.

Lady Carteret (a widow whose son is fighting at the front) Miss MARY RORKE	Ethel Millard (betrothed to her son) .. Miss N de SILVA Charles Rowland .. .. MR. WALTER HOWE

An Interval of Ten Minutes.

SCENE III. The Official German Press Bureau in Berlin.

Herr Weiss (the Director) ..	MR. FRANKLIN DYALL	Third Reporter	MR B MARSH DUNN
First Reporter ..	MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD	Fourth Reporter	MR. WILSON GUNNING
Second Reporter	MR. PERCY FOSTER	Fifth Reporter ..	MR. FRANK FORBES ROBERTSON
An Officer from the Imperial Palace			MR. ALFRED IBBERSON

Scene IV.—COLOGNE.—A room in the house of the Burgomaster of Cologne.

General Murdoch (Commander of the British Advance Corps in Cologne)			MR. MARTIN HARVEY
General Larrier (Commander of the French Army Corps in Cologne)			MR. EDWARD SASS
General Leblanc (Commander of the Belgian Advance Corps in Cologne)			MR J. FISHER WHITE
Elsa (The Burgomaster's daughter) ..	Miss MAUD RIVERS	Clothilde (a Belgian girl) ..	Miss MARGARET DALE
A German Officer	MR. SYDNEY COLTSON
Officers on General Murdoch's Staff	Messrs. GUNNING, DANYERS, and F. FORBES ROBERTSON
The Spirit of Joan of Arc			Miss N. de SILVA

Epilogue - - In Hell.

Satan	MR MARTIN HARVEY
The Shade of Attila	MR FRANKLIN DYALL

Preceded (after the first performance) by

"THE CONSPIRACY,"

By ROBERT BARR and SIDNEY LEWIS RANSOM.

King Konrad of Polavia	MR. MARTIN HARVEY
Baron Brunfels	MR. CHARLES GLENNEY
Count Staum	MR. J COOKE BERESFORD
Herr Von Steinmetz	MR PERCY FOSTER

Nobles of Polavia—Messrs. Eugene Wellesley, Walter Howe, Alfred Ibberson, Sydney Coltson, etc

SCENE—Count Staum's Hunting Chalet near the frontier of Polavia.

Time—Present day.

Business Manager	For Mr. Martin Harvey	MR FRANK B O'NEILL
Stage Director		MR WILLIAM HOLLES
Stage Manager		MR. CHARLES BEARD
Assistant Stage Manager ..		MR. SYDNEY COLTSON
Musical Director		MR. W H HUDSON

Business Manager (For Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)
MR. CECIL ROSE

Nearest Tube Station to this Theatre—Leicester Square.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS will not make history with the "modern epic drama" "Armageddon," which Mr. Martin Harvey produced at the New Theatre on Tuesday. Briefly, as far as its plan goes it is a revue in six scenes—the first of them laid in Hell, where Satan sends the shade of Attila back to earth in search of trouble, or to make it. The scenes that follow have no relation to each other. They are all concerned, it is true, with the present war, and designed to tell us that war is a horrible thing; but although fine phrases abound in the dialogue written for these scenes, nothing is said or done to show us that the author has any great mission, or that he knows more or feels more deeply about what is happening in Europe than the very simple man in the street who has friends and relatives fighting in France or elsewhere.

Why a Hell Scene?

Why it should be thought necessary to give a Hell scene with a presumption that wars are ordered from there, goodness only knows. No ordinary human being could explain it. The action of this drama lies in the bombardment of Rheims and the Berlin Press Bureau scenes, and as both are quite trivial the high aim of the prologue is not sustained in anything approaching an impressive manner. Frankly, the drama is a disappointment. It has been inspired, apparently, by what the author has read in the papers, and it has no pretensions at any moment to be as inspiring or impressive as some of the things that have been written about the war by journalists who have seen something of it. At the end of the performance Mr. Harvey, who had a very good reception, made a speech, and so ended for some of us a very disappointing play.

A Curious Audience.

It was, even for war time, a very curious audience that had watched this play. Curious in that for the first time at a West End first-night women came into the stalls in ordinary walking costumes, still wearing their hats. More than a score came dressed like that. Perhaps it is a new vogue. One of these pioneers of fashion, a lady of ample proportions, who sat near me, took many minutes to arrange her hat, her jacket, umbrella, and bag. She was ready just in time to see the curtain go up. Between the prologue and Scene 1 she splashed herself freely with some malignant class of perfume, with the result that several neighbours changed their seats at the end of Act 1. She was quite unconscious of the success she got with that perfume. I hope the Germans will not find out what it was and try it on the Allied armies. J. W.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1915.

Various and typical aspects of the war, presented on the kaleidoscopic or haphazard plan, and expressed alternately in blank verse which never fails in smoothness and in prose which seldom, if ever, attains distinction. There is a prologue in Hell, with a "decoration" that seems to have been inspired by Blake, and a debate of the fallen angels, which is, of course, Miltonic in origin if in nothing else. Satan (Mr. Martin Harvey), a nearly nude figure with black wings very deftly managed, goaded by his discontented subjects into exhibiting some form of activity, summons the shade of Attila, and sends him forth to bring war and rapine upon the Planet Earth. Then a view of Reims bombarded by the Germans, with pictures of German barbarity and "frightfulness"—prisoners shot, women insulted, interceding priests (Mr. Martin Harvey is the leading abbé) mocked at, and so forth. German sentiments about world-power declaimed over draughts of champagne by the commander (Mr. Charles Glenney). An asphyxiating shell, which causes instant but painless death, puts an end to the Germans and to the scene—an inevitable scene in any English war-play, true enough to fact, of course, but not any the more acceptable to the æsthetic sense for being true. Contrasted scene: a peaceful English orchard, according to the playbill, but a very theatrical orchard with apple-trees like oaks and no evidence of pomocultural skill. It is, however, the background of a sincere emotion—the repressed grief of a mother on learning the death of her soldier son, expressed with the unmistakable feeling of a poet by the author and nobly rendered by Miss Mary Rorke. This short but poignant scene is the best thing in the play.

With a shake of the kaleidoscope you return to prose, and remarkably prosaic prose, in which the Director of the German Press Bureau dictates to his minions picturesque lies about the miserable state of England. By an unlucky accident, however, a single word of truth has intruded among his lies, and for this blunder he is dismissed by an emissary of the Kaiser. Mr. Phillips's irony is of the easy and obvious order, and the scene, though actually short, seems too long.

Next scene: one of those anticipations of victory also inevitable in every war play. The Allies have entered Cologne, and through their generals (Mr. Edward Sass and Mr. Fisher White) France and Belgium argue with the English commander (Mr. Martin Harvey) the case for revenge. The Englishman is against until he is infuriated by the news of the death of his son and mutilation of the corpse, but a vision of Joan of Arc (Miss de Silva) restores his better frame of mind. The typical French, Belgian, and British views are fairly and forcibly represented in the argument—forcibly rather than poetically. There was a poetic notion, no doubt, in the Joan of Arc vision, some idea of spiritual beauty, but this germ hardly developed into full fruition on the stage last night. Incidentally, you were shown the Allies' respect for women and for a moral law. It is worth noting that the audience testified its concurrence in the humane policy ultimately settled by the English commander.

Epilogue: in Hell again. Attila reports what has happened, but admits virtual defeat, which he attributes to some power of goodness which he cannot understand. Satan is enraged, but a beam of light from above falls upon him, and he cowers, stricken, to the ground under wings now limp and ragged. On the whole, a medley rather than an organism, a serious variety entertainment or revue on the theme of war, with ratiocination in lieu of songs. German brutality, so horrible in fact, becomes merely tedious in fiction, as everything becomes tedious when familiar in advance. Of art really fine you note for remembrance the Blake-ish effects in Hell, the bereaved mother of Miss Rorke, and, perhaps, some of the debate at Cologne. At the fall of the curtain Mr. Harvey had to make a speech of thanks to a house which it was good to see crowded, as the whole proceeds of the night are to be handed over to the Wounded Allies Relief Committee.

CRITERION
THEATRE

June 2
E
—
Orchestra Stall
B 33

By arrangement with Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 2nd, 1915, and Every Evening at 9.
Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday at 3.

For a limited number of performances.

MILTON ROSMER and his Company, including IRENE ROOKE

Present for the first time a Country House Comedy in Three Acts,

"THE HILLARYS"

By STANLEY HOUGHTON and HAROLD BRIGHOUSE

Characters in order of their appearance

Rose Tomlin	IRENE ROOKE
Ronald Hillary	CHARLES KING
Maud	PEGGY ANDREWS
Mrs. George Hillary	DOROTHY RIPLEY
Lady Hillary	CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
Sir Ambrose Hillary	...F. RANDLE AYRTON
Watkins	... J. LESLIE FRITH
Patrick Hillary	MILTON ROSMER

The Scene is laid at Hillary Friars.

Scenery by Hemsley, Felix Street, S.E. Furniture by Lyons.
Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinds, Ltd., London and Birmingham

Preceded at 8.30 and 2.30 by

"FOLLOWERS"

A "Cranford" Sketch by HAROLD BRIGHOUSE

Helen Masters	DOROTHY RIPLEY
Susan Crowther	.. HILDA DAVIES
Lucinda Baines	.. IRENE ROOKE
Colonel Redfern	F. RANDLE AYRTON

Costumes by Dorothy Carleton Smith.

Both Plays produced by MILTON ROSMER

...ness Manager	For	.. .. ARTHUR MILTON
...ge Manager	Milton Rosmer	.. .. J. LESLIE FRITH
Business Manager	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore)	.. Mr. CECIL BRETON

Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone Nos.—Gerrard 3444, Regent 3365

NEAREST TUBE STATION—PICCADILLY CIRCUS

THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1915.

This is a play about love, which is for most tastes better than a play about war, though the things best worth knowing about love will never be revealed in plays, or, indeed, revealed at all, being for ever kept by the chosen few who know them as precious and inviolable secrets. But plays can present, and with a knowing air, too, the eternal and eternally superficial commonplaces of the famous old subject, so as to delude the simple into supposing that they are really getting some glimpse of its mysteries. There are, for instance, the rudimentary age-classifications, as (a) boy's love, (b) middle-aged man of the world's love, and so forth—all really false, because there are no classes in this matter, but only individuals; yet with specious air of truth enough to pass in the novel or the theatre. Ronald, in this play, stands for (a) and Uncle Pat for (b), and the play consists in a sham fight between the two. Ronald, you see, is the heir, and really must be prevented from marrying the governess, whose grandfather was a pork-butcher, so Uncle Pat, an acknowledged expert in Donjuanism, is summoned to the rescue by the affrighted family. He will, please, flirt with the girl, run away with her if he likes, and to the dickens with morality, so long as she is lured or snatched away from Ronald.

Of course, you know what happens to Uncle Pat; he is caught in his own toils, falls irretrievably in love, and proposes marriage on his own account. Of course, also, there are any number of orthodox stage solutions for such a situation, of which perhaps that actually chosen in this play—the refusal of the lady to marry either suitor—is only probable on the Aristotelian principle that there is a probability of some things happening contrary to probability. Anyhow, the lady refuses to marry Uncle Pat because she loves Ronald, and refuses to marry Ronald for the same reason, as the unworthy granddaughter of a pork-butcher.

Miss Irene Rooke is so sweet and sympathetic as the governess that it seems a sad waste of eminently marriageable womanhood that she is allowed to escape unwed. As Don Juan converted, and converted in vain, Mr. Milton Rosmer is perhaps somewhat incongruously matter-of-fact. Probably he is not entirely satisfied as to the fundamental value of the love-philosophy and love-casuistry set forth in his part and, generally, in the play. No more are we.

"The Hillarys."

In the new domestic comedy, "The Hillarys"—an unfinished play by the late Stanley Houghton that has been completed by Harold Brighouse, a good deal of amusement is got out of a family of bounders whose chief object in life is to harry the girl who acts as secretary to one of the "ladies" of the family and as governess to the same lady's child. The Criterion Theatre was by no means full when this play was produced there on Wednesday evening, but those who were present enjoyed themselves fairly well watching the family conspire to prevent the grandson, and heir, to Sir Ambrose Hillary, marrying a girl whose grandfather was only a pork-butcher.

An Unconventional End.

Although they traced their family back to the Conquest, the Hillarys were the most amusingly contemptible lot one can imagine, for they welcomed with joy the attempt of the boy's uncle to wrong the girl, and threatened to repudiate him also when eventually he fell in love and offered her honourable marriage. Mr. Brighouse got an unconventional termination for the play by making the girl refuse to have anything more to do with this honourable family of bounders. The two best acting performances were that of Lady Hillary by Miss Claire Pauncefort, and that of the little girl Maud by Miss Peggy Andrews. These two were most excellent. J. W.

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. RUPERT D'OYLY CARTE, Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - Mr. H. B. IRVING

THURSDAY, JUNE 3rd, 1915, AT 8.30.

THE ANGEL IN THE HOUSE

A Comedy in Three Acts

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS and MACDONALD HASTINGS.

The Hon. Hyacinth Petavel	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Sir Rupert Bindloss, Bt.	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Basil Malet	Mr. LANGHORNE BURTON
Count Pietro Rossi	Mr. C. WALTER MARTIN
Robert	Mr. GEOFFREY WILMER
Lallie Bindloss	Miss VERA COBURN
Joan Bindloss	Miss MARY GLYNNE
Lady Sarel	LADY TREE

ACT I. Scene: The Hall of a Country House (Two weeks elapse).

ACT II. Scene: The same.

ACT III. Scene: The Temple of Eros.

The Play Produced for Mr. Irving by Mr. HOLMAN CLARK.

Dresses designed and carried out by Mdlle. RACHELLE OSPOVAT, 69 New Bond Street, W. Hats specially designed by MAISON LEWIS, London and Paris. The Electric Player-Piano supplied by KEITH PROWSE & Co., 162 New Bond Street, W.

Wigs by CLARKSON. The ESTEY Organ used in the Orchestra.

Scenery by G. SACKMANN.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by

KEEPING UP APPEARANCES

A Play in One Act

By W. W. JACOBS.

Bill Burtenshaw	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Silas Winch	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Mrs. Burtenshaw	Miss CLARE GREET

Scene Mr. Burtenshaw's Best Bedroom.

THE TIMES PAST TIMES

FRIDAY, JUNE 4, 1915.

Hyacinth was a futurist, a eugenist, and a valetudinarian, with three pet dogs, a habit of always blandly having his own way, a sluggish circulation which required blazing fires in August, and a tongue that was never still. Coming on a visit to his friend Sir Rupert in the country, he turned the old gentleman's house upside down, displaced the old family portraits by futurist daubs, and on eugenic principles induced Sir Rupert's daughters to break off their engagements, while he almost persuaded Sir Rupert's old friend Lady Sarel that it was her duty to marry Sir Rupert and so become a sort of mother to himself, Hyacinth. It all sounds very absurd, and that is precisely what it is meant to be—absurd and frivolous and just a dance or a picnic, whichever way you like to look at it.

It reaches the culminating point of absurdity on an island in the lake, where Hyacinth and Lady Sarel get left alone through a mischievous conspiracy of the girls and their sweethearts. The proper word, as Hyacinth gravely informs the lady—for Hyacinth is throughout as grave as an owl—is marooned. Well, the marooned couple find it chilly, and Hyacinth, the victim of sluggish temperature, feels sure that he will never survive the night, but Lady Sarel clings close to him and indeed insists upon his wearing her flannel petticoat. This touching incident it is that puts an end to Hyacinth's lifelong celibacy, and Lady Sarel becomes his wife instead of his mother after all.

It is a genuinely comic character, this fantastic egoist who, suavely and volubly and all in the way of kindness, persuades or simply bids all the world to comply with his fantasies; and Mr. Irving makes a rich thing of it, obviously enjoying its absurdities and presenting them with a tender, loving care. He is greatly helped by the quiet, sly humour of Lady Tree and by the genial, simple humour of Mr. Holman Clark. Add that there are two notably pretty faces in the cast, any number of smart gowns, and, best of all, that general air of madcap fun which is indispensable in a play—or rather a prank—of this light and airy kind. From first to last the house never ceased laughing—and an evening of continuous laughter is a precious restorative after the heavy cares that beset the present day.

Lady Tree's Role.

The three daughters of Sir Herbert and Lady Tree were present at the Savoy Theatre on Thursday to see their mother act in the new play that Mr. H. B. Irving produced that evening, and a very admirable performance they saw her give. The new play is called "The Angel of the House." Its authors are B. Macdonald Hastings and Eden Phillpotts, and most excellent entertainment does it provide. The scene of the pleasantry, if I may so call it, is the country home of a wealthy baronet—a widower with two pretty daughters, and the play begins just where this good-natured old gentleman learns that an old flame of his has bequeathed to him the care of her only son, the boy that had been "the angel of the house." The arrival of the "boy," forty-two years of age, accompanied by dogs, daubs (pictures), and all sorts of selfish fads, soon disturbs the peace of the beautiful home, but, engineered with great skill by a charming and diplomatic friend (Lady Tree) the household steers safely through the difficulties and comic troubles raised by the newcomer, and in the end this good lady takes the "angel" off their hands and marries him. It was good fun throughout, everybody acted perfectly, and I only mention Lady Tree, Mr. Holman Clark, and Mr. Irving to the exclusion of others because they did the most work.

J. W.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager . . SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

MARIE-ODILE

By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH

The Play produced by Sir HERBERT TREE in conjunction with the Author.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8th AT 8.

AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.30

MARIE-ODILE

Sister Saint Marie-Odile	MARIE LOHR
Sister Saint Clotilde	STELLA St. AUDRIE
Sister Saint Louise	MILLIE HYLTON
	(By arrangement with Geo. Grossmith & Ed. Laurillard)
Sister Saint Monica	LOUISE REGNIS
Sister Saint Anatole	ADA KING
Sister Saint Angela	GEORGINA MILNE
Sister Saint Cecilia	IRENE DELISSE
Sister Saint Joseph	MAUDE PHILLIPS
Sister Saint Elizabeth	JOAN CHALLONER
Sister Saint Catharine	JENNIE EARLE
Sister Saint Barbara	GRACE DARBY
Mother Saint Dominic	HELEN HAYE
Father Benedict	A. E. GEORGE
Peter	O. B. CLARENCE
A Corporal	BASIL GILL
A Sergeant	HUBERT CARTER
1st Soldier	H. C HEWITT
2nd Soldier	JULIAN CROSS
3rd Soldier	VERNON CRABTREE
4th Soldier	R. BODNEY
5th Soldier	HENRY BYATT

The Scene is laid in a Convent in a Mountainous Region.

Programme of Music.

BEFORE ACT I.

PRELUDE ... "La Voix des Cloches" ... Luigini

BEFORE ACT II.

MEDITATION FROM "THAÏS" ... Massenet

MARCHE MILITAIRE ... ... Schubert

DEMANDE ET REPONSE ... Coleridge-Taylor

BEFORE ACT III.

CHANT D'AMOUR ... ... Thomé

RUSTLE OF SPRING ... ... Sinding

BERCEUSE ... ... Grieg

The Scene has been designed by MAXWELL AYRTON, A.R.I.B.A., and painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN.

Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS and Miss LEVERICK. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, JUNE 12th

and every following Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

Special Theatre Edition of "Thoughts and Afterthoughts," by Herbert Beerbohm Tree, can be obtained at the Box Office or from the Attendants, Price 1/-.

STAGE MANAGER— STANLEY BELL.

ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGERS—ALFRED BELLEW & W. B. ABINGDON. MUSICAL DIRECTOR—PERCY E. FLETCHER.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

148

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1915.

This is the story of the innocence of Sister Saint Marie-Odile. A foundling adopted by the nuns, she had never passed outside the convent walls, wondered whether all babies were found on doorsteps, as she had been, and, a conventual Miranda, had never seen a man, save Father Benedict and Peter, the old convent gardener, who was not one of the naughty convent gardeners out of Boccaccio, but half-crazy, and bore a monstrously inappropriate resemblance to Sir Edward Clarke. She supposed young men might be like the blessed St. Michael painted on the convent wall.

Apart from these speculations on men and infants, she would have been quite happy with her pigeons, especially with the brown one that she named St. Francis because of his robe, had she not been harshly used by the Mother Superior, who in a convent might be called austere and outside it "catty." Just, however, when this disagreeable person had, out of mere spite, ordered St. Francis to be killed and cooked for her dinner, the enemy (for a war was going on outside) was announced, and the nuns fled, without Marie-Odile, who happened to be out of the way. Tant pis, shrugged the nuns, or words to that effect, and left Marie-Odile to look after herself. Then a handsome young corporal entered, with fair hair and breastplate and drawn sword, like the figure on the wall, and Marie-Odile fell on her knees, whispering in awe "Saint Michael!"

The whole sergeant's company now arrived, and the sergeant ordered Marie-Odile to bring them dinner, and they made her sit in the Mother Superior's chair and drank her health. They were roughish, of course, but not bad fellows, and behaved quite decently when Marie-Odile insisted on their standing up to grace, and, later, talked of their mothers. Guns now booming in the distance, they must to horse and away, but the sergeant left the corporal behind, because it seemed that "there had never been a woman in the corporal's life," and the sergeant thought it was high time there was one. Here was a trying situation for the bashful corporal, who felt he ought to go away and yet very much wanted to stay. Sister Marie-Odile prattled to him about herself and told him how she was still a Novice and showed him her hair, under her veil, cut short like Joan of Arc's. He kissed her reverently on the forehead and really started to go, but Marie-Odile, unable to bear the idea of parting, cried "Stay," and he stayed.

A Year After.

A year passes in the interval, and Marie-Odile, when seen again, is rocking a cradle and uttering motherly endearments to little Michael. She attributes the child to some blessed miracle. One day she had felt dizzy and old Peter, the gardener, came to her aid, and when she regained consciousness, there at her side lay little Michael. The behaviour of the Mother Superior when she brought back her nuns (peace having now been declared) can be readily imagined. Out of the convent the baggage must go. And, though Sister Saint Louise spoke up for her, saying it was all the nuns' fault for leaving the poor girl behind, out of the convent Marie-Odile went, carrying her babe, while the Angelus was sung and the Sisters knelt down and prayed. As nothing more was seen of little Michael's father, you presume he fell in the war.

A story of this kind ought, you instinctively feel, to be told by a poet. Mr. Knoblauch, though he handles his theme with delicacy and reverence, is a prosaist, and a theatrical prosaist, whose phrases were found not like Marie-Odile on a doorstep, but on the boards. "Don't think I'm going to argue with you," says the Mother Superior, and so forth and so forth. Now prose for this particular theme simply won't do. It cries aloud for the poetic sanctification, for the rhythmic fervour, for the noble harmony of verse. We do not suggest that Mr. Knoblauch has vulgarized his theme, indeed he has been serious and even solemn over it—let us go further and say that he has had poetic ideas about it. The girl kneeling to the young soldier whom she takes for St. Michael is a poetic idea, to instance no others. But the inexorable fact remains—poetic ideas can only get themselves adequately expressed in poetry. Miss Marie Löhr was wonderfully sweet and Fra Angelico-ish as Marie-Odile, and Miss Helen Haye properly sour and gloomy (school of Zurbaran, say) as the Mother Superior. Mr. Basil Gill and Mr. Hubert Carter, as corporal and sergeant, did very well. The whole performance was accepted always with respect and often with applause. But you came away unsatisfied, thinking not so much of what had been done with the theme as of what might have been done. You longed for the magic spell to be cast over it, for the transport of poetry, its mystery, its transfiguration.

"Marie-Odile."

Tuesday felt like the hottest evening we have had, at all events this year, and it was only natural that that should have affected the audience that went to His Majesty's Theatre for the first performance, in London, of Edward Knoblauch's play, "Marie-Odile." I knew that as I went down the Haymarket I felt not in the least like play-going. I envied the people in the street making their way to the parks, and truly I must confess that that was not anything like the proper attitude of mind to bring into a theatre. I was not by any means the only one who would have preferred a much cooler evening. I think everyone who was there would have wished it. They looked tired and listless before the curtain went up, and so Sir Herbert Tree had not all the favours of fortune to help him out with this play.

Sir Herbert Tree's Absence.

Well-known people were fairly numerous at His Majesty's Theatre. That feature can always be found in the first-night audience at His Majesty's, but the absence of Sir Herbert from the cast must have accounted for the absence of many people usually seen there on these occasions. Sir Ernest Cassel, one of the most faithful friends, was not an absentee. He had his usual place in the stalls, and Mr. Arthur Bourchier (who on the last first night here was on the stage playing a part) sat near him. Lady Randolph Churchill, the Hon. Charles Russell, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mr. Kendal, and Lord Swaythling were also in the stalls, and in the large box over the orchestra on the prompt side the Duchess of Rutland sat with Sir Herbert Tree and his three daughters.

Wasted Talent.

With every wish to be pleased I found little in this "Marie-Odile" to please. A story that has to depend on the raiding of a convent by a party of soldiers in wartime and the deliberate betrayal of a young novice found there alone and unprotected cannot be a particularly pleasant one. I am sure Sir Herbert in rehearsing the play did all he knew to keep unpleasant facts from out it, but he did not succeed. The atmosphere of a convent was never even vaguely suggested for one single instant, and the only thing to be said about the business is that the downfall of an innocent young woman, entirely ignorant of life, is the beginning and end of this drama. Miss Marie Löhr looked very sweet and charming in the title-rôle. The other performances were as conventional as the stage directions evidently demanded they should be. It was a case of wasted talent as far as the company was concerned.

J. W.

150

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

LEICESTER SQUARE Underground Station is next door to this Theatre.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9th, 1915, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

A New Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"GAMBLERS ALL"

By

MAY MARTINDALE.

Characters.

Harold Tempest	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Sir George Langworthy	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Major Stocks	Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Robert Langworthy	Mr. J. V. BRYANT
Freddy Tiewell	Mr. FORRESTER HARVEY
Fox	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Bates	Mr. FREDERICK CULLEY
Richards	Mr. F. J. ARLTON
Lady Langworthy	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Ruth Langworthy	Miss DORIS LYTTON
Millicent Hope	Miss HILDA MOORE
Sybil Campbell	Miss AGNES GLYNNE
Mrs. Stocks	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Molly	Miss JOY CHATWYN
Dolly	Miss DOROTHY FANE

AND

John Leighton ... Mr. LEWIS WALLER

ACT I. .. Drawing-room at Sir George Langworthy's House

NOTE.—The Curtain will be lowered in Act I. to mark a lapse of time.

ACT II. .. A House in Buckingham Gate

ACT III. .. Same as Act I.

ACT IV. .. Smoking-room in John Leighton's Flat

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES. Miss Madge Titheradge's Dresses designed and made by LUCILE, LTD., 23 Hanover Square, W. Fur Coat supplied by JAMES INCE, 156 Oxford Street, W. Other Ladies' Dresses by Madame LÖYSE, 11 Princes Street, Hanover Square, W. Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., LTD., Hampstead Road, N.W. Curtains and Coverings by STORY & Co., Kensington, W. Wigs by CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W. The Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by THE CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Music

Under the Direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, Selections from the following Repertoire will be played.

1. OPERATIC SELECTIONS ... Italian	7. INTERMEZZO "UNDER THE PALMS" ... Haines
2. ENTR'ACTES "Pastorale," "Torch Dance" V. Thomas	8. FIDDLE DANCE ... Fletcher
3. MARCH "ADMIRALS ALL" ... H. Bath	9. "HE'S A TAG-PICKER" ... Irving Berlin
4. FAVORITE SONGS ... Selected	10. "CHANT SANS PAROLES" ... Tschaikowsky
5. VALSE "FAUST" ... Gounod	11. SPANISH MARCH ... Lope
6. SERBIAN DANCES ... Sistek	12. PAGEANT MUSIC ... Ernest Bucalossi

* A number will be exhibited to indicate the music being played.

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI

Stage Manager ... W. T. LOVELL

Business Manager ... HERBERT JAY

Plays

THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1915.

She never told her husband she was an inveterate gambler because he was so prejudiced against card-playing, though (as the card-players reminded him) given to speculating himself in stocks and shares; and when, by a sheer fluke, he found his wife in a gambling hell—just at the moment, too, that it was raided by the police—a certain domestic coolness ensued. Then her brother, in order to get money to pay her gambling debts, forged the name of a gentleman-moneylender (as you might say gentleman-burglar or gentleman-farmer) who happened to be in love with her; and, to save her brother, she would have run away with the gentleman-moneylender had not the gentleman part of him come uppermost and induced him not only to hand her back, safe and sound, to her fussy bore of a husband, but also to destroy the signature her brother had forged. The moral was the old, old one, that cards are the devil's books, plus the more novel one that moneylenders, or at any rate gentlemen-moneylenders, are not so black as they are painted.

A remarkably foolish play about a set of absurdly theatrical personages, with Mr. du Maurier, nevertheless, delighting everybody as a lovable scamp (until he became a forger and braggart, and took to carrying pocket-pistols), and Mr. Lewis Waller showing all his old authority and fervour, as the gentleman-moneylender, and Miss Titheradge endowing the female gambler with a girlish and mutinous charm, and clever Mr. France for once nonplussed by an impossible part. Somebody in the stalls was heard to say "it was such a nice play because there was not a word about the war in it." The remark showed the trend of playgoing feeling, if it somewhat inadequately estimated the requisites for a "nice" play.

The Theatrical Heroine.

Those who want to see a play that will provide a jolly good evening's entertainment can go to Wyndham's Theatre with the assurance that they will get it. There is no pretence about "Gamblers All." It is simply an interesting play, and it does not matter a row of pins if a very captious friend happens to tell you that it is more a play of the theatre than a play of real life. The heroine (if you think you can call her a heroine) of this play is undoubtedly a very fine example of the theatrical heroine, but the story depends very little on her or her whims and fads.

Drawing-room Melodrama.

The other incidents are the things that count in this drawing-room melodrama, and very exciting and thrilling and amusing most of those incidents are. The scene in the West End baccarat club is admirably conducted; in fact the whole business of the play is admirably conducted, and the acting is excellent. Mr. Gerald du Maurier and Mr. Lewis Waller are first-rate. Mr. Lyston Lyle as a retired military man turned adventurer is a sheer joy, and Miss Doris Lytton as the ingénue is a delight. At the end of the play Mr. du Maurier was compelled to make a speech. He said their object was to give something away from the things we think of all day . . . "to tell a story." Well, they have succeeded. "Gamblers All" is a play to see. The author, Mrs. Martindale (it is her first play) watched the performance from a private box. When it was over she had to go down on the stage and take a call. J. W.

THE REFEREE.

SUNDAY, JULY 25, 1915.

It was saddening to hear that Mrs. Martindale, the author of that great success at Wyndham's, "Gamblers All," died suddenly last Wednesday. This brilliant lady, who took her call with such modesty and charm on the first night of the play a few weeks ago, was a daughter of the late Sir Charles Young, whose great success as a dramatist was "Jim the Penman." Had Mrs. Martindale been spared she would undoubtedly have gained considerable fame as a playwright.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers J. M. & R. GATTI

On FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 11th, 1915, at 8.30

And Every Following Evening at 8.45

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

ARTHUR BOURCHIER
A. & S. GATTI

PRESENT

A Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

THE GREEN FLAG

By KEBLE HOWARD

Sir Hugh Brandreth, K.C.	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Lady Milverdale	CONSTANCE COLLIER
Janet Grierson	LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Mrs. Kesteven	MAY WHITTY
Lady Brandeth (her elder Daughter)	KYRLE BELLEW
Connie (her younger Daughter)	PEARL KEATS
Mrs. Luckman	BARBARA GOTT
A Postman	CLAUDE EDMONDS
A Knife-Grinder	CHRISTOPHER STEELE
A Porter	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
A Maid	V. MOOR

ACT I. - - - - The Studio at Dell Haven
ACT II. Sir Hugh Brandreth's Chambers in the Temple, London
ACT III. - Drawing-room of Mrs. Kesteven's House, Hampstead

The whole of the action passes within a few hours on a day in August

Preceded to-night at 8. and every following Evening at 8.15. by

APRIL FOOLS

A Farce by J. E. HAROLD TERRY

James Carey	MURRAY CARRINGTON
Septimus Buttercrambe	CHRISTOPHER STEELE
Millicent (his Wife)	JANET ROSS

The Action passes at 6.30 a.m., on the first day of April, at Septimus Buttercrambe's.

The dress, hat and coat worn by Miss Constance Collier designed and carried out by Mdlle. RACHELLE OSPOVAT, 69, New Bond Street, W.

The dresses worn by Miss Lilian Braithwaite and Miss Kyrle Bellew by VIOLA, Albemarle Street, W.

BUSINESS MANAGER	For	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Stage Manager	Mr. Bourchier	CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY

THE SINFONIA QUARTETTE under the direction of ARTHUR MOSS.

Organ by ESTY & Co.
Piano by CHAPPELL & Co.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD of the ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor

MATINEES WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30
Commencing JUNE 16th.

REDUCED PRICES.

Private Boxes, £4 4s. & £3 3s. Stalls, 10s 6d, & 7s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Lower Circle, 4s. Upper Circle, 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Doors open [illegible] and 7.45. Commence at 2.30 and 8.15. Tel.: No. 3815 Ger.

NEAREST STATIONS: TRAFALGAR SQUARE and CHARING CROSS.

Manager ... (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) ... HERBERT CLARK

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1915.

There is an underlying assumption in this apparently innocuous trifle which is not a little disquieting. It is the assumption that when any lady has reason to suspect that any other lady is hidden in a gentleman's bedroom she has the right divine, or by virtue of what Mr. Thomas Hardy would call the Immanent Will, anyhow, some unquestionable right, to force the door and to bid the other woman to come forth.

Case (1). Lady Milverdale supposes Janet Grierson to be hidden in the bedroom of Sir Hugh Brandreth, K.C., and insists upon calling her out. Her ladyship is not even distantly related to Sir Hugh, and has no claim on him of any sort. Then why? Case (2). Janet, having popped out of the second bedroom door while Lady Milverdale has gone in by the first, doubles back and summons her ladyship to come forth. Now Janet, again, has no claim upon Sir Hugh. Then, again, why? Answer: Because the author has desired to present the triumph of a blameless (Janet) over a malicious woman (Lady Milverdale) by catching her in her own trap. Theatrically he gets the desired effect, but at what expense of probability and simple common sense!

It is idle, however, to complain of an artificial stage-anecdote that it is artificial, so long as the audience is in the mood to condone the artifice, as it evidently was last night. Probably it felt, as audiences will, that it might indulge in a chuckle over supposed bedroom iniquities so long as the ultimate moral of the play was a "proper" one; and there could be no doubt about "propriety" when you knew that the bedroom of Sir Hugh Brandreth, K.C., was in reality an impeccable apartment and that he designed the trouble between the two ladies merely as a means of saving a nice woman like Janet from running away with the husband (unseen) of a horrid woman like Lady Milverdale. To chuckle over a supposed intrigue and to feel moral all the time—what an irresistible combination!

Mr. Bourchier was l'ami des femmes, K.C., clad for some unexplained reason in white flannels, and Miss Braithwaite was the nice woman and Miss Constance Collier the horrid one, and all three went at it with a will, and what more does any artificial stage-anecdote-loving audience want?

The Green Flag.

By arrangement with Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Messrs. A. and S. Gatti presented at the Vaudeville Theatre on Friday evening a three-act play, by Keble Howard, entitled "The Green Flag." The title, let me say at once, has nothing whatever to do with Ireland—it is simply concerned with a piece of advice that one of the men gives to a woman who threatens to do a foolish thing: "Keep your eye on the little green flag that the guard of the train waves as a caution," he says, and so, as the woman takes his advice in the way he intended she should do the threatened tragedy is cleared and all join in finishing the story after the manner of a very amusing farce.

Tragedy to Farce.

The production of this Vaudeville play had many unusual features. In the first place there was this sudden change in the story from tragedy to farce. It was the first occasion also on which it was announced that no men of military age would appear in the cast. (The ladies had to make no declaration regarding the years they had lived.) It was pleasant also to know that if a success 25 per cent. of the profits will go to the Allied Red Cross funds, and to complete the list of unusual facts this was only the second occasion this year for a play to be produced on a Friday night. Taking it all in all it may be stated everything went well, and that Mr. Bourchier when he took his call could not escape the penalty of making a little speech. His sister-in-law, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, encouraged him by smiling down on him from a box, and on the other side of the house Lady Diana Manners, who was one of a party of five girls, helped likewise. Her father and mother—the Duke and Duchess of Rutland—were in one of the centre rows of the stalls, and in a front row, looking very charming, was the Marchioness of Headfort

J. WY. GOOD-EVENING.

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

Under the Management of Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MONDAY, JUNE 14th, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.45,

Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH presents

Mr. & Mrs. PONSONBY

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts

By WALTER HACKETT.

Jim Ponsonby	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Dick Trevor	.. Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Horatio Billington	.. Mr. FRED KERR
Williams	Mr. EDWARD DUGGIE
Mrs. Chesterton	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Mrs. Trevor	Miss MARY O'FARRELL
Mrs. Ponsonby	Miss MARION LORNE

The Action of the Play takes place at the Ponsonby's House, Grosvenor Square.

Act I.	Afternoon.
Act II. & III.	Same Evening.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY DION BOUCICAULT.

Dresses and Cloaks designed and made by LUCILE, 23 Hanover Square, W.
Miss Bilbrooke's Hat in Act I. designed by MAISON LEWIS.
Cigarettes supplied by ANDULLA & Co., LTD., 168 New Bond Street, W.

PRECEDED AT 8.15 by

Mr. ERNEST HASTINGS

In his Humour and Music at the Piano.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16th AND EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY FOLLOWING AT 2.30.

Musical Director	Mr. WILLIAM C. MASON.
Stage Manager	Mr. BERTRAM PHILLIPS.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle, First Two Rows. 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 3724 GERRARD.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. RICHARD COLLET.

Plays

THE TIMES

TUESDAY, JUNE 15, 1915.

It would be hopeless to unravel the labyrinthine intricacies of this farce about husbands who, while wicked flirts themselves, are furiously jealous when they think (erroneously, of course) they have discovered that their wives are flirts too. As the various permutations and combinations of actually flirting husbands and seemingly flirting wives have all been worked out again and again you can only recognize them all with a nod and a smile, and turn, for something a little fresher, to the comic embarrassments of Mrs. Ponsonby persuaded that she really must be in love with Mr. Trevor without knowing it. It must be the case, her father explains, by all the laws of heredity, because he himself was a rake. And so the poor silly little woman is almost driven into running away with a man about whom she doesn't care two straws.

Fortunately the abiding principle of all British and American farce is there to save the situation: the principle that, despite all flirtations, proposed elopements, and amorous adventures whatsoever, husbands and wives really love one another and nobody else. An invaluable principle for farce it is, too, for it permits everybody on the stage to go about embracing everybody else, to the general contentment, owing to the equally general consciousness that morality is sure of being triumphantly vindicated in the end.

The most complicated of farces, with Mr. Kenneth Douglas and Mr. Sam Sothern in them, could never be dull, and both these humourists were last night at their most humorous. Mr. Fred Kerr had the more difficult task of making a character out of a few catchwords, and it was not his fault if he failed to achieve that miracle. Add that there were three lively ladies, Miss Bilbrooke and Miss O'Farrell and Miss Lorne, to give reason fair and sufficient for all the miscellaneous flirting: and it will be easily understood why the house felt that it had had a good evening's entertainment.

MR. HACKETT'S NEW FARCE.

In the new farce by Walter Hackett, "Mr. and Mrs. Ponsonby," which Mr. Arthur Chudleigh presented at the Comedy Theatre on Monday evening, there is a great deal of very amusing flirting, a very great deal of embracing, and no harm done. It is like a quadrille in which partners separate, hug, or get hugged (without annoying anybody or being annoyed by anyone), and return to bow and smile to their original partners as if nothing else mattered. It is all entertaining and is very well acted, particularly by Mr. Kenneth Douglas, Mr. Sam Sothern, Miss Mary O'Farrell, and Miss Lydia Bilbrooke. J. W.

LONDON PAVILION

Honi Soit . . . !

MONDAY, JUNE 14th, 1915.
Every Evening and Saturday Matinee.

LONDON PAVILION
Mess. FERNAND GLENISTER. PICCADILLY, W.

La Revue Tricolore à Londres.

Le Moulin Rouge
From Paris to the Pav.

A Parisian Revue in 18 Scenes
BY
M.M. QUINEL ET MOREAU.

Propriètor - - Mons. JEAN FABERT
Secretaire General - Mons. R. DE JAIVE
Regisseur General - Mons. GEORGES DESPLAS
Regisseur de la Scene - Mons. SIDNEY GRATA

English Scenes by BERTRAND DAVIS.

Produced by MAX DEARLY,

By kind permission of Messrs. Grossmith & Laurillard.

Music composed and arranged by LOUIS HILLIER.

Dresses by Mme. PRAT, of Paris.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

Scenery from the MOULIN ROUGE, PARIS, and by FRANCIS BULL.

The MOULIN ROUGE GIRLS, under the management of Miss BEAVIN.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT EXPOSED THE TRAGEDY OF THE WRONG SHELLS.

TUESDAY, JUNE 15, 1915.

FRENCH REVUE IN LONDON.

PARISIAN COMPANY AT THE PAVILION.

A quite cosmopolitan audience was attracted to the London Pavilion last evening for the first performance of a Paris revue by a French company, that included many artists who have taken part in similar revue productions at the Moulin Rouge.

To all who are familiar with the revues of the Paris variety theatres this animated entertainment by MM. Quinel and Moreau will appear surprisingly innocent of the jokes and actions that, for want of a better word, are sometimes described as French. Otherwise the importation has most of the characteristics of the Parisian revue. As a production it bears no comparison whatever with the Americanised and extravagant entertainments that the fashionable variety theatres of London have made known to us, but it is full of go, and, like all the French revues, offers a rechauffé of popular English tunes, and does not disdain to rely a good deal on English dancers.

In all respects the French managers of this company have kept closely to the particular features of an entertainment that was popular for many years in Paris before we took it up, but with a laudable desire not to shock a London public they have this time presented a sample of their specialty that is quite innocuous. J. W.

Plays

MONDAY, JUNE 14th, 1915, and Every Evening (for One Week only) at 8.1
Matinee, Saturday at 2.30

MR. MARTIN HARVI

will present

The Corsican Brother

Adapted from the Novel of Alexandre Dumas.

M. Fabien dei Franchi ..
M. Louis dei Franchi ..	.. Mr MARTIN HA
M. de Chateau Renaud ..	.. Mr. FRANKLIN D
M. le Baron de Mongiron ..	.. Mr F. FORBES ROBE
M. le Baron Martelli ..	.. Mr. EUGENE WELL
M. Alfred Meynard ..	.. Mr. PERCY FO
M. Favrolles ..	.. Mr. J COOKE BERI
M. Beauchamp ..	.. Mr. IVO DA
Antonia Santa Je ..	.. Mr. WALTER F
Colonna ..	.. Mr. CHARLES GI
Orlando ..	.. Mr. A. HE
Griffo ..	.. Mr B. MARSH
Louisse ..	.. Mr. I. R FR
Tomaso ..	.. Mr. A. L
A Surgeon ..	.. Mr H WA
Servants ..	.. Mr T O E
Emilie de Lesparre ..	.. Mr. M.
Madame Stella dei Franchi ..	.. Miss N. de
Coralie ..	.. Miss MARY R
Lucette ..	.. Miss MAUD RI
Estelle ..	.. Miss BESSIE E
Celestine ..	.. Miss MARY
Maria ..	.. Miss NORAH A
	.. Miss MARY O'N

Incidental Music by Clemens Franckenstein Duel arranged by M. Felix Bertrand.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I. CORSICA .. .. Hall in the Chateau of Madame dei Franchi

TABLEAU

Interval of Ten Minutes

ACT II. PARIS Scene 1 .. .. Foyer at the Opera House
Scene 2 .. .. Salon at the House of Mongiron
Scene 3 .. .. A Glade in the Forest of Fontainbleau

TABLEAU

NOTE—Acts I and II take place simultaneously

Interval of Ten Minutes

ACT III. PARIS .. .. A Glade in the Forest of Fontainbleau

Business Manager	For Mr. Martin Harvey	.. .. Mr. Frank B. O'
Stage Director		.. .. Mr William H
Stage Manager		.. .. Mr. Charles
Assistant Stage Manager		.. .. Mr. Sydney Co
Musical Director		.. .. Mr W. H. H

NEW THEATRE

E
14/6/1915
—
Orch. Stall

RIGHT
to be retained

"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS."

"In spite of its sixty-five years, "The Corsican Brothers" still retains the power to thrill. Familiarity has not lessened the playgoer's interest in the performance of this famous drama founded on a story by Dumas Pere. Renewed acquaintance with it last evening, when Mr. Martin Harvey revived it at the New Theatre, compelled a comparison with many newer successful dramas—a comparison that was more than favourable to this fine example of an older school.

J. W. — Daily Mail

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S "REVIVAL."

I went to see Mr. Martin Harvey's revival of "The Corsican Brothers" on Monday at the New Theatre, where he put it on for one week. The last occasion on which I saw a performance of this drama was in the Waterloo Chamber at Windsor Castle on the night of Wednesday, November 18, 1903. I think I went there as an understudy, and I am sure I saw very little of the performance from the corner of the stage where we sat all the evening and spoke in whispers. But we could tell that the performance was going well with that audience of two hundred. King Edward, who rarely ever applauded on these state occasions, applauded that night, and his guests (who etiquette always compelled to silence when he was silent) also clapped their hands. The command that night was in honour of the state visit of the King and Queen of Sweden. Like all other performances given for King Edward at Windsor Castle it ended at midnight. Only five members of the company that played before the royal audience were at the New Theatre last week. They were Mr. Harvey, Mr. Percy Foster, Miss Mary Rorke, Miss Maud Rivers, and Miss Bessie Elder. J.W.

Lewis, J.
Plays

CRITERION
THEATRE

June 18
E

Orchestra Stall

By arrangement with Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

On FRIDAY, June 18th, 1915, and every Evening at 8.30.
Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30.

At 8.30.

"THE ROAD TO RAEBURY"

A New Comedy by HAROLD BRIGHOUSE.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

Hester Winstanley	F. RANDLE AYRTON
Sir Cecil Rae, Bt.	JOHN ASTLEY
Lady Rae	IRENE ROOKE
Collins	J. LESLIE FRITH
Olive Blain	DOROTHY RIPLEY
John Bayfield Blain	MILTON ROSMER

The Action takes place in THE DRAWING ROOM OF LADY RAE'S HOUSE.
Act. I.—A year ago. Acts II. and III.—The present time.

Scenery by HOWELL, Percy Street, S.E. Furniture by LYONS, Holborn.
Decorations throughout the Theatre by HINDES, Ltd., London and Birmingham.

Followed by

"THE DEVIL AMONG THE SKINS"

A Boccaccian Comedy in One Act, by ERNEST GOODWIN.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

The Woodman's Wife	IRENE ROOKE
The Monk	WILLIAM STAVELEY
The Tanner	MILTON ROSMER
The Woodman	F. RANDLE AYRTON

Scene A Woodman's Hut. Time Fourteenth Century.

THE ALBERT CAZABON SEXTETTE will play the following Programme of Music.

Before the Play.

Three Mexican Dances ... ... Montague Ring

Before Act II.

"From Italy" (Fantasia on Italian Folk Songs) ... ... Langey

Before Act III.

"Where my Caravan has rested" (Violin Solo) ... ... Hermann Löhr
"April Buds" ... ... Albert Cazabon

Before "The Devil among the Skins"

Four Indian Love Lyrics ... ... Amy Woodforde-Finden

Both Plays produced by MILTON ROSMER.

Business Manager ... ... For ... Mr. ARTHUR MILTON
Stage Manager ... ... Milton Rosmer ... Mr J. LESLIE FRITH
Business Manager ... ... (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) ... Mr CECIL BRETON

Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone Nos.—Gerrard 3843 Regent 2565

THE TIMES

SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1915.

Drama, to be sure, like any other art, can only select from the infinite complexity of life, but perhaps Mr. Harold Brighouse's comedy carries the principle of selection a little far. His people are married and given in marriage in about as little time as people in real life take to say "Good morning," or "When will the war end?" They say things that fit the theatrical situation rather more things anyone ever does say. Thus, a baronet's widow, who represents the aristocratic principle, sneers at her plebeian daughter-in-law as a member of the "middle classes." Or else she asks her son to "choose" between his mother and his wife, as though there were really any choice. And the daughter-in-law's father, a self-made man, representing the democratic principle, declares that business is business at every moment, even over a cup of tea.

In a word, Mr. Brighouse's personages are rather personified ideas (and remarkably familiar ideas at this time of day) than men and women as we meet them every day, outside the playhouse; and his play has thus the air of a game, of something done for a whim or a wager, rather than of life itself. As always happens in such cases, the very flesh-and-blood reality of the players only makes the unreality of their actions and speeches the more incongruous. Miss Irene Rooke is a very sweet and pleasant reality, however, as all playgoers know, and there can be no question about Mr. Milton Rosmer's ability to get all that can be histrionically got out of even an unreal part. A young actress of their company, Miss Dorothy Ripley, has obvious talent, and knows already how to use it to the general advantage.

A little after-piece, The Devil Among the Skins, described as "Boccaccian"—and the adjective perhaps is as good as any other for a story of a ribald monk, a venison pasty, a roguish tanner, and plentiful thwackings—was a happy bit of drollery, and would have been still happier if the players had taken their comedy in both hands and been more liberally farcastic.

NEW THREE-ACT COMEDY.

Mr. Harold Brighouse does himself but scant justice with the new three-act comedy "The Road to Raebury," which was presented at the Criterion Theatre on Friday evening. The characters are but indifferently drawn, and at no period of the play is it possible to feel much interest in their doings. The task of making an entertaining play out of the quarrels of two families who have nothing in common was too much even for an author who unquestionably has ability. The other play on the programme, "The Devil Among the Skins," by Mr. Ernest Goodwin, is a rough and tumble farce, labelled "Boccaccian comedy." J. W. (Good Evening.)

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT EXPOSED THE TRAGEDY OF THE WRONG SHELLS.

SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1915.

"THE ROAD TO RAEBURY."

The strong-willed man in a stage play has a knack of getting what he wants. John Bayfield Blain, the strong-willed man in Mr. Harold Brighouse's new comedy, "The Road to Raebury," produced at the Criterion Theatre last evening, married his daughter to the young baronet, and then, notwithstanding the dowager lady's abhorrence of his name, and the beef essence that had made his fortune, compelled her to agree to become his wife and return with him to the house that had once belonged to her late (bankrupt) husband.

How he exercised his spell over his neighbours was not quite clear—except on the assumption that, being a strong-willed man, he possessed the knack of doing these things. It is a simple process designed to make a theatrical entertainment, and on these grounds may be allowed to pass. All the same we were left with the impression that John Bayfield Blain was not in for a good time after he settled down with the dowager.

A second, and short, new play on last evening's programme was described as a Boccaccian comedy. Its author, Mr. Ernest Goodwin, called it "The Devil Among the Skins," and succeeded fairly well in getting fun out of an unfortunate love adventure of a woodman's wife. J. W.

15 162

AMBASSADORS

THEATRE

WEST STREET, CAMBRIDGE CIRCUS (Opposite Palace Theatre)

Proprietors - Ambassadors Theatre, Ltd. Licensee - Herbert Jay

Sole Lessee and Manager - Charles B. Cochran

Telephone: Regent 2890 & Gerrard 4460

:: :: ::

June, 1915

Mr. Charles B. Cochran requests the pleasure of

The Editor's (Weekly Dispatch)

presence on

~~WEDNESDAY~~ Friday EVENING, JUNE ~~16th~~ 18, 1915

at 8 p.m.

when he will present

AN ENTIRELY NEW REVUE

MORE

By HARRY GRATTAN.

Music by EDWARD JONES.

Should you be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

CLIVE R. McKEE,
Business Manager.

N.B.—You are particularly requested to be in your seat at 8 p.m.

MORE

A Revue in Two Acts,

By HARRY GRATTAN

Music by EDWARD JONES

IRIS HOEY	ALICE DELYSIA	JANE SAINT BONNET
MORRIS HARVEY	MORTON	OHTA HANAKO
TINY GRATTAN	J. M. CAMPBELL	BETTY BALFOUR
DORÉ PLOWDEN	MURRI MONCRIEFF	JOAN CARROLL
BIRDIE COURTNEY	ANDRÉ RANDALL	WILLIE WHEELER

Business Manager	For Mr. C. B. COCHRAN	Mr. CLIVE R. McKEE
Stage Director		Mr FRANK COLLINS
Stage Manager		Mr. MURRI MONCRIEFF
Musical Director		Mr. EDWARD JONES

GARRICK THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager - - THOMAS DOTT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 19th, 1915, at 8.

MATINEES—THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS at 2.30.

"OH! BE CAREFUL"

MAM'SELLE TRALALA

A Musical Play in Three Acts.

Book by ARTHUR WIMPERIS and HARTLEY CARRICK.

Additional Lyrics by GEORGE ARTHURS. Orchestration by SYDNEY BAYNES.

Music by MELVILLE J. GIDEON.

CHARACTERS—

Bruno Richard (Manufacturer of the famous Chocolate Richards)		COURTICE POUNDS
Madame Richard (His Wife)		POLLIE EMERY
Claire (His Daughter)		GLWADYS GAYNOR
Pierre Delhoux (His Manager)		FREDERICK MORANT
Georges Dieudonne		ROBERT BLYTHE
Philippe Michel (a Lottery Agent)		KENNA LAWSON
Aristide Vidhay (a Clerk)		J. H. BREWER
Max (a Waiter)		TOM A. SHALE
Fifine		DORA WATSON
Adele	Employees at Richard's	PHYLLIS ALLEN
Nanette		HYLDA HOYES
Celeste		EVELYN MURTON
Messenger		CECIL J. WODDINGS
Suzette		IVY SIMPSON
Babette	Dancers at "The Little Mouse"	ELLA BRYAN
Rosette		ESME SINCLAIR
Fauchette		FREDA LE PAYS
Gaultarot	Waiters at "The Little Mouse"	FREDERICK GEORGE
Princess		DAVID CLARKSON
Nurse		PHYLLIS DOLPHIN
Edouard	Clients at "The Little Mouse"	BLOSS TAYLOR
Henri		GRACIE HUDSON
Pralette		MARGARET CAMPBELL
Tina	Accompanists at Madame Fleuriot's	GLADYS HOSKYNS
Mimi		PHYLLIS GWYNN
Madame Fleuriot		PHYLLIS SYDNEY

AND

Noisette (known as "Frou Frou") .. .. YVONNE ARNAUD

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I. General Office at the Maison Richard.

ACT II. "The Little Mouse" Restaurant.

ACT III. Showroom at Madame Fleuriot's.

Time—The Present. Place—Paris.

Modern Costumes by VIOLA LAWSON, 18 Albemarle Street, W.

Fancy Costumes in Act II. by W. CLARKSON, 41 & 43 Wardour Street, W.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR .. .. LEONARD HORNSEY

DANCES ARRANGED BY ESPINOSA.

General Manager	For "Oh! Be Careful" Co.	FRED J. TURNER
Acting Manager		WILLIAM ALBERT
Stage Manager		DOUGLAS VINE
Assistant Stage Manager		CECIL J. WODDINGS

General Manager (for THOMAS DOTT) .. JOSE G. LEVY

MALE CHORISTERS BARRED.

One of the interesting facts about "Oh! Be Careful," which was presented at the Garrick Theatre last evening, is that its producers have followed the policy advocated by The Weekly Dispatch of having no male choristers of military age in the company. "Oh! Be Careful" is a revised version of "Mam'selle Tralala," which was presented at the Lyric Theatre in April last year. The English libretto is by Messrs. Arthur Wimperis and Hartley Carrick, and for thie revival much new music has been written by Mr. Melville J. Gideon.

In all respects the revival is on much the same lines as the original. It is still in three acts, with the scenes laid respectively at the house of the chocolate maker, a restaurant, and a milliner's showroom, and the characters bear the same names as they did in "Mam'selle Tralala." Miss Yvonne Arnaud again plays the part of Frou-Frou, and the very happy choice has been made of engaging Mr. Courtice Pounds to play the part of the gay Bruno Richard. He is certainly the right actor in the right place.

To get over the difficulty of the ball-room scene (at the restaurant, Act II.) that affair is now presented as a fancy dress ball instead of modern dress as in the original version. By this means the stage manager can, as in burlesque, put on many of the chorus girls dressed as boys. It works fairly well.

S. W

NEW THEATRE
E
21/6/1915
Orch. Stall
E 65
RIGHT
To be retained

Monday, June 21, and every Evening at 8.15. Matinee—Saturday, at 2.30.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY

will present

THE ONLY WAY

By FREEMAN WILLS and FREDERICK LANGBRIDGE.

Founded on Charles Dickens' Story, "A Tale of Two Cities."

PROLOGUE, 1774

Marquis de St. Evremonde .. MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Vicomte de St. Evremonde .. MR. SYDNEY COLTSON
Dr. Manette .. .. MR. WALTER HOWE
Jean Defarge .. .. .. MR. J. DENTON THOMPSON
A Peasant .. .. MR. F. MARSH

THE PLAY, 1793

Sydney Carton (his original part) .. MR. MARTIN HARVEY
Ernest Defarge .. .. .. MR. CHARLES GLENNEY
Mr. Lorry .. .. MR. PERCY FOSTER
Mr. Stryver .. .. MR. B. MARSH-DUNN
Dr. Manette .. .. MR. WALTER HOWE
Charles Darnay (son of the Marquis de St. Evremonde) MR. EUGENE WELLESLEY
President .. .. .. MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Public Prosecutor .. .. MR. WILSON GUNNING
Comte de Fauchet, No. 92 .. MR. F. FORBES ROBERTSON
M. de Mealy, No. 44 .. .. MR. W. PERCY
Marquis de Boulainvilliers, No. 15 .. MR. IVO DANYERS
Gabelle .. .. MR. PAUL BARRY
Barsad .. .. MR. A. ROBINSON
Jailor .. .. MR. H. JAMES
First Citizen .. .. MR. A. IBBERSON
Second Citizen .. .. MR. F. MILRAY
First Juryman .. .. MR. A. LLOYD
Lucie Manette .. .. MISS MAUD RIVERS
The Vengeance .. .. MISS MARY RORKE
A Citizeness .. .. MISS BESSIE ELDER
Miss (her original part) .. .. .. MISS N. DE SILVA

Aristocrats, Citizens, Citizenesses, Jailors, Sans Coulottes, Tricoteuses, Associates, etc.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

PROLOGUE.—A Loft in an old house in the vicinity of the Chateau St. Evremonde.

INTERVAL OF TEN MINUTES.

ACT I. London .. .. Carton's Chambers

INTERVAL OF EIGHT MINUTES.

ACT II. London .. .. Dr. Manette's Garden in Soho

INTERVAL OF TEN MINUTES.

ACT III. Paris .. .. Revolutionary Tribunal

INTERVAL OF EIGHT MINUTES.

ACT IV. Paris. SCENE I. .. .. Dr. Manette's Apartments
SCENE II. .. .. A Cell in the Conciergerie
SCENE III .. .. The Hall in the Conciergerie

TABLEAU "It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done.
It is a far, far better rest I go to than I have ever known."

Business Manager	For Mr. Martin Harvey	.. ..	MR. FRANK B. O'NEILL
Stage Director		.. ..	MR. WILLIAM HOLLES
Stage Manager		.. ..	MR. CHARLES BEARD
Assistant Stage Manager		.. ..	MR. SYDNEY COLTSON
Musical Director		.. ..	MR. W. H. HUDSON

168

GAIETY THEATRE

Licensee . . Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

EVERY EVENING at 8.15, MATINEE, SATURDAYS at 2.15,

Mr. George Grossmith's and Mr. Edward Laurillard's

PRODUCTION

"TO-NIGHT'S THE NIGHT,"

A NEW MUSICAL PLAY.

Book by FRED THOMPSON. Music by PAUL A. RUBENS.

Lyrics by PAUL A. RUBENS and PERCY GREENBANK.

Montagu Lovitt Lovitt		... Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Pedro	(A Tango Teacher) ...	... Mr. MAX DEARLY
Henry	... (Lovitt-Lovitt's Nephew)	... Mr. LESLIE HENSON
Alphonse	(Head Waiter at Opera House)	... Mr. ROBERT NAINBY
Robin Carraway		... Mr. DAVID BURNABY
Albert		Mr. VICTOR GOURIET
Lord Ridgmount		Mr. STANLEY BRIGHTMAN
Policeman		... Mr. FOREST SMYTHE
AND
The Hon. Dudley Mitten		Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH
June		Miss MADGE SAUNDERS
Beatrice Carraway	(Robin's Wife) ...	... Miss JULIA JAMES
Victoria	(Her Maid) ...	Miss MOYA MANNERING
Daisy de Menthe... ...	.. (Of the Piccadilly Theatre)	Miss ADRAH FAIR
Angela Lovitt Lovitt	(Montagu's Wife) ...	Miss GLADYS HOMFREY
Lady Pussy Preston		Miss PEGGY KURTON
Lady Edith Taplow		Miss BARBARA DUNBAR
Mimi Skeats		Miss JUDITH NELMES
The Hon. Baby Vereker	(Guests at the Carraway's)	Miss DORIS STOCKER
Avice Carlton		Miss ELSIE SCOTT
Yvette La Plage		Miss DAISY WALLER
Attendants at Opera House		Miss DOROTHY DEVERE
		Miss VERA DAVIS
Alice	(Maid at Daisy's) ...	...Miss CYNTHIA MURRAY

Dance in Act II., Scene I., by DOLLY MEWSE & HARRY SINGER.

ACT I. (Joseph & Phil Harker) .. ... The Carraway's House at Maidenhead.

ACT II. (Lloyd F. Craven) ... Scene 1. Foyer of the Boxes, Royal Opera House.
Scene 2. Covent Garden Market.
Scene 3. Daisy's Flat in Mount Street.

Play Produced by AUSTEN HURGON.

The Musical Numbers "THEY DIDN'T BELIEVE ME" and "ANY OLD NIGHT" by JEROME D. KERN.

Dances and Choruses arranged by GEORGE SHURLEY.

Costumes designed by COMELLI.

Principals' Modern Dresses and Cloaks and Chorus' Modern Dresses designed and made by LUCILE, LTD., 23, Hanover Square, W.

Other Costumes executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.; M. E. FISHER, LTD.; MICHARD SŒURS; MORRIS ANGEL & SON; BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE and G. MANZO. Scenery built by J. BRUNSKILL.
Furniture by FRYERS, LTD. Wigs by CLARKSON. Cigarettes by FRIBOURG & TREYER.
Piano in Act II., Scene 3, by CHAPPELL & Co., LTD.

Musical Director .. ... MANUEL KLEIN | Stage Manager ... CHARLES A. MAYNARD

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10. Telephone: Gerrard 2780.

THE TIMES

MONDAY, JULY 5, 1915.

Artists and Professors.

The fighting between artists and professors in our correspondence columns over the Mestrovic Exhibition has at any rate not suffered from lack of high explosives. An artist of genius has been accused of prostituting it, and academic professors have been reproached for being academic. It will, perhaps, not be incompatible with a strict neutrality towards the combatants to remark that both sides have brought into action ancient field-pieces of æsthetic fallacy that ought long ago to have been scrapped. There is, to begin with, the dark allusion of one correspondent to "sundry "conservative professors whose teaching has "advanced British art not an inch." The implication presumably is that radical professors might have advanced it an ell. But what is meant by the advance of art? Is there any such thing? Is the Sistine Madonna an advance upon the Matrimonio di San Francesco con la Poverta? Is M. RODIN, is M. MESTROVIC himself, or any other modern sculptor, an advance upon PHEIDIAS or MICHELANGELO? The question is really answered, once and for all, by the same correspondent when he declares the main business of art to be the expression of sincere emotion. It is, of course, and that is why it is absurd to speak of the advance of art. Science advances because scientific knowledge is cumulative; but art is intuition, and intuition is individuality, and individuality never gets itself repeated. Only when artists are working upon the same material is it possible, and then only in a limited sense, to speak of artistic advance. SHAKESPEARE'S Hamlet was an advance upon the earlier play by another hand. Though the emotion in one may have been as sincere as in the other, its expression in the later case was more successful. Sometimes, by the advance of art is meant a gain of richness and complexity in its subject-matter. But this, in Sancho Panza's phrase, is to mix up cabbages and baskets. To the artistic activity its material is wholly indifferent.

There is yet another sense in which art may be spoken of, somewhat loosely, as being advanced, and it was probably in the mind of our correspondent who dislikes conservative professors. Our artistic taste may be improved, our artistic sympathies widened, by the exhibition of examples and the inculcation of a sound æsthetic. A Mestrovic exhibition may be of help here, and even academic professors. But taste is only the passive mood to the active of artistic genius and is just as rare, while the æsthetic of many of our English professors is still at nursery-gambols with REYNOLDS's Discourses and BUREE on the Sublime and Beautiful. Some of them seem never to have shaken off that moralistic obsession which turned a man of genius like RUSKIN into the most lop-sided of æstheticians. It inevitably re-emerges in the present controversy. A professor brands something of M. MESTROVIC's as immoral. The curator of a provincial art-gallery deplores the "unwholesome influence "exercised during the last few years by certain "phases of modern art."

Artists always hotly resent this particular criticism, because they know that the visions they see and the dreams they dream belong to another world than that world of practice wherein morality reigns. Their internal realization, their expression of a sincere emotion, is purely ingenuous, neither economic nor anti-economic, neither moral nor immoral. That is in the consciousness of the three distinguished artists who declare that "in the tragic "world to which M. MESTROVIC's works belong "there is no room for what is morally offen-"sive." But the declaration is at once not bold enough and too bold. It is not bold enough because the lack of room for the immoral characterizes art of any kind, the comic, the pathetic, just as much as the tragic. It is too bold, because it fails to distinguish between the artist's inward vision and his communication of it to the world at large. This communication is a practical act, a matter of choice and of will, and, like any other practical act, is subject to the criteria of morality, is good or bad, wholesome or unwholesome, is, in fact, amenable to the laws, the police, and public opinion. But communication to whom? There lies the real question. The academic professors are thinking of their young barbarians all at play; the provincial curators are thinking of their provincial crowds. To these innocents there may, unfortunately, be room for what is morally offensive even in the most tragic of artistic worlds. That is because they are incompetent to put themselves at the artist's point of view and to see the vision with his eye. Well, say the artists, it should be the aim of the professors and the curators to abolish this incompetence: that is what they are there for. It is an old quarrel, and the end is not yet.

170

Plays

Performance

in aid of

King George's Pension Fund for Actors and Actresses

His Majesty's Theatre Monday, July 5, 1915

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager
SIR HERBERT TREE

SHAKESPEARE'S

King Henry VIII.

In the presence of

Their Majesties The King and Queen

MONDAY, JULY 5th
1915

Plays

At 2.30 o'clock will be acted

SHAKESPEARE'S

King Henry VIII.

King Henry VIII.	Arthur Bourchier
Cardinal Wolsey	Herbert Tree
Cardinal Campeius (Legate from the Pope)	H. B. Irving
Cranmer (Archbishop of Canterbury)	Sydney Valentine
Duke of Norfolk	A. E. George
Duke of Buckingham	Lewis Waller
Duke of Suffolk	Hubert Carter
Earl of Surrey	Henry Ainley
Lord Chamberlain	Edward Sass
Capucius	J. Fisher-White
Lord Abergavenny	Leon Quartermaine
Lord Sands	Gerald du Maurier
Sir Henry Guildford	Godfrey Tearle
Sir Thomas Lovell	Basil Gill
Sir Nicholas Vaux	Ben Webster
Thomas Cromwell (Secretary to Wolsey)	Owen Nares
Griffith (Usher to Queen Katharine)	E. Holman Clark
1st Gentleman	Herbert Waring
2nd Gentleman	Murray Carrington
Garter King-at-Arms	Eille Norwood
Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham	Acton Bond
Sergeant-at-Arms	J. H. Barnes
A Servant	O. B. Clarence
A Crier	Frederick Ross
A Scribe	Dion Boucicault
A Messenger	Donald Calthrop
Jester	George Grossmith
Queen Katharine	Violet Vanbrugh
Anne Bullen	Laura Cowie
An Old Lady	Lady Tree
Dowager Duchess of Norfolk	Alma Murray
Patience	Constance Collier
1st Singing Lady	Ada Crossley
2nd Singing Lady	Clara Evelyn
3rd Singing Lady	Winifred Barnes

The following Artists will also appear:

Clifton Alderson
Isabel Alison
J. G. Anderson
F. J. Arlton
Robert Atkins
Dora Barton
Phyllis Bedells
Kyrle Bellew
Richard Bodney
John Booth
Lilian Braithwaite
Henry Byatt
Leonard Calvert
G. Campion
Laurence Cecil
Joan Chaloner
Arthur Cleave
P. Clive
Amy Coleridge
Margaret Cooper
Vernon Crabtree
Elise Craven
F. Cremlin
Julian Cross
Winifred Dalby
Louise Dale
Reginald Dance
Grace Darby
Irene Delisse
Clarence Derwent
Kenneth Douglas
Jennie Earle
F. S. Edgar
Claud Edmonds
Grace Egbert
R. Fairfax
Madeline Fitzgerald
Archibald Forbes
Henry Fowler
Florence Glossop-Harris
A. Houghton Goddard
Aithna Gover
Alfred Corney Grain
A. C. Hardie
Clifford Heatherley
Gilbert Heron
Henry Hewitt
Maxine Hinton
Julia James
Douglas Jefferies
P. Jones
M. Keen
Percy Keitley
W. Kershaw
George Laundy
Gerald Lawrence
Mina Leonesi
Victor M. Lewisohn
A. Lubimoff
Dorothy McBlain
James McLeod
Georgina Milne
Dawson Milward
J. W. Mollison
Phyllis Monkman
Fred Morgan
Arthur Morris
Alan Nichols
Herbert Norris
T. O'Brien
Reginald Owen
Maude Phillips
J. G. Preston
George Raymond
Louise Regnis
S. Rendall
F. Forbes Robertson
Roy Royston
Stella St. Audrie
Leonard Shepherd
Sybil Sparkes
Edith Stock
Christopher Steele
D. Sullivan
Madge Titheradge
Chris Walker
C. Dernier Warren
Victor Wiltshire
Herbert Woodward
Leonard Yorke

The Play produced on this occasion by
Louis N. Parker

Stage Managers - - Alfred Bellew and William Abingdon
General Manager - - - - - - Henry Dana

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT REVEALED THE SHELL TRAGEDY.

TUESDAY, JULY 6, 1915.

ROYAL MATINEE.

The King and Queen and Princess Mary were present at His Majesty's Theatre yesterday afternoon for a special performance of "King Henry VIII.," given in aid of King George's Pension Fund for Actors and Actresses. Their Majesties had an ovation and the National Anthem was sung by the audience. The company was splendidly representative of the London stage, and it was a satisfaction to all that Sir Squire Bancroft was able to announce after the first act that the charity had benefited by more than £1,100.

AN "ALL-STAR" CAST.

As compared with last year, the annual dramatic performance at His Majesty's Theatre on Monday last in aid of King George's Pension Fund for Actors and Actresses showed a falling off of £400 in money taken, this year's performance bringing in just over £1,100. Considering the general condition of things and the daily demands that are being made for charities, I think the result was very good, but it might have been made better if some members of the profession had done more to help the sale of tickets. The play given on Monday was "Henry VIII.," and it served to bring on a great array of well-known players, and others. These so-called "all-star" casts are never very interesting, apart from the fact that names attract. These occasions, too, seldom find any of the players at their best, and the performances very often drag. All the same, the public has the choice, and they do like "star casts" and will pay to see them. So all is well.

* * *

Mr. Arthur Bourchier informs me that the special performance of "Henry the Eighth" at His Majesty's Theatre in aid of King George's Pension Fund for Actors and Actresses resulted in a profit of £714 7s.

* * *

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 7th, 1915, at 8.30

And every following Evening at 8.45

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

A Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

ENTERPRISING HELEN

By FRANCIS COUTTS

Ernest Sinclair (a Dramatist) - -	HERBERT WARING
Don Luis del Panza (a Portuguese Financier)	E. DAGNALL
Sir Daniel Dollary, M.P., etc. (a Philanthropist and Financier)	LENNOX PAWLE
Charles Cranbury (in the City) - -	BEN WEBSTER
Thomas (Man Servant at Sinclair's) -	C. A. WHITE
Mrs. Sinclair (Sinclair's Wife) -	JESSIE WINTER
Lady Dollary (Sir Daniel's Wife) -	GLADYS MASON
Daisy Henley (a little Dressmaker)	DOROTHY RADFORD
Paterson (Maid to Helen Grant) - -	BARBARA GOT
Helen Grant (a Popular Actress) - -	MARY CLARE

ACT I. - - -	Helen Grant's Rooms in Town
ACT II. - - -	Sinclair's House at Holland Park
ACT III. - - -	Helen Grant's Rooms in Town

TIME - TO-DAY.

PRECEDED TO-NIGHT AT 8, AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.15,
BY A COMEDY IN ONE ACT, ENTITLED

IN OLD LEICESTERSHIRE

Doctor Carruthers	CECIL HUMPHREYS
Mrs. Carruthers	DOROTHY RADFORD
Maid	MABEL MANNERING
The Duchess d'Orray	JESSIE WINTER

Scene:
The Garden of Dr. Carruthers' House at Kirkby Mallory, Leicestershire.

Both Plays produced by E. DAGNALL.

Scenery by CHARLES SHARP. Furniture by J. S. LYON, Holborn.
Dresses by VIOLA, Ltd., Albemarle Street, W.
Baby Grand Piano by J. A. CRAMER & Co., Ltd.

Stage Manager - C. A. WHITE
Acting Manager - ALFRED BEAUMONT

THE SINFONIA QUARTETTE under the direction of ARTHUR MOSS.

Organ by ESTY & Co.
Piano by CHAPPELL & Co.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co.

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD of the ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

MATINEES (both plays) WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY
At 2.30 p.m.

REDUCED PRICES.

Private Boxes, £4 4s. & £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d, & 7s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. & 5s.
Lower Circle, 4s. Upper Circle, 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.
Doors open at 2 and 7.45. Commence at 2.30 and 8.15. Tel.: No. 3815 Ger.

NEAREST STATIONS: TRAFALGAR SQUARE and CHARING CROSS.

Manager ... (for Messrs A. & S. Gatti) ... HERBERT CLARK

ONLY one new play was produced during the week, and that one earned the distinction of being one of the funniest plays of the season. I have a conviction, however, that the author, Francis Coutts (Lord Latymer), originally intended this "Enterprising Helen" as a serious contribution to the theatre, but the audience at the Vaudeville Theatre were not wasting an evening, and after the performance had been in progress for ten or fifteen minutes they settled themselves down to laugh and they justified their choice. "Enterprising Helen" gave them the "goods" the theatre-going public is looking for in war times, but I am not quite sure that that is just the result the producer was looking for. The heroine of this curious play figures on the programme as "a popular actress," and she talks in the language and phrases of the novelette about the stage and her friends.

HELEN'S BEST FRIENDS.

Helen's best friends were a dramatist and two financiers, and she loved the younger, and English, specimen of these City men. The one she did not love was old, a Portuguese, and a marriage hater. There was also another financier on the bill, Sir Daniel, but his wife refused to recognise Helen because she had not married a knight and got into "society." She even plotted to wreck the marital happiness of two of Helen's friends, and when her plot was discovered the play ended. Some of the City "company-promoting" talk was delightful, and in anticipation of it Mr. Walter Dickson, who until a year ago was managing-director of the Empire Theatre, brought Mr. Frederick Hurdle, the present chairman of the Empire board and director of many big concerns, with him to the Vaudeville on Wednesday to pick up a hint or two.

J.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE
Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14th, at 7.45
and every evening at 7.45.

Matinees, Wednesdays & Saturdays, at 2-30.

WALTER AND FREDK. MELVILLE
present
The Whirlwind Drama of Surprises

Her Forbidden Marriage

By FREDK. MELVILLE.
Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.
Lyceum Orchestra under Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE and LYCEUM STUDIO.

Characters:

George Madison, an Inventor who marries Lucy	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Charles Devereux, a Scoundrel who wishes to marry Lucy	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Geoffrey Broughton, who aids him to marry	Mr. WINGOLD LAWRENCE
John Williams, a Clerk thinking of Marriage	Mr. ARTHUR HICKMAN
Rev. Mr. Dean, who performs the Marriage	Mr. GILBERT HERON
Dr. Fenwick, Witness to the Marriage	Mr. JAMES RAYMOND
Inspector Doone, Married	Mr. WILLIAM GRIFFIN
Joe Lambkin, an old Rustic, very much Married	Mr. ALFRED GRENVILLE
Timothy Tuttutt, Tim of all Trades, who wants to get Married	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Sir George Lancaster, Twice Married	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Benjamin Wardle, who believes in Marriage	Mr. GEORGE ELSWORTHY
Patty Lovejoy, in Service, frightened of Marriage	Miss MAY DAVIS
Jenkins, thinking of Marriage	Mr. LESLIE HALTON
Lucy, Sir George's Ward, forbidden to Marry	Miss ALICE BELMORE
Lady Lucretia Lancaster, the Second Lady Lancaster, Married and not Married	Miss NINA LYN
Little Lucy, the Child of her Forbidden Marriage	Little BEATRICE MINA
The Mother Superior, who cannot Marry	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY

Acting Manager .. BERT B. HAMMOND

178

ACT 1—

Scene 1 ... ... The Inventor's Study
The Woman and the Inventor. The Story of Love at First Sight.

Scene 2 ... ... At Sir George Lancaster's
Master and Man. Jealousy. The Woman who sins makes a rod for herself.

ACT 2—

Scene 1 ... ... Among the Surrey Hills
The Scheme to force an unwilling Bride to Church. Lucy's Peril. The Accusation. Marriage by Motor Car.

Scene 2 ... ... The Road to the Church
To the Church at the rate of 10 miles an hour.

Scene 3 ... ... The Church by the Road
The Pursuit. "Your Guardian forbids this Marriage, but Heaven does not." The Arrival.

Scene 4 ... ... The Wedding. Interior of Church
Too late. The Accusation. Stop the Wedding. Man and Wife.

ACT 3 ... ... The Convict Husband
Lucy's Bedroom and Boudoir. Married and Parted. A Mother's Search.
"Your Husband is Dead." A Scoundrel's Advantage. Lucy's Fate. The Open Window. The Husband's Return. The Frustrated Plot. The Escape.

ACT 4

Scene 1 ... ... At Sir George's Home
The Secluded Strong Room. The New Director. "Where is my Wife?" Lucy's Fortune. The Young Man against the Old. The Murder.

Scene 2 ... ... Exterior of the Convent
A Shelter from the World.

Scene 3 ... ... Interior of the Convent
The Adoption of the Child. An Escaped Murderer is hidden here. Mother and Son. "My Life for his."

ACT 5 ... ... At Sir George Lancaster's
Back from the Grave to make atonement. They are your Wedding Bells.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE AND LYCEUM STUDIOS.
Mechanical Effects by THOMAS REES. Properties by W. CRISP.
Electrical Effects by J. WALTERS.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE, will play the following selections :—

OVERTURE	..."Banditenstreiche"	...	Suppe
SELECTION	... "The Geisha" ...	...	Sidney Jones
(a) WALTZ	... "Partners"
(b) AN IRISH INTERMEZZO	"Paddy Whack"		H. Sullivan-Brooke
(a) MARCH	... "Till the Boys Come Home"		Ivor Novello
(b) FOX TROT	... "Fox Trot Girl"	...	Nat Ayer

The Programme of Music is subject to alteration according to circumstances

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

"HER FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE."

REVIVAL AT THE LYCEUM.

What is now styled Frederick Melville's "Whirlwind Drama of Surprises," Her Forbidden Marriage, presented last night (Wednesday) at the Lyceum for the first time in the West End, was originally produced at the Terriss, Rotherhithe (now the Rotherhithe Hippodrome) on Easter Monday, April 4, 1904, the author then playing the part of George Madison, the inventor and wrongly accused and convicted hero "who Marries Lucy." All the other characters in a typical, if more than usually straightforward and uncomplicated, Melville drama, which during the past eleven years has enjoyed considerable popularity at the outlying theatres and in the provinces, are alluded to similarly, in terms of Marriage, in the running commentary that illumines and enlivens the present Lyceum programme. Thus, Lucy, the heroine, was "Forbidden to Marry" Madison by her guardian, Sir George Lancaster, who had already been himself "twice married," more or less. His first wife "in the sight of God, if not of man," and mother, as a passed-on locket finally proves, of George Madison, had become Mother Superior (who "cannot Marry") of the convent at which, by a pardonable melodramatic coincidence, Lucy had been educated. Sir George's second mate, Lady Lucretia Lancaster, who falls in love with her husband's unknown son, also conspires against both Lucy and the baronet, together with Charles Devereux, the "scoundrel who Wishes to Marry Lucy," and his accomplice, Geoffrey Broughton. Later on, indeed, these two rascals "burgle" the safe of the baronet, whom they leave for dead, though in act five he comes "back from the grave to make atonement." Before this, however, Broughton, by means of drugs, was urging Lucy on into a marriage with Devereux, and it might actually have been consummated, for the banns had already been put up, had not Madison effected the real "whirlwind surprise" of the play. Arriving in his motor-car, he carries off Lucy to church "at the rate of forty miles an hour." Unfortunately, this modern Young Lochinvar has not time to reap much immediate benefit from a stage sensation of a class dear to the hearts of present-day supporters of the Lyceum and "Les Frères Melville," for he is arrested at the altar for the supposed theft from Sir George of a large amount of money, really embezzled by Devereux. So the poor inventor-bridegroom is sent to Portland, and is supposed to be shot in escaping thence with fellow-convicts. However, he was not really killed, any more than his finally repentant baronet-sire was; and, after returning in convict-garb to his young wife, he finally ascertains his true parentage, and things are straightened out in the usual way.

APOLLO THEATRE

TO-NIGHT AT 8.15.

A few EPISODES (with Music) that are

"ALL SCOTCH"

Words, Lyrics and Production by HARRY GRATTAN
Music by EDWARD JONES.
Additional Numbers by HERMAN DAREWSKI
Dances by GEORGE SHIRLEY

Scene I.—A Scottish Bank.

Bank Manageress ... ... VIOLET GRAY
Clerkesses ... Misses WARRELL, SANGSTER, HILL and CARLISLE
Bank Messengeress ... ... MAIR VAUGHAN

FINANCE!!!

MacPherson } Trustees ... ... M. R. MORAND
MacCloskey } ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
MacTavish ... ... E. H. PATERSON
MacLeod (The "Big" Moneni-ster) ... ... J. PRIOR MacKey ... ... GORDON SHERRY
Mistress Melnes ... ... ADELAIDE GRACE

BUSINESS!!!

Bakeress ... ... VIOLET HEATER
Postwoman ... ... BERYL BRODIE
Chauffeuress ... ... MAY FITZGERALD
Butcheress ... ... MAISIE CARLISLE
AND
Milknamess ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
SONG ... "Carry On." By Harry Grattan and Herman Darewski

BURGLARY.

Watchman ... ... E. H. PATERSON
MacBurglar ... ... M. R. MORAND
MacRaffles ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
AND
Something Valuable in the Safe ... ... JEAN AYLWIN
Trio ... "We're All Scotch." By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones

The Audience will now get a lot of Notes from the Safe.

A Crofter Lassie ... ... EFFIE MANN
A "Gordon ... ... GORDON SHERRY
DUET ... "Thinking." By Harry Grattan and Herman Darewski

Scene II. A Street in Edinburgh.

A "Ragged" Version of "Caller Herrin'." By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones
Sung by MARIE BLANCHE and CHORUS.

What { Glasgow / Edinburgh } thinks of { Edinburgh. / Glasgow. }

MacPherson (another) ... ... M. R. MORAND
MacCloskey (another) ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
A Soldier ... ... J. PRIOR
A Neutral ... ... JAMES HOWLEY

EUNICE McCLEAN will stop Mr. MacDonald Singing.

APOLLO THEATRE
16/7/15
Orch. Stall
To be retained

Scene III.—A Golf Course (near Dundee).

SONG ... ... "Knitting." By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones
Sung by Miss JEAN AYLWIN and CHORUS.

An American Citizen ... ... M. R. MORAND
Wee MacGregor (a Caddie) ... ... ARCHIE McCAIG
A Scottish Lassie ... ... JEAN AYLWIN

QUINTETTE ... "Ancient Caddies"
By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones.

1st Caddie ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
2nd " ... ... J. PRIOR 3rd " ... ... E. H. PATERSON

MORE ARRIVALS.

The Chauffeur ... ... GORDON SHERRY
Maggie ... ... England ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
Una ... ... Ireland ... ... VIOLET GRAY
Ellie ... ... Wales ... ... EFFIE MANN
AND
Jean ... ... Scotland ... ... JEAN AYLWIN

SONG ... ... "The Lark." By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones
EFFIE MANN.

Golf.

QUARTETTE MARIE BLANCHE, JEAN AYLWIN, VIOLET GRAY, ARCHIE McCAIG and FULL CHORUS.
By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones.

Ensemble and Finale Act I.

ACT II.

Scene I.—The Sea Coast.

OPENING CHORUS ... ... By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones

Fish Wife ... ... ADELAIDE GRACE
Fisher Girl ... ... JEAN AYLWIN
MacTodd, MacBurr — Fishermen ... ... E. H. PATERSON
... ... J. PRIOR
Other Fisher Folk — Misses CARLISLE, WYNFORD, BRODIE, FRASER and ADAMS
Marie — ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
Ellie — ... ... EFFIE MANN
Violet, Eunice — English Girls ... ... VIOLET GRAY
... ... EUNICE McGLENN
Chrissie — ... ... CHRISTINE RONA
Babs — ... ... BABS WORRALL

THE LEGEND OF THE BEACH:

MacYarn ... ... M. R. MORAND

DUET ... ... "Beloved." By Harry Grattan and Edward Jones

Cormac MacArt (a Viking Hero) ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
Soreha (his young Wife) ... ... EFFIE MANN
Dance in this Scene by EUNICE McGLENN.

Scene II.—A Street in Aberdeen.

SONG ... "Ye never know." By Harry Grattan and Herman Darewski
JEAN AYLWIN

Sandy MacTosh (a Special Constable) ... ... M. R. MORAND
The Baker ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
The Man in the Street ... ... E. H. PATERSON
The Meenister ... ... J. PRIOR
Two Mill Lassies ... ... Misses CARLISLE and WYNFORD
An Auld Faggot ... ... ADELAIDE GRACE

SCOTTISH DANCE ... ... EUNICE McGLENN

Scene III.—A Castle in the Highlands.

SONG AND VIOLIN OBLIGATO ... ... MARIE BLANCHE

The Earl ... ... ALLAN MacDONALD
Alick ... ... M. R. MORAND
Meenister ... ... J. PRIOR
A Friend ... ... E. H. PATERSON
A Friend ... ... GORDON SHERRY
Maggie, Effie, Eunice, Jean — The Earl's Daughters ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
... ... EFFIE MANN
... ... EUNICE McGLENN
... ... JEAN AYLWIN

The Clans.

Piper ... ... CHRISSIE AIRD
1. MacLeod ... ... VIOLET GRAY
2. Black Watch ... ... ROSA WYNFORD
3. Buchanan ... ... MAY FITZGERALD
4. MacNab ... ... MAISIE CARLISLE
5. MacLean ... ... VIOLET HEATH
6. Gordon ... ... MAIR VAUGHAN
7. Rob Roy ... ... CONSTANCE GROOME
8. Chisholm ... ... NAN ADAMS
9. Bruce ... ... MADGE SEXTON
10. MacGregor ... ... CELIA BOUTELL
11. Campbell ... ... LILY MAXWELL
12. Brodie ... ... BERYL BRODIE

AND
The London Scottish ... ... JOSEPHINE HARRINGTON

"A NICHT WI' BURNS."

Just to offer you some of Scotland's lovely old Melodies

"Gin a Body" ... ... MARIE BLANCHE
"Mary of Argyll" ... ... EFFIE MANN
"Annie Laurie" ... ... GORDON SHERRY
"My Boy Tammy O" ... ... M. R. MORAND
QUARTETTE "Wee Willie Winkie" M. R. MORAND, GORDON SHERRY, MARIE BLANCHE and EFFIE MANN
"For Scotland" ... ... GORDON SHERRY and FULL CHORUS
AND
"Bonnie Prince Charlie" ... ... JEAN AYLWIN

Finale.

God Save the King.

Scenery by PHILIP HOWDEN and ERNEST HOWARD.
Costumes by SIMMONS, W. CLARKSON, MORRIS ANGEL, SELFRIDGES and SCOTT ADIE, LTD.
The Management wish to express their grateful thanks to Mr. DONALD MACGREGOR (of Messrs. Scott Adie, Ltd.) for valuable help and advice.
Wigs by GUSTAVE.

Acting Manager — for HARRY GRATTAN — H. HAMPSON
Conductor — S. CLARKE RICHARDSON
Stage Manager ... — FRANK GORDON
Press Representative ... — BERNARD PARSONS

MATINEE
Every WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. Phone Gerrard 3243.

Nearest Station, PICCADILLY CIRCUS (Tube).

General Manager ... ... (for Mr. Tom B. Davis) ... ... V. C. BELSEY

"ALL SCOTCH."

Episodes that are all Scotch, musical airs that are mostly Scotch, and characters that are—nearly all of them—of that same nationality, justify the title of the entertainment that Harry Grattan has invented, written, and produced at the Apollo Theatre. It drew a crowded and quite enthusiastic audience—not all Scotch—to the opening performance on Friday evening. The title of "All Scotch" would appeal to even a wider audience than the London Scottish, and irrespective of nationality Friday's audience liked "the goods." Conining the entire scope of a revue—for I suppose we must call this a revue—to the supposed characteristic of one of the four partners of the United Kingdom—has some disadvantages, not the least of which is the risk of monotony; and towards the end of the evening this feeling did somehow creep in on some of us. That, however, was not the way in which the audience generally accepted the entertainment. J. W.

182

APOLLO THEATRE

NIGHTLY AT 8-15.
MATINEES: WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2-30.

APOLLO THEATRE

NIGHTLY AT 8-15.
MATINEES: WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2-30.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor & Manager — SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE

A Matinee

In aid of

THE ALLIED FORCES' BASE HOSPITAL

formerly at Boulogne, now at Etaples

A Dramatic Version of George du Maurier's Famous Novel

"Peter Ibbetson"

By JOHN N. RAPHAEL (by the courtesy of the Trustees)

Under the Patronage of

HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA

His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Michael of Russia & Countess Torby
His Excellency the French Ambassador
The Belgian Minister and Mme. Hymans

The Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe
The Duke and Duchess of Newcastle
The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland
Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland
The Duke and Duchess of Abercorn
Mrs. Hope Vere
Katherine, Duchess of Westminster
The Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry
The Marquis and Marchioness of Sligo
Lady French
Lady Jellicoe
Sir Herbert and Lady Tree
Sir George and Lady Alexander

Organised by the Countess of Huntingdon, Countess of Kilmorey and Miss Constance Collier in conjunction with the following Ladies

Cora, Countess of Strafford
The Countess of Drogheda
The Countess of Limerick
Viscountess Massereene and Ferrard
Viscountess Curzon
The Lady Henry Grosvenor
The Lady Leconfield
Baroness Burton
The Lady Ierne Tufton
The Hon. Mrs. Richard Bethell
The Hon. Mrs. Cecil Bingham
Lady Mainwaring
Lady Kathleen Hastings
Lady Tree
Lady Alexander
Mrs Kendal
Mrs. John Astor
Mrs. Owain Greaves
Mrs. Peto
Miss Elizabeth Asquith
Madame Clara Butt
Miss Lilian Braithwaite

FRIDAY, JULY 23rd, 1915
at 2.30 o'clock

A Dramatic Version of George du Maurier's Famous Novel

"Peter Ibbetson"

By JOHN N. RAPHAEL. (By Courtesy of the Trustees.)

"Oh, now you are dreaming true. It's quite easy—my father taught me. You have only to go to sleep with your feet crossed and your hands behind your head. You must never leave off thinking where you want to be in your dream, and when you fall asleep you get there."

Characters in the Play

Peter Ibbetson	Mr. OWEN NARES
Col. Ibbetson	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Major Duquesnois	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Mr. Lintot	Mr. ARTHUR CLEAVE
Raphael Merrydew	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Crockett	Mr. ROBERT ATKINS
A Bishop	Mr. MURRAY CARRINGTON
Charlie Plunket	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Achille Grigoux	Mr. LEON M. LION
Earl of Chislehurst	Mr. ROLAND PERTWEE
Sir H. Johnston	Mr. GEORGE RAYMOND
Chaplin	Mr. CHRISTOPHER STEELE
Mary, Duchess of Towers	Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER
Mrs. Deane	Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Mrs. Glyn	Miss HELEN FERRERS
Madge Plunket	Miss JESSIE WINTER
Lady Diane Vivash	Miss KYRLE BELLEW
Victorine	Miss EVA LE GALLIENNE
Guests	Mesdames ROSEMARY GREVILLE, JOAN CHALLONER, DOROTHY FANE, M. LEONESI, GEORGETTE JONES, SADIE BROOKE and LUCIE MACKRILL.

Characters in the Dream

Dr. Seraskier	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Mme. Seraskier	Mme. CLARA BUTT
M. Pasquier de la Mariére	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Mme. Pasquier de la Mariére	Miss AMY BRANDON-THOMAS
Go Go	Master RONALD HAMMOND
Mimsey Seraskier	Miss GENÉE ANDREWS
Doctor	Mr. MATTHEW LAWRENCE
Nurse	Miss SYBIL RUSKIN
1st Warder	Mr. ROBERT ATKINS
Yverdon (Postman)	Mr. C. DENIER WARREN
Warders	Messrs. H. NORRIS, YORK & PERCY KEITLEY

The Period of the Play is 1870.

Act I.		Mr. Deane's House in Hopshire
Act II.	Nine months after	The Tête Noire Inn, Passy
	The song sung by Mme. Seraskier was written by Mr. George du Maurier	W. Hemsley
Act III.	Two days after	Col. Ibbetson's Rooms in London
Act IV.	Four months after	A Cell—Newgate W. Hemsley
Epilogue	Twenty-five years after	A Prison Cell in Lare d'Auteuil

NOTE.—The Dreams in Act II. and Act IV. are in the Garden at Passy, where Peter's youth was passed.

The Play produced by Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

The Dances in Act I. arranged by Mons. Louis D'Egville.

The Costumes arranged and supplied by Mr. Tom Heslewood & Miss K. Dawson.

Wigs by Clarkson

The Furniture kindly lent by Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie.

The Decoration of the scenes has been arranged by Messrs. Thornton-Smith, 31, Soho Square, W.

The Grand Piano kindly lent by Messrs. Broadwood & Sons.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Harold Craxton, will play the following Selection of Music during the afternoon.

1.	Prelude "Le Deluge"	Saint-Saens
2.	a. Romance	Svendsen
	b. Norwegian Melody	Grieg
3.	Violin Duets a. Old Irish Air
	b. Song without words	Tschaikowsky
4.	a. Menuett	Boccherini
	b. Gavotte	Rameau
5.	Suite	Victor Herbert

General Manager	Mr. HENRY DANA
Manager for the Matinee	Mr. ALFRED TURNER
Stage Manager ,, ,,	Mr. CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Assistant ,, ,, ,,	Mr. CLAUDE EDMONDS

The Sketches on this page are reproductions of original drawings made by Mr. George du Maurier for his Novel.

THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

"PETER IBBETSON" AT HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

A matinée was given yesterday afternoon for the benefit of "the Allied Forces Base Hospital," under the most exalted patronage. It is pleasant to be able to say that the house was crowded, and a bevy of charming ladies extracted a large number of half-crowns for programmes and half-guineas for copies of Du Maurier's novel, with autographs of the company on the fly-leaf. It was no ordinary, casual matinée, for the play was heavily and handsomely mounted, and a very strong cast was engaged. The adaptation of the novel is by Mr. John N. Raphael, who obviously has had a difficult task, in the attempted accomplishment of which he has not been wholly successful. To people unacquainted with the book the first act is bewildering, and so too is most of the second, whilst some important matter remains unexplained to the end. At the beginning we found ourselves at a ball in the house of a Mr. Deane, apparently dead, in the year 1870, and there was a display of curious Victorian costumes, not altogether without charm, and some dancing, and also rather violent drama, in which a Colonel Ibbetson, an elderly, padded, and rouged buck, who was apparently courting Mrs. Deane, was extremely rude to Peter Ibbetson, hero of the piece. For some reason which I do not know, the Colonel called Peter his nephew; evidently he was a cousin-german, and from no discoverable motive he fed, clothed, and lodged the young gentleman, whom he disliked. Incidentally, the Colonel, without any reason, except the convenience of the author, told Mrs. Deane that Peter was his natural son.

In the next act Peter did some dreaming, and found himself in an old French garden, where he saw and heard his mother and father, and himself as a little boy, and his child sweetheart Mimsey: to him these were mere dream people, but with him in flesh and blood was the child sweetheart, grown up and converted from Mimsey Seraskier to Mary Duchess of Towers. When he awoke he met the real Mary, formerly Mimsey, and they discovered that although they had lost sight of one another for many years they were mutually in love. During the next act Peter learnt that the Colonel had called him his natural son, and had therefore defamed his mother, so after a short scrimmage he killed him with a walking-stick, and we were very glad to get rid of the Colonel, an extraordinarily unpleasant person, presented with great skill by Mr. Henry Ainley. Later we found Peter at Newgate, just at the moment when Mrs. Deane announces that he is not to be hanged for the murder of which he has been convicted. He dreams himself back in the old garden, and there meets Mary Duchess of Towers, and they exchange vows of passionate affection, and they arranged that by their peculiar system of dreams they should be happy together during his lifelong imprisonment. Then there came an epilogue, in circumstances which I cannot imagine. Twenty-five years after his conviction at the Old Bailey Peter is in a prison-cell in Lare d'Auteuil. Apparently during a quarter of a century he has been happy in his dream intercourse with Mary, but Mrs. Deane arrives, to state that she is dead, and then the ghost or spirit of Mary appears and talks a good deal about the after-life and their eternal union, so Peter very discreetly dies. Possibly this bald account is unjust to the piece, which had quite a favourable reception, but it belongs to the class of play for the appreciation of which it is essential to have a knowledge of the original, since the stage version is full of gaps and of unanticipated and unresolved discords, of sudden violences and little purple passages, apparently tit-bits in the novel, whilst the whole of the dream phenomena may be regarded as bewildering. Even the appreciative will find two successive acts of the hero in misery in his prison cell overmuch of a bad thing; the work can hardly be regarded as viable till they are amalgamated.

E. F. S.

THE TIMES

MONDAY, JULY 19, 1915.

Imagination.

It must be conceded that a people at war is not ideally situated for emulating the wisdom practised by the singer of sweet Colonus, who saw life steadily and saw it whole. The even-balanced soul needed for that performance must presumably be sought among neutrals, and it is only natural to find some American observers just now strenuously engaged in seeing us English steadily. That estimable New York periodical the Nation, which MR. WELLS's latest protagonist, Mr. Boon, likens with scant sense and less decorum to an elderly spinster aunt, has been discerning, in what it considers our initial underestimate of the test to which we are exposed, a failure of imagination characteristic of the national temperament. It is an old reproach, and everybody knows roughly what is meant by it. But it is also an old blunder in terminology. Imagination is a lamentably misused word, for the reason that most people have only a vague notion of the process by which images are formed in the mind. It is often confused with fantastic invention, the arbitrary combination of images, the deliberate manufacture of a horrend' informe' ingens monster, or the clapping of an ass's head upon Bottom's shoulders. But this has nothing to do with the pure imagination, which is not an act of deliberation or of will at all, but the ingenuous expression of an emotional state. Ingenuous, that is to say innocent of any distinction between real and unreal, history and fiction.

And it is in ignoring that ingenuousness or innocence that people often fall into another mistake about the imagination, the view of it as a sort of feigning. Imagination does not apply the criterion of reality; so soon as it does it ceases to be imagination and becomes perception. This indifference of the imagination to fact as fact explains why PLATO desired to banish poets from the ideal republic and accounts for the prejudice, not yet extinct in some old-fashioned circles, against novels and plays. There was a common confusion of the artist with the liar. Artists share their imaginative innocence with young children, with this difference, that the child has not yet learnt to perceive, while the artist has learnt to refrain from perception. That distinction, by the way, has been overlooked by the advocates for a return to the Elizabethan mise-en-scène. They say that imagination should supply the scenery, as it did with SHAKESPEARE'S audience, a public of richer imagination, they think, than ours. But SHAKESPEARE'S public was in the child-like stage, untrained to observe realities, and therefore not missing them; just as a little girl will nurse a shapeless block of wood as a baby, not because her imagination transforms the block, but because she has never really observed babies. If our modern public forgoes "realistic" scenery it will have to be with the renunciation of the artist, not with the ignorance of the child. And for that they must be prepared by the appropriate emotional state—which is precisely what our modern dramatists, unfortunately, have not enough emotive force to set going in them. How true it is that imagination originates in an emotional state is manifested by the innumerable myths of the present war. The story of the mysterious "Russians," in which half the kingdom devoutly believed, was, of course, no deliberate invention. It was simply the imaginative representation of a strong desire. And the desires which myths express do sometimes, in history, get transformed into will and action, the poet then becoming glorified as a seer. Example: flying-machines.

Why, then, does the even balanced soul of New York so queerly impute our English underestimate of the enemy resources—since underestimate there was—to lack of imagination? Obviously it has confused imagination with perception. The failure was, if anything, a failure to grasp facts and to reason upon them accurately with an eye to future probabilities. When such a failure occurs there is a defect of intelligence, of observation, of mental alertness. It may be that history will declare that defect to have been ours, "characteristic" or not. But history will not declare us to be therefore unimaginative, because it is not the business of history to talk nonsense. Proof that the countrymen of SHAKESPEARE and SHELLEY temperamentally lack imagination will require evidence of a wholly different nature. But that, as ARISTOTLE said long before MR. KIPLING, is ἀλλος λόγος, another story.

Plays

NEW THEATRE

E
27/7/1915

Orch. Stall
J 158
RIGHT
To be retained

"READY MONEY."

Three years ago "Ready Money" made a huge success of laughter at the New Theatre, and when revived at the same house on Thursday evening laughter was again forthcoming. On the present occasion—as on the first—Mr. Allan Aynesworth and Mr. Kenneth Douglas played the two chief male rôles, and charming Miss Grace Lane now comes in to play heroine. When "Ready Money" was first produced on August 12, 1912, it ran to March 1 in the following spring—232 performances; but the revival, as at present cast, must be for a short time only, as Mr. Aynesworth goes to St. James's Theatre on September 1 and Mr. Kenneth Douglas goes to America. An excellent authority tells me that Mr. Kenneth Douglas made a greater personal success in America last season than any of the English actors who appeared there. J.W.

On THURSDAY, July 29th, 1915, and every Evening at 8.30.
Matinees—Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and MISS MARY MOORE
PRESENT

"READY MONEY"

A Comedy in three Acts by James Montgomery.

Jackson Ives	An International Character ..	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Stephen Baird	Owner of Sky Rocket Mine ..	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
William Stewart	Of the Garden Estate Co. ..	Mr. CHARLES ESDALE
Sydney Rosenthal	.. ..	Mr. GEORGE DESMOND
Sam Welch	A Millionaire Son ..	Mr. ERNEST C. CASSEL
Sumner Holbrook	.. A Broker	.. Mr. ALFRED BARBER
James E. Morgan	Owner of Safety Mine ..	Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Hon. John H. Tyler	Retired Business Man ..	Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Captain West	..	Mr. CECIL HUMPHRYS
Hammond	U.S. Secret ..	Mr. OSWALD MARSHALL
Quin	Service ..	Mr. EDWARD THIRLBY
Flynn	..	.. Mr. J. LESLIE FRITH
Neil	Welch's Manservant ..	Mr. GEORGE OWEN
Paul	Head Waiter ..	.. Mr. A. S. ASPLAND
Reddy	Office Boy ..	.. Mr. JOHN WEYMOUTH
Miss Grace Tyler	.. ..	.. Miss GRACE LANE
Miss Ida Tyler	.. ..	Miss CICELY DEBENHAM
Mrs. John Tyler	.. ..	Miss MARGARET WATSON
Miss Margaret Elliott	.. ..	Miss VERA CUNNINGHAM

Act I. .. Welch's Apartment, Fifth Avenue, New York City. 11.15 New Year's eve.
Act II. .. .. The same. One o'clock New Year's morning.
Act. III. .. .. 22, Wall Street. Next morning.

Miss Grace Lane's Dresses by Madame Hayden Seymour, New Bond St. Miss Cunningham's third Act Dress by Madame [illegible]
Miss Debenham's Dresses by Elizabeth Garrison, 20, South Molton St. W. Miss Watson's Costumes and Hats by [illegible]
The Cigarettes used on the Stage supplied by Abdulla Co., 169, New Bond St., W.
The Cigars used on the Stage supplied by Borneo Tobacco Association, 65, Fenchurch Street, E.C.
Perfumed Fans supplied by L. T. Piver, Paris.
Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinds, Ltd., London and Birmingham.
The Theatre Disinfected and Perfumed with Sykosette, Maslis Bros., London.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. Cecil Bretton
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. Oswald Marshall
Assistant Stage Manager .. .. Mr. J. Leslie Frith

190

ALDWYCH THEATRE

ALDWYCH, W.C.

Licensee & Manager - - DONALD BAYLIS
Lessee - - - - J. BANNISTER HOWARD

To the Editor,

Dear Sir,

The pleasure of your representative's company is requested on Saturday Evening, July 31st, at 7.45 o'clock, to witness the Revival of

"PETE"

By HALL CAINE & LOUIS N. PARKER

Yours faithfully,

J. BANNISTER HOWARD
MATHESON LANG

N.B. Should it be inconvenient to use the enclosed voucher, kindly return to us at your earliest convenience, when another for a date more suitable to your representative will be forwarded.

Plays

"PETE"

By HALL CAINE and LOUIS N. PARKER

Pete Quilliam	Mr. MATHESON LANG
Philip Christian	Mr. BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Ross Christian	Mr. CYRIL GRIFFITHS
Cæsar Cregeen	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
The Lieut. Governor of the Isle of Man	Mr. J. S. BLYTHE
The Mayor of Douglas	Mr. GEORGE MORGAN
Jonaique Jelly	Mr. CHARLES BIBBY
Black Tom	Mr. ROY BYFORD
Kelly the Post	Mr. ARTHUR SEATON
Constable Niplightly	Mr. ALBERT EVREMONDE
Dr. Mylechreest	Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Old William	Mr. LOUIS ASHMEADE
Clerk of the Court	Mr. WALTER PLINGE
Grannie	Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Nancy	Miss MARY BROUGH
Old Sarah	Miss MARGARET BOYD
Mary (a Fishergirl)	Miss NONA WYNNE
Meg	Miss DOROTHY TURNER
Kate Cregeen	Miss HUTIN BRITTON

The Play is laid in the Isle of Man

Act 1 - - - The Return of Pete from South Africa
The Scene is in the Parlour of the "Manx Fairy"

Act 2. - - - The Marriage of Pete and Kate
The Scene is in Pete's Cottage.

Act 3. - The Installation of Philip Christian as Deemster of the Isle of Man
The Scene is in the Keep of Castle Rushen at Douglas

Act 4. - - - The Return of Kate
The Scene is Pete's Cottage

The Play is produced by MATHESON LANG.

The Music is composed by JOHN CROOK.

Daily Mail

TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1915.

WAR & THE THEATRE

PLAYS THAT PAY.

VOGUE OF THE REVUE.

By JAMES WATERS.

After twelve months of war conditions Theatreland has "come through" injured, and poorer, no doubt, than it was in the careless, happy-go-lucky days of adventure and peace, yet brave enough to carry on through the troublous times that still lie ahead of the Bohemian community that makes its living in that land of make-believe.

Thirty-three producing theatres and about half a dozen producing variety theatres constitute the fixed quantities of Theatreland. It is the play product of that group that stands for what London does in play-making. Plays produced in England outside that area have little trade value in foreign markets. So the story of Theatreland is the story of the play-houses that have been crowded together in Central London, where the leisured classes, and the holiday folk, and the foreigner make holiday and enter in search of amusement. A British actor who has not made his reputation somewhere in that group of theatres has no market value to his name in the greater world of famous players.

BRAVE VENTURES.

Very bravely has this community of authors, managers, and actors held up the life of their little world through the past twelve months of a European war. The dramatic suddenness of the great conflict appeared at first to have stunned the men of the theatres. Many new plays that were to have been produced in August and September last year were put aside. Sir Herbert Tree was the first of the managers to speak. He announced the reopening of His Majesty's Theatre with cheap prices and a revival of a popular play. His example was widely followed. His success with "Drake," the first revival of the season (given on August 19), proved a good omen.

Other London managers ventured—and ventured successfully—with new productions at the old prices of admission, and some of them did well. The general policy, however, for some months of the past season was to revive old plays and charge reduced prices for seats, and this attempt to meet new conditions explains why of the 114 productions of the year since the war began only half were new plays.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED.

Gradually, during the winter, confidence was re-established. Managers began putting on new plays, and by the time the New Year arrived the old scale of admission charges, viz., from 1s. to 10s. 6d., was re-established, the trial of a daily matinée in place of evening performances was abandoned, and normal conditions were almost restored. The two chief changes that the war has made are that actors' salaries are on the whole less than they were and that very much less money is being spent on stage decoration.

Of features of the twelve months notice must be given to the vogue of revues, of which no fewer than ten were produced; up to three years ago one example per annum sufficed for all London. A remarkable change truly, which has also introduced a new profession—the self-styled "revue artist."

The vogue of the revue and the sketch has also brought in its train (three months ago) a clear warning from the Lord Chamberlain that he will not permit any licence to be taken with the business or words of those plays passed by him for performance.

An examination of the list of the productions of the twelve months shows conclusively that the theatre-going public wants to be entertained. Plays that awakened laughter, and thrills that were the prelude to happy endings, made the successes of the year gone by.

Theatre profits where they are being made are much smaller now than they used to be; yet the call of charity has not been falling on deaf ears in Theatreland. Three matinées were attended by the King this year; these were the only visits paid by him to the theatres since the war began.

FRIDAY NIGHT PRODUCTIONS.

It is curious that of the four new plays produced, since the war began, on Friday nights three of them—"A Daughter of England," "Bluff King Hal," and "The Green Flag"—were presented under the auspices of Mr. Arthur Bourchier. He is the one manager who thinks that Friday night is as good as any other night, and he practises what he preaches. By the by, two revues were produced in London on Friday nights this year, namely, "5064 Gerrard," at the Alhambra Theatre; and "More," at the Ambassadors. These were the first revues presented on a Friday since the success of "Everybody's Doing It," at the Empire Theatre on St. Valentine's Night, 1912, created the vogue of the revue in this country.

...ers, J.
Plays

MR. NEIL FORSYTH'S WILL.

P.19 — 10/8/1915

GRAND OPERA MANAGER LEAVES NEARLY £50,000.

Mr. Neil Forsyth, M.V.O., of 20, Northgate, Regent's Park, N.W., general manager of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, who was drowned at Grantown-on-Spey on April 29 last, aged forty-nine years, left unsettled property of the gross value of £47,699, of which the net personalty amounts to £45,865.

He left to his wife his freehold house, "Pinkieburn," at Seaford, and all his household and personal effects (including gifts from her late Majesty Queen Victoria) and motor-car, etc., expressing the wish, but without creating any trust in the matter, that all Royal gifts, presentation plate, and souvenirs should eventually be divided among his children.

All other of his property he left as to one-half upon trust for his wife absolutely, and one-half upon trust for her during widowhood, with remainder to his children in equal shares.

Other notable fortunes left by entertainers and writers for the stage are those of—

Richard D'Oyly Carte	£240,817
Mrs. D'Oyly Carte (Mrs. Stanley C. Boulter)	117,670
Sir William S. Gilbert	111,971
Sir Arthur Sullivan	54,527
Sir Edward Moss (personal estate)	145,008
Charles Morton, "The Father of the Halls"	2,078
John Lawrence Toole	79,984
Edward Terry	44,056
Wilson Barrett	30,862
Sir Henry Irving	20,527
George Grossmith	19,628
William S. Penley	15,642
Harry G. Pelissier, of "The Follies"	13,098
Richard Corney Grain	18,950
William James Lewin (William Terriss)	18,257
George Wilde Galvin (Dan Leno)	10,994
Herbert Edward Storey (Herbert Campbell)	4,477
Mme. Goldschmidt (Jenny Lind)	40,630
Ernest Dinard (Ernesto Nicolini)	40,560
Lionel Brough	2,317

MUSICAL COMEDY AUTHOR'S £11,000

Mr. J. T. Tanner, author of "The Broken Melody," in which Mr. Van Biene appeared more than 2,000 times, and of numerous musical plays, including "The Toreador," "Our Miss Gibbs," and "The Quaker Girl," who died in June last, aged fifty-six, left estate of the gross value of £11,788, of which £11,671 is net personalty. Probate of his will has been granted to his widow.

A.M.G. 11/8/15

THE COMEDY THEATRE.

(Licensed by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.)

Sole Lessee ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

On TUESDAY, AUGUST 24th, 1915, at 8 p.m.

A NEW REVUE

ENTITLED

"SHELL OUT!"

By ALBERT DE COURVILLE and WAL PINK.

Music by HERMANN DAREWSKI.

Dances and Ensembles by ROBERT MARKS.

Production by ALBERT DE COURVILLE

SCENE 1.—THE GREAT WHITE SALE.

Miss Frilly de Partment	UNITY MORE
Ivy, Peach } Assistants	GOODY WILLIS
Mrs. Blossom (proprietress of the Store)	HELEN BELTRAMO
Verbena	AMY AUGARDE
First Lady Customer	FRED EMNEY
Second Lady Customer	LOUIE TINSLEY
First Male Customer	HILDA BAYLEY
Third Lady Customer	TOM SHALE
Telegraph Office Customer	EDNA MORGAN
A Flirting Gentleman	GEORGE MANTON
	TOM STUART

SCENE 2.—A STREET.

The Master Crook	TOM SHALE
His Friend	EDWIN ELLIS
The Operator	DOUGLAS MARS
A Constable	ARTHUR S. PITT
The Victim	GEORGE MANTON
The Flag-Day Girl	EDNA MORGAN

SCENE 3.—A MODERN REVUE DRAMA.

The Husband	GEORGE MANTON
The Wife	AMY AUGARDE
The Child	HILDA BAYLEY

(Gramophone by the GRAPHAPHONE COMPANY.)

SCENE 4.—VISUALISING UP-TO-DATE (from U.S.A.).

The Special Constable	GARRY LYNCH
The Thief	ARTHUR S. PITT
Man with Gramophone	EDWIN ELLIS
An Opera Singer	TOM STUART

SCENE 5.

An Old Lady	FRED EMNEY

SCENE 6.

The Lovers	GARRY LYNCH, EDNA MORGAN

SCENE 7.—A STAGE DOOR.

Stage Doorkeeper	ARTHUR S. PITT
A Matinee Idol Girl	HILDA BAYLEY
The Author	TOM SHALE
His Friend	DOUGLAS MARS
The Composer	GARRY LYNCH
The Leading Man	A. H. RICHARDSON
The Leading Lady	BERYL FORD

SCENE 7.—A STAGE DOOR—continued.

A Chorus Girl	GOODIE WILLIS
The Producer	LARRY CEBALLOS
Scenic Artist	GEORGE MANTON
Costumier	TOM STUART
Dresser	LOUIE TINSLEY
A Dancing Star	UNITY MORE
A National Register Chorus	TOM STUART, LARRY CEBALLOS, ARTHUR S. PITT, GARRY LYNCH, GEORGE MANTON, EDWIN ELLIS

SCENE 8.—A RESTAURANT.

A Waiter	FRED EMNEY
First Customer	TOM SHALE
Second Customer	EDWIN ELLIS
The Proprietor	GEORGE MANTON
The Business Doctor	GARRY LYNCH
Miss Lancashire	UNITY MORE

SCENE 9.—A PARLOUR.

Mrs. Figgs	LOUIE TINSLEY
Mr. Huggins	TOM SHALE
Mrs. Batty	FRED EMNEY

SCENE 10.—THE BLUE PALACE.

The Quartette	AMY AUGARDE, GARRY LYNCH, EDNA MORGAN, GEORGE MANTON
"Impressions" by	TOM STUART
The Dancers	DESMOND & CEBALLOS
The Artillery Girl	UNITY MORE

FINALE.

MUSICAL NUMBERS.

THE OLD, OLD OPENING CHORUS
"If the Girlies could be Soldiers"	Miss UNITY MORE and CHORUS
"Girls! Girls! Girls!"	Miss AMY AUGARDE and CHORUS
"Sprinkle me with Kisses"	FRED EMNEY, TOM STUART and CHORUS
"Flag Day"	Miss EDNA MORGAN and CHORUS
"Twelve Little Girls per Year"	GARRY LYNCH and CHORUS
"Canoeing"	Miss EDNA MORGAN, GARRY LYNCH and CHORUS
"I Want Loving"	Miss UNITY MORE, TOM STUART, GARRY LYNCH, LARRY CEBALLOS, GEORGE MANTON, EDWIN ELLIS, ARTHUR S. PITT
"Little Miss Lancashire"	Miss UNITY MORE and CHORUS
"Pom-Tiddly-Om-Pom"	Miss AMY AUGARDE, Miss EDNA MORGAN, GARRY LYNCH and GEORGE MANTON
"Spring-time Waltz"	Miss MONA DESMOND and LARRY CEBALLOS
"Oh! the Artillery"	Miss EDNA MORGAN and CHORUS
FINALE

Costumes designed by COMELLI and executed by B. & J. SIMMONS, Madame SADIE, J. & H. ELLIS, Miss ALICE RUSSEN, Mdme. ERCHOLE, CLARKSON, &c., &c.
Scenery by McCLEERY, BRUCE SMITH, HEMSLEY, &c. Boots and Shoes by GAMBA & RAYNE.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

In order to comply with the regulations for smoking by the Lord Chamberlain the following Four Artists will appear:—

1. SWIRAM NOTWEG, Violioist. 2. OLIVE TWAIN, Selections from her Repertoire. 3. THE ROXBURGH TRIO, Musical Entertainment.
AND
4. CYRIL CLENSY, Impersonations.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Business Manager for "SHELL OUT" Company	Mr. C. B. FOUNTAINE
Business Manager for Comedy Theatre	Mr. LEONARD LILLIES
Stage Manager	Mr. LOUIS PALGRAVE

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT GETS THINGS DONE.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1915.

FIRST NIGHT INNOVATION.

SMOKING AT THE COMEDY.

The theatre manager that can give his audience a new sensation is generally regarded as a fortunate man. Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, the lessee of the Comedy Theatre, gave his audience one last evening. With the consent of the Lord Chamberlain he allowed smoking in the auditorium.

Incidentally, he produced a bustling musical entertainment by Messrs. Albert de Courville and Wal Pink, with music by Mr. Hermann Darewski, very much on the lines associated with American revue productions, but the real feature of the evening was the right to smoke.

It was the first time a West-End theatre looked for and secured the concession, and there was no little curiosity in London to know how the experiment would work. Very possibly there was more excitement over this smoking innovation outside than there was inside the theatre. People did not seem surprised when they got there to find their neighbour smoking. It seemed the most natural thing to do in a theatre—if you wanted to do it. Comparatively few seemed to want to do it.

SIR A PINERO'S CIGARETTES.

Of course, Sir Arthur Pinero was present. He has been the one big figure of the theatre world who has consistently advocated the right of managers to allow smoking in London theatres. He expressed his satisfaction with the Lord Chamberlain's concession by attending and smoking more cigarettes than he has ever done in the same space of time before.

American revue productions are, as far as London is concerned, not much more than three years old. Revue has been worked hard during these three years. It succeeds, of course, because it rushes along, flinging laughter and song across the "floats"; because it hustles untiringly with jokes and dances, packs a stage with pretty girls, and causes no thought beyond the wonder how it is all repeated again and again quite as surely as if it had a plot or plan.

Last night's revue, "Shell Out," was on these well-known popular lines. The audience liked it. The dancing delighted them. So did the bright colours, the pretty girls, the swing and go of the whole entertainment, and the indescribably quaint humour of comical Mr. Fred Emney.

J. W.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT PERSISTENTLY FOREWARNED THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE WAR.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1915.

SMOKING IN A THEATRE.

When the revue "Shell Out" is produced at the Comedy Theatre, on or about August 24, smoking will be permitted in the auditorium for the first time in the history of West End theatres. But the Lord Chamberlain, in granting this permission, has insisted, as a condition, that six variety turns shall be incorporated in the entertainment.

AT THE COMEDY THEATRE

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

On SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 28th,

and Every Following Evening at 8.30

Messrs. A. & S. GATTI

PRESENT

KICK-IN

A Play in Four Acts.

By WILLARD MACK.

CAST

In the order of their appearance

Deputy Commissioner Garvey	WILTON TAYLOR
"Whip" Fogarty, of the Central Office	JAMES A. HEENAN
Jack Diggs, of the Central Office	PERCIVAL LENNON
Memphis Bessie (a retired shop-lifter)	VERA H. FINLAY
Myrtle Sylvester	EDITH BROWNING
Old Tom	TIM RYLEY
Chick Hewes	RAMSEY WALLACE
Molly (his Wife)	HELEN HOLMES
Mrs. Halloran	JOSEPHINE WILLIAMS
Daisy (her Daughter)	HELEN MAROUA
Charley Cary (Molly's Brother)	NOEL ARNOLD
Gus	G. MAYOR-COOKE

The Action of the Play takes place in New York City

ACT I.
Deputy Commissioner Garvey's Office, 10 a.m. Tuesday

ACT II.
Apartment of Chick and Molly Hewes, 8.30 p.m. Tuesday

ACT III.
The Same as Act II., 7.30 p.m. Wednesday

ACT IV.
The Same as Act I., 10 p.m. Wednesday

Produced by NOEL ARNOLD

ters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT GETS THINGS DONE.

MONDAY, AUGUST 30, 1915.

CROOK PLAY SUCCESS.

A NEW YORK "GUN" DRAMA AND NOT A SHOT FIRED.

The London autumn season was opened at the Vaudeville Theatre on Saturday with an American crook play which went off with a bang of success.

"Kick In," which is Bowery for the Brixton "Cough up," is at bottom an old-fashioned melodrama of a reformed thief and his lovely wife (there is no che-ild), of a stolen diamond necklace, false suspicions, wicked police, and the triumph of innocence. But when this is done up by Mr. Willard Mack, the author, the result is as different from the Old Adelphi as home-made lemonade from a soda-fountain miracle.

And the success is not all a matter of thrills. Mr. Mack can be restrained; he was tempted to show us the shot thief's body borne down the hoarding-house stairs in a barrel, but forbore and yet got a horribly gruesome effect over the footlights. He staged a splendid struggle between the hero with a "gun" and the "cop"; the "cop" was wounded—so energetic was the fight on Saturday that many of the audience were sure the blood was real though accidental—but not a shot was fired. A triumph of restraint!

"SOME" SLANG.

Nor is it merely a success of "double crossing" and "spoof," like some other American plays, nor even of wonderful language with such phrases as:

"He had me peeved."

"I (Bessie) am so happy I could dive through a porthole without mussing my hair."

"He (a dope-fiend) jumps over burnt matches as if they were logs."

"No guy comes to see you (a flapper) with more to him than one pair of pants."

"He was yellow (treacherous) as a duck's foot, and if you stuck him he'd drip lemon juice for a fortnight."

"Sam (when waiting in his car) hates to smell petrol burning when he ain't moving."

The play has a sound humanity and a real fund of humour (e.g., "Bennie's in trouble." . . . "So's Europe"), and a knack of characterisation, at its best in the Irish landlady, her daughter, and the Tammany Police Commissioner, which carried the hearts of Saturday's audience by storm.

The acting was splendid. Mr. Ramsay Wallace and Miss Helen Holmes are a handsome, clever pair but in England should beware a little temptation to over-act. Mr. Noel Arnold was a sustained study of the dope-fiend. Mr. Wilton Taylor, the Irish Police Chief, who had not been to mass since George Washington crossed the Delaware, and Miss Josephine Williams, the landlady, were "great." And Miss Helen Marqua, the "kid who'd got a crush on various boys but wanted a steady," chewed gum, and had seen the hero for two years on the "movies" and now wished to heaven she could hear him just once, was a triumphant revelation.

A GLOSSARY OF UNDERWORLD TERMS.

"Dip"	Pickpocket	"Frisk"	To search
"Gun"	One who robs a house	"Bull"	Detective
"Big House"	State Penitentiary	"Harness Bull"	Policeman
"Rocks"	Diamonds	"Collar"	Necklace
"Stir"	Prison	"Squealer"	Informer
"Glommed"	To steal	"White stuff"	Morphine
"Kale"	Money	"Nickel"	A small coin
"Slough"	To convict	"Squirt"	Hypodermic syringe
"Fan"	To search	AND "KICK-IN"	Give up

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE,

KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.

August 26th, 1915.

SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER requests the honour of your presence on Wednesday next, September 1st, at 8 p.m. punctually, when

THE BIG DRUM

A New Comedy in Four Acts

BY ARTHUR PINERO

will be acted for the first time.

E. ARNOLD,

BOX OFFICE.

Waters, J
Plays

201

EVERY EVENING at 8

WILL BE ACTED

THE BIG DRUM

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

By ARTHUR PINERO

"The desire of fame betrays an ambitious man into indecencies that lessen his reputation; he is still afraid lest any of his actions should be thrown away in private."—Addison.

Philip Mackworth		GEORGE ALEXANDER
Sir Randle Filson, Knt.		ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Bertram Filson ...	(his son) ...	NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Sir Timothy Barradell, Bart.		LEONARD BOYNE
Robert Roope		NORMAN FORBES
Collingham Green		STANLEY COOKE
Leonard Westrip	(Sir Randle's Secretary)	HESKETH PEARSON
Alfred Dunning	(of Sillitoe and Dunning's Private Detective Agency)	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Noyes	(Mr. Roope's Servant)	E. H. HINCKS
Underwood	(Servant at Sir Randle's)	W. COATS BUSH
John	(Mr. Mackworth's Servant)	ALFRED HARRIS
A Waiter		CHARLES HINTON
Ottoline de Chaumié, Comtesse de Chaumié, nee Filson ...		IRENE VANBRUGH
Lady Filson		HELEN FERRERS
Hon. Mrs. Godfrey Anslow		MARGARET KING
Mrs. Walter Quebec		MARJORIE DORÉ
Miss Tracer	(Lady Filson's Secretary)	BABARA HANNAY

Period—1913

Act I. - Robert Roope's Flat in South Audley Street. June.

Act II. - Morning-room at Sir Randle Filson's, Ennismore Gardens. The next day.

Act III. - Mackworth's Chambers, Gray's Inn. November.

Act IV. - The same place. The following morning.

The curtain falls for a moment in the course of the First and Third Acts.

THE PLAY PRODUCED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE AUTHOR.

The Scenery Painted by G. SACKMANN.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1915.

The new Pinero play at the St. James's Theatre last night is about love and authorship and the odd ways in which they get mixed up. Odd—c'est bien le mot, as Sir Arthur's heroine might put it, who talks as much French as English—for the love is odd, the authorship is odd, and the whole play is odd.

Philip Mackworth is an "unsuccessful" novelist, and there is of course nothing odd about that; but the suggestion is that he is commercially unsuccessful because he is artistically too good, and we find that suggestion rather difficult to swallow. After all, as Bagehot says, authors do not keep tame steam-engines to write their books. They write them out of themselves, and if they are artists they will talk as well as write with a sense of style. Now Philip has no sense of style, because he is always straining at style, evidently misconceiving it as something artificial, emphatic, rhetorical. His notions of conduct are all right, he hates self-advertisement, the "personal" paragraph, and, indeed, writes a novel "The Big Drum" on purpose to satirize it. But, poor man, his only way of satirizing drum-beating is by tub-thumping. Never was there such a wordy declaimer. No, we cannot believe that Philip failed to sell because he was artistically too good. With so luxuriant, so sesquipedalian, so thoroughly bad a style, he was the very man to make a popular novelist.

AN ODD BARGAIN.

Nevertheless, we have to believe that Philip didn't sell because Sir Arthur tells us so and because that was the cause of the odd bargain he made with Ottoline's vulgar family. Ottoline was a young widow, an old flame of Philip's before her marriage, and now his promised bride. The Filson family, father, mother, and brother, are dead against the match. Drum-beaters, all three, they had hoped that Ottoline would make a "brilliant" second marriage. Imagine their disgust at her project of marrying an unsuccessful novelist, who is not even in Who's Who. Very well, says Philip, I'll wait to marry until I am successful. This is an odd bargain and an odd kind of love. Why on earth should Philip and Ottoline consider the vulgar prejudices of the Filsons? And why does Philip make the fate of the woman who loves him hang upon the chances of the book-market?

His own excuse to himself is that he is sure his very next book will have a big sale. Oddly enough, it does sell—25,000 copies in a few weeks. All, then, is well; the Filsons are delighted, and the marriage is as good as settled. But, somehow or other, young Filson gets a suspicion into his head about the genuineness of the sales, sets a private detective to work, and very soon discovers that nearly all the books have gone to one purchaser. That purchaser—you have, of course, guessed it—is Ottoline. If her happiness was to hang upon a bargain, she would at any rate see that the bargain turned out all right. Dismay of the Filsons, and awakening of Philip from his brief dream of being a selling author, and rupture with Ottoline, whose love has led her to play so heedlessly with the vanity of authorship.

THEATRICAL EFFECT.

Odd as all this is as a history of human feeling and action, it is theatrically effective. Trust Sir Arthur for seeing to that! Philip's simple faith in his literary success, the blind confidence with which he insists upon investigating this tale of the detective, makes the revelation of the truth, confirmed by Ottoline's confession, all the more catastrophic. You do not believe in the people, but you cannot help being caught up in the excitement of the scene.

After that sheer oddity gains the upper hand, and to be frank—"I must be frank," as Sir Randle Filson says—knocks the play into a cocked hat. Philip, heartily repentant for his savage dismissal of Ottoline, sends for her; she, on her side, flies back to him even before she is sent for. Behold them locked again in each other's arms. Philip says he will renounce authorship and devote himself to conjugal felicity. Not so fast, suddenly interrupts Ottoline, I am not going to marry you after all. She had lain awake all night and thought it out. Marriage with her would ruin Philip's literary life. I am a vulgar woman, she cries, I come of a drum-beating stock, I could never help trying all the little tricks of drum-beaters to push your sales. Through me and my horrid, vulgar little ways, you would lose your literary self-respect. So, good-bye, Philip, let me take my last look of you as you sit at your desk, over the MS. of your next novel. Philip, dumbfounded, obeys. Curtain.

Most of Sir Arthur's plays end oddly, but this ending is surely his crowning oddity. Why should Philip and Ottoline lose their chance of love and happiness because Philip has literary ambitions which Ottoline fears she might spoil? This is putting literature high, even if Philip were an undoubted genius. But as you can see with half an eye that he is not a genius pour un sou (as Ottoline would say), but a well-intentioned mediocrity, literature is really not concerned and marriage would spoil nothing.

An odd play; then, with odd ideas about literature and love; and an odd, inflated style like Philip's own. "I'll pump the gals," says the private detective, and then improves it to "I'll interrogate the assistants." Sir Arthur is surely here having a quiet laugh at himself. He is always "interrogating the assistants"—wherever, that is to say, he is serious. Philip, the exponent of "literature," declaims in that style. Ottoline is quite as pompous. So are the comic people, the vulgar Filsons and the family-friend Roope, but here the pompousness is right just because it is comic. Mr. Allan Aynesworth and Miss Helen Ferrers, Mr. Nigel Playfair and Mr. Norman Forbes, are the comic people, riot in the farce of the thing, and are quite amusing. There is an admirable bit of natural acting from Mr. Leonard Boyne as an Irish suitor (soupirant is Sir Arthur's word) of Ottoline's. Sir George Alexander makes the declamatory Philip violently ebullient and explosive, and we really do not know what else he could do; Miss Irene Vanbrugh so charms you as Ottoline that you almost forgive the perversity of the character. And, as Sir Arthur is dead-silent about the war, you almost forgive his perpetually "interrogating the assistants."

202

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1915.

CONCESSION TO POPULAR TASTE.

It is announced that the last act of Sir Arthur Pinero's new comedy, The Big Drum, has now been altered, making the play end on a happy note, the lovers being united.

Though it is not a common occurrence for an author of Sir Arthur Pinero's position to alter his play to suit the taste of the public, there is more than one precedent for such action. In fact, the concession has on one occasion been made by Sir Arthur himself. When he wrote The Profligate he submitted the manuscript to Sir John Hare, who agreed to produce it on one condition, that the author—who had ended his play with the suicide of the penitent profligate at the very moment when his wife was coming back to him with pity and forgiveness in her heart—should alter it to provide a happy ending. Sir John Hare, as he frankly admitted in a letter to the newspapers, felt somewhat timorous of braving a popular prejudice in favour of theatrical happiness in the last act of new plays, and he suggested that as a matter of expediency a reconciliation should be brought about between the reformed profligate and his innocent wife.

Sir Arthur fell in with the managerial view, and the play was amended accordingly, but at the same time he decided that when the play came to be printed the tragic note should be restored, and when Mr. William Heinemann published the play in 1891 the original text was duly given. Mr. Clement Scott and Mr. William Archer were among those who approved of Sir Arthur Pinero's decision to change the ending.

A Restoration Precedent.

But precedents go much further back than this, and it is recorded that the great Killigrew, in Restoration times, went to the length of altering his play Pandora from a tragedy into a comedy because of his audiences' non-approval. For this he was severely rebuked by a contemporary poet, who wrote:—

> Sir, you should rather teach our age the way
> Of judging well, than thus have changed your play;
> You had obliged us by employing wit,
> Not to reform Pandora, but the pit.'

Death and Revival of the Octoroon.

When Mr. Dion Boucicault first produced The Octoroon at the Adelphi in November, 1861, he aroused a theatrical storm by killing off his heroine in the last act. The Times recorded the fact that several of the audience were dissatisfied with the unfortunate end of the heroine, and Mr. Boucicault immediately wrote a letter expressing his surprise at the lukewarm reception of the last act by the public. Eventually, however, he bowed to the popular taste, and provided the necessary happy ending.

While the controversy was raging Punch published a poem entitled "Saving the Octoroon," which began:—

> Upon the couch she lies so pale,
> 'Tis but a graceful swoon:
> What? Poison? Nay, 'tis sure, a tale,
> He'll never thus our hearts assail;
> And kill the Octoroon.

But the author, according to the poem, realized the error of his ways:

> The author heard: he rubbed his chin,
> "They'll call me a poltroon,
> But if her death the houses thin
> Perhaps 'tis time I should begin
> To save the Octoroon."

Perhaps the most comic precedent is that of Mr. Wilson Barrett, who, after the first performance of The Christian King, also at the Adelphi, in December, 1902, endeavoured to please the public by acting on a suggestion to introduce a representation of King Alfred, the hero, burning the cakes. More recently Sir James Barrie altered, after its production, The Legend of Leonora, in such a way as to make the whole incident a dream instead of as originally intended a delightful piece of phantasy.

A HAPPY ENDING.

SIR ARTHUR PINERO ALTERS THE LAST ACT OF "THE BIG DRUM."

LOVERS REUNITED.

FAMOUS DRAMATIST BOWS TO THE TASTE OF THE MOMENT.

Sir Arthur Pinero has altered the last act of "The Big Drum," which is being played at the St. James's Theatre, and the comedy now ends on a happy note, the lovers being reunited.

The distinguished author explained to a representative of the "Daily Chronicle" last night the reason for the alteration.

"Members of the audience at the first night," he said, "complained that for wartime the end was rather a sad one, whereas they wanted to be cheered up, and not depressed. So we thought, in these exceptional days, that we ought to meet the public, and I have made the end more cheerful in consequence.

"The change does not affect the purpose of the play at all—the manner of the ending, indeed, is immaterial to that—for I designed and wrote it to attack certain weaknesses and follies of social life. It was framed before the war started, and at any other time there would have been no demand for the change that has been made."

"Would you have altered the play if there had been no war?" Sir Arthur was asked.

He shook his head decidedly. "Certainly not," he said. "But now one must consider. I won't say the taste of the public but the desire of the public is to use the theatre as a means of distraction.

"When the play is produced elsewhere—in America, for example—and when it is published the original form in which I designed it will be adhered to, for I still hold, with your critic, that the 'unhappy ending' is the 'true' one."

"Will it revert to that ending on the English stage after the war?"

Sir Arthur was non-committal. "When will that be?" he countered. He added that this was not the first time he had similarly altered one of his dramatic works after production.

SIR G. ALEXANDER'S VIEW.

"Personally," said Sir George Alexander at the theatre last night—he was in the make-up of the hero novelist—"I love the other ending, although it doesn't make for happiness, and the public are not in a mood at the present time to be harrowed.

"I do not consider, however, that the new ending is less artistic, for the character of the woman as delineated in the play makes either course of action possible to her.

"As it now stands, the final act plays for eighteen minutes less than formerly."

The interest aroused by Sir Arthur Pinero's change of dénouement in "The Big Drum," which, by the by, is doing splendid business at the St. James's, recalls the letter published by him at the time in defence of a similar alteration effected in "The Profligate." "I feel," he wrote, "that Mr. Hare, in a friendly desire to spare my shoulders, has laid a burden upon his own which I am not justified in allowing him to bear. The alteration in the ending of 'The Profligate' was made by me very willingly, and I am unfortunate if I conveyed to Mr. Hare the impression that I was making any sacrifice of my convictions. Indeed, I could never allow the consideration of mere expediency to influence me in dealing with subjects upon which I feel deeply and write with all the earnestness of which I am capable.

"I had," continued Sir Arthur, "long settled the form of my play when a friend, for whose judgment I had great respect, raised through Mr. Hare a question for my deliberation. Could not the moral I had set myself to illustrate be enforced without distressing the audience by sacrificing the life of a character whose sufferings were intended to win sympathy? Reflection convinced me that such a course was not only possible but was one which in no way tended to weaken the termination of my story, whilst it promised to extend that story's influence over the larger body of the public." Mutatis mutandis, these words might have been written regarding the alteration made by Sir Arthur in "The Big Drum."

Plays

203

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

NOVEMBER 28, 1915.

Ending with the 111th.

On Saturday next, after a run of 111 performances, Sir Arthur Pinero's "The Big Drum", will be withdrawn from St. James's Theatre Sir George Alexander will take the play to Brighton for the following week, and on his return to London will get busy with rehearsals of his new piece "The Basker" for January 1. On Monday, December 6, Mr. Matheson Lang takes up for three weeks a tenancy of St. James's Theatre, and will there appear in "The Merchant of Venice."

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.
Sole Lessee ... FRANK CURZON.

LEICESTER SQUARE Underground Station is next door to this Theatre.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1915, AT 8.

A New Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"THE WARE CASE"

By GEORGE PLEYDELL.

Sir Hubert Ware, Bart.	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Sir Henry Egerton ...	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Michael Adye, K.C., M.P.	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
Sir John Murless, K.C., M.P.	Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
The Hon. Sir Richard Petworth	Mr. J. FISHER-WHITE
Marston Gurney ...	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Eustace Ede ...	Mr. WILFRED FLETCHER
Tommy Bold ...	Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
A Doctor ...	Mr. FREDERICK CULLEY
Bate ...	Mr. CHARLES HARLEY
Footman ...	Mr. G. McCARTHY
Celia Wilson ...	Miss STELLA MERVYN CAMPBELL
Lady Ware ...	Miss MARIE LÖHR

The Action passes between September and January.
The Scene is laid partly in the country in Middlesex and partly in London.

The Curtain will be lowered during Act III. to mark a lapse of time.
There will be an interval of ten minutes between Acts I. and II., and intervals of fifteen minutes each between Acts II. and III., and III. and IV.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES. Ladies' Dresses and Hats designed and made by Mdme. HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, of 47 New Bond Street. Other Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., of 7 & 8 King Street, Covent Garden. Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co., 101 St. Martin's Lane, W.C. Curtains and Coverings by STORY & Co., High Street, Kensington. Piano by COOSEY & Co., 295 Regent Street, W. The Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by THE CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Music

Under the Direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI. Selections from the following Repertoire will be played.

1. COMIC OPERA SELECTION	Victor Herbert	9. ENTR'ACTE, "Que vous êtes jolie"	Christiné
2. DANCES from "Nell Gwyn"	Edward German	10. MORCEAU, "Le Cygne"	Saint-Saëns
3. SUITE, "Othello"	Coleridge-Taylor	11. PRELUDE IN C MINOR	Rachmaninoff
4. INTERMEZZO, "Naïla"	Leo Delibes	12. AIRS from "Pagliacci"	Leoncavallo
5. DEUX MORCEAUX, "Caisse Noisette"	Tschaikowsky	13. "MON CŒUR S'OUVRE A TA VOIX"	Saint-Saëns
6. CHANSON NOCTURNE, "Un Rêve"	Grieg	14. ENTR'ACTE, "Badinage"	Corelli Windeatt
7. SERENADE DES MANDOLINES	Desormes	15. VALSE, "La Gitana"	Ernest Bucalossi
8. SONGS by Popular Writers	Selected

* A number will be exhibited to indicate the music being played.

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... W. T. LOVELL
Business Manager ... HERBERT JAY

Waters, J
Plays

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1915.

Playgoers who like trial scenes—and from the never-failing supply of trial scenes there is to be inferred a persistent demand—will like The Ware Case at Wyndham's Theatre. With Mr. Gerald du Maurier in the dock and Mr. Sydney Valentine and Mr. Norman McKinnel for prosecution and defence and Mr. Fisher-White on the bench and Miss Marie Löhr fainting in Court it is, we should guess, even more thrilling than the real Old Bailey. Mr. du Maurier is on his trial for murder, and you think, when Mr. Valentine is cross-examining, that he is guilty, and, when Mr. McKinnel is addressing the jury, that he is innocent, and as that is just the state of uncertainty you ought to be in, for proper sport.

The ingenuity of the author, Mr. "George Pleydell," is beyond question. But Mr. Pleydell is not to be dismissed as merely ingenious; he proves himself, in his last act, capable of inventing and working out a genuinely dramatic situation. Miss Marie Löhr, as Mr. du Maurier's wife, is waiting for the verdict and breaking down under the strain of it; her husband staggers in, dazed but acquitted, and she falls into his arms. A glass of champagne revives the exhausted man, he finishes the bottle, and then—in vino veritas—"I did it," he suddenly cries, and in a passion of self-disgust takes poison and falls dead. Mr. du Maurier, generally so easy and debonair, for once deserts the path of comedy and becomes an appallingly tragic figure, a haunting nightmare of a man. It is a notable bit of acting, which is sure to make the fortune of the play.

Duke of York's Theatre.

General Manager - - - HERBERT CHENERY.

On Monday next, September 6th, at 8.45 o'clock prompt,

Miss HORNIMAN'S COMPANY

IN

"Hindle Wakes"

A Play in Three Acts,

By STANLEY HOUGHTON.

MRS. HAWTHORN ...	...	Miss LOUISE HOLBROOK
CHRISTOPHER HAWTHORN	...	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
FANNY HAWTHORN ...	...	Miss MURIEL PRATT
MRS. JEFFCOTE ...	...	Miss DAISY ENGLAND
NATHANIEL JEFFCOTE	...	Mr. HERBERT LOMAS
ALAN JEFFCOTE ...	...	Mr. KENNETH KENT
SIR TIMOTHY FARRAR	...	Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
BEATRICE FARRAR ...	...	Miss EVELYN HOPE
ADA	...	Miss HILDA DAVIES

ACT I. Scene 1. Kitchen of Hawthorn's House, 137, Burnley Road, Hindle. Bank Holiday, Monday, August 6th. 9 p.m.

Scene 2. Breakfast Room at the Jeffcote's House, Bank Top, Hindle Vale. The same Night. 10.30.

The Curtain will fall for 30 seconds only.

Scene 3. The Same. 1 o'clock a.m.

ACTS I. and III. The Same. Tuesday Evening.

Preceded at 8.10 by

"Converts"

A New Comedy, in One Act,

By HAROLD BRIGHOUSE.

First time on any Stage.

HERBERT SIMPKINS, a Pugilist		Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
WILL ASPINALL, DAISY SOMERSET	Of the Salvation Army	Mr. LICHFIELD OWEN / Miss EVELYN HOPE
JIM PONTIFEX, a Convert	...	Mr. HERBERT LOMAS

Scene—The Officer's Room in a Salvation Army Barracks, London.

TIME - THE PRESENT.

Both Plays produced under the direction of DOUGLAS GORDON.

PRINCES' THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, AT 7.30.

And EVERY EVENING AT 7.30.

MATINEES: Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday at 2.30.

ANDREW EMM SEASON.

THE DRAMATIC PRODUCTION

Dealing with Incidents of "London Life."

"When London Sleeps"

By CHARLES DARRELL.

David Englehcart, an Athlete, the Star of the Air		Mr. HENRY LONSDALL
Rodney Haynes		... Mr. ARTHUR POOLE
Bob Jones, alias Signor Robertio Jonesio, Proprietor of a Small Circus,		Mr. JOHN SARGENT
Mr. Furnaby Fuller, of Lincoln's Inn		Mr. GEORGE MITCHELL
The Hon. Bertie Broomhead, seeing life		Mr. VIVIAN HARBORD
Mark Blackwood, Waiter at Burlington Hotel, afterwards an Attendant at the White City		Mr. HUGH MONTGOMERY
P.C. Stone, on Night Duty		... Mr. TOM M. LLOYD
Winkles, Servant at Helliwell Mansion		Mr. ROBERT HEATON
Albert Shelton, a Bank Messenger		... Mr. J. HINNIGAN
Fearless Fernandez ...	of	... Mr. GEORGE JONES
Tumbling Tomaso ...	Signor Jonesio's	... Mr. WILSON LEA
Rhoda Reckless	Mammoth	Miss WINIFRED MILLS
Pierrot	Circus	... Miss ALICE HELIER
Enid Rowntree, of the Piebold Knockabouts		Miss GERTIE GOODSON
Phyllis, a Girl about Town		Miss DOROTHY WEST
Mary, a Maidservant		... Miss LIZZIE INGLES
Sammy Blythe, a New Hand in the Ring		... Mr. ANDREW EMM
Stifano Mordicano, an Italian Gymnast		... Mr. FRED IMBERT
Berry Thompson, the Man that didn't care		Mr. GEORGE JEFFRIES
Leila, Hilda's Child		Little VIOLET KEMPLEN
Adela		... Miss LOUIE HEATH
Reba	Slaves of the Temple of Somnath	Miss PHOEBE WESTERN
Paphos		... ... Miss GLASBY
Ketwish		Miss ETTIE WALDRON
Ethiopia		Miss EDITH CHARLES
Michmish		Miss GWYNNE ARTHURS
Olympas		Miss MARJORIE COOK
Carrie Jones, a Circus Rider		... Miss BESSIE WALTERS
Maudie de Frere, on the look-out		Miss CHRISTINE MIDDLETON
Signorina Robertio Jonesio, Bob's Missus		... Miss SUSIE BEAVEN
Hilda Carrode, a Woman with a past		Miss LILIAN HALLOWS
Queenie Carruthers, known as the White Queen of the Slack Wire ...		Miss ROSE RALPH

Circus Performers, Grooms, Guests at Helliwell Mansion, Frequenters of the Exhibition, etc.

ACT I. ... ... Signor Robertio Jonesio's Mammoth Circus

Life in a Circus. The New Acrobat that didn't suit. Double Duty in the Ring.
Love under Canvas. A Woman's Greatest Charm. Clouds and Sunshine.
The Queen of the Slack Wire. The New Clown. The Circus Rider's Child.
A Promise of Marriage. The Family Lawyer from London. Rodney Haynes
Meets an Old Friend. Love and Money. The Disappointed Fortune Hunter.
The Barrier Between Two Loving Hearts.

ACT II. Scene 1 ... A Room in Burlington House

The New Life. The Intercepted Letters. The Fear of the Law.
Rodney Haynes makes a Proposal. There are no Friends like Old Friends.
The Plot to Deceive Queenie. Sammy has a Plan.
The Search for the Missing Heiress.

Scene 2 ... ... Helliwell Mansion

The Nightbirds of London. Seeing Life. The Young Man from Shropshire.
Sammy's New Part. A Policeman's Duty.

Scene 3 ... ... Supper Room at Helliwell Mansion

When Decent London Sleeps. — Bertie Gains Experience. The New Arrival.
The Mistress of Helliwell Mansion. Two Women and a Man. The House of Sin.
Queenie Meets a Friend. The Plot that Failed.

ACT III. Scene 1 ... The Villa at St. John's Wood

Sammy meets with a Warm Reception. The Contents of a Pocket Book.
The Man of Her Choice. A Lady's Friend. A Mother's Love.
The Common Thief. For Her Child's Sake.

Scene 2 ... ... Rodney Haynes' Apartments

The Discharged Servant. The Conspiracy. The Mother and Her Child.
Desperate Means. A Friend in Need.

Scene 3 ... ... Queenie's Bedroom

The Other Woman's Child. The Sins of Daily Life. Temptations of London.
The Intruder. Vice and Virtue. A Wicked Revenge.
The Way to the Roof. For Dear Life's Sake.

Mechanical Change to the House Tops.

THE ESCAPE ON THE TELEPHONE WIRE.

ACT IV. Scene 1 ... ... Rodney Haynes' Apartments

The Self-made Prisoner. The Clever Rogue. The Last Attempt. Man to Man.
The Bride and the Bridegroom. The Unexpected Happens.

Scene 2 ... ... The White City

Sammy in Trouble. A Former Acquaintance. The Respectable Married Woman.

Scene 3 ... ... The Temple of Somnath

The Promise to Lead a Better Life. The Suttee. Strange Doings in a Strange Place.
Rodney Haynes Plays his Last Card. The Prayer that was Answered.

THE PRINCE'S.

"WHEN LONDON SLEEPS" REVIVED.

Mr. Andrew Emm resumed his season at the Prince's on Thursday evening, September 9, with a revival of Charles Darrell's long popular sensational drama of circus life and the vices that find full play after nightfall, When London Sleeps. After performances in the provinces in 1896, this lurid play, written in the pungent style which its author affects, reached the London district at the Shakespeare about Midsummer in the following year, when the part of the smiling villain, Captain Rodney Haynes, was sustained by the late Lester Collingwood, who filled it with marked success for hundreds of nights, during the many profitable tours of the piece. At the Prince's, this rôle is being played with most commendable suavity and plausibility by that versatile actor, Mr. Arthur Poole, who on Thursday had the audience with him, or against him, throughout Haynes's machinations. These include, it will be remembered, the attempt to throw the child of his former mistress, the ex-equestrienne, Hilda Carrode, down a trap into the Thames, and also a very nearly successful endeavour to make his cousin, the heiress and heroine, Queenie Carruthers, play actually the part of a fire-consumed Brahmin widow, in a supposedly mimic representation of the rities of Suttee, performed in the Temple of Somnath, at the White City (originally the India Exhibition at Earl's Court). Queenie is, of course, saved in the nick of time by her lover, David Engleheart, an athlete known as "The Star of the Air," and before this she justifies her own appellation of "The White Queen of the Slack Wire," by escaping along the telephone wire, with Hilda's child, Leila, on her back, from a house to which her naughty cousin had set fire. This exciting incident, with a mechanical change to the house-tops, is perhaps, the chief sensation scene in When London Sleeps, though the patrons of the Prince's perhaps derive equal satisfaction and enjoyment from the passages more patently bearing out the title. These take place outside and inside the notorious gambling-hell and night-club known as Helliwell Mansion, and run by Haynes with the assistance of Hilda. Thither Queenie had been decoyed by a false message relating to a supposed accident to Engleheart, and the principal person concerned in her rescue is Sammy Blythe, the former unsuccessful clown at Signor Robertio Jonesio's Mammoth Circus, who gains admission to the Mansion in the guise of a young woman from the country.

STRAND THEATRE, W.C.

SOLE PROPRIETORS: The EXECUTORS of the late MR. LOUIS MEYER.

Under the Management of JULIA NEILSON & FRED TERRY.

On Saturday, September 11th, at 8 o'clock, will be produced

'THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL,'

By Baroness Orczy and Montague Barstow.

Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.)	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Sir Percy Blakeney	... Mr. FRED TERRY
Sir Andrew Ffoulkes	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lord Anthony Dewhurst	... Mr. HENRY HEWITT
Lord Grenville	Mr. HAMPTON GORDON
Chauvelin (French Envoy)	Mr. PERCIVAL STEVENS
The Comte de Tournai	Mr. W. H. ROTHERHAM
The Vicomte de Tournai	... Mr. GEORGE OWEN
Armand St. Just	Mr. DUCAN YARROW
Hebert	Mr. CHARLES HARTOPP
Jellyband (Landlord of "The Fisherman's Rest")	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL
Jimmy Pitkin	Mr. EDGAR F. SCHULDHAM
Harry Waite	Mr. NEIL F. CURTIS
Brogard (Landlord of the "Lion d'Or")	Mr. JAMES CARTER-EDWARDS
Captain of the Guard	Mr. HERMAN GRIFFITHS
Mr. Hempseed	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Servant	Mr. SASSOON CUMMING
Aristocrat	... Mr. MARTIN RICCI
Chepy	Mr. GERALD JEROME
Citizen	Mr. BROUGHTY FERRIE
Messenger	Mr. WALTER ARMSTRONG
The Comtesse de Tournai ...	Miss WINIFRED RAE
Suzanne de Tournai	Miss PEARLA GARDNER
Sally Jellyband	... Miss DOROTHY DAVIS
Mere Brogard	Miss LIZETTE CARDOZO
Lady Portarles	Miss WINIFRED EVANS
Lady Blakeney	... Miss JULIA NEILSON

Stage Manager	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. GEORGE WYLEY.
Musical Director	MR. SYDNEY FFOULKES.
Advertising Manager	Mr. ALFRED POPE.
General Manager	Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT.

THE STRAND.

"THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL" REVIVED.

The Scarlet Pimpernel has long been bracketed with Sweet Nell of Old Drury among the most potent attractions in the repertory of Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson, and it has been revived again and again, and always with the same success, over half a dozen times, most often at the New. It once more gained the old enthusiastic reception as revived by the popular pair at the re-opening of the Strand for the autumn season on Saturday evening, September 11. The cast of this favourite drama of Baroness Orczy and Montague Barstow has undergone a good many alterations since the piece was last seen in the West

Waters, J.
Plays

The Palace Theatre

: : Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W. : :

ALFRED BUTT PRESENTS

BRIC=À=BRAC

Book and Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS and BASIL HOOD
Additional Scenes by LAURI WYLIE and ALFRED PARKER
Music by LIONEL MONCKTON and HERMAN FINCK
Produced by EDWARD ROYCE and TOM REYNOLDS

DRESSES BY PASCAUD (Paris), ELSPETH PHELPS, Miss FISHER, MICHARD SŒURS, ESTHER Ltd., Miss HASTINGS, ALIAS, SIMMONS, and MORRIS ANGEL from Designs by COMELLI

HATS BY MAISON LEWIS WIGS BY CLARKSON
MISS GERTIE MILLAR'S HATS BY ZYROT ET CIE.
TAILORING BY JOHNS & BONHAM AND MORRIS ANGEL
SHOES AND HOSIERY BY RAYNE'S AND BURNET'S

Sept 18

Cast

THE CHARACTERS APPEAR IN THE ORDER NAMED

Scene I ... ... A VILLAGE IN MUMMERSET

Anatole ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD
1st Girl ... ... Miss VINCENT
2nd ,, ... Miss ASTON
3rd ,, ... Miss WALLER
4th ,, ... Miss WHITE
5th ,, ... Miss FEATHERSTONE
6th ,, ... Miss HAMILTON
The Town Crier ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR

Mlle. Saphira ... ... Miss GINA PALERME
A Lady from U.S.A. ... Miss TEDDIE GERARD
The Young Squire ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
A Village Girl ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
The Punch and Judy Man Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Professor Bronchitis ... Mr. LAURI WYLIE
Polly Myrtle ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
The Squire's Daughter Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN

Musical Numbers—

OPENING CHORUS.
FIRE BRIGADE DANCE ... ... THE SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS
SONG "The Lover's Litany" ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD and CHORUS
SONG: "Naughty, Naughty One Gerrard" ... Miss TEDDIE GERARD assisted by Misses VINCENT, WALLER, WHITE, FEATHERSTONE, BYRNE and LAURIE
DUET: "Up in Town" ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and Mr. NELSON KEYS
SONG: "Chalk Farm to Camberwell Green" ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR and CHORUS SONG: "A Hundred Years Ago" ... ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and CHORUS

Scenery by ALFRED CRAVEN

BRIC=À=BRAC—continued.

Scene II ... ... CHEZ M. ANATOLE

Anatole, le grand Conturier Mr. A SIMON-GIRARD
Four Sales*ladies* ... The Misses NORTON, CAREW, BEVERLEY and HOLT
A Customer with a Grievance ... Miss GINA PALERME
A Prospective Bridegroom... Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS

Musical Numbers

SONG: "Anatole" ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD
SONG: "Parisienne" ... ... Miss GINA PALERME

Scenery by G. SACKMANN

Scene III ... ... BRIGHTON FRONT—FROM THE BACK

Four Holiday Makers, afterwards "The Incognitos" ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR, Miss TEDDIE GERARD, Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR and Mr. NELSON KEYS

Musical Numbers—

QUARTETTE: "On the Beach at Brighton" (Miss GERTIE MILLAR, Miss TEDDIE GERARD, OPENING CHORUS: "The Incognitos" ... (Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR and Mr. NELSON KEYS
SONG: "Keep off the Grass" ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR, assisted by the Whole Company
TOPICAL SONG ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
SONG: "Them Golden Bells" ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
QUARTETTE: "Hop Along" ... ... THE COMPANY
SONG: "Roses" ... ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and CHORUS

Scenery by ALFRED TERRAINE

Interval of Ten minutes

Scene IV ... ... "SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE"

Guy ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Claire ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
Armstrong ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
A Maid ... ... Miss ASTON

Scenery by G. SACKMANN

BRIC-À-BRAC—continued.

Scene V ... ... LA TOILETTE DE VENUS

Venus ... ... Miss LOTTIE WATTS | Mars ... ... Mr. DICK WEBB

Musicians—Miss AMOR and Miss CHERRY

Attendants—The Misses VINCENT, BYRNE, WALLER, FEATHERSTONE, NORTON and BEVERLEY

Frieze—The Misses FLACK, THORNE, WOOTTON, COOPER, HILLIER, LAURIE, HAMILTON, IRIS, FITZROY, ADAMS, SEEBRIGHT, HOLT, STUART, LARGE, GREEN and WHITE

Dancing Girls—THE SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS

Slaves—Messrs. CORBYN, DUNSFORD, STACEY and STEVENS

Musical Numbers—

1. INTRODUCTION
2. DANSE DES JEUNES FILLES
3. MARCHE
4. BACCHANALE

Scenery by AMABLE, H. CIOCCARI and J. JOLIVET

Scene VI ... ... ST. JAMES'S PALACE OUTSIDE ONLY

Polly ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
Anatole ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD
Two Lads who Blow In ... Mr. K. DOUGLAS and Mr. T. G. GRAHAM

The Optimist ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
The Pessimist ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
A Stranger ... ... Mr. K. DOUGLAS
The Most Famous Man ... Mr. T. G. GRAHAM

Musical Numbers—

CHORUS OF SANDWICHMEN
SONG: "Neville was a Devil" ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
DUET: "The Optimist and the Pessimist" ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR and Mr. NELSON KEYS

Scenery by G. SACKMANN

Scene VII ... ... ON THE TILES

A Jumping Jack ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
An Economist ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Lady Violet ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
A Lady from U.S.A. ... Miss TEDDIE GERARD
The Manager ... ...Mr. HUGH RENÉ
Canon Bafl ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
A Programme Girl ... ... Miss MARION PEAKE
A Patron ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
His Wife... ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Monsieur ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD

Madame ... ... Miss GINA PALERME
George Graves ... ... Mr. LAURI WYLIE
Peg o' my heart ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
G. P. Huntley... ... ... Mr. NELSON KEYS
Sir Arthur... ... ... Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS
Gaby ... ... Miss GINA PALERME
Sir Herbert ... ... Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Polly ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR
Anatole ... ... Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD

Musical Numbers—

SONG "Toy Town" ... ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR and SIXTEEN PALACE GIRLS
DUET "Economy" ... ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN and Mr. NELSON KEYS
SONG: "Glad to See You're Back" ... ... Miss TEDDIE GERARD and CHORUS
SEPTETTE ... Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN, Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR, Mr. NELSON KEYS, Mr. LAURI WYLIE, Miss GINA PALERME, Miss ELSA FLACK, Mr. DOUGLAS PHILLIPS
DUET: "I'm simply crazy over you" (Jean Schwartz) ... Miss GERTIE MILLAR and Mr. A. SIMON-GIRARD

Scenery designed by ARTHUR E. P. WEIGALL; painted by E. H. RYAN

Waters, J.
Plays

PALACE, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

From a Dry-point by E. Lander.

"BRIC-À-BRAC."

The PALACE
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W. MANAGING DIRECTOR ALFRED BUTT.

"BRIC-À-BRAC"

Book & Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS & BASIL HOOD
Additional Scenes by ARTHUR WIMPERIS, PARTLEY CUNNICK, DION CLAYTON CALTHROP, LAURIE WYLIE & ALFRED PASQUIER
Music composed by LIONEL MONCKTON AND HERMAN FINCK
Produced by EDWARD ROYCE & TOM REYNOLDS
New dances produced by DONALD CALTHROP

EVERY EVENING AT 8
MATINEES WED & SAT AT 2

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

2/14

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. EDWARD LAURILLARD.

To-Night, Tuesday, September 21st, 1915, at 8.15,

GEORGE GROSSMITH and EDWARD LAURILLARD present

"THE DUMMY"

A Comedy in Four Acts

By HARVEY J. O'HIGGINS and HARRIET FORD.

... ...	LAURI de FREECE
... ...	OWEN KOUGHWOOD
... ...	IRENE BROWNE
... ...	PEGGI ANDREWS
... ...	AMBROSE MANNING
	ARTHUR G. LEIGH
... ...	CECIL BEVAN
... ...	JULIAN ROYCE
... ...	BARBARA GOTT
... ...	OSWALD MARSHALL
	GEORGE SHELTON
... ...	ALFRED LOOSE
... ...	GEORGE WALTERS

ACTS I. & IV. The Sitting Room of a Suite in the Hotel Antwerp, New York.
ACT II. A Parlour in Hart's Gambling House.
ACT III. Hart's Bungalow in the Catskill Mountains.

Scenery by G. SACHAN

Produced under the direction of FELIX EDWARDES.

ERNEST BENHAM Stage Manager OSWALD MARSHALL

2/15

THE TIMES

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1915.

One of the strangest by-products of the war is the capture of the London stage by the New York crook. Not, of course, that he was altogether unknown here in an earlier and happier period, but the single spies of those days are now battalions. We have become so familiarized with crook's slang as almost to accept it for King's English. But custom cannot stale his infinite variety. There is the crook tragic and the crook comic, the sentimental crook and the crook of high fashion.

In The Dummy you have the crook comfortable. He and she, more especially she, have the household virtues, are handy at lighting fires, and go on cutting bread and butter. Though they kidnap children, they treat them tenderly, and obviously wouldn't hurt a fly. It seems hard that they should finally be caught and handcuffed, but the leading detective puts it all right by letting you know that their arrest is only pour rire. You gather that there is a real, downright villain somewhere in the background, of whom the comfortable crooks are only the tools, but he is never seen, and so there is nothing to mar the harmony of the evening.

Mr. Julian Royce and Miss Barbara Gott are the gentle kidnappers, assisted by Mr. George Shelton, whom it surprises you to find playing any other part than "pathetic Smee." The kidnapped are little Peggi Andrews, who is no less accomplished and much more juvenile than Mr. Crummles's Infant Phenomenon, and Mr. Lauri de Freece, who pretends to be a deaf-mute, for no obvious reason save the mere fun of the thing. Then there is a bustling detective, played by Mr. Ambrose Manning, of whom it is sufficient praise to say that he bustles unflaggingly. His bustling is evidently a stroke of art on the author's part, designed as a foil to the quiet comfortableness of the crooks. Otherwise there is not much art in The Dummy, but there is a good deal of laughter in it, and that is to be counted for a virtue in these hard times.

2 216
1

APOLLO THEATRE

TOM B. DAVIS ... ... LESSEE AND MANAGER.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Tom B. Davis.

Saturday Evening, September 25th, 1915.

At 8 o'clock,

Messrs. GEORGE GROSSMITH & EDWARD LAURILLARD

PRESENT

"THE ONLY GIRL"

A New Musical Play in Three Acts.

MUSIC BY VICTOR HERBERT.

BOOK BY HENRY BLOSSOM.

Book revised for the English Stage by FRED THOMPSON.

CAST:

Alan Kimbrough	an Author	KENNETH DOUGLAS
John Martin	a Lawyer	ALEC FRASER
Sylvester Ayre	a Broker	DAVY BURNABY
Andrew McMurray	a Painter	LAURENCE CAIRD
Saunders	a Valet	HERBERT VYVYAN
Ruth Wilson	a Composer	FAY COMPTON
Birdie Martin	John's Wife.	MABEL TWEMLOW
Margaret Ayre	Sylvester's Wife	MADELEINE SEYMOUR
Jane McMurray	Andrew's Wife.	ETHEL BAIRD
Patrice la Montrose	a Soubrette	MABEL RUSSELL
Ruby, Perle, Paula, Bennee, Violet, Viola	Friends of Patrice	DORRIE KEPPEL, VERA NEVILLE, KATHLEEN DAWES, WANDA DE BARON, MARGOT ERSKINE, PATIENCE SEYMOUR

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES:

ACT I. & II. Smoking-room in Kimbrough's Flat, Pall Mall, S.W.
ACT III. Kimbrough's Dining-Room.

TIME: THE PRESENT.

Waters, J.
Plays

Staged under the direction of SYDNEY ELLISON.

Orchestra under the direction of HOWARD TALBOT.

MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.30.

Business Manager } for Messrs. Grossmith and Laurillard — (LESLIE STILES Stage Manager } — (EDWARD SHALE

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Boxes, £1 1s. to £5 5s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s 6d., Last Row, 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open 10 to 10. 'Phone Gerrard 3243.

Nearest Station, PICCADILLY CIRCUS (Tube).

General Manager (for Mr. Tom B. Davis) .. .. A. C. BELSEY

The Weekly Dispatch.
(114th YEAR.)
LONDON; Carmelite House. E.C.
SEPTEMBER 26, 1915.

WAR-TIME ECONOMY IN CHORUS GIRLS.

New Musical Play that May Change a Fashion.

It was something of a change, at the Apollo Theatre, last evening to see a musical play with a chorus of only six; but, as "The Only Girl" aims at nothing more than being a neat and compact little comedy with some music—and a very tuneful score on the whole Victor Herbert has provided—the absence of a bustling crowd of charming girls made no alarming difference.

The author of "The Only Girl," Henry Blossam, is an American, and if he has a mission it is to show an audience in search of light amusement how comical the newly married (if henpecked) husband can appear when his fair partner gets into surroundings that do not suit her temper.

This play exploits with very good farcical humour the unhappy condition of three newly married men, and to such an extent that very little space is left for the sentimental section of the play.

What little there was of this was pleasantly handled by Mr. Kenneth Douglas and Miss Fay Compton. But the real—and much the most effective—features of the evening's entertainment were the splendidly infectious humour of Miss Mabel Russell's acting and the tuneful quality of some of the musical numbers.

J W.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ...

220

Waters, J.
Plays

By arrangement with Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

On THURSDAY, September 30th, 1915, and every Evening at 8.30.
Matinees every Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, at 3.

A New Farcical Comedy, entitled—

THE STORMY PETREL

By W. STRANGE HALL.

Characters—

Sir James Newburgh		Mr. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Admiral Heathersea, C.B.		Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
Dr. Stevens		... Mr. FRED GROVE
Dr. Tom Morland (his Assistant)		Mr. STEFF MACDONALD
The Rev. Edward Ellice		Mr. THOMAS A. BRAIDON
Jacob Bastock (a Gardener)		... Mr. C. A. WHITE
William, ex-A.B. (the Admiral's Servant) ...		... Mr. FRANK LACEY
Peter Turrock ... Members of the		Mr. EDWIN J. ARTHURS
Henry Swank ... Yokels' Deputation		Mr. LAURENCE STEVENSON
Frances Weir (the Admiral's Step-daughter)		... Miss MARGARET HALSTAN
Vivien (his Daughter)		... Miss MAISIE RICHARDSON
Louie (a Maid)		... Miss DAISY ATHERTON

Acts I. & II. - - Admiral Heathersea's Garden in the Village of Thresleton.
Act III. - - - - The Common in the Village of Thresleton.

TIME - THE PRESENT

Preceded at 2.30 and 8 o'clock, by

PAPERS OF STATE

A Dramatic Comedy in One Act, by CHARLES EDDY.

The Right Honourable Gibson Dunn, M.P. ...	Mr. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Gusta Leach (a Girl of the People) ...	... Miss VIOLET ENGLEFIELD
A Footman	... Mr. ROBERT ROWLAND

SCENE - Gibson Dunn's Library. 11 p.m.

... Theatre (Limited), London and Birmingham.

... For ... Mr. JERRARD GRANT ALLEN
... JERROLD ROBERTSHAW ... Mr. C. A. WHITE
... Mr. LAURENCE STEVENSON
... (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) ... Mr. W. H. SAVERY

CRITERION
THEATRE
Sept. 30
E
Orchestra Stall
B 33

THE TIMES
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1915.

Many of us seem to be deeply concerned just now about the psychology of the German people, but there are, surely, plenty of puzzles of that sort for the curious to play with nearer home. Take, for instance, The Stormy Petrel. Its author, being a man and a brother, must clearly have a psychology; and though you cannot guess what it is, you feel that, if you could, it would turn out to be something delightfully odd. For here is a mental state which has vague visions of gouty admirals, who try to rule the parish as though it were a flagship, vague reminiscences of Beatrice and Benedick, vague notions that there is something comic in buns for breakfast, and a vague plan of mixing up these other vague ingredients with the hope that they will somehow become a "farcical comedy." To be sure, many of the audience frequently laughed last night—and there is another psychological puzzle for the amateur. When once you start these psychological adventures you never know where they will lead you.

It is all very bewildering, though not, apparently, to the players, who seem to know quite well what they are doing and find it all "very capital," especially Miss Halstan (Beatrice) and Mr. Robertshaw (Benedick), both of them quite gay and debonair. Enviable players!

THE CRITERION.

"THE STORMY PETREL"; "PAPERS OF STATE."

Alike on its provincial production, at the King's, Glasgow, on July 25, 1907, and on its fresh trial performances at Richmond a month ago, Dr. W. Strange Hall's piece, The Stormy Petrel, was described as a comedy, and was played as such. On its presentation for the first time in the West End, on Thursday, September 30, by a company practically the same as appeared at Richmond, The Stormy Petrel was, however, labelled a farcical comedy,

1913
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT HELPED TO GET THE SHELLS.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1915.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

MAKER OF MUSICAL COMEDY.

We regret to announce the death at the age of sixty-three of Mr George Edwardes, the producer of plays. He had been in indifferent health for very nearly two years, and his internment in Germany, where he was taking a "cure" at Nauheim, near Frankfort, when the war broke out, rendered all chance of a complete recovery hopeless. Last week signs of the end came, and at his London home yesterday he passed away in his sleep.

He leaves a widow, an only son, D'Arcy, a captain in the 1st Royal Dragoons, now in France, and three daughters, two of them married.

The funeral will leave 11, Park-square West, Regent's Park, for Kensal Green Cemetery, at 11 a.m. on Thursday, and a requiem mass, for which the time has not yet been settled, will be said at Farm-street Church.

Daly's Theatre, of which Mr. Edwardes was the sole proprietor, will be closed for the first four days of this week. It will remain under the management of his eldest daughter, who has had control of it for nearly two years. She will have the assistance of Mr. Robert Evett as general manager.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT HELPED T
GET THE SHELLS.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1915.

MR. GEO. EDWARDES'S WILL

DALY'S THEATRE, ESTATES, AND HORSES.

The late Mr. George Edwardes by his will directs that the business of presenting plays at Daly's Theatre shall be carried on by his eldest daughter, Mrs. Sherbrooke, as manager, and by the other two executors, Mr. Robert Evett and Mr. E. J. Bigwood, named by him. They are to continue to carry on the business for so long as Mrs. Sherbrooke is satisfied it is advisable to do so.

Mr. Edwardes left his estate at Ogbourne, Wilts, and everything that was there at the time of his death to his only son, Captain Darcy Edwardes, to whom also he left his house, No. 11, Park-square, Regent's Park. His other house in Park-square, No. 6, he left to Mrs. Edwardes, as well as his place near Ascot, Winkfield Lodge.

His bloodstock farm at Ballykisteen, Limerick, Ireland, and all the horses and brood mares there; the business known as Daly's Theatre; and all his other theatrical properties and interests are left equally between Mrs. Edwardes and his four children.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 6th, 1915, and Every Evening at 8.15,

DORIS KEANE

IN

ROMANCE

A Play in a Prologue, Three Acts and an Epilogue,

By EDWARD SHELDON.

THE CHARACTERS
In the Prologue and Epilogue.

Bishop Armstrong ...	... ...	... Mr. OWEN NARES
Harry	His Grandchildren	... Mr. JACK HOBBS
Suzette		... Miss MURIEL HARVEY

THE CHARACTERS
In the Story.

Thomas Armstrong ...	(Rector of St. Giles')	... Mr. OWEN NARES
Cornelius Van Tuyl ...	(Of Van Tuyl & Co., Bankers)	... Mr. A. E. ANSON
Susan Van Tuyl ...	(His Niece)	... Miss DOROTHY RUNDELL
Miss Armstrong ...	(The Rector's Aunt)	... Miss AGNES THOMAS
Mrs. Rutherford ...		... Miss GRACE WIXON
Mrs. Frothingham ...		... Miss ANNIE HILL
Miss Frothingham ...		... Miss DOROTHY BELLEW
Mrs. Gray ..		... Miss STELLA RHO
Miss Snyder ...		... Miss MARGARET DUDLEY
Mr. Fred Livingston...	Guests of Mr. Van Tuyl	.. Mr. ARTHUR VEZIN
Mr. Harry Putnam ...		... Mr. J. J. DALY
Mr. Richard Morris ...		.. Mr. MATTHEW LAWRENCE
Mr. Neil Clarke ...		.. Mr. CYRIL DERINGTON
Mr. Frank Burroughs		. Mr. EDWIN UNDERHILL
Signora Vannucci ...	... ...	... Miss GILDA VARESI
M. Baptiste ..	(Maitre d'hotel at the Brevoort)	... Mr. ARTHUR de ROBIN
Achille	(Waiter at the Brevoort)	... Mr. GEORGE MERTENS
François	(Bell Boys at the Brevoort)	... Mr. HENRY CLIFTON
Eugene		... Mr. GEORGE LORD
Page	(At the Brevoort)	... Mr. FRED EMNEY, Jr.
Servant	(At Mr. Van Tuyl's)	... Mr. FREDERICK BEANE
Butler	(At the Rectory)	... Mr. F. MOTLEY WOOD
Mme. Margherita Cavallini	... ...	... Miss DORIS KEANE

Waters, J.
Plays

THE SCENES.

THE PROLOGUE—The Bishop's Study in his house on Washington Square. About ten o'clock New Year's Eve.

THE STORY—ACT I.—Over forty years ago at Cornelius Van Tuyl's house, 58 Fifth Avenue. A November Evening.

ACT II.—A Study in St. Giles' Rectory, East Eighth Street. The afternoon of New Year's Eve.

ACT III.—Late that night Mme. Cavallini's apartment in the Brevoort House. After her farewell appearance in "Mignon."

THE EPILOGUE—The Bishop's Study again. Midnight.

PLACE—New York. TIME—Now and the Sixties.

The Play Produced by A. E. ANSON.

Scenery by WALTER HANN & SON and JOHN LAW of New York.
Miss Keane's costumes by JOSEPH, New York; Madame BUCKLEY, New York; Acts II. and III. by Madame OSPOVAT, 69, New Bond Street.
Executed from Special Designs by Miss MARGUERITE O'KANE CONWELL.
Miss Muriel Harvey's costume by Madame MOORE, New Bond Street. Other costumes by MARY FISHER, Ltd.
Mens' costumes by MORRIS ANGEL & SON. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Furniture by OETZMAN & Co. Piano by HARRODS. Organ by THE ESTY ORGAN Co.
Victrola by WEST END GRAMOPHONE SUPPLY Co., Regent Street.

Matinees Every Thursday and Saturday at 2.15.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

1.	OVERTURE ...	... "Martha" ...	...	Flotow
2.	(a. BARCAROLLE	... "Tales of Hoffman" ...	...	Offenbach
	(b.	"Cavalleria Rusticana"	Arranged by George Wiegant
3.	(a. SELECTION ...	..." Samson and Delilah" ...	...	Saint-Saëns
	(b. HUMORESQUE	... ...	...	Dvorak
4.	MARCH ...	... "Beauties of Erin" ...	...	...

Musical Director - - - MAURICE JACOBI
Stage Manager - (for Doris Keane) - FREDERICK BEANE

Manager - (for Doris Keane) - LOUIS NETHERSOLE

D.Y.T.
6/10/15
Orch. Stall
No.

THE TIMES
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1915.

Romance would be better without its prologue and epilogue. They have no place in its artistic scheme and introduce a gramophone which has no place in any artistic scheme. It is the romance of a prima donna and a clergyman. The prima donna is a Venetian but speaks pure Tuscan. The clergyman is a New Yorker but speaks Anglican English. That alone would be quite good foundation for a romance. But there is much more in it than that.

A prima donna as seen on the stage—we mean, of course, not in her proper person but as imagined by a playwright—is the quintessence of romance. Her airs and graces, whims and caprices, are romantic. Her pet monkey (named here Adelina, after a rival prima donna) is romantic. Even her crinoline (the action passes in the sixties) is romantic. She drinks Chianti out of one of those romantically pot-bellied flasks. She has a romantic villa on the Lake of Como. The New Yorkers romantically yoke themselves to her carriage after her farewell performance, and a brass band tries to make "Yankee Doodle" sound romantic in her honour. She addresses them from the window romantically, and sinks romantically exhausted into the arms of her friends. In short, she is a romantic cabotine, which is what she cannot help being in every playwright's imagination.

And her romance is catching. She actually makes a New York banker romantic. He had once been her protector (Villa Millefleurs on the Riviera, oh, roses and rapture!), but gives her up, partly because he is in the fifties and getting tired, which is the prosaic reason, and partly for the romantic reason that she may have the chance of virtuously marrying the clergyman.

The dream of that virtuous marriage is her own particular and private romance. She sees herself by the simple clerical fireside, doing plain sewing or rocking the cradle. After the bonquets and the pet monkey the vision of domestic purity has romantic charms. But it is not to be. Rome and St. Petersburg and Paris are calling for her. The rival Adelina must not be left in possession of the field.

THE ROMANTIC CLERGYMAN.

And so she relinquishes her private romance, and the clergyman has to relinquish his. This clergyman, by the way, is even more romantic than the, indeed than any, prima donna. Most clergymen in fiction (save always Jane Austen's) are. While his enchantress is singing Mignon at the Opera he walks about in the snow praying for her. That is after he has discovered that the banker is, or was, her protector. The discovery is quite romantically managed. The banker lies like a gentleman, and it is the lady who, conscience-stricken, confesses the truth. Perhaps the clergyman, with all his romance, is a little too persistently, too professionally, the clergyman. He realizes the great line,

A Mr. Wilkinson, a clergyman, for though the playbill calls him Armstrong, you know better: his name must be Wilkinson. He thinks a prima donna is to be converted by Scriptural texts. He bids her pray, and finds himself suddenly kissing her and prepared to play "All for Love and the World well Lost." But—oh, romance!—it is the lady who converts him. She says her love for him has opened her eyes to the goodness of the world, and she means henceforward to lead a virtuous life for his sake. You suspect that at that moment she is more than ever a cabotine—admiring herself in the new part of a virtuous woman. But the author (an out-and-out romanticist) really, we think, means you to take her at her word. Well, it is the blessed privilege of romance that anything may happen in it, even the conversion of a prima donna.

Americans Attracted.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the first performance of the American comedy "Romance" at the Duke of York's Theatre on Wednesday evening was the number of Americans who were present to see it. The American colony in London is very loyal to its country, and it expresses its love of the homeland by giving a hearty welcome to plays and players who come to London from "God's own country." "Romance" is not a "crook" drama. More's the pity. In that line of dramatic art our dramatists and actors are "put to sleep" by American playwrights and players.

Commonplace and Very Long.

"Romance" is just a commonplace comedy about a very dull and uninteresting clergyman of the preach-at-all-times type who fell in love with an Italian opera singer in New York and failed to persuade her to marry him. There is material in it for a one-act play, but stretched out over a prologue, three acts, and an epilogue it seemed very, very long. Miss Doris Keane is an attractive young actress, and it is to be hoped that we will see her in a more convincing play than "Romance." Edward Sheldon, the author of the comedy, is a young American who has written several pieces. This is the first of them London has seen.

Lessee:
Mr. E. C. ENGELBACH.

Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

LYRIC THEATRE,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7th, 1915

THE CHRISTIAN

By HALL CAINE

John Storm	DERWENT HALL CAINE
Father Lamplugh	SIDNEY VALENTINE
Archdeacon Wealthy	RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Lord Robert Ure	H. A. SAINTSBURY
Horatio Drake	H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Brother Paul	E. H. BROOKE
Lord Storm	HENRY St. BARBE-WEST
Parson Quayle	WILLIAM PRIDDEN
Rosenberg	HENRY JAMESON
Manager of "Philharmonic"	ARTHUR BOWYER
Commissionaire	STANLEY WILSON
Waiter	MARCEL DENTY
Glory Quayle	ROMA JUNE
Polly Love	CHRISTINE SILVER
Mrs. Callender	RITA TOMKINS
Betty	MAISIE AYLING
Letty	HARRISON SHEFFIELD
Netty	MIRA KENHAM
Eliza	ALICE WHEATLEY

Members of Antiquarian Society; Members of John Storm's Mission Club, in Soho

Prologue	Peel Castle, Isle of Man
Act I.	The Saloon of the "Philharmonic," London
Act II.	John Storm's Mission Club, Soho
Act III.	Glory Quayle's Rooms
Act IV.	John Storm's Mission Club

Time: The Present

"THE CHRISTIAN" REVIVED.

According to the author's own statement, the version of The Christian revived with great popular success at the Lyric on Thursday, October 7, is the original one, which had so short a run at the Duke of York's in the autumn of 1899, and which redressed the balance by many and long-continued prosperous tours. However, all the same, one seems to catch up echoes of the second or "Sins of Society" version brought out at the Lyceum, at the end of August, 1907, in which Father Lamplugh, with his inveighing against the idle rich and the Pharasaical wearers of the cloth, was plainly paralleled with Father Bernard Vaughan, by having the Christian name of Bertram tacked on to him. Despite certain seemingly familiar touches in the dialogue, the original play has clearly been reverted to in the matters of the retention of the Philharmonic Music Hall, instead of the Frivolity Theatre, and of the Working Lads and Girls' Mission Club in Soho, instead of the pretentious Home of Refuge for ladies of the West-end pavements, which formed one of the sensational and controversy-provoking features of the Lyceum version.

ACT I.

The Drawing Room of No. 1, Rosetti Close. Sunday evening.

ACT II.

The Gardens of Nos. 1 & 2, Rosetti Close. Saturday afternoon.

The curtain will be lowered for a moment, during the Act, to indicate the lapse of a few hours.

ACT III.

SCENE 1.—On the road between London and Dover. 2 a.m.
SCENE 2.—The Gardens of 1 & 2, Rosetti Close. Sunday morning.

Intervals—After Act I., 10 minutes. After Act II., 8 minutes.

The play produced by W. BRIDGES ADAMS.

Miss Ashwell's dresses by Miss GORTON, 41, South Molton Street, W.

The other dresses by Mdme. LAVENDER.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Proprietress.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats

The Box Office (R. WYNNE) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 4032 Gerrard.

Waters, J.
Plays

Was it not Charlotte Brontë who talked of "cleverality"? There is enough and to spare of cleverality in Iris Intervenes at the Kingsway—smart sayings, improvised theories about everything, lawnmowerum pranks, castigation of social and particularly of suburban hypocrisies, apologies for Bohemianism, and a general air of high spirits and good humour. If it is also imitative and crude, that is natural enough in an author who is obviously quite young.

His heroine, the typical Bohemian, is at times a frank amorist, asking for kisses, but more often a manageress, who has blacked one man's eye and kicked another's ribs. Contrasted with her is the type of suburban respectability, a churchwarden who thinks low-cut dresses immoral as Tartuffe thought Dorine's. There is war between the two, churchwarden being outrageously rude to Bohemian and she retaliating by flirting with his foolish son, but peace is ultimately declared by the side of a broken-down motor-car somewhere on the Dover road, where Bohemia and Suburbia, temporarily stranded, theorize about themselves and become conscious of one another's qualities as well as infirmities. To account for the motor-car adventure there is a cock-and-bull story of a chase for a stolen document into which it would be unprofitable to enter.

Miss Lena Ashwell plays the truant, a type for which she seems to have a foible, and, of course, dominates the stage, out-arguing all opponents or overpowering them by a passion of tears or else simply shouting them down. The lady is represented as of Russian origin, and certainly needs no scratching to reveal the Tartar. Mr. A. E. George contrives to give a certain freshness to the over-familiar stage-type of respectability-scarifier, and Mr. Owen Roughwood plays with a pleasant air of ease. Iris Intervenes had an entirely favourable reception on Saturday night.

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

ORIGINAL DISPATCH

OCTOBER 17, 1915.

PLENTY OF FUN IN 'IRIS INTERVENES.'

ENTERTAINING CONTRASTS OF SUBURBIA AND BOHEMIA AT THE KINGSWAY LAST NIGHT.

Mr. John Hastings Turner, the young soldier author, home from the war, whose play, "Iris Intervenes," was presented by Miss Lena Ashwell at the Kingsway Theatre last evening, is a welcome addition to London playwrights. He is witty and unconventional and has a real sense of characterisation.

The play is a novelty by reason of the fact that it is run entirely by women, who even managed the lights and shifted the scenery. Miss Muriel Pratt was actress manageress.

The author has a very amusing story to tell of a London suburban family being invaded by a charming but wholly irresponsible woman who has come from Russia to live down the nine days' wonder of a domestic scandal. The fun arises naturally in Mr. Turner's play out of the curious contrast of character and point of view caused by the bringing together of such curious elements as are represented by the suburban and the Bohemian.

The love-sick suburban boy, laughed at because he falls in love with a woman older than himself, complains that "if you wish to express your soul and want to see the stars people say you are drunk." And the woman asks, "Why are we taught to be shy of everything that is splendid?" The cry of the suburbs is quite different. But, cleverly enough and with little straining after effect, the author reconciles the views of Bohemia and Suburbia and places the curious, half-tamed, wholly charming adventuress in the care of the man whose love is tempered by the philosophy that "illusions are necessary with most women to make them possible."

It is a capital entertainment with hardly a dull minute in it, for as well as being amusingly written it is most cleverly acted by Miss Ashwell, Miss May Whitty, Mr. A. E. George, Mr. James Stanners, and all the others engaged in it.

J. W

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT HELPED TO GET THE SHELLS.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1915.

THEATRES AS USUAL.

LIGHTING ORDER NOT TO AFFECT HOURS OF OPENING.

The new lighting order for London has not yet affected the business of the London theatres and music-halls. The West End managers admit that the effect of the Zeppelin raid was to keep away some of their patrons, particularly so from the cheaper parts of their houses, but since then there has been a recovery, and the receipts of most theatres for the first two evenings of the present week compare favourably with the corresponding evenings in last year. In some instances there is an increase.

Sir Herbert Tree said that he intends to keep to the usual hours of opening for the new play that he is to produce at His Majesty's Theatre on October 23. Mr. Vedrenne will make no change at the Royalty Theatre. Messrs. Laurillard and Grossmith, who are presenting plays at the Gaiety, Queen's, Prince of Wales, the Globe, and Apollo Theatres, believe in "business as usual." Mr. Frederick Harrison says the same, and Mr. Alfred Butt, who is manager of several West End theatres and music-halls, says that so far he has discovered no change in business that would influence him to change the hours of opening.

The churches of the City of London are falling into line with the new lighting regulations. From Sunday next the evening service at St. Bartholomew the Great will take place at 3 p.m. and that at St. Peter, Cornhill, at 4 p.m.

Daily Mail

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1915.

ONE need not wear evening dress in the stalls nowadays. The managers of the London theatres are, very wisely, encouraging their patrons to do as they please. Time was when a tweed suit looked conspicuous in the stalls of a fashionable theatre, but that time has gone. The arrival of khaki put the conventional black out of conceit with itself. The approach of winter, the shortage of taxicabs, and the discomfort—for many people—of getting to and from the theatres in light clothing have combined to bring home to playgoers, as well as managers, the common-sense view that the evening-dress convention is not in accordance with the spirit of the times.

The people of the theatres—managers, actors, and actresses—are making a splendidly plucky fight to keep the flag flying, and, as they are trying to give London some opportunity to think of other things for an hour or two, they only ask the public to help them—therefore evening dress does not matter. "Take off your hat and enjoy yourself" is what the manager says.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT HELPED TO GET THE SHELLS.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1915.

MORE MATINEES.

NEARLY ALL THEATRES NOT TO CHANGE THEIR HOURS.

An informal meeting of the West End theatrical managers was held yesterday to discuss the earlier opening of theatres or the advisability of giving daily matinées and no evening performances. It was decided to make no change from the ordinary custom.

If it should later be discovered that the public wishes an earlier hour or will not patronise evening performances, or demands an increased number of matinées, the managers will meet its wishes. But until such time as the public indicates a desire for a change, or the authorities advise one, the West End theatre managers will open their theatres as usual.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie, managers of the Royalty Theatre, where "The Man Who Stayed at Home" is being presented, hold a different opinion, and, beginning with next Monday, will give daily matinées and no evening performances. "The temporary change of policy is suggested," they state, "by the difficulty of getting about in the darkened streets."

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT IS TRYING TO DRAG OUT THE TRUTH.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1915.

THEATRE FROM 5.30 TO 8 P.M.

Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie have arranged, in addition to giving daily matinées of "The Man Who Stayed at Home" at the Royalty Theatre, London, to try the experiment of early evening performances of the same play, starting at 5.30 and finishing at 8 p.m. The first of these will be given next Saturday and will be repeated every Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday until further notice.

As the matinées of "The Man Who Stayed at Home" are timed to finish at 4.15 there will be an interval of forty-five minutes, during which the theatre will be swept and ventilated; and, according to Mr. Vedrenne's forecast, the company will occupy their brief rest between the two performances with a light meal in the theatre.

ALDWYCH THEATRE

ALDWYCH, W.C.

Licensee & Manager - - DONALD BAYLIS
Lessee - - - J. BANNISTER HOWARD

To the Editor,

Dear Sir,

The pleasure of your representative's company is requested on Saturday Evening, October 9th, at 7.30 o'clock, to witness the Revival of

"THE PRODIGAL SON"

By HALL CAINE

CAST

Stephen Magoussen, Governor of Iceland ..	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Anna, his Wife	Miss CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
Oscar Stepheason, Magnus Stepheason } their Sons	Mr. MILTON ROSMER Mr. BASIL GILL
Oscar Neilson, the Factor	Mr. W. R. STAVELEY
Helga Neilson, his Daughter	Miss VIOLET FAREBROTHER
Thora Neilson, Oscar Neilson's Daughter Elin, Thora's Daughter .. .. }	Miss GLADYS PURNELL
Margaret Nailson, the Factor's Sister	Miss MARY BROUGH
The Sheriff	Mr. GEO. BRUNSWICK
Dr. Olsen	Mr. W. J. ROBERTSON
Neils Fensen	Mr. C. PARDOE WOODMAN
The Pastor	Mr. HENRY NELSON
Director of Casino	Mr. FRANK HARRISON
Eric Arnasson	.. Mr. H. WATSON
Madame Pandher	Miss KITTY CARTERET
Gudrun	Miss VIOLET BLYTH PRATT

Act 1 - - - - - The Inn Farm. (Autumn)

One Year Passes.

Act 2 - - - Government House, Iceland. (Summer)

Five Years Pass.

Act 3 - - - A Casino on the Riviera. (Spring)

Ten Years Pass.

Act 4 - - - - The Inn Farm. (Winter)

THE ALDWYCH.

"THE PRODIGAL SON" REVIVED.

Mr. Hall Caine, who has just successfully made his re-appearance as a dramatist at two West End theatres, seems to have but a short memory with regard to performances of his popular plays. He said the other day (and the statement was allowed to pass) that The Prodigal Son had not been seen in London proper since it was given at Drury Lane as the autumn drama for 1905. As a matter of fact, this most picturesque Icelandic drama of the artistic temperament, family cross-currents, and the gambling fever was revived at the Adelphi at the end of February, 1907, immediately after a seven weeks' run of The Bondman, which had been transferred from Drury Lane. On this occasion George Alexander was succeeded as Oscar by Mr. Walter Hampden, and Miss Nancy Price by Miss Cecil Cromwell as the selfish and evil-working Helga; whilst the author's sister, the late Miss Lily Hall Caine, re-appeared as Thora and Elin, and Henry Neville, Mr. Frank Cooper, and Austin Melford, as the Governor of Iceland, Magnus, and the Factor, Oscar Neilson.

ALDWYCH THEATRE, STRAND

Waters, J.
Plays

The Alhambra Theatre

LEICESTER SQUARE, W.C.

Dear Sir,

The pleasure of your Company is requested on ~~MONDAY~~, OCTOBER 11th, to witness the first performance of

"NOW'S THE TIME!"

A Musical Time-Piece in 2 hours and 10 chimes

By COSMO GORDON LENNOX and C. H. BOVILL

Music by MAX DAREWSKI and WILLY REDSTONE

Should it be inconvenient for you to be present, I shall esteem it a favour if you will kindly return the enclosed vouchers, when I shall have much pleasure in sending you tickets for any evening more convenient.

For the convenience of the Press "NOW'S THE TIME!" will commence at 8.15 sharp on the first night.

Yours faithfully,

ANDRE CHARLOT,

Managing Director.

"NOW'S THE TIME!"

WITH

PHYLLIS MONKMAN

CLYDE COOK

JACK MORRISON

ALFRED AUSTIN

BEATRICE LILLIE

GUY MAGLEY

SERGE MOROSOFF

S. W. WYNDHAM

GEORGE BAKER

AND

LEE WHITE

MARGOT KELLY

AND

GEORGE MOZART

Manager, HERBERT BRYAN. Musical Director, JOHN ANSELL.

SAVOY THEATRE,

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietors ... . THE SAVOY THEATRE AND OPERAS LTD.
Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. RUPERT D'OYLY CARTE, Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Lessee and Manager - Mr. H. B. IRVING

TO-DAY, OCT. 16th, 1915, at 2.30, and TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING at 8.15

THE CASE OF LADY CAMBER

A Play in Four Acts

By HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL.

Lord Camber	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Sir Bedford Slufter, F.R.C.P.	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Harley Napier, F.R.C.S.	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Buckle	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
Lady Camber	Miss MAY LESLIE STUART
Lady Matilda Rye, Lord Camber's Mother	Miss KATE BISHOP
Peach	Miss POLLIE EMERY
Esther Yorke	Miss JESSIE WINTER

ACT I. Scene: Mr. Napier's Library in Brook Street (Afternoon)
(Six Weeks elapse.)

ACT II. .. Lady Camber's Sitting Room in Mr. Napier's House (Morning)
(Ten Minutes elapse.)

ACT III. ... Same as Act I.

ACT IV. .... The Same (the following Morning)

There will be only Five Minutes' Interval between Acts III. and IV.

The Play Produced for Mr. Irving by Mr. HOLMAN CLARK.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. LESLIE OSWELL
General Manager ... ... Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

Waters, J.
Plays

THE TIMES

MONDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1915.

DAYLIGHT PREMIERE.

Mr. H. B. Irving's New Play at the Savoy.

In his new play, produced at the Savoy Theatre on Saturday, Mr. Vachell takes a double advantage of the medical profession: he uses them for both his subject-matter and his technique. His subject-matter is a medical "case," one of those mysterious but convenient maladies (described vaguely as cardiac) which give the sufferer all the activities of health when the story demands action, and, when the sufferer is getting in the way of the story, make haste to a fatal ending.

Thus Lady Camber was picking up wonderfully in Dr. Napier's nursing home, under the care of the doctor and a pretty nurse, but being misled (by a jealous servant) into suspecting the pretty nurse of an intrigue with her husband, Lord Camber, she abused them both like a fishwife and died within an hour, obligingly clearing the stage for the further history of the doctor and the pretty nurse who, being in love, had to be left happy, though not until after the doctor had wrongfully suspected the nurse of poisoning Lady Camber and being Lord Camber's mistress.

For a doctor to fall in love with a pretty nurse is, of course, nothing out of the common, but that is not the only soft spot in Dr. Napier's heart. He has a way of ministering to the needs of his author which almost amounts to indulgence. Thus, whenever the author wants his stage for other people, Dr. Napier kindly says that he and his colleague will go and consult together in the next room. And when the author requires the doctor himself on the stage nothing will induce the doctor to leave it—no, not even the imminent death of his patient, whom he calmly hands over to his colleague, and just asks about, now and then, through the speaking-tube. But then Mr. Irving was so grave and professional a doctor that the audience on Saturday agreed to accept these little ways as sound orthodox practice, and, further, being amused by the humour of Mr. Holman Clark as the medical colleague, and charmed by the dainty nurse of Miss Jessie Winter, heartily applauded the whole affair.

Mr. H. B. Irving's unconventional action of giving the first performance of a new play at a Saturday matinée instead of presenting it in the evening affected neither the performance of "The Case of Lady Camber" nor the reception of it. But there was no reason why it should have been otherwise: Mr. Horace A. Vachell provided Mr. Irving with an interesting play, and Mr. Irving appeared in it surrounded by a most excellent company of players.

"The Case of Lady Camber" is the case of a lady whose health baffled the doctors. That particular medical aspect of the case was responsible for much instruction in the fashionable treatment of society patients. It had its amusing side, mainly because Lady Camber was a society lady only through her marriage with a Peer—in other days she had worn "pink tights and a Gainsborough hat" and danced at the Jollity Theatre—and was much attached to an old servant with a horror of everything slow but sloe gin.

Lady Camber's health was not the main line interest in Mr. Vachell's play. Her jealousy of her husband was, of course, the cause of a collision, or of two collisions. And if it wrecked her life, upset the life of her worthless husband, and very nearly ruined the happiness of a couple of other, quite innocent, people—a pretty hospital nurse and a brilliant young doctor—it certainly served, as well, to lead up to many incidents that had the merit of being theatrically interesting. The author of this new play has given his stage interpreters ample opportunities to make acting successes, and carrying the central, or love interest, Mr. Irving and Miss Jessie Winter left nothing wanting that could add to the effectiveness of some admirably conducted scenes.

It was quite a revelation, too, to find Miss May Leslie Stuart, who was making her first appearance in a play of serious interest, carrying with very considerable power a big scene that occupied nearly the whole of one act. She gave a performance that was full of character, and in one big passionate scene that had to dominate everything and everybody on the stage she came through with very great credit. Miss Pollie Emery is also among those who must be accorded a special word of praise.

J. W.

Waters, J.
Plays

KINGSW
GT. QUE
Miss LENA ASH
Saturday
Evening
Oct. 16
Stall
No
This to be retained

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16TH AT 8.

And Every Evening.

Matinee, Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

IRIS INTERVENES,

By John Hastings Turner.

Mary Cumbers	May Whitty
Henry Cumbers (in the employ of the Stanbury-Vandemeer Automobile Co.)	A. E. George
Tristram Cumbers	James Stanners
Joan (maidservant to the Cumbers)	Lorna Lawrence
Iris Olga Iranovna	Lena Ashwell
James Caligula Stene	Mr. Henry Deas
George Eynsham	Frank Mayeur
Anton (manservant next door)	A. E. Filmer
Muriel Hudson	Muriel Pratt
Andrea Romanoff	Owen Roughwood
Mrs. Gus Weedlemay	Auriol Lee
Rev. Theodore Heslop	W. E. Langley
Ferdinand Madders	Francis Serle

NEW THEATRE
E
21/10/1915
Orch. Stall
J 154
RIGHT
To be retained

On THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21st, 1915, and every Evening at 8.15.

MATINEES—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.

Mr. PERCY HUTCHISON

Will produce (by arrangement with SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and Miss MARY MOORE)

An entirely New Farcical Comedy, entitled:

"STOP THIEF"

By CARLYLE MOORE.

The Characters are set in the order in which they first appear.

Joan Carr	Miss MARGARET SWALLOW	Rev. Mr Spelain	Mr J. H. BREWER
Mrs. Carr	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON	Jack Doogan	Mr PERCY HUTCHISON
Caroline Carr	Miss CECILY TEMPLE	Joe Thompson	Mr I. G. THURSTANS
Madge Carr	Miss ELSIE STRANACK	Sergeant of Police	Mr FRANK LACY
Nell	Miss GERTRUDE LANG	Police Officer O'Malley	Mr. FRED FORREST
William Carr	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE	Police Officer Clancy	Mr. HENRY DANIELL
James Cluney	Mr. MARSH ALLEN	Police Officer Casey	Mr. WILLIAM ALBERT
Mr Jamison	Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON	Police Officer O'Brien	Mr HENRY SALVER
Dr Willoughby	Mr. HAYDEN COFFIN	Chauffeur	Mr. M. ROCHFORD

The Play produced by Mr. Percy Hutchison.

Synopsis of Scenes.

Act I.	.. ..	Residence of Carr's, Providence R.I.
Act II.	.. ..	Same as Act I
Act III.	.. ..	Same as Act II

INTERVALS—10 minutes between The Best Man and Act I.; 7 minutes between Acts I. and II.; and 7 minutes between Acts II. and III.

Miss Illington's dresses by JAY'S, Regent Street. Miss Lang's dresses by CHARLES LEE & SON, Ltd.
Miss Temple's dresses by MADAME SOUTER, 2, Hanover S
Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDES, Ltd., Lond
The Theatre Disinfected and Perfumed with SPRAGUE'S MASTI

Preceded at 8.15 and at Matinees at 2.30 by a

"THE BEST MA

By DAISY McGEOCH and CECIL

The Bride	.. ..
The Bridegroom	.. ..
The Best Man	.. ..

Programme of Music.

Overture	.. ..	"Le Caid" ..
Selection	.. ..	"To night's the Night" ..
Valse Bacchanale	.. ..	.. .. ..
Selection	.. ..	"Tales of Hofmann" ..

Musical Director—Mr. ALBERT CAZABON

Business Manager	.. ..	for
Stage Manager	.. .. ..	Mr. Percy Hutchinson
Business Manager	.. ..	(for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary M

On Thursday evening during the first performance of the American play "Stop Thief" a black cat lay comfortably rolled up asleep at the foot of the stairs leading to the prompt side of the stalls. Now everyone knows that the luckiest thing in a theatre is a black cat, and why every theatre does not keep a stock of them puzzles me. Well! anyhow, there was a black cat at the New Theatre on Thursday evening, and when the play was over and I heard applause I felt that after all there must be a whole lot in that black cat superstition, for a more foolish play than "Stop Thief" I cannot call to mind.

The Lucky Black Cat.

It is an American thief play, and compared with some others we have seen it is very old-fashioned.

Accent that Got Lost.

As seen at the New Theatre, all the characters but one spoke with an English accent, and in some cases wore American police uniforms. One character, the thief, had a pronounced American accent when he arrived at the scene but lost it when the scuffle for watches and rings began. It was a pity to see Miss Marie Illington in a play in which—in order to get a laugh—all the characters crawled on their hands and knees on the floor. To use an Americanism, it was playing it a little low down

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR.)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

ORIGINAL DISPATCH

OCTOBER 24, 1915.

The Champion Laugher.

THERE can be no doubt about it, the real "scream" at the Criterion Theatre on Wednesday evening—when the new farce, "A Little Bit of Fluff," by Walter W. Ellis, was produced—was the young man in the audience who screamed with laughter from curtain-rise to curtain-fall. He sat in the centre of the stalls, and laughed so heartily, so loud, and so long, that for two whole acts he disputed interest with the actors on the stage. Eventually, however, his friends transferred him to the back row of circles—much to the disgust of a very fat and grim-looking woman in the front row of the pit, who wanted her play-going done in silence.

They Should Hire Him.

That young fellow, if he could only be restrained a little, could be trained to help any funny play along the path of popularity with his infectious laughter. I was awfully sorry Mr. "Scrubby" Ponsonby was not at the Criterion Theatre. He loves a laugh, and knows a good one when he hears it.

A Very Daring Farce

One quality this farce at the Criterion Theatre possesses in abundance—it keeps the audience in good humour. It has a splendid example of the husband of old-time farce, who cannot tell the truth to his wife, and a faithful friend of the milksop brand who is forced, against his will to try to look like a rake. Many of the situations are genuinely comical, and many of them have done duty in farce before now. Some of the lines are, to say the very least, as daring as anything ever spoken in an English farce, but the audience on Wednesday revelled in them. Mr. James Welch was to have played, but did not (owing to indisposition), and Mr. George Esmond, who took his place, made as much of the part as anyone could—which means he was excellent.

NOTICE.

The Management regrets to announce that owing to indisposition

Mr. JAMES WELCH

will be unable to appear to night.

The part of "John Ayers" will be played by

Mr GEORGE DESMOND.

"A LITTLE BIT OF FLUFF"

CRITERION THEATRE

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

SIR HERBERT TREE'S AUTUMN PRODUCTION.

MAVOURNEEN

A COMEDY in Three Acts, by LOUIS N. PARKER.

Waters, J.
Plays

Saturday, October 23rd, at 7.30.

Subsequent Evenings at 8.15.

MAVOURNEEN

King Charles II	MALCOLM CHERRY (By courtesy of Vedrenne & Eadie).
Buckingham	GERALD LAWRENCE
Arlington	W. GAYER MACKAY
Bristol	ROY BYFORD
Ashley	HENRY BYATT
Berkeley	CHARLES DORAN
Sidney Montagu	REGINALD OWEN
Samuel Pepys	EDWARD SASS
Father O'Rafferty	C. V. FRANCE
Chiffinch	BEN FIELD
The Host of the Bear	JULIAN CROSS
A Drawer	VERNON CRABTREE
Usher	DONALD YOUNG
Hafiz	PERCY BATES
Queen Catherine	ATHENE SEYLER
Lady Castlemaine	ALICE CRAWFORD
Lady Arlington	VIOLET GRAHAM
Mrs. Myddleton	JOAN CHALONER
Mrs. Roberts	GEORGINA MILNE
Miss Frances Brooke	ESME BIDDLE
Miss Margaret Brooke	ISABEL ALISON
Mrs. Pepys	DOROTHY PARKER
Moyra	BLANCHE STANLEY
Mercer	SYBIL SPARKES
A Maid	IRENE DELISSE
AND
Patricia O'Brien	LILY ELSIE

PERIOD OF THE PLAY.

IN GOOD KING CHARLES' GOLDEN DAYS.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. SCENE 1. Moyra's Room in Castle O'Brien.
SCENE 2. The Courtyard of the Bear Inn, Drury Lane.
ACT II. The Card Room, Whitehall Palace.
ACT III. The Pantiles, Tunbridge Wells.

Scenery painted by JOSEPH HARKER.

Programme of Music.

The Overture and Incidental Music arranged by PERCY E. FLETCHER from traditional airs and dance tunes of the period, and from the works of contemporary composers, including Lulli, Matthew Locke (Composer-in-ordinary to Charles II.), John Banister (leader of the King's private band). "Beauty Retire" was set to music by Samuel Pepys.

AFTER ACT I.		AFTER ACT II.
GAVOTTE AND MINUET FROM "MANON"	Massenet	IRISH REEL—"MOLLY ON THE SHORE"	Grainger
RIGAUDON	Chaminade	FOLK TUNE AND FIDDLE DANCE ...	Fletcher
MENUET DE LA REINE	Saint Saëns	FROM THE COUNTRY SIDE	Coates

Costumes and Properties designed and supervised by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

Lily Elsie's Dresses in Act I. Scene 1, Act II. and Act III. carried out by LUCILE, Ltd.
All other costumes by B. J. SIMMONS and B. LEVERICK. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

First Matinee Saturday, October 30th & every following Saturday.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR—PERCY E. FLETCHER.
STAGE MANAGER—ALFRED BELLEW. ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER—WILLIAM ABINGDON.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s. 0d., £3 3s. 0d.; £1 11s. 6d. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s., 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

For the convenience of visitors to His Majesty's Theatre, the Management of the Carlton Hotel beg to announce that the Grill Room is open for Supper until midnight.

Nearest Tube and District Railway Stations—Piccadilly Circus and Charing Cross.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. OZONAIR, LTD., 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

NOTICE—The Refreshment Bars are open as usual during the Performance; but owing to the new regulations, no Alcoholic Liquors can be served after Ten o'clock.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread & Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

WARRINGTON & CO., PRINTERS, GARRICK STREET 23.10.13

Waters, J.
Plays

The Weekly Dispatch.
(115th YEAR)
LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.
OCTOBER 24, 1915.

LILY ELSIE BACK TO CONQUER.

Splendid Acting and Her Old Triumphal Charm in "Mavourneen."

By OUR DRAMATIC CRITIC.

If there was a doubt up to last night about Miss Lily Elsie being a great actress it no longer existed when the curtain fell on the last act of "Mavourneen" at His Majesty's Theatre. This first performance of Louis N. Parker's play was nothing less than a triumph for the actress; such a triumph as is rarely ever achieved in any theatre. She made us forget that the author had no very new story to tell, and carried the audience with her.

The adventure of the Irish girl, and not the Court of King Charles the Second, in which she found herself, was under the circumstances the chief interest. King and courtiers on that stage last evening were little more than Miss Elsie's chorus, and she won and held her place there by the aid of her own charm, her delightful personality, and her splendid resourcefulness.

A VERY GALLANT BOY.

"Mavourneen" is a set of three very beautiful pictures serving as the background to a very simple story of a young Irish girl who, to escape marriage at home with the worthless fellow chosen by her father to be her husband, flies to London. There is a glimpse of Patricia's home; a glimpse, too, of the old priest who educated her and told her of the great world outside her ruined castle; and then—a swift change and the scene is London, "in good King Charles's golden days." Lovely Patricia O'Brien—dressed as a boy "because it was safer so on the road from the coast to London," she says—rides gallantly astride a horse, a sword on her hip, into the midst of a group of courtiers from Whitehall Palace. One thought of D'Artagnan in that scene—a very young D'Artagnan, ready with wit and a sword, in strange company to meet any attack. It was a scene full of colour and life, and in the fashionable throng of courtiers the girl, defending herself as she thought a young man should do, stood out—for all that travelled-stained costume—a young prince.

In a play of the period of the "golden days" one need not insist on incidents that convince, and the author of "Mavourneen" would probably be one of the last to ask us to do so. Therefore when we see his young heroine—still masquerading as a youth—fighting a duel with a hot-headed young fellow and a moment later helping with her sword to beat off a crowd that mobbed the Queen's chair, we accept it as the best and most picturesque way in which Patricia could secure the royal notice and enter the Court. For this was a romantic adventure, remember, and when the girl, kneeling to the Queen, let loose her hair and cried out, "I am no boy, I am a girl," the Queen took her forthwith to Whitehall and Patricia became a maid of honour.

PATRICIA IN A FAIRYLAND.

In years to come no doubt—when the dust of doubt gathers on those "golden eras"—all the stories told of the Court of King Charles II. will be placed with such records as we possess regarding the story of Cinderella and other fairy tales, and Mr. Parker simply anticipates that action and gives us a royal court in Fairyland for the third, and last, act of "Mavourneen." It is of course a charming phantasy: a fairyland where the "good people" are very good and the bad people are not very, very bad. In that fairyland Patricia O'Brien repels the temptation of a king; she even reconciles him with his queen. Her young lover—he upon whom she drew sword the first day she came to London Town—came back from the wars to love her, and from across the sea came the old, old man the priest, to be made a bishop by the Queen, that he might be fit to stand on the altar and marry Patricia.

That third act had a charming fairy-story ending for this romance of golden days. It was a revolutionary end. For Patricia had thought that her mission to London had ended, and poorer than she came—and dressed once more as a boy, yet with her wavy hair hanging on her shoulders—she was turning away sword in hand to travel alone the road to her far-off home. It was a beautiful ending. What a stage picture, too. It will draw all London. What a promise, too, in the pose and action of the young woman garbed as a boy—if some great author is inspired to write a drama of Joan of Arc.

J. W.

By arrangement with Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

On WEDNESDAY, October 27th, 1915, and every Evening at 8.30.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30.

JAMES WELCH

In a New Farce—

"A LITTLE BIT OF FLUFF"

By WALTER W. ELLIS.

John Ayers	Mr. JAMES WELCH
Bertram Tully	Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Nixon Trippett	Mr. STANLEY LATHBURY
Dr. Bigland	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
Pamela Ayers	Miss MARJORIE MAXWELL
Maimie Scott	... Miss RUBY MILLER
Aunt Hannah	Miss LILIAN TALBOT
Ursula	... Miss VIOLET GOULD
Chalmers	Miss DULCIE GREATWICH

Act I. Sitting-room in the Ayers' Flat, St. Mark's Mansions, Kensington. (10 a.m.)
Act II. - - - - - The Same. (A Fortnight later)
Act III. - - Sitting-room in Tully's Flat, St. Mark's Mansions, Kensington
(The action is supposed to begin two minutes before the end of Act II.)

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY THE AUTHOR.

Scenery by FRASER & DAVIES, High Street, Islington. Furniture, &c., by JOHN JAY & Co., 98, Victoria Street, S.W.
Dresses by CIESTE, 52, George Street, Portman Square, W.

Miss Maxwell's hats by HARRY H. SANBY, 65, Conduit Street, W. Miss Miller's hats by MICHEL & Co., 2, Hanover Court, W.
Toilet appointments throughout the Theatre by HINDES, Ltd., London and Birmingham.
Perfumery, Fans, &c., by L. T. PIVER, Paris.

General Manager .. .. Mr. ANTHONY L. ELLIS
Stage Manager .. .. Mr Alfred Drayton
Assistant Stage Manager .. .. Mr. Arthur C. Bowers
Business Manager .. (for Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) Mr. W. H. SAVERY

CRITERION
THEATRE

October 27
E

Orchestra Stall

GLOS

"A Little Bit of Fluff."

"A Little Bit of Fluff" has met in America with a fate similar to that encountered by some American successes here. All sorts of uncomplimentary Press criticisms were dealt out to it, and the piece closed down after a week's run in New York. "Stage." 22/4/1916

Waters, J.
Plays

"A Little Bit of Fluff."

The New Farce by Walter W. Ellis.

CRITERION THEATRE

EVENINGS AT 8.50

MATINEES, WED., THURS. & SAT. AT 2.30

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

NOVEMBER 21, 1915.

Actor-Author's Success.

Some people command success; others deserve it. Mr. Walter W. Ellis, the author of "A Little Bit of Fluff," now at the Criterion Theatre, was patient and waited (with plays) for it, and eventually caught it. He has experience now and is probably making as much money as any play in London. It has no pretence to be more than pure laugh, but like and of the old school of it was it promised a good deal in seconds. Mr. Ellis, who is now about forty-one, was on the stage for seventeen years, but he also wanted to be an author. Sir Charles Wyndham once accepted a play from him, but something else intervened. Then Mr. Ellis tried his hand with a Drury Lane play at the Royalty Theatre. Afterwards he wrote sketches and produced them at music-halls. Now he is engaged on a pantomime, and, what is most astonishing of all, his favourite occupation is mechanical [illegible]

Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT IS TRYING TO DRAG OUT THE TRUTH.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1915.

In addition to daily matinées of "The Man Who Stayed at Home," Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie have arranged, as already announced, to give early evening performances of the same play, commencing at 5.30, on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. Mr. Vedrenne sums up the advantages of the scheme quite neatly. "Our plan," he says, "provides a real opportunity of spending a happy day! First of all, you go to a matinée of, say, a musical play. After that you have a hurried tea and come to us at 5.30. When we finish—at eight o'clock—you have dinner, and then go on to a music-hall. When that is over you can go to a restaurant for supper." Rest in bed all next day.

NEW THEATRE, St. Martin's-lane. Reg. 4466.
Proprietors—Sir Chas. Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.
MATINEE TO-DAY and DAILY, at 2.30.
EVENINGS THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS only, 8.15.
SPECIAL PERFORMANCE TO-NIGHT, at Five Thirty.
STOP THIEF! By Carlyle Moore.
PERCY HUTCHISON, MARIE ILLINGTON.
Preceded by HAYDEN COFFIN, in a Song Farce.
NOTE.—THREE PERFORMANCES TO-DAY, at 2.30, 5.30, and 8.15.

NOV 13 1915

247

Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. A. E. MALONE, Ruthlands, Burgh Heath, Surrey.

Sole Proprietors: Messrs A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessees .. .. MUSICAL PLAYS, Ltd.

On TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, 1915, at 7.30

And EVERY EVENING at 8.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2
(FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6th).

A NEW MUSICAL PLAY, in Three Acts,

TINA

(Founded on "Kitty")

By PAUL A. RUBENS and HARRY GRAHAM

Music by PAUL A. RUBENS (with Additional Numbers by HAYDN WOOD.)

Lyrics by PAUL A. RUBENS and PERCY GREENBANK and HARRY GRAHAM.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR - - - HOWARD CARR.

PRICES:

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.;
Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. OXLEY) 2615 Gerrard and 8886 Gerrard.

Open Daily from 10 to 10.

ADELPHI THEATRE

All the gentlemen of the Chorus have satisfied the Management that they are exempt from Military Service.

Cast of the Play:

CARLO (Duke of Borgolese)	GODFREY TEARLE
Nico (The Duke's Valet)	GEORGE GREGORY
Antonio Belloni (Chairman of General Gondola Co.) ..	BEN OSBORNE
Rinaldo (Chef d'Orchestre)	ROHAN CLENSY
Lord Bedlington	HARRY DRUMMOND
Bonnard (The Duke's Chef)	JAN OYRA
Beppo (His Butler)	T. DEL LUNGO
A Gondolier	MARTIN KING
A Chiogiaotti	DOUGLAS MARRS
Alfonse (A Waiter)	LEON M. LION
AND
WILLIAM VAN DAM (A Dutch Cocoa Manufacturer)	W. H. BERRY
Rita (Belloni's Manageress)	MABEL SEALBY
Carmen (Member of Rinaldo's Orchestra)	YVONNE REYNOLDS
Freda (Van Dam's Secretary)	LUNA LOVE
Pomona	DOROTHY WARING
Tessa	CHLOE O'HARA
Fiametta	JESSIE FRASER
Nella	ROSIE CAMPBELL
Julia	M. BANNERMAN
Jessica	CLAIRE LYNCH
Netta	GRACIE SINCLAIRE
Carina	CONNIE STUART
AND
TINA	PHYLLIS DARE

The Play produced by EDWARD ROYCE.

Act I. ..	The Palace of the Duke of Borgolese, Venice	(Harker)
Act II. ..	Beauville-sur-Mer	(Ryon)
Act III. ..	Mr. Van Dam's House in Paris	(Terraine)

(Special Dances in Acts II. and III. by OYRA and DORMA LEIGH.)

The Music published by Chappell & Co., Ltd.

Principal and Small Part Ladies' Dresses designed and made by Messrs. LUCILE, LTD., 23, Hanover Square, W.

Chorus and Fancy Dresses made by FIRENZE, FISHER and B. J. SIMMONS.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Uniforms by MORRIS ANGEL & SON.
Shoes by RAYNE. Artificial Flowers by WINDRAM. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Colour Schemes and Character and Fancy Costumes designed by COMELLI.

STAGE MANAGER - - - C. B. WILLIAMS.
Business Manager - - CHARLTON MANN.

Daily Mail

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1915.

I heard from a lady at the first night of "Tina" at the Adelphi Theatre on Tuesday that a new cause has arisen to trouble still more the troubled lives of musical comedy authors. "They must," she said, "now so arrange the scenes that the heroine and soubrette and the small-part ladies shall have a lot more time 'off' between their scenes to make each of the many changes of costume musical comedy requires." I asked her why, and she answered: "Have you noticed that instead of wearing shoes Phyllis Dare and Mabel Sealby and Yvonne Reynolds are now wearing high boots laced all the way up? It's the new fashion, and in a musical comedy with many changes of costume (and boots have to be changed with each costume) it means that much more time has to be spent in the dressing rooms." See? That's why I am sorry for the authors. It is the impression of the boot.

Waters, J.
Plays

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

NOVEMBER 7, 1915.

Miss Phyllis Dare's Personality.

Easily the two most successful features of the new musical comedy "Tina," produced at the Adelphi Theatre on Tuesday evening, were the singing of Miss Phyllis Dare and the dancing of the numerous and very attractive young chorus girls. Miss Dare has now developed into an actress of very considerable personality, and it will be interesting to see her in a play that gives her some real opportunity. On Tuesday it was her personality that interested, for there could be no pretence of interest in the "thin" story of a girl refusing to marry the man she loved simply because he turned out to be a duke, not a violin player.

Old-fashioned.

"Tina" as a play is a poor, old-fashioned, musical comedy. You can realise that when you learn that in the case of two songs, the supposed daylight is suddenly cut off and the stage, except for the place where the singers stand, is as black as night .... memories of twenty-year-old musical comedy awake, and one wonders if the lessons taught by "Veronique," "The Little Michus," "The Merry Widow," "The Chocolate Soldier," and other real musical plays are to be forgotten.

Four Hours of It.

Apart from the poor play it is possible to get an evening's entertainment out of the tireless work of the happy-faced young chorus girls who sing, dance, laugh, and run about in splendid spirits. The scenery too is good, the costumes are most attractive, and, as I said before, Miss Phyllis Dare is better than ever. On the first night the performance was altogether too long. Four hours and little or no humour. Mr. Berry had some funny lines in the first act, and few, if any, for the second and third. Mr. George Gregory had no opportunities to be comical, and as the hero Mr. Godfrey Tearle looked very manly, but he did not sing or dance much

Mr. Gregory's Part.

I think the audience of any of our big provincial cities would have been very much disappointed to find Mr. George Gregory getting such poor opportunities as he got in "Tina." He is an immense musical comedy favourite on tour, having for many years gone to the provinces in the No. 1 Gaiety Theatre companies in the parts originated by Edmund Payne. One season, however, during the run of "Havana," in which he took no part, Edmund Payne went on a tour, and in a northern city, when interviewed by a local reporter, was asked, "How do you like playing Mr. Gregory's part?" Teddy was so taken aback that he could not reply.

Just one word more about "Tina." I was much interested in seeing Miss Dorothy Waring playing one of the eight girls who each have three words to speak. This management, when it put on "Véronique" in the spring, gave her, although she had no professional experience, the part of the heroine. Now, like a plucky girl, she has practically gone into the chorus, and I have not the slightest doubt that with experience she will one day be a very clever actress. Again, crinoline in a modified form is used with modern fashions in "Tina." It is not unbecoming. Will it set the fashion? GOOD EVENING.

Eight Girls Three Words Each.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessee and Manager - - - THOMAS DOTT.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6th, 1915, at 8.

MATINEES, THURSDAYS AND SATURDAYS at 2.30.

GEO. B. McLELLAN & WALTER de FRECE

PRESENT:

A New REVUE in Two Acts and Nine Scenes,

ENTITLED:

Looking Around

Book by W. H. RISQUE, ROBERT WESTON & JACK NORWORTH.

Lyrics and Music by ROBERT WESTON & JACK NORWORTH.

Musical Numbers and Dances arranged by GUS SOHLKE.

CAST.

ACT I. – Scene 1. - - - - - A Court of Law.

The Judge (Time)		LOUIS PAYNE
Counsel for the Defence (Youth)		JACK NORWORTH
Witness for the Prosecution		ROBB WILTON
Miss London		MARIE MITCHELL
Miss Ragtime	Defendants	LAURA GUERITE
Miss Tango		BETH TATE
Miss French Revue		POLAIRE
Clerk of the Court		WILLIAM SAVILLE
Chief Usher		HUGH ROBINSON
Ushers		ARTHUR ALEXANDER
		HARRY WESTON
		HAROLD WILDE
THE JURY	THE PUBLIC	WITNESSES

GENERAL MANAGER	For George B. McLellan and Walter de Frece	FRED. J. TURNER
ACTING MANAGER		WILLIAM ALBERT
STAGE MANAGER		DOUGLAS VINE

Box Office (C. R. STUBBS) 10 to 10. Telephone: Gerrard 9513, 9514.

Private Boxes £1 4s., £3 3s., and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.

Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, 5s., 4s.

Pit (unreserved) 2s. 6d. Gallery (unreserved) 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 p.m. and 2 p.m.

General Manager (FOR THOMAS DOTT) .. JOSE G. LEVY.

At this Theatre visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Waters, J.
Plays

There is a surprising amount of international interest connected with the new revue entitled "Looking Around," announced for production at the Garrick Theatre on Saturday evening. One of the responsible managers is English, the other American. The authors are a syndicate of three—two English, one American; and with the writing of the music honours are easy between ourselves and "our cousins." The company, too, is international, English, American, and French, and the stage managers claim London and Boston as their places of residence.

J. W.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE,

Wednesday, November 17, 1915.

"PEG IN THE CELLAR."

MISS LAURETTE TAYLOR ON THE AIR RAID.

THE 'REMARKABLE ENGLISH'

A recent issue of the "New York Times" contains the following:—

Laurette Taylor, who is still playing "Peg o' My Heart" in London to such large audiences that she doesn't dare return to America to carry out the plans made for her, doesn't like the Zeppelins. In a letter to George C. Tyler, her American manager, she thus sets forth her feeling in the matter:

"The night the Zeppelins came I was just finishing the last act. It seemed difficult for a few moments to realise (after a year of darkened streets and threatening talk) that they were really over the housetops. I went down in the cellar and, like a good Catholic, said my prayers.

"LOT OF HEATHENS."

"The company followed me into the cellar, but I was the only one that said my prayers. 'A lot of heathens,' I calls 'em. For three days afterwards I was really fearfully ill. I had fully determined never to act again in London until the war had finished, but, as everybody else went on, 'business as usual,' you know, I didn't feel as though I could afford to have people say I was afraid; so I came back to prove that I am not afraid, but I don't mind telling you I am scared to death.

"I will say the English are the most remarkable race I have ever met with, and, if I were a German, I should hate their insides.

"COME OUT AND LOOK."

"Even Hartley, whom I have never considered an especially brave man, went up on the roof of the Green Room Club to look at the Zeppelins, and walked all the way over here, and, finding me in the cellar, quoted one of the lines from 'Peg': 'Come out and look at it; they're beautiful in this part of the country.' I was furious with him."

Since writing the above letter to Mr. Tyler, Miss Laurette Taylor has quite broken down in health and has been ordered not to play for the remainder of the winter and to spend it out of England. When she is quite recovered she hopes to return to London and again appeal to a public whom she has learned to love.

MISS LAURETTE TAYLOR AND THE ZEPPELINS.

To the EDITOR of the PALL MALL GAZETTE.

SIR,—Your issue of last night contains a letter from Miss Laurette Taylor, copied from the "New York Times." Presumably Miss Taylor has been misquoted; otherwise it must be inferred that the state of her nerves on the occasion of the first visit of the Zeppelins quite obscured her appreciation of facts.

Of the very limited company playing in "Peg o' My Heart," we, the undersigned, state most emphatically that not only did we not "follow her to the cellar," as she says, but we were never nearer the cellar level than our duties on the stage demanded, nor in any single detail did we deviate from our ordinary nightly procedure.

We shall be greatly obliged by your insertion of this correction of a statement which would seem to reflect most unpleasantly and unduly on our courage or (to say the least) our presence of mind.

(Signed) J. H. BARNES.
EILLE NORWOOD.
ALBERT SIMS.
FRED CHARLTON.
ELIZABETH CHESNEY.
BETTINA FOREST.

Globe Theatre.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1915.

Even dog-actors have to have understudies. The manager of the Globe Theatre, where "Peg o' My Heart" is being played, forgot to appraise that maxim at its full value. The result was that when Miss Laurette Taylor, who played Peg, needed change of air and went out of the bill to get it the theatre was left without the two dogs who took part in every performance of the play. The dogs—Michael and Fluff—were Miss Taylor's private property. They were more than that: they were her pets, and when she went for a holiday the dogs went with her and there was no contract to state otherwise.

At very short notice, therefore, when the fox-terrier and the Yorkshire terrier went to the country the management had to get two "colourable imitations" of the original dogs, and although the dogman who negotiated the deal vouched for the honesty of the dogs, he could not make them bark and so had to stand in the wings and give the best imitation he could for the two silent little fellows. Now, however, the pair, having at last grown accustomed to the stage and the company, have come to understand what is required of them and have perfectly memorised every bark that is marked down in the book.

254

Waters, J.
Plays

The Daily Telegraph
LONDON, FRIDAY NOV. 19.

MR. GEO. EDWARDES'S WILL.

RACING AND THEATRES.

VENTURES TO CONTINUE.

Mr. George Edwardes, aged 62, of 11, Park-square West, Regent's Park, N.W., the famous theatrical manager, left estate of the gross value of £49,780, the net personality amounting to £26,560.

To his son D'Arcy testator gives the freehold estate at Ogbourne with the furniture and fittings and other contents of the house there, and all horses, farm stock, machinery, implements, chattels, and effects of every description, stating, "I should like my son to continue to carry on the Ogbourne estate and the racing establishment there in conjunction with P. Hartigan, so long as this can be done at a profit, and in that case I think that P. Hartigan should be paid by my son one-fourth of the profits as remuneration for his services; otherwise I should like my son to sell it, and in that event I think my son should pay P. Hartigan one-fourth of the net proceeds of the freehold premises, horses, farm stock, &c., after paying all mortgage, interest, and expenses, providing P. Hartigan shall not have enforced against my estate his claim for £3,000 which I owe him, and shall give credit for £3,000 as against his one-quarter share of the proceeds of the sale."

Mr. Edwardes empowered the executors to continue his stud farm business at Ballykisteen, Ireland, as a going concern, hoping that so long as they do so they will employ Harris as manager thereof, and that he should receive as remuneration for his services, in addition to his usual fixed salary, one-fourth of the net profits, or in the event of Ballykisteen being sold during his management, then one-fourth of the proceeds of the sale.

DALY'S THEATRE.

The executors have power to carry on for such period as they shall think fit his business of a theatrical manager at Daly's Theatre and elsewhere, and all other theatrical ventures in which he was interested, in the same manner as he had done during his lifetime, and to acquire any new plays or dramatic pieces, and to enter into any fresh contracts for productions of any dramatic works or the acquisition of any interests therein.

To his wife, Mrs. Julia Gwynne Edwardes, he gives £100, the freehold house, Winkfield Lodge, Windsor Forest, together with the contents; to his son, Captain D'Arcy Edwardes, now with his regiment, the 1st Dragoons, at the front, the leasehold premises, 11, Park-square West, with the contents, except the satinwood furniture belonging to his daughter Dorothy, and subject to his allowing Mrs. Edwardes and his daughters to reside therein whenever they so desire. To his sisters, Christina Chapman and Ellen Mary Livesey (provided that the value of the estate shall, in the opinion of the executors, after the payment of all debts and expenses be of the value of £25,000), an annuity of £125 each, to be payable only out of surplus of estate beyond £25,000, and should such surplus not be sufficient to provide the full amount of £125 each, then the annuities are to be reduced to such an amount as can be provided for out of the surplus.

As to the residue, the testator leaves one-fourth (including one-fourth of the divisible profits of his business as a theatrical manager and of the stud farm at Ballykisteen, so long as the executors shall carry on, or from the sale thereof one-fourth of the proceeds) to pay the income thereof to his wife for life, and after her death for his two daughters, Mrs. Nancy O'Malley and Norah Edwardes; one-fourth to be ascertained in the same manner for his son D'Arcy, one-fourth for his daughter Mrs. Dorothy Julia Gwynne Sherbrooke, and one-eighth each to his daughters Mrs. Nancy O'Malley and Miss Norah Edwardes.

Probate of the draft will, dated Sept. 6, 1915, is granted to Mrs. Dorothy Julia Gwynne Sherbrooke, wife of Cuthbert Arthur Sherbrooke, of 6, Park-square West, daughter, and Edwin Joseph Biggs, of 31, Lisle-street, W.C., private secretary.

255

: 256

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE,

HAYMARKET.

By kind permission of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree

SPECIAL MATINÉE

IN AID OF THE

AUSTRALIAN WOUNDED SOLDIERS,

FRIDAY, NOV. 19th, 1915.

5.

The Fatal Typist

by J. M. Barrie

In which Mr. Gerald du Maurier and Miss Gladys Cooper will appear

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1915.

SIR J. M. BARRIE'S JOKE.

Queen Alexandra was present at His Majesty's Theatre yesterday at a matinée in aid of the Australian wounded soldiers. The performance realised over £2,600.

The programme, varied and attractive, had the special quality of including a new one-act duologue for Mr. Gerald du Maurier and Miss Gladys Cooper—a delightful joke by Sir J. M. Barrie, entitled "The Fatal Typist." It was Sir James at his best—humorous, comical, and inventive—a fragment which kept the audience in a constant state of laughter at the supposed dilemma of two players who had to appear in a little love play and discovered only at the last moment that each had memorised the lines intended for the other.

Thus we got Mr. du Maurier—to begin with—explaining that as all the lady typists are making munitions the author had to employ a man typist, and the stupid fellow in making the copy gave the girl's lines to the hero, and vice versa. The result was that Miss Cooper, in a bewitching frock, had to pretend to be the fascinating, wicked captain, and Mr. du Maurier, in a morning suit, the coy maiden in love with him. It was one of the happiest hits that the theatre has offered for a long time, and therefore a most welcome contribution to a programme in aid of a splendid charity.

J. W.

Plays

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

GENERAL MANAGER HERBERT CHENERY

(Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to W. Lestocq, 53, Barrowgate Road, Chiswick, W.)

Proprietors ... ... Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT

SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 20th, at 8.30,

WALTER KNIGHT

presents

1915
Waters, J.
Plays

DAILY AT 2.45
AND EVERY WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY AND SATURDAY EVENING AT 8.30

WALTER KNIGHT
PRESENTS

L'Enfant Prodigue

A Musical Play Without Words. In Three Acts.

Written by MICHEL CARRÉ. Music by ANDRÉ WORMSER.

Pierrot	(Junior)	ANDRÉE MIELLY
Madame Pierrot	(his Mother)	EUGÉNIE NAU
Phrynette		YVONNE ARNAUD
Pierrot	(Senior)	GILBERT DALLEU
The Baron		LOUIS GOUGET (HIS ORIGINAL PART)
The Servant		GEORGE WELCH
Solo Pianist		PIERO COPPOLA (First Prize Milan Conservatoire)
Musical Director		HENRY GIBSON

The interest of the play commences with the rise of the curtain.

Act. 1. House of M. and Madame Pierrot.	Departure of the Son
Act 2. Phrynette's Boudoir.	Pierrot abandoned
Act 3. House of M. and Madame Pierrot.	Returned and forgiven

The Play produced by the Author and Composer.

At 2.30 and 8.15 HELEN MAR
THE Story-Teller.

Scenery by Walter Hann & Son.
Yvonne Arnaud's Costumes by Messrs. Harrods, Selfridge's, and Miss Hutton.
Andrée Mielly's Costumes from Paris.
Other Costumes by Nathan. Wigs by Clarkson. Chemiserie by Budd, Piccadilly Arcade.
The Piano used is from Chappell's.
The Music of "L'Enfant Prodigue" is published by Marcel Lion, 17, Place de la Madeleine, Paris.
A Special Piano Score, Illustrated by Willette, has been published.

The Management is deeply grateful to Louis Gouget for his assistance in the production of this wordless Play.

Synopsis.

ACT I.

The little story of this play is simplicity itself, but it is human to the very core. Woman is at the root of all the disaster.

In the home of Monsieur and Madame Pierrot is one sad heart. Their child is sick with love. Do what they will, they cannot win their loved child back to merriment; he cannot eat, he cannot drink, he cannot smile. His innocent heart has gone out to Phrynette, the flashy and coquettish little laundress with her wicked eyes. Poor lad! he must win and possess her at any cost. So when his parents are asleep, he robs the bureau—he fills his pockets with stolen notes and gold, and out he goes into the world.

On the despair of the old people, the curtain falls.

ACT II.

There is no virtue in stolen money, and no joy in the love of any Phrynette who ever lived. The riot and revel of the life of Pierrot and Phrynette are soon over, and they are faced with accumulated bills and pecuniary disaster. From bad Pierrot passes to worse. When he has gone forth to cheat with false cards in order to keep this fickle woman at his side, off goes Phrynette with a richer lover. She powders her face and waltzes off with the dissolute Baron; and when poor Pierrot returns with his pockets gorged with ill-starred money, the cruel bird has flown—the golden cage is empty.

Pierrot falls fainting on the floor of this wretched home of luxury.

ACT III.

The last scene is devoted to the return of the Prodigal Son.

The old father is broken-hearted; the mother prays to the Virgin to restore her child. At last her prayers are answered, for a ragged beggar knocks at the door of the desolate home. The mother takes her child to her heart; the father is hardened against his offspring.

At last a martial air strikes up; a regiment is passing. Here is a chance for reconciliation and repentance. The Prodigal Son will enlist; he will win back his good name with honourable service; he will become great and ennoble himself.

Thus, upon the mother's tears of joy, the father's blessing, and Pierrot's departure, the curtain falls.

1915
Waters, J.
Plays

260

Play with a Curious Charm.

The success of a London theatrical season some twenty-four years ago, "L'Enfant Prodigue" is once more with us—this time at the Duke of York's Theatre. There is a curious charm about this play, particularly so for all admirers of the drama who are content to see a play and not hear a spoken word. I, however, am entirely in sympathy with the character in "Kick In," who liked the "Movies," but would like them better if the characters could for once say something we could hear. If "L'Enfant Prodigue" catches on at the Duke of York's Theatre, as it ought to do, it will share the house at Christmas with "Alice in Wonderland," which goes into the matinée bill there for the holiday season.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1915.

THEATRE SMOKING.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S CONCESSION.

Smoking is to be allowed in London theatres.

The Lord Chamberlain yesterday received a deputation from the Society of West End Theatre Managers at St. James's Palace, when Mr. J. M. Gatti, chairman, pointed out that although few of the managers would apply for their audiences to be allowed to smoke, the society was unanimously in favour of permission being within easy reach of any of the members who desired it.

Lord Sandhurst expressed his keen wish to help the London managers, particularly in times that are so difficult for them, and he consented, if any manager applies, to delete from Clause 58 of the theatre licence the word "auditorium." Thus a stroke of a pen alters the licence and allows smoking. Clause 58 reads:

> No smoking is permitted in the auditorium, the orchestra, the green-rooms, the dressing-rooms, the wings, or within the precincts of the stage, except so far as may be necessary on the stage in connection with the performance.

Lord Sandhurst said that as the change was in the nature of an experiment, it ought to be regarded at present as a temporary one, say for the duration of the war.

Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, for the Comedy Theatre, and Mr. Frank Curzon, for the Playhouse, have applied for the alteration of licence to allow smoking. At these two theatres revues are the attraction. The managements of Drury Lane, Daly's, the St. James's, the Haymarket, His Majesty's, the Vaudeville, the Royalty, the New, and Wyndham's have no intention of allowing smoking in their theatres.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1915.

THEATRE GOSSIP.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN AND THE MANAGERS.

THE "NO SMOKERS."

The Lord Chamberlain held his annual levee for London theatre managers at St. James's Palace this week. Lord Sandhurst, the present holder of the office, and Sir Douglas Dawson, the Controller, were both of them present in the picturesque old house in Stable-yard to receive their friends of the theatres from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

It is the etiquette of this annual function for each manager to be received separately, and for a few minutes the Lord Chamberlain and the Controller chat with him. This year the Lord Chamberlain congratulated the managers on the efforts they have so splendidly made to keep the theatres working. He talked about new plays, and—being himself the Licenser of Plays—had a good deal of inside information about the new pieces that are contemplated in the New Year.

Each of the managers before he left was given his licence for the next twelve months, and it amused them to be asked by Lord Sandhurst, "Do you want to smoke?" The Lord Chamberlain laughed very heartily when he found that nearly all said "No." Therefore we may take it that smoking in theatres is not to become general.

* * * * *

1915
Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1915.

MUSIC-HALL "COMBINE."

MR. OSWALD STOLL AND THE ALHAMBRA.

Mr. Oswald Stoll, managing director of the London Coliseum, has secured on behalf of his company the controlling interest in the Alhambra Theatre.

He has purchased 8,460 £1 shares in the Alhambra Company, Limited, at 25s. per share, and £6,839 (1912) debentures at par of the same company. He has also agreed to purchase any other of the 51,540 issued shares in the Alhambra Company which shall be offered to him at 25s. a share up to December 2.

Three directors of the Alhambra Company are to resign, and the continuing members of the board are to appoint three nominees of the Coliseum Syndicate in their places on or before January 1, the day for the completion of the purchase.

Mr. J. B. Concannon, chairman of the Alhambra Company, has addressed a letter to the shareholders expressing his opinion—and that of the majority of the directors—that the offer is a fair one. "I think it is right to add," he says, "that profits for the current year up to this date are unsatisfactory, and that the payment of a dividend in February next is very improbable."

ANOTHER OFFER.

Mr. W. B. Purefoy has resigned his position of a director of the Alhambra Company, "because," he says, "I do not approve of handing over control of our company to a rival company without consulting the shareholders; and, secondly, because I consider Mr. Alfred Butt's alternative offer should also have been laid before the shareholders and an extraordinary general meeting called, and this very important matter not rushed through without the shareholders being given the chance of expressing an opinion on it."

Mr. Concannon's answer to the shareholders on Mr. Purefoy's letter is that the election of Mr. Stoll and two other directors of the Coliseum Syndicate has to be confirmed by the shareholders at the annual meeting of the Alhambra Company next February. "Also, that although there have been negotiations with other music-hall companies with a view to bringing about a pooling arrangement, the difficulties were of a complicated character, and, having regard to the present position of the Alhambra Company and the uncertain outlook, the majority of the directors considered the proposal of the Coliseum Syndicate to be advantageous for the shareholders."

Mr. Alfred Butt, who is managing director of the music-halls that were negotiating for a "combine" with the Alhambra Company, is on his way home from New York. The theatres he proposed to combine with the Alhambra were the Palace and the Empire.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1915.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.

SLEEPING SHAREHOLDER AT WAR-LIKE MEETING.

Rumours that the informal meeting in London yesterday of the Alhambra Theatre shareholders, to discuss the combine with the Coliseum Syndicate, would result in "ructions" seemed likely to be borne out—during the first few minutes of the meeting.

Mr. Concannon, the chairman, champion of the Coliseum Syndicate proposal, led his army gallantly towards the enemy and was soon engaged with the opposing forces, led by another Irishman, Mr. W. B. Purefoy, supported by Mr. Polden (in charge of the allied forces of the Palace and Empire Theatres). There were charges and counter-charges, hot battle cries, and references to ancient treaties.

Eventually the combatants calmed down. Peace, of a sort, prevailed. Nearly every body made a speech. Two shareholders each made five speeches and only grew to understand the futility of their efforts when one shareholder—who had been asleep for two hours—arose from his dream and asked for enlightenment. Unconsciously he did a great deal of good—the meeting broke up. It was almost a happy ending.

The leaders of the opposing armies shook hands, went off and had tea together, and on next Tuesday will face each other again and fight fiercely at the extraordinary general meeting of the Alhambra.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1915.

MUSIC-HALL FINANCE

THE "COMBINE" SCHEMES.

MR. STOLL & MR. BUTT.

The extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Alhambra Theatre, called by five shareholders, at the instance of Mr. W. B. Purefoy, who were all opposed to the "combine" with the London Coliseum Syndicate, was held yesterday at the theatre.

The chairman, Mr. J. B. Concanon, said that as the Alhambra Theatre had been losing money recently—as much as £400 a night last week—the board would have been failing in its duty if it had not accepted Mr. Stoll's offer of 25s. for Ordinary shares. They were having matinées because they cost so little that they profited by them. The principal points of Mr. Butt's scheme were tentatively agreed to between that gentleman and himself.

Mr. Purefoy called upon the chairman to produce a document which had been signed by members of the board. The document was produced, and referred to a discussion of the proposed agreement between the Palace, Empire, and Alhambra. It suggested that the Alhambra Company should retain the right to employ and dismiss members of the Alhambra staff.

"We wanted to have control of the front of the house," said Mr. Concanon, "or, as Mr. Purefoy said in a letter to me, we could not dismiss a janitor if he was cheeky to us."

A Shareholder: What will be the position of the shareholders if they refuse to accept Mr. Stoll's offer, and what arrangements will Mr. Stoll make to carry on the Alhambra?

"POOLING" SCHEME.

Mr. Oswald Stoll said that the Coliseum Syndicate was already assured of a very large holding in the Alhambra Company. Describing the other scheme, Mr. Stoll said that the profits were to have been shared under a "pooling" scheme. Under the arrangement the Palace Theatre would have to get £16,000 profit before it gave anything to this pool. The last balance-sheet of the Palace showed profits at £15,500. The Empire Theatre would have to take £12,000 before it contributed. The last balance-sheet of that hall showed a loss of £1,642. The Alhambra would have been allowed to retain only £10,000. The Alhambra was treated as the sick man of the alliance.

The "pool" was to have four directors; the Alhambra would nominate one. Mr. Butt would subscribe one-sixth of the pool, and was to take one-sixth of all profits over £30,000.

Mr. Stoll said that an attack had been made on him at a previous meeting—at which he was not present—by the chairman (Mr. Ernest Polden) of the Palace Theatre. That gentleman had slandered him under conditions which he could plead were privileged, "but if he will repeat those statements under circumstances where he cannot plead privilege, I will undertake to issue a writ against him in a few hours."

Mr. Alfred Butt said the negotiations between Mr. Concanon and himself began last June. Mr. Concanon was very anxious that he should take over the Alhambra, and eventually Mr. Concanon told him that the matter was settled. Mr. Butt then made some very friendly references to Mr. Stoll, for whom, he said, he had the greatest respect and admiration.

As Mr. Purefoy did not submit any resolution, it was explained that each shareholder could sell or hold his shares, as he wished. The meeting then adjourned.

264

Plays

The PLAYHOUSE

TUESDAY
30/11/1915

—

Orch. Stall 10 6

G 2

Retain this portion

THE PLAYHOUSE

NORTHUMBERLAND AVENUE · LONDON

Lessee	FRANK CURZON
Manager	ANDRE CHARLOT
Business Manager	JOSEPH WILSON
Musical Director	ALBERT W. KETTELBEY
Stage Manager	G. MAYOR COOKE

IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

[illegible]

BOX OFFICE OPEN 10 till 10

Telephone No. 3970 Gerrard

EVENING PRICES.

Private Boxes	£1 1s. 0d. to £4 4s. 0d.
Balcony Stalls	7/6, 6/0
Balcony	5/0
Upper Circle	2/6
Gallery	1/0

ALL SEATS RESERVED.

Week ending December 5th. 1915.

---

1 OVERTURE

2 Mr. DICK ADAMS An Impersonation of Charlie Chaplin

3 Miss DORE PLOWDEN

4 ANDRE CHARLOT presents

"SAMPLES"

A new Revue in Two Acts

By

HARRY GRATTAN

With

MELVILLE GIDEON	MARIE BLANCHE
STANLEY TURNBULL	WINNIE VOLT
THE TERRY TWINS	MONICA BEVAN
EDWARD STEADMAN	HILDA DICK
BABBET LAUVAUN	MARGERY WOLLASTON
DICK ADAMS	ESME DAVIS
DONOVAN RUSSELL and BERT COOTE	KATHLEEN HAYES and IDA RENE

Dances and Ensembles by George Shurley

The only thing it parodies is "Peter Pan," and it treats that charming play in a manner so crude that it is to be hoped that by now it has been cut out.

2666
Waters, J.
Plays

THE
PALL MALL GAZETTE,
Thursday, December 2, 1915.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS AND HIS DEBTS.

ACTOR'S ACCOUNT OF THEATRICAL MISFORTUNES.

MRS. HICKS'S £26,000.

FULL PAYMENT FOR CREDITORS IN "HAPPIER TIMES."

Mr. Seymour Hicks, the well-known actor, gave some interesting details of his career as a theatrical manager at the Bankruptcy Court to-day, when he was examined upon a statement showing liabilities £42,507, of which £36,527 are expected to rank, and estimated net assets £5,710.

Mr. E. W. Hansell appeared for the debtor's estate, and said that the case was one in which the creditors had accepted a scheme of arrangement.

Examined by Mr. W. P. Bowyer, Official Receiver, Mr Hicks said that he had written about forty-two plays and sketches, the rights of which he had sold. In 1907 he subscribed for 5,000 £1 shares in a company of which he was for a short time a director without remuneration. That company erected the Queen's Theatre and the Globe Theatre (originally called Hicks's Theatre) at an expenditure of £120,000, of which two-thirds was raised on mortgage of the leases. For a time he was in partnership with Mr. Frohman, and they produced "The Little Duke" at Hicks's Theatre. He lost £7,000 in connection with that play. In March, 1914, the mortgagees foreclosed and his shares became valueless.

THE ALDWYCH THEATRE.

In 1909 he subscribed for 6,000 £1 shares in the Aldwych Syndicate, which erected the Aldwych Theatre at a cost of £60,000 part of which was raised on mortgage. In 1910 or 1911, however, the mortgagees foreclosed, and here again his shareholding became valueless. In 1908 he lost £6,000 in connection with the production, with others, of a musical play called "The Girl in the Taxi" at the Aldwych Theatre.

Mr. Hansell, on further examination, said that from June, 1910, until September, 1913, he played with a company producing sketches at music-halls, and received a salary varying from £220 to £350 a week, out of which he had to pay expenses averaging £70 to £80 a week. After payment of interest on loans and portions of debts he had, as a rule, about £30 a week left for himself.

In September, 1913, he produced in the provinces a comedy called "Broadway Jones," which was afterwards brought to London. He had booked up a tour of the comedy in the provinces, but upon the outbreak of war it had to be cancelled. He had since been playing at a salary at music-halls and theatres, and at the present time he was appearing in "Broadway Jones" at a salary of £35 a week.

TRYING TO "RECKON UP."

He appreciated the fact that his books of account which should have been kept for him by other people were incomplete.

"The books never showed my financial position as I eventually found out it was," remarked Mr. Hicks.

There was now owing about £1,200 in connection with the plays that he had produced, and a portion of the indebtedness did not appear in his books. He had tried to "reckon up" his financial position, but never had all the facts before him to insure its correctness.

The Official Receiver: You did not do more than begin to try?

Mr. Hicks agreed. He first went to a moneylender, he said, in or about 1909.

The Official Receiver: May I take it that you have never been out of their hands since?

Mr. Hicks (emphatically): Never.

He further stated that the total loss on "The Little Duke" production was between £13,000 and £14,000, and he had to pay half of it. In 1907 he agreed to produce "My Darling," which he managed. In that venture he lost £6,000, but he asserted that in reality the loss should not have been so large, and would not have been but for the fact that his proposed partners failed him. He was caught again in the same manner over "The Gay Gordons."

By 1910 he was owing a very substantial amount, principally in respect of money borrowed to enable him to pay the before-mentioned losses, and in September, 1913, a Mr. Edge, a friend, lent him £42,290 at 12 per cent. interest per annum with which to pay off all his debts.

MRS. HICKS'S £26,000.

Mr. Hicks explained that he entered into the arrangement because he preferred having all his debts consolidated instead of the constant worry and trouble of paying a number of creditors. He repaid Mr. Edge at the rate of £120 a week, but found that it was an impossible amount, and so a Mr. Webb took over the balance—£40,951—of the loan at the reduced interest of 5 per cent. per annum.

That was in March, 1914, and Mr. Webb was now returned as a creditor for only £5,000, with securities. Mr. Hicks explained that his wife had parted with a cottage, some shares, policies, and jewellery, of a total value of £18,000, whilst he had parted with a house in Berkeley-square, together with its contents, of a like value, with which to pay off the greater part of Mr. Webb's claim.

In addition, since the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy, Mrs. Hicks had paid Mr. Webb another £1,000, and she was now a creditor for £26,000.

With regard to his expenditure, Mr. Hicks asserted that to travel about the country as he had cost about £40 a week. Hotel bills alone amounted to £20 a week.

"In the country I could live on £2 10s. a week," remarked Mr. Hicks, amidst laughter, "and I only wish I could do it."

Then, in addition, he had to pay a lot of incidental expenses, and make small loans to people by way of gift.

"Ever since I was ruined it has been quite different," added Mr. Hicks. "People, seeing that I am now poor, come to me and say, 'What will you have?' (Laughter.)

The Official Receiver: When were you ruined?

Mr. Hicks: Ever since you took me in hand. (More laughter.)

It was true that his hotel expenditure was somewhat high, agreed Mr. Hicks, "but," he added, "it is sometimes a mercy to get away with your socks."

In reply to Mr. Hansell, he said that he expected, when happier times came, eventually to pay his creditors 20s. in the £.

The examination was concluded.

Daily Mail
THE PAPER THAT SECURED
"SINGLE MEN FIRST."
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1915.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS.

"SINCE I WAS RUINED."

£33,000 LOST ON THEATRES AND PLAYS.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, the actor, during his examination in the Court of Bankruptcy yesterday, gave impressive details of the thousands of pounds which he said he had lost during his theatrical career.

Since 1909 he said he had never been out of the hands of money-lenders.

An item of £2,000 a year for household expenditure appeared in his accounts. To travel about the country, as he had done, with plays cost about £40 a week. Hotel bills alone amounted to £20 a week. He had to maintain his position by staying in first-class hotels. If he had spent less, referring to some of the claims on his purse, he should have been in a muddle.

"If I were away from it all," he reflected, "and living quietly in the country, I could live on £2 10s. a week. (Laughter.) I only wish I could do it."

"I doubt my hotel expenditure has been a trifle high," added Mr. Hicks, "but if you," he said to the Official Receiver, "had been at the hotels I have stayed at you would consider yourself lucky to get away with your socks." (Laughter.)

In other days he had to pay a lot of incidental expenses, make small loans to people by way of gift, and so on. "But now all is changed. Ever since I was ruined it has been quite different. I am not asked for any money by anybody. I merely walk about, and people, seeing I am now poor, come to me and say, 'What will you have'? (Laughter.)

"When were you ruined?" asked the Official Receiver.

Mr. Hicks: Ever since you took me in hand. (Laughter.)

NON-PAYING SCHEMES.

These are some of the theatrical ventures Mr. Seymour Hicks mentioned, with the consequential losses:

Production of 'The Little Duke" at the Hicks Theatre	£7,000
Erection of Queen's Theatre and Globe Theatre	£8,000
Building of Aldwych Theatre	£6,000
Management of "The Gay Gordons"	£6,000
'My Darling' production	£6,000

He was touring the provinces with the comedy "Broadway Jones" when the outbreak of the war caused the tour to be cancelled.

As to the building of theatres, Mr. Hicks said the Queen's and the Globe cost to erect £120,000. Two-thirds of the cost was raised on mortgage of the leases. The mortgagees foreclosed and his shares became valueless. The Aldwych cost £60,000. On this also the mortgagees foreclosed.

From July 1910 until September 1913 he played with a company producing sketches at music-halls, and received a salary varying from £220 to £350 a week, out of which he had to pay expenses averaging £70 to £80 a week. After payment of interest on loans and portions of debts he had as a rule about £30 a week left for himself.

The examination was concluded, and Mr Hansell, the debtor's counsel, stated that the scheme of arrangement provided for payment of a secured composition of 6s 8d. in the £1, but when happier times came he would go on paying until 20s. in the £1 had been given.

268

Shaftesbury Theatre

Kindly lent by Mr. ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Matinee

(Organised by LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL)

In Aid of

The Countess of Limerick's Free Refreshment Buffet for Soldiers and Sailors at London Bridge Station, and The Pioneer Players' Society

Friday, December 3rd, 1915

Plays

THE PIONEER PLAYERS IN

The Theatre of the Soul

By N. EVREINOFF

Translated by M. Potapenko and Christopher St. John

The Professor	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
M_1 (the rational entity of the Soul)	FISHER WHITE
M_2 (the emotional entity)	CAMPBELL GULLAN
M_3 (the subliminal entity)	KENNETH KENT
1st Concept of the Dancer	ETHEL LEVEY
2nd Concept of the Dancer	ELEANOR ELDER
1st Concept of the Wife	LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
2nd Concept of the Wife	ESMÉ HUBBARD
The Porter	GIRTON BARRIE

The action of the Play takes place in the Soul in the space of half a second.

Produced by EDITH CRAIG.

Copies of "The Theatre of the Soul" may be obtained from Henderson's, 60, Charing Cross Road, W.C.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1915.

A RUSSIAN PLAY.

The one-act play, "The Theatre of the Soul," from the Russian of N. Evreinoff, which at the last moment was withdrawn from the programme of a matinée performance given at the Alhambra Theatre on Russia's Day, was yesterday performed at Lady Randolph Churchill's matinée (for soldiers' and sailors' buffets) at the Shaftesbury Theatre.

The action, according to the author, is supposed "to take place in the soul in the space of half a second," and as the author will have it that a soul is made up of three entities—the rational, the emotional, and the subliminal it required some ingenuity to stage the idea with each entity personified. The action resolved itself into a contest between the emotional entity infatuated with a café-chantant dancer and the rational entity—who, faithful to the neglected wife at home, showed his brother entity the ugly thing the dancing woman really was, minus false teeth and hair. A gruesome fight between two hags representing wife and dancer led up to a suicide that destroyed both rational and emotional entities and left only the sublimal entity to wait in the dark for the Messenger that was to conduct him into Eternity.

The author has expressed his idea with sincerity, but admitting that his interpreters were as artistically sincere as can be, it can hardly be said the work is such as would appeal to what for want of a better word we may call the playgoer. And in this instance the domestic quarrel between the twin souls was due to a very commonplace reason—too much brandy in the man who owned the soul. J. W.

5722
1915
Waters, J.
Plays

269 270

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET.
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

By arrangement with SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

EVERY AFTERNOON at 2.30
THURSDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS at 8

Mr. MATHESON LANG'S
NEW PRODUCTION OF SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

"THE MERCHANT OF VENIC

The Characters are given in the order of their appearance.

ACT I. Scene 1. VENICE. A Landing Stage on the Grand Canal, near Antonio's Busine

Antonio, a Merchant of Venice - - - Mr. HENRY VIBAR
Salarino - - - - - Mr. GEORGE SKILLA
Salanio - - - - - Mr. GEOFFREY DOUGL
Bassanio - - - - - Mr. BALIOL HOLLOWA
Lorenzo - - - - - Mr. ERNEST C. CASSE
Gratiano - - - - - Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAM

Sailors, Flower Girls, Gondoliers, &c.

Scene 2 BELMONT. A Room in Portia

Portia, a rich Heiress - - - - Miss HUTIN BRITTO
Nerissa, her Waiting Maid - - - Miss DOROTHY RIPLE
Pages to Portia - - - Masters BELFORD and NURDE
Balthazar, Servant to Portia - - - Mr. GEORGE MORGA
The Prince of Morocco - - - Mr. TERENCE O'BRIE

Attendants to Portia and the Prince of Morocco.

Scene 3 VENICE. Shylock's House in th

Shylock, a Jew - - - Mr. MATHESON LAN
Leonardo, Bassanio's page - - - Master CHOW
Jessica, Shylock's Daughter - - Miss MARJORIE PATTERSO

Scene 4 VENICE. The Ghetto outside Shylock

Launcelot Gobbo, Servant to Shylock - - Mr. ANDREW LEIG
Old Gobbo, his father - - - Mr. LOUIS ASHMEAD

Masquers, Revellers, Watchmen, Jews and Jewesses.

ACT II. Scene 1 BELMONT. Portia

Morocco, Servant to Portia - - - Mr. G. BURWOO
The Prince of Arragon - - - Mr. ANDREW LEIG

Attendants to the Prince of Arragon.

Scene 2 VENICE. Th

Launcelot, Friend to Shylock - - Mr. JOHN DAL

ACT III. Scene BELMONT. Portia'

ACT IV. Scene 1 The Courtyard to Portia'
Scene 2 VENICE. The Bridge

Antonio - - - - Mr. A. S. TALBO
The Doge of Venice - - - Mr. HARDING STEERMA
The Clerk of the Court - - - Mr. WALTER PLING

Magnificoes, Clerks, Pages, Trumpeters, Standard Bearers, &c.

Scene 3 VENICE. A Court of ACT V. Scene BELMONT. The Avenue to Portia'

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1915.

Conspicuous among the St. James's audience at the opening of Mr. Matheson Lang's intercalary season yesterday afternoon were a row or two of school girls who, lucky creatures, were evidently making their first acquaintance with The Merchant of Venice on the stage. They went into fits of laughter when poor blind old Gobbo mistook Launcelot's back-hair for a beard and shrilly applauded when Portia so ingeniously turned the tables upon the bloodthirsty Shylock.

That is the way we should all try to enjoy our Shakespeare in, if we were wise, instead of making a fuss over new "readings" or minute details of mise-en-scène. The trouble is that at every successive Shakespearian performance a long vista of previous recollections gets in the way of our simple pleasure and spoils what should have been a whole-hearted surrender to the romance or the fierce passion or the mere fun of the moment. The players, too, are in much the same case, embarrassed by the past, racking their brains in the effort to depart from it, tempted even to purchase novelty at the price of extravagance or absurdity.

This temptation, at any rate, Mr. Matheson Lang and his comrades have stoutly resisted. True, they have indulged themselves in little novelties of "business" or costume: Shylock in the Ghetto squats cross-legged like a Turk, or, by way of a Parthian dart when he leaves the Doge's Court, hisses at the Gentile crowd: Gratiano masquerades in the dress and with the wand of Arlecchino: and so forth. But these are trifles. In the main the company are content to present the familiar story—or brace of stories—in a plain, straightforward, unpretentious fashion; and that is the fashion wherein Shakespeare is always best served. The true test for a Shylock (as for so many other famous parts) is: Does the actor speak the lines not only as if he felt them, but as if they were the spontaneous expression of his feelings just at that moment being coined into words for the first time?

Mr. Matheson Lang's Shylock gives us that impression of freshness, of spontaneity more successfully than any other of recent years. His fine voice is a pleasure to the ear. He has the good sense to avoid those abject sprawlings and squirmings and uncanny gruntings and groanings which some actors have added as a trimming to the part. In short, he presents Shylock as a human being—not as a superhuman or infra-human monster—and a very good way of presenting Shylock, too. The Portia of Miss Hutin Britton is quite pleasant: none of your dreamy, die-away, romantic Portias, but a practical little body with a strong sense of fun. Perhaps, however, the lady of Belmont, when she is at Belmont, should be a little more of the grande dame. The rest, if not remarkable, are sufficient.

148
G
STALLS
MATINEE
Dec. 6.
1915
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

1915
Waters, J.
Plays

~~269~~ 270

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET.
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

By arrangement with SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

EVERY AFTERNOON at 2.30
THURSDAY and SATURDAY EVENINGS at 8

Mr. MATHESON LANG'S
NEW PRODUCTION OF SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE"

The Characters are given in the order of their appearance.

ACT I. Scene 1. VENICE. A Landing Stage on the Grand Canal, near Antonio's Business House

Antonio, a Merchant of Venice	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Salarino	Mr. GEORGE SKILLAN
Salanio	Mr. GEOFFREY DOUGLAS
Bassanio	Mr. BALIOL HOLLOWAY
Lorenzo	Mr. ERNEST C. CASSEL
Gratiano	Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS

Sailors, Flower Girls, Gondoliers, &c.

Scene 2. BELMONT. A Room in Portia's Palace

Portia, a rich Heiress	Miss HUTIN BRITTON
Nerissa, her Waiting Maid	Miss DOROTHY RIPLEY
Pages to Portia	Masters BELFORD and NURDEN
Balthazar, Servant to Portia	Mr. GEORGE MORGAN
The Prince of Morocco	Mr. TERENCE O'BRIEN

Attendants to Portia and the Prince of Morocco.

Scene 3. VENICE. Shylock's House in the Ghetto

Shylock, a Jew	Mr. MATHESON LANG
Leonardo, Bassanio's page	Master CHOWN
Jessica, Shylock's Daughter	Miss MARJORIE PATTERSON

Scene 4. VENICE. The Ghetto outside Shylock's House

Launcelot Gobbo, Servant to Shylock	Mr. ANDREW LEIGH
Old Gobbo, his father	Mr. LOUIS ASHMEADE

Maskers, Revellers, Watchmen, Jews and Jewesses.

ACT II. Scene 1. BELMONT. Portia's Palace

Servant to Portia	Mr. G. BURWOOD
The Prince of Arragon	Mr. ANDREW LEIGH

Attendants to the Prince of Arragon.

Scene 2. VENICE. The Ghetto

Salarino, friend to Shylock	Mr. JOHN DALY

ACT III. Scene 1. BELMONT. Portia's Palace

ACT IV. Scene 1. The Courtyard to Portia's Palace
Scene 2. VENICE. The Bridge of Sighs

Gratiano	Mr. A. S. TALBOT
The Doge of Venice	Mr. HARDING STEERMAN
The Clerk of the Court	Mr. WALTER PLINGE

Magnificoes, Clerks, Pages, Trumpeters, Standard Bearers, &c.

Scene 3. VENICE. A Court of Justice

ACT V. Scene BELMONT. The Avenue to Portia's Palace

TIMES

Y. DECEMBER 7, 1915.

s among the St. James's audience at f Mr. Matheson Lang's intercalary rday afternoon were a row or girls who, lucky creatures, were king their first acquaintance with t" of Venice on the stage. They of laughter when poor blind old ok Launcelot's back-hair for a rilly applauded when Portia so rned the tables upon the blood-ck.

way we should all try to enjoy our in, if we were wise, instead of over new "readings" or minute e-en-scène. The trouble is that at ve Shakespearian performance a previous recollections gets in the imple pleasure and spoils what been a whole-hearted surrender ce or the fierce passion or the the moment. The players, too, the same case, embarrassed by king their brains in the effort m it, tempted even to purchase the price of extravagance or tion, at any rate, Mr. Matheson comrades have stoutly resisted. ve indulged themselves in little business" or costume: Shylock squats cross-legged like a Turk, of a Parthian dart when he Doge's Court, hisses at the d; Gratiano masquerades in with the wand of Arlecchino; . But these are trifles. In ompany are content to present the —or brace of stories—in a plain, d, unpretentious fashion; and fashion wherein Shakespeare is rved. The true test for a Shy- o many other famous parts) is: speak the lines not only as if he as if they were the spontaneous is feelings just at that moment nto words for the first time?

on Lang's Shylock gives us that freshness, of spontaneity more nan any other of recent years. is a pleasure to the ear. He has to avoid those abject sprawlings gs and uncanny gruntings and ch some actors have added as a the part. In short, he presents human being—not as a super-ra-human monster—and a very presenting Shylock, too. The Hutin Britton is quite pleasant; r dreamy, die-away, romantic practical little body with a strong Perhaps, however, the lady of n she is at Belmont, should be a the grande dame. The rest, if not e sufficient.

148
G
STALLS
MATINEE
Dec. 6.
1915
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

~~26~~ 272

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Thursday
Evening

Dec. 9

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No. J 22

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9TH, 1915, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

(SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8.15.)

FREDERICK HARRISON presents

WHO IS HE?

BY HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL.

A New Comedy in Four Acts.

Very freely adapted from a Novel by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes.

Mr. Parker	HENRY AINLEY
Irene Harding	IRENE BROWNE
Mr. Bunting	FREDERICK GROVES
Mrs. Bunting	CLARE GREET
Tom Bunting	F. R. BACH
Mr. Prentiss	E. LYALL SWETE
Inspector Stone	ROLAND PERTWEE
Constables	RICHARD LINDSAY, R. RUSSELL, F. CULLAN

TIME—The Present.

Acts I. II. & III. take place in the Sitting Room at the Buntings.
Act IV. in the Buntings' Drawing Room.

The Play produced for FREDERICK HARRISON by E. LYALL SWETE.

Scenery by JOSEPH and PHIL HARKER.
Miss Browne's Dresses by ESTHER, LTD., 5 Grafton Street, W.
Furniture by SPILLMAN.

Stage Manager ... ... REGINALD BACH
Musical Director ... ... NORMAN O'NEILL

THREE MATINEES WEEKLY:
EVERY WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone—Regent 6030, 6031 and 6032.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

The Weekly Dispatch.

(115th YEAR)

LONDON: Carmelite House, E.C.

DECEMBER 12, 1915.

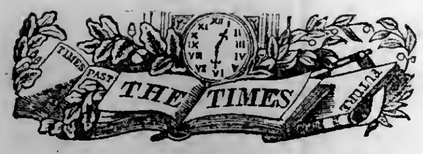
Business Manager — HORACE WATSON

"Who is He?"

Tho Haymarket Theatre was crowded on Thursday evening for the first performance of Horace A. Vachell's new play, "Who is He?" but a less distinguished audience one cannot imagine. That is one of the changes that war has laid on the theatres. . . . The "somebodies" no longer appear at "first nights." If the play happens to be well spoken of they go, no doubt, to see it afterwards, but they are avoiding first nights. If they feared that a Haymarket comedy production was a serious function they would have made an exception of "Who is He?" It is the reverse of serious. It is designed for laughter, and although it took the author the whole of the first act and part of another to show what his design was, the laughter came when we understood what he was after. The story was suggested to the dramatist by a novel written by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes entitled "The Lodger," and its background is an apartment-house in Bloomsbury.

When you get a rich young nobleman hiding in lodgings in order to escape the gossips who want to interview him because he had been jilted, and when the proprietors of the lodging-house are kind old souls, and the young lady occupying the second-floor back is romantic, you need not ask for any more materials to the making of a plot. For extra complications in this case we were introduced to a detective who thought the mysterious "Mr. Parker" (the young nobleman) must be Jack the Ripper, and as the "tec" was badly floored when everybody suddenly learned that young "Mr. Parker" was really the Earl Twyford, we had a c and finale and much laughter, followed by cheers. Henry Ainley was fairly well provided with a character part in "Mr. Parker" and made a lot of it. Miss Clare Greet, too, was simply invaluable as the lodging-house lady, and Lyall Swete in a small part was—as he always is—quite excellent.

GOOD EVENING.



A Grand Finale.

Unlucky Tuesdays.

One day during the week I met Mr. Horace Vachell strolling down to the Haymarket Theatre to have a glimpse at one of the scenes in his very successful play "Who Is He?" When I told him he had exceptional luck in having two successive successes at the same theatre he told me that he never expected "Quinneys" would have been a success. Tuesday had always been an unlucky day for him, and when Mr. Frederick Harrison suggested producing it on a Tuesday he felt it was all up with poor "Quinneys." "However," he added, "what could I do when Harrison with a laugh countered my complaint by saying that Tuesday was the luckiest day in the week for him?" "Quinneys" first saw the "boats" on a Tuesday and ran for 281 performances. The present piece, "Who Is He?" was produced on a Thursday.

"GOOD EVENING."

~~26~~ 274

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1915.

All the philosophers from Hobbes to Vico and so right away to Bergson have given us their theories of laughter. They are all ingenious theories and none the less worth considering for being mutually destructive, but they all, unfortunately, leave constant playgoers in unresolved doubt on a point of some importance. Why is it that we so often find our laughter slow to come over scenes and situations that would seem a priori to be peculiarly risible?

There, for instance, was Mr. Ainley last night, frais et dispos, as the ground-floor lodger tenderly proposing marriage to the second floor back, and regularly interrupted by the landlady, who had her reasons for thinking this young man a dangerous lunatic. He had, so to speak, to press one hand to his heart while he kept the other on the door-handle. It ought to have been exquisitely comic, and, to be sure, laughter there was, but not quite the wild, uproarious laughter that the situation seemed to demand. That laughter did, however, ring out when the landlady, after a fainting-fit, was innocently offered a bromide by the supposed madman, and shrank with terror, suspecting deadly poison.

You never can tell with these little incidents: habent sua fata like the little books: laughter comes to them, or is withheld, by what looks like arbitrary fate. We do not know whether these things belong to Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's novel or whether they are the sprouts of Mr. Vachell's fancy. Probably the main story belongs to Mrs. Lowndes, because it seems to call for the quiet, easy, fireside development of the novelist and proves on the stage a little frail for the burden of four acts. We guess the love-making to be hers and the farcical trimmings Mr. Vachell's. But our attribution may be quite wrong.

A Gilbertian Situation.

Anyhow, the ground-floor lodger woos and wins the second-floor back—the only person who doesn't ask "Who is he?" but accepts him for himself alone. All the others think they have found a dreadful solution of the mystery. There has been a series of nocturnal murders in the neighbourhood, and to a credulous mind there are many things about the lodger that point to him as the murderer. He takes the general suspicion for general mania, and is merely irritated; but when he is arrested by the police it is time to be serious. So he is revealed as a distinguished young nobleman, who had hidden himself in the ground-floor lodgings in a fit of disgust with the world after being heartlessly jilted. When his proud title is announced Mr. Inspector and his constables all gravely uncover. That is a Gilbertian situation, and we ought to have laughed louder than ever, but did not because the players seemed to be quite serious over it.

Mr. Ainley makes the most of the eccentric, romantic, impulsive young man, makes, in fact, as he always does with his part, an individual thing of it, unmistakable, unlike anything else. The second-floor back young lady is pleasantly played by Miss Ireno Browne, and Mr. Lyall Swete gives a new version of that familiar type, the comic solicitor. Perhaps the loudest laughter of the evening rewarded the acting of Miss Clare Greet and Mr. Groves as the simple-minded landlady and landlord. Miss Greet's fun always seems the most natural thing in the world.

Who is he?

THE

LONDON OPERA HOUSE

(Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ESMOND H. WILEY.)

TWICE DAILY at 2.30 and 8.

THE BRANDON THOMAS COMPANY

IN THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY ATTRACTION

CHARLEY'S AUNT

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Col. Sir Francis Chesney, Bart. (late Indian Service)		Mr. J. R. CRAUFORD
Stephen Spettigue (Solicitor, Oxford)		Mr. JAMES E. PAGE
Jack Chesney	Undergraduates at St Olde's College, Oxford	Mr. GEOFFREY WILMER
Charles Wykeham		Mr. ARTHUR MURRAY
Lord Fancourt Babberley		Mr. PERCY CRAWFORD
Brassett (a College Scout)		Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
Donna Lucia d'Alvadorez (from Brazil)		Miss BERRY DANE
Kitty Verdun (Spettigue's Ward)		Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Amy Spettigue (Spettigue's Niece)		Miss MARJORIE CHARD
Ela Delahay (an Orphan)		Miss DOROTHY HOLMES-GORE

NOTICE. Only Non-intoxicants can be served in the Refreshment Bars after 9.30 p.m.

ACT I. .. .. .. Jack Chesney's Rooms in College
"When Pious Frauds are Dispensations." HUDIBRAS.

ACT II. .. .. Garden Outside Jack Chesney's Rooms
"While there's Tea there's Hope."—PINERO.

ACT III. .. .. .. Drawing Room in Spettigue's House
"Dinner Lubricates Business."—BOSWELL.

Time The Present. Commemoration Week at Oxford.

Programme of Music.

SELECTION ... ... "College Songs" ... ... J. W. Leimey
Introducing—1, Carmen Etonense. 2, Wanderlied—University. 3, Songs Harrow. 4, Ducker, Harrow. 5, Eton Boating Song. 6, Left, Right Harrow. 7, Forty Years on—Harrow. 8, Willow the King—University. 9, Io Triomphe. 10, Floreat—Rugby. 11, Old Towler—University. 12, Dulce Domum—Winchester. 13, John Peel—University. 14, There is a Tavern—Yale. 15, Upidee—Harvard. 16, Carmen Heriedum—Wellington.
INTERMEZZO ... ... "Lace and Lavender" ... ... Guy Jones
FANTASIA ... ... "To-night's the Night" ... ... Paul Rubens
WALTZ ... ... "Dance of Delight" ... ... Gromina Brine

Costumes by M.M. Leas et Paulette, 7 Hanover Square, W., and Hats by Mdme. Mirette, 104 Wardour Street, W.
The Furniture is supplied by Wolfe & Hollander.
Pianos by Messrs. Lumsden, Ltd., 19A Princes Street, W.
The American Organ by The Estey Organ Co.
Cigarettes by Abdulla & Co., Ltd.

General Manager ... ... Mr. CECIL BARTH
Acting Manager ... ... Mr. H. J. WOOD-INGRAM
Stage Manager ... ... Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. W. HASTINGS

L. O. H.
KINGSWAY
MATINEE
18/12/15
O. Stall 5
D 12
To be retained

PART II.

Scene I.—NEW DREAMS.

THE CHINA CHIMES

Characters—

A Shepherdess ... AGNES CROXTON Hymen ... EDWARD GAR
A Shepherdess ... DOROTHY JAMES A Shepherd ... FRANK MARTYN
The Spirit of Dresden PEGGY MAY An Old Shepherd R. B. SALISBURY

"The Pedlar of Dreams" arrives on earth through the clock on the manteishelf

The Awakening ... ... THE QUAINTS
The Shepherd Philosophises ... ... R. B. SALISBURY
A Shepherdess receives advice from Hymen—
DOROTHY JAMES and EDWARD GAR
The Spirit of Dresden dances ... ... PEGGY MAY
A China Minuette ... AGNES CROXTON and E. LANE MOTT
A Marionette Drama PEGGY MAY, R. B. SALISBURY, E. LANE MOTT
The Song of Florian ... THE QUAINTS assisted by the Misses
LEIGHTON, VERITY, MILNE and DEVILLE

Scenes II & III.—NIGHTMARES.

EDWARD GAR endeavours to explain the Plot
THE QUAINTS burlesque themselves—
E. LANE MOTT, AGNES CROXTON, DOROTHY JAMES, R. B. SALISBURY
"Three Men in a Boat" ... DICK HENTY, FRANK MARTYN, E. LANE MOTT
"The Pedlar of Dreams" feels the weight of the income tax—
Song—"Four Thousand a Year" ... R. B. SALISBURY
The Birth of a Suburb—
House Agent ... FRANK MARTYN Workman ... EDWARD GAR
E. LANE MOTT and SYBIL JEFFRIES in search of a home
THE QUAINTS give impressions of a boy—a bun—and a train
Duet—"I wonder what you'd say" ... AGNES CROXTON and R. B. SALISBURY
THE QUAINTS visit the Revues.
"The Pedlar of Dreams" goes back to Pierrotland—
Song—"Farewell" ... ... AGNES CROXTON

Business Manager ... ... ARTHUR LAW RAYNOR
Stage Manager ... ... TIM RYLEY
Musical Director ... ... BRIGATA BUCALOSSI

Scenery by A. E. PULLINGER.
Costumes designed by HARRY H. SANBY and executed by FIRENZE.
Hats by HARRY H. SANBY. Wigs by CLARKSON.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co

ICES, TEA & COFFEE CAN BE HAD OF THE ATTENDANTS

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, 6d. each, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor

Private Boxes, £4 4s. & £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d, Balcony, 7s, 6d.
Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Children half-price at Matinees. Box Office (ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.
Doors open at 2 and 7.45. Commence at 2.30 and 8.15. Tel.: Gerrard 3815

NEAREST STATIONS: TRAFALGAR SQUARE and CHARING CROSS.

Manager ... (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) ... HERBERT CLARK

Royal Court Theatre,
Sloane Square, S.W.

December 13th, 1915.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by Mr. F. R. Benson and Mr. Otho Stuart to forward you the enclosed ticket for the use of your Dramatic Critic, on Monday Evening, December 20th, at 8 o'clock, to the performance of

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

A Midsummer-Night's Dream

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, I shall be obliged if you will kindly return the ticket to me as soon as possible, and say the earliest date, most convenient to yourself, for which I may have the pleasure of exchanging it.

Yours faithfully,

A. S. PIGOTT,

Manager for Mr. F. R. Benson.

Plays

Cast of Characters.

Theseus, Duke of Athens	F. R. BENSON
Egeus, father of Hermia	O. D. ROBERTS
Demetrius, Lysander } in love with Hermia	BASIL RATHBONE, HENRY BAYNTON
Philostrate, master of the revels to Theseus	GROSVENOR NORTH
Quince, the Carpenter	B. A. PITTAR
Snug, the joiner	STANLEY HOWLETT
Bottom, the weaver	A. E. GEORGE
Flute, the bellows-mender	COMPTON RICKETT
Snout, the tinker	W. H. QUINTON
Starveling, the tailor	H. O. NICHOLSON
Hippolyta { Queen of the Amazons, betrothed to Theseus	DOROTHIE PIDCOCK
Hermia, daughter to Egeus, in love with Lysander	DOROTHY GREEN
Helena, in love with Demetrius	FLORENCE GLOSSOP-HARRIS
Oberon, King of the Fairies	MURRAY KINNELL
Titania, Queen of the Fairies	ALINE HENDERSON
Puck, or Robin Goodfellow, a Fairy	LEAH HANMAN
First Fairy	VIOLET CECIL
First Singing Fairy	MAY KEARSEY
Second Singing Fairy	DOROTHY HAWKINS
Pease Blossom	DORIS BEATON
Cobweb	PEGGY CARNAC
Moth	MURIEL STEVENS
Mustard Seed	FELICIE VYNER

(Fairies)

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.	Scene 1	Theseus' Palace
	Scene 2	Quince's Workshop
ACTS II. and III.	Scene	A Wood near Athens
ACT IV.	Scene 1	Titania's Bower
	Scene 2	Quince's Workshop
ACT V.	Scene	Theseus' Palace (Night)

Scenery by Messrs. JOSEPH and PHIL HARKER.

The Fairies' Dresses and Dances designed and arranged by Mrs. F. R. BENSON

APOLLO THEATRE

TOM B. DAVIS — LESSEE AND MANAGER

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 21st, 1915, and
Every Evening at 8.15

A ROMANTIC DRAMA IN THREE ACTS
ENTITLED

THE SPANISH MAIN

By VASCO MARENAS.

Captain Patrick O'Gorman (Master of the Albatross)	OSCAR ASCHE
Perdro Malorix (the Vulture)	CALEB PORTER
Casco (a Mulatto)	ALFRED BRYDONE
Ah Wi (a Chinaman)	F. RANDLE AYRTON
Fritz (a German)	FREDERICK PATTRICK
Yerrow (a Negro)	ALEXANDER
Porra	CHARLES WARBURTON
Diego	FREDERICK MACKAY
Abdallah	G. HERBERT
Ramon	ARTHUR RAYMOND
Pablo	NORMOND CROFT
Carlos	DARBY FOSTER
(Pirates)
Dolores	GLADYS NEWTON
Conchita	RUBY NICHOLSON
Teresa	INGRID MILLER
Carlota	GLADYS ELLAM
Zarpa (Juanita's Stepmother)	LISA COLEMAN
Rosetta	MURIEL DOLE
Friends of Juanita
and
Juanita	LILY BRAYTON

Act 1		Spain
Scene	Tomasso Talavera's Wine Shop, San Lucar
Act 2		The High Seas
Scene 1	The Deck of the "Albatross"
Scene 2	Pedro's Cabin
Scene 3	The Deck of the "Albatross"
Act 3		The Spanish Main
Scene	The Treasure Island

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY OSCAR ASCHE.

D.Y.T.

—

23 12 15

Orch Stall

No.

LONDON HIPPODROME

CRANBOURN STREET, LEICESTER SQUARE

Proprietors - - - - Moss' Empires, Ltd.

Managing Director - - - - - - - - Mr. Frank Allen
Assistant to Managing Director - - - Mr. Albert P. De Courville
Manager - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. Fred Trussell

TWICE DAILY at 2.30 p.m. & 8.30 p.m.

Programme

Commencing

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23RD. 1915

A New Hippodrome REVUE

"JOY-LAND!"

Book and Lyrics by ALBERT DE COURVILLE and WAL PINK
Music by HERMAN DAREWSKI
Staged by WILLIAM J. WILSON

Production by ALBERT DE COURVILLE

CAST:

SHIRLEY KELLOGG

ALICE HEGEMAN
EDNA MORGAN
VERA NICE
IRENE RICHARDS
DORIS PAGE
EILEEN IRISH
JEANIE McKAY
and
SUPER BEAUTY
CHORUS OF 100

HARRY TATE

BERTRAM WALLIS
E. DAGNALL
GEORGE CARVEY
FRED EASTMAN
CHAS. DE HAVEN
CHAS. BERKELEY
FRANK WHITMAN
NEIL McKAY
CLIFFORD DIXON
HENRY FRANKISS

ON FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1915, AND EVERY AFTERNOON AT 2.15

Messrs. STEDMAN'S Magnificent Christmas Production

Alice in Wonderland

Founded on LEWIS CARROLL'S Delightful Stories "ALICE IN WONDERLAND" and "THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS."

Book by H. SAVILLE CLARK. Music by WALTER SLAUGHTER.

ACT I.—ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.

Mad Hatter ...	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
Mock Turtle ...	Mr. JAMES HARCOURT
Gryphon ...	Mr. GEORGE NASH
March Hare ...	Miss NORA EDWARDS
White Rabbit ...	Miss DOROTHY ARDLEY
Caterpillar ...	Mr. ROY LORRAINE
Duchess ...	... Miss NAN GRAY
Cook ...	Miss CLEMENCE MEYER
Cheshire Cat ...	Miss BERTHA CHARNA
Dormouse ...	Miss VERA HOWICK
First Fairy ...	Miss IRENE IRELAND
First Lobster ...	... Miss MAI DEACON
King of Hearts ...	Mr. BRYAN O'SULLIVAN
Queen of Hearts ...	Miss HELEN TEMPLE
Knave of Hearts ...	Mr. REG VICKERS
Executioner ...	Mr. CHARLES HERSEE
Alice ... AND	Miss IVY SAWYER

ACT II.—THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS.

Mad Hatter ...	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
White Queen ...	Miss HELEN TEMPLE
White King ...	... Mr. REG VICKERS
Lily ...	Miss GLADYS FOYLE
Rose ...	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Red Queen ...	... Miss NAN GRAY
Red King ...	Mr. ROY LORRAINE
Oyster Queen ...	... Miss VERA CLARK
Guardian of the Shell Throne ...	... Mr. REG VICKERS
First Oyster ...	Miss BLANCH GEORGE
Second Oyster ...	Miss VERA DESMOND
Tweedledee ...	Mr. JAMES HARCOURT
Tweedledum ...	Mr. GEORGE NASH
Carpenter and Humpty Dumpty ...	Mr. CHARLES HERSEE
Walrus ...	Mr. BRYAN O'SULLIVAN
Unicorn ...	Miss COTTESMORE
Lion ...	... Miss DORE VERE
Snowdrop ...	Miss VERA DESMOND
Alice ... AND	Miss IVY SAWYER

Lobsters and Jesters—Misses Mai Deacon, Millie Seymour, Joyce Pettit, Cynthia Greaves.

Fairies Cards, Chessmen, Housemaids, Humpty Dumpty, Guards, &c.—Misses Dorothy Deane, Gladys Ireland, Etta Horne, Nellie Crook, Kitty Murray, Gladys Foyle, Iris Gordon, Diana Feather, Gladys Ternan, Kitty Bushman, Gladys Birney, Marjorie House, Marie Bellizia, Margot Fielding, Valerie Fielding, Victoria Campbell, Clemence Meyer, Dora Blake, Beryl Murray, Dorothy Murray, Violet Graham, Dorothy Hains, Phabe Ivory, Pearl Rita, Dorothy Cottesmore, Alice Coombe, Ileene Evalyn.

Rabbits Oysters, Birds and Beasts—Little Misses Zoe Carr, Irene Tocher, Margaret Buchan, Kitty Atfield, Daisy Pope, Maisie Andrews, Toto Defeo, Vera Desmond, Doré Vere, Blanch George, Peggy Mather, Pearl Millar.

Little VERA DESMOND, age 10 years, will sing the Flower Song in Act II.

D.Y.T.
—
24/12/15
—
M
Orch. Stall
F21
No.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED
"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1915.

Alice Again in Wonderland.

"Alice in Wonderland," one of those plays that will not grow up, was revived for a season, of matinées only, at the Duke of York's Theatre on Christmas Eve.

About a play that is twenty-nine years old, and a fairly regular Christmas visitor, there is nothing more to be said than that it is still—as it always has been—a very charming fairy story and that it provides a company of very young actors with pretty opportunities of amusing a holiday audience.

It is very well mounted at the Duke of York's Theatre this season, and the company—as it ought to be—is young, pretty, and pleasing.

J. W.

290

LYCEUM THEATRE

BOXING DAY, DEC. 27th, at 1-30 and 7

and

TWICE DAILY at 1-30 and 7

THE LYCEUM CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

Robinson Crusoe

Written by NEWMAN MAURICE.

Produced by WALTER & FREDK. MELVILLE.

Music specially composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

Characters:

Polly Primrose, in love with Crusoe		Miss DORIS LEE
Mrs. Crusoe, Robinson's Mother		Mr. ERNEST SEFTON
Oceana, Queen of the Ocean		Miss ELSA COWIE
Sea Spray	Fairies	Miss CYNTHIA GOODE
Aurora		Miss IRIS GOODE
Davy Jones, a wrecker of Ships		Mr. GEORGE BELMORE
Lieut. Swanker		Miss FLORENCE RADCLIFFE
Susan, a Barmaid		Miss ANNA HASTINGS
Captain Cutlass, of the	"Saucy Sally"	Miss ALICE BELMORE
Pickles, the Steward		Master JACK MARKS
Bill the Bo'sun	of the	FERGUSON and MACK
Mac the Mate	"Saucy Sally"
Will Atkins, a Bold, Bad Man		Mr. FRED WOLGAST
King Rummymug, Monarch of Kalibaloo Land,		Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Prince Kali		CHIEF KAWBAWGAM
Princess Lulu		Miss MAUDIE OLMAR
The King's Warriors		THE SIE TAHAR TROUPE
Goat		HIMSELF
Dog	Crusoe's Family	Mr. HARRY WILLIS
Parrot		ROSIE
Monkeynut		Mr. ARCHIE HERBERT
Friday, Crusoe's Faithful Servant		HUGO
AND
Robinson Crusoe		Miss NAN C. HEARNE

Acting Manager .. .. BERT E. HAMMOND

PART 1.

Scene 1	THE PORT OF HULL
Scene 2	Outward Bound
Scene 3	Tween Decks of the "Saucy Sally"
Scene 4	On Board the "Saucy Sally"
Tableau	THE OPEN SEA.
Scene 5	Beneath the Waves
Scene 6	The Wonders of the Deep
Scene 7

FAIRY BALLET ... The Gems of the Ocean

Speciality Dances by Miss Ninette de Valois,
Little Miss Joan King (the smallest Ballet Dancer in the World) of the Lila Field Co., Cynthia and Iris Goode, Little Miss Clare, The Lottie Stone Troupe.
Ballet arranged by Mdlle. Rosa.
Music composed by H. Sullivan Brooke.

Tableau — IN SIGHT OF LAND.

INTERVAL OF ABOUT TWELVE MINUTES.

PART 2.

Scene 8	THE ISLAND
Scene 9	Another Part of the Island
Scene 10	ROBINSON CRUSOE HUT
Scene 11	The Palace Garden
Scene 12	THE ROYAL PALACE

The Franco-Algerian

SIE TAHAR ACROBATIC TROUPE,

Grand Reception.

CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE

The Lyceum Clown	Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Pantaloon	Mr. ARCHIE HERBERT

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, G. A. JACKSON AND LYCEUM STUDIOS.
Mechanical and other Effects by THOMAS REES. Properties by W. CRISP.
Electrical Effects by J. WALTERS.
Costumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON.
Ballets invented and arranged by Mdlle. Rosa.
Music specially composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

Stage Manager .. .. S. MAJOR JONES

291

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1915.

Lyceum Theatre Rehearsal.

Children in hundreds were present at the Lyceum Theatre on Friday for the dress rehearsal of the pantomime of "Robinson Crusoe," which is to be given its first public performance to-day.

All the little people were the guests of Messrs. W. and F. Melville, and to hear the little voices singing the choruses of popular tunes, to hear their screams of laughter when one comedian knocked another down and kicked him, and their delight when Mrs. Crusoe explained that she always ate winkles with a nut-cracker, was as good in itself as a pantomime.

J. W.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE."

YOUNG DANCING GENIUS AT THE LYCEUM.

"Robinson Crusoe" fills the bill at the Lyceum Theatre. Yesterday afternoon for the opening performance it filled the theatre from floor to ceiling. Messrs. Melville in their pantomime always make a point of having a heap of low-comedy fun. They believe in it, and their audiences agree with them. "Always eat your soup with a sponge," said one of the comedians. A roar of laughter followed. The King of the Cannibal Island was a Scotsman; they liked that, too, and they also fell in love with the king's daughter—a very pretty maid who danced delightfully—charmingly acted by Miss Maudie Olmar.

This pantomime is not all of it low comedy. There is a little room for Robinson and his Polly and for the sea voyage, the wreck, and the island on which, of course, appears—saved from the wreck—every inhabitant of Hull known to young Robinson Crusoe. Previous to the arrival of the shipwrecked passengers on the island we were given a submarine ballet, much the same thing as we have seen every year, everywhere, in pantomime. But this ballet is distinguished by the dancing of one individual, a tiny little girl of ten, Miss Joan King, the one English dancer in the classical manner that we have seen with a touch of juvenile genius. She reminds us of Miss Elise Craven in her first year in "Pinkie and the Fairies," and is the only English dancer with the spirit and manner of the classical to reconcile one to a vague comparison with the two or three great Russian dancers known to us. Her performance alone is worth going to the Lyceum to see.

In all respects "Robinson Crusoe" is well up to the standard of Lyceum Theatre pantomime. Miss Nan C. Hearne makes a picturesque figure of the hero, and Mr. Fred Wolgast, Mr. Ernest Sefton, Messrs. Ferguson and Mack provide the main thing—the fun that sets the house a-roar. J. W.

The Lyceum Theatre has its own great following—a public that wants to laugh, a public that likes a principal boy and principal girl with whom it can sing the latest popular song, and a comedian—or half a dozen comedians—with catch phrases and interruptions of a simple sort that become funny because they are repeated without the slightest provocation. A Lyceum audience laughter is good to hear. Nearly four thousand people laughing together is a sensation, and as Messrs. Melville have given the comedians the lion's share of the dialogue in "Robinson Crusoe" the audience is busy most of the time. J. W.

Makes 4,000 Laugh.

Theatre Royal Drury Lane

LIMITED

Managing Director - - ARTHUR COLLINS

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1915

REHEARSAL

OF

PUSS IN BOOTS

A FAIRY TALE

BY

GEO. R. SIMS, FRANK DIX and ARTHUR COLLINS

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER.

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	Grand Duchess of Cerulia
Mr. WILL EVANS	,,	Grand Duke (her Husband)
Mr. ERIC MARSHALL	,,	Florian (the Miller's Youngest Son)
Mr. STANLEY LUPINO	,,	Polydor (the Miller's Second Son)
Mr. ARTHUR POOLE	,,	Fritz (the Miller's Eldest Son)
Mr. REGINALD CROMPTON	,,	The Magician
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	The Parrot
Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON	as	Princess Rosabel
Miss RENÉE MAYER	,,	Puss in Boots
Miss NANCY BUCKLAND	,,	Susie Sunshine
Miss ENID DARK	,,	Fairy Queen
Miss AUBREY ASHTON	,,	Miranda
Miss DOROTHY MOODY	,,	Queen of the Butterflies
Miss ETHEL DAVIES	,,	Violet, the Cook
Miss JANE AVR	as	The Tweenie Maid
Miss GLADIOLA HAYDEN	,,	Cupid
Mr. McARTHUR	,,	A Woodman
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	,,	The Notary
Mr. WELLESLEY	,,	A Shepherd
Mr. GREEN	,,	McQuorkadale
Mr. TONGE	,,	A Harvester

Rosabel's Companions:

Miss MARIE LOVELL — Miss ENA STRANGE
Miss JANE MASON — Miss PHYLLIS DENE
Miss LANSEL — Miss ANDERSON
Miss SQUIRE — Miss CARRIE MURRAY

THE TILLER TROUPE — RITCHIE'S RECKLESS ROUGH RIDERS

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PART I.

Scene 1.	A FAIRY BEAUTY PARLOUR	E. H. Ryan
Scene 2.	THE VILLAGE AND MILL	Joseph Harker
Scene 3.	GRAND DUCHESS'S MORNING-ROOM	Bruce Smith
Scene 4.	A WOODLAND STREAM
Scene 5.	THE GOLDEN FIELDS	R. McCleery
Scene 6.	THE HEART OF THE FOREST
Scene 7.	BUTTERFLY DELL
Scene 8.	THE FAIRY GARDEN

PART II.

Scene 1.	THE ALDIN ARMS	Bruce Smith
Scene 2.	HONEYMOON LANE	Joseph Harker
Scene 3.	GRAND DUCHESS'S BOUDOIR	Bruce Smith
Scene 4.	ON THE ROAD TO THE PALACE	E. H. Ryan
Scene 5.	THE MAGICIAN'S PALACE	Joseph Harker

It is requested that no notice of the Production will be given until after the Public Performance on Monday Afternoon, December 27th.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Secretary - R. H. LINDO
Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS

Business Manager

SIDNEY SMITH

MILES & CO. LTD. WARDOUR ST. W.

"PUSS IN BOOTS."

WOUNDED AT DRURY LANE.

Hundreds of wounded soldiers laughed, sang, and enjoyed themselves thoroughly all Friday afternoon at Drury Lane Theatre, where they were the guests of Mr. Arthur Collins for the dress rehearsal of the pantomime "Puss In Boots." They did not come there empty-handed either, for they sang as no chorus ever sang, with full-hearted enthusiasm—keen on the note, too, a swelling organ-like chorus—that stirred one's pulse.

Some of the men were badly wounded, but they were not there to make any fuss about their troubles. They were out to enjoy themselves, and they did; and for once in its history they turned Drury Lane into a smoking theatre.

No account of the wonders of "Puss In Boots" is to be published until after to-day's opening performance, but there is no risk in saying that the enthusiastic reception given it by the wounded soldiers is the surest guide to its quality. J. W.

Pantomimes are well up to the average attractiveness this season. Drury Lane Theatre comes first in tradition, magnificence, immensity, and in fun. It stands by itself as it has always done—a wonderful spectacle, a company of great London favourites, and a richness of setting that no other pantomime attempts to emulate.

Geo. Graves as the Duchess in "Puss in Boots" at Drury Lane.

"Puss in Boots" is up to the best records of Drury Lane, and Messrs. George Graves, Will Evans, and Stanley Lupino are wonderful fun makers. J. W.

Theatre Royal
DRURY LANE
LIMITED
Managing Director - ARTHUR COLLINS
MORNING PERFORMANCE
Monday, Dec. 27, 1915
Orchestra Stall
Row F No. 4
Business Manager ... SIDNEY SMITH
This Portion Admits One Person to the Theatre and is to be given up.

296

ALDWYCH THEATRE

ALDWYCH, W.C.

J. BANNISTER HOWARD

Presents his

Grand Christmas Pantomime

"The Babes in the Wood"

BOOK BY FRED BOWYER
MUSIC BY B. J. PATERSON

ON

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1915,

At Three o'clock

First Performance Boxing Day at 1 o'clock, and

TWICE DAILY at 1 o'clock and 6.15

At the Aldwych Theatre the contrast to the other two pantomimes is well maintained, because Mr. Bannister Howard has produced his pantomime of "The Babes in the Wood" on attractive musical play lines and kept the story well to the front. It is very pretty pantomime this. It is well acted, charmingly mounted, the music is very tuneful, and the dancing and the fun are first rate.

J.W

"THE BABES IN THE WOOD"

CAST:

Baron Mugwamp	MR. TEMPLAR ELLIS
Robin Hood	MISS CRESSIE LEONARD
Maid Marian	MISS EDITH DRAYSON
Basil / Rupert — The Two Robbers	BROS. GRIFFITHS
Margery Daw	MISS BEBE HUTCHISON
Alan-a-Dale	MISS EILEEN DAGMAR
Toilet Vere-de-Vere	MR. JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD, Jun.
Santa Claus	MR. WALTER BRODIE
Norman / Dorothy — The two Babes	MISS AUDRY HUGHES / MISS LENNIE DEANE
Will Scarlet	MISS ALEXANDER
Colin	MISS D. O'SHANN
Little John	MISS DORIS NELSON
Cock Robin	MISS EUPHAN McLAREN
Herne, the Hunter	MR. BERT WILSON
Nurse	MISS V. ST. LAWRENCE
Friar Tuck	MR. FRANK HARRISON
Fairy Queen	MISS CHRISTINE ROSSLYN

Fairy Fountains — Children's Ballet
Solo-dances by Miss Euphan McLaren
WYOTTI and his wonderful Mechanical Toys

SCENES:

ACT I.

SCENE I.	The Coming of Santa Claus
SCENE II.	The Ancestral Home of the Baron
SCENE III.	Briar Lane
SCENE IV.	Schoolroom
SCENE V.	Path near the Wood
SCENE VI.	The Wood

ACT II.

SCENE VII	Nottingham Fair
SCENE VIII. ..	The Baron's Study
SCENE IX.	The Baron's Bedroom
SCENE X.	The Terrace
SCENE XI.	The Gardens

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessee - - - - - - - THOMAS DOTT.

BOXING DAY at 2.15 and 7 p.m.
EVERY AFTERNOON at 2.15. EVENINGS: Wed., Thurs. and Sat. at 7.

CHARLES HAWTREY'S PRODUCTION
(5th Year)

"Where the Rainbow Ends"

By CLIFFORD MILLS and JOHN RAMSEY.
Music by ROGER QUILTER.

CHARACTERS.

Rosamund Carey	Miss ESME WYNNE
Crispian Carey	Master HAROLD FRENCH
William	Master CHRISTOPHER FRERE
Cubs	Master GUIDO CHIARLETTI
Matilda Flint	Miss NELLIE BOUVERIE
Joseph Flint	Mr. H. SAXON SNELL
Monsieur Bertrand	Monsieur GEORGES DE WARFAAZ
The Genie of the Carpet	Mr. GODWIN NOCK
Jim Blunders	Master F. THARBY
Betty Blunders	Miss VIOLET MARLEY
St. George of England	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
The Dragon King	Mr. FRANK PETLEY
Dunks	Mr. E. G. BROWNE
The Sea Witch	Miss MONA HARRISON
Captain Carey	Mr. GODWIN NOCK
Mrs. Carey	Miss MARGARET SHELLEY
The Shacker	Master NOEL COWARD
The Slitherslime	Mr. A. DIXON
Spirit of the Lake	Miss GRACE SEPPINGS
Dragon Sentry	Mr. CHARLES CLEATHER

AND

Will o' The Wisp — Miss MAVIS YORKE

FLOWER FAIRIES. Estelle Cleverly, Nora Robinson, Rita Basnett, Ivy Moody, Rita Vivian, Marjorie de Vere, Vera Harpham, Evelyn Puxton, Saza Palmer, Doris Palmer, Nora Strobell, Maisie White, Phyllis Neal, Sunday Wilshin, Stella Bonheur, Hilda Marriott, Molly Horsey, Mary Harrison, Nina Staracc, Blanche Finglestone and Gladys Finglestone.

ELVES. Patrick Ludlow, Miriam Taban, Tommy Snow, Arthur Burrell, Louis Lesser, Ivan Courzier, John Proctor, John Sanders, Charlie Wade and Philip Taban.

FROGS, HYÆNAS, MICE and CATERPILLARS.—Arthur Burrell, Louis Lesser, Ivan Courzier, John Proctor, Adolph Goldsman, John Sanders, Charlie Wade and Philip Taban.

BATS.—Estelle Cleverly, Marjorie de Vere, Evelyn Puxton, Ivy Moody.

DRAGON FLIES. Rita Vivian, Rita Basnett, Saza Palmer, Nora Robinson.

WATER LILIES. Mary Harrison, Else Charpentier, Hilda Marriott, Sunday Wilshin, Stella Bonheur, Phyllis Neal, Blanche Finglestone, Nina Staracc.

MOTHS.—Molly Horsey, Nora Strobell, Chris Frere, John Proctor, John Sanders, Tommy Snow, Charlie Wade, Philip Taban.

RAINBOW CHILDREN.—Grace Seppings, Nora Robinson, Rita Basnett, Ivy Moody, Rita Vivian, Estelle Cleverly, Marjorie de Vere, Vera Harpham, Evelyn Puxton, Saza Palmer, Doris Palmer, Nora Strobell, Maisie White, Phyllis Neal, Sunday Wilshin, Stella Bonheur, Hilda Marriott, Molly Horsey, Mary Harrison, Nina Staracc, Blanche Finglestone, Gladys Finglestone, Patrick Ludlow, Chris Frere, Arthur Burrell, John Proctor, John Sanders, Charlie Wade, Philip Taban, Tommy Snow.

Dances arranged and Children trained by Miss ITALIA CONTI

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1915.

"WHERE THE RAINBOW ENDS."

That charming and patriotic fairy play "Where the Rainbow Ends," was presented for the fourth season at the Garrick Theatre yesterday, and, being by now one of the most popular of holiday plays, had a most enthusiastic reception.

The adventures of the four children in their world-wide journeys on the Magic Carpet make splendid entertainment, full of colour and excitement, and with a capital company of juveniles and grown-ups, which included Mr. H. R. Hignett, Miss Esme Wynne, Miss Mona Harrison, and Miss Mavis Yorke, the story was delightfully acted and enthusiastically applauded.

12th Year

On BOXING DAY, December 27th, at 2 and 8, and daily at 2; Evenings, Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday at 8.

12th Year

DION BOUCICAULT produces

PETER PAN

Or the Boy who wouldn't grow up

By J. M. BARRIE.

The Music composed and arranged by JOHN CROOK.

Peter Pan	UNITY MORE
Jas. Hook	ARTHUR WONTNER
Mr. Darling	MARTIN LEWIS
Mrs. Darling	MADGE MURRAY
Wendy Moira Angela Darling	DOT TEMPLE
John Napoleon Darling	PATRICK LUDLOW
Michael Nicholas Darling	ERIC STUART
Nana	EDGAR PLEON
Tinker Bell	JANE WREN
Tootles	NANCY PAWLEY
Nibs	JANE GRAHAM
Slightly	ARTHUR CLEAVE
Curly	ELYOT HAWKINS
First Twin	DORIS MACINTYRE
Second Twin	HILDA BLAKE
Imee	GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey	A. G. POULTON
Cookson	CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins	CHRIS WALKER
Ceco	WILLIAM LUTI
Jukes	JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler	CECIL BELCHER
Great Bear / Little Panther	DICK COOPER, D. SEARLE, GEORGE WELCH
Tiger Lily	FREDERICK LEISTER
Braves	TONIE EDGAR BRUCE
Mermaid	MAISIE YORKE
Baby Mermaid	BABS FARREN
Lizzo	BABS FARREN
Crocodile	D. ROSE & W. BARBOUR
Ostrich	DONALD SEARLE
Jacko / Wolves	D. SEARLE, D. ROSE, W. BARBOUR, F. ALEXANDER, F. ALEXANDER, A. THOMSON

Members of Peter's Band

Pirates

Redskins

ANNA WALDEN, ANNA NESBITT, ETHEL WELLESLEY, VIOLET HEATH, GLADYS CALTHROP, ELIZABETH HAMLET.

(Author of the Play)

Programme continued overleaf.

Nearest Tube Station to this Theatre—Leicester Square.

300

NEW THEATRE

Matinee
27/12/1915

Orch. Stall
G 118
RIGHT
To be retained

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1915.

"PETER PAN."

NEW HOME FOR TWELFTH VISIT.

"Peter Pan" found a new home for himself yesterday. For eleven seasons he made his unfailing appearance each Christmas at the Duke of York's Theatre. This year he has gone to the New Theatre.

In some respects "Peter Pan" possesses the qualities of ordinary human beings who do grow up, and benefit by a change of air. Seldom has his life story been as well told as it was yesterday. Everybody on the stage was keen, alert, and ready to express the temper of this quaint fairy play. The nervous excitement that makes, or mars, a performance was there. They say that these enthusiastic players rehearsed all night; they seemed all the happier for it. They had the author—a rare occasion—watching them and applauding them from behind the curtain of a box, and the audience seemed never to tire of clapping hands, and of throwing violets and thimbles (the symbols of kisses) at the feet of the players on the stage.

In one respect the public has insisted on one change in the story of "Peter Pan." Smee, the pirate, is the real favourite. He can do no wrong—children invite him to tea—and Mr. George Shelton, as he has done in every visit of Peter's to London, again appears as Smee. We cannot imagine "Peter Pan" without this bloodthirsty idol of young and old.

Then, too, there is Captain Hook. Mr. Arthur Wontner played the part for the first time yesterday, and without making comparisons it must be said it would be hard to conceive anyone else getting more humour out of the part. It was a promise of big things from Mr. Wontner in the future. Miss Dot Temple was a very charming and girlish Wendy, and Miss Unity Moore was Peter. She looked very nice, but she lacked a boyish authority of manner, so necessary in many incidents in this best of all fairy plays. That the audience packed the theatre from floor to ceiling and applauded from start to finish was no more than we expected and no more than "Peter Pan" was entitled to.

J. W.

Never Went Better.

For the first time for some years Sir James M. Barrie was present at the annual opening performance of his play "Peter Pan" last Monday. This year it is being given at the New Theatre instead of—as in the eleven previous seasons—the Duke of York's. It was the most crowded attendance "Peter" has ever drawn, and the performance all round was fine; the only one I did not appreciate was Miss Unity More as Peter. She never looked like a leader at any moment of the play. But, that one grumble expressed, I must say that in every other instance "Peter" never went better. Only enthusiasm could have carried them through the performance, for I hear they had been in the theatre all night rehearsing. The shortage of stage hands was a great handicap also, and the whole of Act III. had to be abandoned on Monday. I hear that Mr. Dion Boucicault has all the week been carrying scenery and properties, and generally doing a bit of everything under the stress of shortness of labour.

Daily Mail

TUESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1916.

"SMEE" ON PIRATES.

SIR J. M. BARRIE'S "PETER PAN" INTERLUDE.

The performance of "Peter Pan" at the New Theatre, London, had a new feature added to it yesterday—Mr. George Shelton, the pirate Smee, came before the curtain before Act II. and made a speech.

Authors, as a rule, do not like speeches in the middle of their plays, but there was a shrewd suspicion that Sir James Barrie knew all about Smee's discourse on piracy, which was as follows:

"You might just as well shut up pirate ships in war time. Nothin' doin'! Stagnation! Hook made the fatal mistake at the start. 'During the war,' he says, 'we only goes for the vessels of the Germanic Powers, and I've heard we have been a-searching for them from land to land and sea to sea. Nothin' doin'!

"The crew ain't the same as you've been used to see. We keeps the old names, but every man-jack of us as is of fighting age was off long ago. The noble Starkey is in France. Noodler is there, and—and—and even that varmint Great Big Little Panther is in the Buffs.

"You all know the German motto in war-time: 'Women and children first.' The Government, they stuck up a notice on the port side of our ship: 'Single men first.' I think it is the port side, but I finds it cruel hard to remember the names of the sides of a ship. But that's the notice—a ridiklous notice, because we're all single men. That's why we're pirates. We was all blasted by girls in our early manhood.

"This brings me to my own miserable case. No one will believe that I am a single man. It has something to do with my unfortunate appearance. When Lord Derby came aboard to—to see what he could lay hands on, soon as he had cast his eye on me he began to write in his little book. With the others he asked questions before he wrote in the book, but me, oh no! So I says to him: 'Might I be so bold, my lord, as to ask what you have wrote about me in your little book?' Then he shows me what he had wrote, namely, as follows: 'Family man—chapel.'

A NEW CHARITY.

"I think it's this face of mine. Something as causes inquisitive children to write and ask me what it is I'm making on the sewing machine. But none of you little nippers come round no more expectin' to get kisses for nothing. Kissing of pirates has gone up in wartime. The charge is a halfpenny—to provide a home for parties of unfortunate appearance.

"Before drawing these few perfect remarks to a close I wants to say I'm not grumbling. We're short-handed, but everybody is very kind, and ladies of title comes and washes up for us. Business is bad, but things might be worse. There was even a rumour that the author—a little bird told me—thought of having all our places took by females during the war!"

QUEEN'S THEATRE

One Minute Piccadilly Tube Station.
(Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ALFRED BUTT).

By arrangement with FREDERICK WHELEN.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MATINEES—Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays & Saturdays at 2.30

A NEW REVUE in Two Acts and Seven Scenes,

ENTITLED

"OH! LA LA"

Book by NORMAN H. LEE, ROBERT WESTON & JACK NORWORTH.
Lyrics and Music by ROBERT WESTON & JACK NORWORTH.
Musical Numbers and Dances arranged by ESPINOSA.

CAST.

ACT I. Scene I. Merryweather's Hotel

A Maid		CLAUDIA GUILLOT
Mr. Merryweather		WILLIAM SAVILLE
Miss Gertie Le Roy	A Revue Artiste	JEAN ALLISTONE
Bilkins	A New York Crook	HUGH ROBINSON
Getaway Kate	His Accomplice	LAURA GUERITE
Mlle. Argentine	The Guest	LORNA DELLA
James Josser	A Special Constable	ERNIE LOTINGA
Miss Lyne	A Lady Detective	HETTY KING
Dixie Divers	A New York Detective	JACK NORWORTH

QUEENS THEATRE

E

Monday
Dec. 27

Orch. Stall

C 8

To be retained

THE QUEEN'S.

"Oh! La, La!"

Although Oh! La, La! which provides the holiday entertainment at this house, is described as "a new revue," in two acts and seven scenes, it is really based to a considerable extent upon Looking Around, which was produced at the Garrick on November 6, for four or five of the scenes have the same settings, and there are about half a dozen of the former popular numbers. However, now that the name of Norman H Lee has succeeded that of W. H. Risque, as part-author with Robert Weston and Jack Norworth, the piece may in many respects fairly be described as "something quite different." Indeed, there is at the opening the germ of a really fresh plot, if one has regard to two of the sentences in the dialogue running "If a revue had a plot it would be a musical comedy" and "I like revue girls, their costumes are as scanty as the plot."

TO-DAY'S THEATRES.

TWENTY-NINE PRODUCTIONS.

Twenty-nine of the West End theatres will be open this evening, and all of these, the Gaiety excepted, have matinées to-day as well.

On Wednesday Miss Lena Ashwell will add to the number of theatres presenting attractions by producing a new fairy play, "The Starlight Express," at the Kingsway Theatre, so that of London's thirty-three West End theatres the only ones to remain closed will be Covent Garden and the Prince's and the Little Theatres. All the nine West End music-halls and St. George's Hall will give performances afternoon and evening.

The classified list of attractions is as follows:

COMEDY.

Globe, "Peg o' My Heart."
Haymarket, "Who Is He?"
His Majesty's, "Maeterlinck."
Lyric, "Romance."

DRAMA.

Apollo, "The Spanish Main."
Royalty, "The Man Who Stayed at Home."
Strand, "The Scarlet Pimpernel."
Wyndham's, "The Ware Case."
Surrey, "The Case of Lady Camber."

FAIRY PLAYS.

Duke of York's, "Alice in Wonderland" (matinées only).
Garrick, "Where the Rainbow Ends."
New, "Peter Pan."

FARCE.

Criterion, "A Little Bit of Fluff."
London Opera House, "Charley's Aunt."
Prince of Wales's, "Stop Thief!"

MUSICAL PLAYS.

Adelphi, "Tina."
Daly's, "Betty."
Gaiety, "To-night's the Night."

OPERA.

Shaftesbury, Grand Opera in English.

PANTOMIMES.

Aldwych, "Babes in the Wood."
Drury Lane, "Puss in Boots."
Lyceum, "Robinson Crusoe."

REVUES.

Ambassadors, "More."
Comedy, "Shell Out."
Playhouse, "Samples."
Queen's, "Oh, La La!"
Vaudeville, "The Pedlar of Dreams."

SHAKESPEARE.

Court, "A Midsummer Night's Dream."
Duke of York's, "The Comedy of Errors" (evenings only).
St. James's, "The Merchant of Venice."

VARIETY THEATRES.

Alhambra, "Joan's the Time," revue.
Coliseum, Variety.
Empire, "Watch Your Step," musical play.
Hippodrome, "Joy Land," revue.
Pavilion, Hon' Soit . . . ," Anglo-French revue.
Oxford, Variety.
Palace, "Brica-Brac," revue.
Palladium, "Cinderella," pantomime, matinées only; Variety, evenings.
Victoria Palace, Variety.
St. George Hall, Maskelyne's Mesmeromysticism.

Special notices of the new musical comedy "The Miller's Daughters," produced at Manchester on Friday, and of the dress rehearsals of the chief pantomimes appear in Page 2.

27 Dec.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1915.

Owing to a shortage of stage hands this has been a very trying week for some of the London theatres. Including the music-halls, forty theatres are playing attractions in Theatreland, and there were not enough of trained hands to manipulate the scenery and stage lighting in all of them.

Some of the Christmas spectacles require a lot of men to effect changes of scenery quickly. The manager who has charge of the front of the house gets impatient if his audience has to put up with long entr'actes. In many cases this week he has had to amuse them with orchestral selections during what looked like interminable waits, and in some instances on Boxing Day had to lend his box-office clerks and others in front of the house to his over-worked stage manager.

The attendance at the theatres this week has been extraordinary, and yet society and the well-known well-to-do patrons of ordinary times of the playhouse have not been going there. The school holidays—as in all other Christmas seasons—have been one of the causes helping to fill the theatres. Soldiers also have been good patrons, but the great increase in the incomes of the working classes has been one of the chief reasons for the big flow of money into the box-offices.

Last week "Charley's Aunt," the twenty-five-year-old farce, attracted over 20,000 people to the London Opera House, and this week huge theatres, such as Drury Lane, Lyceum, Coliseum, and others, although playing twice a day to thousands of people, have had to refuse money. Every well-known play in town has played to capacity this week, and two or three that had not been getting their expenses took nearly as much on Monday as they did before in a week.

A Boxing Day Record.

I can well believe that [illegible] into London theatres [illegible] audiences had gone home, and [illegible] performances had absorbed the [illegible] holiday makers. Some [illegible] theatres and music-halls were open in the West End, and nearly all of them were packed to suffocation. I could not help wondering how all those tens of thousands of people were to find their way home when the entertainments were over, and the holiday-makers all—at the same hour—turned out of the brilliantly [illegible] into the dark streets. [illegible] course, the omnibuses [illegible] scooped up thousands [illegible] carried them on to the [illegible] taxicabs selected a few [illegible] folk were content to walk [illegible] sands of struggling [illegible] carried down by the lifts [illegible] ning trains in the "tube" [illegible]

Caleb Porter [illegible]

DAILY AT 2. EVENING AT 8.

The Starlight Express

BY

ALGERNON BLACKWOOD and VIOLET PEARN.

Lyrics by Algernon Blackwood.

Music by EDWARD ELGAR.

THE "WUMBLED" FAMILY.

Daddy		O. B. Clarence
Monkey, Jimbo	who know they get out of their bodies when asleep	Elise Hall, Ronald Hammond
Jane Anne	who gets out—but doesn't know it	Mercia Cameron
Mother		Ruth Maitland
Grannie	of Belfast; has her own room in the village	Una O'Connor
Cousin Henry	cousinenry	Owen Roughwood

THE "WUMBLED" VILLAGERS.

Mme. Jequier	Proprietress of the Wisteria Pension. Terms VERY moderate	Juliette Mylo
Miss Waghorn	who has lived there ten years	Mary Barton
1st Governess, 2nd Governess, 3rd Governess	retired from work but not on their re- wages till they die.	Joy Chatwyn, Nannie Bennett, Lorna Lawrence

KINGSW
Proprietress
"THE STA
Wednesday
Matinee
Dec. 29
No

SPRITES.

Figures of Everybody's Childhood.

Tramp	with barrel organ—simply lives on the road and—sings	Charles Mott
Gardener	tends everything that grows	E. F. Mayeur
Lamplighter	Lights up people—as well as stars	James Stanners
Sweep	cleans chimney flues and—hearts	Leonard Calvert
Dustman	with his sack of Dream-dust	Jane Wells
Woman of the Haystack	Mother of all the Sprites. Objects to moving	Margaret Yarde
Little Winds	Always trying to move her	Grace Glover Bonnie Wright
Laugher	who sings trouble into joy	Clytie Hine

Children followers of the barrel organ

Bonnie Wright, Gracie Glover, Muriel Collins,
Gladys Kellow, Winnie Gray, Nora Dickenson,
Myrtle Goode. Elsie Roselli.

Pleiades Maidens changed by the Gods into Stars

Lynn Fontaine, Vivian Rees, Doreen Whitten,
Gay Silvani, Doris Merritt, Rita Thom, Gwyn Muir.

Act I. The Den at La Citadelle, Bourcelles, in Switzerland.
Act II. Scene 1—The Pine Forest. Dusk.
Scene 2—The Wistaria Pension. The same night.
Scene 3—The Den. A few minutes later.
Act III. Scene 1—The Den. Next day.
Scene 2—The Pine Forest. Night.

Fascinating Elgar

Music.

"Highly Poetic."

THE TIMES

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1915.

Everybody, as Cousin Henry, is thin somewhere. What The Starlight Express is thin is in the story. Any trouble there is bound to be felt in the theatre, as the remarkably acute Aristotle knew when he said story was the chief element of drama. And Mr. Blackwood's story is thin because it is an attempt to give embodiment and visible action, as local habitation and a name to our feelings.

All his roundabout, or rather upgrade, of adult fancy, of what children call make-believe, fairy-philosophy, as one character puts it. This is a "wumbled" world, wholly near-sighted, spiritually muddled and morally out of gear. Sympathy is the one remedy, enough to set it right, and sympathy is Mr. Blackwood's name for the fairy-dust. You collect the star-dust from its chosen repositories or customers, and you go about sprinkling the star-dust over the "wumbled" people in their sleep, so that they get reformed in their dreams and wake up perfectly adapted to their characters. And who are to be the star-dust collectors? Why, who but the children, with their keen perception and their power, because of it, to sing out and play again in the Starlight.

A very pleasant notion, but, and right Blackwoodesque, not a very fit one for the purposes of theatrical production, even with the help of modern stage-craft. Mr. Blackwood, so rich in imagination, so subtle and tender in all the spiritual part of his work, has yet proved himself very far from a master of stagecraft. You might have thought as much from his last adventure in the same field, in Arthur Machen's "The Terror," but for sure the trying the Pleiads down to earth, and it they prove to be abnormally rude children who merely dance and twirl and sing just like any other children, you forget all the pretty fancies about star-dust and sympathy and only remember you are looking at a ballet.

The Mayor's Sharpest.

And the story? Well, you are told that the wumbled people, warring in some Swiss mountain village, Papa wrangling over his literary labours, Mama over her household troubles, Miss Jessop over her pupils, and the retired governesses over their imaginary ones, "Then the children, led by Gaspard Henry, and a star-cave in a pine forest, and, bringing home the dust, sprinkle all the wumbled people with it. Then these people, awakened, show how bright and sweet-tempered they really are. Then, well, then, there is a Christmas carol (with apparently a vague reference to the Star of Bethlehem) and that is all.

We had all but forgotten the Sprites. There are a gardener, a lamplighter, a sweep, a dustman, a little woman. They, too, are excellent in idea: the lamplighter lights up people as well as stars, inspires authors as well as lovers; the sweep cleans hearts as well as chimneys, and so on. But in realization on the stage they simply gyrate and get in one another's way. Always except the singing sprite, an organ-man, whose very name suggests Schubert, and whose agreeable duty it is to sing most of Sir Edward Elgar's dreamful melodies. Mr. Charles Mott is the singer, and you need ask for none better.

It is the musicless ones who have all the uphill work. Mr. Clarence, with his gift for individual character, who can only be "wumbled," and Mr. Owen Roughwood, an actor of conspicuous intelligence, given the chance of showing it, who can only be nothing at all. But there are two clever children, Miss Elise Hall and Master Ronald Hammond, and there is a charming little ingénue in Miss Mercia Cameron. Miss Mary Barton and Miss Juliette Mylo both make a distinct mark in small parts. And, after all reservations made, it is a very pleasant, ensemble entertainment. To give dramatic substance and significance to Mr. Blackwood's fancies must have been a task of supreme difficulty. Let us borrow a little of his star-dust and say the wonder is it has been done so well.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR'S MUSIC.

Take the best bits of "The Wand of Youth," the orchestral pieces called "Dream Children," and the "Dorabella" variation, dip them in the "star-cave" so that they come out all fresh and glistening, and you get a fair notion of the spirit of Sir Edward Elgar's music to The Starlight Express.

There is no touch of the elaborate Elgar of the symphonies. Sometimes he seems to be quoting; one tune which runs right through the play, its principal theme in fact, reminds one of something in the first symphony, but not of its nobilmente opening or of its grandiose finale. If there are quotations here they are unconscious ones; some of the things said before are said again because they happen to be true. Elgar, in fact, was evidently caught by the idea of the play; he put himself into it, and in accordance with the rules of the Star Secret society he found that "When I'm in I'm also—out!"

Much of the music we shall no doubt hear often in the concert room: the delightful songs which Mr. Charles Mott as the organ-grinder sings to the children before the curtain rises on each act; the dance of the wind-spirits round about the roundabout old woman of the haystack, the orchestral scherzo which follows the first pine-forest scene are perhaps the best things, and no doubt these orchestral numbers with some of the soft starlit music which accompanies the action will reappear very soon as a suite. There are, however, little touches which will not do apart from the stage, and are delightful in the stage setting, such things as the organ-grinder's tune heard outside the window and the music which accompanies the story of Orion and the Pleiades.

But apart from the charming tunes and the gleams of orchestral colour which one carries away in mind, a great deal which one does not carry away, which one hardly distinguishes, plays its part very subtly and yet very simply. Whosoever is "wumbled" let him listen to Sir Edward Elgar.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED "SINGLE MEN FIRST."

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1915.

Passing through the stage door of a theatre yesterday I saw hanging up near the notice board a list of the dressing-rooms ranging from 1 to 20, but No. 13 was missing. I learned then for the first time that No. 13 has little use in a theatre; the players will have none of it. There is no No. 13 dressing-room at Drury Lane Theatre, and of a score of others—including Daly's, His Majesty's, the New, Haymarket, Gaiety, Palace, etc.—the only one that has a dressing-room numbered 13 is the Haymarket.

Most superstitions of the theatres have weakened; that associated with 13 has gained strength. Actors are no longer superstitious about whistling in a theatre. It is no longer considered a horrible omen if a piece of soap falls on the floor, nor do women turn pale if you wish a new play "good luck." No. 13 has absorbed all the bad influence.

A certain well-known leading comedian now appearing in a very successful musical play received the other day for a Christmas present a gold scarf-pin the design of which was the figure 13. Next morning he wore it and took out his motor-car for a spin to Bushey. When he turned the corner of the road where he lives he knocked down a policeman. After he had been bailed he went down to the theatre and gave the pin to the assistant stage manager. As the latter's birthday falls on the 13th of the month the comedian says he hopes all will be well, and that the policeman will soon be able to return to duty.

Daily Mail

THE PAPER THAT SECURED

"SINGLE MEN FIRST."

MONDAY, JANUARY 3, 1916.

THE THEATRICAL YEAR.

55 NEW PLAYS.

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES.

By JAMES WATERS.

With thirty theatres open nightly, and most afternoons too, the statement that they have been badly hit by the war may seem an exaggeration, yet it is strictly true. Managers and actors, with a few rare exceptions, have had to exercise economy. The public was not spending as much money in the theatre as in other years and the plays that made fairly large profits did not number six

Outside competition, too, has hit the theatres fairly hard—revues and kinematograph attractions have been "boomed" in opposition, and within the world of the theatre there has been an appreciable difficulty to tempt authors to work for what they regard at present as a dull market.

The number of new plays produced last year was about twenty fewer than the average of the past few years, but the revivals were as numerous as ever. Musical plays were below the usual figures, but the invasion of revue entertainments—which are much easier to stage—will account for the difference. The plays of all sorts produced and revived in 1914 were:

Plays of two or more acts	47
Musical plays	5
Pantomimes	3
One-act plays	14
Revivals of plays of two or more acts	33
Shakespeare's plays	3
Revues (those in music halls not included) ...	6

The above table does not include plays produced by stage societies or for special performances only. The following is a list of the new plays with the date and place of production:—

Date of production.	Title.	Theatre.	Performances.
Jan.
2	Mistress Wilful	Strand	63
8	A Daughter of England	Garrick	19
16	Kings and Queens	St. James's	80
20	A Busy Day	Apollo	75
Feb.
11	Searchlights	Savoy	105
Mar.
6	Excuse Me	Garrick	34
6	He Didn't Want To Do It	Prince of Wales	56
15	Seven Days	New	16
16	Rosy Rapture	Duke of York's	79
April
3	The Blow	Little	14
10	Three Spoonfuls	Criterion	41
12	The Half-Sister	Apollo	3
14	The Panorama of Youth	St. James's	23
15	Advertisement	Kingsway	20
17	The Joker	New	17
19	Wild Thyme	Comedy	24
20	Quinneys	Haymarket	234
22	The Argyle Case	Strand	28
24	*Bevy	Daly's	264
28	*To-Night's The Night	Gaiety	247
29	On Trial	Lyric	175
May
4	The Right to Kill	His Majesty's	37
5	Striking	Apollo	27
19	The Day Before The Day	St. James's	19
22	For England, Home and Beauty	Prince's	100
22	In Time of War	Lyceum	53
29	The Laughter of Fools	Prince of Wales	25
June
1	Armageddon	New	14
2	The Hillarys	Criterion	18
5	The Angel in the House	Savoy	130
8	Marie Odile	His Majesty's	31
9	Gamblers All	Wyndham's	93
11	The Green Flag	Vaudeville	69
14	Mr. & Mrs. Ponsonby	Comedy	8
16	The Road to Raebury	Criterion	10
July
7	Enterprising Helen	Vaudeville	31
Aug.
23	Kick-In	Vaudeville	128
Sept.
1	The Big Drum	St. James's	111
4	*The Ware Case	Wyndham's	135
21	The Dummy	Prince of Wales	30
25	The Only Girl	Apollo	107
30	The Stormy Petrel	Criterion	13
Oct.
6	*Romance	Duke of York's	96
15	Iris Intervenes	Kingsway	45
16	*The Cave of Lady Camber	Savoy	105
21	*Stop Thief	New	92
23	*Maycurmeen	His Majesty's	63
27	*A Little Bit of Fluff	Criterion	83
Nov.
27	*Tina	Adelphi	67
Dec.
9	*Who Is He?	Haymarket	28
21	*The Spanish Main	Apollo	14
27	*Puss in Boots	Drury Lane	10
27	*Robinson Crusoe	Lyceum	10
27	*Babes in the Wood	Aldwych	10
29	*The Starlight Express	Kingsway	4

* Plays marked thus are still running, and the number of performances given are calculated up to the night of December 31.

The following are the revivals, with number of performances:—"Girl in the Taxi"—Garrick, 73; "Chinese Honeymoon"—Prince of Wales, 36; "Are You a Mason?"—Comedy, 62; "Fanny's First Play"—Kingsway, 49; "Baby Mine"—Vaudeville, 128; "Florodora"—Lyric, 89; "Three Musketeers"—Lyceum, 37; "The Whip"—Aldwych, 58; "Sweet Nell of Old Drury"—Strand, 50; "A Royal Divorce"—Lyceum, 56; "Sealed Orders"—Drury Lane, 58; "Oliver Twist"—His Majesty's, 16; "Who's the Lady?"—Prince of Wales, 17; "The Breed of the Treshams"—14; "The Arcadians"—Shaftesbury, 31; "Henry of Navarre"—Strand, 33; "Corsican Brothers"—New, 7; "Oh! Be Careful"—Garrick, 32; "The Only Way"—New, 11; "Her Forbidden Marriage"—Lyceum, 86; "Ready Money"—New, 32; "Pete"—Aldwych, 66; "Hindle Wakes"—Duke of York's, 35; "When London Sleeps"—Prince's, 58; "The Scarlet Pimpernel"—Strand, 128; "Between Two Women"—Lyceum, 17; "The Christian"—Lyric, 19; "The Prodigal Son"—The Aldwych, 26; "L'Enfant Prodigue"—Duke of York's, 43; *"Charley's Aunt"—Opera House 22; *"The Blue Stocking"—Duke of York's, 7; *"Alice in Wonderland"—Duke of York's, 6; *"Poter Pan"—New, 8; *"Where the Rainbow Ends"—Garrick, 8.

Shakespearean revivals:—*"The Merchant of Venice"—St. James's, 29; *"The Comedy of Errors"—Duke of York's, 7; *"A Midsummer Night's Dream."

*Still running.

13 AMERICAN PLAYS.

Thirteen of the year's new plays were American—namely: "Excuse Me," "He Didn't Want To Do It," "Seven Days," "Three Spoonfuls," "The Argyle Case," "On Trial," "The Day Before The Day," "Mr. and Mrs. Ponsonby," "Kick-In," "The Dummy," "Romance," "Stop Thief," and the musical play "The Only Girl."

Two were from the French—namely: "Wild Thyme" and "The Right to Kill."

The only new play of the year entirely written by a woman was "Gamblers All," but in about half a dozen cases women could claim to be collaborators or adapters. At least three plays—"The Ware Case," "Who Is He?" and "The Right to Kill"—were taken from or suggested by novels.

"Peg o' My Heart" (520 performances) and "The Man Who Stayed at Home" (147), both still running, were produced in the autumn of 1914.

Three plays that came running into 1915 from 1914—"Potash and Perlmutter," "Peg o' My Heart," and "The Man Who Stayed at Home"—helped the credit side of things, but it is well to remember that every manager now concerned in London theatres is well content with a quarter of the old profits. I am not sure that in these war times he is not even content if he manages to pay his expenses.

Outside competition, too, has hit the theatres fairly hard—revues and kinematograph attractions have been "boomed" in opposition, and within the world of the theatre there has been an appreciable difficulty to tempt authors to work for what they regard at present as a dull market.

Friday as a day for the production of plays has not been so neglected in 1915 as in other years. "A Daughter of England," presented twice nightly at the Garrick Theatre, first appeared on a Friday evening. The same day of the week was also chosen for "The Green Flag" and "The Road to Raebury." The revue "More" was also produced on a Friday; "Alice in Wonderland" was revived on a Friday, and "Peter Ibbetson," which is not included in my list of plays, as it was not produced for a run, was given its special performance on a Friday.

Miss Gertie Millar in "Bric-à-Brac"
an Impression by W. K. Haselden.

(Next Week: Mr. Nelson Keys.)

Nelson Keys in "Bric-à-Brac"
an Impression by W. K. Haselden.

(Next Week: Gwendoline Brogden.)

Arthur Playfair in "Bric-à-Brac"
an Impression by W. K. Haselden.

(Next Week: Teddie Gerard.)

ACEHOPE VS. Addal
CD 8 ADL ACPQV
6 ADL ACPQV
CLP . ALG
LGN CLP ALG